The court is concerned that the evidence suggests that Mr. Kendrick was aware of the lawsuit, had consulted with counsel, and was possibly aware that he was required to file a responsive pleading yet failed to do so within the allotted time. The court also notes that the motion was filed shortly after the default, which mitigates any prejudice to the Plaintiff, that counsel for Plaintiff did not did not provide notice to Plaintiff before taking the default, Kim v. Westmoore Partners, Inc. (2011) 201 Cal.App.4th 267, 271 fn 1, and that there is a strong policy preference in favor of resolving cases on their merits, Fasuyi v. Permatex, Inc. (2008) 167 Cal.App.4th 681, 696. Weighing these factors, the court finds that defendant Mendrick has made the "very slight" showing required for excusable neglect and grants the relief requested under CCP 473(b).

Because of the significant evidence that Mr. Kendrick was aware that he was required to file a responsive pleading, the court makes the grant of this motion conditional on Mr. Kendrick paying Plaintiff $1000 for the fees that plaintiff incurred as a result of Mr. Kendrick's failure to file a timely answer. Vanderkous v. Conley (2010) 188 Cal.App.4th 111, 118-119.

Defendant Kendrick must file the proposed answer on or before January 26, 2012.

INTRODUCTION

Watchtower New York and the North Fremont Congregation (the "Church Defendants") jointly move for New Trial and, as to Watchtower only, for Judgment Notwithstanding the Verdict on the issues of punitive damages. Not a single ground for the combined Motions has legal or factual merit. The Church Defendants base their Motions on claimed insufficiency of the evidence, but exclude reference to any evidence favorable to Plaintiff. They base their Motions on claimed error in the Trial Court's ruling excluding non-parties from the Special Verdict and its refusal to instruct the jury on inapplicable mandatory reporting statutes, but again fail to accurately state the evidence or address to the controlling authorities relied on by the Court. Defendant Watchtower claims Constitutional violations in the punitive damage award, but the arguments misinterpret the cases it cites. The Church Defendants attack the jury's award of damages as resulting from passion and prejudice, but ignore their own failure to offer either evidence or argument on the issue of compensatory damages.

The jury's verdict was neither capricious nor arbitrary. Jury selection was guided by the Trial Court, with caution to exclude any prospective juror who demonstrated bias against Jehovah's Witnesses or strong emotion about child sexual abuse. Defendants did not raise a single objection to any ruling in the voir dire process. During trial the jury was extremely attentive. Their deliberations were methodically conducted over four days. The jurors were thorough, asking for portions of testimony to be re-read and reporting the omission of Table A from the Present Cash Value instruction that had been overlooked by counsel and the Court.

I. THE MOTION FOR J.N.O.V. FAILS TO MEET THE STATUTORY STANDARD AND IGNORES EVIDENCE SUFFICIENT TO SUPPORT THE VERDICT.

A. Evidence on Malice

Watchtower's Motion for J.N.O.V. argues that the evidence is insufficient to support a finding by the clear and convincing standard that Watchtower's conduct harming Plaintiff constituted legal malice. The identical argument has been rejected by the Trial Court twice, once in granting Plaintiff's Motion to Amend her Complaint and again in denying Watchtower's Motion for Nonsuit/Directed Verdict. As before, Watchtower incorrectly argues that "Plaintiff's entire argument regarding malice

. . . was based solely on the July 1, 1989 letter from Defendant Watchtower to all bodies of elders." (Def. MPA 4:22-24.) The argument fails to mention the evidence showing three interrelated Watchtower corporate policy decisions that contributed to Plaintiff's harm. The first is the policy of keeping child sexual abuse reports secret, embodied in the 1989 letter that was Plaintiff's Exhibit 1. The second is the related policy of relying exclusively on parents to protect children in Jehovah's Witnesses against childhood sexual abuse, while simultaneously denying them the information to identify confirmed child abusers who are in frequent contact with their children. The third is the total absence of any program or policy on child sexual abuse prevention, as opposed to parental education. Although Watchtower argues the evidence showed it had good "policies to protect children" (Def. MPA 7:24-25), even Defendants' expert Dr. Applewhite pointedly refused to support Defendants' child sex abuse prevention program. (Applewhite testimony, Simons Dec., Ex. 14, 136:2-15.) Plaintiff's counsel argued all three policy issues in closing. (Plaintiff's closing, Simons Dec., Ex. 15, 95:6-9; 101:9-12; 119:17-121:5.)

The Church Defendants argue that the jury was required to believe, accept, and give 100% credence to the defense witnesses' testimony, including their expert Dr. Applewhite. (Def. MPA 7:1-20.) They argue that the jury was required to interpret the July 1, 1989 letter to all bodies of elders only as the defense attorneys suggested. (MPA 5:4-6:27.) They argue that there was no contrary evidence presented. (Def. MPA 7:21-28.) All three arguments sidestep the rule that J.N.O.V. "may be granted only if it appears from the evidence, viewed in the light most favorable to the party securing the verdict, that there is no substantial evidence in support." (Sweatman v. Department of Veterans Affairs (2001) 25 Cal.4th 62, 68, emphasis added; See C.C.P. §663.) "If there is any substantial evidence, or reasonable inferences to be drawn therefrom, in support of the verdict, the motion should be denied." (Hauter v. Zogarts (1975) 14 Cal.3d 104, 110.) The party in whose favor the verdict was rendered is "entitled to the benefit of every favorable inference which may reasonably be drawn from the evidence and to have all conflicts in the evidence resolved in his favor." (Fountain Valley Chateau Blanc Homeowner's Ass'n v. Dep't. of Veterans' Affairs (1998) 67 Cal.App.4th 743, 750.)

The content and timing of the 1989 letter, with repeated references to avoiding lawsuits, leads to the inference that its true purpose was to avoid claims like Plaintiff's, based either on sexual abuse of a child by a perpetrator already known to the Church Defendants, like Jonathan Kendrick, or possible suits by other abused children, who might remain unaware that they were not their abuser's only victims. The timing of the letter, coming soon after national attention focused on multiple lawsuits involving sexual abuse in the Catholic Church, supports that inference. (Salter test., Simons Dec., Ex. 7, 54:25-56:21; 61:14-65:3.) The jury was reasonably persuaded by the repeated secular and lawsuit-related concerns expressed in the letter that its true purpose was not to instruct on religious beliefs, but rather to hide the existence of known child sexual abusers from the congregations and the public. The jury doubtlessly waited for the explanation - which the Church Defendants never offered - as to why, if the 1989 letter represented only a common sense, garden variety instruction in basic confidentiality when taking confessions or performing counseling, it ends with a P.S. instructing elders to not copy the letter or disclose its contents to anyone, ever. (Trial Ex. 1/Def. 026; Plaintiff's closing, Simons Dec., Ex. 15, 105:23-106:9.)

Watchtower knew that secrecy protects molesters and injures victims. (Awake Magazine, Trial Ex. 64/Def. 37, Oct. 8, 1993); that secrecy is why child sex abusers were allowed to roam free in the Catholic Church (Ibid.); that child sex abusers could be otherwise trusted persons within the church (Ibid.); and that child sex abuse has devastating effects on children. (Awake Magazine, Trial Ex. 60/Def. 29, Oct. 8, 1991; Trial Ex. 63/Def. 36, July 22, 1993.) Slogans about "Abhorring Child Abuse" aside, Watchtower's actual policies deliberately kept child sex abusers secret with the result of causing devastating harm to Plaintiff.

The jury had many good reasons to disbelieve and reject some or all of the Church Defendants' testimony on these issues. None of the witnesses who testified regarding the reasons for the July 1, 1989 policy were involved in creating it or had any personal knowledge on the issue above what they were told by unknown individuals at Watchtower New York. (Shuster test., Simons Dec., Ex. 11, 115:19-116:5; Clarke test., Simons Dec., Ex. 10, 188:18-20; Ex. 16, 31:1-7; Lamerdin test., Simons Dec., Ex. 13, 204:7-16.) For reasons of their own, the Church Defendants chose not to call anyone who was involved in the actual creation of the policy set forth in the letter to explain or defend it. Although the policies were admitted to be those of the Governing Body, none of its members testified in this action. (Shuster test., Simons Dec., Ex. 11, 116:14-117:5.) The jury may have reasonably decided to follow the Court's instruction and view with suspicion the weaker second-hand evidence of the letter's intent and basis offered by the low-ranking elders who were produced to testify on the issue. (CACI 203, Court's Inst., Simons Dec, Ex. 18, 53:17-22.)

The jury may have reasonably found that the elders were willfully false in significant portions of their testimony, and decided to disbelieve the rest. (CACI 5003, Court's Inst., Simons Dec., Ex. 18, 81:18-20.) Elders Abrahamson's and Clarke's versions of the Kendrick family meeting in 1993, where they learned Kendrick had molested his step-daughter, were repeatedly contradicted by Evelyn Kendrick and Andrea Sylvia. (Abrahamson test., Simons Dec., Ex. 1, 108:6-110:3, 136:7-18 and Clarke test., Simons Dec., Ex. 10, 173:11-23, 179:13-23 v. E. Kendrick test., Simons Dec., Ex. 2, 41:19-42:19 and Sylvia test., Simons Dec., Ex. 3, 94:1-95:17 [touching was intentional, in bedroom, skin-to-skin, and included pelvic area]; Clarke test., Simons Dec., Ex. 10, 184:22-185:14 v. E. Kendrick test., Simons Dec., Ex. 2, 43:6-20 and Sylvia test., Simons Dec., Ex. 3, 97:12-98:1 [report not "private"]; Clarke test., Simons Dec., Ex. 10, 166:22-167:4 v. E. Kendrick test., Simons Dec., Ex. 2, 40:14-41:4 [meeting held because Evelyn called Clarke for protection, not because Jonathan Kendrick called Clarke for "counseling"]; Abrahamson test., Simons Dec., Ex. 1, 114:24-115:4 v. E. Kendrick test., Simons Dec., Ex. 2, 42:20-43:5 [blaming Evelyn].)

Mr. Shuster and the Fremont elders testified that Kendrick would never have been allowed to be in field service with Plaintiff, then age eight, nine, and ten. (Abrahamson test., Simons Dec., Ex. 1, 122:21-123:6, Clarke test., Ex. 10, 208:20-209:11; Shuster test., Ex. 12, 177:13-25.) This testimony was contradicted by witness Carolyn Martinez, who saw them in field service together. (Martinez test., Simons Dec., Ex. 6, 41:10-18.) Mr. Shuster falsely testified that he believed Watchtower has a written policy proscribing known child molesters from performing field service with children, but was unable to produce it. (Shuster test., Simons Dec., Ex. 12, 177:13-179:23.) And Mr. Shuster and Elders Abrahamson and Lamerdin each gave the inherently ridiculous testimony that they do not believe parents would be better equipped to decide who to trust with their children if they knew the identity of confirmed child molesters in their congregation. (Shuster test., Simons Dec., Ex. 12, 181:6-12; Abrahamson test., Simons Dec., Ex. 1, 118:15-120:9; Lamerdin test., Simons Dec., Ex. 13, 202:14-18.)

The jury could have reasonably decided not to believe any of the testimony of the elders as to why they were instructed to and did keep Kendrick's record of child sexual abuse secret from the congregation, giving him the opportunity to groom other girls for molestation. In rejecting the elders' testimony that the purpose was to protect the Kendrick family's privacy, and not to hush-up victims and avoid unwanted attention, legal or otherwise, the jury may reasonably have concluded that the opposite was true – that Watchtower was far more concerned with protecting Jehovah's Witnesses from image-damaging attention and hushing-up any victims than it was with protecting its flock from Brother Kendrick. "To disbelieve the denial of the existence of a fact is to believe in the existence of that fact." (Donchin v. Guerrero (1995) 34 Cal.App.4th 1832, 1840.) This is particularly true in the case where the evidence establishing state of mind, such as malice, is exclusively within the control of the defendant. (Ibid.)

Defense counsel's interpretation of the 1989 letter was also within the jury's power to reject. Elder Abrahamson specifically admitted that elders did have the authority to "inform" parents of a known molester like Kendrick, which contradicts the Church Defendants' counsel's, and other elders', testimony that biblical mandates required secrecy. (Abrahamson test., Simons Dec., Ex. 1, 116:11-18.) Defendants argue that the 1989 policy was to avoid lawsuits by child sexual abusers for invasion of privacy and improper disclosure of confidential information. (Def. MPA 5:21-23.) However, no evidence of any such lawsuits was introduced, and the fact that Kendrick was publicly convicted in the criminal courts demonstrates that there was no right of privacy involved in this case. Evelyn and Andrea Kendrick did not consider the matter private. (E. Kendrick test., Simons Dec., Ex. 2, 43:6-20; Sylvia test., Simons Dec., Ex. 3, 97:12-98:1.) Furthermore, under repeated cross-examination, elders Abrahamson and Clark admitted that Kendrick's "confession" was really a lie. (Abrahamson test., Simons Dec., Ex. 1, 105:16-107:14; Clarke test., Simons Dec., Ex. 10, 173:24-

174:6.) There was more than sufficient evidence to clearly convince the jury that the Fremont elders were instructed and carried out policies of keeping known child sex abusers secret, and failed to protect children, including Plaintiff, for the benefit of Watchtower and to the risk and detriment of children.

In closing argument, Plaintiff's counsel went through the July 1, 1989 letter in great detail, and offered an interpretation of the document that was in stark contrast to that offered by Defendants' attorneys. (Plaintiff's closing, Simons Dec., Ex. 15, 101:9-106:9.) As the Trial Court found in granting Plaintiff's Motion to Amend her Pleadings to add the punitive damages claim, and in denying the Motion for Non-Suit/Directed Verdict on the issue of malice, there was sufficient evidence for Plaintiff to have proven a prima facie case on the issue of malice.

B. "National Policy"

The Church Defendants argue "the punitive damages award must also be vacated in its entirety because Plaintiff's stated purpose for pursuing punitive damages was to effect a change in Watchtower's national policy." (Def. MPA 8:5-7.) They assert that "seeking punitive damages for that purpose is improper." (Id. at 8:7-8.)

The Church Defendants have confused two separate and distinct concepts: the prohibition against awarding punitive damages to punish conduct committed outside of the state's jurisdiction, and the permissible goal of deterring future wrongful conduct by changing a national policy through an award of punitive damages for the conduct against the plaintiff who is before the Court. This confusion arises from the Church Defendants' failure to properly read BMW of North America, Inc. v. Gore (1996) 517 U.S. 559, and failure to review or cite Johnson v. Ford Motor Company (2005) 35 Cal.4th 1191.

BMW was an Alabama case against the automobile manufacturer that sold a repainted BMW as a new vehicle. Evidence was introduced at trial of nationwide sales of nearly 1000 such cars, all but 14 of them sold in other states. In addition to awarding compensatory damages of $4000, the jury awarded two million dollars in punitive damages: a ratio of 500 to 1.

The U.S. Supreme Court held that "a state may not impose economic sanctions on violations of its laws with the intent of changing the tortfeasor's lawful conduct in other states." (517 U.S. at p. 572 [emphasis added].) A state may not impose punitive damages to punish a defendant for conduct that did not occur in, or had no impact on, the state where the trial was held. (Id. at p. 572-73.) Due Process prohibits punishing a defendant for harm to persons not before the Court. (Phillip Morris USA v. Williams (2007) 549 U.S. 346, 349.) Thus, although evidence of harm to others is admissible on the issue of reprehensibility, the Court must protect against the risk that the jury will punish the defendant for harm caused to others. (Id. at p. 355.)

None of these rules were violated in this case. The jury's award of punitive damages could not have been for the purpose of punishing Watchtower for harm to others outside of California, because the Trial Court granted the Church Defendants' Motion in Limine to exclude evidence of any other victims and no such evidence was admitted. Because there was no evidence of harm to others outside of California or of harm to others besides Plaintiff, there is no basis to argue that the jury awarded punitive damages based upon harm to anyone other than Plaintiff. Moreover, the jury was instructed that punitive damages were only for the purpose of punishing Defendant Watchtower "for the conduct [that] harmed the Plaintiff and to discourage similar conduct in the future." (CACI 3949, Court's Inst., Simons Dec., Ex. 19, 13:5-8), and not to award punitive damages "for the impact of its alleged misconduct [on] persons other than Candace Conti." (Id. at 14:12-14.)

There was also no evidence of Watchtower's lawful conduct in other states. Unlike BMW, Plaintiff's expert Dr. Anna Salter testified that the policy of Defendant Watchtower violated national standards of care, applicable in all 50 states where she trains and teaches. (Salter test., Simons Dec., Ex. 7, 61:14-65:3.) There is no evidence from which the jury could have concluded that the policies at issue were lawful in any state. Therefore, the prohibition on imposing punitive damages "with the intent of changing the tortfeasor's lawful conduct in other states" has no applicability to this case. (BMW, supra, 517 U.S. at p. 572.)

As the California Supreme Court recognized in Johnson v. Ford Motor Company, supra, the fact that wrongful conduct involves a national policy does not preclude the use of punitive damages to deter continuation of that policy. (35 Cal.4th 1191 at p. 1207.) The scale of the wrongful conduct, including whether or not it is resulting from a national policy that would be applied to all similar cases, remains "relevant to reprehensibility and hence to the size of award warranted, under the guidepost, to meet the state's interest in deterrence." (Ibid.) Even more strongly, the Johnson Court stated, "Nothing the high court has said about due process review requires that California juries and courts ignore evidence of corporate policies and practices and evaluate the defendant's harm to the plaintiff in isolation."

Defendant Watchtower's argument that a jury may not consider the scope of a national policy in determining reprehensibility and an award of punitive damages is simply wrong and not supported by either the authorities it cites or the authorities it omits.

II. THERE WAS NO ERROR IN EXCLUDING NON-PARTIES FROM VERDICT FORM.

As their first-claimed basis for new trial, the Church Defendants argue that the Court erred in not including various public entities and Plaintiff's parents on the verdict form. The Court's ruling rejecting the request was based on case law showing none of the claimed at fault non-parties had a legal duty to Plaintiff under the facts of this case. Defendants' Motion for New Trial neither addresses these cases nor cites any evidence that would establish a prima facie case against any non-party. A non-party may only be included on a Special Verdict form if the evidence is sufficient to establish a legal duty, the breach of that duty, and causation of the plaintiff's injury. (Ford v. Polaris Industries, Inc. (1997) 139 Cal.App.4th 755, 778-80; Wilson v. Ritto (2003) 105 Cal.App.4th 361, 369-70; Chakalis v. Elevator Solutions, Inc. (2012) 205 Cal. App. 4th 1557, 1569-70.) The Church Defendants did not introduce sufficient evidence to meet this standard.

A. Law Enforcement Agencies

Absent a "special relationship," law enforcement agencies and public agencies have no duty in California to warn citizens of an individual who presents a danger to others. (Denton v. City of Fullerton (1991) 233 Cal.App.3d 1636, 1640-41 [police officers aware of a sexual assault in an apartment complex laundry room had no duty to warn residents of the complex of the risk of sexual assaults on the property]; Thompson v. County of Alameda (1980) 27 Cal. 3d 741 [County employees had no duty to warn neighbors that a juvenile released from Juvenile Detention may constitute a danger to others].)

In this case, the public agencies Defendants blame had no duty to warn anyone of Kendrick's risk of further molestations, because - unlike the Church Defendants – those agencies had no special relationship to Plaintiff, and no readily identifiable individual or group of individuals who were Kendrick's future victims. There is no discrimination against the Church Defendants in violation of the First Amendment, as they suggest. (Def. MPA 13:3-13.) The Church Defendants' duty arose from their combined specific knowledge of Kendrick and their relationship with Plaintiff, a combination the agencies did not share.

B. Parents

The Church Defendants do not produce any argument or evidence that Mr. or Mrs. Conti, Plaintiff's parents, had actual knowledge that Kendrick was a child molester or that he was molesting Candace. The Defendants instead argue the Contis were bad parents. (Def. MPA 14:12-25.) Although their parenting flaws may have made their daughter more vulnerable, that evidence does not meet the threshold to create a legal duty to prevent her molestation in this case. The Church Defendants do not discuss or distinguish Romero v. Superior Court (2001) 89 Cal.App.4th 1068 or Chaney v. Superior Court (1995) 39 Cal.App.4th 152, both of which were relied on by the Trial Court. Both cases state the requirement that a private person must have actual knowledge of the perpetrator's propensity for sexual abuse before imposition of a duty to protect a minor can be imposed. The Romero Court held that no duty could be imposed on the parents "because there is no evidence from which the trier of fact could find that the Romeros had prior actual knowledge of Joseph's propensity to sexually assault female minors." (89 Cal.App.4th at p. 1080.)

As the Trial Court previously found, neither Welfare and Institutions Code section 300 nor Williams v. Garcetti, (1993) 5 Cal.4th 561, establish a duty on Plaintiff's parents in this case. Welfare and Institutions Code section 300 is the Juvenile Dependency statute, and there is no authority that it creates a tort duty. Williams was a taxpayer group's action for injunctive relief, seeking to prohibit the District Attorney from enforcing Penal Code section 272, and did not involve parents' failure to protect their child from sexual assault.

III. THERE WAS NO PREDJUDICIAL ERROR IN REFUSING DEFENDANTS' PROPOSED MANDATED REPORTING INSTRUCTION.

The Church Defendants argue that the Court erred in refusing to give their requested jury instruction regarding clergy not being specifically named as mandated reporters in 1993. (Def. MPA 15:19-16:22.) Where a moving party asserts instructional error as grounds for a new trial, it must prove that the error was prejudicial. (Soule v. General Motors Corp. (1994) 8 Cal.4th 548, 570.) A court may not grant a new trial on this basis if "it is not reasonably probable defendant would have obtained a more favorable result in its absence." (Ibid.)

The argument that the refusal to give the requested instruction was prejudicial error rests on two prongs, both of which are factually erroneous. First, Defendants argue that the instruction was required because "Plaintiff's expert, Anna Salter, Ph.D., intentionally misled the jury on this issue by suggesting that clergy were legally obligated to report." (Def. MPA 16:25-27.) Secondly, Defendants argue that Plaintiff's counsel "suggested to the jury that one measure the Church Defendants could have taken was reporting Kendrick's confession . . . to the authorities." (Def. MPA 17:9-11.)

Dr. Salter did not mislead the jury, intentionally or otherwise. Plaintiff's counsel did not ask any questions at all regarding mandatory reporting during direct examination. Defense counsel raised the issue as its first cross-examination question. (Salter test., Simons Dec., Ex. 7, 71:3-12.) Dr. Salter stated only: "I believe that there was a law in place that required people who were involved with children to report." She agreed "there was not a law that specifically addressed ministers." (Id. at 71:14-17.) Dr. Salter did accurately point out that the mandatory reporting law was broader than defense counsel suggested, and included "institutions that involve children." (Id. at 71:21-23.) This testimony accurately stated the content of Penal Code section 11166 as it existed in 1993. (Plaintiff's [Denied] Request for Judicial Notice, Simons Dec., Ex. 17.)

Similarly, the Church Defendants' argument that Plaintiff's counsel told the jury the Church Defendants could be held liable for not reporting Kendrick's confession to authorities is simply false.

Two citations to the trial transcript are offered: Mr. Schnack's Declaration, Ex. F, at 107:6-10 and 215:20-216:19. Neither quotation makes the suggestion now argued.

The Church Defendants also claim that there was error in the instruction because "the testimony of the Church Defendant elders and the July 1, 1989 letter to all bodies of elders clearly showed that this would have been a serious breach of confidentiality in violation of the tenants and practices of their faith." (Def. MPA 17:22-25.) As reviewed above, this point was neither "clearly shown" by any witness with personal knowledge of the policy, nor clearly shown to involve "confidential" information.

The Court properly ruled that the question of common law duty in this case under Rowland v. Christian and the legal requirements of mandated reporting were separate issues, and that the mandated reporting statutes were irrelevant and potentially confusing. The Court's duty instruction did not refer to or incorporate mandated reporting statutes, or reporting at all. The Court was correct in instructing the jury to disregard them. In any event, the Church Defendants have failed to show any prejudice from this instruction.

IV. DEFENDANTS' ARGUMENT ON EXCESSIVE DAMAGES FAILS AS A MATTER OF LAW.

"A new trial shall not be granted upon the ground of insufficiency of the evidence to justify the verdict or other decision, nor upon the ground of excessive or inadequate damages, unless after weighing the evidence the court is convinced from the entire record, including reasonable inferences therefrom, that the court or jury clearly should have reached a different verdict or decision." (C.C.P. § 657(7).)

A. Non-Economic Damages

The Church Defendants argue the award of non-economic damages of $6,870,000 is the result of an "inflamed" jury's passion and prejudice, rather than a "sober" decision based on the evidence. (Def. MPA 20:9-15.) During the trial, however, neither defendant chose to present any evidence on the issue of damages. Neither presented any evidence challenging the causation of Plaintiff's harm. Although there was evidence that Plaintiff was evaluated by a mental health expert retained by Defendants, a Dr. Williams, he was not called to testify. Defense counsel asked few questions of Plaintiff's current treating mental health care providers from Kaiser, Dr. Laura Walton and LCSW Helene Harmatz, and those questions were directed at her good progress now that she is in treatment. None of Plaintiff's treating providers from her adolescence were offered to testify except Laura Fraser, who strongly supported the likelihood that Plaintiff would not have disclosed her abuse at the time it was occurring or in the chaotic years that followed. Although defense counsel did not respect Dr. Ponton or her opinions, they did not offer any evidence to dispute either her qualifications or her conclusions.

There was substantial evidence of serious non-economic damages sustained by Plaintiff in the past and the likelihood of such damages for the remainder of her lifetime. (Walton test., Simons Dec., Ex. 5, 154:12-13, 155:10-15, 156:23-157:2, 158:11-159:1, 164:20-165:2; Ponton test., Simons Dec., Ex. 9, 21:16-19, 29:7-24, 34:18-35:6, 45:17-24, 46:9-47:7.) Defendants' own evidence admits that child sexual abuse wreaks havoc and leaves "deep emotional scars." (Awake, Trial Ex. 60/Def. 029, Oct. 8, 1991, p. 3.) Plaintiff's counsel's argument on damages was not manipulative, inflammatory, nor outside the evidence. (Plaintiff's closing, Simons Dec., Ex. 15, 125:23-129:5.)

The Church Defendants' argument as to excessive compensatory damages fails to cite any of the testimony or evidence that supported the jury's finding. Instead, the Court is presented with a rehash of rejected factual assertions and disputed testimony on liability issues, all of which the jury properly exercised its power to consider and reject. Church Defendants argue that Plaintiff was the only witness to her abuse. (Def. MPA 18:22-23.) Child molesters, however, generally operate in secret, without witnesses. They quibble over Kendrick's abuse occurring "after" or "during" field abuse. (Def. MPA at 19:2-3.) Both words apply where the evidence established Kendrick interrupted field service to take Plaintiff to his house, and then returned her to Kingdom Hall. (Plaintiff test., Simons Dec., Ex. 8, 110:22-111:13, 113:22-24.) The Church Defendants cite the testimony of their witnesses to dispute that Kendrick paid attention to Plaintiff at Kingdom Hall, a disputed fact not relevant to damages. The Elders attested that Plaintiff would never have been in field service with Kendrick, (Abrahamson test., Simons Dec., Ex. 1, 122:21-123:6; Clarke test., Simons Dec., Ex 10, 208:20-209:11), testimony flatly contradicted by Carolyn Martinez. (Martinez test., Simons Dec., Ex. 6, 41:10-18.) Defendants argue that the abuse could not have occurred many times because Kendrick did not live alone. (Def. MPA 19:24-20:2.) That argument ignores evidence explaining why Plaintiff at age nine and ten would not have seen Evelyn or Andrea Kendrick at the house and had the impression they did not live there. (E. Kendrick test., Simons Dec., Ex. 2, 58:1-20, Sylvia test., Simons Dec., Ex. 3, 98:22-100:4.) Defendants argue that the jury was required to believe the elders "kept an eye on" Kendrick. (Def. MPA 19:15-16.) There was good reason for the jury to reject this self-serving testimony. (Plaintiff's closing, Simons Dec., Ex. 15, 97:3-98:1.) Defendants argue damages are excessive because Plaintiff was unable to recall with accuracy the exact number of times she was abused over the course of two years when she was nine and ten. (Def. MPA 18:23-24.) The uncontradicted expert testimony of Carl Lewis, however, established that children of that young age often are not able to accurately tabulate the number of times a serial abuser molested them. (Lewis test., Simons Dec., Ex. 4, 33:1-35:1.) The jury's award of compensatory damages would have been reasonable and appropriate whether she was horribly violated by Kendrick 100 times or "only five or ten" as argued by the defense.

None of the evidence cited by Defendants demonstrates that the jury "clearly" should have reached a different verdict on the issue of compensatory damages. None of the evidence suggests that the jury, who did not receive the benefit of contrary evidence or argument on damages from the defense, awarded Plaintiff the amount of damages she requested because of "passion or prejudice" rather than the evidence and argument they were provided by the only side to address the issue.

B. Punitive Damages

1. Malice & National Policy

For the same reasons set forth in the earlier discussion on J.N.O.V., Defendant Watchtower's arguments that the evidence did not establish malice and that due process prohibits an award of punitive damages to deter a national policy are factually and legally incorrect.

2. Excessive Punitive Damages

a. Reprehensibility

"Society's greatest responsibility . . . is our common goal of safeguarding our children." (Juarez v. Boy Scouts of America, Inc. (2000) 81 Cal.App.4th 377, 407.) The jury was instructed, without objection by Watchtower, on four factors to consider on the issue of reprehensibility. (Jury Inst., Simons Dec., Ex. 19, 13:17-14:2.) Defendant Watchtower does not address these factors or apply them to the facts of the case. (Def. MPA 21:23-22:2.) Instead it merely argues that its conduct was not reprehensible - period.

The first factor in reprehensibility is whether the conduct caused physical harm. In this case it did: the despicable physical harm of serial sexual abuse of a child. The second factor is whether the defendant disregarded the health or safety of others. The evidence showed that it did: Wachtower ignored the health and safety of children in order to keep childhood sexual abuse within its congregation a secret. The third factor is whether the defendant's conduct involved a pattern or practice. Although no evidence was admitted of other victims or abuse, the national policies involved constitute a practice that the elders were required to follow, nationwide, in all cases. (Abrahamson test., Simons Dec., Ex. 1, 89:21-90:16, 103:17-104:10, 121:12-16; Clarke test., Simons Dec., Ex. 10, 182:20-23, 188:10-20; Ex. 16, 29:23-25; Shuster test., Simons Dec., Ex. 12, 183:13-21.) The last factor is whether the defendant acted with trickery or deceit. There is deceit in representing a congregation member in good standing as a qualified "Brother" and "Minister," and fit to go in field service preaching the Gospel, in the company of children, when Defendants and Defendants alone know that the individual – Jonathan Kendrick – is a confirmed child molester. All of the relevant factors in the jury's analysis of reprehensibility favor the punitive damage award and none suggest it was improper in any way.

b. Ratio

Watchtower argues that the ratio between compensatory damages and punitive damages is excessive, because it greatly exceeds the percentage of non-economic damages attributable to it, and because it exceeds a 1:1 ratio to compensatory damages. (Def. MPA 22:3-18.) Neither argument is supported by law.

The ratio of punitive damages to total compensatory damages suffered by the Plaintiff is the correct and Constitutional measure of disparity, not the ratio to the individual defendant's proportionate share of non-economic damages. This rule is repeatedly identified in BMW, supra, in which the Court states: "The principle that exemplary damages must bear a 'reasonable relation' to compensatory damages has a long pedigree." (517 U.S. at p. 580, and fn. 32.) The Court again reiterated, "the proposition that a comparison between the compensatory award and the punitive award is significant." (Id. at p. 581.) This rule is fair because Defendant Watchtower's conduct, while less than 100% of the total fault, was a substantial factor in causing 100% of the compensatory damages suffered by Plaintiff. There is no authority to the contrary, and none is cited by Defendant Watchtower.

The jury was instructed: "Any amount of punitive damages you award must bear a reasonable relationship to Candace Conti's harm." (Court's Inst., Simons Dec., Ex. 19, 13:11-13.) In awarding treble damages, the jury was well within the reasonable ratio that the BMW Court observed are "historically rooted" in over 65 enactments between 1275 and 1753 for double, treble, or quadruple damages. (BMW, supra, 517 U.S. at p. 580-81, and fn. 33.) State Farm Mutual v. Campbell, (2003) 538 U.S. 408, does not mandate a maximum 1:1 ratio. On the contrary, it specifically recognizes single digit multipliers of punitive damages consistent with the 700-year history of "double, treble, or quadruple damages to deter and punish." (Id. at p. 424-25.)

CONCLUSION

The only injustice in this case would arise if the Court decided to ignore the law it carefully reviewed and followed during the trial, or disregard the jury's authority to decide the facts. Based on the foregoing, the Court must deny the Church Defendants' Motions in their entirety.

Doe Plaintiff/Petitioner(s) VS. The Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, I Defendant/Respondent(s) (Abbreviated Title)	No. HG11558324 Order Demurrer to Complaint Overruled

The Demurrer to Complaint was set for hearing on 05/19/2011 at 03:00 PM in Department 22 before the Honorable Robert McGuiness. The Tentative Ruling was published and has not been contested.

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED THAT:

The tentative ruling is affirmed as follows: The Demurrer of Defendants Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of Pennsylvania, Inc., Jehovah's Witnesses on Peralta Blvd., Fremont, and Kingdom Hall of Jehovah's Witnesses ("Defendants") to the Complaint is OVERRULED. Plaintiff Jane Doe ("Plaintiff") has sufficiently alleged facts to support a duty by Defendants to Plaintiff in order to support this negligence claim. (See Juarez v. Boy Scouts of America, Inc. (2000) 81 Cal.App.4th 377.)

The Court notes that in Defendants' moving papers, Defendants cite to out-of-state cases, but have not provided copies of such cases. In the future, Defendants should comply with Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 3.1113(i).

Defendants shall file and serve an answer to the Complaint within 20 days, which time shall run from service of notice of entry of this order by Plaintiff.

Doe Plaintiff/Petitioner(s) VS. The Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, I Defendant/Respondent(s) (Abbreviated Title)	No. HG11558324 Order Motion to Amend Complaint Granted

The Motion to Amend Complaint was set for hearing on 05/03/2012 at 03:00 PM in Department 22 before the Honorable Robert McGuiness. The Tentative Ruling was published and has not been contested.

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED THAT:

The tentative ruling is affirmed as follows: The motion of Jane Doe to file amended complaint adding punitive damage allegations against defendant Watchtower Bible and Tract Society ("Watchtower") under CCP 425.14 is GRANTED.

Plaintiff filed this motion on April 10, 2012, just six weeks before the trial date of May 21, 2012. Plaintiff did not delay unduly in filing this motion, and Watchtower has not identified any specific liability or fact discovery that it will need from Plaintiff as a result of the addition of the punitive damages allegations.

Under CCP 425.14, a plaintiff cannot assert a claim for punitive damages against a religious corporation until the court finds that the plaintiff has presented sufficient evidence of a prima facie showing of liability under the preponderance of evidence standard and a showing of recklessness, oppression or fraud under the clear and convincing standard. Little Co. of Mary Hosp. v. Superior Court (2008) 162 Cal.App.4th 261, 267, 271; Rowe v. Superior Court (1993) 15 Cal.App.4th 1711, 1723.

The proposed First Amended Complaint includes a third cause of action entitled "Acts of Malice." The court reads the cause action as a claim that defendant Watchtower is liable for negligence because it acted with a willful and conscious disregard of the rights or safety of others. (Civil Code 3294(c)(1).) To establish conscious disregard, plaintiff must show that the defendant was aware of the probable dangerous consequences of its conduct, and that he willfully and deliberately failed to avoid those consequences. (Hoch v. Allied Signal (1994) 24 Cal.App.4th 48, 61.)

Plaintiff has presented a prima facie showing that she could potentially prove a claim against Watchtower for negligence by a preponderance of the evidence. There is evidence that Watchtower's officers, directors, or managing agents knew or had reason to know in 1993 that Jonathan Kendrick had confessed to inappropriate touching of a child (PX 2; DX L and M), that Watchtower failed to notify the congregation or to take other measures to protect children in the church (PX 3 and 4; DX K), and that as a result plaintiff suffered injury from 1994 through 1996.

Plaintiff has presented a prima facie showing that she could potentially prove by clear and convincing evidence that Watchtower was aware of the probable dangerous consequences of its decision not to alert church members of Kendrick's dangerous tendencies, and that Watchtower willfully and deliberately failed to avoid those consequences. (PX 2, 3, 4.)

Watchtower raises the issue of the appropriate balance between the clergy-penitent privilege and appropriate disclosures to congregants that a member may be a threat to children. Watchtower also notes that most of the case law on the responsibility of entities for sexual abuse concerns abuse perpetrated by employees or agents rather than by member of the entity who were not in positions of authority at the time of the abuse. (But see Wallace v. Der-Ohanian (1962) 199 Cal.App.2d 141.) These concerns present fact specific issues that are beyond the scope of a motion where the plaintiff need only present sufficient evidence to establish a prima facie case of liability and punitive damages.

The court OVERRULES the objection to PX 27 (percipient witness), to PX 26 (percipient witness to statements by Kendrick), to PX 30 (offered as evidence that Watchtower was on notice, not for truth of matter asserted), PX 31 (admissible to extent based on personal knowledge, but court disregards testimony regarding the "true purpose" of Watchtower), and PX 32 (witness is arguably a qualified expert with pertinent information regarding the standard of care during the relevant time period).

The motion of Jane Doe for an order permitting financial discovery is DENIED. If the jury finds that Watchtower is liable for punitive damages, then the court will expect Watchtower to produce its pertinent financial information by 9:00 am the following morning and to have witnesses available to testify by the following day.

Plaintiff must file the proposed First Amended Complaint on or before May 11, 2012.

The Court further orders the parties to comply with the Pretrial Orders: File Motions in Limine and related documents by May 16, 2012 at 2:30 p.m.

Doe Plaintiff/Petitioner(s) VS. The Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, I Defendant/Respondent(s) (Abbreviated Title)	No. HG11558324 Order Motion to Compel Further Answers at Deposition Granted

The Motion to Compel Further Answers at Deposition was set for hearing on 09/29/2011 at 03:00 PM in Department 22 before the Honorable Robert McGuiness. The Tentative Ruling was published and has not been contested.

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED THAT:

The tentative ruling is affirmed as follows: The Motion of Plaintiff Jane Doe to Compel Answers to Questions at Deposition of Gary Abrahamson and for Sanctions is GRANTED. Plaintiff has established that the information sought is not precluded from disclosure under the penitent-clergy privilege, Evidence Code §1031-1034 because the questions do not appear to call for communications that were presumed to be kept confidential with only the clergy member to whom they were communication. Instead, the questions appear to call for information and communications of a kind that would be expected to be communicated beyond that clergy member to others within the religious organization, i.e. a judicial investigating committee, for purposes of taking responding to the communication within the church. (Cf. Roman Catholic Archbishop of Los Angeles v. Superior Court (2005) 131 Cal.App.4th 417, 445-46.)

Defendant shall present Gary Abrahamson for further deposition and shall not instruct him not to answer the questions identified in the motion based upon clergy-penitent privilege.
The further deposition shall take place at a mutually-convenient time, but no later than 20 days after entry of this order.

The request for sanctions in connection with this motion is DENIED.

Doe Plaintiff/Petitioner(s) VS. The Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, I Defendant/Respondent(s) (Abbreviated Title)	No. HG11558324 Order Motion to Compel Production of Documents Granted

The Motion to Compel Production of Documents filed for Jane Doe was set for hearing on 10/03/2011 at 03:00 PM in Department 22 before the Honorable Robert McGuiness.

The matter was argued and submitted, and good cause appearing therefore,

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED THAT:

Pursuant to the court's prior order in this matter, it conducted an in camera review of two letters dated respectively, November 15, 1993 and December 3, 1993, to determine whether the same were (are) privileged communications within the application of Evidence Code section 1034 and related statutes. After review, the court determines that the letters are not privileged and plaintiff's motion to compel production is granted. However, the court will withhold production of the subject letters and they shall remain under seal until November 17, 2011 so as to allow defendants time to consider and seek appellate review here. The court has determined this matter largely within the context of the holding of Roman Catholic Diocese of Los Angeles v. Superior Court, 131 Cal. App. 4th 417. The record there and here demonstrate that the communications were likely to be shared with more than one person; persons other than elders would be likely to consider same and that the penitent (defendant Kendrick) did not expect the communications to be kept confidential (under the circumstances related and presented).

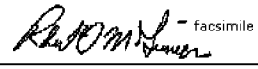
Doe Plaintiff/Petitioner(s) VS. The Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, I Defendant/Respondent(s) (Abbreviated Title)	No. HG11558324 Order Motion to Vacate/Set Aside Granted

The Motion to Vacate/Set Aside was set for hearing on 01/19/2012 at 03:00 PM in Department 22 before the Honorable Robert McGuiness. The Tentative Ruling was published and was contested.

The matter was argued and submitted, and good cause appearing therefore,

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED THAT:



The tentative ruling is affirmed as follows: The Motion of Jonathan Kendrick for relief from default is GRANTED.

The court is concerned that the evidence suggests that Mr. Kendrick was aware of the lawsuit, had consulted with counsel, and was possibly aware that he was required to file a responsive pleading yet failed to do so within the allotted time. The court also notes that the motion was filed shortly after the default, which mitigates any prejudice to the Plaintiff, that counsel for Plaintiff did not did not provide notice to Plaintiff before taking the default, Kim v. Westmoore Partners, Inc. (2011) 201 Cal.App.4th 267, 271 fn 1, and that there is a strong policy preference in favor of resolving cases on their merits, Fasuyi v. Permatex, Inc. (2008) 167 Cal.App.4th 681, 696. Weighing these factors, the court finds that defendant Mendrick has made the "very slight" showing required for excusable neglect and grants the relief requested under CCP 473(b).

Because of the significant evidence that Mr. Kendrick was aware that he was required to file a responsive pleading, the court makes the grant of this motion conditional on Mr. Kendrick paying Plaintiff $1000 for the fees that plaintiff incurred as a result of Mr. Kendrick's failure to file a timely answer. Vanderkous v. Conley (2010) 188 Cal.App.4th 111, 118-119.

Defendant Kendrick must file the proposed answer on or before January 26, 2012.

INTRODUCTION

The jury verdict in this case awarded $130,000.00 in economic damages to Candace Conti, and $6,870,000.00 in past and future non-economic damages. The jury assessed 27% fault to Watchtower New York, and 13% fault to the North Fremont Congregation. The North Fremont Congregation allocation was based exclusively on the jury's answer to Special Verdict Questions 3 and 4, in which they found that Elders Abrahamson and Clarke, each "as an Agent of Watchtower", were negligent and a cause of harm to Plaintiff. The jury's finding of total fault attributed to Watchtower through the combined conduct of its agents in Fremont and those in New York was therefore 40%.

The Court has asked for further briefing on specific issues involving the amount of punitive damages permissibly awarded against Watchtower New York, including analysis of the specific issues of the amount of compensatory damages, reprehensibility of Watchtower's conduct, and the appropriate ratios permitted under due process. As demonstrated below, all of the 5 factors relevant to the characterization of the degree of reprehensibility favor plaintiff and are against Watchtower. The Court will properly conclude that the degree of Watchtower's reprehensibility is serious, and their financial condition very strong. An independent due process review of the facts and circumstances of this specific case, through the filter of the many due process decisions, leads to the conclusion that the amount of punitive damages awarded in this case of $21,000,001.00 is consistent with due process requirements and should be affirmed, whether the ratio is 3:1 as argued by plaintiff, 7.3:1, if the ratio if all of Watchtower's 40% of cumulative fault is considered, or even the extreme 10.4:1 as argued by Watchtower.

I. THE COURT'S POWER IS TO INDEPENDENTLY REVIEW THE JURY'S VERDICT FOR DUE PROCESS PROTECTION.

Punitive damage judgments are independently reviewed by the trial Court as a "thirteenth juror" to determine whether the award was influenced by "passion or prejudice". (Bankhead v. ArvinMeritor, Inc. (2012) 205 Cal.App.4th 68, at 76) While the Court makes an independent assessment of the reprehensibility of the defendant's conduct and the relationship between the award and harm done to the plaintiff to determine compliance with due process concerns, the express or implied factual findings of the trier of fact must be recognized under the substantial evidence rule. (Id. at 85) As expressly acknowledged by the Court in Bankhead, supra, the Court's obligation to conduct a due process analysis regarding punitive damages does not create an opportunity for the defendant "to make an end run around those factual findings" made by the jury. (Id., at 86). Although the amount of punitive damages is independently reviewed by the Court for constitutional due process compliance, a question of law, the underlying factual findings of the jury, including the finding of malice, are not reviewable if supported by any substantial evidence. (Gober v. Ralph's Grocery Co. (2006) 137 Cal.App.4th 204, 212) The Court's constitutional mission "is only to find a level higher than which an award may not go; it is not to find the "right" level in the Court's own view" (Simon v. San Paolo US Holding Co, Inc. (2005) 35 Cal.4th 1159, at 1188) In enforcing federal due process limits, a Court "does not sit as a replacement for the jury, but only as a check on arbitrary awards." (Id.).

To the extent that the Motions by Watchtower to reduce the punitive damages in this case rely on rearguing factual issues the jury determined against them, including the finding of malice, the arguments are outside the scope of permissible consideration, and are instead the prohibited "end run" which seeks to deprive plaintiff of her constitutional right to jury trial.

II. THE COMPENSATORY DAMAGES AWARD WAS NOT PUNITIVE.

A. No Punishment of Church Defendants.

Plaintiff was awarded $6,870,000.00 in non-economic damages to compensate her for "past and future physical pain, mental suffering, depression, anxiety, humiliation, and emotional distress." (CACI 3905-A, 6/14/12 Trial Transcript (TT) 71:22-72:1). The Church Defendants did not dispute either the evidence supporting the compensatory damage award, or argue that the numbers were unreasonable or excessive. While the number itself is significant, the facts of this case warrant the award as a result of which it cannot be concluded that a punitive element was included. There was substantial evidence of repeated, serial, horrific sexual abuse by Jonathan Kendrick at the time that Ms. Conti was 9 and 10 years of age. There was substantial evidence of major depression, an anxiety disorder called post traumatic stress disorder (PTSD), both physical pain and mental suffering, substantial and repeated humiliation, and severe and lifelong emotional distress requiring professional care and treatment. The evidence was uncontradicted that these damages were lifetime damages, and were chronic and recurring. Neither evidence concerning compensatory damages, nor the amount requested by plaintiff's counsel in closing argument, was contested by the Church Defendants.

The jury was also instructed in CACI 3924, specifically being told "you must not include in your award any damages to punish or make an example of Jonathan Kendrick, Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc., or Fremont Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses North Unit. You must award only the damages that will fairly compensate Candace Conti for her harm." (CACI 3924, TT 72:20-73:2). There is no evidence from which one could reasonably conclude that the jury disregarded the Court's instructions, including this one.

Those cases holding a non-economic award to be partly punitive in nature are very different from this case. For example, in State Farm Mutual Auto Insurance Co. v. Campbell (2003) 538 U.S. 408, the compensatory award of $1 Million was for a year and a half of emotional distress, arising solely from an economic transaction rather than physical assault or trauma. (538 U.S. at 426) The emotional distress claimed by the Campbells was limited to outrage and humiliation caused by the defendant insurance company's refusal to pay their claim, which was a form of damage duplicative of the punitive damage award. (Ibid.) In this case, however, there is no duplication of damages. Ms. Conti was not aware of Watchtower's policy or its knowledge of Kendrick's record of previous childhood sexual abuse until over a decade after her own sexual abuse at his hands. Her non-economic damage was lifetime, rather than a year and a half, and involved the worst possible physical injuries of child sex abuse, rather than solely economic damages from the denial of a claim. Ms. Conti experienced her abuse as a child, with no one to comfort her for many years. Her harm came directly from the physical abuse and its emotional consequences, not her anger with or disappointment about watchtower's policies.

In Roby v. McKesson Corp. (2009) 47 Cal.4th 686, non-economic damages were also deemed to include a "punitive" element. In Roby, as in State Farm, there was no physical harm, and the award for the three separate claims of the plaintiff overlapped. Unlike Ms. Conti's case, the award of non-economic damages from the jury exceeded even the amount requested by the plaintiff's attorney. (47 Cal.4th at 698) Roby, unlike Ms. Conti, also experienced her harm as an adult, and was able to obtain prompt therapy and support. Ms. Conti suffered in silence with depression, anxiety, and isolation from self-medicating drug use, for years.

The Court's attention has been drawn to Bankhead v. ArvinMeritor, Inc. (2012) 205 Cal.App.4th 68. The Bankhead Court upheld a 2.4:1 ratio of punitive damages to compensatory damages, while acknowledging that the $2.5 Million emotional distress award for the plaintiff asbestosis victim and his spouse was "high enough that it appears to include a punitive component." (205 Cal.App.4th at 90) Although the Court did not explain why it reached this conclusion, presumably it was influenced by the fact that the period of time from the onset of the symptoms to the death of the plaintiff asbestosis victim was less than three years. Medical care and family support were all available throughout the illness. In Ms. Conti's case, the injury occurred over a prolonged period of time beginning in early childhood and the harm she has experienced will last her lifetime. The uncontradicted testimony of Ms. Conti's LCSW during her pre-teen years, Laura Fraser, was that no support system or safety net was available for Candace Conti during the critical years she was experiencing the abuse, and in the years thereafter. Neither case involved the type of harm any rational person would suffer for any amount of money, but the many additional years of suffering, and the harm's origin is sexual abuse of a vulnerable child rather than the terminal medical condition of an adult, certainly must be recognized before a court attributes a punitive motive to the compensatory damages awarded Candace Conti.

In Walker v. Farmers Insurance Exchange (2007) 153 Cal.App.4th 965, the trial court found that $750,000.00 in emotional distress damages included a punitive element, and the Court of Appeal agreed. (153 Cal.App.4th at 974) In Walker, as in State Farm and Roby, there was no direct physical injury. The injury was transitory in nature, and all of the economic damages – including attorney's fees – were recouped in a relatively short period of time. The sole injury in Walker was the insurer's failure to defend a lawsuit, causing the insured to pay $6,500.00 in a settlement prior to prevailing in their case against the insurer.

The basis of these cases is clear – a non-economic award may be deemed to include a punitive element when it is extremely large when measured against the type of harm, the duration of that harm, and the evidence and argument presented in support of the award. A "substantial" compensatory award cannot be deemed to be punitive in isolation, but rather by comparing the number to the actual physical and mental injury, the certainty that the injury occurred, and the impact of that injury on the plaintiff's life. In a society that pays $6.87 Million and much more to a professional athlete for one season of playing a sport, the same amount for the undisputed non-economic consequences of serial child sex abuse of a 9 and 10 year old, with suffering over a lifetime, is not "punitive". The undisputed and uncontradicted compensatory damages were properly awarded pursuant to the Court's instruction.

B. No Punishment of Mr. Kendrick.

In oral argument of this Motion, the Court expressed some concern that the compensatory damages may have included a punitive element to punish Mr. Kendrick. However, through defense Ex. 135, defense cross-examination, and extensive defense argument, as well as concurrence by plaintiff's counsel, the jury was repeatedly advised that Mr. Kendrick would not be paying any judgment rendered against him, that he had entered into a restraining order agreement in exchange for a Covenant Not to Execute, and that his punishment would come through the criminal system as the Fremont Police Department was now involved in an active investigation of Mr. Conti's molestation. The jury was fully and repeatedly advised and informed that Mr. Kendrick would not be paying any compensatory damage award, and therefore had no reason to "punish" him through the compensatory damages finding.

The Court also expressed concern over the use of the word "monster". However, the transcript is abundantly clear: neither plaintiff nor her attorney ever called Mr. Kendrick a monster. Defense counsel were the only persons in the courtroom to do so, to further their own purpose of shifting the allocation of fault to Mr. Kendrick and away from themselves. There was never any expression by any witness or argument by counsel to suggest Mr. Kendrick should be punished in the compensatory award because he was a "monster".

The trial transcript reflects that Candace Conti used the word "monster" one time in direct examination, when she testified as follows:

> "Q. And what was it about Jonathan Kendrick that you were scared of?
> A. He seemed like a monster." (TT 6/4/12, 100:9-11).

Mr. McCabe used the word twice in his questions and cross-examination (Id., 118:19; 119:4), but Ms. Conti did not use the word again. Of the three total uses of the word "monster" during the evidence phase of the trial, Mr. McCabe used the word twice. There was no further use of the word until closing argument, when plaintiff's counsel described Candace Conti's nightmares as "that feeling and reliving that experience of being crushed by this monster", referring to her feelings rather than directly calling Mr. Kendrick a name. Mr. McCabe called Kendrick a "monster" ten times during his closing argument and Mr. Schnack did so once. Of the total of 15 times the word "monster" was mentioned, 13 were by defense counsel. This does not in any way suggest the compensatory damage award was enlarged to punish Mr. Kendrick.

A large compensatory damage award, including emotional distress damage, is not only appropriate, but required where the plaintiff has suffered a substantial, lifelong, and very real injury, particularly where the extent and amount of emotional distress damages were not contested. In this case the facts show the compensatory damages were truly compensatory, and not punitive. To hold this emotional distress award as a limiting factor in the ratio of punitive damages analysis is to discriminate against and punish Ms. Conti because she was sexually abused as a vulnerable child, and reward the defendants whose conduct and malice made it all possible. Such a result would discriminate against Ms. Conti under the supposed goal of reviewing a punitive damage judgment to provide conformity with due process. This is not the purpose of a due process review.

III. NEITHER THE AMOUNT OF COMPENSATORY DAMAGES NOR DUE PROCESS REQUIRES DISTURBING THE RATIO OF PUNITIVE DAMAGES UNDER THE FACTS OF THIS CASE.

A. Permissible Ratios

Courts have uniformly recognized that a reasonable ratio between punitive damages and compensatory damages must exist to comply with due process requirements. However, these same Courts have uniformly recognized that ratio alone does not answer the question of due process, and that double digit ratios may, under the circumstances of an individual case, be entirely consistent with due process. For example, in Simon v. San Paolo US Holding Company, Inc. (2005) 35 Cal.4th 1159, a 10:1 ratio was found to be constitutional, even where the reprehensibility of the defendant's conduct was low. (35 Cal.4th at 1189) The Simon Court opined that higher ratios may be more appropriate when only economic damages were suffered by the plaintiff. It held that a 10:1 ratio appropriate in that case, specifically rejecting the argument that the outer constitutional limit of punitive damages is a maximum of 4 times compensatory damages. (35 Cal.4th at 1182-3, overruling Diamond Woodworks, Inc. v. Argonaut Insurance Co. (2003) 109 Cal.App.4th 1020)

The appropriate ratio requires a consideration of the degree of reprehensibility of the defendant's misconduct, the disparity between actual harm and punitive damages, and in an appropriate case, the difference between punitive damages awarded by the jury and civil penalties. (State Farm Mutual Auto Insurance Co. v. Campbell (2003) 538 U.S. 408, at 418) It is generally recognized in civil tort cases that the third category of civil penalty analogy is irrelevant. (Bankhead v. ArvinMeritor, Inc., supra, 205 Cal.App.4th at 85, Fn.10) In cases involving sexual abuse, awards with extremely large ratios of punitive to compensatory damages have been approved as consistent with due process. For example, in Weeks v. Baker and McKenzie (1998) 63 Cal.App.4th 1128, at 1166-67, the repeated sexual abuse of an employee was an adequate basis for a 70:1 ratio for punitive damages. The Weeks holding was recognized recently in Roby v. McKesson Corp., supra, 47 Cal.4th at 717.

B. Reprehensibility.

All of the many punitive damage Due Process cases agree that the single most critical factor in determining what amount and ratio of punitive damages due process allows is the degree of reprehensibility of the conduct constituting malice. The jury was instructed on this issue by CACI 3949 as modified and agreed to by all parties. Four factors of reprehensibility were provided to the jury: (1) whether the conduct caused physical harm; (2) whether the defendant disregarded the health or safety of others; (3) whether the defendant's conduct involved a pattern of practice; and (4) whether the defendant acted with trickery or deceit. (TT 6/14/12, 8:24-9:6).

The first factor in the reprehensibility analysis is whether or not the plaintiff suffered physical harm as opposed to merely economic damage. The answer in this case is not only yes, it is an emphatic yes. The plaintiff suffered repetitive, invasive, terrifying sexual abuse over a sustained period of time during which she was 9 and 10 years old.

The second factor is whether or not the defendant acted with reckless disregard of Candace Conti's health and safety. The jury found Watchtower's managing agents did so in this case by allowing her to be exposed to the known child molester Kendrick while in Congregation activities. The evidence from Awake Magazine showed that Watchtower knew that individuals who had sexually molested a child in the past were likely to do so again; Watchtower knew such criminals could be trusted or popular members of the Congregation who would not be obvious to other Congregation members; that Watchtower knew "hush hush" and secrecy about abusers within the Congregations protected abusers rather than victims; Watchtower knew that secrecy about sexual abusers in the midst of the Congregations promoted further abuse; and Watchtower knew the effects of abuse on children were devastating. (Awake Magazine, Trial Ex. 64/Def. 37, Oct. 8, 1993). Watchtower also knew that the official hierarchy's policy of secrecy is why child sex abusers were allowed to roam free in the Catholic Church (Ibid.). Knowing all of this, Watchtower followed its corporate policy of secrecy anyway, instructing the North Fremont Congregation Elders to keep Jonathan Kendrick's sexual abuse secret from the parents in the Congregation, and sabotaging the parental "first line of defense" for protection of Congregation children from abuse. The instructions included following the 1989 policy of keeping confirmed child sexual abusers secret, even when the victims did not want the matter kept private, and the perpetrator was criminally convicted. The Watchtower's intentional and reckless disregard of Candace Conti's health and safety factor in this case also supports a finding of reprehensibility.

The third factor is whether or not the conduct was an isolated incident, or a pattern and practice. Although no evidence of harm to other victims or other cases of secrecy were presented to the jury, plaintiff Conti proved the Watchtower's managing agents had adopted a business practice and policy of keeping known sex abusers secret from parents in the Congregation, and it instructed the Fremont Elders to do so in this case. As stated in Johnson v. Ford Motor Co. (2005) 35 Cal.4th 1191, "by placing the defendant's conduct on one occasion into the context of a business practice or policy, an individual plaintiff can demonstrate that the conduct toward him or her was more blameworthy and warrants a stronger penalty to deter continued or repeated conduct of the same nature." (35 Cal.4th at 1206-7 and Fn.6). It was indeed the business policy of Watchtower to keep sexual abusers secret, allowing them to mingle freely within the Watchtower Congregations, and following that policy allowed Jonathan Kendrick to molest a second girl in the North Fremont Congregation. This factor also supports the finding of reprehensibility.

The last factor provided to the jury was whether or not the "defendant's conduct was intentional", or whether the conduct resulted from a "mere accident". In Ms. Conti's case, there was no mere accident. The Watchtower decision to keep secret the risk that Jonathan Kendrick presented to children in the North Fremont Congregation, and to keep secret from the parents in the Congregation the knowledge that there was a known child abuser among their fellow "brothers and sisters" was the result of a national policy promulgated and enforced by Watchtower's New York office. This policy and conduct is consistent with a "corporate culture that encouraged such supervisory conduct", rather than the "isolated actions of a single supervisor combined with the onetime failure on the part of the employer". (Roby v. McKesson Corp., supra, 47 Cal.4th at 715-16) As noted in Johnson, supra, the business policy of Watchtower is relevant, and does establish a corporate policy rather than an isolated incident or low level conduct. This factor of reprehensibility also favors plaintiff and her claim for punitive damages.

The issue of financial vulnerability, which appears in the CACI instruction, was not provided to the jury by stipulation of the parties. However, in the Court's independent due process review of damages, it is appropriate to consider vulnerability to physical harm. (Bullock v. Philip Morris USA, Inc., supra, 198 Cal.App.4th at 562) The Bullock Court stated that "we have no trouble concluding, however, that in a case involving physical harm, the physical or physiological vulnerability of the target of the defendant's conduct is an appropriate factor to consider in determining the degree of reprehensibility..." (Ibid). Plaintiff Candace Conti, as a 9 and 10 year old from a dysfunctional family whose mother was "unable to even care for herself" and whose father was distracted and oblivious to the real nature of his "friend" and fellow Jehovah's Witness Congregation member Jonathan Kendrick, was particularly vulnerable to abuse. Her childhood LLSW, Dr. Fraser, so testified, and her testimony was uncontradicted. This factor of reprehensibility also favors plaintiff.

All five of the reprehensibility factors favor the imposition of punitive damages. It has been recognized that, where all of the reprehensibility factors are in favor of the plaintiff, the reprehensibility can be considered "extreme". (Bullock, supra, 198 Cal.App.4th at 563) In this case, the reprehensibility of Watchtower's conduct can fairly be stated to be, at the very least, "serious".

C. The Ratio is Proper.

1. The Base Number.

Watchtower argues that Bankhead v. ArvinMeritor, Inc. is controlling, and that in that case the Appellate Court found that "this Court is required to use the net compensatory damages" in determining the issue of ratio. However, the Bankhead Court did not so hold. The parties in Bankhead Court did not brief, argue, or dispute the point. Instead, the Bankhead parties agreed that the 2.4:1 ratio of punitive damages to the defendant's share of compensatory damages was the measure used, and the Court of Appeal only incorporated that agreement in affirming that ratio. The Court's conclusion that the assignment of a low percentage of liability reduces the amount of compensatory damages with which the punitive damage amount is compared cited no authority and did no analysis. The Court's dicta was not necessary to its decision. (205 Cal.App.4th at 87, and at 90). An Appellate Court decision is not authority for a proposition that it did not consider, and which was not essential to its determination of the issues. (Richmond v. Shasta Community Services District (2004) 32 Cal.4th 409, 422)

The correct base number against which punitive awards must be measured is "the actual or potential harm suffered by the plaintiff." (State Farm, supra., 538 U. S. at 418) This is a fair measure, as it reflects the jury's finding that the Watchtower's conduct was a substantial factor in causing her harm, and one without which the harm would not have occurred. (CACI 430 TT 6/11 61:19-21) No case has yet been cited which holds or decides to the contrary.

However, in the event the Court determines that the amount of damages attributable to watchtower alone after a reduction for Kendrick's share of fault, the correct number is $2,870,000.00, or 40% of the non-economic damages and the $130,000.00 in economic damages. All of that 40% of fault is attributable to Watchtower, carrying out its corporate policies through its agents. The Special Verdict specifically found that the North Fremont Congregation Elders were agents of Watchtower, and the matter was also admitted at trial. Therefore, the minimal comparison of punitive damages to compensatory damages in the jury's present award is the ratio of 7.3:1, not the 10:1 that Watchtower argues.

2. The Issue of Net Worth.

Defendant has not raised the issue of its wealth as part of the review of the award, but the Court is required to consider the defendant's wealth as one of the three criteria for its review. (Bankhead, supra, 205 Cal.App.4th 68 at 77). As recognized in Bankhead and many other cases, "the wealthier the wrongdoer, the larger the award of punitive damages." (Bankhead, supra, 205 Cal.App.4th at 77, citing Downey Savings & Loan Assoc. v. Ohio Casualty Insurance Co. (1987) 189 Cal.App.3rd 1072, 1099-1100)

In this case, Watchtower admitted to having over $1 Billion in assets and had $30 Million cash on hand as well. The punitive damage award of $21,000,001.00 constitutes only 2% of the wealth of defendant placed in evidence. Defendant did not introduce any evidence or make any argument that the punitive damage award would in any way interfere with its operations, solvency, or destroy its business. In order to accomplish the purpose of punitive damages, the extensive holdings and wealth of Watchtower must be considered.

3. All of the Numbers are Proper.

Whichever numbers are utilized in the due process analysis, the award of $21,000,001.00 in punitive damages is proper, appropriate, and consistent with due process concerns. High ratios in cases involving sexual abuse have been upheld in the past, including as high as 70:1. (Weeks v. Baker and McKenzie (1998) 63 Cal.App.4th 1128, cited with approval in Roby v. McKesson Corp., supra, 47 Cal.4th at 717). The Weeks case involved repeated sexual harassment of an employee by a partner in the defendant's law firm. None of the physical touching was under the clothing. (63 Cal.App.4th at 1138-1144). The Court concluded that > "Applying the relevant criteria here, we cannot conclude that the award of punitive damages was excessive. To be sure, the amount awarded was 70 times greater than the compensatory damage award. In Neo v. Farmers Exchange, however, the Court upheld a punitive damage award that was 74 times greater than the amount of compensatory damages awarded." (63 Cal.App.4th at 1166).

In Gober v. Ralph's Grocery Co., supra, the Court found the reprehensibility to be "modest". (137 Cal.App.4th at 222) The reprehensibility factors in Gober were much less in favor of the award of punitive damages than in the Conti case, as there was no personal injury involved in Gober, and the sexual harassment in that case did not present a "substantial threat to the health and safety" of the plaintiffs. (137 Cal.App.4th at 222) Based upon the "modest" degree of reprehensibility, the Court of Appeal held that an award of a 6:1 ratio of punitive damages was the constitutional maximum.

In this case, the reprehensibility factors are Serious- more substantial than in many of those cases, such as Simon (low) and Gober (moderate), both of which awarded large ratios of punitive damages. In this case, the wealth of Watchtower is extensive, far beyond the ability of one punitive damage award to substantially affect their business operations. In this case, there is not a shred of evidence of contrition or remorse. In this case, the degree of harm suffered by this plaintiff enormous, certain, and uncontested. Taking into account all of the facts and circumstances of this individual case, the punitive damage award ratio is not excessive, regardless of the manner in which it is calculated. The jury's award should remain undisturbed.

CONCLUSION

Plaintiff Candace Conti was compensated for her harm by the jury's damage award, but the public interest in punishing despicable conduct is not served by that award alone. A review of the serious reprehensibility of Watchtower's conduct, its financial wealth, and the extreme repercussions to the health and safety of a vulnerable child, all support a jury's determination that $21,000,001.00 was a rational and reasonable amount to award to serve the purposes of punishment and deterrence in this case.

ASSIGNED FOR ALL PURPOSES TO JUDGE ROBERT McGUINESS, DEPARTMENT 22

PLAINTIFF'S SURREPLY MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES IN OPPOSITION TO MOTIONS FOR NEW TRIAL AND J.N.O.V. OF DEFENDANTS WATCHTOWER NEW YORK AND FREMONT CONGREGATION

Date: August 13, 2012
Time: 8:30 a.m.

INTRODUCTION

In their Reply, the Church Defendants raise new arguments and authorities not cited in their initial briefing. Specifically, Watchtower makes a number of arguments which cite Bankhead v. ArvinMeritor, Inc. (2012) 205 Cal.App.4th 68. Because plaintiff has been deprived of the opportunity to address the new arguments and new authorities omitted from Watchtower's initial briefing, a Surreply is appropriate.

I. THE BANKHEAD DECISION DOES NOT CONTROL THE ISSUE OF RATIO IN THIS CASE.

Watchtower argues that Bankhead v. ArvinMeritor, Inc. is controlling, and that in that case the Appellate Court found that "this Court is required to use the net compensatory damages" in determining the issue of ratio. However, the Bankhead Court did not so hold. On the contrary, the parties in Bankhead Court neither briefed, argued, nor disputed the point. Instead, the Bankhead parties agreed that the 2.4:1 ratio of punitive damages to the defendant's share of compensatory damages was the measure used, and the Court of Appeal only incorporated that agreement in affirming that ratio. The Court's conclusion that the assignment of a low percentage of liability reduces the amount of compensatory damages with which the punitive damage amount is compared cited no authority and did no analysis. The dicta was not necessary to its decision. (205 Cal.App.4th at 87, and at 90). An Appellate Court decision is not authority for a proposition that it did not consider, and which was not essential to its determination of the issues. (Richmond v. Shasta Community Services District (2004) 32 Cal.4th 409, 422).

No Due Process case has analyzed this issue and held that due process requires comparison of the plaintiff's harm with only the share of the compensatory damage award attributable to the party assessed punitive damages. Watchtower's conduct was a substantial factor in causing all of plaintiff's harm, regardless of their share of fault. The jury found that none of the plaintiff's harm would have resulted in the absence of Watchtower's conduct. (CACI 430). Therefore, it is plaintiff's harm, and not a reduced share of plaintiff's harm, which is the basis for the ratio of punitive damages.

II. THE BANKHEAD DECISION DOES NOT REQUIRE A MAXIMUM 2.4:1 RATIO.

Watchtower further argues that Bankhead requires a maximum ratio of punitive damages to compensatory damages of 2.4:1. (Reply, 8:8-11). This simply misreads Bankhead. Bankhead specifically notes that the "extreme reprehensibility" of a defendant's conduct, together with other factors in evidence, can justify even a 16:1 ratio of punitive damages. (205 Cal.App.4th at 90, citing Bullock v. Philip Morris USA, Inc. (2011) 198 Cal.App.4th 543, at 560-569).

Watchtower argues that Bankhead requires a reduction where the compensatory damages "already includes a punitive element." (Reply, 7:12-16). However, in this case, there is absolutely no basis to conclude that the emotional distress damages included a punitive element. In view of the horrible nature of the abuse plaintiff's suffered, the length of time, and the lifetime effects, plaintiff submitted the figure of $7 Million as a reasonable amount of compensation. The defendant introduced neither evidence nor argument to contradict this number. The jury was instructed not to include punitive damages in its verdict. There is no "punitive element" about this compensatory damage award that would bring in the Bankhead Court's concern.

III. THE BANKHEAD PUNITIVES ARE ONLY TO PUNISH RATHER THAN DISCOURAGE.

All of the conduct by the defendant in Bankhead was past conduct, which it no longer engaged in by the time of trial. The Defendant no longer employed a policy of hiding the risks of asbestos, and no longer failed to protect workers from those risks. Therefore, the recognized purpose of punitive damages to discourage future similar conduct was not applicable in that analysis.

In this case, however, the Court's instruction and plaintiff's counsel's argument focused on discouragement of future harm. Watchtower seeks to shoehorn the punitive nature of the Bankhead award into confining the purpose of punitive damages awarded by the jury in this case to punishment only. However, the Supreme Court in Johnson v. Ford Motor Co. (2005) 35 Cal.4th 1191, specifically recognized the proper purposes of punitive damages include protecting citizens against future harm by "deterring a wrongful corporate practice". (35 Cal.4th at 1206 and at 1212). All of the claimed prejudice and error argued by Watchtower because plaintiff's counsel referred to children, when viewed in the context of the right of the state to protect its children, are meritless.

IV. BANKHEAD PROVIDES SUPPORT FOR THE JURY'S AWARD.

The Bankhead opinion provides substantial support for plaintiff's argument that Watchtower's Motions should be denied. The Church Defendants' selective factual citations, which ignore the substantial evidence rule, are similar to the misstatements of the defendant in Bankhead, where the Court stated that the Appellate review was not "an opportunity for [the defendant] to make an end run" around the jury's factual findings. (205 Cal.App.4th at 86).

Bankhead also recognizes that punitive damages are proper, even where there is no evidence that the defendant intended to injure the plaintiff "or anyone else in particular", where that defendant failed to take adequate measures to protect those persons made vulnerable by its conduct. (Id, at 86-88). That failure in Bankhead justified the jury's conclusion that the defendant's conduct constituted malice. The same is true in this case.

WARNING: THIS POWER OF ATTORNEY IS INVALID WITHOUT THE RED BORDER

WA[redacted] THIS POWER OF ATTORNEY IS INVALID WITHOUT TH[redacted] BORDER

This Power of Attorney is granted under and by the authority of the following resolutions adopted by the Boards of Directors of Farmington Casualty Company, Fidelity and Guaranty Insurance Company, Fidelity and Guaranty Insurance Underwriters, Inc., St. Paul Fire and Marine Insurance Company, St. Paul Guardian Insurance Company, St. Paul Mercury Insurance Company, Travelers Casualty and Surety Company, Travelers Casualty and Surety Company of America, and United States Fidelity and Guaranty Company, which resolutions are now in full force and effect, reading as follows:

RESOLVED, that the Chairman, the President, any Vice Chairman, any Executive Vice President, any Senior Vice President, any Vice President, any Second Vice President, the Treasurer, any Assistant Treasurer, the Corporate Secretary or any Assistant Secretary may appoint Attorneys-in-Fact and Agents to act for and on behalf of the Company and may give such appointee such authority as his or her certificate of authority may prescribe to sign with the Company's name and seal with the Company's seal bonds, recognizances, contracts of indemnity, and other writings obligatory in the nature of a bond, recognizance, or conditional undertaking, and any of said officers or the Board of Directors at any time may remove any such appointee and revoke the power given him or her; and it is

FURTHER RESOLVED, that the Chairman, the President, any Vice Chairman, any Executive Vice President, any Senior Vice President or any Vice President may delegate all or any part of the foregoing authority to one or more officers or employees of this Company, provided that each such delegation is in writing and a copy thereof is filed in the office of the Secretary; and it is

FURTHER RESOLVED, that any bond, recognizance, contract of indemnity, or writing obligatory in the nature of a bond, recognizance, or conditional undertaking shall be valid and binding upon the Company when (a) signed by the President, any Vice Chairman, any Executive Vice President, any Senior Vice President or any Vice President, any Second Vice President, the Treasurer, any Assistant Treasurer, the Corporate Secretary or any Assistant Secretary and duly attested and sealed with the Company's seal by a Secretary or Assistant Secretary; or (b) duly executed (under seal, if required) by one or more Attorneys-in-Fact and Agents pursuant to the power prescribed in his or her certificate or their certificates of authority or by one or more Company officers pursuant to a written delegation of authority; and it is FURTHER RESOLVED, that the signature of each of the following officers: President, any Executive Vice President, any Senior Vice President, any Vice President, any Assistant Vice President, any Secretary, any Assistant Secretary, and the seal of the Company may be affixed by facsimile to any Power of Attorney or to any certificate relating thereto appointing Resident Vice Presidents, Resident Assistant Secretaries or Attorneys-in-Fact for purposes only of executing and attesting bonds and undertakings and other writings obligatory in the nature thereof, and any such Power of Attorney or certificate bearing such facsimile signature or facsimile seal shall be valid and binding upon the Company and any such power so executed and certified by such facsimile signature and facsimile seal shall be valid and binding on the Company in the future with respect to any bond or understanding to which it is attached.

I, Kevin E. Hughes, the undersigned, Assistant Secretary, of Farmington Casualty Company, Fidelity and Guaranty Insurance Company, Fidelity and Guaranty Insurance Underwriters, Inc., St. Paul Fire and Marine Insurance Company, St. Paul Guardian Insurance Company, St. Paul Mercury Insurance Company, Travelers Casualty and Surety Company, Travelers Casualty and Surety Company of America, and United States Fidelity and Guaranty Company do hereby certify that the above and foregoing is a true and correct copy of the Power of Attorney executed by said Companies, which is in full force and effect and has not been revoked.

IN TESTIMONY WHEREOF, I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the seals of said Companies this 18th day of September, 20 12.

Kevin E. Hughes, Assistant Secretary

TO PLAINTIFF JANE DOE AND HER ATTORNEYS OF RECORD:

PLEASE TAKE NOTICE that this Notice is filed pursuant to the Stipulation and Order Regarding Briefing of Post-Trial Motions, signed by the Court on June 27, 2012.

PLEASE TAKE FURTHER NOTICE that on August 13, 2012 at 8:30 a.m., or another date and/or time as may be scheduled by the Court, in Department 22 of the above-referenced Court located at 1221 Oak Street, Fourth Floor, Oakland, CA 94612, Defendant Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc. ("Watchtower") will and hereby does move the Court pursuant to Code of Civil Procedure section 629 for an order for judgment notwithstanding the verdict ("JNOV") as to Plaintiff's claim for punitive damages on the grounds, including but not limited to that (1) there was no clear and convincing evidence of malice to support the award of punitive damages, and (2) the award of punitive damages is unconstitutional because Plaintiff's intent was to change Watchtower's national policy.

PLEASE TAKE FURTHER NOTICE that on August 13, 2012 at 8:30 a.m., or another date and/or time as may be scheduled by the Court, in Department 22 of the above-referenced Court located at 1221 Oak Street, Fourth Floor, Oakland, CA 94612, Defendants Watchtower and North Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses, Fremont, California ("North Fremont Congregation") (collectively the "Church Defendants") each intend to and hereby do move pursuant to Code of Civil Procedure section 657 for a new trial on the alternative grounds that (1) there were irregularities in the proceedings of the court, jury and/or adverse party, and orders of the court and abuse of discretion by which the Church Defendants each were prevented from having a fair trial, (2) there were insufficiencies of the evidence to justify the verdict and other decisions, and the verdict and other decisions are against law, (3) there were errors in law, occurring at the trial and excepted to by the Church Defendants, and (4) the non-economic damages awarded are excessive and not supported by substantial evidence, and Defendant Watchtower also intends to and hereby does move for a new trial on the additional ground that the punitive damages awarded are excessive. In addition, should the Court find and/or rule that the non-economic damages and/or the punitive damages awarded to plaintiff are excessive and order a new trial, then the Church Defendants each do hereby request remittitur pursuant to Civil Code section 662.5.

These motions will be and are based on this notice of motion for JNOV and notice of intent to move for a new trial, the memoranda of points and authorities to be submitted later to the Court pursuant to an agreed or stipulated briefing schedule, the supporting declaration(s) and additional evidence submitted therewith, and such additional facts and arguments that will be presented in reply briefing and/or at the hearing.

Per the Clerk of the Court, no tentative ruling will be issued and the parties are expected to appear for hearing on August 13, 2012 at 8:30 a.m.

MAY 29, 2012 8:36 A.M

PROCEEDINGS

THE COURT: All right. We are back on the record in the matter of the Candace Conti versus Watchtower Bible and Tract Society, New York, Inc., a corporation, and the Fremont, California Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses, North Unit, and Jonathan Kendrick.

All counsel are here. Counsel arrived promptly at 8:00 o'clock this morning.

I am going to ask Mr. Schnack if he has unedited versions of the letters explaining the purpose as to what my rulings were. And I will recite the agreement on the things we decided, the terms, Mr. Schnack.

MR. McCABE: Your Honor, with respect to the letter from the North Congregation to Watchtower Bible and Tract Society, dated November 15, 1993, the entire last paragraph of the first page has been redacted by agreement among counsel.

On the second page, the first paragraph at the top, the language that will remain in the document are, quote: "Here are the facts as best as we can present them."

And the rest of that sentence has been redacted, according to your ruling.

The bullet point Number 1 on the second page of that letter has been redacted by agreement among counsel.

The second bullet point, the following words are being redacted by agreement of counsel:

"We assume that Brother Kendrick does not qualify any longer as ministerial servant."

Let me back up. The word "ministerial servant" stays in, and following sentence stating:

"We will announce to the congregation that he is no longer serving as such. If this is incorrect, please inform us."

And with respect to Item Number 3, the following words stating:

"The Legal Department has given us some direction."

And the balance of that sentence is being redacted, according to your ruling.

THE COURT: I think that is an accurate statement as to the rulings, counsel.

Do you agree, Mr. Simons?

MR. SIMONS: I do.

THE COURT: Okay. Next letter.

MR. McCABE: Then with respect to the letter, dated December 20, 2009, from the North Congregation to the Oakley Congregation, the last three sentences of the second paragraph have been redacted, pursuant to agreement of counsel.

The last paragraph on the first page of that December 20, 2009 letter, the first sentence that reads: "Her biggest concern seems to be protecting other children from harm" will stay in.

The balance of that paragraph will be redacted at this point in time with respect to opening argument through ruling of the court.

Turning to the second page, the defense objected to all but the first sentence of the first paragraph, the second page.

The court ruled that the entire first paragraph on the second page shall remain in.

The parties redacted by agreement, from the end of that first paragraph down to the heading "12-16-09" by agreement.

And that covers that letter.

THE COURT: And I would agree.

Mr. Simons?

MR. SIMONS: I do as well.

THE COURT: Counsel raised other issues with the court, including motion in limine regarding Dr.

Applewhite, which I will read during my lunch hour; and likewise, I will look at Plaintiff's Number 10.

MR. McCABE: And we also had a brief discussion, your Honor, about no mention of a duty to warn during the opening statements.

Can that be addressed to the court?

THE COURT: Agreed.

MR. SIMONS: Agreed.

(Whereupon, the following proceedings were heard in the presence of jurors)

THE COURT: All right. Several things. First of all, thank you for your time.

Because of all the activity going on around here, I started with counsel and I, making decisions since 8:00 o'clock this morning, relative to this particular matter.

In the future, and starting tomorrow morning, Wednesday, you will have your own jury room. So you are welcome to come early, go about your business, do whatever you need to do. Hill will take you to your jury room so you know where it is.

I will ask you not to come in between 8:00 and 8:30 because, again, I may be in the middle of making some decisions.

As you work, I work. I work outside the province of the jury, making decisions and other decisions and things of that nature. So Hill will educate you as to that.

I expect, other than today -- we have had to set up the courtroom, and I had to make a number of decisions regarding today and the presentation circumstances.

Tomorrow, I would expect to have you in those chairs at 8:30. Hopefully, you had a nice Memorial Day weekend.

I have indicated to all counsel -- Mr. Simons has been hobbling a little bit. But it comes with a territory as some part of the aging process.

So I have invited each counsel to either stand or sit, depending upon what they would like to do. I thought I would make some mention of that.

I inferred -- I have also mentioned that during the course of the trial, either Ms. Conti or any party -- today we have Mr. Clarke and Mr. Abrahamson --

Gentlemen, why don't you stand up.

-- on behalf of the Congregation. And that may change daily.

So Plaintiff and Defendants, to the extent somebody comes that I feel a need to introduce to you, I will. I just want you to understand that it happens all the time in civil trials that the parties may be here for a portion, all of it at their choice, and subject to any other demands they have. And so I will say that.

Now, in a minute I'm going to give you the -- what I call pre-flight instructions, including about no taping and whatnot.

You know, all judges have their own different assessments of these things. Most now -- and I insist upon giving you the assess of what your duties are and what is going to happen here, so you are not thinking about as to what is going to happen all through the case.

I call it pre-flight and I do it because I am concerned the jurors will assess what your duties are, you know, in terms of how you evaluate things, the burden of proof.

So that having been said, let me give you some of what I call pre-flight instructions.

JURY INSTRUCTIONS

THE COURT: All right. Casey 100: Preliminary Admonitions. Before I read this, when I started as a lawyer, a number of years ago, there was a lot of Latin going on in the courtroom. There were a whole different set of jury instructions. California spent eight years trying to make the process more intelligible and understandable by those who sit as jurors.

And in terms of the use of language, don't think for a minute that there is a hundred percent success. I can tell you and look you all in the eye, collectively and individually, that you don't hear much Latin around here. The only word you'll hear is the voir dire process, which is seeking impartial jurors, that's a Latin phrase, of course. But you rarely hear Latin in the State of California any longer. You rarely hear it anywhere.

Let me give you the preliminary admonitions:

You each have now been sworn as jurors in this case. I wanted to impress on you the seriousness and importance of serving on a jury.

Trial by jury is a fundamental right in California. The parties have a right to a jury that is selected fairly, it comes to the case without bias, and it will attempt to reach a verdict based upon evidence presented.

Before we begin, I need to explain how you must conduct yourself during the trial.

I just violated my first rule. And when I do that, I fine myself and put it in the kitty for the department. And so forgive me. I will fine myself.

Forgive me.

All right. Before we begin again I need to explain how you must conduct yourself during the trial. Do not allow anything that happens outside this courtroom to affect your decision. During the trial, do not talk about this case or the people involved in it with anyone, including family and persons living in your household, friends and co-workers, spiritual leaders, advisors or therapists or anyone else for that matter, whatever their title.

This prohibition is not limited to face-to-face conversations. It also extends to all forms of electronic communications.

Do not use any electronic device or any media such as cell phone or Smart phone, PDA, computer, the internet, any internet service, any text or instant messaging service, any internet chat room, blog or website, including social networking websites or online diaries to send or receive any information to or from anyone about this case or your experience as a juror until after you have been discharged from your jury duty.

We had a little monologue about that. Please do not do it. It imperils the fairness of the trial and it doesn't matter as to what it is. It really imperils the fairness as to each party involved in this matter.

Upon contact, you may say you are on a jury and how long the trial may take, but that is all. You must not even talk about the case with the other jurors until after I tell you it is time for you to decide the case.

During the trial, you must not listen to anyone else talk about the case or the people involved in the case.

You must avoid any contact with the parties, the lawyers, the witnesses and anyone else who may have a connection to the case.

If anyone tries to talk to you about the case, tell that person that you cannot discuss it because you are a juror.

If he or she keeps talking to you, simply walk away and report the incident to the court, Mr. Martin, my attendant, as soon as you can.

After the trial is over and I release you from your jury duty, you may discuss the case with anyone, but you are not required to do so.

During the trial, do not read, listen to or watch any news reports about this case.

And I have no information that there will be news reports about the case. But, again, please do not read, watch or listen to any.

This prohibition extends to use of the internet in anyway, including reading any blog about the case or have anyone involved with it or using internet maps or mapping programs or any other program or device to search for or to view any place discussed in the testimony.

Do not do any research on your own or as a group. Do not use dictionaries, the internet or other reference materials.

Do not investigate the case or conduct any experiments.

Do not contact anyone to assist you, such as family, accountant, doctor or lawyer.

Do not visit or view the scene of any event involved in this case.

If you happen to pass by the scene, do not stop or investigate.

If you do view the scene during trial, you will be taken as a group with proper group supervision.

You must decide this case based only on the evidence presented in the trial and instructions of the law that I will provide.

Nothing that you see, hear or learn outside this courtroom is evidence, unless I specifically tell you it is.

If you receive any information about this case from any source outside of the courtroom, promptly report it to Mr. Martin, my court attendant.

It is important that all jurors see and hear the same evidence at the same time.

It is important to keep an open mind about this trial. Evidence can only be presented a piece at a time.

Do not form or express an opinion about this case while the trial is going on.

You must not decide on the verdict until after you have heard all the evidence and discuss it thoroughly with your fellow jurors in deliberations.

Do not concern yourselves with the reasons for the rulings I will make during the course of this trial.

Do not guess about anything your verdict should be from anything I might say or do.

When you begin your deliberations, you may discuss this case only in the jury room and only when all the jurors are present.

You must decide what the facts are in this matter. And I repeat, your verdict must be based only on evidence you hear or see in this courtroom.

Do not let bias, sympathy, prejudice or public opinion affect your verdict.

At the end of the trial, I will explain the law you must follow to reach your verdict. You must follow the law as I explain to you, even if you do not agree with the law.

101: Overview of Trial.

To assist you in your cast as jurors, I will now explain how the trial proceeds.

I have previously identified counsel and the parties in this lawsuit.

Ms. Conti is called a Plaintiff. She seeks damage from the Defendants in this matter.

I have indicated to you that the Defendants in this matter are the Defendant, Watchtower Bible and Track Society of New York Inc, and the North Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses, Fremont, California.

First, each side may make an opening statement, but neither side is required to do so.

MR. McCABE: Your Honor, sorry to interrupt but Jonathan Kendrick is also a defendant in this case.

THE COURT: Forgive me. And Mr. Jonathan Kendrick, as I indicated, is also a defendant in the case.

First, each side may make an opening statement, but neither side is required to do so. An opening statement is not evidence. It is simply an outline to help you understand what that party expects the evidence will show.

Also, because it is often difficult to give you evidence in the order we prefer, the opening statement allows you to keep an overview of the case in mind during the presentation of the evidence.

Next, you will hear the evidence. Ms. Conti, through her counsel, will present evidence first. When she is finished, the defendants -- I have just named them, including Mr. Kendrick -- presuming he is here. He is not here up to this point -- will have an opportunity to present evidence.

Each witness will first be questioned by the side that asks the witness to testify. This is called direct examination. And the other side is permitted to question the witness. This is called cross-examination.

Documents are obviously referred to during the trial, are called exhibits. Exhibits are given either a number or letter so they may be clearly identified. The exhibits are not evidence until I admit them into evidence.

During your deliberations, you will be able to look at all exhibits admitted into evidence. There are many rules that govern whether something will be admitted into evidence. As one side presents evidence, the other side has a right to object and to ask me to decide if the evidence is permitted by the rules.

Usually, I will decide immediately, but sometimes I may have to hear arguments outside your presence.

After the evidence has been presented, I will instruct you on the law that applies to the case and the attorneys will make closing arguments.

What the parties say in closing argument is not evidence. The arguments are offered to help you understand the evidence and how the law applies to it.

Casey 102: Taking notes during the trial. You have been given notebooks and may take notes during the trial. Please do not take the notebooks out of the courtroom or jury room at any time during the trial. You may take your notes into the jury room during deliberations.

You should use your notes only to remind yourself of what happened during the trial. Do not let your note taking interfere with your ability to listen carefully to all the testimony and to watch the witnesses as they testify, nor should you allow your impressionable witness or other evidence to be influenced by whether or not other jurors are taking notes.

Your independent recollection of the evidence should govern your verdict and you should not allow yourself to be influenced by the notes of other jurors if those notes differ from what you remember.

The court reporter is making a record of everything that is said. If during the deliberations you have a question about what the witness said, you should ask that the court reporter read that to you. You must accept the court reporter's record as accurate.

At the end of the trial your notes will be collected and destroyed.

Multiple Parties 103. There is one plaintiff in this trial. You should decide the case of the plaintiff separately as if it were a separate lawsuit. The plaintiff is entitled to separate consideration of her claims.

There are three defendants in this trial. You should decide the case against each defendant separately as if it were a separate lawsuit. Each defendant is entitled to separate consideration of his or their own defenses.

Unless I tell you otherwise, all instructions apply to the Plaintiff and each Defendant.

104: Non-person Parties.

A corporation is a party to this lawsuit. The corporation is entitled to the same fair and impartial treatment you would give to an individual. You must decide this case with the same fairness that you would use if you were deciding the case between individuals.

When I use words like "person" or "he" or "she" in any instructions -- in these instructions -- to refer to a party, these instructions also apply to the corporation involved.

105: Insurance. You must not consider whether any of the parties in this case have any insurance. The presence or absence of insurance is totally irrelevant. You must decide this case based only upon the law and the evidence.

Casey 106: Evidence. Sworn testimony, documents or anything else may be admitted into evidence.

You must decide what the facts are in this case from the evidence you see or hear during the trial. You may not consider as evidence anything that you see or hear when court is not in session, even something done or said by one of the parties, attorneys or witnesses.

What the attorneys say during the trial is not evidence. In their opening statements and closing arguments, the attorneys will talk to you about the law and the evidence. What the lawyers say may help you understand the law and the evidence, but their statements and arguments are not evidence.

The attorney's questions are not evidence. Only the witnesses' answers are evidence.

You should not think that something is true just because an attorney's question suggests that it is true.

However, the attorneys for both sides can agree that certain facts are true. This agreement is called a "stipulation."

No other proof is needed, and you must accept those facts as true in this trial.

Each side, again, has a right to object to evidence offered by the other side. If I do not agree with the objection, I will say it is overruled.

If I overrule an objection, the witness will answer and you may consider the evidence.

If I agree with the objection, I will say, it's sustained. If I sustain an objection, you must ignore the question.

If the witness did not answer, you must not guess what he or she might have said or why I sustained the objection.

If the witness has already answered, you must ignore the answer.

An attorney may make a motion to strike testimony that you heard. And if I grant the motion, you must totally disregard that testimony, and you must treat it as though it did not exist.

Casey 107: Witnesses.

A witness is a person who has knowledge related to this case. You will have to decide whether you believe each witness and how important each witness' testimony is to the case. You may believe all, part or none of the witness' testimony.

In deciding whether to believe a witness' testimony, you may consider among other factors, the following:

(A) How well did the witness see, hear or otherwise sense what he or she described in court?

(B) How well did the witness remember and describe what happened?

(C) How did the witness look, act and speak while testifying?

(D) Did the witness have any reason to say something that was not true? Did the witness show any bias or prejudice? Did the witness have a personal relationship with any of the parties involved in the case? Does the witness have a personal stake in how this case is decided?

(E) What was the witness' attitude toward this case about giving testimony?

Sometimes the witness may say something that is not consistent with something else he or she said.

Sometimes different witnesses will give different versions of what happened. People often forget things or make mistakes in what they remember.

Also two people may see the same event but remember it differently. You may consider --- but do not decide the testimony is untrue just because it differs from other testimony.

However, if you decide that a witness has deliberately testified untruthfully about something important, you may choose not to believe anything the witness said.

On the other hand, if the think the witness testified untruthfully about some things but told the truth about others, you may accept what you think is true and ignore the rest.

Please do not make any decisions simply because there were more witnesses on one side than the other. If you believe it is true then a testimony of a single witness is enough to prove a fact.

You must not be biased in favor of or against any witness because of his or her disability, gender, race, religion, ethnicity, sexual orientation, age, national origin or socioeconomic status.

111: Instructions to Alternate Jurors.

As an alternate juror -- or as alternate jurors, you are bound by the same rules that govern the conduct of the jurors who are sitting on the panel. You will observe the same trial and should pay attention to all of my instructions just as if you were sitting on the panel.

Sometimes a juror needs to be excused during a trial for illness or some other legitimate reasons. If that happens, an alternate will be selected to take that juror's place.

112: Questions from Jurors.

If during the trial you have a question that you believe should be asked of a witness, you may write out the question and send it to me through my staff. I will share your question with the attorneys and decide whether it may be asked.

Do not feel disappointed if your question is not asked. Your question may not be asked for a variety of reasons.

For example: The question may call for an answer that is not allowed for legal reasons. Also, you should not try to guess a reason why a question is not asked or speculate about what the answer might have been.

Because the decision whether to allow the question is mine alone, please do not hold it against any of the attorneys or their clients if your question is not asked.

Remember, you are not an advocate for one side or the other. Each of you is an impartial judge of the facts.

Your question should be posed in as neutral a fashion as possible. Please do not discuss the question asked by any juror or any other juror until after the deliberations can be done.

113: Casey, Bias.

Each of us has biases about or certain perceptions or stereotypes of other people. We may be aware of some of our biases, though we do not share them with others. We may not be fully aware of some of our other biases. Our biases are in effect when we act favorable or unfavorably towards someone.

Bias can enter our thoughts, how we remember, what we see and hear, whom we believe or disbelieve and how we make important decisions.

As jurors, you are being asked to make very important decisions in this matter. Please do not let bias, prejudice or public opinion influence your decision.

Your verdict, again, must be based solely on the evidence presented. You must carefully evaluate the evidence and resist any urge to reach a verdict as influenced by bias for or against any partner -- any party or witness.

114: Bench Conferences and Conference in Chambers.

From time to time during the trial, it may become necessary for me to talk with the attorneys out of the presence of the jury either by having a conference at the bench, when you are present, or by calling a recess to discuss matters outside of your presence.

The purpose of these conferences is not to keep relevant information from you, but to decide how certain evidence is to be treated under the rules of evidence. Please do not be concerned about our discussions or try to guess what is being said.

I might deny an attorney's request for a conference. Do not consider my granting or denying a request for a conference as any indication of my opinion about the case or my view of the evidence.

116: Why Electronic Communications and Research are Prohibited.

I know that many of us are used to communicating, perhaps even learning by electronic communication or research. However, there are good reasons why you must not electronically communicate or do any research on anything having to do with this trial or parties.

In court, jurors must make important decisions that have consequences for the parties. Those decisions must be based only on the evidence that you hear in this courtroom.

The evidence that is presented in court can be tested. It can be shown to be right or wrong by either side. It can be questioned and it can be contradicted by other evidence, which might be either right or wrong, out of date or inapplicable to this matter.

The parties can receive a fair trial only if the facts and information upon which you base your decisions are presented to you as a group with each juror having the same opportunity to see and hear all the evidence.

Also, the trial is a public process and depends on disclosure of important facts and evidence. Using information gathered in secret by one or more jurors undermines the public process and violates the rights of the parties.

Casey 200: Obligation to Prove are Likely True or Not True.

A party must persuade by evidence presented in court that what he or she is required to prove is more likely to be true than not true. This is referred to as, quote, the burden of proof, end of quote.

After weighing all of the evidence, if you cannot decide if something is more likely to be true than not true, you must conclude that the parties did not prove it.

You should consider all the evidence no matter which party produced the evidence.

In criminal trials, the prosecution must prove that the defendant is guilty beyond a reasonable doubt. But in civil trials, such as the one before you, the burden is to prove something, only prove that it is more likely to be true than not true.

Mr. Simons, do you have an opening statement?

MR. SIMONS: I do, your Honor.

OPENING STATEMENT BY MR. SIMONS

MR. SIMONS: Ladies and Gentlemen, Candace Conti was sexually abused repeatedly by Jonathan Kendrick when she was nine and ten years old. Mr. Kendrick gained access to Candace Conti through their years of involvement together in the North Fremont Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses.

She, as a young girl was raised in the Jehovah's Witnesses family. Mr. Kendrick, was a trusted and respected adult member of that congregation.

Ladies and Gentlemen, what Candace Conti, her parents and the good people who were members of that congregation did not know, but what was known and documented and kept secret by a few elders of the North Congregation and by the people at the Watchtower New York Corporation that supervised and instructed and provided the rules for North Fremont Congregation.

What was known and kept secret by them was that only two years earlier, Jonathan Kendrick had sexually molested another member.

And because of the policy of secrecy that Watchtower New York had adopted and instructed it's local elders to follow, and which they did follow, that information was not provided to your shared group, but was kept secret from the people who in that congregation could have seen and prevented the sexual abuse of young Candace.

Now, back in 1993, you will learn that it was already well-known by religious organizations and professionals of all kinds, that childhood sexual abusers used religious organizations to gain access to their victims.

The family atmosphere of the religious organization, the trust that comes with being a fellow member of a congregation were devices that sexual predators could use to gain access to their victims.

And this was well known and it was well established and it was even reflected in publications issued by Watchtower through its magazines, Awake and Watchtower Magazines.

It was known also at that time that policies were necessary to prevent child sexual abusers from using religious organizations as the vehicle to molest victims.

These policies that had been adopted by the major religions throughout the country; Methodist, National Council of Churches, the Catholic Church, they didn't always follow their policies, but the need for policies to protect children from childhood sexual abuse was well established by that time.

And these policies were necessary and included a need that when a childhood sexual abuser was identified, as it was with Mr. Kendrick, that that individual not be given the opportunity to molest any other children within the religious organization.

There is no single more important fact to be known at that time in the prevention of childhood sexual abuse in the religious context than that an individual has previously molested a child. That was the single, most important thing to know, because when that was known, it was also known that there was a high risk that that individual would molest again.

Jonathan Kendrick had molested, in 1993, his stepdaughter, 13 year old Andrea. And this was before he ever layed a hand on Candace. And the abuse was serious, and it involved skin-to-skin contact with his hand on Andrea's breast and putting his hand under her underwear into her pelvic area.

That information, which was told to the elders, is what was kept secret in 1993 and '94 and '95 and '96, during the time that Candace was being abused.

I would like to show you a photograph of Candace at that time. And apologize if we are in the way. Space is limited.

You will see during the trial, once technology is sorted through, that Candace as a nine and ten years old was much as she shows herself today, freckle-face red-head girl, and she was a memorable girl. She was the only child of Neal and Kathleen Conti.

She was born in Fremont, raised in Fremont. The family was of humble origins. Kathy Conti, Candace's mother, was a high school dropout, and had a variety of different jobs, one failed marriage and while working in National Semiconductor met Neal.

Neal was also on his second marriage. He met Kathy at work, and they had fallen in love and got married in 1985. That's when Candace was born, November 1985.

And Candace, by the time that she was a baby was active in the Jehovah's Witnesses religion in the North Fremont Congregation with her parents, and on occasions with an older stepbrother, Neal's son from his first marriage.

But by 1995, Candace's life was marked really by three things. One is chaos. One is her resiliency, and one is her vulnerability.

And when I say "chaos," you will learn that Candace's mother, Kathy, had also been sexually abused as a child. And in this time period in 1994 she began to exhibit severe mental breakdown, bizarre activity, and was no longer functioning.

She was unable to care for Candace. And Neal, who was an unemotional man in many ways, not given to strong attachments.

And, in fact, you are going to learn that he has no relationship with Candace at all anymore, and really has not since she was high school age.

Emotionally distant man was not able to provide for Candace and was not able to provide for Kathleen. This was a family in chaos.

And Kathleen and Neal relied on the people in the congregation to give them some help because they were unable to take care of themselves and their family.

And when I say "resiliency," Candace, you will see when you meet her, is a person of spirit. One of the elders in a deposition in this case called her spunky.

She is a person who comes back from trouble. And would get up in the morning and even though her parents' home life was very, very difficult and unhappy in the morning, you know, Candace would start a new day.

And she was often a smiling, young child, even with this trouble around her. And people remember that about her. And she was a child that people in the congregation loved.

That spirit of resiliency has marked, really, her entire life. And you are going to learn a little bit about what she has been through and how she has come out of it and why she is here today.

But you are also going to learn that at that time she was extremely vulnerable child. She was vulnerable because there was no parental ability to manage her, and they needed and relied on others in the Jehovah's Witnesses Congregation family to help. And people could see that in her, and Jonathan Kendrick saw that in her.

Now, Jonathan Kendrick was a big man. He was physically big. He was an iron worker. He had come to the Jehovah's Witnesses later in life. Late thirties, early forties. And he had been with the congregation for only eighteen years.

But yet, he was well-liked. He was a flamboyant man. He was a loud man. He expressed his opinions and talked and sometimes bragged a lot. And he was the kind of person that people took to.

And he rose through the Jehovah's Witnesses to become what is called a ministerial servant. And that's a position of technical assistance, in the way of -- it is not a religious position, but it is the men who helped the elders, they pass the microphone at meetings or gather books and the magazines, the publications and pass them out.

Jonathan Kendrick had achieved that position which required not only recommendation by the local elders, but also approval by Watchtower New York.

And Jonathan Kendrick was a part -- together with his then wife, Evelyn Kendrick -- of the Jehovah's Witnesses family.

And it was a family atmosphere. They not only call each other brother and sister, but it is a family atmosphere because they spend a lot of time together.

There are usually meetings at the Kingdom Hall, which is a church.

There are meetings in homes where Bible study is done.

There are the field service where Jehovah's Witnesses go out into the neighborhood to spread the word of their beliefs and their religion. And many times four and five days a week.

And part of their family situation is that the Jehovah's Witnesses did not mix much with other faiths or other people.

Their lives centered around the congregation and their fellow members. And so because they didn't celebrate things like birthdays and Christmas as part of their beliefs, Candace and her family were much more tied into the other families of the congregation than might be seen in other situations.

And there was a trust placed in the fellow members of the congregation. And the North Fremont Congregation was not a particularly large one. Hundred members, maybe a hundred and twenty, including the children. But like in all small congregations, the people knew each other.

The Jehovah's Witnesses are not an organization that is unstructured. They are very structured. There is a group, a small group of men called the "governing body." And the governing body is at the top of the hierarchy of the Jehovah's Witnesses.

And the governing body operates, sets all the policies. It sets and instructs all of the elders throughout the country and all the congregations on what policies they follow. And it acts through a series of different corporations.

In this time, the 1990s, Watchtower New York was the principal corporation that the governing body acted through and which directed the activities of the Jehovah's Witnesses throughout the United States.

And a number of various positions, certain overseers and et cetera, kept this hierarchy in place and allowed communications from the governing body through the Watchtower, through the bodies of elders and into the congregation itself.

And that's how instructions were disseminated and that's how policies were made and enforced from the top down.

Now, Jehovah's Witnesses is not a youth organization. It is not Campfire Girls, but it is an organization where children and adults engage in all of the activities together. They are together in the home services, they get together in the homes of members doing Bible study. They are together in the field doing service work, and they are together in many, many ways and activities.

And because of that togetherness, there is no real border, and there is no real one place that the Jehovah's Witnesses would be together. They could be in a neighborhood anywhere in the congregation. And they would go sometimes to activities in the district level, et cetera, and participate together there.

And so this family was together very much, brothers and sisters, looked on each other as a family and felt that that was part of their responsibility. And there was a togetherness there and a trust. And that's what was abused by Jonathan Kendrick in this case.

The Jehovah's Witnesses were notified. The Fremont elders were notified by Evelyn Kendrick in November 1993 that Jonathan has sexually molested her daughter from her first marriage, Andrea.

First, the Kendricks, they tried to deal with this at home, in the family. But that wasn't successful.

And so Evelyn turns to the elders, to Elder Abrahamson and to Elder Clarke. But in particular, Elder Abrahamson, you are going to hear from, because that was the Jehovah's Witnesses' way, not to go to police or the outsiders, but to go to elders for safety, protection and guidance. And that's what she did.

And there was a family meeting with Andrea and Evelyn and Jonathan Kendrick and Elders Clarke and Abrahamson in November 1993, and a written report of that meeting was sent to Watchtower New York so that instructions could be received.

And in that meeting, Andrea and Evelyn told that there had been an argument about Andrea's involvement with a boy, and that the argument had ended and Jonathan had given Andrea some Vicodin, and she had gone to bed and she had gone to her bedroom with her to sit and watch TV.

And when she was half asleep, he placed his hands under her bra and into her underwear. And she was aware of that and got up and went to the bathroom, cried, and then went and told her mother.

And that's what was told to the elders. That conduct was described to the elders in the family meeting.

Jonathan Kendrick did not agree with that version and claimed that it had only been a brief touch outside the clothes.

And that's the version that was reported to Watchtower New York by Elders Abrahamson and Clarke. But even that conduct was described in the report as child abuse and recognized as child sexual abuse.

Now, Jonathan Kendrick no longer served as a ministerial servant by 1995 when the abuse of Candace was ongoing, but he was still a member in good standing with the congregation.

He still went to Kingdom Hall. He was still there with all the members. He was still a trusted member. And no one was told that he had sexually molested a child. It was kept secret.

And Jonathan Kendrick continued to do field service, and he continued to go to homes for Bible study and meetings.

And the reason no one was told was a written policy issued in 1989 by Watchtower New York. And that policy, which the elders had no discretion to depart from, that policy mandated that certain matters, including child abuse, be kept confidential, secret.

And the reason for that policy, which you will get to read -- and it is a long several-pages of policy -- but the reason stated time and again within that policy was to avoid lawsuits and financial penalties.

The governing body, through this policy, had made a determination that its own needs would be placed above protection of children and an indifference to children like Candace who were placed at risk by the presence of known sexual abusers within the congregations and the secrecy that surrounded it.

That is what this case is about.

Now, I just want to talk a little bit about the harm that Candace has suffered. She suffered in silence, abuse that occurred on many, many occasions.

It was very serious and intrusive abuse. And it is sad to say that it involved not only skin-to-skin contact, but nudity and oral sex and the insertion of a foreign object, a pen, into her. It is the most horrific kind of abuse, and it happened on many occasions.

And these occasions would arise when Jonathan Kendrick, being the helpful person that he was, would take Candace when her parents were unable to deal with her. They were too distracted by their own problems. And he would take her for a ride or babysit her or take her rollerblading or play or take her home from a meeting and or stop by, run an errand.

Sometimes the congregation members came to the Conti house. Neal had a paint booth and they would come over and they would paint cars and they painted a car for Sister Crawford on one occasion. And all the elders helped this sister who was unable to take care of her own needs.

And so they were all used to each other, being in each other's lives. It was part of the congregation.

And this abuse that she kept silent was because there was no one who was safe for her to share it with.

Soon after, 1996, after a year, year-and-a-half of the abuse, Candace's parents separated and divorced.

And Candace was placed in family therapy, primarily for herself, with a woman named Laura Fraser, a family therapist.

And Laura Fraser is now down in San Diego. She is going to appear in this case by videotape deposition. And so we know what her evidence will be because we have all been down there and heard.

And she described Candace's vulnerability at that time. That Candace was a girl who was not getting the love of her father, she was competing with Jehovah's Witnesses, and her mother was unable to care for her.

In fact, Candace was really the caretaker, in many ways, of the family. Candace was living, as Laura Fraser will testify, in a family that really had three children in it.

And there was no safe place for her to go. She could not go to her mother. She could not go to her father. And she went nowhere, and suffered this in silence for some years.

And that is not unusual in child sexual abuse victims. You are going to hear something called the "Child Sexual Abuse Accommodation Syndrome" what professionals call "Delayed Disclosure." Children don't tell. Some do -- Andrea did -- if they feel they have a safe place to go. And many do not. And Candace did not. So she suffered this in silence.

And she did not tell anyone until -- the first person she told was when she was 16 years old. She was battling depression, and she told a doctor that she saw on one occasion, Dr. Afruma, Bay Valley Medical Group about it. That's the first reporting of it that she told anyone.

2003, when she was 18, she told her parents separately. Her mother was moving out of state and was really of no support to her. Her father, then on his fourth marriage, indifferent. Didn't get involved at all.

And Candace turned, during her high school years, to self-medicating for treating her trauma and treating her own feelings that she couldn't share with anyone.

She self-medicated with drugs. And she self-medicated with a very bad drug, methamphetamine. And she took it for some time. For years she was using on and off.

And she hid from the trauma. But over time she began to be able to face what had happened to her and to face her trauma.

She suffers from a post-traumatic stress disorder. She has gone through depression. She has gone through some dark times.

But that resilient Candace Conti has now been sober for two years and is on the track to become a veterinary tech, to become a productive member of society, to become the good person that has been inside of her all of this time.

She will need therapy. She will need a lot of help over the years. And there will be times when she is again vulnerable to the emotional harm resulting from this abuse. But she is a resilient person, and she does have the ability to stand up.

And when she met with the elders in Fremont to tell them about her abuse, in 2009, she told them the very same thing that you will learn as to why we are here, and that's to make sure that children are protected.

I appreciate your attention and I appreciate your service. And on behalf of Ms. Conti and myself, thank you.

THE COURT: All right. Mr. McCabe, do you have an opening statement on behalf of North Congregation Jehovah's Witnesses, Fremont, California.

MR. McCABE: I do, your Honor.

OPENING STATEMENT BY MR. McCABE

MR. McCABE: Thank you all for your patience and your endurance to getting to this point. It is very important in our system of justice that you are here to serve. And this is a very important trial. It's important for Ms. Conti, as her attorney has just outlined for you. She is a young woman who has been through an ordeal and suffered a lot. And she is trying to heal. So it is an important case for her.

But this case is also about some very good, hard-working, everyday, ordinary, common people. And I want to tell you what the evidence is going to show about that.

My clients, they are -- as Mr. Simons pointed out a hundred or hundred and twenty or so people who associate together at the Fremont Congregation.

Their official title is Fremont Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses, the North Unit. But that is a big mouthful to get out. So I'm just going to call them the Fremont Congregation.

This is a civil lawsuit. No filters. You file a lawsuit, and unless prior to, you settle, it comes before a court or a jury like this.

In this case, Ms. Conti and her lawyers are suing the Fremont Congregation for negligence. But I think the evidence will show that no one in the congregation, no elder, no member, no one, saw Mr. Kendrick ever act inappropriately with Ms. Conti.

Not only did no member see it, but Ms. Conti's own parents did not see anything inappropriate.

The evidence will show you that, and Mr. Simons has pointed out, that Ms. Conti didn't tell the anyone in the congregation until 12 years after the abuse had stopped.

It goes without saying, I think, based on all the experiences we have had together the past few days through the juror questionnaire and the conversations you have had with the jurors that child abuse is always tragic. It is horrible.

This lawsuit, though, isn't just about child abuse. It is what the congregation knew and when they knew it.

The evidence will show that the Fremont Congregation was a small group of people, about a hundred, hundred twenty, it varies over the year depending on economic situation, people moving in and out of the area.

And presiding over the congregation is not a priest or one minister or a religious leader, but it is an elder.

And in the congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses, it is not just one elder, but it is what they call the body of elders, made up of three, maybe as many as ten, twelve, depending upon the circumstance of the congregation.

And this case is important to them. They spend a good lot of time caring for the congregation. But it is also important to members of the congregation, as you will see.

And I think it is important for members of the congregation regardless of what their religious denomination is.

It is important for associations like Little League or Oakland Soccer Club or any organization that involves families.

It is important because the allegations here essentially say the organization, any organization can be held responsible for what a rank and file member of the organization does, even when the behavior doesn't have anything to do with the organization, doesn't happen within the organization, doesn't happen on the organization's activities.

Now, the evidence will show that Ms. Conti and her attorneys are claiming that my client, the Congregation, represented by the elders, is responsible for the horrendous actions of someone who simply attended the church.

Now, it is not a case where the pastor or clergy or religious leader perpetrated some of this. It was a rank and file member. It is not a case where the abuse happened at church or in church activities.

It is not a case where the pastor, the religious leaders saw something happening and didn't do anything about it. It is not that kind of case.

That's why we are here. That's why I stand up for some good people and try to present to you what they knew and when they knew it. People did not know or did not have a way of knowing that Ms. Conti was being abused.

And you will see testimony from the members and the elders from the Fremont Congregation. They will tell you about themselves.

The evidence will show they are people just like everyone else. They are like your neighbors, like the people you work with, friends.

The evidence will show that they're mothers, fathers, they're grandfathers, grandmothers. I even have one great-grandmother who will testify.

And we will present to you and having them testify what they saw, or more importantly what they didn't see and didn't hear.

I would like to take a few minutes just to outline the case, just for the purpose of giving you a thread to weave through the testimony that you are going to hear in the next few days. So at the end of the case you will be able to use that thread and kind of tie it all together and deliberate to a just conclusion.

First, I would like to talk just a little bit about Jehovah's Witnesses, who they are and what they believe.

And next I would like to talk about what happens with Mr. Kendrick with his 15-year-old stepdaughter. And you have heard a lot about that already. But we will talk about that just a little bit.

But keep in mind this lawsuit is not about what happened between Jonathan Kendrick, his wife Evelyn, and Jonathan Kendrick's stepdaughter, 15-year-old Andrea. This case is about the abuse of Ms. Conti.

And you will see that the congregation didn't know about it until years after Mr. Kendrick had moved away, Ms. Conti had moved away, and they brought the abuse to their attention.

Now, the evidence will show that Jehovah's Witnesses are pretty normal in some ways and pretty unique in others.

You will see that they base their beliefs and practices on the Bible as they understand it. They have two meetings a week currently in a church that they call Kingdom Hall. I guess because they talk about God's kingdom.

And you will see that, like other congregations, we would expect if we took a microscope and looked into their religious services, they open their meetings with where they all stand up sing a song, have a prayer, and then they discuss the Bible in various ways. They end the meeting same way. Sing a song, say a prayer.

And the instruction, the sermons, if you will, is usually provided by the elders who are the teachers, the shepherds, the religious leaders in the congregation.

That all seems ordinary and common. But what is really unique about Jehovah's Witnesses is they don't have Sunday school. They don't have church camp. They don't have Vacation Bible School. They don't offer any programs that separate children from their parents. The religion is family-based.

You will hear that they all meet together. You will see a picture of the auditorium where they all meet together. No separation of children from their parents.

And this is important because the parents are the main source of instruction, guidance and protection from their children.

I think when you hear the elders testify, you will see that they are very ordinary men. They don't wear special garb or clothing, they don't wear collars or anything. They are not paid for the 10 to 20 hours that they spend serving the congregation each week of their lives. They are all peers.

They work to prepare meetings of instruction. They visit the sick. They respond when somebody in the congregation has a problem.

They do what most ministers or pastors do in any religious congregation regardless of the denomination. Pretty ordinary. They help guide and teach those that attend the church.

But they also support themselves and their families, because most are, like I said, married, and have children or grandchildren of their own. They support themselves working in the community.

For example, the elders that will, I believe, testify in this case, Michael Clarke, does clerical work for a parts company.

Gary Abrahamson is a janitor, works nights cleaning offices.

Larry Lamerdin, a pool cleaner, been doing that for a number of years, just humble hard-working men trying to take care of their families, support their families, live in the community and worship God with their congregation.

They are a little bit unusual too. I think everybody here on this jury panel raised their hand and said Jehovah's Witnesses had called on them and some of us here were irritated with it. Some weren't.

But if that's all we know about Jehovah's Witnesses, it is not enough. There is a whole lot more. They are just normal people. Church, their religious mission is part of their life, but there is more to them. They are human beings with jobs. They live in typical neighborhoods. They have typical neighbors, typical friends.

You know, it is kind of funny, but I wouldn't say this probably, wouldn't have to say this about anybody else, but they go to public school. They go to high school. They get trades.

We wouldn't have to say that about Lutherans, Methodists or Atheists, but Jehovah's Witnesses are just typical people.

The bottom line is, they're just like Jewish people. They're just like Buddhists. They're just like any denomination. They are like Atheists too. They are people.

But the elders are a little different. They meet some scriptural qualifications. They get to preside, teach in the congregation. That is only difference there is.

The thing is, they are not therapists, they are not social scientists, they are not medical doctors, they have no special training in law enforcement or psychology. They are simply men who study the Bible and associate with the congregation in Fremont. That is the background. They take the lead, provide spiritual encouragement.

That's what Mr. Clarke and Mr. Abrahamson did on November the 11, 1993. They were invited to the Jonathan Kendrick home by Mr. Kendrick because, as he put it when he talked to Michael Clarke, he inadvertently touched his 15-year-old stepdaughter.

The Kendricks invited the elders to come to their home and provide spiritual encouragement. You'll hear testimony how they arrived with Bibles in hand, sat at the kitchen table, offered prayer, and they listened. They listened to what Kendricks had to say.

And I don't think anybody will testify that knows exactly what was said verbatim in that meeting, almost 20 years ago.

But the elders will tell you what they heard, how they responded. They knew immediately from talking to Evelyn, Andrea and Jonathan this was no inadvertent touching. This was a sexual touching. And they knew right away that Jonathan Kendrick needed to be removed as a ministerial servant.

And that's what they did. They went back and they met with the rest of the body of elders. And Mr. Simons talked about it and he also mentioned about the type of worship service worker, or someone who assists them to -- passes the microphone when people make comments or seats latecomers, takes care of the parking lot, things like that. Well, Mr. Kendrick no longer qualified for even that position in the organization.

And after the elders met together as a body and discussed what Mr. Kendrick told them, Mrs. Kendrick told them, Andrea told them, they announced to the congregation that he had been removed as a ministerial servant.

And remember when the event took place, the meeting with the two elders, Mr. Abrahamson and Mr. Clarke, the event that is being discussed, that happened four months earlier. The family was still together. They wanted it to be that way. They hadn't gone to the police. They were choosing not to do that and keep the matter confidential and within the family.

And that's what Mr. Clarke and Mr. Abrahamson allowed them to do, didn't try to force them to go to the police and didn't want to make it public.

But you will hear that when Mr. Kendrick was removed as a ministerial servant, that's a significant event, it doesn't happen every day, that's a signal that something is wrong.

But from that point on, after admonishing Mr. Kendrick, in that meeting with his wife and stepdaughter, from the scriptures about how inappropriate his conduct was, you will hear testimony from the elders that they watched him. They observed him. They counseled him to stay away from children. Avoid being with them. And when he was at the church, Kingdom Hall or related functions, they observed him.

The Kendrick family, of course, continued to have problems. There were no more reports of any inappropriate activity between Jonathan Kendrick and his stepdaughter, Andrea.

But eventually Mrs. Kendrick and her daughter decided to make a report to the police. So a meeting took place with the elders in November 1993, but the police in Fremont were notified in February of 1994, and Mr. Kendrick was prosecuted, dealt with.

What you will find is, as we go through the testimony of various witnesses, is the Kendricks eventually separated about August, September, October 1996, and they divorced sometime after that.

You will also hear testimony that Mr. Kendrick took a job in San Diego following the separation, and then moved in with another family in the Fremont congregation, a family of father, Rod Francis, his wife Claudia, and two teenage boys. You will hear the family cared for Jonathan. Never suspected he was abusing anyone.

Eventually, Jonathan moved away in the year 1997. The entire time that Jonathan Kendrick was attending the congregation meetings in North Fremont, no one heard anything about the abuse of Candace Conti. No one saw anything that made them suspicious and reported it to the elders. No one made any allegations.

Like I said, no one reported anything going on between Jonathan Kendrick and Candace Conti or any other child.

You can imagine the shock when the lawsuit comes to the congregation.

Mr. Simons mentioned that you will hear testimony about policy. It is kind of hard to pinpoint policy sometimes, but policy, in this particular organization, comes from the governing body in the form of letters to the bodies of elders.

It also comes in the form of magazines that they distribute publically and they use in their congregation at the worship services. It is called the Watchtower Magazine and Awake Magazine.

And one of the letters that you will see as evidence, and you will have an opportunity to look at it and to scrutinize it was a July 1, 1989 letter to all bodies of elders.

It was a letter about confidentiality and about the responsibility of elders who receive personal and confidential information about people that they are shepherding and caring for in the congregation needs to be kept confidential.

And you will see the letter explaining why. Lawsuits results from defamation, child custody matters, divorce proceedings. Lawyers can get embroiled in these things through subpoenas or other techniques where people want to have an elder or minister come in and testify he said/she said in divorce proceedings.

You will see by the letter. No policy and secrecy there. Just common sense, confidentiality, maintained by lawyers and their clients, doctors and their patients, ministers and their congregants in every religion.

Now, the elders were finally informed about the abuse of Ms. Conti from Ms. Conti herself. They met with her. They did what they did before to prepare for the meeting to try to comfort and encourage her. And that's what you would expect for a member who was dearly loved as a child.

So why are my clients being sued? Well, Candace will tell you, Ms. Conti will tell you that the elders should have known what was going on, and they should have known what was happening to her, and they should have protected her. But there was no evidence that anyone saw any of the activity that she will testify about.

Certainly no one reported to the elders that something was going on with Jonathan Kendrick and Candace Conti.

They will tell you that -- we will bring them in, the mothers and grandmothers that were there and in tune, and they were in tune to this issue because they had policy information that was given to them from the Watchtower organization in the form of their magazines.

But they will tell you that they never saw Candace Conti sitting on Jonathan Kendrick's lap. They will tell you they never her giving big bear hugs to Jonathan Kendrick. It would be inappropriate.

And they will never tell you that they saw her leaving week after week with Jonathan Kendrick alone from the Kingdom Hall.

The evidence will tell you that this isn't an easy case. It is a difficult case. We all feel for someone who comes from a troubled family background like Candace Conti did. I think everyone who testifies feels horrible that anything bad would happen to Candace Conti.

We find it tragic what she's been through. Eight years of methamphetamine abuse, troubled thoughts, the nightmares.

But I think we can all agree, we are all grateful to see that she is on the right track now. Clean and sober. She has made a lot of progress.

We can certainly testify, as Mr. Simons did, as to her resilience, that she is glad she has her life together, career plans, education plans.

Now, you will hear a lot of evidence and you will see articles themselves, will be put up on the screen here what Watchtower has published in the form of information about the child abuse. And I think you will be impressed.

The evidence will show that they have been publishing for over 30 years about this subject. They are not an organization that puts their head in the sand and say it doesn't exist.

And what they have done, you will see in the evidence is, they educate the parents. First line of defense. The parents. The ones that guide, direct, teach, and protect their children.

Some might argue, well, if they published all those materials, it certainly must be a problem unique to Jehovah's Witnesses. No it's not. It is a societal problem.

And the fact that Jehovah's Witnesses write about it indicates that they are trying to address a societal problem for their membership, like they would alcohol abuse and drug abuse and any other plague in society today.

This problem is not a unique problem to the Catholics or the Jehovah's Witnesses or the Boy Scouts, it is a societal problem. That is what the evidence will show.

Now the matters with Andrea, the 15-year-old stepdaughter of Jonathan Kendrick, that took place sometime during the summer of 1994, it is going to be disputed what was said at that meeting, evidently from what Mr. Simons has outlined.

My clients didn't hear anything about Vicodin. They didn't hear anything about going below the belt. They didn't hear that.

And they made a report immediately after that, which they had no motivation to fabricate, and send to the Watchtower. You will hear about that too.

But you know, looking back, which every account you will find most credible, listening to the witnesses, that account, or that abuse of the 15-year-old stepdaughter today gives us the vantage point of hindsight. And you know what they say about hindsight, it is 20/20.

But as you hear the testimony, try to listen to the evidence in terms of what Mr. Clarke and Mr. Abrahamson knew, what they were told by the family, and how they were working on it.

Now, clearly, they weren't fooled by Mr. Kendrick saying it was an inadvertent touch. It was clearly wrong behavior. And they acted accordingly and removed him from his minor position in the congregation.

Everyone's demeanor and everyone's conversation that day in November 1993 was that the family had worked out the problem, they were working it out. They didn't want to go to the police. But they eventually did. Didn't change anything. Wouldn't change anything the elders would do.

But for a minute just try to put the situation with Andrea in a little box. Let's focus on the claims of Candace Conti.

This case is not about Andrea. And the evidence will show this. It is about what the elders thought, heard, did, and when they did it and when they knew it.

I think the evidence will show you that they didn't see or hear anything. Because no one reported it to them. They didn't hear it from the parents, Neal and Kathleen Conti.

So I want to make sure that we don't make any mistake here. There is a villain in this case. It is Mr. Kendrick. It is not Gary Abrahamson, Michael Clarke or Larry Lamerdin.

The questions that you will have to decide at the end of the trial is: Were my clients negligent? Michael Clarke, Gary Abrahamson, Larry Lamerdin? The people in the Fremont Congregation, were they so oblivious and so uncaring and so unconcerned that they let something important happen right in front of their eyes? I think the evidence will show that they weren't.

Essentially, the Plaintiff, even though no one heard or saw anything -- and that includes not only Neal and Kathleen Conti, but Laura Fraser who was doing weekly therapy with Candace Conti, apparently, during the time that some of this abuse was allegedly going on.

It wasn't apparent to her school counselor. It wasn't apparent to her grandmother, Neal's mother, who she lived with.

So that is what this case is about, what the elders knew and saw, when they knew it.

I want to thank you for going through the screening process. And it was important that we do that. It might have been a little burdensome, and we had, maybe, some confusing questions in there.

And we did that because there is some delicate things that are going to be talked about in this case, and there are some serious questions that are going to be raised. And we wanted people who could do it dispassionately and objectively by weighing the evidence. And I am confident you are that group of people. Mr. Simons is too.

I think you will see as the evidence develops the elders had nothing to hide, they had nothing to conceal. They did their job to the best of their ability.

And sitting here today in 2012 with 20/20 vision, hindsight, we all wish Candace Conti could have been spared the scurge of child abuse, the plague of the earth.

In a perfect world, every child should be loved and cherished by a mother and father that cares for her. Candace Conti didn't live in a perfect world. And we don't either. Her family was quite troubled. She suffered.

But I think when you look at all the evidence and sum it all up, you will see that the elders in the congregation didn't do it.

I think you will see from the evidence at the end of this trial that the blame for Candace Conti's problems needs to be put where it properly belongs, and that's on the broad shoulders of this perpetrator, Jonathan Kendrick.

THE COURT: Do you have an opening statement on behalf of the Watchtower Bible and Tract Society, Inc.?

MR. SCHNACK: I do, your Honor.

THE COURT: All right.

Let's take a 15-minute break, and we will have opening statement for Bible and Tract Society of

New York.

(Break taken)

(Whereupon, the following proceedings were heard outside the presence of jurors)

MR. SIMONS: One of the jurors was having a chat with Mr. Clarke. Mr. McCabe had a chance to talk to him.

MR. McCABE: I inquired of Mr. Clarke and he said there was some more conversation than that.

THE COURT: Referring to this department?

MR. SIMONS: Yes.

THE COURT: Okay. I will admonish the jurors once again.

MR. McCABE: I have told Mr. Clarke not to talk to them.

(Whereupon, the following proceedings were heard in the presence of jurors)

THE COURT: All right. If I can remind the jurors that no conversations whatsoever with lawyers, parties, or witnesses. I can't say that enough. Like I said, let your conscience lead your conduct.

So even if I don't reference it every session, you are under a continuing duty to observe that order as to no-contact discussions. Certainly a good warning is appropriate. Anything beyond that, though, could be looked askance by this court with appropriate action taken.

All right. Mr. Schnack.

MR. SCHNACK: Thank you, your Honor.

OPENING STATEMENT BY MR. SCHNACK

MR. SCHNACK: Ladies and Gentlemen, I too, like Mr. Simons, want to thank you for your service. We appreciate your patience in getting though this process this far. We appreciate that you are giving this matter your attention.

I represent Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York. As Mr. Simons referred to several times, it is a corporation and that's technically correct.

What Watchtower Society basically is, is the national church entity. It is a New York corporation, it is a religious non-profit corporation that was set up so that the Jehovah's Witnesses faith could practice their faith in the United States like other religious corporations, like other denominations do.

Let's turn to what the case is really about. What Ms. Conti is claiming here is that Jonathan Kendrick criminally and sexually assaulted her for, perhaps, two to three years, starting sometime in '94 or '96 to '97, when she was age nine to 11. And she wants Mr. Kendrick to pay her for that.

And, indeed, if Mr. Kendrick did that, I don't think that there is any dispute from Watchtower or even from North Congregation, that if Mr. Kendrick criminally and sexually assaulted her for that time period, he should obviously pay for it.

But that's not why Mr. McCabe and why I am here today. Ms. Conti, as you are aware, is also suing the North Congregation and Watchtower. She is suing the church, the national church. And she wants the congregation and the entire church to pay her for Mr. Kendrick's criminal conduct.

And that's why we are here today, Mr. McCabe and I, to talk about our clients' involvement or their lack of involvement in this matter.

So specifically, what do Ms. Conti's claims really involve? This starts in November of '93. And as Mr. Simons explained, partially correctly, and Mr. McCabe has referenced, Jonathan Kendrick went to the elders in the North Fremont Congregation to tell them that back in July of '93, he had in a single time inappropriately touched his stepdaughter. That's Evelyn Kendrick's daughter, Andrea.

Andrea was 14 or 15 years old at the time, and they tried to deal with it within the family, and then Mr. Kendrick went to the elders in early November, I think it was November 10.

And in the very next day in the afternoon, two elders -- consistent with their religious practices, two of them went to the Kendrick household to meet with Mr. Kendrick, with Evelyn, and with Andrea.

It was at that meeting first of all, like Mr. McCabe stated, they took their Bibles, they started with a prayer. And then Mr. Kendrick confessed to what he called an inadvertent touching.

But again, you will see in the letter that was sent, they still labeled that as child molestation. They weren't fooled by Mr. Kendrick that it had been merely an inadvertent touching.

They also talked with family that day, they offered them some spiritual counseling. But the elders also told Evelyn and Andrea that if they wanted to go to police, they could. That was their option.

And, indeed, what Mr. Simons didn't tell you, that within a couple months, they did go to the police. They went to the police, they reported it. The police and Child Protective Services conducted an investigation. That happened in mid-February.

You will probably hear from the police officer that conducted that investigation as to what was said.

With respect to the Vicodin issue, Andrea told the police that she had a bad back, she took the Vicodin, and that later these things happened.

Again, there is going to be some disputes as to what was said there.

But nonetheless, after that meeting with Mr. Kendrick and his family in November 1993, the local elders removed Mr. Kendrick from his position as a ministerial servant.

You have heard a brief description of what a ministerial servant does. There is two appointed positions within a local congregation. There is an elder, and there is a ministerial servant.

A ministerial servant, essentially, is a church assistant, is a church helper. They will get the literature ready for the sermon. They will get the microphones set up for the services, kind of like what Mr. Martin did last week, when we were getting the microphones set up.

If latecomers show up to the service, the ministerial servants will help them find their seats. They will help in the parking lot, things like that.

Ministerial servants don't give sermons, they don't conduct Bible studies, and, again, they function as helping the church elders.

Again, I don't think we can repeat this enough, that once Mr. Kendrick confessed to the elders on November 11, 1993, he was removed from his position as ministerial servant.

That is an appointed position. Once again, there is only two appointed positions within each congregation, elders and ministerial servants. But he was removed, and there was an announcement made to the congregation that he no longer held that position, that he had been removed.

He never again served in any appointed position in the church. And that's up to the present time. Mr. Kendrick still lives in Alameda County. He still works in the county.

For whatever reason, he has chosen not to come here and defend himself today, but nonetheless, Mr. Kendrick never served in any appointed position within any congregation, including the North Fremont Congregation after he was removed as a result of that November 1993 incident.

Now, again the elders, on November 11, 1993, told Evelyn and Andrea and, indeed, Mr. Kendrick, that it was their choice as to whether to report it to the police.

Now, the judge will instruct you later that as of 1993, clergy, including ministers, elders, rabbis, pastors, whatever, are not what we call mandated reporters under California law.

That means that if someone is a mandated reporter, such as therapist or a doctor, someone like that, receives a report of the child abuse, they have to go to authorities.

Clergy were not included within that, under state law, as of January 1, 1997. So the fact that the elders did not go to police at that point can't be held against them because, again, they weren't required to.

But they did tell the family they had a right to report the matter to the police. And, indeed, within a couple months they did go to the police. And Evelyn and Andrea went to the police.

And you will see the police report in evidence here. The police conducted a thorough investigation. They talked to Andrea, they talked to Evelyn, they talked to Jonathan Kendrick. They were told that the story had been told to the elders.

But the police never let the elders know that they were conducting an investigation. The police did not talk to the elders. Andrea and Evelyn did not tell the elders that they had gone to the police.

But nonetheless, the police did their investigation, Child Protective Services was involved in the investigation, a report was made to the district attorney. The district attorney charged Mr. Kendrick in this, and there was a conviction.

So this was all prior to the time that Candace will tell you that Jonathan Kendrick abused her.

Let me now turn, again, just to repeat a couple key factors here, because I think a lot of focus from Mr. Simons' part is going to be on this report about Andrea, and indeed that did happen? No one disputes it.

There is going to be some discussion about what was said at that November 11th meeting, but again the elders were not fooled by Jonathan Kendrick's contention that it was inadvertent.

You will see in the report they sent to Watchtower back in New York that they called it a child molestation.

So again, Mr. Kendrick, at the time that Candace alleges he abused her, again in '94 to '96 or '97, he was not in a position of authority with the church. He was simply a rank and file member of the North Congregation.

Two, as Mr. McCabe mentioned, from that point forward, from November '93 forward, the elders were watching him at the Kingdom Hall. Candace will testify as she testified earlier in her deposition that at the Kingdom Hall, Mr. Kendrick would bear hug her. She would squirm to get away. But he held her inappropriately on his lap.

The elders were watching. You'll hear the elders will testify that they never saw any such conduct at the Kingdom Hall.

You will hear from other members of the congregation at the time, from mothers and grandmothers, from others, that they also did not see any such conduct like that at the Kingdom Hall. And indeed Ms. Conti's own parents will tell you they never saw that at the Kingdom Hall.

The bottom line in this regard, is that no one in the church saw Mr. Kendrick do anything inappropriate with Candace or the children at the Kingdom Hall.

Indeed it wasn't until sometime in 2009 or thereabouts that anyone with the North Fremont Congregation or even Watchtower, back in New York, had heard or saw anything that signaled that Mr. Kendrick had abused Candace.

The other folks have covered some of this. I will just page through and save us some time.

You will learn in this case about the Jehovah's Witnesses's faith, that like many other Christian religions, they hold church services on Sunday.

They hold these at the Kingdom Hall. And again, the Kingdom Hall is like the church that the Jehovah's Witnesses use. It is no different than the Catholic, calling their church a cathedral, the Jewish religion calling their house of worship a synagogue. The Kingdom Hall is just a name for their physical church for the building.

They hold Sunday services at the church. One night during the week they will have Bible studies there. There was a period of time where those Bible studies were held at elder's houses. And you will hear some testimony about that.

But you will also hear something that is very unique to the Jehovah's Witnesses' faith that is unlike a lot of other religions.

The Jehovah's Witnesses, they do not offer or sponsor any services or programs that separate children from their parents. That is unlike a lot of other churches.

Let me say that again. The Jehovah's Witnesses do not sponsor any program or any activity where they separate children from their parents.

So what does that mean? Unlike the church I attend, there aren't any Sunday School classes for children. Those of you who are familiar with Sunday School classes, the children are separated in a separate room, they are taught by a teacher. The parents aren't involved in that. The Jehovah's Witnesses faith does not separate children from their parents that way.

Also, different from the church I attend, there is not a teen fellowship group that might meet on a Thursday nights with a youth pastor.

The Jehovah's Witnesses don't segregate teenagers. They don't segregate children separately for services, like a youth fellowship group.

Also, unlike my church, there is no Vacation Bible School classes in the summer. A lot of churches will do that, where the kids are out of school for the summer, they set up a week where there is Vacation Bible School classes. The Jehovah's Witnesses don't have that type of class setup where the children are separated from there their parents.

They also don't operate a summer camp where children attend for a week where the parents drop them off with camp counselors maybe older teenagers, people in their twenties. The Jehovah's Witnesses don't have summer camps like that.

So what does this mean? This means that adults within the congregation don't have any special or unique access to children, like, for example, Boy Scouts might do, where a scout master will take some scouts out on an overnight camp.

There aren't, like, youth sports programs. You have soccer. You have baseball, Little League, basketball. Parents drop off their kids at these practices. The coach works with them for an hour, hour and a half or whatever and the parents pick them up afterwards.

The Jehovah's Witnesses faith doesn't have any kind of activities like that where the children are separated from their parents.

So in that sense, the Jehovah's Witnesses are a different from a lot of churches, they are different from Boy Scouts, they are different from public schools.

It is, again, not a situation where the children are separated, such as someone like Kendrick would have unique access to Candace or any other children.

If you ask the Jehovah's Witnesses why they do that, why do they function this way, it is because they consider they are worshiping a family activity. It not only brings families closer to God, but closer to each other.

And they view it as a scriptural responsibility for parents to educate their children about their religion. And that's why again, the children aren't separated from their parents in all the activities.

So keep that in mind when you hear it. Because Mr. Kendrick, again, was just a rank and file member of church at the time Candace said that he abused her. He didn't have any type of unique access to her. He didn't have unrestricted as access to her either as Sunday school teacher or out in field service or anything like that. They simply do not separate their children from their parents.

Some other evidence you are going to hear includes that Candace Conti's parents -- and you heard a little bit about Kathleen and Neal Conti, they will each testify that Candace never went to the Kingdom Hall unless one or both of them were in attendance.

She was never sent there with a friend. If Candace was at the Kingdom Hall, she went with her parents, one or both of them.

Both Neal and Kathy Conti will testify that they never allowed Candace to leave the Kingdom Hall alone with Jonathan Kendrick.

Candace will testify that for several times a month, over a two or three-year period, that she was allowed to leave the Kingdom Hall with Jonathan Kendrick, that he would take her to his home and from there, he would sexually abuse her.

The parents are going to tell you that never happened on their watch. And again they are going to tell you that she was never at the Kingdom Hall unless one or both of them was there.

You are going to hear from other persons in the North Fremont Congregation, the mothers and grandmothers, they will testify that they never saw Kendrick bear hug Candace at the Kingdom Hall.

They never saw Kendrick have Candace on his lap, they never saw her trying to squirm to get away from him, because they just didn't see that happen.

Let me shift gears here just a little bit. Mr. Simons referred to policy of secrecy and Mr. McCabe addressed that briefly. There is going to be testimony about that. And there was no policy of secrecy here. There will be evidence to the effect through the witnesses.

There has also been some mention about Watchtower and Awake Magazines. For over 30 years Watchtower has published educational articles that go out to all of the parents in the congregation, they go out to all the members of the congregation. They are available at the kingdom halls. They go to the elders. The elders use the publications within their sermons, within their Bible studies.

And this is all part of the educational services that Watchtower provides to its members, to the parents, and indeed to people outside the church as well.

The first one we have up here is from a June 22nd, 1982 Awake.

And again, as I mentioned, they have been doing this for about 30 years.

You will hear some testimony that the Jehovah's Witnesses were indeed in the forefront of publishing these types of materials and putting this information into the hands of parents.

The next one is a January 22, 1985 article. You have got another one that has come up on October 8, 1991. And then a final one, October 8th, 1993.

This is just a rough sample of the types of things that Watchtower was putting into the hands of its members. Educating parents.

You will even read one of these articles from 1985 that tells parents to be alert to your own religious leaders, that you might think twice before you leave your children with your elders, with your ministers. That was the type of information that was being disseminated to the congregation.

And as Mr. McCabe mentioned, they didn't publish these articles, they didn't put this information into the hands of the parents and the members of the congregation because they had a unique or serious problem any more than any other organization, it is simply because the church acknowledges at the time, and correctly so, that there was a societal problem.

Churches don't operate like that. They function within society as a whole. And the Jehovah's Witnesses acknowledged this and decided to put this information out there so that the parents could get it, the parents could be educated, the elders could have it to work with, they could incorporate it into their sermons, whatever needed to be done.

It is somewhat ironic that plaintiff appears -- you know, if they hadn't published these materials and put this information out there, I'm sure Mr. Simons would say Watchtower was negligent and that the congregation was negligent.

Now, the fact that these materials are put out there, that they do educate parents about their own responsibilities, they equip the elders with this information, that is negligent too. It is something, you just can't have it both ways.

Let me just sum up a few things that I think the evidence will show in this case, going back again to November 11,1993. Mr. Kendrick confessed to the two elders in the North Fremont Congregation that back in July, he had inappropriately and sexually touched Andrea, his 15-year old stepdaughter.

Secondly, the elders provided scriptural guidance to the family, and told the family that they could, indeed, report it to the police. That's not a policy of secrecy, telling them that they could report it to the police.

Third, the elders removed Mr. Kendrick right away after receiving this confession from this one-time incident.

They removed him from his position as a ministerial servant, and they announced that fact to the congregation.

And after that, the elders also monitored Mr. Kendrick when he was at the Kingdom Hall performing any church-related activities.

And fourth, Andrea and Evelyn Kendrick did report this to the police. And as I have mentioned, the police investigated, they conducted the investigation, they interviewed the people involved. It was reported to the district attorney. Child Protective Services got involved. And there was a criminal prosecution of Mr. Kendrick. And this was all in 1994.

And then fifth, the Jehovah's Witnesses do not separate the children from the parents -- I have gone over that several times -- so there was no unrestricted access that Mr. Kendrick had to either Candace or any other child at the time.

Without question, child sex abuse is a horrendous societal problem. I don't think anybody disputes that. Unfortunately, pedophiles have learned to hide their behaviors quite well.

In this case, if Jonathan Kendrick criminally and sexually abused Candace, he should pay for it. There is no dispute about that. He should pay for it financially or criminally because of the damage he has caused her.

But Watchtower should not be responsible for things that they did not know or could not know. They also should not be held responsible simply because they are a religious corporation, to use Mr. Simons' words.

Whatever criminal and sexual abuse Jonathan Kendrick perpetrated against Candace, he should be responsible for. And, again, he is the villain here. It is not the church. It is not the congregation.

Like all organizations, whether they are churches or youth organizations, when there is a member who commits abuse against another member, it just wrong to hold the organization liable.

Again, Mr. Kendrick wasn't an elder. He wasn't like a scout master. He wasn't like a priest. He wasn't like a school teacher. He wasn't a coach, where he had unique and truly unfettered and unrestricted access to kids for a period of time.

Holding the organization responsible for the criminal misconduct of someone like Kendrick is just wrong, and it shouldn't be done here.

MR. SIMONS: Object, your Honor. This is argumentative.

THE COURT: Strike the last comment.

MR. SCHNACK: Thank you, your Honor.

Finally, in closing, I am asking that you place the blame in this case where it really lies. It should go on Jonathan Kendrick. He should have to pay for what he did, and by returning your verdict, you can tell him that.

Find that Jonathan Kendrick was responsible for whatever abuse he perpetrated against Candace. But the blame does not fall on Watchtower. It does not fall on the congregation.

Again, like the other attorneys, I appreciate your time and attention. Thank you.

THE COURT: All right. Thank you.

Mr. Simons, do you have a witness for us?

MR. SIMONS: Yes, your Honor. Pursuant to Evidence Code 776, we call Mr. Gary Abrahamson.

THE COURT: All right. Under 776, the plaintiff is calling Mr. Abrahamson as a so-called adverse witness. He is obviously appearing on behalf of the congregation this morning. But I wanted to alert, he is being called under a specific evidentiary section as an adverse witness.

GARY ABRAHAMSON,

WAS DULY SWORN TO TELL THE TRUTH BY THE CLERK

AND TESTIFIED AS FOLLOWS:

THE CLERK: Would you please state and spell your first and last name for the record?

THE WITNESS: My name is Gary Abrahamson.

G-A-R-Y, A-B-R-A-H-A-M-S-O-N.

THE COURT: All right. Mr. Simons.

DIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. SIMONS:

Q. Thank you, your Honor. Mr. Abrahamson, we have met on several occasions including two sessions of your deposition. Correct?

A. Correct.

Q. And you are an elder at the North Fremont Congregation?

A. Yes, I am.

Q. And you have been an elder for many years there. When did you start as an elder in Fremont?

A. In Fremont, 1986.

Q. And is it correct that before Fremont you had served as an elder at a different location?

A. Yes.

Q. When did you first become an elder anywhere?

A. 1982, I believe.

Q. Is it correct that there are no paid clergy within Jehovah's Witnesses?

A. That is correct.

Q. And so the persons who have administrative responsibility for each congregation are the elders?

A. Correct.

Q. And the elders -- I use the word "plural" because there is more than one elder in each congregation, typically.

A. Typically, correct.

Q. And in Fremont, there may be somewhere between maybe six or eight or ten elders at any given time?

A. That's true.

Q. And those elders, when they meet together, that's called the body of elders?

A. Yes, correct.

Q. And the congregation itself, even though people may come and may leave, generally speaking it is about a hundred -- hundred and twenty people?

A. That would be a good estimate.

Q. And that includes both adults and children. Correct?

A. That includes adults and children that are actually publishing the "Good News."

Q. And by "publishing," that means children who are going out into the neighborhoods to promote the Jehovah's Witnesses beliefs?

A. Yes, correct.

Q. And some of those publishers are baptized?

A. Some of them are.

Q. And some are not?

A. They are called unbaptized publishers.

Q. And some of the -- in your experience at least -- some of the baptized publishers may be as young as six years old?

A. That is rare, but that could be true, very serious six-year old person with parental training.

Q. And there are a number of different meetings, if you will, that go on within the Jehovah's Witnesses congregations, including Fremont?

A. Correct.

Q. There will be meetings at, for example, the Kingdom Hall?

A. Correct.

Q. And those meetings involve both children and adults together?

A. Yes. We don't separate our children.

Q. Now, we have heard a little that it is always parents and children, but isn't it true, Mr. Abrahamson, that there are children who will become involved in these congregations whose parents are not involved?

A. Again, it is probably rare.

Q. But it happens?

A. And by children, we are thinking what age group?

Q. Eight? Ten? Twelve? Fourteen?

A. A little older where they can -- obviously it is with the parents' permission that they would come.

Q. But there are children who are involved without their parents?

A. That could happen, yes.

Q. And sometimes there is children who are involved, but for different reasons their parents may not be able to attend a particular event. Isn't that something that you experienced?

A. That's true.

Q. Now, the Fremont Congregation itself, we called it a congregation, and that's how we all referred to it, but it is actually a corporation?

A. That would be true.

Q. And the directors and officers of this corporation are taken from the elders within the congregation?

A. Correct.

Q. And as elders, isn't it correct that you are required to follow any instructions or policies that are provided to you from Watchtower New York?

A. Yes. We follow those policies, but they are always scriptural-based and they are always within the law.

Q. And do you have any ability to create exceptions to the policies that are provided to you by Watchtower New York?

A. Well, I don't know what you mean by -- what area of exceptions. For example, they may say conduct a meeting, but they may not tell you what date. So you are at liberty to choose the date to conduct the meeting.

Is that what you mean?

Q. No. I mean, do you depart or deviate from the policies that are provided to you by Watchtower New York?

A. No. Like I said, they are scripturally based. They're within the realm of the law. They're legal. So I would want to follow them.

Q. Is it accurate to say that there are often five or more meetings a week within the Jehovah's Witnesses congregations?

A. That's what we have. Five days a week.

Q. Some of these meetings occur in people's homes -- the homes of members?

A. Back at that time they did. Yes. Now they all occur at the Kingdom Hall.

Q. And back then, some of the meetings might occur in the Kingdom Hall, of course?

A. Correct.

Q. And the door-to-door work, the field service, that would occur in neighborhoods throughout -- in the case of this congregation, at least -- Fremont?

A. The public canvassing, that would be correct. Generally, our meetings for field service is also done at the Kingdom Hall.

Q. And then the groups would go out from there to neighborhoods. Correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And that service would be a brief service before publishers go out to the neighborhoods?

A. Correct.

Q. And all of these activities are engaged in with adults and children together?

A. Yes.

Q. Usually the parents, but sometimes not?

A. It would be rare, again, but usually with the parents, absolutely.

Q. But sometimes not?

A. It would be rare. And if it got to be the practice of the parent, then I would talk to the parent, "You need to be out with your child."

Q. All right. Did you ever talk to Kathleen Conti about being present more at Jehovah's Witnesses congregations with Candace?

A. If her husband, Neal, were there, that would be all right. But I never saw Candace without either her parents or -- well, either her mom or dad.

Q. Actually, you have no recollection whatsoever of Candace; isn't that true?

A. Well, at the deposition you did show me a photograph of her, and I thought, boy, I can't picture her. But as soon as I saw her today I knew it was Candace.

Q. But when you testified in this matter before on the occasion of your deposition, you told us you had absolutely no recollection whatsoever of Candace Conti?

A. Well, I don't believe I stated that. If I stated that, that's not what I meant.

Q. Well, let's take a look at your testimony at page 67 of the deposition from lines 3 through 19.

(Whereupon, the video recording was played)

BY MR. SIMONS:

Q. When did you first meet Candace Conti?

A. My recollection of Candace Conti is that she was Neal Conti's daughter from a previous marriage. And so occasionally she would come with Neal and his new wife to the meetings. You have pictures there. I don't even know. I can't recall what she even looks like.

Q. All right. And that was going to be, actually, the purpose of these pictures. Let me just show you a photograph marked as Exhibit 11, because we have some other documents there that we have not yet attended to but which I have marked 1 through 10, and ask if seeing that photograph refreshes your recollection as to Candace Conti?

A. I'm sorry it does not. No.

(Whereupon, the video recording was stopped)

BY MR. SIMONS:

Q. Now, you have since learned that Candace Conti is not the stepdaughter of Neal Conti from a prior marriage. Correct?

A. Correct.

Q. And your recollection of her from seeing her today is not the basis that you are telling us that she was always there with Neal Conti, is it?

A. Obviously not, no.

Q. So you are telling us that, although you don't really remember her, you remember that whenever she was at the meetings, she was always there with her father -- her stepfather, you thought?

A. Yes. If she wasn't with her parents, one parent, then it would be, "Where did she come from?"

I would have noticed her more at that point and tried to find out her circumstances.

Q. Well, you were aware, Mr. Abrahamson, that sometimes the parents might not attend and that, if they didn't, that usually they would make arrangements for their child, if she was going to attend something, to get transportation with somebody else from the congregation; isn't that true?

A. You kind of lost me in that whole dialogue.

Could you rephrase the question please and repeat it?

Q. Yeah. You testified that if the parents weren't able to bring the child to some of the Jehovah's Witnesses activities, that undoubtedly the parents would arrange transportation with another congregation member at times?

A. At times, correct.

Q. And so back in the 1990s, you knew that there were times that arrangements would be made by parents to have another congregation member transport their child to Jehovah's Witnesses events?

A. That could be true.

Q. Did you use the word "undoubtedly" in your testimony?

A. Probably. I do that from time to time, yes.

Q. Do you still stand by that?

A. Undoubtedly? On rare occasions, sure.

Q. Do you remember Jonathan Kendrick?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. How did you first meet him?

A. He came to the Kingdom Hall.

Q. And did he come alone?

A. I don't have a recollection if he came alone or not. I assume that he did.

Q. Did you like him when you met him?

A. He was a likeable fellow, yes.

Q. How would you describe him -- his personality?

A. Well, he was, as you mentioned, an iron worker, so he was kind of gruff. And he kind of came across that way too. He appeared gruff and he seemed gruff too.

Q. Was he loud?

A. Yes.

Q. But is it fair to say that he, in a somewhat short time, became fairly popular within the congregation?

A. Well, we always like it when someone comes in and changes their personality.

Q. And he become active in the congregation?

A. He was active in the congregation, true.

Q. And you recommended him soon after his baptism to Watchtower New York to be accepted as a ministerial servant?

A. He was making good progress, yes.

Q. Now, we have heard about ministerial servants. Is a ministerial servant, as Mr. Schnack told us, a person who helps out at the services, in the parking lot, with microphones and books and literature?

A. Right. That would be his duty.

Q. Not a religious position.

A. It would be more of an assistant position as was mentioned.

Q. What was the duties that Mr. Kendrick had as a ministerial servant?

A. He would distribute literature to friends and would keep account of that.

Q. Did he do a good job of that?

A. He did an adequate job, good job, sure.

Q. If a ministerial servant did not do a good job with providing books, for example, was irregular in their attendance, or had some other reasons, personality or otherwise, would they be subject to being removed from that position?

A. They could be removed for that.

Q. So the fact that a person is removed as a ministerial servant does not necessarily tell anyone that that person has committed an act of child abuse?

A. Well, you first have to realize that they would have been trained to -- if there was some reason they weren't able to fulfill their job, then that comes on us. Why didn't they have the training? So we would train him properly.

And if it lack of meetings, then you know the friends that are attending, and so you can have an assistant that can help you. But if neither of you can be here, you have to make arrangements and you have to try to be here.

Q. Back to my question, the fact that a person is removed as a ministerial servant could be for many, many reasons. Correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And it does not tell anyone that because a person has been removed as a ministerial servant that they have committed some kind of child sexual abuse?

A. It would not be limited to that, no.

Q. Was Mr. Kendrick ever reproved for loud and boisterous conduct?

A. No.

Q. Now, do you recall back in November of 1993 being contacted by Evelyn Kendrick concerning Jonathan?

A. Yes. I was at that meeting. They actually contacted by Michael Clarke and then he and I went to their house.

Q. Did you receive a phone call first from Evelyn Kendrick?

A. Not to my knowledge. I think it was Mike Clarke that received that phone call.

Q. Did you have a relationship with Evelyn Kendrick?

A. Yes.

Q. And how would you describe that relationship?

A. As a shepherd to a sheep?

Q. And was she eligible to be a ministerial servant or elder?

A. Women are not allowed to be ministerial servants or elders.

Q. Did you socialize, you and your family, in any way, with Mr. and Mrs. Kendrick?

A. We had meals together.

Q. And how often would you estimate that you would have social interactions with the Kendricks?

A. Well, we are all so busy that most of our social interacting, besides meals, takes place at the Kingdom Hall. But we would do other things on the side, occasionally, with other members -- not just with them, but other members of the congregation as well.

Q. Approximately how many families were involved in this congregation?

A. Well, a hundred and twenty. Probably that would represent, maybe 60, 50 families, I'm thinking.

Q. Some of the families have children?

A. That's what I was thinking as families. Most of them with children, yes.

Q. I think there were four people in your family at that time?

A. Four children. Correct.

Q. Yes.

A. But myself and my wife, that would be six.

Q. And some of the families were as large as your family, or maybe two or three children?

A. Yes.

Q. So is it fair to say there may be two dozen families or so in that congregation at that time?

A. I'm not very good at doing the math in my head, but that sounds reasonable.

Q. And you would socialize, not just with the Kendricks, but with many of the other families as well?

A. Correct.

Q. And the same would be true for the other elders?

A. That would be true.

Q. Is that part of your responsibility as an elder is to become acquainted with the families and learn who they are as people?

A. Right. And we usually do that on shepherding visits.

Q. And does that mean that you go to their home?

A. Correct.

Q. So you had been to the Kendrick home?

A. Yes.

Q. And you had been to the Conti home?

A. Uh, yes.

Q. And is it true that within -- at least from your experience within the congregation, that families will socialize with each other to a certain extent in the ways that you described?

A. Yes.

Q. Even if there is not an elder involved?

A. That's true.

Q. Do you recall Mr. Conti having a paint booth out in his garage?

A. When you mentioned that, a vague memory of that came across my mind. But I'm not much of a painter. I wasn't involved in that project with the Crawford car.

Q. But you remember the project?

A. I remember that it was done. I don't remember where it was done.

Q. Now, when you had that family meeting, Evelyn Kendrick was there. Correct?

A. Correct.

Q. And Andrea was there?

A. Correct.

Q. Do you remember if she was there for the whole meeting or came in partly through?

A. From my recollection, I would think she was there for the whole meeting. They knew we were coming, and I'm sure, hopefully, she was there for the whole meeting.

Q. And Jonathan Kendrick was there?

A. Yes.

Q. Yourself and Elder Clarke?

A. Yes.

Q. Had you already spoken to Jonathan Kendrick at that time about what the meeting was going to be about?

A. Michael told me -- informed me what the meeting was going to be about prior to us going to the meeting.

Q. Had you spoken to Jonathan Kendrick at all?

A. Michael had spoken to Jonathan about it.

Q. What did you understand, when you went to the meeting, that the meeting was going to be about?

A. Abuse of Andrea. Sexually abusing Andrea.

Q. And what did Jonathan Kendrick say in this meeting that he had done to Andrea?

A. He had said that the house was dark. She was sleeping on the couch. He walked in. And he used the word "inadvertently" touched her breast. But it was more deliberate than that.

Q. And how did you determine in your own mind that it was more deliberate than that?

A. Well, it had occurred four months before. And now he's saying that it is bothering his conscious. And if you raised your hand and inadvertently hit a woman's breast, you would say, "Excuse me. I'm sorry." And I don't think four months later you worry about it, and you would say, Oh, this is keeping me awake at night because I inadvertently touched a woman's breast.

Q. Let's look at the report. You remember that a written report was prepared after this. Correct?

Can we see Exhibit 9?

Now, are you able to see that there where you are, Mr. Abrahamson?

A. Not clearly, no.

Q. First of all, your Honor, Exhibit 9 is in evidence, I believe.

THE COURT: So Number 9 is evidence by agreement.

BY MR. SIMONS:

Q. Now, this is a letter that yourself and Mr. Clarke sent to Watchtower New York on November 15, of 1993. Correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And it was sent after the meeting had been held in the Kendrick family home?

A. Correct.

Q. And you did, as you said, recognized that the subject matter was, was a case of child abuse?

A. Yes.

Q. Why were you reporting this to Watchtower New York?

A. To get direction.

Q. And in all of your work as an elder that involves anything in this type of matter, you would get your direction and instruction from New York. Correct?

A. In a lot of these cases that legal matters are involved, we are always encouraged to call the Legal Department because how could we know all the laws. And the laws change from state to state, but our Legal Department could help us through this.

Q. And you used the word "encouraged" but actually you are required to call New York?

A. You might put it that way. Yes.

Q. I did put it that way. Do you agree?

A. I agree you put it that way.

Q. Do you agree that you were required to call New York?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, the confession that you refer to in the next paragraph:

> "We met on November 11 with Jonathan Kendrick, a ministerial servant, who confessed to child abuse with his 15-year-old step-daughter."

Did that occur in the meeting with Andrea and Evelyn, and yourself and Elder Clarke all present?

A. That is what we are referring to. Correct.

Q. And it says:

> "And he confessed to touching the breast of his stepdaughter while she was sleeping. She awoke, et cetera, et cetera."

You did not put in the letter, the word "inadvertent." Is that true?

A. Mike actually composed the letter. And my recollection of the letter, I don't know if it was used or not.

Q. You signed the letter. If we see page 2, you signed the letter.

MR. McCABE: Objection; the document speaks for itself.

THE COURT: Let's let the witness take a look at the document.

THE WITNESS: Michael Clarke signed the letter.

BY MR. SIMONS:

Q. Did you review the letter before it was sent?

A. I don't have a recollection that I reviewed it, but I'm sure I did.

Q. So your recollection is that Mr. Kendrick said "inadvertent." The report does not refer to that. Do you have a specific recollection as you sit here today, many years later, that Mr. Kendrick said that this was an inadvertent touching?

A. Yes. That was the impression that I got during the meeting many years later.

Q. And your impression of that, is that, based on a specific recollection, that that is what he told you?

A. Yes.

Q. Even after this time, you recall that he told you that it was inadvertent?

A. That's what I recall.

Q. And so you knew that he had lied to you about that?

A. He did not divulge the full truth. That's true.

Q. Is that another word for "lie"?

A. It probably is.

Q. Reading here:

"Brother Kendrick thought since he was sorry and his family was willing to forget the abuse, he would not have to report it to the congregation elders."

Did you think that was a lie?

A. That -- I believe that's the way he explained it to Mike. That's the way he felt.

Q. Do you recall him saying that with you present?

A. I don't think that became an issue because he had already confessed to Mike.

Q. More to the focus of my question, which I apologize for being unclear about, but did you think he lied when he said that he was sorry?

A. I believed him when he said he was sorry.

Q. It says that:

"He said that his conscience continued to bother him."

And I think you have already told us that you did not believe that.

A. Well, it didn't line up with what the circumstances were. It seemed more was involved.

Q. And so you knew that was a lie as well?

A. That he was not being completely truthful. Correct.

Q. And we call that a lie?

A. You could. You could call it not being truthful and trying to protect himself.

Q. All right. Thank you.

Did you report to Watchtower New York that Mr. Kendrick had not been truthful with you?

A. We did not address that issue, no.

Q. Why not?

A. Well, we felt that it wasn't -- wasn't -- probably, we had the idea that it wasn't necessary at that time.

Q. Do you recall specifically why you did not report that Mr. Kendrick was not being truthful with you to Watchtower New York?

A. No.

Q. Did you feel some degree of sympathy for your friend, Mr. Kendrick?

A. No. If he is a child abuser, he should be dealt with, without a doubt.

Q. What did Andrea tell you had happened?

A. Andrea agreed with the situation that Jonathan -- I think we encouraged Andrea to come, and she did not contradict anything that was said between either Evelyn, Jonathan or Andrea. They agreed.

Q. Do you recall Andrea saying anything?

A. I can't recall any specific thing that she said.

Q. But your general recollection is that she agreed with everything that Jonathan Kendrick said?

A. Yeah. If there was anything out of the ordinary, I would have remembered that she said, "Hey, that's not the way that it happened."

Q. Was Andrea a quiet girl?

A. Probably. Around me, she was quiet.

Q. Isn't it true that Andrea told you that Mr. Kendrick had given her some Vicodin that night?

A. No. That never came up in that meeting.

Q. Isn't it true that she told you that this abuse happened in her bed and not on the couch?

A. No, that didn't happen.

Q. Isn't it true that she said that Jonathan Kendrick was watching TV next to her?

A. They never brought that up.

Q. Isn't it true that Andrea told you in this meeting, and Elder Clarke, that Jonathan Kendrick had touched her breast skin-to-skin?

A. He didn't say that.

Q. Did she say that?

A. She didn't say that.

Q. And isn't it true that she said that he had put his hand into her underwear?

A. No. That never came up.

Q. What did Evelyn say in this meeting?

A. She corroborated the story. There was never any objection that we fielded on her part or Andrea's part.

Q. Isn't it true that Evelyn told you that shortly after the abuse occurred that Andrea had come out of the bathroom crying and told her mother what had happened?

A. I don't remember that during the meeting. I think Evelyn was asleep, the impression I'm getting, and I don't know when she found out about it. Maybe she went in and woke her up.

Q. Did Evelyn disagree with anything that Mr. Kendrick said?

A. Not to my recollection.

Q. Did you feel that it was important for you to get to the truth of what had happened?

A. Yes.

Q. And did you talk to Andrea separately from Jonathan Kendrick?

A. No, we did not.

Q. Did you talk to Evelyn separately from Jonathan Kendrick?

A. No, we did not.

Q. Now, as we have already heard, you had received, over the years, quite a bit of information from Awake and Watchtower Magazines on the subject of child and sexual abuse. Correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And if we could look at Exhibit 17. Before we show it. Exhibit 17 is in evidence as well, from January 22, '85?

Do you have any objection --

MR. SCHNACK: No.

MR. SIMONS: -- to showing it.

THE COURT: Mr. Simons, is it for identification only?

MR. SIMONS: Well, it is more of admission, and if there is an objection, I will have to do foundation.

MR. McCABE: There is no objection, your Honor.

MR. SIMONS: May it be admitted?

MR. McCABE: It may be.

THE COURT: 17 is now in.

(Whereupon, Defendant's Exhibit Number 17 was admitted into evidence)

BY MR. SIMONS:

Q. During the time that you were an elder, would you read every Awake?

A. I would try to.

Q. It is part of your obligation as an elder, isn't it?

A. Yes.

Q. And part of the weekly Bible studies and the studies that you do is to study the Awake and the articles in it?

A. To read them over, yes.

Q. So you would have read and been familiar with this 1985 Awake issue. Correct?

A. Correct.

Q. And if we could look at page 4. Do you have page 4?

A. I do.

Q. Down at the bottom it says:

"Sue was molested by a man who was running a church group. He ran a youth club. Everybody agreed that he was very pleasant. But he sexually abused Sue and other girls."

You knew, in 1993, when you went to the Kendrick home, that persons in religious groups can use the religious group as a way to get children for sexual molestation.

A. Yes.

Q. And sad as it is, that is a fact of life, that you knew long before the meeting in the Kendrick house?

A. Yes.

Q. And you knew these people can be very pleasant, like Mr. Kendrick?

A. Yes.

Q. And you knew that --

Let's look at page 5.

At the top of page 5 in that first column, you knew that, in most cases, children were molested by people they know and trust. Correct?

A. That's what research shows, yes.

Q. And you knew back in '85 and from then on that that made protecting children more difficult.

A. Yes.

Q. And you also knew that sexual abuse may be described as playful or affectionate conduct. Correct?

A. Correct.

Q. Did Jonathan Kendrick ever have playful or affectionate conduct with other children in the congregation?

A. No. Not that I was aware of.

Q. Something you never observed?

A. Right.

Q. You did try, after this meeting at the Conti house, to observe him closely?

A. Yes.

Q. But that's not something that you ever observed?

A. Correct.

Q. Let's look at page 8. In this part that says: If the Worst Should Happen.

You knew in 1985 and thereafter that:

"First, the child and other children too must be protected from any further abuse. This must be done whatever the cost."

You were aware of that.

A. Yes.

Q. What did you do to protect Andrea from further abuse?

A. We removed Jonathan as a ministerial servant. And at that meeting, we tried to comfort Andrea and let her know that she was simply a victim. She wasn't at fault. She wasn't the reason. But we are very sad that she had become a victim of child abuse.

Q. Because this abuse occurred in the home of a congregation member and members, how would removing Mr. Kendrick as a ministerial servant have protected Andrea from further abuse?

A. Well, we hoped that our meeting protected Andrea from further abuse.

Q. Did you provide any advice to Evelyn Kendrick in how to keep Andrea safe in the future?

A. I can't -- it is hard to remember everything way back there. But I would assume that I told her that it is important to set propriety in the house, rules of conduct, and that it would be inappropriate for Jonathan to be in a room alone with Andrea.

But I can't remember saying that. But I hope I would have.

Q. Did you tell Evelyn Kendrick at that meeting that this was her fault?

A. No.

Q. Did you tell her any words to the effect that it was partly her fault?

A. No.

Q. Let us look at the October -- before we bring it up, the October 8, 1993 Awake Magazine, that is Exhibit 37.

Is that stipulated into evidence?

MR. McCABE: So stipulated, your Honor.

THE COURT: All right. Thirty-seven is in.

(Whereupon, Plaintiff's Exhibit Number 37 was admitted into evidence)

BY MR. SIMONS:

Q. This issue of Awake is dated October 8, 1993. Correct?

A. Correct.

Q. And you would have received it and reviewed it?

A. Yes.

Q. Studied it?

A. Yes.

Q. Tried to do what is taught in there?

A. Correct.

Q. And this was just about a month before your meeting at the Kendrick household?

A. Correct.

Q. And if we could look at page 4.

You knew looking down on page 4 here on the second paragraph that:

"Adult society often unwittingly corroborates with child abusers. How so? By refusing to be aware of this danger and by fostering a hush-hush attitude about it."

You knew that. Right?

A. Yes.

Q. And did you tell anyone in the congregation, the parents in the congregation who have an obligation to protect their children, that Jonathan Kendrick had sexually molested a child?

A. There was no need to. If we, upon observing Jonathan Kendrick, we saw him isolating a child, we saw him getting close to a child, then we would inform the parents.

Q. Well, you didn't see anything with regards to how Jonathan Kendrick had abused Andrea. Correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And you knew from these publications that child abusers operate in secret. Correct?

A. Correct.

Q. And you knew that they don't usually have witnesses to child sex abuse. Correct?

A. Correct.

Q. And you knew that Jonathan Kendrick was continuing to be active in the congregation. Right?

A. He was removed as a ministerial servant.

Q. But he was still a member in good standing?

A. After he was removed, he was placed on restrictions.

Q. Was he a member in good standing?

A. No, not at that time.

Q. Did the congregation know that he was on restrictions?

A. They probably were aware of it because he would be restricted from commenting. They probably noticed that.

Q. Were they aware of the fact that he posed a threat to children of sexual abuse?

A. We didn't see that he posed a threat to children.

Q. And you, therefore, kept a hush-hush attitude about his sexual abuse of Andrea?

MR. McCABE: Objection; argumentative.

THE COURT: Overruled.

THE WITNESS: Well, you are trying to use the "hush-hush attitude" as if we were a secret society, but we are the ones that published this. And it --

Let me get back to my thought.

It --

Could you repeat your last thought? I lost my thought.

BY MR. SIMONS:

Q. Let me just withdraw it.

Let's look at the last sentence of this paragraph we are looking at:

"Ignorance and misinformation and silence give safe haven to abusers, not their victims."

You knew that. Correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, we have heard that the parents are the primary protectors of their children in Jehovah's Witnesses. Correct?

A. Correct.

Q. And to do that, parents need to know what risks they are going to protect their children against?

A. Correct.

Q. But they did not know in this congregation that one of the risks to protect their children against was that Jonathan Kendrick had already sexually molested one child?

A. They do know this material that we are referring to, and they should have studied this and been aware. And if they saw any danger in the congregation, that this would alert them to the danger.

Q. Well, we know that these child sexual abusers -- and we knew in 1993 from the article in the Awake that these child sexual abusers don't necessarily give out clues. They operate in secret.

Didn't we know that?

A. Yes.

Q. And so the best way to allow parents to protect their children in the congregation is to identify for them the individuals who are positively identified already as having sexually molested a child.

Don't you agree?

A. How about identifying the traits of individuals. And you can look at a person, and if he shows those traits, and then you have a suspicion, don't let your child go with that. If you have a suspicion, you are under no obligation to let your child go with that person.

Q. Well, from the last Awake Magazine that we looked at, we know that one of those traits might be they are a pleasant, well-liked church group leader?

A. That's true. That has happened.

Q. Wouldn't it have been much more helpful to the parents in the congregation to know what to look for with Jonathan Kendrick and to protect their own children if they knew that he had sexually molested a child?

A. I think this information gives them good ammunition to look at individuals to see how they line up to these situations, and if they would want to trust their children with them. And they can make a call on that.

Q. Let's look up the next part of page 4.

Sexually Molested.

This references:

"The Catholic Conference of Bishops concluded that it was a general conspiracy of silence that allowed gross child abuse to persist among the Catholic clergy for decades."

And you knew that in 1993 of October. Correct?

A. Correct.

Q. That's all for that exhibit. Thank you.

Did you know in 1993 that sexual molestation of a child was a secular crime?

A. Yes.

Q. And did you know -- I think it was said earlier that you offered to the Kendricks -- Evelyn and Andrea -- that they could go to the police if they chose. Correct?

A. Correct.

Q. Did you encourage them to go to the police?

A. We didn't encourage them; we didn't discourage them. It was up to them.

Q. If the police had contacted you regarding what was admitted by Jonathan Kendrick in this meeting, would you have told them?

A. I would first call Legal.

Q. Now, Mr. Abrahamson, in fairness to you, all of your instruction and training and education in how to address child sexual abuse when it came to your congregation came to you through Watchtower New York?

A. Correct.

Q. And it is true that this was not the first instance of child sexual abuse that you had been called upon to look into?

A. I believe it may have been one of the first.

Q. All right. Let's see if your deposition at page 130, line 3 through 7?

MR. McCABE: Can we have a minute before that is shown, your Honor.

THE COURT: Sure.

MR. McCABE: What line it is, counsel?

MR. SIMONS: Three through seven.

MR. McCABE: 130?

MR. SIMONS: Yes. Page 130. Am I on the right page? Sexual abuse.

MR. McCABE: I don't seem to have it. Sexual abuse.

Your Honor, I'm going to object. Can we approach the bench?

THE COURT: You may.

(Sidebar discussion at the bench)

(Whereupon, video recording was played)

BY MR. SIMONS:

Q. All right. Had there been other investigations that you had participated in, in your years of service as an elder, which involved allegations of sexual abuse of a child?

A. Yes.

(Whereupon, video recording was stopped)

BY MR. SIMONS:

Q. After this meeting in the Kendrick home, did Jonathan Kendrick continue to go into field service?

A. Yes, he did.

Q. And he would go into field service with other members of the congregation?

A. Yes.

Q. And on occasions, that would include children?

A. No.

Q. Never?

A. Never.

Q. And was Jonathan Kendrick continued to be called "brother" within the Jehovah's Witnesses?

A. Yes.

Q. And he continued to go to homes of people for Bible study?

A. Yes.

Q. And he continued to go to Kingdom Hall, of course?

A. Yes.

Q. Let's talk about the Conti family a little bit, Mr. Abrahamson. You were aware that problems had developed in their marriage?

A. Yes.

Q. And, in fact, Kathleen had stopped coming to activities almost completely in the last year or so of their marriage. Correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And you knew that she was having serious mental health problems? Correct?

A. Correct.

Q. You had observed, yourself, what we might call certain bizarre activity by her?

A. Yes.

Q. What can you describe for us that you had observed?

A. I had observed her not attending the meetings.

Q. And when you did observe her, did you observe activity by her or actions by her or hear words by her, anything that you observed in her that made you feel that she was a person with mental health problems?

A. I can't think of any specifics, no.

Q. Do you have a general impression that her behavior was -- I will use a very lay term, flakey.

A. Well, with Candace's testimony, she did have a difficult time, and apparently she was not a very good mother.

Q. What did you observe in that respect?

A. I just basically observed them when they were at the Kingdom Hall. And she maybe cried or had an emotional upset at times, and perhaps ran out of the Kingdom Hall. I can't even absolutely say I remember that, it happening like that, but it could have happened. It does happen.

Q. So it is fair to say that these many years later -- 17 years later -- you don't really have a recollection of Candace Conti's mother being unable to care for her?

A. Not a serious -- something serious that would prevent her from caring for her daughter.

Q. But you knew that she had stopped coming to the meetings?

A. Yes.

Q. And that was probably for a year or so before the couple divorced?

A. Yes.

Q. So you knew that Candace Conti's mother had stopped coming, not only to meetings, but to field service?

A. Yes.

Q. And to Bible study groups?

A. Right.

Q. And to people's homes for the meetings?

A. Right.

Q. And to social events. Correct?

A. Yes. She apparently did not want to be one of the Jehovah's Witnesses.

Q. And so you knew that she was in no position to be able to protect her daughter from sexual abuse by from someone like Jonathan Kendrick?

MR. McCABE: Objection; calls for a conclusion; speculation.

THE COURT: Sustained.

BY MR. SIMONS:

Q. Now, Neal Conti still continued to come to Jehovah's Witnesses events and meetings and publishings. Correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you recall that there were times that he was unable to do so because he had to stay home with Kathy?

A. It probably happened. I didn't hear maybe why he was missing. But he was missing, I'm sure.

Q. And on those occasions, Candace would sometimes be there by herself?

A. I don't recall that.

Q. Did you pay any particular attention to Candace Conti as an at-risk child within the congregation who someone like Jonathan Kendrick might try to take advantage of?

A. I wouldn't single her out as one that -- she was a happy fun-loving child as I recall.

MR. SIMONS: Nothing further, your Honor. Thank you.

THE COURT: Mr. McCabe?

MR. McCABE: Thank you, your Honor.

CROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. McCABE:

Q. Mr. Abrahamson, where do you live?

A. I live in Fremont.

Q. What kind of dwelling do you live in? Apartment complex? Single-family dwelling?

A. In a single family dwelling.

Q. How many houses are on your particular street or block?

A. Our block is short. It's probably just 25 houses. Twelve on each side.

Q. Do you know your neighbors?

A. Yeah, for the most part.

Q. Do they know you?

A. Yeah.

Q. Are you married?

A. I am.

Q. What is your wife's name?

A. Leslie.

Q. Do you have any children?

A. We have four children.

Q. Do you still have them?

A. Yeah, we do. They are not at home, but we still have them.

Q. How old are they?

A. Thirty-six down to 27.

Q. Are your children married?

A. Three of them are married; one is not.

Q. Where did you go to high school?

A. I went to high school in Palo Alto High School.

Q. Did you participate in any sports or any activities in high school?

A. A little bit of basketball.

Q. And when did you graduate?

A. In the Class of '72.

Or, no.

Yes, it was the Class of '72.

Q. 1972?

A. Or '70. Might be '70. I'm sorry.

Q. Well, we won't hold you to that. So sometime in the seventies you graduated from high school?

A. Yeah. I'm trying to think of what class it was.

Q. Did you go to any other educational institution after you graduated from Palo Alto High School?

A. No, I did not.

Q. Are you employed?

A. Yes, I am.

Q. What do you do for employment?

A. I do janitorial.

Q. What kind of janitorial work do you do?

A. Office buildings.

Q. When do you do your work?

A. In the evening, generally.

Q. How long have you been doing that?

A. About 40 years.

Q. Has that been your principle occupation since you left high school?

A. Yes.

Q. And you own your own business?

A. Yes.

Q. Mr. Simons asked you some details about your being an elder. Tell us, when were you baptized into the Jehovah's Witnesses?

A. I was baptized in 1970.

Q. How old were you?

A. I was 17.

Q. And where did you attend meetings at that time?

A. At that time, we were in the Palo Alto

Congregation.

Q. When did you move to the North Fremont Congregation?

A. We moved in 1986.

Q. And when you moved in 1986, had you already been appointed an elder in the Palo Alto?

A. Yes.

Q. And tell us how you get to be an elder?

A. Well, there are scriptural qualifications that are outlined in scriptures such as First Timothy, Chapter 3. And these qualifications must be met before an individual like myself would be recommended as an elder.

Q. And who recommends you to be an elder?

A. The body of elders.

Q. So the already existing elders?

A. It's already existing.

Q. Who do they make the recommendation to?

A. They make the recommendation to the Watchtower Society.

Q. How much time do you spend currently in your duties as an elder in the North Fremont Congregation?

A. I spend about 20 hours a week.

Q. And was that true back in the mid-1990s when the details of this case occurred?

A. Yes.

Q. Does it vary from time to time?

A. Oh, yeah.

Q. Do you sometimes spend more time?

A. Yes.

Q. Are you paid for your work as an elder?

A. No.

Q. So your work is voluntary in the congregation?

A. Yes.

Q. And do you get any training as an elder after you are appointed?

A. Yes. We do have schools that we go to. I just completed a week course, five days, and it was an intense Bible study. And we went through a lot of points on shepherding, teaching, evangelizing.

Q. And do you have any other training that you get from Watchtower on being an elder, other than these schools?

A. Well, we have a ministry school that we have each week at our meeting.

Q. And what does that train you to do?

A. That trains you to be a better evangelizer, better teacher, better shepherd.

Q. Okay. And you have heard some talk about letters that the body of elders gets from the Watchtower Bible and Tract Society.

Does that provide also education instruction?

A. Absolutely.

Q. And do you read those letters?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. You have also seen some information about the Watchtower and Awake Magazines back in the '90s. How did you obtain those magazines?

A. The magazines would come through the mail by subscription.

Q. Do they still come that way?

A. Not any longer.

Q. How do you get them now?

A. At our Kingdom Hall.

Q. And back in the '90s, were members of the congregation encouraged to have a subscription of the Watchtower Magazine?

A. Yes. Most congregation members did have a subscription. So they got the magazine a little bit before the date.

Q. When you say "a little bit before the date," how in advance of the publication date would you get your subscription?

A. Probably a month before the publication date, maybe even longer.

Q. Now, we talked, too, about your memory of what happened in November of 1993. Do you have a clear memory of going to the Kendrick home for that meeting?

A. Yes. Yes. I have a clear memory of that. I have a clear memory of where we sat in the house.

Q. Where did you sit in the house?

A. It was in the kitchen.

Q. Did you bring anything with you to that meeting?

A. Yes. I brought my Bible with me.

Q. Did Mr. Clarke bring his Bible?

A. Yes.

Q. And did you use the Bible during that meeting?

A. Absolutely.

Q. Do you recall how the meeting started?

A. I started with a prayer.

Q. Okay.

A. And knowing their circumstances, I wanted to make sure they felt relaxed and comfortable. So I do remember in my prayer I prayed that, especially, Andrea, that she could relax -- it might be embarrassing for her. It might be hard for her to tell. But we wanted to know the truth about what happened.

And then for Evelyn, that she probably felt devastated by the sexual abuse on a couple of different levels; the fact that she is a wife, and the fact that she is a mother too. So I wanted to make sure I included her in the prayer.

Q. And do you remember saying that prayer out loud?

A. Yes.

Q. And this is all sitting around the kitchen table?

A. Yes.

Q. How long did you know Evelyn Kendrick?

A. Probably, I would say about four years.

Q. Was she a quiet woman?

A. She was not as loud as her husband.

Q. Was she able to speak her mind?

A. She was. She was a strong woman that way.

Q. I would like to show you an exhibit -- Number 98. I believe it is in evidence. I believe it is your Exhibit 9.

MR. SIMONS: My Exhibit 9.

THE COURT: No objection?

MR. SIMONS: I think it is in evidence already. It is Exhibit 9. It was a dual exhibit.

THE COURT: Out of abundance of caution, without question, it is now in.

(Whereupon, Plaintiff's Exhibit Number 9 and Defendant's Exhibit Number 98 was admitted into evidence)

BY MR. McCABE:

Q. You saw this with Mr. Simons showed it to you?

A. Correct.

Q. Did you write the letter?

A. I did not write the letter.

Q. Did you sign the letter?

A. It appears that I did not sign the letter.

Q. Were you aware of it being sent from the North Fremont Congregation in 1993 to the Watchtower?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you discuss the letter with Mr. Clarke?

A. Right.

Q. Did you have a discussion with him, an exchange back and forth about what you would put in the letter, or did you just read the letter after it was typed up.

A. My recollection's not real clear about that. I'm not sure how that came about.

Q. Does the letter mention anything about Vicodin?

A. Anything about what?

Q. Vicodin.

A. Vicodin? No. It never was mentioned.

Q. Why was it not mentioned in the letter?

A. Because we did not hear that when we went on the call.

Q. So Andrea did not bring up that she had taken a Vicodin when you visited the Kendrick home in November of 1993?

A. Not at all.

Q. Did Evelyn bring anything up about a Vicodin when you were there?

A. No.

Q. Was there any discussion between yourself, Mr. Clarke, and the Kendricks, about the extent of the abuse of Andrea Kendrick, other than the touching of her breasts?

A. That was it.

Q. How large is the congregation in North Fremont?

A. It is about a hundred and twelve publishers currently.

Q. What do you mean by "publishers"?

A. The ones that are publishing the Good News. They're active witnesses. You might see them in your neighborhood going door-to-door. So they are a publisher with their book bag and talking to the neighbors.

Q. And that is a practice that you have engaged in since you have been a Witness?

A. Yes.

Q. And most Witnesses do the same thing?

A. Yes.

Q. What is your position on the body of elders?

A. I am a service overseer.

Q. Could you tell the jury what that means to be service overseer?

A. Okay. We refer to our work as evangelizers as field service. We go from door-to-door. We go out into the field. And it probably is an offshoot from going out and harvesting.

That jesus said, "Our harvest is the world."

And the field is a world. So we go out and try to Witness, door and door, to all that we can.

Q. Okay. And what are your responsibilities as a service overseer on the body of elders?

A. As service overseers, things that are related to the field ministry, such as make sure we have literature so that they can use it in the ministry.

Make sure that we have territory that we can go to, and we won't be going to one territory until we complete the other territories. So we do it in a systematic way, so people don't feel overwhelmed, like we are coming too often, to try to only come after we complete one territory.

And any other matters that are related to the ministry field service. So I would be the service overseer taking care of those things.

Q. Before people in your congregation go out to neighborhoods, do they have a meeting somewhere to discuss what they are going to do?

A. Yes. We call that a meeting for field service.

Q. And where is that meeting held?

A. Generally, it is held at the Kingdom Hall.

Q. Okay. Do you preside over that meeting from time to time?

A. Yes.

Q. How often?

A. I preside over that meeting, probably, twice a week.

Q. Okay. Was that true back in 1993?

A. It might have been more often, but that would be a good guess. Probably twice a week.

Q. How about '94 and '95?

A. At least twice a week, probably more.

Q. And in that meeting that you preside over as a field service overseer, do you arrange groups for people? Do you assign partners? How do you do it?

A. Yes, we assign partners. Let's say the jury was my group. So maybe the first four would go together, the second four would go together, and the last six might go together, and the couple, we can split up.

Not that they were a couple. We wouldn't split up families, but he would go with the first group, she would go with the second group.

Q. Do people ever come to that meeting for field service who already have partners?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. Would you ever assign back in the 1990s a single male to work with a single female in a car to go alone?

A. No. That would not be appropriate.

Q. Would you ever assign someone's child to work with another adult member of the congregation, let's say a member of the opposite sex, back in the 1990s?

A. No.

Q. Why not?

A. It wouldn't be appropriate. And articles like this, there is always that possibility of child molestation. So we want to protect our children. We love our children.

Q. And when you say "articles like this," what are you referring to?

A. The article on molestation -- child molestation, and the fact that you can protect your children.

Q. Did you ever have an occasion back in the 1990s where parents would drop off a child or children to go out in the field of ministry and not accompany them themselves?

A. It was rare. And if it happened, then we would talk to the parent to help them to appreciate that the children are their responsibility. They come out with their children. They don't drop them off for someone else to care for.

Q. Did you ever assign Jonathan Kendrick to conduct one of these meetings for field service?

A. No.

Q. Did you ever assign Jonathan Kendrick to work with Candace Conti in the field ministry?

A. No.

Q. Did you ever see Jonathan Kendrick working in the field ministry with Candace Conti?

A. No.

Q. Now, you mentioned that there was five meetings a week?

A. Correct.

Q. A meeting every day of the week or what?

A. Okay. We have two meetings that we consider on Sunday, and then the three meetings are on a date during the mid-week.

Q. So, really, you only have two dates from which you conduct all five meetings?

A. Correct.

Q. And how long -- when you have the three meetings, how long does that last?

A. It lasts about an hour and a half.

Q. And the two meetings?

A. About an hour and a half as well.

Q. What are the two meetings that you have on Sunday?

A. The two meetings on Sunday are:

(1) we have a discussion of the Watchtower Magazine that is an hour. And prior to that, we have a public talk. Talks designed for people that would come into the congregation. They would get a good understanding of what the Bible says on a particular subject.

Q. And when you say a "Watchtower discussion," what do you mean by that?

A. That we receive a study issue of our Watchtower Magazine, and then we study this magazine and prepare ourselves each week to come to the meeting. And we can offer comments on that issue of the Watchtower that we are studying.

For example, last week, it just happened to be "Don't look at the things behind."

And it referenced Lot's wife, who turned into a pillar of salt, if you might remember, because she did look at the things behind. And how can we apply that to today? How can we not have that attitude of looking behind. And it was an enjoyable study.

Q. How is it conducted?

A. There is a Watchtower study conductor. And so he asks the questions, and then the audience is allowed to give comments. And then we have a reader that reads each paragraph before it is discussed.

Q. So can children answer in that discussion?

A. We have a lot of our children answering that discussion.

Q. How many children do you have presently in the North Fremont Congregation?

A. We have, probably, 30 that are under twelve.

Q. Is that in addition to the hundred members?

A. Yeah. Most of those would not be publishers, yeah.

Q. So what would be your attendance at a typical Sunday meeting?

A. Our attendance would usually be over a hundred, a hundred and twelve or fifteen.

Q. Let's talk about the Conti family for a minute. Did you know them in 1994?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Who did the family consist of?

A. It consisted of Kathy, the mother; Candace, the daughter; and Neal, the father.

Q. Were there any other children ever in attendance at the meetings with the Conti's?

A. Yes. They had a -- Neal had a son from another marriage, and I believe his name was Ricky.

Q. Did he attend meetings with the Conti family too?

A. When he was with the Conti family, they came to the meetings and they brought him with them as well.

Q. Was there ever a time that you observed Candace Conti at a meeting in the Kingdom Hall on a Sunday by herself, without one of her parents?

A. I never observed her alone.

Q. Did you ever observe her on a weeknight meeting at the Kingdom Hall without one of her parents being present?

A. No. And if I did, I would wonder how did she get here.

Q. Did you ever observe her being dropped off at the Kingdom Hall by one or both of her parents for a meeting for field service?

A. No.

Q. Now, during this meeting with the Kendrick family, did you end it with prayer?

A. Yes.

Q. Before you ended, did you give any scriptural admonitions to Mr. Kendrick about his behavior?

A. Yes.

Q. And did you do that in front of Andrea and in front of Evelyn Kendrick?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you recall what any of that admonition was?

A. Well, specifically, I can't remember what scriptures we used. But it might have been scriptures such as those that practice the works of the flesh, which include fornication, uncleanness, lude conduct will not inherit God's kingdom.

So Jonathan was in store for not inheriting God's kingdom if he were to continued with the abuse.

Q. Did he tell you whether or not he intended to continue the abuse?

A. He said that he was not going to, that he was ashamed of what he had done, and he would not continue, he would absolutely not do the abuse to anyone.

Q. Did you believe him when he said he was ashamed of what he had done?

A. I did believe him.

Q. Is that what led you to conclude that his touching of Andrea had been more than inadvertent?

A. Yes.

Q. Did he provide any other details of what he had done?

A. Not to my recollection.

Q. He didn't tell you that this touching took place in Andrea's bedroom while she was asleep?

A. No. He said it was on the couch, that she was on the couch.

Q. After this meeting, did you meet back at the Kingdom Hall with the body of elders at some time?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you personally partake in that meeting?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you personally inform the elders of what you learned at that meeting with the Kendrick family?

A. Correct.

Q. What did you tell them?

A. We told them what Jonathan told us, that Andrea was asleep on the couch, and he came in and touched her breasts and she woke up.

Q. Did the elders come to any conclusion after you informed them of this fact?

A. Yes. They concluded that no longer was he qualified to serve as a ministerial servant.

Q. And was he then removed at that time?

A. Yes.

Q. And when a person is removed as a ministerial servant, how often does that happen in your experience in the years that you have been in the North Fremont Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses?

A. It is rare. Offhand, I can't think of anyone else, but I know there is. There is others, but nobody comes to my mind. So that is rare.

Q. Announcing someone is no longer serving as a ministerial servant in the congregation can be a significant announcement?

A. It is a big deal.

Q. Do you recall after this meeting that -- did the Kendrick family stay together?

A. They did stay together.

Q. Do you know for how long?

A. I think it was a couple years after this meeting that they separated and divorced.

Q. Did you ever learn, personally, after the meeting at the Kendrick home that Evelyn and Andrea reported the matter to the police?

A. I did not know at the time that they did.

Q. A couple years later you found out?

A. Yes. A couple of years later I found out.

Q. Do you know when?

A. I do know when we wrote a letter to the Oakley Congregation. I knew at that time.

Q. Do you recall when that was?

A. 1998.

Q. But you didn't know it in 1994?

A. No.

Q. The Fremont Police never contacted you in the 1994?

A. No.

Q. District Attorney's office never contacted you?

A. No.

Q. What about the Child Protective Services?

A. No.

Q. How about the Alameda County Probation offices?

A. No.

Q. Do you recall how you learned that they had gone to the police?

A. That they had gone to the police?

Q. Yes. How did you learn?

A. We wrote a letter of introduction to the Oakley Congregation. In that letter we stated that they did go to the police. And I think it is one of the other elders that came by that knowledge, because I did not come by that knowledge until after the meeting.

Q. So Evelyn never kept you informed?

A. Didn't inform me personally, no.

Q. Was Evelyn a member of the congregation in North Fremont at the time of this meeting?

A. I think she probably would have been. She wasn't actively coming to the meetings at that time.

Q. What about Andrea?

A. Andrea -- I don't think that Andrea was attending the meetings either at that time.

Q. Do you recall when it was that the Kendrick family broke up? When did Jonathan and Evelyn separate?

A. I would think it would be around '95, '96.

Q. So you are not sure when?

A. I'm not sure when.

Q. But it was a significant time after your visit with Mr. Clarke to the Kendrick home?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you know where Jonathan lived after the separation?

I'm speaking of Jonathan Kendrick.

A. Jonathan Kendrick. I believe that he lived in the garage of the Francis home, the Francis family.

Q. And who is the Francis family?

A. They were a member of our congregation at that time.

Q. And who is it?

A. Rod Francis, Claudia Francis, and they had two sons.

Q. And Rod would be the father and husband?

A. Yes.

Q. Was he a member of the body of elders in 1993?

A. In 1993, I believe that he was.

Q. Do you know how long he had been with the body of elders of the North Fremont Congregation in 1993?

A. I don't think it was too long. It was a short time -- months -- years -- a few years.

Q. Do you know how long Mr. Kendrick resided in the garage of the Francis family?

A. I don't know exactly.

Q. After this meeting with the Kendrick family in November of 1993, did you ever observe Candace Conti sitting on Jonathan Kendrick's lap at the Kingdom Hall?

A. No.

Q. Did you ever observe Candace Conti sitting on his lap during a meeting at the Kingdom Hall?

A. Absolutely not.

Q. Did you ever observe her sitting on his lap before or after?

A. No.

Q. During the same time period, did you ever observe Jonathan Kendrick giving Candace Conti a big bear hug in the Kingdom Hall?

A. No.

Q. You never saw anything like that?

A. No.

Q. Did you ever observe Jonathan Kendrick leaving the Kingdom Hall property with Candace Conti alone in his vehicle?

A. No. Absolutely not.

MR. McCABE: Your Honor, might this be a good time to take a break?

THE COURT: It is. We will take a break. We will take our lunch break. I will see everybody back here promptly at 1:30.

And counsel, let me also tell you that this coming Friday, I'm going to be performing a number of additional functions in this particular matter. So Friday is on me.

I will be working on this case listening to things and having decisions. You will have the day off. We will keep on our same time frame that I have given to you relative to when the case will be over.

Remember, the following Thursday and Friday I'm in Sacramento with judicial responsibilities also. But I'm not changing anything I told you as to the expected date. We want this to go to your consideration for decision, but I do want to tell you about this Friday.

So we will see everybody at 1:30.

(Whereupon, the following proceedings were heard outside the presence of jurors)

THE COURT: There is a differences in the books I want to get cleaned up.

MR. SIMONS: Yes. On the Awakes, you are right. My apologies.

THE COURT: No apology necessary. I just want to make sure my record is in good order.

MR. SIMONS: Yes. No. It's 17 and 37 are the defense numbers.

THE COURT: And I agree. I just want to make sure we cleaned up the record.

Now, in the same vein, I have quite a lunch hour. I do want to make a decision I need to make in terms of getting witnesses this afternoon. It was originally referenced in Plaintiff's Number 10. There is a letter. First of all, I want to find it, so I can take a look at it during my so-called lunch hour.

It is the Defense 99. Do we agree, Mr. Simons?

MR. SIMONS: Yes.

THE COURT: All right. So I will take a look at Defense 99. And I will come back and greet you all at 1:15, so I can do whatever we need to do.

(Lunch recess)

(Whereupon, the following proceedings were heard outside the presence of jurors)

THE COURT: Back on the record in the matter of the Candace Conti versus The Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York Inc., et al. I am getting better relative to the joint presentation here.

Regarding, I believe, the letter that counsel is wishing to address -- I could be wrong. But it seems to me it could be the filter I used was Defendant's 99.

And then according to the joint exhibit book that is Plaintiff's 10. So Plaintiff's 10 and Defendant's 99. Can we at least agree on that? Can I hear a symphony of yes?

MR. SIMONS: Yes, your Honor.

THE COURT: I had the same problem we had a little bit earlier today. The one layer I'm looking at has a significant redaction already superimposed.

Does that lead me to believe that you would agree, at least, to redacting that portion which starts apparently after the word quote uncleanness, end of quote, and then goes down to the trust above.

Is that an agreed upon redaction?

MR. SIMONS: Yes.

THE COURT: Now, what would you like me to do? What is the nature of the argument? Because not having seen the unredacted letter, I'm not sure what the debate is about.

MR. SIMONS: The debate -- let's all get on the same page here.

THE COURT: Mr. McCabe?

MR. McCABE: Yes, your Honor. The two unredacted paragraphs we would like to see redacted are the second and third letter and they are talking about the religious discipline to be imposed by the congregation or not to be imposed by the congregation.

THE COURT: It may be that again -- and I may be repeating myself -- the letter I'm looking at already has that. I don't have another version.

MR. McCABE: I'm sorry, your Honor. I have two here.

THE COURT: All right. I see. And actually I don't have any thoroughly unredacted version. But defense counsel just gave me that same letter, December 3.

The only thing redacted from that is paragraph 4 after, quote, in the future, end of quote.

Now whose presentation is that? Is that Plaintiff's?

MR. SIMMONS: As to the fourth paragraph, your Honor?

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. SIMMONS: The deleted paragraph is by agreement.

THE COURT: That's by agreement. All right. Now on the bottom of the principle, I'm going to bounce back again. So we have got paragraph 4 by agreement, and then the debate goes as to paragraphs 2 and 3. Correct?

MR. SIMMONS: Correct.

MR. McCABE: Correct.

THE COURT: All right. Let's go to defense counsel.

MR. McCABE: Your Honor, both of these paragraphs, to me, speak of the disciplinary procedures that the religion would take based upon the definition of the sin, and what he confessed to.

And in previous rulings, we were going to leave out anything to do with judicial and duty to disfellowship and/or recruiting, which these two paragraphs don't specifically state that that's what they're talking about.

THE COURT: Mr. Simons, to you.

MR. SIMMONS: Your Honor, I think, as to paragraph 2, the language has the language of the confession in it, and then --

THE COURT: I'm not troubled by that.

MR. SIMMONS: -- and then since this incident is known by outside members of the family, I would agree -- I think that from where it is appropriate forward from the rest of the sentence, I have no problem redacting.

But "since the incident is known by outside members of the family" is a significant fact, particularly if we are going to be mentioning defamation in the suits and that sort of thing in the opening statement as we did.

THE COURT: Okay. And then what is your view of the next paragraph?

MR. SIMMONS: The third paragraph -- you know, my original take was it not be redacted, but as I look at it again, I feel it should.

THE COURT: Thank you. Because that was my opinion on the first read.

So let's go back. I'm going to redact the third paragraph. I think it is in the nature of -- "Essentially, since this incident is known by outside members of the family."

Whose family are we talking about? Are we talking about the occasional family or the immediate family?

MR. McCABE: We are talking about the Kendrick family, and we are talking about Toi Register.

THE COURT: I don't know whom we are talking about. Do you agree with that conceptually?

MR. SIMONS: I don't know about the Toi Register, but it certainly says it is known by outside members of the family, and that, to me, seems to imply that we are talking about the Kendricks and not members of another family.

THE COURT: Give me a moment.

Yeah. I think is quite susceptible to any number of interpretations. Here is what is going to be deleted.

"It's only your repetition and confession to what had happened:"

Starting with the sentence:

"incidence is known by outside members of the family," forward is deleted through the following paragraph.

And then "by your agreement -- "

(Interruption)

All right. So paragraph 4 is in, by your agreement, is deleted, and those will be my orders.

Now, it is going to help me in terms of you, so we don't have to keep doing this: If it is a jointly agreed upon admissible exhibit -- because of the way you set this binder up, dual reference -- Mr. Simons, if it is going to be a jointly-admitted exhibit, just read Plaintiff's 11 and Defendant's 100, or something, so we have a clean record and we don't have all these juxtapositions.

Is that fair?

MR. SIMMONS: Very much so.

THE COURT: All right. The record should reflect, and I will confirm it, my orders as to -- what was that exhibit number? Mr. Simons?

MR. SIMMONS: Yes. It was the one we just discussed earlier that was 10/99.

THE COURT: Okay. I just want something so I can make a record after we discussed it.

MR. SIMMONS: That was 14/101 that we just looked at.

THE COURT: All right. Forgive me. Mr. Simons. Back to you.

Strike that.

Mr. McCabe?

MR. McCABE: I have no more questions, your Honor.

MR. SCHNACK: Your Honor, I will pass the witness.

THE COURT: Anything further of this witness?

MR. SIMMONS: Just briefly, yes.

REDIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. SIMMONS:

Q. Mr. Abrahamson, we talked a lot today with both counsel about all of the different things you did with regard to the congregation and Mr. Kendrick, et cetera. All of the things we talked about today have been things that you did within your scope of your duties as an elder. Correct?

A. Correct.

Q. You mentioned in your cross-examination that you believed that Mr. Kendrick was sincere in his repentance; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. But you knew that he had lied to you about other things?

A. Shaded the truth. Correct.

Q. And weren't you of the understanding that child molesters always say that they are sincere in their repentance?

A. Yes.

Q. And you mentioned Elder Francis, who was an elder during that time. Did Elder Francis have some health issues during this time in the '90s?

A. He currently has some health issues. I don't know if it was during the mid-nineties.

Q. Was there a time, if you recall, back in the mid-nineties, that you recall he was unable to attend to his duties as an elder?

A. Yes, that is true. But it wasn't for health.

Q. But for whatever reasons, which we don't need to hear about, there was a period of time in the mid-90s, '94, '95, '96, in particular that Elder Francis was unable to attend to his duties?

A. Since you are being specific with dates, I would just have to say, I don't know. I'm not sure.

MR. SIMMONS: Thank you. That's all that I have on Redirect.

THE COURT: Mr. McCabe?

MR. McCABE: Nothing.

THE COURT: Mr. Schnack?

MR. SCHNACK: Nothing.

THE COURT: Thank you, sir. You may step down.

MR. SIMMONS: Your Honor, before we call the next witness, there are three requests for admissions that I'm going to introduce, I assume, by reading?

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. SIMMONS: These requests for admissions are responses are dated December 8th of 2011. They are verified by Gregory Allen on behalf of the Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc., and they are Set 3, commencing with Request for Admission, Number 3.

And I direct you to Watchtower Bible Tract

Society, Number 3:

"Do you admit that during the time he performed services as an elder at the North Congregation Fremont, between January 1st, 1993 and December 31, 1998, Gary Abrahamson was acting as an agent of Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc."

And response is:

"Defendant admits that between January 1, 1993 and December 31, 1998, while Gary Abrahamson was acting within the course and scope of his duties as an elder in the North Congregation Fremont California, he was acting as an agent of Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc."

As to Number 4:

"Do you admit that during the time he performed services as an elder at the North Congregation Fremont, between January 1st, 1993 and December 31st, 1998, Michael Clarke was acting as an agent of Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc."

And the response:

"Defendant admits that between January 1st, 1993 and December 31, 1998, while Michael Clarke is acting within the course and scope of his duties as an elder in the North Congregation Fremont, California he was acting as an agent of Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc."

And our next witness, your Honor, pursuant to Evidence Code 776, would be Mr. Clarke.

THE CLERK: All right, Mr. Clarke. Again, you are being called as an adverse witness under the Evidence Code.

MICHAEL CLARKE,

WAS DULY SWORN TO TELL THE TRUTH BY THE CLERK

AND TESTIFIED AS FOLLOWS:

THE CLERK: Would you please state your name and spell your first and last name for the record?

THE WITNESS: Michael Clarke. M-I-C-H-A-E-L. Clarke. C-L-A-R-K-E.

THE COURT: And, Mr. Clarke if you need water at any time, just let us know.

DIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. SIMMONS:

Q. Good afternoon, Mr. Clarke.

A. Good morning, Mr. Simons.

Q. And you have served and continue to serve as an elder at the North Congregation in Fremont?

A. Yes.

Q. When did you first become an elder in the North Fremont Congregation?

A. 1989.

Q. And had you served as an elder anywhere before that?

A. Yes, in Hayward.

Q. And when did you first become an elder?

A. 1977.

Q. Before serving as an elder, did you serve as a ministerial servant?

A. Yes.

Q. And when did you first commence your service in that capacity?

A. Probably 1974, '75, somewhere around there.

Q. You continue to be an elder today?

A. Yes.

Q. And at North Fremont?

A. Yes.

Q. There, back in the 1990s, were meetings held regularly in the congregation and among the congregation for many purposes. Correct?

A. Meetings held?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes.

Q. And some of these meetings were to study the Bible or to study the teachings of Awake or Watchtower?

A. Yes.

Q. And these meetings would be held in homes. Correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And many of the homes they would be held in would be homes of congregation members other than elders?

A. Yes.

Q. Would you go to all of the meetings, yourself?

A. No.

Q. Would there be one meeting for all of the congregation or would the congregation be broken up into smaller groups for these meetings?

A. Well, the meeting you are referring to would be called a Congregation Bible Study, and it was held in private homes. At the time, we may have had six or seven locations. Most of them held in the homes of elders.

And we had, generally, maybe 15 to 20 that would attend the small groups, 10, 15 total. They were held once a week, generally had one meeting, for an hour.

But the other meetings that you might be referring to were at the Kingdom Hall.

Q. The meetings that were held in the homes, is it correct that an elder would always be present?

A. Yes.

Q. But it would not necessarily be correct that more than one elder would be present?

A. No.

Q. Because there weren't enough elders for all the meetings. Correct?

A. Correct.

Q. And in these different meetings that would be held, the elder would have a lot of responsibilities for example, to chair and conduct the meeting?

A. Yes, he would.

Q. And he would have to make the arrangements for where the meeting was going to be each week?

A. No. It was usually in the same home, usually his home.

Q. What about when the meetings were held in other people's homes -- the congregation member's home?

A. Was there a question there?

Q. Yes. Would an elder have to make the arrangements for those meetings?

A. No. It is pre-arranged. Sometimes it would be there for years.

Q. Who would decide which homes the Bible study meetings would be held in?

A. The body of elders.

Q. Were the Bible study meetings ever held in the Kendrick home?

A. No.

Q. Were they ever held in the Conti home?

A. No.

Q. So for any such meetings that Mr. Kendrick would have attended, he would have had to go someone else's house?

A. Yes.

Q. And the same with Candace Conti?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, do you recall being contacted concerning Jonathan Kendrick having committed some sort of misconduct with his stepdaughter?

A. Yes.

Q. And how did you receive your very first contact on the subject?

A. I believe it was a phone call.

Q. And do you recall who it was from?

A. Mr. Kendrick.

Q. What were you told?

A. That he needed to talk with us about a serious matter.

Q. And did he tell you what the matter was?

A. I think he said inappropriate touching of his stepdaughter, or he might have said just a serious matter. I don't recall exactly. It was just a quick phone call and we set up a meeting.

Q. How long between the phone call and the meeting?

A. We met the same week.

Q. And where did the meeting occur?

A. At the Kendrick home.

Q. Did you know Jonathan Kendrick before you were an elder in Fremont?

A. No.

Q. Was Jonathan Kendrick already a member of the congregation when you came to Fremont?

A. I believe so. Yes. I came in '89, and I think he was already there.

Q. And do you recall, when you first met Mr. Kendrick, what your impression of him was?

A. Just a quiet man. Outgoing, friendly.

Q. Did you like him?

A. Pretty much, yes.

Q. And you call him "quiet." When you say he was a quiet man, what did you mean?

A. He didn't speak a lot. He wasn't a talker, anything like that. Just a quiet man.

Q. In the context of outside of the meetings, did you have some relationship with Mr. Kendrick?

A. No.

Q. Did you, for example, ever go to his home for any reason, other than this meeting after the phone call?

A. Probably a shepherding visit, as we call it. Probably just to get to know the family better. I don't recall if it was myself that went or I went with someone else. It was our practice, then, as it is now to make home visits. That's about the extent of it.

Q. Did you ever have any social contact with Mr. Kendrick?

A. No, I don't think so. I don't recall.

Q. For example, did you and anyone from your family have a dinner, share a meal with Mr. Kendrick and Evelyn Kendrick?

A. I don't recall. I don't think so.

Q. Did you ever meet him at some social occasion at some location other than his house, for example, maybe at the garage of the Conti house?

A. I don't think so. I don't recall. It is a long time ago.

Q. You remember the Conti family?

A. Yes.

Q. And do you remember Candace as a child?

A. Yes.

Q. What do you remember about her?

A. Just a happy little girl.

Q. Do you recall her being a spunky child?

A. I don't know if she'd want me to call her spunky, but she was happy.

Q. And what do you recall about her mother, Kathleen?

A. Not too much. She was a good mother, and she really loved her daughter and still does, I'm sure. I don't have too much of a recollection of her. I know she had a lot of emotional things that she was dealing with that we tried to help her with.

Q. And do you recall at some point in the mid-nineties that those emotional difficulties became overwhelming to her?

A. Yes. We made several visits trying help their marriage.

Q. And what did you observe, if anything, in

Mrs. Conti -- Kathleen, in terms of her conduct or demeanor that you felt evidenced her emotional problems?

A. At times she was happy, and at times she was sad. She had quite a few highs and lows. Some of our visits, she was more positive than at other times.

Q. When you say happy and sad, do you mean outside the range that we might consider to be kind of normal, happy or sad for people?

A. I would say, it's a long road. I just remember our concern for her and for the family and trying to help her through this emotional time.

Q. Did you ever have a concern that she was dysfunctional, unable to care for herself or her family?

A. I don't believe I had a concern like that, no.

Q. What about Neal Conti? Were you friends with him?

A. Yes.

Q. And did you do social events of any kind with Mr. Conti?

A. I don't recall social events. But we spoke at each meeting.

Q. Does that mean the nature of greeting or a more serious or in-depth discussion?

A. Mostly a greeting. How are you today? How has your week been? What happened at work? Have you had any positive experiences in the door-to-door ministry? Things like that.

Q. Would you describe the relationship you had with Mr. Conti as something deeper than just a relationship?

A. No. Not deeper, no.

Q. Let's go back to the meeting at the Kendrick home. Who do you recall being present?

A. Gary Abrahamson, Mr. Kendrick, Mrs. Kendrick, stepdaughter, Andrea, and myself.

Q. And what do you recall being the first thing that happened at the meeting?

A. Well, our pattern -- our habit is to open with a prayer. So I would have had Gary Abrahamson open with a prayer.

Q. What was the next thing that happened?

A. Then we normally will read a scripture or two, trying to set a spiritual tone, and then we invited Mr. Kendrick to tell us why he had us come over.

Q. Now, as you sit here today, even though many years have passed, you still have a recollection of that meeting, don't you?

A. Yes. I reviewed my letter that you have a copy of.

Q. And that helped refresh your recollection?

A. To a degree, yes.

Q. But you also remember sitting in the house?

A. Yes, I remember the chair I sat in. It faced the window.

Q. And do you remember the room it was in?

A. In the kitchen or dinette area.

Q. Do you remember seeing these people in your mind's eye during that meeting?

A. Yes. Very vividly. It's not something you forget.

Q. And would it be fair to say that you have been to hundreds and hundreds of such meetings with different families that may have had some trouble -- not necessarily childhood sexual issues, but some kind of problems over the years?

A. Yes.

Q. And in these hundreds and hundreds of meetings, this one stands out to you vividly.

Why is that?

A. Because it dealt with child abuse.

Q. And you knew, in 1993, at the time of this meeting, that that was a very serious subject?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And what did Mr. Kendrick say when you invited him to speak?

A. He admitted to touching his daughter's chest while she was sleeping on the couch. He claims it was inadvertent, but, nonetheless, he said it happened three or four months previous, and it had been bothering his conscience, even though the family talked about it.

He asked his stepdaughter and his wife for forgiveness. They acknowledged that they had given their forgiveness, and they wanted to move on. And so he confessed to this one-time touching.

Q. You used the word "inadvertent."

Was that Mr. Kendricks's word?

A. Yes. It was his words. Also, the daughter confirmed it.

Q. When you say "the daughter," do you mean Andrea, the stepdaughter?

A. Andrea, the stepdaughter, yes.

Q. And when you say she confirmed it, what do you mean?

A. She acknowledged that in her mind it was inadvertent. I think she used the word "accident." The room was dark, he claims, when he walked in the room, and she was lying on the couch.

Q. Did you believe that Mr. Kendrick was telling you the truth when he said it was inadvertent?

A. No.

Q. Why not?

A. I don't think you can inadvertently do something like that and not know that you are doing it. And that's why we immediately classified this as child abuse and took appropriate steps.

Q. If we could, let's look at your letter of November 15, 1993, which is Exhibit 9/98.

All right. Let's look at page 2 of the letter.

Do you see your signature at the bottom?

A. Yes.

Q. Is it normal that this type of letter to Watchtower New York be signed by two elders?

A. It is now. Back there, one signature was sufficient. But I did talk with Mr. Abrahamson before we mailed it off and made sure I didn't leave anything out.

Q. In your talking with Mr. Abrahamson, did you actually show him the letter?

A. No. I read it to him over the phone.

Q. Okay. So he knew what was in it before it went?

A. Yes.

Q. And did he disagree with you as to any of the proposed language in the letter?

A. I don't recall any disagreement or I would change it.

Q. Did you have to make any changes?

A. No.

Q. Let's go back to page 1.

Now, you told us a few minutes ago that you did not believe Mr. Kendrick when he said it was inadvertent.

Did you inform Watchtower New York that Mr. Kendrick had not been truthful to you?

A. Well, we stated in the letter that we were recommending his deletion as a ministerial servant.

And we also stated in the letter that he had committed child abuse. So we felt that was coincidental.

Q. But did you tell Watchtower New York in your letter that Mr. Kendrick had not been truthful to you?

A. No. Not in those words, no.

Q. Did you see the words "inadvertent" or "accidental" anywhere in the letter?

A. No.

Q. So was it important to you, at the time of the meeting, that Mr. Kendrick had not been candid with you about the full extent of what had happened?

A. It was important, yes, and that's why we stated in the letter that we were recommending his deletion -- no longer qualified. He had committed child abuse. It was clear to us.

Q. But in your letter, you chose not to tell Watchtower New York that he had lied to you in the addition to the conduct that he had committed that he did report?

THE WITNESS: Rephrase that again, please.

I'm not sure what you are asking.

BY MR. SIMMONS:

Q. You chose not to tell Watchtower New York that Mr. Kendrick had not been truthful with you?

A. I don't know if I chose. I just didn't put it in the letter. We felt that what we had in the letter was sufficient.

Q. Did Mr. Kendrick express his repentance to you?

A. Yes.

Q. And did you believe him?

A. Yes.

Q. And you knew from Awake Magazines and other education that you had received that child sexual abusers often give false statements of repentance.

A. Yes.

Q. So you knew he had lied to you, and you knew child sex abusers give false statements of repentance.

Did you feel that Mr. Kendrick had given you a false statement of repentance?

A. We believed him.

Q. Had Mr. Kendrick, in the past, exhibited problems with his temper that you were aware of?

A. Yes.

Q. In what way?

A. Well, outbursts with his wife, Evelyn. They argued a lot.

Q. And were you able to talk to Andrea separately from the room that Mr. Kendrick was in?

A. No.

Q. Did you talk to Evelyn separately?

A. No. We all stayed at the kitchen table.

Q. Did you have the thought at that time that perhaps you should talk to Andrea separately when Mr. Kendrick, who you knew to have violent outbursts, was not present?

A. No.

Q. Was Mr. Kendrick ever --

I will rephrase.

Did he ever exhibit that temper in any of the Jehovah's Witnesses activities?

A. Not that I recall, no.

Q. So in all of the various meetings and field service and everything else that you saw him in over the course of several years, you have no recollection of him ever exhibiting an outburst of temper?

A. No. Just what he had told us and his wife had said had happened in the privacy of their home, married couples arguing.

Q. Were you concerned that there was something more to Mr. Kendrick, in terms of hiding that outburst of temper that he was prone to at home, that he was not all that he claimed to be, if you will, or all that he presented to be, was the exact phrase, in the meetings?

A. I can't recall if I thought that or not. It is so long ago.

Q. Back when Mr. Kendrick was recommended for the position of ministerial servant, were you one of the elders who supported that recommendation?

A. Yes.

Q. And is it true that in 1993, until this report was received, you were considering him for the position, and recommending him for the position of elder?

A. We always look at ministerial servants and hoping they will progress, develop in qualities needed to be an overseer or elder. But we never recommended him, no.

Q. But you did have the thought in mind, at least until this meeting, that Mr. Kendrick was a candidate for elder?

A. I don't know if I would go that far. Because we have already mentioned that he was having marital problems and arguments with his wife. So one of the qualifications of being an elder is that they have to preside over the family in a fine manner. And he was having problems with his stepdaughter. He was not following the rules.

Q. Did Andrea Kendrick tell you in this meeting that Mr. Kendrick had touched her breast under the clothes?

A. No.

Q. Did she tell you in this meeting that he had placed his hand down into her pelvic area, again, under her clothes?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did she tell you that he had given her Vicodin before any of the touching had occurred?

A. Absolutely not, no.

Q. The congregation was never told that Mr. Kendrick had committed an act of child sexual abuse.

Correct?

A. Correct.

Q. And parents -- as opposed to children might be present -- but parents were not separately warned that he had committed an act of child sex abuse?

A. No. We don't do that.

Q. And you don't do that because there is a policy that Watchtower New York has provided to you and provided to you before this that says that information is not to be divulged to the congregations?

A. Yes. It is confidential, just like if a person committed adultery and came to us and confessed to adultery, and he was repentful or she was repentful, we wouldn't get up at the next meeting and announce that Mr. Smith has committed adultery.

That's confidential. That's privileged information.

Q. You used the example of adultery. Is there any difference in your mind between adultery between consenting adults and childhood sexual abuse?

A. Oh, yes. Child abuse is abhored, a horrible act. And they are both sins in God's eyes. But on a level -- you can't put them on the same level.

Q. Adults who may engage in an illicit relationships, at least can make their own decisions and enter into those relationships, whether they are sinful or not, on their own.

A. Sure, yes. They are free agents, yes.

Q. But you knew that children are often unable to protect themselves against childhood sexual abusers?

A. Yes.

Q. The policy that you refer to, which you call confidential, that was a policy given to you as an elder and the body of elders for the North Congregation in Fremont in a letter from Watchtower New York. Correct?

A. Yes. It would come to us in the form of a letter, yes.

Q. And if we were to look at Plaintiff's Exhibit 1, which is Defendant's 026 --

First of all, before we look at it, may it be admitted into evidence?

MR. McCABE: We would agree with that, your Honor.

MR. SCHNACK: Yes.

THE COURT: All right. Plaintiff's 1 is admitted into evidence.

(Whereupon, Plaintiff's Exhibit Number 1 and Defendant's Exhibit Number 26 was admitted into evidence)

MR. SIMMONS: And for your copy, sir.

THE WITNESS: I'm not going to be able to see that.

MR. SIMMONS: No, you are not.

BY MR. SIMMONS:

Q. Do you recognize this as a policy letter, if you will, the body of elder letter with regard to confidentiality?

A. Yes. It says on it "confidential."

Q. Now, this particular body of elder letter, do you recall actually receiving it back in 1989?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. And it was discussed at that time within the body of elders?

A. Yes. The whole body of elders was brought together. It was read and discussed and filed.

Q. And when we are talking about the body of elders, we are talking about the Fremont North Congregation body of elders?

A. Yes.

Q. But you know from your own experience that this directive of July 1, 1989 went out to every body of elders in the entire country?

A. Yes.

Q. Let's go to the very last page.

Do you see the signature line?

A. Where it says "Your Brothers"?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes. Watchtower Bible and Tract Society?

Q. The document is signed, actually, by what we will call, I guess, a corporate signature. Correct?

A. Sure.

Q. And that was typical of all of the communications that you received from Watchtower New York?

A. Correct.

Q. Whether they were bodies of elder letters or whether they were individual letters having something to do with a specific matter within your congregation, if it came from New York, it was always signed by Watchtower Bible and Tract Society New York, Inc.?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you ever know who the particular individuals were who were sending you the letters?

A. No.

Q. Now, let's look at the first page of this.

And let's go down to the third paragraph.

I have highlighted a section. Perhaps we can enlarge it.

"Improper use of the tongue by an elder can result in serious legal problems for the individual, the congregation and even the society."

You knew back in 1989 and throughout the time that this policy has been in effect, that the primary purpose of this policy was to avoid serious legal problems.

A. And to protect confidentiality of people. Everybody wants to have their confidential matters protected. So, yes, that is the purpose of the letter. We don't want people suing us.

Q. And when you say, "We don't want people suing us," are you talking about people who are suing you for disclosing confidential information?

A. Yes.

Q. Is that the only kind of lawsuits that people were worried about as you understood and talked about this letter in 1989?

A. I don't recall. I don't recall what conclusions we came to, other than what the letter talks about. It talks about divulging information that could lead to legal problems.

Q. But you knew that Mr. Kendrick's abuse of Andrea was no longer confidential?

A. It is still confidential. She told us -- they told us in confidence. And Evelyn --

Mrs. Kendrick -- and both -- her stepdaughter said -- they wanted to keep it confidential. We respected that.

Q. They told you that in a meeting in which there were five people?

A. Yes.

Q. And it is your recollection that Andrea and Evelyn are the ones that asked for confidence?

A. Yes. My recollection, yes.

Q. Not Jonathan?

A. No. He was very quiet after he confessed.

Q. Okay. So the confidentiality that you needed to protect was that of the victim, not of the perpetrator?

A. Of course.

Q. So there was nothing about confidentiality that would have been violated by telling the congregation that Jonathan Kendrick had sexually abused a child?

A. Anything that is discussed in a meeting like this is confidential. It cannot be revealed. We can only follow the law, and we can only follow these procedures. If we go any further, we are opening ourselves up to liability.

MR. SIMMONS: May I approach, your Honor?

THE COURT: You may.

(Sidebar discussion)

BY MR. SIMMONS:

Q. The next paragraph down:

"Worldly persons are quick to resort to lawsuits if they feel their rights have been violated. Some who oppose the kingdom preaching work readily take advantage of any legal provisions to interfere with it or impede its progress."

Do you see that?

A. Yes.

Q. And do you understand that to be referring to Andrea and Evelyn Kendrick?

A. No. It's referring to persons who are not Jehovah's Witnesses.

Q. And so this basis for this policy is not rooted solely in Jehovah's Witnesses, it's rooted in people who are not Jehovah's Witnesses and the fact they may bring lawsuits?

A. It is rooted in everyone, both Witnesses and non-Witnesses. Even Witnesses may bring lawsuits.

Q. And it is rooted in a concern for lawsuits because there would not be any confidential information that you would obtain from non-Jehovah's Witnesses?

A. I don't understand your question.

Q. Thank you. It is a very bad question. I'll rephrase it.

You are not receiving confidential information from persons outside the faith?

A. We might in some circumstances. I can't recall a case where we have ever received confidential matters from outside sources. But it doesn't preclude it could happen.

Q. And let's keep going a little bit. Let's go on to page 2.

And let's look at the first highlighted section.

> "The spirit of the world has sensitized people regarding their "legal rights" and the legal means by which they can expect punishment if such rights are violated. Hence, a growing number of vindictive or disgruntled ones as well as opposers have initiated lawsuits to inflict financial penalties on the individual, the congregation, or the society. Many of these lawsuits are the result of the misuse of the tongue."

And did you understand in 1989 that this was talking about child sexual abuse?

A. No. I don't think it was precisely talking about that. It's talking about all types of abuse of the tongue and protecting confidentiality.

Q. And did you understand that persons who had been abused as children -- sexually abused as children -- in Jehovah's Witnesses, by someone who was known to the Jehovah's Witnesses to have committed sexual abuse before might bring such a lawsuit as this?

A. If I understand your question, yes, that could definitely happen, yes.

Q. So the mandate of July 1, 1989, and when I say "mandate," you had no discretion as an elder to depart from this policy. Correct?

A. Correct.

Q. It was not up to you as an elder in North Fremont to decide when to apply this policy and when not to apply?

A. Correct.

Q. If there was any doubt in your mind, all of the instructions came from New York?

A. Yes.

Q. And so it was your understanding then, and remains your understanding now, that reports of childhood sexual abuse within the congregation must be kept secret, according to this policy?

A. Well, you used the word "secret." It is kept confidential. We don't announce those things, but the body of elders would become aware of it. They would all be informed. So that's what we mean by keeping it confidential. We didn't publicly make it known, but just known to the body of elders.

Q. And the reason was to avoid lawsuits.

A. And also to protect confidentiality. Why would anybody come to us with their problems if they knew that as soon as they came to us we were going to announce it? Why would anybody confess to a Catholic priest if they knew that after they confessed it was going to be announced at mass next week. It is ludicrous.

So these were put in place so that the friends would feel comfortable coming to us and we could keep confidence.

Q. And all of your understanding of what had to be kept in confidence, all of your understanding came from Watchtower New York?

A. Yes. They gave us the guidelines.

Q. You, yourself, are -- no legal training. Correct?

A. No.

Q. You do not presume to be passing on what is or isn't confidential. Correct?

A. Excuse me?

Q. You weren't passing yourself on what is or what isn't?

A. No. We weren't interpreting. Is that what you meant?

Q. Yes. All of the decisions came from New York?

A. Yes.

Q. And looking at page 3 at the top of the correspondence, the body of elder letter, July 1, 1989, the subject matters included in this were, among other things, child abuse?

A. Child abuse, search warrants, subpoenas, you name it, all sorts of parameters that confidentiality has to be maintained.

MR. SIMMONS: No further questions. Thank you.

THE COURT: Mr. McCabe?

MR. McCABE: Thank you, your Honor.

CROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. McCABE:

Q. Mr. Clarke, where do you live?

A. Fremont.

Q. How long have you lived in Fremont?

A. Thirty-five years.

Q. And where did you live before that?

A. San Leandro.

Q. Where did you go to high school?

A. Hayward -- a high school called Tennyson, called Tennyson High School?

Q. Did you graduate from there?

A. Barely, yes.

Q. What year did you graduate?

A. Sixty-eight.

Q. Were you involved in any extracurricular activities at the school?

A. Yeah. A little baseball.

Q. Did you play baseball?

A. Yeah, varsity ball, yes.

Q. Are you still a baseball fan?

A. Oh, yeah. Go A's.

Q. Do you ever get out to the park and attend the games?

A. Oh, yeah, about three times a year, and I watch it on TV all the time.

Q. Are you married, Mr. Clarke?

A. Yes.

Q. How long have you married?

A. Over 40 years.

Q. Okay.

A. Same woman too.

Q. What is your wife's name?

A. Catherine.

Q. Do you have children?

A. Three.

Q. How old are they?

A. My son is 40. I have two daughters, 38 and 36.

Q. What is your occupation?

A. I work for an electrical contractor, and I'm a purchasing agent.

Q. And how long have you been there?

A. Sixteen years.

Q. And you were first appointed an elder before you came to the North Fremont Congregation. Correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And what year was that?

A. I believe it was '77, '78.

Q. How does one get to be an elder in the congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses?

A. First of all, they have to become a member, a baptized member. And then they have to meet certain scriptural qualifications that are in the Bible.

Things like presiding over their household in a fine manner, having self-control. Then they develop an art of teaching. So there is a whole list of requirements there. And eventually, if you meet those requirements, you would be recommended.

Q. And who would make the recommendation?

A. The body of elders that you are serving with.

Q. That would be in the congregation?

A. Yes. The congregation of body of elders.

Q. What congregation were you in when you were recommended to be an elder?

A. San Leandro.

Q. And the recommendation goes to Watchtower?

A. Yes.

Q. And if they approve -- so now it's the congregation --

A. Yes.

Q. Do you get any training as an elder?

A. Yes. We go to schools, we receive letters and we receive the Watchtower and the Awake, which has a lot of training for elders.

Q. How large is the congregation in Fremont?

A. If you put all the members and children together, I think it is probably a hundred and forty.

Q. How many children currently attend, say, under the age of 12?

A. It's probably 25 or 30.

Q. Was that true back in the 1990s?

A. I don't think we had quite that many children back then. We have had quite a production of children in the past few years.

Q. When you go to a meeting at the Kingdom Hall, can tell us -- for instance for a Sunday, what happens?

A. Our meeting starts at 10:00. So about 9:30, the members start driving in to attend, visiting in the parking lot. And there is a lot of talking going on. There is a lot of visiting. A lot of noise. Sometimes you can't hear yourself think, especially with 25 kids running around. There is music playing. Eventually the chairman will call to order, and we will open with a song.

Q. Is that followed by a prayer?

A. Yes. Song and opening prayer. And then on Sunday, we have a talk that is given for 30 minutes. And we refer to it as a public talk, because some of the subjects deal with things that benefit both Witnesses and the public. But mostly it is geared towards the public. We hope new ones will come.

And then following that, we actually study the Bible using our journal called the Watchtower. It is questions and answers, and the whole audience can participate by raising their hand, and we will give them the microphone.

Q. And you also have another meeting that's held during the week at the Kingdom Hall?

A. Yes. Ours is held on Wednesday. We actually have three meetings that night that are each 30 minutes long.

The first one is a Congregation Bible Study. I think the term we referred to is it used to be held in homes, but now is held at the Kingdom Hall. So that's for 30 minutes.

And then after that, we actually have a theocratic ministry school. We call it the school, but anyone can be enrolled in it. And I've been giving little talks in that since I was ten. And boys and girls, men and women, they participate in it.

And then a third meeting is a called a service meeting, which is designed to train us in techniques to use in our door-to-door ministries.

So when we meet people at the door, we can engage in conversations, tell them all about the questions, share about the scripture. It is just designed to help us to be more conversational.

Q. You also talked about another meeting that was held in private homes for a time? When did that meeting stop?

A. A couple, three years ago they made it in the Kingdom Hall. We no longer have it in private homes. It is called a Congregation Bible Study.

Q. Back in the mid-1990s, you had some of those meetings in private homes?

A. Yes.

Q. Would you also have a similar meeting like that in the Kingdom Hall?

A. Yes. And we didn't have enough locations to go around, so we would sometimes have that at the -- they called it Congregation Bible Study, we had at the Kingdom Hall. Mostly it was held in homes.

Q. And the meeting would be conducted by one of the elders in the congregation. Is that correct?

A. Correct.

Q. Do you recall the Conti family being in the congregation when you moved to North Fremont?

A. Yes. I think they were there. I can't say for sure if they came after that -- I came in '89. They might have come a year or so after or a year or so before. It is not precise in my mind.

Q. Do you have a clear recollection of who was in the family?

A. Who was in it?

Q. Yes.

A. Mr. Conti -- Neal; Catherine Conti; Candace; and I believe they had a little Neal, or maybe it was Catherine who had a son from a previous marriage. I don't remember his name though.

Q. Did you socialize with the Conti family in the mid-1990s?

A. Other than at the meetings, I don't recall.

Q. This meeting that you had with the Kendricks at their home, that was in November of 1993?

A. Correct.

Q. And did you do anything to prepare for that meeting?

A. Yes. We would look over articles regarding abuse, and we also would look over scriptures that we thought would be encouraging.

Q. Do you recall doing that in November of 1993?

A. I don't specifically recall, but it was my habit. You just don't go to a meeting unprepared. So he gave us the nature of what he was going to talk to us about, even though he didn't give us specifics over the phone. So we would go into our volumes, our index, and look for articles that could help us in our deliberation.

Q. Mr. Simons directed you to Plaintiff's Number

64, Defense Exhibit Number 37.

I think you have it there in front of you.

If I may approach, your Honor?

THE COURT: You may.

BY MR. McCABE:

Q. Do you see the date of publication of Exhibit Number 37?

A. The date is October '93.

Q. October what?

A. Eighth. October 8.

Q. Do you recall in 1993 how you came in possession of that magazine, if you did?

A. I would have had a subscription. Because at that time, the Awake was mailed to the homes of Jehovah's Witnesses. I was the subscriber for years.

Q. And during that time period, do you recall, would you get the magazine on the date of its publication or when would you receive it?

A. It usually came out a month -- or at least a month ahead of time. So I probably got it early September, late August.

Q. What was your custom and habit when you received a magazine from Watchtower in the mail?

A. Well, read it immediately. We always looked forward to receiving a new magazine, so I would thoroughly read it.

Q. So as you sit here today, do you believe that you read this magazine before you met with the Kendricks in November of 1993?

A. Oh, no doubt. I have three children. In those years my children were young, so this article would be definitely be one we would read.

Q. And was the magazine also made available at the Kingdom Hall?

A. Yes. For those that didn't subscribe, we always had extra copies. And we also distributed these to the public then and now, and so the public in our community would get this magazine so they could protect their children.

Q. When you met with the Kendricks, you testified for Mr. Simons, Mr. Abrahamson opened with a prayer, you have got your Bible.

Was there any dispute among the Kendricks about what had taken place between Jonathan and Andrea?

A. None whatsoever. Once he confessed, he was quiet and the discussion went on.

Q. Did Evelyn engage in the discussion? Did she speak?

A. Yes, she did.

Q. Can you tell me what kind of personality

Evelyn had? Was she a quiet, mousy woman, or what would you think?

A. No. She was very, very vocal. She could express herself quite well.

Q. You mentioned that -- was it previous to this, there had been some problems between the Kendricks that came to your attention as marital difficulties that they had been having?

A. Yes. They had violence, yelling. And they asked us to come over to help them with that.

Q. On those occasions -- did you respond to those calls?

A. Yes.

Q. And on those occasions, did Evelyn Kendrick have any problem expressing herself?

A. Oh, no. No. She was much more vocal than Mr. Kendrick.

Q. Now, you indicated that Mr. Kendrick called his touching of his stepdaughter "inadvertent."

But you didn't believe that, did you?

A. No.

Q. What did you believe?

A. That he purposely touched her breasts.

Q. Was that clear from the conversation you had around the kitchen table?

A. Yes.

Q. And because of that, you took certain actions afterwards?

A. Yes. We advised our branch office and told them our decision was to remove him as a ministerial servant. And they immediately responded. They confirmed our assessment. And it was announced that he was no longer a ministerial servant.

Q. Now, during the course of the conversation does anything about making a police report come up?

A. You mean about making a police report?

We told Evelyn and the stepdaughter that they could make a police report.

Q. Did they indicate to you whether they wanted to or not?

A. They said no.

Q. I would like to call your attention to page 9 of this exhibit.

Okay. The bottom here. I don't know if you can see it on the copy in front of you. Page 9 of the exhibit.

What is the indication from Watchtower here about reporting incidents of sexual child abuse?

A. Are you referring to that (indicating)?

Which part?

Q. Referring to the highlight here.

A. This is all blacked out here.

Q. Well, can you read it on the screen as it is?

A. It says:

"Some legal experts advised to report the abuse to the authorities as soon as possible. In some lands, the legal system may require this."

Q. Okay. Is that your understanding of the situation in 1993, that individuals could report it to the police if they wanted to?

A. Well, of course. Yeah. We would never tell them not to report it.

Q. Is that what you communicated to Evelyn Kendrick on this occasion of your meeting with her and her daughter and Mr. Abrahamson and Mr. Kendrick?

A. Most assuredly, yes.

Q. Did you consider the matter of this meeting, the subject matter of it, to be confidential?

A. Yes.

Q. Is there any religious reasons why you considered it to be confidential?

MR. SIMMONS: Objection.

THE COURT: Overruled.

THE WITNESS: Could you repeat the question?

BY MR. McCABE:

Q. Yes. Were there any scriptural or religious reasons why you considered the meeting at the Kendrick home to be confidential?

A. Well, because it is a privileged conversation between a member of the church and a minister; therefore, it is confidential.

Q. And you felt, personally, that you should keep the information confidential; is that correct?

A. I felt personal, based on my training and also Evelyn -- Mrs. Kendricks's request.

Q. She asked you to keep it confidential?

A. Yes. She said it was a private matter. She said that they had gotten beyond it. They had forgiven Mr. Kendrick. It happened four months previous. It was a one-time touching, and that he promised not to do it again.

But we still considered it child abuse. So that's why we took the action that we did. And that's why the whole body of elders was made aware of this action.

Q. Well, if they were made aware of it, how was it confidential?

A. Because they are trained not to reveal confidential matters, not even to their wives.

Q. So the matters that you learn of in your role as an elder, confidential matters, you understand that you can share it with other elders?

A. Only other elders, yes.

Q. Was that done in this case after the meeting at the Kendrick home?

A. Yes. We would, as a body of elders, after we got confirmation back from the branch that we were removing him as a ministerial servant, we met as a body of elders and it would have been explained why we were removing Mr. Kendrick.

Q. And then that's exactly what happened to Mr. Kendrick?

A. Exactly, yes.

Q. How long after the meeting at the Kendrick home it was announced at the congregation that Mr. Kendrick was no longer a ministerial servant, that he had been removed?

A. I guess within -- we got the notice back within 30 days. So I'm sure it was within 30 days. I'm not quite sure of the exact date, but that is a fair guess.

Q. Was the reason for the removal announced?

A. No. We don't announce the removal.

Q. Why not?

A. Confidential. We can't divulge such details. Like I mentioned earlier, if somebody had committed adultery, and they were an elder or a ministerial servant, we would not announce the reason we were doing it. We would only announce that they had been removed. That, in and of itself, puts the congregation on notice. It doesn't happen very often.

Q. When you say it doesn't happen very often, how many years had you been in North Fremont congregation?

A. Oh, twenty years since 1989.

Q. How many announcements of deletions of ministerial servants in your congregation have been made?

A. Oh, just maybe three. Two, three, four at the most.

Q. Over a 20-year period?

A. Yes. That's not very many. It just doesn't happen very often.

Q. Now, after you finished the meeting with the body of elders, you authored the letter that went to Watchtower; is that correct?

A. Excuse me?

Q. You authored a letter that was sent to Watchtower from the body of elders; is that correct?

A. The 1993 letter?

Q. Yes. That's what I'm referring to.

A. That letter was sent immediately after we talked to Kendrick.

Is that the letter you are referring to?

Q. I am referring to Exhibit 098 for the Defense and 9 for the Plaintiff.

Do you have that letter in front of you?

A. What's the number again?

Q. It's going to be Number 9 in that book?

A. All the way to the front.

And is that the one on the screen?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes, that letter was authored the very next day after we met with the Kendricks, withing the next day or so.

Q. Let me ask you this: Before you authored this letter, did you call the Legal Department at Watchtower?

A. That morning. We met with the Kendricks that evening. The next morning we called the branch. And after that meeting we authored the letter. We didn't sit on it.

Q. Is this letter a response to -- or further follow-up with a phone call you made to Watchtower?

A. Yes. They asked us to put it in writing.

Q. What was the purpose of sending this letter to Watchtower?

A. They asked for it to be written, confirming in writing what we told them on the phone and what we were requesting. And that's why we put it in writing.

Q. What was the important fact of this letter that you needed to communicate?

A. That Mr. Kendrick was guilty of child abuse.

Q. The fact that he minimized it or lied about it, the extent or the nature of it, was that an important fact that you needed to communicate to the Watchtower?

A. We felt the most important thing was that he admitted to child abuse, that he touched his stepdaughter in a sexual way.

Q. And you communicated that?

A. In a letter, yes.

Q. And Watchtower did respond to the letter and he was removed as a ministerial servant?

A. Correct. And we announced that.

Q. Did you consider Jonathan Kendrick, then, to be a child molester after this meeting with the family in 1993?

A. Child molester?

Q. Yes.

A. Well, he abused his daughter. So, yes, he is a child molester.

Q. And after removing him as a ministerial servant to the congregation, did you take any other action with regard to Mr. Kendrick and his activities in the congregation?

A. Well, we informed, like I said, the body of elders. So now we have,instead of two sets of eyes watching him, we have twelve, thirteen sets of eyes watching him.

Q. What do you mean "watching him"?

A. Well, when we had our congregation meetings, when he turns up to go out to the door-to-door evangelizing work, we are aware of what he has done and we are watching him. We make sure that he doesn't get too friendly to children. We make sure that he doesn't show any affection to children, that he is not going to come close to abusing a child again.

Q. In regards to the field ministry, did you observe Mr. Kendrick go out into the door-to-door activity following this November 1993 meeting?

A. Yes.

Q. To your knowledge, was he ever assigned to work with a child?

A. Oh, absolutely not. That would be suicidal, no.

Q. Who would he be assigned to work with?

A. He would work with another elder, another adult.

Q. Did you ever see Mr. Kendrick, after this November 1993 meeting, meet for field service and then go out and accompany children?

A. No, sir.

Q. Would you have allowed it?

A. Absolutely not.

Q. Now, in regards to his activity in the congregation, did you ever see Jonathan Kendrick, after this November of 1993 meeting, being overly-friendly to the children of the congregation?

A. No, sir. He would come to the meetings, very quiet now, as he was before, and he would generally always sit up against the aisleway against the wall.

Q. Did you ever see him hold Candace Conti on his lap before a meeting?

A. No, I did not.

Q. Did you ever see him do that after a meeting?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever see him do that during a meeting?

A. No, I did not.

Q. Did you ever personally notice Mr. Kendrick at the meetings at the Kingdom Hall?

A. Personally notice him?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes, I kept my eye on him.

Q. How about during the actual conduct of the meetings, say, when the public talks would be?

A. Oh, yes, I would sometimes see him if I was walking down the hall.

Q. What would you see with regards to Mr. Kendrick?

A. Again, sitting by himself, because at that time his wife Evelyn and stepdaughter weren't coming with him. And he would pretty much sit by himself and stay to himself.

Q. And this is what year?

A. '94, '95.

Q. Was Evelyn Kendrick a member of the congregation in 1993?

A. Yes.

Q. And do you know how long she had been a member of the congregation?

A. I can't say how long she was a member.

Q. Did you ever counsel Mr. Kendrick after this November 1993 meeting about his conduct with children, again, in the future?

A. No. Nothing every showed up that alerted us.

Q. Did you counsel him with his wife and his stepdaughter Andrea present when you had the meeting?

A. The '93 meeting?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes, we were all there.

Q. What did you tell him?

A. We told him limitations as to what he could and couldn't do.

He could not, like I said, show affection to children, put children on his lap, work with them out in the door-to-door ministry, work with children in the Kingdom Hall.

And we made it clear to him that we were going to be watching him. And we did, all, the whole body of elders.

Q. What about counsel regarding his stepdaughter Andrea when you had the meeting? Did you give any counsel there?

A. Counsel to the daughter?

Q. No. With Mr. Kendrick about his conduct with his stepdaughter, Andrea.

A. It would be all encompassing, we would have counseled him regarding children in general, that he needed to not put his stepdaughter on his lap if that was the custom. He was not to show affection, and he was to treat her with dignity.

Q. After that meeting, did you have any doubt about the protection and safety of Andrea in the Kendrick home?

A. No.

Q. Do you feel her mother, being aware of the situation, was a good protection for her?

A. Oh, yeah. She was a protector and she was the first line of defense.

Q. And how old was Andrea at the time of this 1993 meeting, if you recall?

A. Oh, she was a teenager. I want to say 15.

Q. Did you later learn that a police report was made about this 1993 incident?

A. We found out about it years later. It wasn't months later, but years later we found out that a police report had been made. We assumed it had been made by Mrs. Kendrick.

Q. How did you find that out?

A. I don't really recall. I just remember in some document that we noted that.

Q. Did you know what happened as a result of the police report?

A. There was something about him being put on probation.

Q. Were you ever contacted by the Fremont Police in connection with this case?

A. No.

Q. Were you contacted by Child Protective Services of Alameda County regarding Mr. Kendrick?

A. No, sir.

Q. How about the Probation Department?

A. No. No contact at all from the authorities.

Q. Now, do you recall when Mr. Kendrick separated from Mrs. Kendrick?

A. Not exactly. I would be giving you a guess.

Q. Was it real close in proximity to the meeting that you had with the family in November 1993?

A. No. It was a couple years later. Maybe a year-and-a-half later. I couldn't give you the exact month.

Q. Do you know if, after they separated, who stayed in the home in Fremont that they occupied together?

A. I don't know who stayed or even if they kept the home.

Q. Do you know where Mr. Kendrick next lived?

A. Where Mr. Kendrick lived?

Q. Yes.

A. I believe he was offered to stay in the Francis home.

Q. Do you recall when that was?

A. I don't recall when, no.

Q. Do you know how long he lived there?

A. It was just a few months, if I'm not mistaken. I don't think it was very long.

Q. Do you ever recall, after this 1993 meeting at the Kendrick home, Candace Conti being given a big bear hug by Jonathan Kendrick?

A. I never witnessed anything like that -- and no one ever reported it.

Q. Do you ever recall seeing that happen out in the parking lot of the Kingdom Hall?

A. No.

Q. Do you recall seeing that anywhere?

A. No, sir.

Q. And following this 1993 meeting, did you ever see Candace Conti leave the Kingdom Hall premises with Jonathan Kendrick?

A. By themselves? No.

Q. Did you ever see him leaving with somebody else?

A. No.

Q. Did anyone ever report that to you that they saw Jonathan Kendrick with Candace Conti alone in a vehicle?

A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know what kind of vehicle Jonathan Kendrick had in 1993, 1994, 1995?

A. Some kind of a truck.

Q. Was it a pickup truck or a van or what?

A. No. It was a pickup truck. He was an iron worker.

Q. Why do you have a confidentiality among the body of elders in the congregation matters?

A. Well, as I mentioned earlier, they have to be comfortable coming to us to talk with us about their problems so we can offer them scriptural help, spiritual guidance. If they feel that we are going to blab it to our wifes or to announce it from the platform, we wouldn't get too many people coming to us. So confidentiality is important for a minister.

Q. Do you think there is any scriptural basis for your maintaining confidentiality of certain matters?

MR. SIMMONS: Objection; that asks for expert opinion.

THE COURT: Sustained.

BY MR. McCABE:

Q. I want to direct your attention to Plaintiff's Exhibit 1, Defendant's Exhibit 26, which is in front of you, I think it is Number 1.

A. Number 1?

Q. The July 1, 1989 letter.

THE COURT: Okay. Counsel, I thought you said Plaintiff's 1 and Defendant's 26.

MR. McCABE: That's what I thought, your Honor.

THE COURT: And what I'm looking at in my book is twelve bodies of elders in the United States, July 1, '89.

MR. McCABE: Correct.

THE COURT: Is that what you want?

MR. McCABE: Yes, sir.

THE COURT: Okay.

BY MR. McCABE:

Q. You told Mr. Simons you recall this letter?

A. Yes.

Q. What is the subject matter of this letter?

A. The maintaining of confidentiality.

Q. How much of this letter has to do with child abuse?

A. I believe it's just one small paragraph, paragraph B on page 3.

Q. I would like to direct your attention to that paragraph B on page 3.

Do you have that in front of you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Okay. And what is the direction and policy that is given by Watchtower in connection with child abuse in this letter?

A. It says that when elders receive reports of physical or sexual abuse of a child, they should contact the Society's Legal Department immediately.

Q. What other direction does it give bodies of elders in this paragraph?

A. It says that they should see this Awake article January 22, 1985.

Q. Anything else?

A. Victims of such abuse need to be protected from further danger. So, yes, we have to take quick action to protect.

Q. And is that something you agreed with back in 1983?

A. Of course, yes.

Q. And through 1995, '96 and '97?

A. Right up to today, yes.

Q. It also mentions a lot of other situations on this six-page letter having to do with lawsuits.

Do you recall what was going on during the late 1880s (sic) in society that prompted this letter?

THE WITNESS: I think the letter mentioned in the opening that there was a proliferation of lawsuits popping up everywhere.

THE COURT: You said the "1880s."

MR. McCABE: I'm sorry. Sir, I meant 1980s.

BY MR. McCABE:

Q. I notice in the first page of the second paragraph, there are two scriptures cited; is that correct?

A. First page.

Q. First page, second paragraph.

A. July 1st, 1989?

Q. That's correct.

A. How about the third paragraph?

Q. No. I'm thinking of the second paragraph.

A. "Jesus commanded that what you hear whispered, preach from the housetops."

Q. Yes. That's scripture, isn't it?

A. Yes.

Q. And there's another scripture, Acts 4:20 in the same paragraph.

A. "We cannot stop speaking about the things we have seen and heard."

Q. And then the third paragraph, there is a reference to Ecclesiastes 3:7. Do you know what that says?

A. It says, "There is a time to keep quiet and there is a time to speak."

Q. And, in fact, in every paragraph on this page there is scriptures; is that correct?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. And the reference on page 3 to child abuse, it references you to the Awake Magazine of January 22, 1985.

A. Yes.

Q. That has previously been admitted as Plaintiff's Number 59 and Defense Number 17.

Do you recall that issue of the Awake Magazine?

A. If I ever get there, I might, if I read it.

Q. Okay. You probably have it in front of you. But we can put it on the screen too. It would be Exhibit Number 17 in that book. It is on the screen now.

A. Yes. "Child molester: You can protect your child."

But I don't have it here in this book.

MR. McCABE: May I approach, your Honor?

THE COURT: Why don't you go another five minutes.

BY MR. McCABE:

Q. Let's go to page 3 of this exhibit. And you see the section that is highlighted under the sub-heading there?

A. If he makes it bigger, I might.

Yes, I see it now.

Q. What does the Watchtower Bible and Tract Society acknowledge in this paragraph about the plague of child abuse?

A. That it is everywhere, it's widespread, yes.

Q. And this was in 1985?

A. Yes.

Q. And if you go over to the next page, "Child molesting. Who would do such a thing?"

Who were the people that are described as being perpetrators of child abuse in this article?

A. Well, in that second paragraph it says that this woman, Sue, was molested by a man who was running a church group.

So it could be someone in a church group, a youth group. It could be a boy scout leader. It could be anyone.

Q. And you knew that?

A. Yes.

Q. And that helped you protect your children when you ponder those things?

A. Yes, these magazines have been invaluable for years to my family and others.

Q. I'd like to go to the next page.

And where it says "Molester at work here."

Do you recall the information that is in this about the techniques that child molesters will use?

A. Yes. Several of the articles have mentioned that molesters, many times, will offer, like, a present or something to the child to get their affection or to make the child feel comfortable around them.

Other times, they will tell the child, "Let's have a secret together. It will just be our secret."

And sometimes they use actual fear tactics where they threaten the child.

So these articles would help put myself and other parents on alert what to look for.

Q. And as an elder back in 1993, after Mr. Kendrick confessed to sexually touching his stepdaughter, were you looking for these kind of activities with Mr. Kendrick?

A. Oh, yes. We discussed those with the body of elders and went over this article, the '93 article, it would help all the elders to be on alert to look for things.

Q. And after November of 1993, did you see Mr. Kendrick exhibit any of these characteristics of a child molester in the congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses?

A. No, I did not.

Q. Okay. Let's go to one more page. And that's the next page.

"Child molesting: You can protect your child."

In the Jehovah's Witnesses faith, in your congregation, who was this information directed to?

A. Excuse me?

Q. Who was this information directed to here?

A. It is directed to parents as to -- it is to forewarn the parents.

Q. And is that who you believe had the responsibility for protecting their children?

A. Well, they are the first line of defense. If we can help the parents to know what to look for and what situation not to put their children in, that goes a long way in protecting the children.

Q. And just so we are clear, you are not the only -- the elders are not the only ones who get these magazines in the mail. You can pick them up at the Kingdom Hall?

A. Everybody gets these. Every member of every congregation gets them. We distribute them to the public as a community service. We want the children protected, both inside our congregation and outside our congregation.

MR. McCABE: Would this be an appropriate place to adjourn?

THE COURT: I think so.

All right. We will start again in the morning promptly at 8:30.

To the members of the jury, thank you for your patience, your diligence.

I'm presuming they know where their abode is?

COURT ATTENDANT: That's correct, your Honor.

THE COURT: All right. What do you think?

Okay. And then again, I'm going to ask you and reiterate several things. One, I'm making rulings consistently throughout this trial because of the nature of the circumstances. So please do not come in the courtroom until, let's say, 8:25. I will be -- I'm sure -- huddling with the counsel starting at 8:00 o'clock.

Please, other than the collegial "good morning" or "good afternoon" or "good -- I'm not sure we will get to "good evening," please do not discuss this matter with anyone.

And further, certainly -- let's see, internet, LinkedIn, Facebook, Twitter, handheld device, nothing about the case.

Thank you, as always, for your attention and your commitment to this matter. See you tomorrow morning at 8:30.

(Whereupon, the following proceedings were heard outside the presence of jurors)

THE COURT: To the extent we have any further redaction-type issues or whatnot, please email me. But I probably won't see them until 6:30 tomorrow morning.

I do want to get on the record, we were a little informal about that one document where I made a ruling as to Number 4, 5, essentially being religious activity and discipline.

And, again, I'm having a bit -- although I'm getting pretty much on board with your joint exhibit binder, I wanted to take care of that on the record and anything else you wanted to take care of on the record at 8:00 o'clock tomorrow morning.

MR. McCABE: May we inquire of Mr. Simons who he intends to call tomorrow morning?

THE COURT: Yes. Mr. Simons in terms of the rules of court of this department, whom are you calling tomorrow?

MR. SIMMONS: We are going to finish with Mr. Clarke. We hope.

And then we have Evelyn Kendrick and Andrea Becerra, Claudia Francis, Kathleen Conti, Dorothy Conti and, hopefully, we will get to Cliff Williams and Mr. Lamerdin, but that might be somewhat --

THE COURT: Well, I made a series of rulings as to some of those folks, not all of them. Seems like it is going to be an active day in Department 22, and it is what it is. Just be ready to go. I'll be ready to go, and we will go.

(Proceedings were adjourned at 2:58 p.m.)

PROCEEDINGS

(Whereupon, the following proceedings were heard outside the presence of jurors)

THE COURT: Back on the record in the matter of the Candace Conti versus The Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc.

The record should reflect that the jury returned a verdict yesterday; that the issue of punitive damages was bifurcated; that they determined, pursuant to special verdict that was agreed upon, that The Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc. did act with malice.

Relative to the proceedings this morning, and that may occur in this fashion at this time, based upon prior court orders that I made pretrial in terms of amendment of Complaint, timing and disclosure of financial information.

Regarding financial information, by agreement, the Court is going to first read to the jury this morning something that I will tell them is a stipulated fact. And that stipulation is as follows:

"It is hereby stipulated to the Defendant, Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc. and Plaintiff, that Watchtower has current assets of $30 million in cash, and real property estimated to be valued at approximately $1 billion."

It is so stipulated.

To Defense counsel, Mr. Schnack, and to Plaintiff's counsel, Mr. Simons. Correct? I am allowed to read that one stipulated fact to the jury?

MR. McCABE: Correct, your Honor.

MR. SIMONS: Correct, your Honor.

THE COURT: Okay. Moving on. Mr. Simons presented to the Defense, Casey 3949, Punitive Damages Corporate Defendants, Second Phase.

The Defense, appropriately in the Court's opinion under the Gagnon case felt that the Casey instruction was deficient relative to what the jury must consider, vis-a-vis, the current draft of Casey that basically said in quotes.

"Is there a reasonable relationship between the amount of punitive damages and Plaintiff's harm?"

After discussion -- multi-level discussions between Court and counsel, I believe that the parties have agreed that this instruction, as modified, may be read as the instruction given to the jury this morning.

I am going to put it in the record -- so there can be no question about it -- as amended as follows:

"You must now decide the amount, if any, that you should award punitive damages. The purposes of punitive damages are to punish a wrongdoer for the conduct that harmed the Plaintiff and to discourage similar conduct in the future.

There is no fixed formula for determining the amount of punitive damages, and you are not required to award any punitive damages. Any amount of punitive damages that you award must bear a reasonable relationship to Candace Conti's harm.

If you decide to award punitive damages, you should consider all of the following factors separately in determining the amount.

(A) How reprehensible was Defendant, Watchtower Bible and Tract Society Inc.'s conduct?

In deciding however reprehensible a Defendant's conduct was, you may consider, among other factors:

(1) whether the conduct caused physical harm;

(2) whether the Defendant disregarded the health or safety of others;

(3) whether the Defendant's conduct involved a pattern or practice;

(4) whether the Defendant acted with trickery or deceit.

(B) In view of Watchtower Bible and Tract Society Inc.'s financial condition, what amount is necessary to punish it and discourage future wrongful conduct?

You may not increase the punitive damage award above an amount that is otherwise appropriate merely because Defendant has substantial financial resources.

And the award you impose may not exceed that Defendant's ability to pay. Punitive damages must not be used to punish a defendant for the impact of its alleged misconduct on persons other than Candace Conti."

As read, counsel agreed to, relative to the discussion of the Court and yourself?

Mr. Simons?

MR. SIMONS: Yes.

THE COURT: Mr. Schnack?

MR. SCHNACK: Subject to our prior motions and that to withdraw punitive damages from the jury, we do agree with this.

THE COURT: Subject to prior motions it involves.

All right. Do we have everybody with us?

(Break taken)

(Whereupon, the following proceedings were heard in the presence of jurors)

THE COURT: First of all to the jury, thank you, as always, for your incredible commitment to this case. I'm going to address this now. I noted, when I read the jury verdict yesterday that -- and I told you you would have to do a little bit more jury work, otherwise known as judging, I gave you an instruction. And I think you have a sense of what I told the lawyers. I don't pretend to be omniscient up here.

I don't think it is any mystery to you, I have been making a lot of decisions in this case outside of your purview. And I'm going to talk about that when the dust settles on the next decision you are going to make.

But when I read the instruction, it said it would be decided later. And I didn't make that instruction. That's the instruction the courts give throughout the State of California. And then when I noticed in the body of the language read back, and when I went home last night and I read that, I realized it doesn't say by whom.

Although I didn't like it, I'm going to take responsibility for it, I'm going to get better about that communication to a jury because I never thought about it before. They spent eight years trying to get these instructions right. Always remember, whether you are a lawyer, whether you are doing business otherwise, the art of communication often carries the day.

So I want to be very clear, when I tried to walk in your shoes, I realized it didn't say decided later by whom. So I just wanted to say that as you start this morning.

Let me explain the process so you can just get a sense. In a moment I'm going to read to you a stipulated fact. It is going to be about three sentences long. I am then going to read an instruction that we can work out this morning. One instruction. Then counsel are going to argue their respective positions.

Mr. Simons, for Plaintiff, will start first, Mr. Schnack, for The Watchtower Bible and Tract Society will then respond, and then Mr. Simons will have time for a rebuttal argument. After which you will convene again to deliberate, the question is going to be asked of you.

Once you have done that and after listening to this judge, a little bit after that, you will be through with your jury service and commitment to this case.

And I look forward to addressing you when it is done for many good reasons, including the obvious commitment of time and interest and dealing with the issues presented.

JURY INSTRUCTION

THE COURT: So, that being the case, let me read to you the stipulated fact:

It is hereby stipulated between Defendant, Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc. and Plaintiff, that Watchtower has current assets of $30 million in cash and real property estimated to be valued at approximately $1 billion. It is so stipulated.

That is the evidence by stipulation. That is a stipulated fact. That is the evidence you are to consider this morning within your deliberations contextually and concurrently with the following instruction:

Casey 3949 Punitive Damages Corporate Defendant Second Phase as amended by agreement:

You must decide the amount, if any, that you should award in punitive damages. The purposes of punitive damages are to punish a wrongdoer for the conduct it harmed the Plaintiff and to discourage similar conduct in the future.

There is no fixed formula for determining the amount of punitive damages, and you are not required to award any punitive damages. Any amount of punitive damages you award must bear a reasonable relationship to Candace Conti's harm.

If you decide to award punitive damages, you should consider all of the following factors separately in determining the amount:

(A) How reprehensible was Defendant, Watchtower Bible and Tract Society Inc.'s conduct?

In deciding how reprehensible a defendant's conduct was, you may consider, among other factors:

(1) whether the conduct caused physical harm;

(2) whether the Defendant disregarded the health or safety of others;

(3) whether the Defendant's conduct involved a pattern or practice;

(4) whether the Defendant acted with trickery or deceit.

(B) In view of Watchtower Bible and Tract Society, Inc.'s financial condition, what amount is necessary to punish it and discourage future wrongful conduct?

You may not increase the punitive damages award above an amount that is otherwise appropriate merely because Defendant has substantial financial resources. Any award you impose may not exceed that defendant's ability to pay.

Punitive damages may not be used to punish a defendant for the impact of its alleged misconduct of persons other than Candace Conti.

Mr. Simons.

CLOSING ARGUMENT BY MR. SIMONS

MR. SIMONS: Ladies and Gentlemen, thank you all once again for your dedication and your service and the seriousness of which you have approached your tasks in this case.

And we do have the one remaining issue for us to discuss and for you to determine, and that is the question, as his Honor has put forth in the instruction, of punitive damages to discourage future conduct in the future that would be similar to what harmed Candace Conti in this case.

And if you believe, from all you have seen and heard, that Watchtower New York and its managing agents, the governing body, fully appreciate and understand that the policy of secrecy which allows for an identified child sex offender to strike again is wrong and that it was wrong in 1983 and it remains wrong today, then there is no need for further damages of a punitive nature.

But if you find from all you have seen and heard that the understanding and acceptance of the need to change that policy are not there, then the law authorizes you and gives you the power, through the use of punitive damages, to provide an incentive to provide discouragement, if you will, of future repetitions of the type that we have learned about here.

And if we could look at the instructions very briefly:

> "The purposes of the punitive damages are to punish for the conduct that harmed Candace Conti and to discourage similar conduct in the future."

Let's look at the criteria that we are going to be considering. There are a number of factors the instruction has laid out for consideration, including:

"How reprehensible was the Defendant's conduct?"

This was the question that you previously decided with regard to what is despicable conduct, deliberate indifference.

And, specifically, we look at whether the conduct caused physical harm. We know that it did.

We look at whether the Defendant disregarded the health and safety of others. And that has been your finding. That is what the policy's root and the information that we saw in the earlier part of the trial established by clear and convincing evidence.

"Whether the conduct involved a pattern and practice."

And we know that it did because the Body of Elder Letter must be followed by every elder in every congregation throughout the country with no power, no discretion to deviate whatsoever.

And so, even though you have found that the Watchtower's fault was 27 percent of what caused Candace Conti's harm, they are 100 percent responsible for this policy and its enforcement. And that is what this particular part of the issue that you are now going to address concerns.

"Whether the Defendants acted with deceit or trickery."

And I would submit to you, Ladies and Gentlemen, that allowing a known child sex offender to sit in the congregation and to go out into field service and to hide who he is from the parents and from the others in the congregation who could act to protect children is deceit. And that is the root of the problem of this policy.

The second category that is listed is whether or not, in view of the financial condition, there is an appropriate amount to discourage future wrongful conduct.

You may not increase the punitive damage award above an amount that is otherwise appropriate merely because this Defendant is a billion-dollar plus organization.

We do not punish that -- well, that is not the purpose of the punitive damages. However, it is appropriate to consider it in determining the amount of punitive damages just for two reasons.

First of all, we cannot exceed the Defendant's ability to pay. That, I don't think is a relevant factor, given the amount of assets that are here.

And, secondly, the fact that they have substantial resources is not a reason to increase the award above what is appropriate.

But turning that around is also not appropriate to award less than what is necessary to accomplish the goal here. And that is to change this policy, discourage it from being conducted in the future. That is the mission that Candace Conti set out on three years ago.

Can we go back to the beginning?

There is a rule you must follow. And that is that the amount of punitive damages, if you so choose to award, must bear a reasonable relationship to Candace Conti's harm.

You have found that to be in a dollar amount. And there was really not contrary evidence or argument as to that amount.

And so we must find: What is a reasonable relationship if you choose to award these kinds of damages to the harm?

And some people may view that as a one-to-one ratio, that the amount of the damages necessary to discourage the conduct in the future is equal to the amount of the damages of the harm that Candace Conti suffered.

Some people may feel that this is childhood sexual abuse, and it has been found to be despicable conduct, and that amount should be ten times the amount of harm that Candace Conti has suffered.

I would submit to you that in the law, we have a principle called Treble damages. And it assesses a punishment where a party was found to have acted in a manner that requires and is appropriate to administer punishment by awarding three times the amount of the actual harm that is measured in compensable damages. And I would submit to you, Ladies and Gentlemen, that that is the appropriate measure here.

I would like to say, on behalf of Candace Conti, that you we trust in your judgment and we will accept it. Thank you.

THE COURT: Mr. Schnack.

CLOSING ARGUMENT BY MR. SCHNACK

MR. SCHNACK: Ladies and Gentlemen of the jury, the judge has instructed you that it is your choice to award or not to award punitive damages. You have been read the instruction and you have seen it there.

Does Watchtower need to be punished? The policies of Watchtower continue to evolve. You heard

Monica Applewhite testify that Watchtower has published articles and educational materials for parents, for its church members starting in the 1970s and into the '80s and it continues up to the present day.

Those materials were in the forefront of educational materials for parents and for members in this regard.

Plaintiff's counsel has made a lot of the July 1, 1989 letter. Indeed, that's what he referred here to today. However, you also heard Mr. Shuster testify that that was never the last word. It wasn't the be-all end-all on policies.

So let me just briefly go through a few of the other All Bodies of Elders Letters that were in evidence before you today.

Remember the March 23, 1992 letter? Several references there that the elders in the congregation should be conscious of victims of abuse, treat them with thoroughness and kindness, that you should be tenderly compassionate to them.

It also says in that same letter:

> "If a current case of child abuse comes to light in the congregation, the elders should do what they can to protect the children from further abuse. These policies are evolving as we go forward."

In evidence was the August 1, 1995 letter. There it says:

> "Steps should be taken to protect the child or other children from further sexual abuse once abuse became apparent."

The elders, too, wanted to act -- should act in a way that demonstrates their protective care since the word "overseer" as that's used within the church, carries the thought of one who watches over in guarding and shepherding the flock.

In that same letter, the August 1, 1995 letter that you had in evidence and that you had in the room with you, it also says on the first page that:

> "It would be appropriate to talk very frankly with the abuser that he should never be in the presence of a child without another adult being present."

And just one last one here this morning. The March 14, 1997 All Bodies of Elders Letter that was before you. That addressed the issue of when a member moves from one congregation to another. And if that member is known to be a child molester, that letter directed the elders in the local congregations to:

> "Outline his background, including any needs for cautions that should be provided to the body of elders."

That letter would be presented to the congregation to which that person would move. And so, again, that's taking steps to help prevent child abuse.

Mr. Shuster also testified, when he was up on the stand, that the church has a long history, since he has been an elder, since '79, that child abusers cannot be appointed to serve as elders, as ministerial servants or pioneers.

That was reiterated in the March 14, 1997 that I just referenced.

The policy of Watchtower has continued to emerge on a case-by-case basis in which the Service Department elders sent letters to the local congregations, to the local elders to strongly warn, if they have a known child abuser within their congregation, that he should not be alone with children, and how the elders can deal with that if the member that is an abuser violates those instructions.

Now, I have no doubt that your verdict yesterday has already sent a message to Watchtower, and we will soon see another All Bodies of Elders Letter addressing the very issues that were raised.

One thing I would ask you to keep in mind.

The Jehovah's Witnesses Church is not the Catholic Church, that it has had verdict after verdict after verdict over the years. It's been in the press. We are all aware of it. This is the first verdict that the Jehovah's Witnesses church has faced. So, again, it is not the Catholic Church with multitudes of cases over a couple of decades.

We have been on the telephone, both last night and early this morning, speaking with the managing directors of Watchtower and the elders in the --

MR. SIMONS: I'm going to object, your Honor. It is not evidence.

THE COURT: Well, it is argument. But, counsel, why don't you go forward for a minute to make sure it is legit.

MR. SCHNACK: Your Honor, I didn't interrupt his argument.

THE COURT: Understood.

MR. SCHNACK: As I mentioned, we were on the phone to managing directors of Watchtower and to the elders in the Service Department. And I can tell you they are stunned by the verdict. Again, I mentioned, it is the first one. And it's, indeed, the first one we are all aware of that has ever found liability on a congregation in a church based on a congregation member causing harm to the child of another member.

However, I sincerely believe, and I put this to you, that Watchtower does not need to be punished by another monetary award.

Why is that?

Ms. Conti said she wanted to change policies. That's why she brought this suit. And we feel bad for Ms. Conti. But I can assure you, and I can assure her, that Watchtower's policies continue to evolve. And I can safely say that, with her verdict yesterday, Ms. Conti has succeeded. I encourage you to award no punitive damages in this case.

Again, I thank you for your service, for your time and your attention.

Thank you, your Honor.

THE COURT: Any rebuttal, Mr. Simons?

MR. SIMONS: Yes.

REBUTTAL ARGUMENT BY MR. SIMONS

BY MR. SIMONS:

Q. I am sad to say that I did not hear that the policy will be changed.

I am sad to hear that the governing body has not sent a person to this evidentiary phase of the trial to so testify.

I am sad to hear that we are still talking about Dr. Applewhite, who said great education program for parents. I'm not saying a thing about the child sex abuse prevention program.

I am sad to hear from counsel's comments that we have representations but no evidence.

We have no way to believe that this policy will be changed in any manner other than from the outside, by the power that the law gives to you.

And, therefore, I ask you to exercise it.

Thank you.

THE COURT: Okay. All right. Mr. Bailiff, would you be kind enough to put the jury -- I believe they are in Department 21.

You have been the most mobile jury I have had. So, again, thank you for your consideration, patience and mobility.

(Whereupon, the following proceedings were heard outside the presence of jurors)

THE COURT: All right. Counsel, I will hand you the instruction. I want you to all take a look at it again as modified and the special verdict form before I give it to the jury.

So, I'll start with Mr. Simons and then to Mr. Schnack.

MR. SIMONS: To Chance?

THE COURT: No. Ms. Eckert.

MR. SCHNACK: These are both fine, Judge.

MR. SIMONS: Yes, they are.

THE COURT: Counsel's, each and all, have reviewed the special verdict form and the Casey instruction as revised by agreement which will now be given to the jury for their consideration during deliberations.

All right. And the court will stand in recess, pending --

Oh, let's talk a little bit -- I, of course will do the same thing I have done with you. I would like to have you a little closer. And if you need a room, I will try to find one for you. But you are welcome to hang around the courtroom. Or if you need another place, I will try to find one for you.

(Break taken)

(Whereupon, the following proceedings were heard in the presence of jurors)

THE COURT: All right. The record should reflect that Ms. Kraetsch is here with us by agreement with Ms. Conti. Mr. Simons' partner is here, Mr. Jaspovice is sitting in for him at this time. Correct, Ms. Conti?

MS. CONTI: Correct.

THE COURT: Do we have a verdict?

MR. FOREPERSON: We do, your Honor.

THE COURT: All right. Madam Clerk, if you would be kind enough to read the verdict.

THE CLERK: Ladies and Gentlemen of the jury, you will now listen to the reading of the verdict omitting the title of court and cause.

Special Verdict, Phase 2: We, the jury in the above-entitled action, answer the question submitted to us as follows:

Question 1: Did you award punitive damages against The Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Incorporated?

Answer: Yes.

If your answer to Number 1 is yes, what amount of punitive damages do you award?

Answer: $21,000,001. Dated June 14, 2012, Presiding Juror, Hugh Huey.

THE COURT: Mr. Huey, is that the jury's verdict?

MR. FOREPERSON: Yes, your Honor.

THE COURT: All right. Would you like the jury polled?

MR. SCHNACK: Yes, your Honor.

THE COURT: All right. May I have the verdict form?

First of all, you were asked a question:

Do you award punitive damages against The Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc.?

The answer is yes.

How many voted yes?

(Jurors raised hands)

THE COURT: All right. The record may reflect ten jurors voted yes.

All right. And then having answered the question "yes," the amount of punitive damages awarded is $21,000,001.

How many jurors voted that punitive damages be awarded in this matter against Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc. in the amount of $21,000,001?

(Jurors raised hands)

THE COURT: The record may reflect -- let me make sure I got the accounting right.

(Jurors raised hands)

THE COURT: Nine jurors voted for that verdict.

That being the case, the jury having been polled, this portion of the verdict is now entered.

Several weeks ago I invited you into my courtroom, and I said, "Welcome to judging." And I also told you that the only thing about judges is when they make tough decisions. I think we all agree this has been a very difficult case.

I told the lawyers early on outside of your presence, this is a case that is tough on this judge, tough on the professionals involved, and tough on the jurors.

And I don't think there is any mystery why that is the case. The subject matter, its nature, its evolution, its fundamental violation of trust -- and let's be clear, that most decent human beings would prefer to have trust in their lives, whether it's their friends, their coaches or whatnot.

And clearly and equally the circumstance, I don't think anyone of good character would wish or would have any support relative at all to the nature of the circumstance and conduct.

This case was further complicated by the passage of time in terms of all that has gone on. And throughout, and life judging, people can have very different opinions, as you did, in terms of your discussions as to what the result should be.

This was a tough case. And I told you when we started that my preference is not to do a lot of sidebars. And, again, as I sit here, I made a number of decisions about what evidence you could hear. That's what judges do. And there was a lot of complexity in terms of the time and the nature and circumstance as to both sides.

My goal -- and perhaps other's goals -- which I made -- was to try to fashion it so that any prejudice any of us had would not be visited upon your deliberation. I made in limine instructions in this case. I did it because I thought it was the right thing to do as a judge.

I will say to each of you, how you carried out your tasks -- and, candidly, I don't say this in every case -- it is not about money, it's not about the nature, and with the verdict as a matter of money -- each of you could -- I had an alternate around here for the last seven and a half days -- may I say that that is an unusual circumstance. It is. But how you went about your task was quite impressive.

Certainly, I think early on you understood the solemnity of what this case was about and what your task is as jurors. And how you did it without any tinge of what certainly I or anyone else in this courtroom agrees with your verdict, how you went about it, the decency you showed of the fundamental understanding of the importance of what you considered was obvious, certainly to me, and I would hope to all parties involved in this case.

This is serious stuff. And as a society, the challenge -- your challenge as jurors is to sit in judgment.

But the challenge is: How can everyone get better in terms of recognition, dealing and whatnot? And there is no magic ball to that.

But what is heartening is that each of you could take the substantial challenge here for the amount of days involved in your everyday lives and render as diligent a judgment collectively as you did.

Mr. Huey, I can say this: You had a number of questions. Each of those questions was thoughtful, well-paced, in terms of the time of deliberations up to that point, and insightful, including Table A. So we knew.

But, again, we can all have disagreements as to what has gone here and the result and whatnot, but anybody objectively observing knew that you were very serious about what you were doing. And, for that, I will, I do, I have thanked you before, but I thank you as deeply from this position as I can. Because, again --

I actually had one of my sons say, "Dad, your hair seems to have gotten a little whiter."

The honest answer is: I didn't know it could get any whiter. And it perhaps did.

But the respect you showed everyone, the amount of time you dedicated to the task, how you went about it is -- I told you when we first met each other -- it is what distinguishes this country from all others.

I am hopeful -- and please understand in terms of the management of this case as a judicial officer, in terms of the interruptions, in terms of the timing. Now, a lot of this, as a matter of law, is what we will call a case of first impression. Okay. Because, again, as society evolves its understanding of the kind of response to these sorts of issues, the law is catching up also.

And honestly, because I have said it outside of you, the quality of professional lawyering in this case was as good as it gets for these lawyers in terms of their professional integrity, their skills and whatnot. This is not the type of case where you are going to see inexperienced lawyers.

And I said to them, as I will say to you, that, as difficult a case as this is, and was, on all and each of us, my job was considerably aided by the professionalism and skills of all lawyers involved in this proceeding. I don't say that in many cases either. But this is a case, as a matter of professionalism, needs good lawyers.

So, again, I want to thank you. In a moment, you will be free to go. You can choose, as is your election, to speak to a counsel or not.

Again, once I excuse you -- I'm going to take a look at my parting instruction so I don't forget anything.

You are free to go. I think we all agree that you have done your service. And I wish I could say to you, because of the quality of the service, it is attainable, that you won't hear from the system for several years because you have earned your time.

As I told you this morning, I like to always judge myself in terms of how I deal with juries, and I will spend my experience in, literally my lifetime, in the courtroom. I'm going to be better, in terms of communication and be sensitive in a bifurcated trial as to that instruction as to whose judgment it is.

A lot of what I did was designed not to tilt the wheel on behalf of either party here. And it was a very -- candidly, I tried to be very careful in everything I did. But what I did, when I was a trial lawyer, after every trial, I assessed what worked, what didn't, and how I could have been better. And I tell you, in a case like this, and in terms of not only in its nature and because of it, but in terms of how the process evolved.

I do the same thing as the judge. And there are a couple things that I have learned dealing with you in this case and the quality of lawyers I have here that I will do differently the next time.

So give me a minute. I want to make sure I have covered everything. That was hardly a written speech. Let me take a look at my parting instructions. Otherwise, at which time I will dismiss you.

All right. Again, I'm going to dismiss you. You are free to -- Madame Clerk, you may record the verdict.

I will now dismiss you. Again, you may speak with counsel if that is your wish. Otherwise, you have no obligation to do so. Enjoy the evening, and thank you for your service.

(Proceedings were concluded at 4:23 p.m.)

MAY 30, 2012 8:20 A.M.

PROCEEDINGS

THE COURT: Relative to the January 10, 2000 letter, and redacted, I'm going to -- the letter is going to go in unfiltered.

I have told counsel that regarding the alleged black bra/grooming incident, I will allow it in only as to liability case as to Mr. Kendrick.

I will reserve as to any other evidence and/or any knowledge of the Jehovah's Witnesses, defendant is established as to either the rollerblade, so-called rollerblading incident, that Ms. Francis would testify to allegedly, and the black bra incident, that I'm considering a limiting liability instruction as to those incidents and potential liability of Jehovah's Witnesses pending any laying foundation that they were aware of either or both.

Counsel for plaintiff has raised concerns about a whole slew of defense witnesses coming in saying, in effect, they had not reviewed any incidents at the local Kingdom Hall or the assembly hall. I'm not sure those two places are different, by the way. But they are referred to differently in the letter.

And I have indicated I am going to listen first to Ms. Conti's testimony as to the number of incidents and the place and the timing prior to ruling upon by objection of plaintiff as to whether there is any relevancy to their testimony.

For instance, if Ms. Conti testifies about a specific date of a specific function and a defense witness stands up, comes up and says, "I was there. I had my eyes on Mr. Kendrick the entire time and I did not observe it," that's fine.

And, again, depending on the foundation laid by Ms. Conti, I would have to go witness-by-witness as to whether what they testify in defense is relative to the alleged incident and place and timing.

MR. SCHNACK: Mr. Simons has suggested Mr. Bowen might decline to grace us with his presence on Friday, and also that Mr. Lewis might not be available on Friday. So from a defense side, maybe we should just go forward with the trial, unless Mr. Simons has a motion --

MR. SIMONS: Two separate problems. One is that Mr. Bowen said if we are not going to be able to entertain his opinions with regard to theocratic warfare, disfellowshipping and the two witness rule, that he really doesn't see any particular validity to this proceeding.

And so I think he will not --

THE COURT: Please convey to Mr. Bowen that it is not personal in any way. It is just a concern the Court had as to --

And I would agree with him, I'm only a civil court and a humble public servant representing government. I'm not going to get into either the politics or the breadth of any of that. But that's okay. Mr. Lewis, I'm just going to put into Box 2.

I did -- and again, this is just -- I took care of Mr. McCabe on Friday. What are you doing with your back, Mr. Simons?

MR. SIMONS: I cannot get into the doctor, Dr. Prinsky, until next week. So I don't have a medical appointment on Friday. I had hoped to be there sometime during the day, but he can't get me.

THE COURT: Well, I took some actions, based upon what I told the jury yesterday. And most of the time I wouldn't do it, but I have a number of very intense cases. And I'm going to say we will poll the jury.

And forgive me on that, but it just tends to be what I'm dealing with right now, because I am booked the whole day on Friday, again based on what I told that jury, with stuff that is very time oriented. So I will be consistent with what I told the jury.

But I was -- I would promote -- why don't you tell the doctor, he is under judicial order to get you an appointment on Friday.

Now, Mr. McCabe, do you have your own mic, and it works?

MR. SIMONS: The last subject is we had sidebar during Mr. Clarke's cross-examination conducted as direct with regard to the testimony that I felt was covered under Motion in Limine Number 6, but it was offered anyway.

And I understand from our sidebar discussion that the Court is, at least, entertaining some sort of communication to the jury to the conclusion of Mr. Clarke's testimony.

THE COURT: I haven't figured out exactly what it is going to be because -- and it largely goes in my view to the resolution of a duty issue. Okay.

I allowed the testimony to go on effectively from both sides. There is a policy that is in evidence. I quickly and surely sustained the objection to get into the spiritual aspects. I was very close in my listing as to whether anybody said "privileged." Okay. I didn't hear the word "privileged" but I will check that out with the reporter.

I allowed testimony as to why people did certain things. Part of it is an explanation of the policy. But -- and I'm going to consider all of this contextually in terms of the time of instructions.

Most times I do not tell juries with what legal decisions I have made, and clearly there is no reference. And everybody has got a professional here. There is no reference in duty to warn, because the issue is, of course, from the defense, is whether there is any duty at all and if there is by nature of the duty. Okay.

There has been a concern and an argument, that say, duty to warn within the context of the special instructions by the plaintiff, is a duty to protect.

The first question, of course is going to be: Is there a duty?

And then secondly what the nature of that duty is.

All of which I'm going to reserve for context and instruction for the duty, but before we submit it to the jury.

I have previously ruled that it is not, as a matter in the evidence code, these communications are not protected privileges. And I have made that part in my motion in limine ruling.

I was also very clear that there wasn't going to be any reference to or argument regarding the spiritual privilege.

Having said that, I did allow inquiry by both into the policy and the implementation of it and the reasons why. But I will assess the quality and the nature of the evidence and figure out exactly how I approach and we approached that pending what we submit to the jury.

But I can certainly say to the defense that you argue -- if you argue that effectively it was privileged, well that gets something from the judge.

MR. SIMONS: So I'm a little unclear where that ends up. Are we going to say something after the conclusion of Mr. Clarke's testimony?

THE COURT: Well, I'm going to determine -- and I'm not going to do it after Mr. Clarke's testimony. I'm going to do it in the context before jury instructions. Just like I'm going to do an in limine instruction, depending on where the evidence sits in this case.

And I think one of the things that have been a little more challenging in this particular case are the nuances that I almost have, motions in limine are tied to evidence that is argued about, should not be decided until evidence is produced because of the difficulty for the judge in deciding yay or nay. And I haven't having heard all the evidence.

But what I did say to you is that I confirmed my pretrial ruling that there is no privilege that applies, either spiritual or penitent, and that's not going to change. I'm going to have to assess when the dust settles exactly what, if anything, needs to be said to the jury to allow them to frame a legitimate decision.

MR. SCHNACK: Then one last question from our side. Evelyn Kendrick is going to testify today, and we did have a motion in limine on the hearsay issue of her testimony. You definitively ruled on it. Do we need to re-raise that at the time she is called to preserve it for appeal or not?

THE COURT: Good question. Now, I'm going to be very specific that -- but, again, it suffers the same as some of these other --

It is my understanding that Ms. Kendrick is going to give a demonstratively different version of what was said to the -- I was going to call it investigators for a minute -- as to what Mr. Kendrick had done under what circumstances.

And I have effectively ruled that they are not necessarily hearsay at all contextually in terms of what is going on in this case, as to notice and duty and all kinds of things.

I believe they also can come in -- or a portion -- let me see if I can find quickly what motion in limine was entered -- Evelyn Kendrick, Number 3, Plaintiff -- strike that.

Defendant. All right. Specific limine in motion Number 3. Page 3. This is Evelyn about what Andrea told the elders. Kendrick had drugged her with Vicodin, went into her bedroom and fondled her breasts and genitals under her clothes.

Okay. And again, I have ruled as to that form of testimony, number 1, it could be offered for the non-hearsay purpose as to notice.

And secondly, could arguably come in as a prior and inconsistent statement of the hearsay exception. And I believe when I made the ruling I gave a third reason, which escapes me for a minute.

But the answer is she may testify as to what Andrea told the elders at the time of their meeting with her, her version of what Andrea told them.

MR. SCHNACK: Then we don't need to re-assert those objections again, your Honor?

THE COURT: No. Why don't we bring the jury in.

(Whereupon the following proceedings were heard in the presence of jurors)

THE COURT: All right. Members of the jury, welcome and thank you. As I relayed to you yesterday, Mr. Simons has been dealing with some back issues. I gave Mr. McCabe a microphone this morning. He has some voice issues. This Court generally has voice issues because of the nature of this department, but for Mr. McCabe, if it is his wish, any time he wants to use a microphone, I'm going to allow him to do it for the reason related.

All right. And then we will see what pops up tomorrow morning.

Mr. Simons, next witness.

MR. SIMONS: I don't think we finished with Mr. Clarke.

THE COURT: Forgive me. Mr. Clarke, once again, I will remind you that you are under oath.

CROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. McCABE:

Q. Good morning, Mr. Clarke.

A. Good morning.

Q. Yesterday, we talked to you a little bit about Exhibit -- Plaintiff's Exhibit 1, Defense Exhibit 26?

THE COURT: Now, Mr. McCabe, you can come closer if you want. It is up to you, I would do the same for anyone. If you want to be closer, you can.

MR. McCABE: I think this is good, your Honor.

BY MR. McCABE:

Q. Do you recall that exhibit, sir?

A. No. Can we look at it, please?

Q. Yes. Plaintiff's Exhibit 1, Defense 26. It is the July 1, 1989 letter to the body of elders --

A. Yes, I remember that.

Q. -- from the Watchtower Bible and Tract.

A. Yes.

Q. And do you remember getting that letter to the congregation in North Fremont?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. Did you review it with the rest of the members of the body of elders?

A. Yes.

Q. What was your understanding as to the main thrust of that letter?

A. To keep confidentiality, private matters.

Q. How much of that letter was devoted to Watchtower's policy regarding child abuse?

A. There is just one paragraph, I believe it is -- page 3, a few lines.

Q. Page 3, Item B. Is that the paragraph?

A. That is the paragraph, yes.

Q. Was this the last statement of policy from Watchtower Bible and Tract regarding child abuse?

A. No. We have gotten subsequent articles in our Awake and Watchtower Magazines. And we have had instructions in the form of schools regarding child abuse.

Q. And how to deal with it?

A. How to deal with it, yes.

Q. I want to show you what we have marked as Plaintiff's Exhibit 27, Defense Exhibit 32.

And I ask if this may be admitted into evidence.

MR. SIMONS: No objection.

THE COURT: And, counsel, what is it specifically?

MR. McCABE: It is a letter, March 23rd, 1992 from Watchtower to all bodies of elders.

THE COURT: And that's fine. What exhibit is it?

MR. McCABE: Plaintiff's Exhibit 27.

THE COURT: Plaintiff's Exhibit 27 by agreement is in. Thank you.

(Whereupon, Plaintiff's Exhibit Number 27 was admitted into evidence)

MR. McCABE: May I approach?

THE COURT: You may.

BY MR. McCABE:

Q. Mr. Clarke, do you recognize that exhibit?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. What is it?

A. It is a letter to all bodies of elders regarding helping victims of child abuse.

Q. Is there an attachment to that letter?

A. Yes, yes. It is entitled: "What only you can say to abuse victims."

Q. Did you read that letter and the attachment at the time you received it in the congregation?

A. Yes, many times.

Q. I would like to direct your attention to 2009. When did you first hear about the allegations of child abuse brought by Candace Conti?

A. That would be when she called me on the telephone and requested me to call the elders.

Q. Do you remember when that was?

A. Did you say when that was?

Q. Yes.

A. 2009. I don't recall what part of the year that was.

Q. And was that the phone call the first time that you knew about allegations of child abuse involving Candace Conti and Jonathan Kendrick?

A. Which time was that?

Q. Did she tell you in that phone conversation that Mr. Kendrick was the perpetrator of her abuse?

A. She did mention his name, and she wanted to talk to us about him.

Q. Did you subsequently have a further discussion with her?

A. Yes, we immediately invited her to the Kingdom Hall. And within a few days, we met with her at the Kingdom Hall, myself and Larry Lamerdin.

Q. Did you do anything to prepare for that meeting?

A. Well, one thing, we reviewed this letter. We reviewed this paragraph on what we could say and do. We wanted to provide comfort and let her know how much we valued her, and we wanted to help her in any way we could scripturally and spiritually.

Q. What took place at the meeting?

A. Well, we opened with prayer, read a scripture, probably one of these noted here, and then we listened. We listened a lot as she expressed what she alleged.

Q. How long did the meeting last?

A. It was probably an hour.

Q. Did you do anything after the meeting to address her complaints?

A. We compiled a letter with the details of what she had told us. We located where Jonathan Kendrick was now attending meetings, and we forwarded that letter to that body of elders.

Q. Did you have any other meetings after that with Candace Conti?

A. I did make several phone calls. She called me back and we tried to schedule another meeting. Some of those fell through. She couldn't make that. And eventually she said she didn't want to meet anymore.

Q. Did you initiate any meetings with members of her family?

A. Yes. We met with her father, Neal Conti. And we encouraged him to really reach out to his daughter, because I believe she was living in Southern California and he was living up here. And so we encouraged him to reach out to his daughter, that she needed his fatherly attention.

Q. Did you have any contact with Candace's mother, Kathleen Conti?

A. She called me, and she was familiar with this allegation, she and Candace had spoke about it. And we gave her the same advice. "Please, you know, reach out to your daughter. She needs your attention."

MR. McCABE: Thank you, your Honor. I have no further questions.

THE COURT: Mr. Schnack.

MR. SCHNACK: Thank you, your Honor.

CROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. SCHNACK:

Q. Good morning, Mr. Clarke.

A. Good morning.

Q. I have a few questions for you. Within the body of elders at the North Fremont Congregation, do you hold any position, like a coordinating elder or any other type of thing?

A. Yes. I'm referred to as the coordinator, yes.

Q. And what do those duties involve?

A. It means to coordinate activities, schedule meetings, those sort of things. Nothing beyond that.

Q. And did you hold that back in the '90s as well, or is it more recent?

A. In 1992, '93, somewhere around there.

Q. And you have been doing it since then?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. Now, with respect to how the church services are held at the North Fremont Congregation, do you hold Sunday School classes there where children are separated from their parents?

A. No. Children are always sitting with their parents.

Q. And is that the same in all church-sponsored activities at the North Fremont Congregation that the children are not separated from their parents?

A. Correct.

Q. Now, with respect to Plaintiff's Exhibit --

Or I'm sorry. Defense Exhibit 26, Plaintiff's Number 1, we have the July 1st, 1989 letter put up. Mr. McCabe just asked about that.

MR. SCHNACK: May I approach, your Honor?

THE COURT: You may.

BY MR. SCHNACK:

Q. And you are familiar with this letter; is that correct?

A. Correct, yes.

Q. And it is dated July 1 of '89. Correct?

A. Correct.

Q. And how long have you been an elder again?
A. Since the mid-70's, '77, '78.
Q. Okay. And you said you were in Hayward when you were an elder?
A. San Leandro.
Q. Okay. And then you later moved to Fremont and have been an elder there ever since. Correct?
A. Correct.
Q. Has the policy that is referenced in that July 1 of 1989 letter, was that a new policy on July 1 of '89?
A. No.
Q. What was the policy with respect to the confidentiality, as you described it, at the time you became an elder in the '70s?
A. It was the same thing. Maintain confidentiality. It is a scriptural requirement. We don't divulge private information.
Q. And what is the basis for that policy that has been in effect since the '70s?
A. It is based on the scriptures. The Bible tells us not to reveal confidential matters.
Q. Let's turn to the second page.
And do you see the second full paragraph? It is highlighted here.

If you could read that into the record there from the letter you have.

Do you see that? It starts with:

"The need for elders to maintain certain confidentiality has been repeatedly stressed."

Do you see that?

A. Yes.

Q. Why don't you just read that paragraph into the record for us, please.

A. It says:

"Please see the Watchtower of April 1, 1971, pages 222 through 224. And the September 1, 1987, pages 12 through 15. The September 1977 archives, service, page 6 paragraph 36, and the KSW textbook, page 65, also provide helpful direction and counsel that material strongly emphasized the elder's responsibility to avoid revealing confidential information to those not entitled to it."

Q. So at least according to that paragraph, the policy of confidentiality has been in play since at least 1971. Is that how you read that?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. And to follow up on that, then. So the second paragraph that references the confidentiality obligation, that came up before any child abuse issues came up within the church.

Is that fair to say?

A. It is fair to say, yes.

MR. SCHNACK: That's all the questions I have, your Honor. Thank you.

THE COURT: Mr. Simons?

MR. SIMONS: Yes. Thank you, your Honor. Very briefly.

REDIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. SIMONS:

Q. Sir, you described some of the meetings at the Kingdom Hall, and you said that before they begin there is a lot of kids running around and a lot of distractions and a lot of things for the elders to have to look after and microphones and parking and all that sort of thing.

Do you remember that testimony from yesterday?

A. Yes.

Q. And that's a pretty accurate description of what is going on during the times before or after these meetings. There is people visiting. People want to talk to you. People you want to talk to. The elders, themselves, may be having little discussions among themselves. There is a lot going on at these meetings. Correct?

A. To a degree, yes.

Q. Now, you mentioned that you and Mr. Abrahamson and the other elders were going to keep a close eye on Jonathan Kendrick, after you learned in 1993, of his abuse of his stepdaughter. Correct?

A. Correct.

Q. And you took it upon yourselves to protect other children in the congregation from further abuse by Mr. Kendrick?

A. I don't think that is a fair statement.

Q. Okay. You don't agree with that?

A. No. We don't just take it upon ourselves. We educate the families. They have to be aware too.

Q. Did you educate the families, or at least the parents, to be aware of Jonathan Kendrick as a specific individual who had already committed an act of child sexual abuse?

A. I answered that yesterday. We won't reveal that. Confidential information. But we make them aware through information in these articles in the Awake and Watchtower.

The announcement that Mr. Kendrick was no longer serving as a ministerial servant is a warning in itself.

Q. You mentioned that maybe two, three, four ministerial servants had been deleted during your years with the North Fremont Congregation.

A. Uh-huh.

Q. Is that correct?

A. Correct.

Q. Had any of the other ministerial servants been deleted for committing child sexual abuse?

A. No.

Q. So the fact that a ministerial servant has been deleted or removed doesn't tell the congregation anything about the reason why?

A. Correct.

Q. And it certainly does not tell them Jonathan Kendrick had sexually abused a child?

A. Corrected.

Q. Looking back -- I hope you still have it in front of you, Exhibit 1, the July 1989 policy, we looked at the section on child abuse. And the section on child abuse actually is the shortest section in the entire document, is it not?

A. Correct. It wasn't written to address child abuse, it was written to address confidentiality.

Q. All right. Well, we will go through that in a second.

What it tells you is contact the Society's Legal Department immediately.

A. And also to review the January 22nd Awake.

Q. Which we have done with Mr. Abrahamson in your absence, so I won't go back through that with you. But let's talk about what it has. It talks about specific cases. And it lists -- looks like, six, seven -- seven separate cases or situations.

One is unrelated to our specific matters involving judicial committees. That's internal affairs involving the church itself. Correct?

A. Correct.

Q. And then it talks about child abuse, search warrants.

Follow along with me let me make sure I'm not getting this wrong.

Crimes. You knew that child sexual abuse was a crime. Correct?

A. Correct.

Q. When servants and publishers moved.

And I think you mentioned that had some applicability of Mr. Kendrick because he had moved.

A. Yes.

Q. When lawsuits are threatened. Child custody.

A. Uh-huh.

Q. Correct?

A. Yes.

Q. So the range of materials that are subject to this policy statement are the ones that we have just gone through, those seven?

A. Yes. But as mentioned in paragraph 3, this is based on scriptures, this is based on keeping confidentiality.

Q. But it all assumes that reports of childhood sexual abuse -- and it assumes for this specific report of child sexual abuse by Jonathan Kendrick within the North Fremont Congregation -- was confidential?

A. Was that a question?

Q. Yes. Doesn't it assume that?

A. That the abuse is confidential?

Q. Correct.

A. Yes, it is confidential.

Q. And when you say, "Yes, it is confidential."

A. To the body of elders.

Q. You are telling me that because that's what the policy coming from New York tells you?

A. And that's what the scriptures tell us too.

We don't reveal confidential information.

Q. Right.

A. Just like we said yesterday, a priest would not reveal confidential information.

Q. Let's not go round and round. What you are telling me is when the Legal Department in New York says it is confidential, it is confidential, to you?

MR. SCHNACK: Objection, your Honor. This exhibit doesn't come from the Legal Department.

THE COURT: I will sustain it on that basis.

BY MR. SIMONS:

Q. What you are telling us is when Watchtower New York tells you it is confidential, then you deem it confidential?

A. Until we talk to them.

Q. You don't independently have any experience or training that allows you to determine what is confidential within the law and what is not?

A. True. And I'm happy to defer to Watchtower and to contact Watchtower so that we are all in agreement. It would make no sense for me to make an independent decision, based on what I think is right. I mean, it might appear to be the right decision but it might cause other complications I haven't fully thought out. So I'm more than willing to check. I will check.

Q. So in this particular case, all of your understanding came from the instructions you got from Watchtower New York as to the what was or was not confidential?

A. Yes. And not based just on this letter, based on the entire period I served as an overseer or as an elder.

Q. All right. Looking, then, at Plaintiff's 18 in your binder, and Defendant 106. Is that in evidence? And if not, may it be received?

MR. SCHNACK: What is the number?

MR. SIMONS: 18/106.

THE COURT: That's a December 20, 2009 letter.

MR. SCHNACK: No objection, your Honor.

THE COURT: All right. Plaintiff's 18 -- letters in reference to Plaintiff's 18, Defendant's 106 is in.

(Whereupon, Plaintiff's Exhibit Number 18 and Defendant's Exhibit Number 106 was admitted into evidence)

BY MR. SIMONS:

Q. And this is the letter you wrote in 2009 after meeting with Candace?

A. Correct.

Q. And it was not just yourself, it was also with Elder Larry Lamerdin?

A. Correct.

Q. And let's go to page 2.

And that's your signature at the bottom. Correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You met with Neal Conti after meeting with Candace. Correct?

A. Correct.

Q. Could we blow this paragraph up, please?

Did he offer you any help or insight?

A. Based on that paragraph, he didn't give us much insight.

Q. Did he give you help for his daughter?

A. We encouraged him to reach out to his daughter. He said he would, and we later heard he made attempts to talk with her.

Q. He said he would try?

A. Yes. That's all he could do is try.

Q. And as far as you know, he did?

A. Yes.

Q. And that's based on what he told you?

A. His conversation, yes, later on.

Not expressed in this letter, but weeks later.

Q. But he did tell you the family was very troubled back then, and that Candace was asked to shoulder too big a load for a young girl?

A. Yes. We knew that.

Q. And let's go back to the first page. And you did learn that the Conti family and Jonathan Kendrick were close friends and spent time together?

A. Yes.

Q. And Kathy was having alcohol and emotional problems?

A. Yes.

Q. And they relied on Jonathan Kendrick more than they should have?

A. That's what it says in the letter.

Q. And that's your letter?

A. Yes.

MR. SIMONS: Thank you. Nothing further, your Honor.

THE COURT: Mr. McCabe?

CROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. McCABE:

Q. Will you look at the second page of Plaintiff's 18 and Defendant's 106.

A. Okay.

Q. Mr. Clarke, during this meeting with Neal Conti, did you ask him if he suspected that his daughter, Candace, had been abused by Jonathan Kendrick?

A. Yes, we did.

Q. And what was his response?

A. He said he never suspected that.

MR. McCABE: No further questions.

THE COURT: Mr. Schnack.

CROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. SCHNACK:

Q. Mr. Clarke, Mr. Simons asked you about removal. When a ministerial servant is removed, you said that is rare occurrence. Correct? That was about three or four times in twenty years?

A. Correct.

Q. And when that is announced to the congregation, does the congregation --

In your experience, how does the congregation interpret that?

MR. SIMONS: Objection. Calls for speculation.

THE COURT: Sustained.

BY MR. SCHNACK:

Q. With respect to removal again, it is a serious thing, in your experience?

A. Very serious, yes.

Q. And with respect to the instructions again. We are back to the Exhibit 1 that is in front of you. It is the July 1, 1989 letter. What is the basis for those instructions?

A. It is scriptural. Based on the Bible.

MR. McCABE: No further questions, your Honor.

MR. SIMONS: Nothing further.

THE COURT: Mr. Clarke. Thank you for your time. You are now excused.

MR. SIMONS: We call Evelyn Kendrick, who I believe is out by the elevators.

EVELYN KENDRICK

WAS DULY SWORN TO TELL THE TRUTH BY THE CLERK

AND TESTIFIED AS FOLLOWS:

THE CLERK: Would you please state your name and spell your first and last name for the record?

THE WITNESS: Evelyn Ruth Kendrick. E-V-E-L-Y-N, Kendrick, K-E-N-D-R-I-C-K.

DIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. SIMONS:

Q. Ms. Kendrick, tell us what your occupation is.

A. I work for a hospital. I have been there 23 years. And I work in the foundation department, and we do fundraising for the hospital.

Q. And what is the nature of your particular job?

A. I'm executive assistant in the foundation department.

Q. And where do you live?

A. I live in Mountain House, California.

Q. And who do you reside with?

A. My daughter, Andrea, and her family.

Q. You said Andrea.

Do people who know her call her Andraya (phonetic)?

A. Andrea.

Q. Andrea. Not Andraya (phonetic)?

A. Right.

Q. A person who would call her Andraya (phonetic) would not be acquainted with her particularly well?

A. Probably so.

Q. Now, were you married to Jonathan Kendrick?

A. Yes.

Q. And when did you first meet Mr. Kendrick?

A. I believe we met in either '86 or '87 because we -- by the time, when we new each other to the time we got married, we had known each other between a year and year-and-a-half. So between '86 and '87.

Q. How old was Andrea at that time?

A. At the time I met him, she was seven and a half, eight.

Q. And where did you and Mr. Kendrick live?

A. We both lived in Fremont.

Q. And did you move in together at some point?

A. Right before the marriage.

Q. When were you married?

A. May 21st, 1988.

Q. Was there a time that you and Mr. Kendrick became involved in Jehovah's Witnesses?

A. Yes.

Q. When was that?

A. Maybe six months before we got married.

Q. What were the circumstances that caused you to become involved with Jehovah's Witnesses?

A. Well, I had been brought up a Protestant my whole life and my dad was a minister. But when I moved out at 18, I stopped going to church, and so all those years up to the time I married Jonathan, I really wasn't involved in any church, going or anything. So at that point, when he brought Jehovah's Witnesses up to me, I told him I would go to see how I felt about the religion, and so I decided to go with him.

Q. Whose idea was it, initially?

A. His. His grandmother was a Jehovah's Witnesses, and so he wanted to try it out.

Q. And did you then become involved in the North Congregation in Fremont?

A. Yes.

Q. So did Jonathan Kendrick?

A. Yes.

Q. What was the level of his involvement?

A. He was baptized first before I was, and he became a ministerial servant. I think. I remember that is what it is called.

Q. Was part of your social life also involving the Jehovah's Witnesses North Congregation community?

A. Yes.

Q. In what way?

A. We went out in door-to-door service, and we socialized by going out to dinners with different people and having people over to our house for dinner, that sort of thing.

Q. Were you acquainted in a social basis with some of the elders?

A. Yes.

Q. In what way?

A. Same thing, dinners and door-to-door service, that sort of thing.

Q. How much a part of your life during this time was the Jehovah's Witnesses congregation and community?

A. How much were we involved?

Q. Yeah, how much a part of your life was it?

A. A big part.

Q. And describe what you mean by that?

A. Well, we only socialized with people of that congregation. We were kind of -- well, not told outright, but that we should only associate with people of that religion and not of any other religion because they could be a bad influence.

Q. Now, with regard to Mr. Kendrick at the time that you were first married to him, did he manifest an interest in some fashion in what I will call a little girl type of sexuality?

A. With me, he did.

Q. And in what way?

A. Well, for instance, the day we were married, on our honeymoon the next day, I put on a little summer outfit, a little short skirt. And he would tell me things like "Come and sit on my lap, little girl."

And at the time I was, like, 110 pounds. And he would always tell me I was too fat for my height -- 110 was too fat for me, and I should be weighing about 80 pounds.

And I thought, 80 pounds? That's a child. But he always called me a little girl and always wanted me to sit on his lap. I just thought he was being affectionate.

Q. Did there come a time when you learned that he had sexually abused your daughter?

A. Yes, I did. She told me when it happened.

Q. And was there, after that time, a meeting that was held with some of the elders?

A. Yes, I called them because I felt they could help us out and they would protect us -- they would protect me and my daughter somehow. So, yes, I did.

Q. Why did you call the elders and not the police?

A. We were kind of a close knit group. So I figured they were the ones to tell, and they were the ones to help us, and somehow help Jonathan with whatever he was going through.

Q. Do you remember specifically which elder you called?

A. I believe I called Gary Abrahamson.

Q. And then there was a meeting at your house?

A. Yes.

Q. And Elders Abrahamson and Clarke were there?

A. Yes, they were both there.

Q. Yourself?

A. Yes.

Q. And Jonathan?

A. And Jonathan.

Q. And Andrea?

A. I don't remember Andrea being there. She may have come in toward the end of the meeting, but I don't recall her sitting there during the whole meeting. I don't recall her being there the whole time.

Q. At some point, Andrea came in and told the elders what had happened; is that correct?

A. I believe so.

Q. And do you have a recollection of what she told the elders in that meeting at your house?

A. I would say she told them exactly what had happened, exactly what she told me, that he had inappropriately touched her in a few places while she was sleeping.

Q. Did she say where those places were?

A. Yes. She said one was underneath her blouse, underneath her bra, and then he tried to get underneath her underwear.

And at the time she told me -- I didn't realize -- he had given her drugs to make her sleepy. He had given her Vicodin and he was the only one who had Vicodin in the house. So he gave her two Vicodins. And I was real upset about that, him giving her drugs like that. And now I assume that he was doing that so she could be sleepy and she wouldn't realize what he was doing.

Q. Did you tell -- I'm sorry.

Did Andrea tell the elders about the Vicodin?

A. I believe she did.

Q. And when you say you believe she did, do you have a recollection of the Vicodin being discussed in that meeting?

A. Yes, I do. I believe she said that "He gave me two Vicodins to take because I had a headache." Yes.

Q. Now, what response did you get from the elders when this report was made?

A. They didn't seem to be overly concerned about it. And they more or less said that it was my fault because I had stopped sleeping -- I had stopped sharing a bed with my husband at that time.

Q. Do you recall whether or not -- do you recall the exact words that they used?

A. I believe they said something to the effect that it was my fault that he did that to Andrea because I wasn't performing my wifely duties.

Q. Was there some discussion in that meeting in which you or Andrea asked the elders to keep this private?

A. Oh, no. No, I don't believe so.

Q. And at any time did it come up between yourself and the elders that you or Andrea were asking that what Jonathan did be kept private?

A. No.

Q. Was that important to you at that time?

A. Well, I believe that they should have done something to stop it. I mean, I thought it might have been an isolated incident, but I called them so that they could help and I -- I wanted them to do something so I wouldn't have said keep it quiet, because eventually we did call the police.

Q. And that was a couple months later?

A. Yes. I didn't do it right away because I thought I was going to fix everything. I didn't want my marriage to dissolve.

And like I said, I thought it was an isolated incident, and I was going to try to fix things myself. And it didn't work that way.

Q. Did the elders ever speak to you apart from Jonathan being in the room?

A. I don't believe so.

Q. On this subject, I'm talking about?

A. No.

Q. Did they ever talk separate to Andrea?

A. No.

MR. SIMONS: Nothing further, your Honor.

MR. SCHNACK: I'll go first, your Honor, because of Mr. McCabe's voice.

CROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. SCHNACK:

Q. Mrs. Kendrick, my name is Bob Schnack. I have some questions for you. You mentioned you married Jonathan Kendrick on May 21, 1988; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And your daughter, Andrea, was from a prior marriage, a prior relationship?

A. Yes.

Q. When was Andrea born?

A. I was first married at the age of 18, and she was born when I was 25. So I was married seven years or so.

Q. So was she born July of '78 or July '79?

A. '79.

Q. And then did Andrea live with you and Mr. Kendrick after you married him?

A. Yes.

Q. And did Andrea live with you and Mr. Kendrick the entire time you were together?

A. No. No. She stayed with my mother until we actually got married, and then she moved in.

Q. Okay. So Andrea moved in with you in roughly May of 1988 when you married Jonathan?

A. Yes.

Q. When you married Jonathan?

A. Right.

Q. Now, your marriage to Jonathan Kendrick eventually ended in a divorce. Correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And the divorce itself was entered in 1998; is that correct?

A. Correct.

Q. But you had separated in October of 1996; is that correct?

A. Yes, about two years, right.

Q. Is the October time frame correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And indeed the divorce papers show that you were separated on October 11 of 1996; do you recall that?

A. That sounds about right.

Q. Okay. And up until -- so from the time you married Jonathan May 21, 1988 up until October 11, 1996, did you and Jonathan live together?

A. Yes, in separate rooms.

Q. In separate rooms, but you lived together in the same house?

A. Yes.

Q. And Andrea lived with you during that entire time as well?

A. Yes.

Q. And then in October -- back in October 11 of '96, you moved out of the family home; is that correct?

A. Yes, I did. Andrea and I did.

Q. And where did you move then?

A. We moved into a condominium in Newark.

Q. Okay. And that's a condominium that Jonathan helped find for you at that point?

A. No. I found it. But he helped me with a little bit of money.

Q. Okay.

A. But I found it.

Q. Okay. So Jonathan stayed in the house you lived in?

A. He stayed in it until they were foreclosing it, and then he had to get out.

Q. And that was just what, three or four weeks later after you had moved out. Correct?

A. I don't recall, because I really wasn't keeping in contact with him anymore.

Q. Were you aware that in either late October of '96 or early November of '96 that Jonathan Kendrick moved into the Francis house?

A. I wasn't aware of that.

Q. Okay. But you do confirm that you separated from him in October 11 of '96?

A. Yes.

Q. And prior to that, you and Andrea had been living in the same house with Jonathan Kendrick?

A. Yes.

Q. Let's now turn to the incident of sexual abuse by Jonathan Kendrick of Andrea. You said that your daughter had reported that to you when that happened?

A. Yes. Within five or ten minutes.

Q. And that was back in July of 1993; is that correct?

A. I believe that's about the right time frame.

Q. It was right around the time of her birthday. Wasn't that correct? Andrea? Do you recall that?

A. Honestly, I don't recall the exact date.

Q. And you said you did not report it to the police when she told you?

A. Not initially.

Q. Okay. Why not?

A. I thought it was an isolated incident. I thought maybe because he had been drinking. I wanted to try to save my marriage. And so I called the elders instead thinking that they could help us out.

Q. Did you call the elders in July of '93 or did you wait until November?

A. I think I might have waited a bit.

Q. And, again, you were trying to deal with it within the family?

A. Yes.

Q. Is that a fair statement?

A. Yes. I was actually a little embarrassed to call anybody, but, yes, I thought I was going to try to fix it.

Q. Were you aware of any other incidents of sex abuse between Jonathan and Andrea?

A. No. This was a complete shock.
Q. And there were no incidents after?
A. Not that I know of. Not with her. No. Not with her. I was very watchful after that with her.
Q. So in November 1993, the two elders came to your house? Correct?
A. Yes.
Q. Where did you sit in the house when the elders came?
A. In the kitchen. Dining, kitchen.
Q. And you sounded somewhat ambivalent as to whether Andrea was there the entire time. Do you specifically remember that she walked in, or is it just a vague memory?
A. It is kind of vague, but I think I have a small recollection that she walked in toward the end, maybe the last few minutes.
Q. But the two elders have already testified that she was there the entire time, and they described sitting around the table as you did.
A. We did sit around the table. I don't recall my daughter being there the whole time.
Q. But you said that's a vague memory?
A. Yes.
Q. And did the elders come with their Bibles?

A. Yes. They always have their Bibles.
Q. Did they say a prayer to start the meeting?
A. I believe so.
Q. And then did they ask Jonathan Kendrick what had happened?
A. Yes.
Q. And did he confess to at least touching Andrea's breasts?
A. Yes.
Q. Did he say it was inadvertent?
A. He didn't.
Q. He didn't? You didn't hear that?
A. No.
Q. Did the elders tell you during that meeting that you could report it to the police?
A. I don't recall.
Q. But you are not sure one way or the other?
A. No.
Q. But you did, in fact, report it to the police in 1994. Correct?
A. Yes.
Q. Were you interviewed by the police?
A. I believe we were both.
Yeah. We were both.
Q. But you were interviewed separately from Jonathan. Correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And you were interviewed separately from Andrea. Correct?

A. I believe it was Andrea and I both together.

Q. And do you have a recall of that? Because the police report says otherwise.

A. Maybe it was separately. I don't remember for sure. I thought it was both of us together.

Q. Do you recall telling the police that Andrea had taken Vicodin for her back problem?

A. Yes, and she didn't have a back problem.

Q. You don't recall telling the police that?

A. No. She said that her head was hurting, and her back was hurting from her headache, and that's why he said he gave her the Vicodin.

Q. So are you telling me you did not tell the police that Andrea had taken Vicodin for her back problem?

A. No. I don't recall saying that.

MR. SCHNACK: Okay. Let's go ahead and --

Your Honor, it is Plaintiff's 5 and Defendant's 94. It is the Fremont Police report. I think we discussed that with counsel.

MR. SIMONS: I think it is for identification only, though. Here is the document.

MR. McCABE: Are you objecting?

MR. SIMONS: Yes, to the document. Yes. Not to the substance.

THE COURT: Certainly, at this juncture, I will allow reference to it for identification purposes only.

In a moment I will get the entire report.

MR. SCHNACK: I would like to use it, your Honor, to refresh the witness' recollection, if I may.

THE COURT: Okay. You may start with that. He is going to present it to you, ma'am, for a moment, to see if you can take a look at it to see if it refreshes your recollection first. But also, it is for identification purposes only. But first to refresh and then we can go from there.

MR. SCHNACK: May I approach, your Honor?

THE COURT: You may.

BY MR. SCHNACK:

Q. Ms. Kendrick, I'm going to stand alongside you here.

Have you seen this police report before?

A. That was many years ago.

Q. Did you read through it, at the time when you saw it?

A. Yes, I certainly did.

Q. Now, here on this page, it shows that, it says that CPS case worker Nicole Radford, and the police officer, Mr. Davila, interviewed the victim and interviewed her at the hospital. Do you see that?

Do you recall that Andrea was interviewed at the hospital by the police and the CPS person?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. Okay. And it says here, the victim told us her stepfather and mother found out that she was sexually active with her boyfriend. She took one Vicodin for her back problem --

MR. SIMONS: Your Honor, if it is going to refresh the witness' recollection, she should read it to herself and --

THE COURT: I agree. Why don't you show it to her, counsel, and let her read it to see if it refreshes her recollection?

MR. SCHNACK: I would ask you to read the highlighted sections.

THE WITNESS: Out loud?

MR. SCHNACK: No. To yourself.

THE WITNESS: Just that portion (indication).

BY MR. SCHNACK:

Q. You can stop there.

So does that refresh your recollection as to whether Andrea took the Vicodin herself?

A. She didn't take it herself. He gave it to her, and he gave her two.

Q. Okay. Do you recall telling the police that, indeed, she had taken the Vicodin herself?

A. I don't recall that part.

Q. Okay. Why don't you read this page. This is where they --

A. (Witness complies).

Q. So doesn't that refresh your recollection that you had told the police that when Jonathan went into the bedroom Andrea was in bed because she had taken Vicodin earlier for her back pain?

A. It must be true because it is written in there.

Q. That is what you told the police then?

A. I must have.

Q. And was it true when you told the police that?

A. Yes. After Andrea had told me that he had given her the Vicodin, and she took it.

Q. But you told the police she had taken it?

A. I must have. It is in there.

Q. And you told the police that she had taken it for her back pain. Correct?

A. Correct.

Q. And wouldn't your memory have been better back in February of 1994 than it was some 18 years later?

A. Maybe.

Q. So the incident was fresh in your mind back then. Right?

A. Yes. You try to forget all those things, you know, during the years.

Q. Do you recall that Mr. Kendrick was charged with a misdemeanor as a result of that conduct?

A. Yes.

Q. Was he convicted?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you ever tell the elders that you had gone to the police?

A. I don't recall.

Q. Do you know if the police ever talked to the elders about their investigation of Mr. Kendrick in that 1993 incident?

A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. Do you know if the district attorney ever talked to the elders about that 1993 incident and the investigation?

A. I don't know.

Q. You don't know if the elders knew whether Mr. Kendrick had been convicted related to that --

A. I'm sure they knew, but I don't remember when they talked to them.

Q. How did you know that they knew?

A. I think I just assumed.

Q. But you don't know one way or the other. Correct?

A. No.

THE COURT: Well, a little bit of the old business of the old double negative. So when you never or you don't know, and the answer is no, then the effect of a double negative. And it has happened several occasions during the course of this trial. So let's not get into the double negative. Why don't you rephrase it.

MR. SCHNACK: I appreciate it, your Honor. It is a bad question.

THE COURT: I'm not being judgmental. I just wanted to make sure that the jury understands as a matter of the use of the language, when you say "don't" and "no" or "never" and "no," the effect of that answer is when you use double negatives. It is like physics, you now have a positive.

So back to you for a moment counsel.

MR. SCHNACK: I appreciate it, your Honor.

BY MR. SCHNACK:

Q. You have no knowledge that the elders were informed of Mr. Kendrick's conviction for the July 1993 incident?

A. No.

Q. And to go back, you lived with Mr. Kendrick from the time you married him, May 21st of 1988 until you moved out on October 11, 1996. Correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And Andrea lived with you and him during that same time period?

A. Right.

MR. SCHNACK: Thank you. Nothing further.

MR. SIMONS: I have a couple of redirect questions.

REDIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. SIMONS:

Q. So by the time you called the elders some months later, it is because you realized you can't deal with this in a family situation anymore.

Is that fair?

A. Right.

Q. Counsel asked you about the house. Were there times that Mr. Kendrick would have the house all to himself?

A. Yes. Many times. Andrea and I would take off for the weekend because it was unbearable there at times. He would fight with us and physically hurt us and so forth. And she wasn't comfortable with him there. And so yes -- and he would often pick fights and then we would leave for the weekend, and so he was there alone quite a bit.

Q. And when you say he would pick fights, Mr. Kendrick would initiate some kind of a fight that would drive you and Andrea out of the house?

A. Yes. He knew which button to push to get me upset, and we would start arguing, and then I would say, "Okay. I have got to get out of here." And then we would leave.

Q. So he would have the house all to himself for days at a time on frequent occasions?

A. Yes.

Q. On the question of the Vicodin, when you say she took it herself, does that mean that Andrea had her own prescription for Vicodin?

A. No. He gave it to her, and she took it. And he didn't put it in her mouth, he put it in her hand, and she took it.

Q. So when you say she took it, you are not referring to the fact that it was her Vicodin.

A. No. No, I am not. It was his. He often had Vicodin in the medicine cabinet.

Q. Do you know whether or not at the time the criminal conviction we mentioned was held, whether or not Mr. Kendrick was still a very active member within the congregation?

A. He was. I was surprised that -- you know, what they do is when someone does wrong, they disfellowship them, and they move away.

MR. SIMONS: Hold on. I'm sorry to interrupt you.

THE COURT: Let's strike any reference to "disfellowship" and move on.

MR. SIMONS: And I have no further questions on redirect.

CROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. SCHNACK:

Q. Ms. Kendrick, you said you worked at the same job for 23 years?

A. Yes.

Q. Is that a 40-hour a week job?

A. Yes.

Q. What was your work schedule in the '94 to '96 time frame?

A. It has always been 8:00 to 4:30.

Q. Monday through Friday?

A. Yes.

Q. And you said that you and Andrea would take off on weekends?

A. Uh-huh.

Q. And let me back up on that. You had marital problems prior to July of 1993 with Mr. Kendrick, did you not?

A. Yes.

Q. And you called the elders occasionally because you and he would get into yelling circumstances, shall we say?

A. A little more than yelling. He was violent.

Q. And reports are that you are not a shrinking violet either, that you would yell back at him?

A. I would yell, but I never struck him ever.

Q. Okay.

A. Ever.

Q. Fair enough. And when did the marital problems begin? In the early '90s, late '80s?

A. Actually, right after we got married, he started telling me I was too fat for him. At the time I was very small and thin. And he constantly nagged me about my weight, about my weight. And that started pushing me away, and I started distancing myself from him.

And after you are told over and over that you are not good enough or you are too fat, I started gaining weight and I started moving away from him. I didn't want to be around him because I didn't want him looking at me anymore in a sexual way because he said I didn't please him.

Q. When did you start taking off for weekends that you described?

A. It was after the incident.

Q. After this July '93 incident?

A. Yes.

Q. Where did you go with Andrea?

A. A couple times we went to Mendocino. A couple times we went to Monterey.

Q. When did you leave?

A. We would leave either on a Friday evening or early Saturday morning, and we returned Sunday evening, because I had to go to work.

Q. And how many times did you do that, say, during 1994, those types of trips?

A. Maybe three or four.

Q. Three or four during the entire year?
A. Uh-huh.
Q. Is that yes?
A. Yes.
Q. But all the other weekends, then, you would have been at home or in the area?
A. We would have been in the area, but we probably would go out and do things. But, yes, we would come back home the same day. We tried to get out of the house as much as possible.
Q. Okay. But, again, by getting out of the house on those types of things, you would be out for a few hours and then come back?
A. Yes. Correct.
Q. So during '94, you did three or four of those trips where you were gone the entire weekend?
How about '95? What is your best memory as to how many of those trips you took where you were away for the entire weekend?
A. We probably did that in '95, well, maybe two or three times.
Q. Two or three times in '95 when you were gone for the entire weekend?
A. I believe so.
Q. And how about 1996 up until you separated in October?

A. Maybe once or twice.

Q. Once or twice. Okay. So in '94, '95 and '96 until you separated, my math has it, you know, six to perhaps eight times that you spent weekends away from the house?

A. Yes.

Q. Is that accurate?

A. Yes.

Q. But otherwise, during that time, you and Andrea were in the area, would be at the house on Sundays, for example?

A. Yes.

MR. SCHNACK: No other questions, your Honor.

REDIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. SIMONS:

Q. Even if you were staying at the house, were there frequent occasions because Mr. Kendrick would be there or might be there, you would get out of the house for as long as possible?

A. Oh, of course. We were always trying to get away from him. He wasn't very pleasant to be around.

Q. And he had the house to himself most of the time?

A. Yes.

MR. SIMONS: Nothing further.

CROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. SCHNACK:

Q. Ms. Kendrick, are you changing your story then? You just said you would be out of the house on Sundays for a couple of hours and then come back.

A. That's what I said.

MR. SCHNACK: Okay. Nothing further.

MR. SIMONS: May this witness be excused?

THE COURT: Mr. Kendrick, thank you for your time. You are now excused.

MR. SIMONS: May she remain in the courtroom?

THE COURT: She may.

MR. SIMONS: There has been a change in witnesses.

(Sidebar discussion)

CLAUDIA FRANCIS

WAS DULY SWORN TO TELL THE TRUTH BY THE CLERK

AND TESTIFIED AS FOLLOWS:

THE CLERK: Would you please state your name and spell your first and last name for the record?

THE WITNESS: Claudia Francis.

C-L-A-U-D-I-A, F-R-A-N-C-I S.

DIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. SIMONS:

Q. Ms. Francis, in what city do you currently live?

A. Fremont.

Q. Are you involved in a Jehovah's Witnesses organization?

A. Yes, I am.

Q. Which one?

A. I am in the Mountain View French Congregation.

Q. Before that, were you a member of the North Fremont congregation?

A. Yes.

Q. And was your husband an elder in that congregation?

A. Yes.

Q. What years were you involved in North Fremont?

A. We were there from 1989 until about 2006.

Q. And while in the time period of '89 to '06, was your husband an elder there for the entire period?

A. No.

Q. When did he cease his duties as an elder?
A. I don't remember the exact time. I know that he was an elder for about five years or more. I would say in the year 1998 is when he stepped down, no longer being an elder.
Q. And from your deposition, we know that there are some health issues with him?
A. Yes.
Q. Did you, in the time that you were in the North Fremont Congregation, become acquainted with Jonathan Kendrick?
A. Yes.
Q. And how did you meet Mr. Kendrick?
A. I met Mr. Kendrick because he was my husband's very good friend.
Q. Where did your husband and Mr. Kendrick first meet?
A. They met at the Kingdom Hall in North Fremont.
Q. Do you recall, when you came to the congregation, whether Mr. Kendrick was already a member?
A. He was not.
Q. So do you have an estimate as to the time frame after you joined the North Fremont Congregation that Mr. Kendrick became a member?

A. He would have been baptized and been a member, so to speak, in 1991.

Q. And what was it about Mr. Kendrick and your husband that sort of led to their becoming good friends?

A. They were both interested in sports a lot. And they were just -- they just got along. My husband is very chatty and so was Jonathan.

Q. You used the word "chatty."

Can you tell us a little bit more of what you observed at that time of Mr. Kendrick's personality?

A. He was kind of a bigger than life personality. He could be outrageous. He was opinionated, rough around the edges.

Q. Would you say he was an extrovert?

A. Extrovert, yes.

Q. And colorful?

A. Very colorful, yes.

Q. Would you describe him as quiet?

A. No.

Q. We have heard a description of him as a quiet person. Does that in any way reflect Jonathan Kendrick?

A. Not the Jonathan I knew, no.

Q. Did he become a regular visitor at your home?

A. Yes.

Q. When we say regular visitor, how frequently would he have been there?

A. Well, over the years he frequented the house more and more because he and my husband were very good friends. And he became very fond of my sons, and they spent time together.

So initially, when they first got to know each other, maybe once every few Mondays or so. And then after the years wore on, he would be over sometimes five days a week.

Q. Did you learn that the marriage between Mr. Kendrick and Evelyn was not working well?

A. Yes.

Q. And was there a sort of a -- what I will call a symmetry between the frequency that he was at your house and the decline in his own home life?

A. I can't really relate those two instances together specifically.

Q. But you knew, certainly by 1993 or '94 that his marriage was no longer working?

A. It was in decline, yes.

Q. And you saw that he was at your house more and more?

A. Yes.

Q. Were you ever friends with Evelyn Kendrick?

A. No. We were acquainted, but never friends, really, in the definition of friendship.

Q. Were there times that Mr. Kendrick displayed anger to you, or in your presence?

A. Not to me. He could get angry and forceful about his feelings on subjects and on matters, but there was no physical violence ever displayed in any of our presence.

Q. Did you feel from your own observations of him that he had an anger problem?

A. I believe so, yes.

Q. You mentioned that Mr. Kendrick was removed as a ministerial servant. Did you know why at the time?

A. No.

Q. Did you have any idea that it was because he had sexually abused a child?

A. No.

Q. Did you understand at that time or within the years that you knew him that he was a risk to sexually abuse a child?

A. No.

Q. Did he display to you in his conversation, what I will call an excessive interest in sexual issues?

A. Yes.

Q. How did that manifest itself?

A. He would talk about his past before becoming a Jehovah's Witness, which we are required to live a moral life. And he would talk about his past and his sexual activity, which was a lot.

Q. Did he brag about it?

A. Yes. It seemed to me that he was bragging.

Q. And was this not just in your presence, but in the presence of your husband?

A. I don't recall specific instances. I don't recall. Specifically, I could not relate one or two instances, really.

Q. Did you understand that your husband was aware of this sexual interest on his part?

A. I believe, yes.

Q. And why was that?

A. Because Jonathan was opinionated and he was out there. He did not hold back from giving his opinion on anything or going into his past.

But from my husband's perspective, their relationship was not based on his interest in sex, it was all sports. Guy stuff.

Q. You mentioned he expressed things in sexual interest and history. Did he talk about what I will call unusual sexual relationships he had had?

A. I will only answer that by saying the frequency and the fact that he, quote, did a woman his mother's age and he, quote, did a paraplegic.

Q. Did you know the Conti family?

A. Yes.

Q. When do you recall meeting them?

A. I would have met them shortly after we came to Fremont North, which would be 1989, '90.

Q. Do you remember Candace?

A. Yes.

Q. And she would have been, maybe, five or six when you first became acquainted with her?

A. Yes.

Q. What do you remember about her?

A. She was an adorable little red-headed girl with freckles, kind of quiet. Well behaved.

Q. Do you remember her giving you a hug regularly?

A. Yes, yes.

Q. Whenever you would see her?

A. Well, yes. Mainly I would see her with her father at the Kingdom Hall. And we would visit with each other before and after. It is not like the traditional church service. So children sit with their parents. So, yes, after a meeting, we would often visit and she would routinely come up to me and give me a hug.

Q. She was an affectionate child?

A. Yes.

Q. And did she seem to be seeking affection from others as well?

A. I don't recall that.

Q. Did you ever see her father hug her?

A. No. Not necessarily. If there was physical contact, he would have had his arm around her shoulder, in a general sense.

Q. But never a hug?

A. I don't recall that, no.

Q. You became acquainted with Mrs. Conti as well?

A. Yes.

Q. And in what way did you first meet her?

A. I met her in the context of the Kingdom Hall setting.

Q. And what did you observe about her?

A. Nothing outstanding. But as the years wore on, her behavior, I had the opinion of, that she was mentally unbalanced.

Q. And what was it that led you to seeing this change in her in forming the opinion you have just given us?

A. I can't remember the specific occasion and what it was. But she was into childcare. And initially

I began that. And an incident happened that had to do with childcare that -- where we crossed paths in that regard. And I remember feeling, "She is unbalanced here. Something is not right. I'm not getting into childcare."

But honestly, specifically, I don't remember in detail what that incident was.

Q. But after that first incident that started your thinking this way, did you see on other occasions things that made you think she was flakey?

A. No. Not really. I know that she did not attend the Kingdom Hall regularly at all.

Q. Was there a point where she stopped coming at all?

A. I would say yes.

Q. In your deposition, you called Ms. Conti a flake.

Do you remember that?

A. Yes.

Q. That was based on more than just the one occasion?

A. It would have been, yes.

Q. And did you feel that this was something that was pretty obvious to you --

Let me backtrack a second.

You are not a trained mental health care professional?

A. No, I am not.

Q. The things you saw were obvious to a person who would interact with Mrs. Conti?

A. I did not see her regularly, but people do form perceptions when they are with others, and the way they relate to each other and so forth.

Q. Were there times that you observed Jonathan Kendrick and Candace Conti together outside of the Kingdom Hall setting?

A. Only once.

Q. What do you remember?

A. That he bought her a pair of roller blades and he was rollerblading with her in the neighborhood and they came over to our house and they were together.

Q. And Candace was about nine?

A. Nine or ten.

Q. And Mr. Kendrick, obviously, much older?

A. In his forties.

Q. Did you think that was odd?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. And did you share the observation that you had with your husband?

A. No, I don't believe I did.

Q. What did you think was odd about it?
A. Well, I thought it was odd that a guy in his forties with no children would be buying a pair of roller blades for, you know, a young girl and rollerblading with her. If he would have bought the roller blades as a gift, that's one thing. But rollerblading with her, I felt was odd.
Q. Did Jonathan Kendrick make comments about his feelings towards Candace?
A. Yes.
Q. What would he say?
A. He would say, "I love Candace."
Q. Did he say other things along that line?
A. "Candace is my favorite."
Q. Anything else that you can remember?
A. No.
Q. Do you recall him saying things like, "She is my Number 1"?
A. I don't recall that expression.
Q. Now, Mr. Kendrick, in addition to becoming friends with your husband, was at least acquainted with your sons. Correct?
A. Yes.
Q. Did you have a son who was the same age as Candace?

A. Yes.

Q. And then an older boy as well?

A. Yes.

Q. And he is, I think, what, three years older?

A. Five and a half years older.

Q. And did Mr. Kendrick, to your recollection, take the boys out for a shopping spree?

You said he bought roller blades for Candace. Did he do something for them?

A. Yes, he did.

Q. And how did you learn about that?

A. Well, he bought my son, my older boy a very expensive guitar and located a guitar teacher and paid for his lessons, would come over and pick up my son Justin, take him to his lessons every single week, and maybe they would hang out afterwards, and so he was instrumental in that.

He bought my younger son a drum set and told my younger son in the middle of fifth grade, if you bring your grades up and you can prove yourself, there will be a nice gift for you.

And so he did at the end of the year, he brought his grades up, and he surprised him with a drum set.

Q. Did he also take your sons on a shopping trip and buy them a skill saw?

A. Yes.

Q. And to your knowledge, did someone else go along on that shopping trip?

A. Yes.

Q. Who was that?

A. I originally thought, in remembering the certain child, that it was Candace. But it is the same possibility that I made a mistake and it was another young girl, that she would have known in our congregation.

Q. Was it Brianna Decker?

A. Brianna Becker, yes.

Q. And she was also about ten years old at that time?

A. She was more like 13. Twelve or 13.

Q. And did you see the receipt --

A. Yes.

Q. -- from the purchase that he made for her?

A. Yes.

Q. What did he buy for her?

A. He bought her a black bra.

Q. And when you saw the receipt, did you ask Mr. Kendrick about it.

A. Yes.

Q. And what did he tell you?

A. He said, well, every young girl needs a black bra.

Q. What did you think of that?

A. I thought it was very inappropriate.

Q. Did you think it was weird?

A. Yeah. Inappropriate.

Q. And at the time that the rollerblading with Candace and the black bra incident occurred, did you have any idea that Mr. Kendrick had sexually molested his stepdaughter?

A. That's a difficult question for me to answer, based on timing, because Jonathan did tell me that his wife, Evelyn, accused him of molesting Andrea. I don't recall that that was prior to the rollerblading. That could have been afterwards. I don't remember the sequence of events, honestly.

Q. I think in your deposition, you shared with us that the comment about Andrea, the accusation of Andrea, was made when he lived briefly at your house?

A. Yes.

Q. And so that would have been after his separation from Evelyn and the time that he lost the house?

A. That's correct.

Q. Did you also see a photograph of Jonathan Kendrick with young children?

A. Yes.

Q. What did you see?

A. I saw him outstretched on the floor with his head like this (indicating) and his legs extended, and in his underwear, with two young children sitting on the floor in front of him in their underwear.

Q. Was that a much younger Jonathan Kendrick in that photograph?

A. Yes.

Q. And did you see that photograph very late in the time that you knew Mr. Kendrick? Would that have been about the time that he was moving out of the area?

A. That's correct.

Q. Is it fair to say that you never made a connection of the conduct with Brianna and the conduct with Candace and the statements and all in anything that had happened to Andrea until sometime later when you finally learned about the molestation of Andrea?

A. That's correct.

Q. And then it all fit together for you?

A. It didn't fit together until years later. Yeah. And then in retrospect.

MR. McCABE: Your Honor, may I interpose an objection?

THE COURT: You may.

MR. McCABE: May we approach?

THE COURT: All right. Why don't you re-ask the question, counsel.

(Sidebar Discussion)

THE COURT: All right. Why don't you re-ask the question.

BY MR. SIMONS:

Q. Was it some years later when all the information was available to you that you connected the dots, so to speak?

A. Yes.

MR. SIMONS: Thank you, your Honor.

THE COURT: All right. Let's take our break.

(Whereupon, the following proceedings were heard outside the presence of jurors)

THE COURT: All right. I just wanted to put on the record that I assured counsel as to last question and answer as to when Ms. Francis, quote, put it together i.e., connected the dots, as to Mr. Kendrick's behavior with children, that that will be subject to any limiting instruction I give the jury ultimately.

However, I expressed on the record, absent further evidence being produced, that we might have to consider it with whatever the appropriate instruction as to -- the testimony as to the rollerblading incident and the black bra, again, depending on the evidence produced.

MR. SCHNACK: And could we add that photograph to it as well, your Honor?

THE COURT: We could. That was a little more opaque, but the answer is sure.

MR. SCHNACK: All right. Thank you.

MR. SIMONS: Your Honor, Clarke, Evelyn, Andrea, Claudia Lamerdin, Dorothy Conti, Kathleen Conti and Cliff Williams.

MR. SCHNACK: I can show you my list, too, that doesn't have Andrea on there. So for what that's worth.

THE COURT: Okay. Counsel, I'm trying to be both collegial and whatnot. I didn't rule because I didn't have a specific memory in light of the exhaustive list.

MR. SCHNACK: Your Honor, we can bring her in. There is no objection.

THE COURT: Okay. Let's take our break.

(Break taken)

THE COURT: All right. Mr. McCabe.

CROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. McCABE:

Q. Good morning, Ms. Francis. Could you tell us when you became a member of the Jehovah's Witnesses?

A. I was baptized in 1970.

Q. How old?

A. I was 18.

Q. In the 1980s and 1990s, were you a subscriber to the Watchtower Magazine?

A. Yes.

Q. I want to show you what has previously been admitted into evidence. It is Defendant's Number 17, Plaintiff's Number 59. I ask you if you recognize this magazine.

A. Yes.

Q. What is it?

A. "Child molesting, you can protect your child."

Q. And when you received the magazines in '80s and '90s by subscription, was it your custom and habit to read them?

A. Yes, on the most part.

Q. Do you recall reading this magazine when you received it?

A. I suppose I did. It was a long time ago,

yes.

Q. Okay. I want to approach you also with another exhibit. It is Plaintiff's Exhibit Number 64, Defendant's Exhibit 37, and ask you if you recognize this magazine.

A. Yes.

Q. And in the 1990s -- well, can you tell us what this magazine is?

A. Awake. "Protect your children."

Q. And the date of that magazine?

A. October 8, 1993.

Q. And did you also receive that magazine in the mail?

A. I would have, yes.

Q. Who was the publisher of that magazine?

A. Watchtower Bible and Tract Society.

Q. Do you recall reading that magazine?

A. I would have at the time. I read the journals regularly.

Q. Where do you live in Fremont?

A. I live on Capistrano Drive in a neighborhood called Cabrillo Park.

Q. In the 1990s, specifically '93 to '97, do you recall where the Conti family lived?

A. Yes.

Q. Where did they live?

A. I lived in our neighborhood on El Cajon.

Q. And how far from your house?

A. About three or four blocks.

Q. Do you recall how old Candace was when you first met Ms. Conti?

A. She would have been in kindergarten, first grade.

Q. And you testified that you had a fondness for her?

A. Yes.

Q. And you learned that her mother had some mental and emotional problems?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you see Candace Conti at the Kingdom Hall of the Jehovah's Witnesses in North Fremont?

A. Yes.

Q. How often?

A. Fairly regularly. Not every single meeting, but fairly regularly, since there were three meetings a week.

Regular, I would define regular attendance as every week, three meetings a week. I did not see her there that often. I would say she was there maybe three times a month.

Q. Did you ever see her at North Kingdom Hall without either of her parents there?

A. No.

Q. Who did she usually attend with?

A. Her father.

Q. Where would they sit?

A. Three or four rows from the front.

Q. And did they sit together?

A. Yes.

Q. Side by side?

A. Side by side.

Q. Can you describe the relationship between Candace Conti and her father, Neal, during this time period?

A. I would describe it as being very close. I felt that she loved her dad and he loved her very much.

Q. And in the mid 1990s, did your family host congregation Bible study in your home?

A. Yes.

Q. Did Jonathan Kendrick attend that study?

A. Yes.

Q. Did the Conti family?

A. No.

Q. How long did you hold that Bible study in your home?

A. Five years.

Q. And was Jonathan Kendrick in the study the whole time?

A. Yes, I believe so.

Q. At any time was the Conti family in that study?

A. No.

Q. Now, you mentioned that you observed Mr. Kendrick have some kind of anger problem. Did your family ever discuss the episodes of his anger?

A. Yes.

Q. What was the occasion?

A. The occasion was -- the situation was that his teenaged stepdaughter had a boyfriend over one evening. And when John asked the boyfriend to leave, the boyfriend would not. And his wife, Evelyn, supported the daughter, that he didn't have to leave.

And he got very angry. I believe he punched the young man in the face. And he took his foot and kicked over a large island in the kitchen, kind of bent forward off its foundation.

Q. Did Mr. Kendrick end up in jail?

A. Yes, she called the police.

Q. And is that the event that your family discussed?

A. Yes.

Q. Did that cause Mr. Kendrick to miss out on an event that you had invited him to?

A. Yes. He was jailed a day or two before my son's baptism to be one of the Jehovah's Witnesses, and he was not there.

Q. And were you disappointed he wasn't there?

A. Yes, we were. He was a big part of our family.

Q. Did you mention that to your family?

A. Yes. We were all in the car. And I remember saying how bad I felt that Jonathan wasn't there for Justin's baptism.

And I made the comment, "I love Jonathan."

And my husband said to me, "Claudia, every one in this car loves Jonathan."

Q. At any time that you knew Candace Conti as a girl, did you ever feel that she was in danger?

A. No.

Q. Did you ever feel that she was threatened by sexual child abuse?

A. No.

Q. Did you ever see anyone, including Jonathan Kendrick, act inappropriately with her?

A. No.

Q. I mentioned a number of incidents. Let's talk about the roller blades. Jonathan Kendrick bought Candace Conti some roller blades.

And would you describe Mr. Kendrick to be generous?

A. Yes.

Q. And, in fact, he bought very expensive gifts for your sons?

A. Yes.

Q. And it wasn't just a one time event, was it?

A. That's correct.

Q. Did you think it odd that Mr. Kendrick would spend money on your sons?

A. Not odd. I was touched that he cared about my sons to spend that kind of money on them. They did hang out. He loved my boys.

Q. Did you ever observe him acting inappropriately with your sons?

A. No.

Q. Regarding this incident with the roller blades, and I think they came over to your house. Jonathan Kendrick was living at your house at that time, wasn't he?

A. I believe so, yes.

Q. And Candace was still living with her mother and father nearby?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you ever tell any member of the body of elders in North Fremont that you had observed Candace Conti and Jonathan Kendrick rollerblading together?

A. No.

Q. Now, the the shopping trip that you discovered Mr. Kendrick bought a black bra for Brianna, is that Decker?

A. Becker, with a B.

Q. How old was Brianna at that time?

A. I would say she was 12, 13. She was developed enough to wear a bra.

Q. And you thought it was odd that he would purchase such an intimate garment for her?

A. Yes.

Q. But did you ever tell any of the elders in the North Fremont Congregation about this event?

A. I never said a word. I felt that Brianna would go home and show her mother. And her mother, if she had a problem, would contact Jonathan and say, "What are you doing?" I did not take matters into my own hands.

Q. Okay. But in any event, you didn't say anything?

A. No.

Q. When was this event in relationship to the rollerblading that you described?

A. I would say in the same -- within the same year. The context of the same year.

Q. And was that also at the same time that Jonathan Kendrick was temporarily residing in your family home?

A. That's correct, yes.

Q. And that's also about the same time that you knew that he had been accused of molesting his stepdaughter, Andrea?

A. Yes.

Q. But at the time, you didn't put anything together, did you?

A. Honestly, no.

Q. Okay. So you didn't have any suspicions that Jonathan Kendrick was abusing children, did you?

A. No. Not at all.

Q. And you certainly didn't report any suspicions to any of the elders?

A. I did not.

MR. McCABE: That's all I have, your Honor. Thank you.

THE COURT: Mr. Schnack?

MR. SCHNACK: Yes, your Honor. A couple questions.

CROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. SCHNACK:

Q. Did there come a time when Jonathan Kendrick lost his home and moved into your home?

A. Yes.

Q. And there has been testimony that he separated from his wife in October of '96. Do you remember when it was that he moved from his home into your home?

A. It would be shortly after that. It would probably be in early November.

MR. SCHNACK: That's all I have. Thank you, your Honor.

REDIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. SIMONS:

Q. You mentioned that Bible study would be held in your home. Were all of the Bible studies that you went to during those four or five years at your home?

A. The five years that we had, it was a one-hour Bible book study in our home, I would have attended them all.

Q. But would there have been other Bible studies during that same time period or other meetings, I would say, of any kind during that same time period, that you attended in other people's homes?

A. During that five years?

Q. Yes.

A. No.

Q. So all of the study groups that you participated in during that five years were held at your home?

A. Correct. There were other locations in the congregation, maybe four or five total, where small groups would get together for one hour and a half, you know, and have a study on the Bible and the topic. But during that five years it was in our home, I only attended in our home, yes.

MR. SIMONS: That's all I have. Thank you, your Honor.

MR. McCABE: Nothing further, your Honor.

THE COURT: All right. Thank you very much, Ms. Francis for your time this morning. You are now excused.

MR. SIMONS: We are now ready to go forward with Andrea Becerra.

ANDREA SYLVIA

WAS DULY SWORN TO TELL THE TRUTH BY THE CLERK

AND TESTIFIED AS FOLLOWS:

THE CLERK: Would you please state your name and spell your first and last name for the record?

THE WITNESS: My name is Andrea Sylvia. S-Y-L-V-I-A. A-N-D-R-E-A.

DIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. SIMONS:

Q. Ms. Sylvia, where do you now live?

A. I live in Tracy, California, with my family.

Q. Okay. And what is your family?

A. My husband and my three children.

Q. And how old are you at present?

A. I'm 32 years old.

Q. Are you a full-time mother?

A. Yes. I'm a full-time stay-at-home mother, all the time.

Q. Where did you grow up?

A. I grew up in Fremont, California, with my mother and my stepfather.

Q. And how old were you when your stepfather entered your life?

A. I was 9 years old.

Q. And for what period of time did you live with your stepfather?

A. From the ages of nine to 16.

Q. And looking back at the time period of when Mr. Kendrick first came into your home, was it originally a good relationship you had with him?

A. Yes, it was. He was my only father figure.

Q. And how long did that last?

A. I would say about three years.

Q. And then what happened?

A. Well, I endured lots of physical beatings from him. There was always constantly fighting in the household, and I started to not trust him and lose my respect.

Q. Was there an occasion when he molested you?

A. Yes, it was.

Q. And how did that series of acts begin?

A. Well, that day my mother and my stepfather had just found out that I was involved with a boy. And so we had an upsetting day, and I was very upset.

And my father, stepfather, offered me to take two Vicodins. And I trusted him, him being the only father in my life. And I took them. And I fell asleep.

And I don't even know how long I was out for. But I recall being awake somewhat in my mind, but not physically. And I had to tell myself to wake up. And that's when I rolled over and noticed that he was fondling me.

Q. And was this in your bedroom?

A. Yes. With my door closed.

Q. And it was not on the couch?

A. No.

Q. And was the TV on?

A. Yes.

Q. And do you recall how it was that Mr. Kendrick was in your bedroom with the door closed to begin with?

A. No, I don't. I don't know why he was in there. I had went to sleep without anybody in there. And when I woke up, he had had the football game on, sitting on the rocking chair next to my bed with his hands down my pants and down in my shirt on my breast.

Q. What did you do?

A. Well, I didn't want to -- I didn't know what to do. I just rolled over and slowly started to wake. And then I got up and pretended like I didn't notice. And I went to the bathroom and I cried and splashed my face with water. And then I got the nerve to come out. And then I went to my mother's room. And then I had told her what my stepfather had done to me.

Q. Now, sometime later, there was a meeting in at your home in which your mother and stepfather and two elders from the Jehovah's Witnesses were present. Were you there for all of that meeting?

A. No.

Q. When that meeting was going on, were you there at all?

A. I don't recall being there at all.

Q. Your mother and the elders said that you were there for at least part of the meeting.

Do you recall any of that?

A. No, I did not.

Q. Did you ever tell anyone -- including what you may have said at this meeting, did you ever tell anyone a story different in any major way from what you told us just now?

A. No.

MR. SCHNACK: Your Honor, I'm going to object. She said she wasn't at the meeting.

THE COURT: She did.

Why don't you reframe the question, Mr. Simons.

BY MR. SIMONS:

Q. You don't recall the elders' meeting. My question is: In all of the different people that you have talked to about this over your lifetime, have you ever told anyone anything that in any significant way differed from what you just told us?

A. Never.

Q. Did you ever tell anyone that you were only touched outside of your clothes and only in the breast area?

A. No.

Q. Did you ever feel that you had to lie to help cover up for Mr. Kendrick?

A. No.

Q. Did you ever feel that what you had experienced with him was something that you were unwilling to tell people about?

A. No. I wanted it out.

Q. And did you start telling people what had happened to you -- don't tell me who, just please answer this yes or no -- but had you told people what had happened, other than your mother, very soon after the event?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you ever tell anyone that you wanted this kept private?

A. No.

Q. Did you want it kept private?

A. No.

Q. After the period of --

Well, strike that. Let me rephrase that.

Was there a time that this became a court matter?

A. Yes.

Q. And after the abuse occurred, what was your relationship like with Mr. Kendrick?

A. There was no relationship with him. I feared him in every way.

Q. You continued to live in the same house with him?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Were you present in that house on a frequent basis with Mr. Kendrick?

A. Yes, I was.

Q. And what would you do to avoid him?

A. I would either lock myself in my bedroom, close the door, pretend I was asleep, or I would take off with my friends and not come home until after 5:00, after which my mother would be home after 5:00.

Q. Would there be times when your mother and yourself were completely absent from the house?

A. Yes.

Q. And was that something that happened frequently?

A. Yes, it was.

Q. Why was that?

A. We were always being hit. And it wasn't a very good household, and fighting, and we would just leave on the spur of a moment and take a vacation three and four days at a time.

Q. Did you have other places besides vacations you would go to get away from the house?

A. I would go to my grandmother's, which she lived three blocks away.

Q. And how about your mother? Was she often absent from the house?

A. Just when we went together.

Q. Did your mother try to avoid Jonathan Kendrick as the time went by, the years went by following this 1993 event?

A. Can you repeat the question?

Q. Yes. As the years went by after 1993, did you observe that your mother's relationship with Mr. Kendrick became far more distant?

A. Oh, definitely.

Q. And were you aware that your mother was trying to avoid being there where Mr. Kendrick could do the things that you had mentioned?

A. Yes.

Q. Would it be fair to say that Mr. Kendrick often had the house to himself?

A. Yes, he did.

Q. Again, without giving us any names, can you estimate the number of people that you have shared this experience with in the three or four months after it first happened?

A. About three.

MR. SCHNACK: Nothing further.

THE COURT: Mr. Schnack?

MR. SCHNACK: Thank you, your Honor.

CROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. SCHNACK:

Q. Were you aware that after this July 1993 incident with Mr. Kendrick that your mother tried to work it out within your family?

A. That was what she did.

Q. So for several months, she tried to work it out until the elders came over?

A. Not for several months.

Q. How long, in your view, did she try to work it out in the family?

A. Maybe about four weeks.

Q. So you have no memory of meeting with the elders in November of 1993 in the kitchenette or dinette of your home?

A. No, I don't.

Q. Do you recall a report being made to the police about this July 1993 incident?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. Do you recall being interviewed by the police?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. Were you interviewed by yourself, as opposed to -- were your mother or your stepfather with you when the police interviewed you?

A. No.

Q. Do you recall telling the police that you had taken two Vicodin for your back?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. You talked about your mother and you going on vacations.

Did your mother work full time during the time period that she was married to Jonathan Kendrick?

A. Yes, she did.

Q. And she worked Monday through Friday?

A. Yes.

Q. Roughly 8:00 to 5:00 each day?

A. Yes.

Q. You said she would take vacations with you that were three or four days long?

A. Yes.

Q. How many times did you do that?

A. Periodically throughout the month. A couple times during the month when it first started. And then as it went on, it decreased.

Q. So what do you mean when it first started?

A. Well, when things got really bad.

Q. And you are talking about July of '93?

A. Yes, we were gone a lot.

Q. So you said you were gone a couple times for three or four days during first month?

A. Yes.

Q. And then it decreased after that?

A. Yes.

Q. Are you aware your mother testified you only went away a small number of times over the three years, perhaps six, eight times when you were gone for the entire weekend?

A. No, I am not.

MR. SCHNACK: No further questions, your Honor.

MR. SIMONS: Nothing further.

THE COURT: Thank you very much for your time this morning. You are now excused.

MR. SIMONS: May we confer one brief second, your Honor.

THE COURT: Sure.

(Discussion off the record)

MR. SIMONS: Our next witness would be Kathleen Conti.

KATHLEEN CONTI

WAS DULY SWORN TO TELL THE TRUTH BY THE CLERK

AND TESTIFIED AS FOLLOWS:

THE CLERK: Would you please state your name and spell your first and last name for the record?

THE WITNESS: Kathleen Conti. K-A-T-H-L-E-E-N, C-O-N-T-I.

THE COURT: All right. Ms. Conti, please be comfortable.

DIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. SIMONS:

Q. Ms. Conti, you are the mother of Candace?

A. Yes.

Q. And when was Candace born?

A. 11-25-85.

Q. Tell us a little bit about yourself. Where do you currently live?

A. I live in Stockton with my daughter.

Q. And at the present time are you employed?

A. No.

Q. Let's go back to your growing up years. Where did you grow up?

A. Well, I was born in Idaho, and lived in Montana briefly. And we moved to the Los Angeles area in 1969.

Q. And how old were you then?

A. Six, I believe, when we moved to Los Angeles.

Q. Did you do your schooling there?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you finish high school?

A. No. I completed until the 11th grade.

Q. And then where did you go in your life? What did you do next?

A. I got married and moved to Oceanside.

Q. And the person you married, can you describe him? By occupation?

A. Yes, he was a sergeant in the Marine Corps.

Q. That's why you were in Oceanside?

A. Yes.

Q. How long did that marriage last?

A. Three years.

Q. Where did you go after that marriage dissolved?

A. To the Bay Area, actually.

Q. And did you have any children in your first marriage?

A. No.

Q. When you came up to the Bay Area, did you work?

A. Yes, I worked as a secretary/clerical at National Semiconductor in Santa Clara.

Q. And is that where you met Neal Conti?

A. Yes. That's correct.

Q. And when you met Neal Conti, was he a member of the Jehovah's Witnesses?

A. No.

Q. Were you?

A. No.

Q. Had you been at any time in your life before that?

A. Yeah. I was raised as a Jehovah's Witness.

MR. SCHNACK: Your Honor, can we approach?

(Sidebar discussion)

BY MR. SIMONS:

Q. And when you met Mr. Conti, did he and you strike up a relationship?

A. Yes, we did.

Q. And you were married?

A. Yes.

Q. And what year was that?

A. 1985.

Q. And where was Candace born?

A. She was born on, like I said, 11-25-1985.

Q. Had Mr. Conti been married before?

A. Yes.

Q. And did he have any children?

A. Yes, he had a son, Richard Conti.

Q. How old was Richard in relation to Candace?

A. He was just a toddler. At the time I met him, he was almost three, maybe.

Q. Was he three or four years older than Candace?

A. Four.

Q. Did Richard live with you and Neal and Candace after she was born?

A. No. No. We had visitation with Ricky.

Q. So were there times that he would be at your house?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, during the time that you were in Fremont, did Neal Conti and yourself and Candace become active in the North Congregation?

A. Yes.

Q. And during that time did you meet Jonathan Kendrick?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. How did you meet Jonathan Kendrick?

A. At a congregation book study that was held at a member's home.

Q. And was there a book study group at a member's home that you and Jonathan Kendrick and Neal attended?

A. Yes, we did.

Q. And did Candace attend that as well?

A. Yes, she did.

Q. Do you remember whose home that was in?

A. Tom Mat. Brother Mat.

Q. And was it a period of years that you were in that group together?

A. Possibly a year. I believe that he moved his family up to Sacramento eventually and then we went to another book study.

Q. When you went to another book study, was that also the one that Mr. Kendrick and his family attended?

A. No.

Q. Did Mr. Kendrick continue his with the Conti family?

A. Yes, he did.

Q. And did you continue to see him at various North Congregation activities?

A. Yes.

Q. What kind of activities would you see Mr. Kendrick at?

A. Well, naturally, we saw them at all of the meetings that were held at the congregation. And we had social events. And also, he would come over to the home to work with Neal in his garage, since at that time it was set up as a paint booth. He painted cars in the garage.

Q. Did a friendship develop between your husband Neal and Mr. Kendrick?

A. Yes.

Q. And was Mr. Kendrick a regular visitor to your home?

A. Yeah. He was a regular visitor. I must say, though, that there was others that enjoyed working in the garage too. But he would come over, yes.

Q. Did you have occasions when you ever went to the Kendrick home?

A. I went to the Kendrick home one time.

Q. Do you recall what the occasion was?

A. You know, I know that I was with Neal and I know that it was a period of time when he was the only one in his home, and he was talking to Neal, confiding in him about his marital problems. And I can't remember -- I just know that that was a period of time that -- he confided in Neal a lot about those types of things.

Q. Was there a time that you began to develop a significant health issues? Mental health issues?

A. Yes. Around about the time that -- close to my divorce from Neal.

Q. And when you say "close to your divorce," did you examine Neal separate in the summer of 1996?

A. Yes, uh-huh.

Q. And in the couple of years before that, had there been some significant issues that you were experiencing?

A. Yes. I was trying very hard to hold it together as far as the issues that I was experiencing, emotionally, but eventually it did come to a head, unfortunately, and I had a mental breakdown, I guess you might say.

Q. And during that time period, were you able to care for Candace?

A. I had a hard time taking care of myself at that time. I feel very bad that I was not able to be there for her at that particular time, but I just was very -- it was very serious.

Q. Because of the issues that you were experiencing, was Neal required to spend extra time helping to take care of you?

A. Yes, he did have to take care of me.

Q. And did that mean that Candace was often left, sort of, on her own?

A. Yes.

Q. Did Jonathan Kendrick ever try to assist your family during this time that you were having these problems before your divorce?

A. Yeah. He tried to help a lot.

Q. In what ways?

A. Well, he always liked Candace, and always was offering to help her. To help out so that -- take her places, just be kind. I thought he was just trying to be -- I thought he was trying to be nice, that he was just trying to help out. I thought he was helping -- trying to help our family.

Q. Did you trust him as a fellow member of your congregation?

A. Yes. He seemed very theocratic. He attended the meetings. He went to field service. He seemed very theocratic, like he was reaching out.

Q. Did you have to stop attending most of the events at the North Congregation?

A. Yes.

Q. In the last year or so of your marriage, did you go to much in the way of Jehovah's Witnesses events?

A. No, no, I didn't. I isolated myself a lot. I just didn't want to be around people.

Q. Did Candace continue to participate?

A. Yes, she did.

Q. Did Neal continue to participate?

A. Yes.

Q. Did they always participate together?

A. Well, when he went to the meetings, Candace always went to the meetings. And they went out to field service, they were together.

Q. Were there times that Candace would go to activities without him?

A. I'm sorry. What type of activities?

Q. To Jehovah's Witnesses North Congregation activities, whether it be meetings or field service or Kingdom Hall events?

A. By herself?

Q. Yes. Without Neal accompanying her?

A. I'm sorry. I'm not following you. Like social events at the hall or --

Q. Or any kind of events. Were there times that she was there without Neal?

A. What I can tell you is that most of the time that I was going through what I was going through, I wasn't aware of where she was a lot of the time. And I know that she -- being that she was with Neal -- I can't attest to if she was alone with someone. I don't know exactly if she -- I can't say for sure. I can't say for sure. I just know that she was out with him.

Q. Is it accurate to say that you had lost, by that time, the ability to keep track of what was going on with Candace in your house?

A. Yes. Absolutely.

Q. Now, you mentioned Mr. Kendrick offering to help. What do you recall him offering to do?

A. I just remember at the Kingdom Hall, he was always around her, and he always complimented her. He always said that she was -- I mean, there wasn't a meeting when I was there, and that was prior to me stopping, that he was not always focusing on her.

And I just thought that he was just being a nice person trying to -- I just thought maybe he liked kids. But he really liked Candace. And I know he talked about taking her to go get ice cream or we needed him to do something, take her someplace or go somewhere with her while we need to do something, that type of thing.

Q. After you and Neal separated, where did Candace go for the first few months?

A. Candace was staying on the house in Montecito with her father.

Q. And after a few months, where did she go next?

A. Well, after finally, the visitation was settled, I believe, the court visitation, then she started to reside with me.

Q. And where did she spend most of her time during the week, during her junior high and high school years?

A. She spent most of her time at her nana's house, because she was in a school district. I lived in Sunol, and she didn't like the little grade school of Sunol. It wasn't where her friends were at. And so in order for her to attend those schools and be with her friends, she spent a lot of time at nana's house so that she could attend those schools.

Q. And when you say "nana," who are you referring to?

A. That would be my ex mother-in-law.

Q. Would that be Dorothy Conti?

A. Yes.

Q. Where were you living during this period of Candace's high school years?

A. Well, we lived in Sunol for a couple of years. And then Candy and I -- Candace and I moved to an apartment in Dublin for about six months. And we tried to live in -- I liked the Pleasanton area, and so again, she would come -- she would be with me, but she wanted to attend Washington High School. So she would spend a lot of time over at Dorothy's house so she could go to that school, and I wouldn't be going through the canyon.

Q. Did you eventually move out of California?

A. Yeah. I went to -- I spent a little bit of time in Maryland from about -- I think six months before she graduated. But I came back shortly after that, and right before she graduated, and went to her graduation.

Q. And then did you move again out of California?

A. Yes. In 2003, I moved to the Florida Keys and worked for a developer there.

Q. When did you return to California?

A. May 12 of 2008. I was there for five years.

Q. During those years, did you see Candace other than on an occasional basis?

A. She flew out, actually, probably four times to see me. I visited her a couple of times. You know, of course, I would have loved to have her be with me as much as possible, but she had a life going on.

Q. During her junior high and high school years, how was Candace's relationship with her father?

A. She didn't have much of a relationship with her father.

Q. Had he been a demonstratively affectionate man in her younger years when you were still married?

A. No.

Q. Did you learn at some point that Candace had been abused by Mr. Kendrick?

A. Yes, in 2003.

Q. And how did you learn that?

A. She told me.

Q. Was that the first indication that you had that she had been abused by Kendrick?

A. Yes, absolutely.

Q. Back in the time that you were struggling with the difficulties that you shared with us, did you have any idea that that was going on?

A. The time I was going through my -- no.

Q. Let me go back, though, to the time period just before your separation from Neal.

Did you see something between Mr. Kendrick and Candace Conti that you objected to?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. What did you see?

A. There was one evening when he was over with Neal sanding a car, painting a car, and Candace had opened the door and had stepped in. And Jonathan had grabbed her and held on to her arm like, to pull her in. And it was hurting her. And I got her out of the garage, and she came into the house. And she said "Mommy, he is hurting me." And I didn't understand what she meant until now. The way she really meant.

Q. I'm going to ask you in that same time period just before you separated whether Mr. Kendrick had any sort of physical interaction with you?

A. Yes. Around the same time we were in the front room, and, although I can attribute this to maybe -- he seemed to change when he had a few drinks, he seemed to be more physical. And he was very strong. And we were all talking in the front room, and they were talking about their wives not being good or something like that. And he grabbed me and started -- he put me over his knee and started spanking me.

Q. As if you were a child?

A. As if -- yeah. And --

Q. Let me move on to one other thing.

In your relationship with your daughter, first of all, do you now consider it to be a good relationship?

A. Yeah, yes, I do. I love my daughter very much, and I support her a hundred percent, and I'm here for her.

Q. And is your relationship now with her better than it was all during her growing up years in terms of at least from when you began to have your difficulties at her age, eight or nine?

A. Yes, it is very good. Although shortly after I had these problems, we have had some very nice times, even when she was growing up in school.

Q. Did you learn that she was using drugs?

A. Yes.

Q. And how did you learn that?

A. Our conversations with Dorothy.

Q. And is she using anymore?

A. No.

Q. How long has she been sober?

A. Since June 22 of 2010.

Q. Just one last thing. Please just answer this question yes or no.

Were you subjected to sexual abuse as a child?

A. Yes.

Q. And please answer this question yes or no as well.

Was that something you had shared with Candace before the divorce?

A. Before the divorce?

Q. Before you were separated from her? Excuse me. Before you were separated from Neal?

A. Yes. I -- we went for a drive, and I told her. Maybe I shouldn't have, but I did.

MR. SIMONS: Nothing further.

THE COURT: Okay. Let's take a pause in the questions for a minute.

All right. Any questions for defense counsel?

MR. SCHNACK: Yes, your Honor.

CROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. SCHNACK:

Q. Good morning, Ms. Conti.

Do you recall that you, Candace and Neal saw a therapist shortly after your separation in July of 1996? Is that correct?

A. Uh-huh. Yes, we did.

Q. And that relationship went on 16, 17 months or so, from roughly August of '96 until April 1st, 1998? Do you remember that?

A. I don't remember. I just remember going a few times. I don't remember much about it.

Q. Would it surprise you that Ms. Fraser's records don't portray you in a very flattering light?

A. I know I was going through -- I was suffering a lot. I was suffering and I was unfortunately using alcohol to suppress my own pain.

Q. Were you abusing some antidepressants and other drugs at the time as well? That's referenced in the records. Do you recall that?

A. I think that I was taking something for anxiety. I was taking something for anxiety.

Q. Do you recall overdosing on antidepressants in July '96 and having to be hospitalized?

A. I remember going to my doctor and talking to her about the prescription, and that I -- we felt like I might be in trouble. But I don't -- I'm sorry if I can't remember that particular thing.

Q. That's fine. Do you know what your emotional illness has been diagnosed as?

A. Well, I know that most of it is the effects of the abuse that I went through. That's what I know.

Q. But you would agree that you have abused alcohol, you have abused drugs in your life?

A. During that period, yes, I have.

Q. And would you agree that you have been diagnosed with certain disorders as well?

A. I have heard a lot of disorders. I mean, it is not like -- I do know that -- I understand that better. I have learned quite a bit about it. I have done a lot of research on my own to get a better understanding about it. I know that children, when they are going through severe abuse, they cannot, freeze a moment in time, because they can't deal with it, and it never goes away. And in your adult life you have to deal with it then.

I know that much. It is a coping mechanism that children have when they are going through abuse that they cannot deal with. I understand that.

Q. Do you recall a time period after you and Neal separated, the first six months or so, from July of '96 forward? Do you have a clear memory of that time period?

A. 1996.

Q. You separated from Neal Conti in July of '96. Do you recall that?

A. Yes, that's right.

Q. And do you have a clear memory of the next six months or so, that time period?

A. No. I don't know. I can patch things together, but...

Q. Do you recall that you had a boyfriend, Steve, move into your house shortly after the separation?

A. Yes, I recall that.

Q. Do you recall that you would walk around the house naked in front of Candace and her friends?

A. No, I don't recall.

Q. Do you have any memory that Candace told her therapist that?

Were you aware that she had told Laura Fraser that you had done that and that really embarrassed her?

A. No, but if she did, she had every right to do that.

Q. So you attended meetings at the North Fremont Kingdom Hall during that time period; is that correct?

A. During what time period?

Q. There was a time you attended meetings at the Kingdom Hall?

A. Yes.

Q. Were those meetings held on Sundays?

A. Well, there was five days a week that we attended.

Q. What days did you attend those?

A. Well, up to the point where I stopped attending, I attended all of them.

Q. And my question is: What days of the week? There has been testimony --

A. Sunday. Sunday is the Watchtower public talk.

Tuesdays was our congregation book studies.

Thursdays was the -- school and service meeting.

Q. So in those three days, there was five meetings you are talking about?

A. Yes, that's right.

Q. Okay. And you mentioned the book study that was at a member's home.

And did you attend that book study, yourself? The Bible study?

A. Yes. Yes, I did.

Q. And did Neal come to that with you as well?

A. Yes.

Q. And did Candace go with you to that Bible study?

A. Yes. If we went to the meetings, she was with us.

Q. And there was never a time where you just dropped Candace off to attend the Bible study? She only went if you attended. Correct?

A. I would never have dropped Candace off. Either -- if one parent missed the meeting, then she would be in the car or the vehicle with that parent who goes to the meeting. There would be no need for her to be dropped off without a parent.

Q. Okay. So Candace never attended unless either you or Neal or both of you were there; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you have any knowledge that Neal ever sent Candace to any meeting at the Kingdom Hall by herself?

A. There was quite a long period of time when I didn't have Candace, and I have no idea what Neal was doing. And I knew that he was still attending meetings, but I didn't know what was going on with Candace, because I didn't have visitation with her, because the Court hadn't finalized it, so I didn't have anything.

Q. So again, to answer my question: Do you know whether Neal ever sent Candace alone to the Kingdom Hall?

A. No.

Q. And that would be unusual for a parent to send a child alone to the Kingdom Hall. Is that true?

A. Well, it would seem so. I would imagine it seems so.

Q. So when you were at the Kingdom Hall, did you ever see Jonathan Kendrick hold Candace on his lap where she was squirming to get away?

A. No. I don't remember that. I just remember him being around her and giving her a lot of attention and talking with her.

I don't remember. I can't say that -- I honestly can't say that I recall her on his lap. I don't remember that, myself.

Q. Did you ever see Jonathan Kendrick give Candace a bear hug at the Kingdom Hall?

A. I can remember him leaning down and just giving her a hug. I don't know -- it wasn't anything at that point in time that would make me set off alarms at that point in time.

Q. So it was just a simple hug. It wasn't what you would call a bear hug; is that right?

A. At that time, yes, that's my impression, at that time.

Q. Did you ever allow Candace to go alone to Mr. Kendrick's house?

A. No, I did not.

Q. How often did Mr. Kendrick come over to your house, to your and Neal's house?

A. Well, towards the -- towards the time when right before the divorce -- it was probably about a year, he came over quite a bit because he likes to work in the garage on a weekend night, or even maybe a week night, he would come over.

Q. Do you recall when we took your deposition, I asked you that question how often Mr. Kendrick would come to your house, and you told me at most every other month, and maybe seven times a year, maximum?

Do you recall that testimony?

A. I remember we were discussing the number of times that it was more than one. There was an elder that would come over, a Brother Inman that would come over. And there were other brothers that would come over because they were painting Sister Crawford's Volkswagen.

I mean, there was a lot of numbers that we were talking. I have got times that people were coming over.

Like, I know that he was coming over. I can't place a number. I know that there was around -- it took about seven days for them to complete the painting of that Volkswagen, if that's what you are talking about.

Q. No. I asked you over a period of time how often Mr. Kendrick came to your house. And you told us in a deposition that it was -- it wasn't once a week, it wasn't once a month, it wasn't that often. You placed a number on it of approximately seven times a year at most.

Do you recall that testimony?

A. I must have been thinking about another event that was happening as far as painting the car or other people.

I remember that it took about seven days to paint Sister Crawford's car. I don't -- I didn't remember that in a relationship with how many times he came over.

Is that what you are talking about?

Q. Well, that's the question I asked you in deposition, yes. It just sounds like you are not sure.

A. Well, I'm not sure about which -- you might have asked me something. And I thought you were talking about -- because there was a lot of times when brothers would come over to the garage, because they loved coming over there working on the garage.

And then there was times that he was there, with Neal.

And then there was the amount of time it took to complete Sister Crawford's Volkswagen.

I mean, it is hard for me to get how many times -- I'm sorry if I answered that question to you wrong.

Q. That's all right. That was a bad time for you, it sounds like, in relation to how your condition was.

So let me move on. I understand that Candace lived with you full time when she was in seventh grade; is that correct?

A. She lived with me in Sunol, yes.

Q. And then during eighth grade, she lived with Neal's mother, Dorothy; is that correct?

A. She stayed there during the week so that she could attend the school she liked in Fremont, Centerville, and in high school, which is Washington.

Q. And then during ninth grade, again, Candace lived with you full time; is that correct?

A. Yeah. In fact, again, I wanted her to go to the -- I wanted her to go to Foothill High School in Pleasanton, because I thought that was a really nice school. But again, she felt like she wanted to be -- it is important for kids that age to be with their friends.

It is hard for them to be pulled away from their friends, so she went back to Washington.

Q. And then during the 10th, 11th and 12th grades, Candace lived either with you or Neal's mother; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And you testified during your deposition that Candace was a good student in junior high school and that she got her best grades in high school. Do you recall that?

A. Well, she might have gotten good grades in seventh and eighth grade, but I know that I can definitely remember her grades in high school, they were very good.

Q. Okay. And you saw Candace a lot during the years she was in high school? Is that correct?

A. Yes. I saw her -- on the weekends, we did a lot together. We did a lot together. We went -- we went on ski vacations together. We went to a working ranch in Montana together, because she had a love of horses. She was leasing a horse out of Arriba Vista, and she did that on a continuous basis. There was a lot of activities that Candace was doing that I was a part of.

Q. And that was during her high school years.

Correct?

A. She might have started -- the -- she could have started in eighth grade. But I do know that she got to the point where she got to Hunter Jumper, and it got a little expensive.

Q. So having spent a lot of time with her during those years, did you see any evidence of drug use by Candace?

A. No, I did not.

Q. And she didn't disclose to you about Kendrick having abused her until 2003; is that correct?

A. That's correct.

Q. And that was just shortly before you moved to Florida?

A. Uh-huh.

Q. Is that a yes?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. And was one of the reasons you were moving to Florida, was to try to reconnect with your first husband?

A. Yes, that's right. He had a business, a surveying company in Florida Keys, and I had a chance to work.

Q. So in 2003, did you tell Candace she should report Kendrick to the police?

A. No.

Q. Why not?

A. I didn't think that anyone --

Q. She was what, 17 at the time; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. So she was still a minor?

A. Yes.

MR. SCHNACK: Nothing further, your Honor.

THE COURT: Anything further?

MR. SIMONS: No, your Honor.

THE COURT: All right. Thank you very much for your time. You are now excused.

Dorothy Conti.

DOROTHY CONTI

WAS DULY SWORN TO TELL THE TRUTH BY THE CLERK

AND TESTIFIED AS FOLLOWS:

THE CLERK: Would you please state your name and spell your first and last name for the record?

THE WITNESS: Dorothy Conti. D-O-R-O-T-H-Y, C-O-N-T-I.

DIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. SIMONS:

Q. Ms. Conti, where do you live?

A. Fremont.

Q. And what is your relationship to Candace Conti?

A. She is my granddaughter. My son is her father.

Q. And your son is Neal?

A. Correct.

Q. Are you now retired?

A. Yes.

Q. Were you married?

A. Forty-seven years.

Q. And your husband is passed away?

A. Yes.

Q. What year did that occur?

A. 1994.

Q. When he was still with us, what was Candace's relationship with your husband, her grandfather?

A. Very good. They were very close.

Q. In what ways? How would you describe that?

A. Well, he treated her like his own as far as doing things with her, and sit down and have little tea parties with her when she would come over and visit and they kind of palled around together. So they were very close.

Q. And during that time, how far away did Candace live from where you and your husband lived?

A. I would say like three or four miles.

Q. They were also in Fremont?

A. Yes.

Q. After your husband passed away in that same period, 1994, did you begin to see some changes in Candace's mother?

A. Yes. And even before that.

Q. What did you see?

A. She was very sickly. She was always having some kind of problem. And I know she was under a doctor's care.

Q. Did you hear from your son, Neal, that this was causing stresses within the family?

A. No.

Q. Were you aware of some of the things that were going on between Neal and Kathy at that time in their marriage?

A. No.

Q. Did you see Candace more often during that time period of, say, from when Kathy first started to show these problems to the time that they separated?

A. Probably. We did see more of her, take care of her a little bit more. She would come over and stay a night or something like that.

Q. You were raised in the Catholic faith, yourself?

A. Yes.

Q. And how about Neal?

A. All the children were baptized Catholic.

Q. Do you remember there was a time when he became a member of the Jehovah's Witnesses?

A. I didn't know that he had become a Jehovah's Witness.

Q. How did you come to find out?

A. It was later in their marriage, after the first couple of years in their marriage that we found out that he was in the witnesses, and that Kathy was in the witnesses and brought him into it.

Q. Did you ever participate in the Jehovah's Witnesses?

A. No.

Q. How have you and Neal taken his involvement in Jehovah's Witnesses into your relationship together?

A. Well, it was okay up until the point he remarried, after he was divorced from Kathy. And his wife was a Witness -- his new wife was a Witness. And they wanted Candace to get back into the Witness organization or whatever, and she didn't want to get back into it.

And so that caused problems between them. And she didn't want to live there with this woman and her two daughters who were in the Witnesses. And the girls didn't get along together at all.

Q. Well, did you make your home available to Candace at that time?

A. Yes. Yes, I did. And then she went with Kathy too. Between the two of us.

Q. How much in her junior high and high school years, how much time was she spending in your home?

A. I had her through her high school years and after that.

Q. When you say --

A. Off and on, a little bit in junior high.

Q. Did she live in your house?

A. Yes.

Q. And was she there more often than she was with either of her parents?

A. Yes.

Q. Did her relationship with her father, for all practical purposes, come to an end when she was at that age group?

A. Practically, yes.

Q. And did you make any effort to try to repair that relationship?

A. I tried to get them together to talk. They did, but it just got into a crying session, and that's as far as it ever got.

Q. Now, were there some times that, before Neal and Kathy separated, that Neal had a medical issue?

A. He had what?

Q. A medical issue? Do you recall him being in the hospital?

A. He went in for some kind of surgery. I don't remember what it was.

Q. And who took care of Candace during that time?

A. She was still with Kathy. They were still all together at that time.

Q. Now, when Candace was living with you in her high school years and after, did you have any idea that she was using any kind of drugs?

A. No.

Q. And did you talk to her about any kind of drug use?

A. No.

Q. And how would you describe your role in Candace's life during these years that she was living with you primarily?

A. Well, I wasn't trying to replace her mother or father. I was just sort of trying to set her on the right track and take care of her financially, put a roof over her head, feed her, you know, pay for everything, and try to teach her things.

But teenagers at that time aren't interested in learning how to sew or to cook or how to balance a checkbook, that type of thing, they are more interested in their freedom, and, you know, having fun.

So it was -- at some times we butted heads. But more or less, it was there, and once she got out of school, it got a little easier.

Q. Did you consider yourself to be the stabilizing force in her life?

A. Yeah. I had to be. Not that I wanted to be, but yes.

Q. There was no one else?

A. Not really, no.

Q. For example, would you take her sometimes to the counseling visits that she went to after her parents' divorce?

A. Yes, I had to take her, yes.

Q. So you knew that she was going through that, at least?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you know during the time that she lived with you that she had been abused by Mr. Kendrick?

A. No.

Q. And when did you learn that?

A. She was having -- she wasn't sleeping well. She wasn't -- she was agitated, and she said she wanted to go live with her mother. And she wanted to get help.

So then I kind of -- you know, "What kind of help are you talking about?"

And she told me that she had been on drugs.

Q. And when did she share the abuse that she had experienced?

A. It was after that time.

Q. In the last year or two?

A. Yeah. It was the last -- maybe two, two to three years ago.

MR. SIMONS: Is there any objection to Exhibits 2 and 3?

MR. SCHNACK: No.

THE COURT: All right. Plaintiff's 2 and Plaintiff's 3 each and both are in.

(Whereupon, Plaintiff's Exhibit Number 2 and Plaintiff's Exhibit Number 3 were admitted into evidence)

BY MR. SIMONS:

Q. Ms. Conti, do you remember Candace as a child?

A. Yes.

Q. And what about her appearance do you remember the most?

A. About her appearance?

Q. Yeah, about how she looked?

A. In what way? Did she look healthy?

Q. Tell us everything you can think of about how she looked as a child?

A. She looked fine.

Q. Was she kind of a happy child, it seemed?

A. Yeah, she was. She was very happy.

Q. And how would you describe her, her personality as an 8, 9 and 10 year old.

A. Well, she was very outgoing with people, seemed very, you know, very happy. She got along in school, grammar school. And never, you know, showed any kind of problems at that time.

Q. How about during the time that her parents were having their difficulties? Did she show any problems to you at that time?

A. No.

Q. Let's look at the next exhibit, 3.

Do you recognize this picture?

A. Yeah. She finally made it out of school.

Q. Were you very proud?

A. Oh, yes.

MR. SIMONS: Thank you. No further questions.

MR. SCHNACK: Just a couple questions, your Honor.

CROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. SCHNACK:

Q. Mrs. Conti, you mentioned that sometimes you would take Candace to see the therapist during the time that Neal and Kathy were separating and divorcing?

Do you recall that?

A. Yes. But I was never in the room.

Q. Would it surprise you that Candace told that therapist that she was very close to you?

A. No. I have heard that from different people.

Q. Okay. And would it surprise you that she also told the therapist that she felt very safe with Neal during that time period?

A. She felt unsafe with --

Q. She felt safe with Neal?

Would that surprise you that Candace told the therapist in this same time frame that she felt very safe with Neal?

A. I can imagine she could at that time, yes.

MR. SCHNACK: Okay. Nothing further, your Honor.

MR. McCABE: No questions.

MR. SIMONS: Nothing further?

THE COURT: Thank you. You are excused.

THE WITNESS: I can leave to go home?

MR. SIMONS: Your Honor, I don't think we have anyone else before lunch. I think our next witness is scheduled for 1:15.

THE COURT: Since we are breaking a little early -- I am hoping that there is a nice day out there. I will see you at 1:15 and we will continue going forward. As always, thank you for your patience and attention. And again, no chats, no internet, no conversations, no writings, until you deliberate. Thank you, again.

(Whereupon, the following proceedings were heard outside the presence of jurors)

MR. SIMONS: Your Honor, we have several videotaped depositions, one of which is Laura Fraser but perhaps -- we seem to be moving quicker than I anticipated. And therefore, I would suggest that maybe Ms. Fraser's deposition would be timely shown.

MR. SCHNACK: We will discuss it.

THE COURT: Okay. You guys discuss it.

MR. SIMONS: There is one question of significance. I have a pretty lengthy videotaped deposition for Mr. Shuster who is standing behind me today.

THE COURT: His dedication is noted for the record.

MR. SIMONS: Who was taken as PMQ for Watchtower. And I have excerpts designating him before the trial that we would like to show of that deposition.

Counsel, had a, perhaps, different view?

MR. SCHNACK: I think he should testify live. He is here. It's not like he is not unavailable.

THE COURT: I thought I dealt with that.

MR. SCHNACK: It was for a different witness but same issue.

MR. SIMONS: That was for Mr. Williams, but this deposition was for managing PMQ.

THE COURT: I have dealt with it. He is live. We will see if you have to use the video. Except for impeachment, he is here.

MR. SIMONS: If I may without trespassing on the Court's patience. But I believe I'm entitled to use the PMQ deposition for purpose. And that was entitled to show for purpose of availability or unavailability notwithstanding.

THE COURT: Your reply.

MR. SCHNACK: I have to look at it.

THE COURT: I have will look at it during the lunch.

MR. SIMONS: Thank you.

(Lunch recess)

(Whereupon, the following proceedings were heard outside the presence of jurors)

THE COURT: Let's go back on the record. The question was made at this morning's session to have the person most knowledgeable. I ruled on this 2025.6.0. Provides as follows:

That at (B) -- and this was the trick in terms of my recollection, listening to Mr. Schnack, a managing agent was my focus, and with the regards to the managing agent for purposes of the application statute.

Having said the same and noting just as a full backup, that a request for admission was already read to the jury as to his having been an agent of the

New York, Inc.

The statute specifically provides as follows:

"An adverse party may use for any purpose in deposition of a party to the action or of anyone at the time of taking the deposition was an officer, director managing agent, employee, agent or designee under section 2025.230 of a party. It is not grounds for objection that use of the deposition would fall under the subdivision by an adverse party that the deponent is available to testify, has testified, or will testify at trial."

If anyone wants anything further, subject to review and research, if you want to respond?

All right. Ruling as follows: You may use the deposition you took.

MR. SCHNACK: Again, just subject to other pretrial rulings, there is a lot of deposition concerned church discipline issues.

MR. SIMONS: Yes. We are going to have to meet and confer and edit it, because I'm sure there is materials in there.

THE COURT: Okay. Are you going to use it this afternoon?

MR. SIMONS: Because of that, no, we are looking actually at some Kaiser depos instead.

THE COURT: And I might say -- and I certainly don't want to recant this. It has been a pleasure dealing with all counsel here, because I wouldn't let anything get shown without having had an editing process going forward.

MR. SIMONS: Yeah, I mean, I gave them a big designation, but it was before the Court's pretrial ruling.

THE COURT: Actually, I do not want it to be misconstrued that the way all counsel handled these rulings and the professionalism shown is noted for the record.

But that is my ruling specifically as to the reading of the depo.

MR. SIMONS: It was actually a video.

THE COURT: I'm sorry. The video.

MR. SIMONS: Your Honor, if I may as well, briefly, Carl Lewis who was not available Friday is available tomorrow morning at 8:00. And so we discussed, perhaps, doing a 402 hearing with him and then having him testify and leave in the morning, assuming there is some testimony to be gotten.

MR. SCHNACK: That's fine, your Honor.

THE COURT: Okay. At 8:00 tomorrow morning.

MR. SCHNACK: And that should be -- I can't envision that would be a long process.

THE COURT: Okay. The report is the jury can't wait to get back into this courtroom. Which I think is a compliment also. So let's see what we can do to get them back in here.

(Whereupon, the following proceedings were heard in the presence of jurors)

MR. SIMONS: Pursuant to Evidence Code 776, we would call Mr. Cliff Williams.

THE COURT: All right. Mr. Williams, please come up, if you would, and reminding the jury having declared the ruling under 776, he is perceived to be an adverse witness according to the code, the evidence code.

CLIFFORD WILLIAMS

WAS DULY SWORN TO TELL THE TRUTH BY THE CLERK

AND TESTIFIED AS FOLLOWS:

THE CLERK: Would you please state your name and spell your first and last name for the record?

THE WITNESS: CLIFFORD WILLIAMS. CLIFFORD, C-L-I-F-F-O-R-D. WILLIAMS, W-I-L-L-I-A-M-S.

DIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. SIMONS:

Q. Mr. Williams, what city do you live in?

A. Downey, California.

Q. And are you an elder within the Jehovah's Witnesses?

A. Yes.

Q. How long have you held the position of elder?

A. For about 32 years now.

Q. Do you also hold a position as a circuit overseer?

A. I am a substitute circuit overseer.

Q. Why don't you describe for us what a circuit overseer is? We haven't heard that one.

A. A circuit overseer, he visits congregations and he builds them up, encourages the brothers and sisters in the organization.

Q. Does a circuit overseer have duties in more than one congregation?

A. No.

Q. Is the circuit overseer one of the members of the body of elders?

A. Not in a given congregation, no.

Q. How many different congregations have you served as an elder in?

A. About five different congregations.

Q. And how long have you been at Downey?

A. I was there up until last March.

Q. And did you assume these new duties as temporary circuit overseer?

A. No.

Q. Are you at a new congregation?

A. Yes.

Q. When we say a circuit overseer, what is the circuit that is referred to?

A. A circuit can represent anywhere from 18 to 25 congregations that a circuit overseer visits in a given area.

Q. And in your position as a temporary circuit overseer, are you acting in the same capacity that a circuit overseer would act if there was a permanent person assigned to that position?

A. Yes.

Q. So you are going from, maybe, 18 to 20 congregations, approximately?

A. Yes.

Q. Is that true?

A. Yes.

Q. And what is the geographical area that you are involved with as a temporary circuit overseer?

A. There is none. I have served as far as Victorville, East Los Angeles, Tahachapi, Ridgecrest, California.

Q. Who does the circuit overseer or temporary circuit overseer report to as the person higher than them, next above them, in the hierarchy of the Jehovah's Witnesses organization?

A. That would be the branch.

Q. And when you used the term "branch," what do you refer to?

A. That's the structural organization back in Patterson, New Jersey.

Q. And is that currently a corporation, the Christian Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses?

A. Yes.

Q. But before 2001, it was the Watchtower New York?

A. Yes.

Q. When you perform your duties as a temporary circuit overseer, from whom do you get your instructions as to what specific tasks you should do?

A. That would be the branch.

Q. And do you receive training for this position?

A. Yes.

Q. What kind of training do you receive?

A. You go with a regular circuit overseer for a two-week period of time. You observe him. And then the second week, you do what he would do when he visits that congregations.

Q. In a position as a temporary circuit overseer, can you give us a general description of the range of duties that you hold?

A. You conduct a meeting for field service. You give talks Tuesday, Thursday, Sunday. You meet with the full-time preachers of the congregation, and then you meet with the body of elders.

Q. In terms of your position currently as a temporary circuit overseer, are there various publications that provide you information on how you should perform your duties?

A. Yes.

Q. And what are the different kinds of publications that you refer to for how to perform your duty?

A. We have a publication that is for elders. It is called a shepherding book.

Q. Is there a textbook? A Kingdom textbook?

A. No.

Q. Going back to the training you received in your capacity as elder, who performs the training for you in terms of performing duties as an elder?

A. We have various classes, seminars and things of that nature, every maybe three or four years.

Q. And is there a textbook for elders?

A. Yes. It is that shepherding book.

Q. Who conducts the various classes that you go to as an elder for your training?

A. Most cases, it is a circuit overseer, a district overseer.

Q. And are the materials that you referred to, are those provided to you by New York?

A. Yes.

Q. And again before '01, it was Watchtower?

A. Yes.

Q. Now it is Christian Congregation?

A. Yes.

Q. Back in late 2009 and early 2010, were you serving as an elder at Downey?

A. Yes, I was.

Q. And in that capacity, did you become acquainted with Candace Conti?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you see her here today in the courtroom?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. And is it correct to say that you had two phone conversations with her?

A. Yes.

Q. And then an in-person meeting?

A. Yes.

Q. And in the in-person meeting, there was not just yourself, there was a second elder?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you know the name of that elder?

A. Nef Beltran.

Q. And there was a written report prepared after the meeting that you had in person with Ms. Conti?

A. Yes.

Q. And you were a signatory to that?

A. Yes.

Q. And was that report prepared for any particular purpose?

Let me just ask you the other way: What was the purpose of preparing the report?

A. Just to document what had been discussed at that meeting.

MR. SIMONS: Your Honor, we have Exhibit 19, a letter of January 14, 2010.

May that be admitted into evidence?

MR. McCABE: No objection.

MR. SCHNACK: No objection.

THE COURT: It may be admitted.

(Whereupon, Plaintiff's Exhibit Number 19 was admitted into evidence)

THE COURT: So Plaintiff's 19 only is in.

BY MR. SIMONS:

Q. Now, it was in your meeting with Candace Conti that she reported to you some sexual abuse that she stated she had been victimized by Jonathan Kendrick. Correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Before the meeting, had she mentioned that to you in the phone conversations?

A. The first conversation, yes.

Q. Tell us how the first conversation, what was said back and forth?

A. The first phone conversation had to do with a doctrinal matter about celebrating birthdays. And then about 15 minutes into the conversation, once we kind of got past the doctrinal matter, the doctrinal question, then she brought up the alleged abuse by Jonathan Kendrick.

Q. And when she brought up that, do you recall how she first brought the subject to your attention?

A. She just brought it to our attention that she had allegedly been abused by Jonathan.

Q. In your letter, you refer to him as Jonathan Hendricks with an H. Do you know now it is Jonathan Kendrick?

A. Yes.

Q. And at the time that you had your first telephone conversation, you mentioned a doctrinal question.

What does that mean?

A. It has to do with something that a person wants to do, but the Bible states otherwise.

Q. And do you recall what the specific issue that that discussion concerned?

A. It had to do with celebrating birthdays.

Q. Was there a specific birthday in mind, do you remember?

A. Yes. It was her grandmother's.

Q. And after that telephone conversation, did you do anything in follow-up with this very first telephone conversation?

A. No, I did not.

Q. Did you notify anyone in New York?

A. No, I did not.

Q. Did you bring the matter up to the attention of any other bodies of elders in any other congregation?

A. No, I did not.

Q. Did you prepare any kind of written report after that telephone conversation?

A. No, I did not.

Q. Is it correct that the telephone conversation was the first actual communication you had from Candace Conti alleging sexual abuse as a child?

A. Yes.

Q. How long was it until you had a second conversation?

A. You know, I do not remember.

Q. Do you remember a ballpark for us? For example, was it a year?

A. Maybe three or four weeks later.

Q. When you ended the first conversation, did you make any arrangements with Ms. Conti to have a second conversation?

A. No, I did not.

Q. Did you have an expectation in your own mind at the end of the first conversation that you were going to be speaking with her on the subject again?

A. No, I did not.

Q. So the way it was left after the first conversation was you had received a report of sexual abuse in another congregation, and you had provided some consolation, if you will, some solace to the victim? Correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And you had not reported it to any other congregation or to Watchtower New York?

A. No, I did not.

Q. Then in the second conversation, what was discussed?

A. She was concerned that this did not happen to anybody else. So I explained to her the protocol that was in place since it was established that Jonathan was a sex offender, that if Jonathan ever moved to another congregation, this would always follow him, and the congregation elders, they would be notified that Jonathan was a convicted sex offender.

Q. Did Ms. Conti express to you that she was satisfied with that protocol?

A. No, she did not.

MR. McCABE: Your Honor, could we approach?

(Sidebar discussion)

THE COURT: Okay. To the jury, we are going to take exactly a five-minute break. Have a break outside, and we will get you back in in five minutes.

(Break taken)

THE COURT: All right. Mr. Simons.

BY MR. SIMONS:

Q. Mr. Williams, let me go back now to that second phone call. Is it your best recollection that that second phone call was about, maybe, four months after the first?

A. It could be.

Q. And in your deposition that was your estimate, that's kind of your best recollection?

A. Yes.

Q. It was certainly more than a week or two?

A. Yes.

Q. And four months, is it fair, it might have been three, might have been five?

A. Yes.

Q. In that second phone conversation, did Ms. Conti reiterate some of the details that she had shared with you the first conversation about the nature of the abuse that she experienced?

A. No, she did not.

Q. Did she give you any details?

A. No.

Q. But she did reiterate to you that she had been sexually molested by Mr. Kendrick?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you make a report to Watchtower New York after the second telephone conversation?

A. No, I did not.

Q. Did you notify any other congregation?

A. I talked to the elders in the Oakley Congregation.

Q. And did you make any writing, any written report whatsoever?

A. Yes, sir, I did.

Q. And that was after the second telephone conversation?

A. No. That would be after a conversation that we had when she came to Downey.

Q. Okay. I may have confused you. I'm talking about after the second telephone conversation, did you notify any of the congregation?

A. No.

Q. So you had two telephone conversations over the period of about three or four or five months in which this person had told you on two separate occasions she had been sexually abused by Jonathan Kendrick?

A. Yes.

Q. And you had not yet made any report even after the second call concerning that to Watchtower of New York?

A. No.

Q. And you had not made any report at that time to any of the other congregations?

A. No.

Q. Then is it accurate to say that it was probably seven or eight months after that that you had the next face-to-face meeting?

A. Yes.

Q. So you were aware of Ms. Conti's sexual abuse, at least her claim of sexual abuse by Jonathan Kendrick in the North Fremont Congregation, because she did share the congregation with you where it happened?

A. Yes.

Q. You were aware of that for about a year before you reported it to anyone?

A. Yes.

Q. And was there a point where you felt a change in Ms. Conti's emotional attitude toward the discussion that you and she were having?

A. Yes.

Q. And is it accurate to say that you felt that change was over her feeling that protocols were not enough?

A. Yes.

Q. And these are the same protocols that had been in place for all of the years, at least, that you had been an elder?

A. Yes.

MR. SIMONS: Thank you. Nothing further.

MR. McCABE: I have no questions, your Honor.

MR. SCHNACK: No questions, your Honor.

THE COURT: Are you finished with Mr. Williams?

MR. SIMONS: Yes, sir.

THE COURT: You are now excused, Mr. Williams.

(Break taken)

MR. SIMONS: Pursuant to Evidence Code 776, we would call Lawrence Lamerdin.

THE COURT: Mr. Lamerdin, come on up.

LAWRENCE LAMERDIN

WAS DULY SWORN TO TELL THE TRUTH BY THE CLERK

AND TESTIFIED AS FOLLOWS:

THE CLERK: Would you please state your name and spell your first and last name for the record?

THE WITNESS: First and last?

Lawrence Lamerdin.

L-A-W-R-E-N-C-E, L-A-M-E-R-D-I-N.

DIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. SIMONS:

Q. Mr. Lamerdin, good afternoon.

You are an elder at the North Congregation in Fremont?

A. Yes.

Q. For how many years?

A. Let's see. 20 years, I believe. Since '91.

Q. And before that, did you have service as an elder in any other congregation?

A. In Mountain View.

Q. And how long did you serve there?

A. Just a short time, about six months.

Q. Did you serve as ministerial servant?

A. Yes.

Q. That was in Mountain View?

A. Yes.

Q. How long from the time you became an ministerial servant until you became an elder?

A. Let's see. Five, six years.

Q. Do you remember, when you were at Fremont, a man named Jonathan?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. Were you acquainted with him?

A. Yes.

Q. And when did you come to meet him?
A. When he moved to the congregation.
Q. Was he a ministerial servant when you first came to the congregation?
A. I can't recall.
Q. You do recall that he was a ministerial servant for a time?
A. Yes.
Q. And his time as a ministerial servant overlapped with some of your time as an elder?
A. Yes.
MR. SIMONS: Your Honor, may Plaintiff's Exhibit 4 be admitted into evidence?
THE COURT: It will be admitted.
(Whereupon, Plaintiff's Exhibit Number 4 was admitted into evidence)
BY MR. SIMONS:
Q. Do you recognize Jonathan Kendrick?
A. Looks like him. Looks a little bit older than last time I saw him.
Q. Do you recall the specific role that Mr. Kendrick had during the time that he was a ministerial servant?
A. Specific role? I don't recall, no.
Q. In the congregation at North Fremont during that time in the 1991 to '93 period, how many ministerial servants were there?

A. I would have to take a guess. I don't remember. Maybe three to six. I can't recall.

Q. And recognizing it is an estimate, what were the different job assignments that the ministerial servants carried out back in that time period in the congregation?

A. Ministerial servants would be a great help. They would help out in the literature and distribution as far as providing it to the congregation, roving mics, carrying microphones to the stage. Things like that.

Q. Did each of the ministerial servants have a specific job to do?

A. At times they did. At times one would be assigned to help out to take care of the stage microphones. And at other times removal and take care of literature, for example.

Q. And focusing on Mr. Kendrick, would he have fulfilled more than one of these different assignments that you have described for us?

A. Maybe not.

Q. When a ministerial servant gets an assignment, would it be fair to say that is the assignment he usually performs until such time as he becomes an elder or ceases to be a ministerial servant?

A. No, not really. If they do a great job, I mean if it is easy for them to accomplish that, they can stick with it. Usually, it is a great benefit to the congregation.

Q. Did Mr. Kendrick, to your understanding, have any duties and responsibilities with regard to literature?

A. I can't recall.

Q. Do you recall ever having him dealing with traffic, for example, in the parking area?

A. I can't recall. I can't recall. No doubt, though, as a servant, he had helped us in some ways.

Q. Did you ever give Mr. Kendrick any specific instructions on how to perform his duties?

A. Again, I don't remember what duties he was assigned, so I don't know.

Q. Do you remember giving him any training or instructions at all?

A. Myself? I don't know. It would be usually the training would come through in the articles we were discussing at the meetings.

Q. You heard a report at some point that Mr. Kendrick had sexually abused a girl?

A. Yes.

Q. And do you recall, first of all, hearing of that report specifically? Do you recall learning about the report?

A. Do I recall when I learned of the report?

Q. No. Do you have a recollection of hearing that report?

A. I have a recollection of hearing the report.

Q. As you sit here today, have you done something since your deposition back in November of 2011 to sort of refresh your recollection as to that report?

A. Not really, no.

Q. Is it -- I will say as clear in your mind today -- I know this was some years ago, but is it as clear in your mind today of hearing that report as it was back in November when we took your deposition?

A. It is about the same.

Q. Is it correct at the time we took your deposition, I asked you if you recall hearing a report that there was some inappropriate touching between Kendrick and Andrea, and you don't recall that?

A. That's correct. That's correct. I do not recall that.

Q. What do you recall about that incident?

A. I recall there was abuse that was confessed to.

Q. Do you recall when you first heard of the report?

A. Of the abuse?

Q. Yes. When did you first hear of the report of Kendrick abusing his stepdaughter?

A. At our elders meeting.

Q. Do you recall in your deposition when we asked the time frame within which you learned of that report you had no recollection?

A. I do recall saying that, yes. So I would say you are correct from recalling at the deposition and things that you asked me that I recalled, I remember a little more clearly. I would say it would be more correct in that.

Q. At the time of your deposition, did you even recall whether Mr. Kendrick was still a member of the congregation when you learned of that report?

A. I can't recall.

Q. You were not involved, yourself, in any of the discussions about whether Mr. Kendrick should continue his duties as a ministerial servant?

A. No, I was not.

Q. How many elders, approximately, were there back in the time period of 1993 when the events that we are talking about occurred?

A. I would say about the same today. Maybe about twelve -- ten to 13, somewhere around there.

Q. And were you regular in your attendance to the elders meetings?

A. Yes.

Q. In fact, over your many years, you have been very conscious just in that respect, have you not?

A. Yes, I have.

Q. So you didn't miss elders meetings in 1993?

A. I certainly tried not to. Because of sickness at times.

Q. When you learned that Mr. Kendrick had sexually abused his stepdaughter, did you take it upon yourself to do any additional supervision of him with regard to his participation in activities at the congregation?

A. Absolutely. Absolutely. Particularly myself and my responsibility as a shepherd, as we are called, as we try to care for the needs of the congregation, our children are very important. And particularly after hearing that, I was even more observant.

Q. And did you observe Mr. Kendrick in the Kingdom Hall with children around him or present?

A. Not any more than any other congregation member.

Q. So you saw Mr. Kendrick in participating in Kingdom Hall activities with children around him just like any other?

A. No. Not in that aspect. As one who would draw children to him at that point, no. And we would make sure that would not happen after hearing of that.

Q. I think you said no more than any other congregant?

A. I did say that. And I want it clarified and to make sure I clarified you understood what I meant by that. As we meet together, we all meet together and mingle before the meetings. As he would come in, as in any other congregation member, it would be passing family or passing children and whatnot.

As if he was standing by himself, if he was standing by another male with him that I could see, it wasn't something that he had the position of pulling children around or encouraging children to come next to him at all, and we made sure that was watched.

Q. Was he allowed to sit anywhere within the Kingdom Hall?

A. For the most part, yes.

Q. So there was nothing to prevent him from sitting next to families with children?

A. Oh, yes, there was. We were the ones responsible for that, making sure that didn't happen.

Q. So your recollection is that Mr. Kendrick was never allowed to sit with children?

A. To the best of our ability, we made sure of that.

Q. And how did you make sure of that?

A. Just keeping our eyes out and making sure that there was no one-on-one contact.

Q. Did you ever have to get up and tell Mr. Kendrick to move, he was too close to a child?

A. I don't recall doing that, no.

Q. Do you recall seeing any other elder ever requiring Mr. Kendrick to move because he was sitting next to a child?

A. I don't recall that, no.

Q. Do you recall anyone ever discussing in the elder's conferences or meetings that he was sitting in the Kingdom Hall sitting in the seats, and there were children sitting next to him?

A. I don't recall that.

Q. After the discussion in terms of Mr. Kendrick being removed, following that time period, was there ever another discussion at the Body of Elder meetings about supervising Mr. Kendrick?

A. Can you repeat that, please?

Q. Yeah. After this report was received, was there ever another meeting in which Mr. Kendrick was discussed?

A. I can't recall.

Q. Do you recall any discussion after November of 1993, when the report first came up, in which it was talked about in the body of elders in the Fremont North Congregation that, "Hey, are we keeping an eye on. Mr. Kendrick?"

A. I can't recall. It is something we would strive do regularly, and as articles come up, remind them of these things.

Q. But your best testimony is that it was never discussed again?

A. No. That's not my testimony. I don't recall. It may have, but I don't recall.

Q. Now, is it fair to say that over the last 20 years or so that maybe three or four ministerial servants had been removed from their positions at the North Fremont Congregation?

A. That would be at the most, and normally that's because they move.

Q. And is that considered to be a big deal?

A. Oh, yeah. It is. Of course not removed, but many times it is because of them having some spiritual difficulties, not keeping up with or applying certain spiritual qualifications.

Q. So you would agree that the fact that a ministerial servant is removed from that position does not tell the congregation that he has a record of sexually abusing a child?

A. No.

Q. Do you agree?

A. Repeat that, please.

Q. Do you agree that the removal of a ministerial servant does not convey to anyone the information that he had sexually abused a child?

A. No. It does not convey that.

Q. In 1998, you completed a form that had some information concerning Mr. Kendrick.

THE COURT: It may be admitted into evidence as written.

BY MR. SIMONS:

Q. First of all, do you see your signature at the bottom of this page?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you recall meeting with Mr. Clarke and Mr. Abrahamson to complete this form?

A. Yes.

Q. And this was information that was provided back to Watchtower New York concerning Jonathan Kendrick; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And in that information, there is a Number 4. Can we highlight Number 4 here?

"Legal authorities contacted. Police report made. No action taken by courts."

Do you recall where you got the information that went into filling out this portion of the form?

A. This was from Mr. Clarke and Mr. Abrahamson.

Q. And was there any discussion at that time as to whether it should be checked to see whether it was accurate?

A. Whether those statements are accurate?

Q. Yes. Whether that statement was accurate?

A. Definitely.

Q. And do you have any information as to what was done to make sure the information was accurate?

A. I had their assurance that it was accurate.

Q. So Mr. Abrahamson and Mr. Clarke told you that they had checked, and the legal authorities had been contacted concerning this 1993 incident, but there had been no action by the courts?

A. That's what I was told.

Q. Was it important to you that the information on this form be accurate?

A. Yes.

Q. And did you want Watchtower New York, when you sent this form, to have complete information on the individual that was the subject of this report?

A. Yes.

Q. Going back to your deposition, you advised me at the time when I asked you, had you ever seen Jonathan Kendrick with children after the 1993 report was received, and your answer was "not alone."

Do you recall that?

A. I think so.

Q. Let me, if we may, page 28 of the deposition line 17 through 20. Let me see if we can refresh you here?

A. That's all right. I trust you.

Q. Let's take a look at it.

MR. SCHNACK: If you are going to refresh, I'm not sure you should show it to the jury, your Honor.

THE COURT: Forgetting your trust of Mr. Simons, do you recall that having been your answer, sir?

THE WITNESS: Could you give me that question again, so I can answer it clearly?

MR. SIMONS: Yes.

May we approach, your Honor?

(Sidebar discussion)

BY MR. SIMONS:

Q. Notwithstanding your comment, I would like to show you your question and answer on the page and line I just indicated and ask you about it.

(Whereupon, video recording was played)

BY MR. SIMONS:

Q. Ever see Jonathan Kendrick present with children at Kingdom Hall after you learned of this report?

A. Never alone.

(Whereupon, video recording was stopped)

BY MR. SIMONS:

Q. So let's split some hairs. You never saw Jonathan Kendrick alone with a child at Kingdom Hall?

A. Exactly, yes.

Q. Of course if he was alone with a child, you wouldn't have seen him because he would have been alone. Correct?

MR. McCABE: Objection. Argumentative.

BY MR. SIMONS:

Q. Let me rephrase.

The Kingdom Hall has got a series of small rooms and then there is a large room?

A. Yes.

Q. And within that large room, there is a number of chairs and seating. Correct?

A. Yes.

Q. As well as there is things along the wall where you might store things, that sort of thing?

A. Uh-huh. In the back. In the back of the auditorium.

Q. So when you said "never alone," isn't it correct that you did see Mr. Kendrick with children after 1993 in the Kingdom Hall, just that you never saw him alone with a child?

A. I'm not sure where you are going with this question, but what I meant to say -- not meant to say -- what I did say before was he would be along with the rest of the congregation attending a meeting, and as we come together it is not women and children on this side and men on this side.

As we come in, we all come in together mingling. However, not alone in that circumstance.

If he would be walking in, he might be walking in to find a seat, whatever it might be in that situation.

MR. SIMONS: Thank you, sir. Nothing further.

CROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. McCABE:

Q. Mr. Lamerdin, how many hours a week do you spend performing your duties and services as an elder in the North Fremont Congregation?

A. Somewhere between 15 and 20 hours, I would say.

Q. And the other elders that have testified said they don't get paid. Is that true?

A. No.

Q. Why do you do it?

A. It is a privilege. It is an honor to be able to take care of the congregation.

They have a trust and a reliance on us to help them out, and it is a privilege working along with them teaching.

Q. I would like to see if we can have Exhibit 132, Defense only, into evidence.

It is a series of three photographs.

MR. SIMONS: There is no objection, your Honor.

THE COURT: So Defense 132?

MR. McCABE: Yes. 132.

THE COURT: By agreement, Plaintiff's Exhibit Number 27 and Defendant's Exhibit Number 132 is now admitted.

(Whereupon, Plaintiff's Exhibit Number 27 and Defendant's Exhibit Number 132 was admitted into evidence)

BY MR. McCABE:

Q. Have you seen this photo?

A. That's the front entrance to our Kingdom Hall.

Q. Okay. And that's located on what street?

A. 1660 Peralta Boulevard in Fremont.

Q. And what is this? Number 132? Can you tell us what that is?

A. That's the entrance to the front of the Kingdom Hall.

Q. And as you go away from the photograph, it looks like there is some shrubbery?

A. Yes.

Q. And blacktop?

A. Yes. All the way back. It goes back maybe five or six rows of parking in a rectangle, back behind you.

Q. So that's the parking lot?

A. Parking lot.

Q. And if we could go back to the last photograph, the entry to the Kingdom Hall?

What are we looking at here besides the Kingdom Hall sign?

A. As you go in the driveway, you will see a gate with a post coming up right there, and going straight back, you see a dusty spot there. That's where the parking starts and goes right behind that building. And right in the back there is where the parking is, the blacktop and the front door that you saw the other way around.

Q. So what is this right here?

A. That is the back, if you will, of the Kingdom Hall that's all closed off right there.

Q. All right. Go to the next photograph.

A. That's the opposite side of what you just pointed to.

Q. The opposite side?

A. The opposite side of what you just pointed to.

Q. All right. Let's go to the next paragraph.

What are we talking at here?

A. That's right inside the front door, in the back corner of the tan spot in the back there. Looks like a little archway. Those are the doors you just looked at going in. That's the entrance. That's where they come in. And that's the congregation singing before the meeting.

Q. Is this the entire size of the auditorium?

A. Yeah. That's pretty much it, that angle there, yeah. And right next to you over your shoulder right there, if you turned around and looked at that direction, that's where the stage is with the platform. Not really high. It is about just right here, two steps.

Q. How many seats are in the auditorium?

A. 220, I think.

Q. What is your normal Sunday attendance?

A. Normal is about a hundred. It goes between 95 and 110, maybe, somewhere in there.

Q. Was that true in 1994, '95 and '96?

A. Yeah. We averaged right around there. Sometimes it went higher, maybe 115 or 120, somewhere in there.

Q. And in 1993, would you agree that's what you heard about the molestation of Andrea Kendrick?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you consider Jonathan Kendrick to be a child abuser at that point in time?

A. Child abuser? Yes.

Q. Did you ever -- while he was still associated with the congregation, ever hear him being involved in another act of child abuse?

A. No, I did not.

Q. Did you consider Mr. Kendrick, in 1993 until he left the congregation, to be a danger to children in your congregation?

A. No. As a matter of fact, we kept an eye on him to make sure that everything was fine, and there was no issue that came up after that that warranted anything to lead us to think that way.

Q. This document you just went over with Mr. Simons indicated there had been a court action. When did you hear about the court action in connection with the events with Andrea?

A. I'm sorry?

Q. Sorry, it is my voice.

In the letter that you just looked at from your congregation, signed by you and Mr. Clarke and Mr. Abrahamson, indicated there was some type of report made; is that correct?

A. Right. Right.

Q. And it indicated that there was no court action taken?

A. There was no court action taken, yes.

Q. And you subsequently learned that that was inaccurate?

A. Yes.

Q. Was that an important fact to you, when you wrote that letter, whether or not court action was taken?

A. Was it an important fact for me?

Q. Was it?

A. That no action was taken?

I'm sorry. It is hard for me to hear.

Q. I'm sorry. The fact that there was or was not court action taken, was that a very salient fact or important fact of that communication to Watchtower?

A. Yes.

Q. And the fact that there wasn't communicated correctly on that form, was that an important fact?

A. Yes.

Q. Why wasn't it correctly put on the form?

A. We had no idea, we had no knowledge of it.

Q. How did you know it was reported to the police?

A. I was begin that information by Mr. Clarke and Mr. Abrahamson.

Q. Have you since learned that Jonathan Kendrick was convicted of a misdemeanor?

A. Yes.

Q. When did you learn that?

A. I'm sorry, I can't recall.

Q. Do you know if the Fremont police ever contacted your congregation in connection with this report that was made to them about Andrea?

A. No one ever contacted the congregation.

Q. How about the District Attorney's office?

A. No.

Q. How about Child Protective Services?

A. No.

Q. How about the probation department?

A. No.

Q. Do you recall that Jonathan Kendrick and his wife Evelyn separated?

A. Vaguely, I do.

Q. Do you recall the year?

A. I don't recall the year that they did.

Q. Do you recall where Jonathan Kendrick went to live shortly after the separation?

A. I believe he went to his friend's house, the Francis home.

Q. And that was another family in the congregation?

A. Right.

Q. After the report was made to your body of elders about Jonathan Kendrick abusing his stepdaughter, Andrea, did you ever see Candace Conti sitting on Jonathan Kendrick's lap at the Kingdom Hall?

A. Absolutely not.

Q. Was that something you were watching for?

A. Oh, definitely. For any child.

Q. Albeit, Mr. Kendrick being removed as a ministerial servant, as part of that process, was he given any instructions by the body of elders about contact with children?

A. Yes.

Q. What were some of those instructions?

A. Not allowed to be around them, to work in the ministry with them, to have contact with them or indirect contact at all. Not to be around them.

Q. Do you ever see Mr. Kendrick violate those directions?

A. No.

Q. Did you ever see Mr. Kendrick giving bear hugs to Candace Conti in the Kingdom Hall before the meeting, during the meeting or after the meeting?

A. No, I never saw that.

Q. Did you ever see Candace Conti leaving the Kingdom Hall out the driveway from the parking lot with Jonathan Kendrick in a vehicle alone?

A. Absolutely not. If I had seen that, I would have run out there and stopped the truck and said, "What is going on here? That is not allowed."

Q. And why was it not allowed?

A. That is just not right. It is not right for someone else to take someone else's child alone, one-on-one like that. And even -- it is just not right.

Q. Do you have children, Mr. Lamerdin?

A. Yes, I do. I have a boy and a girl, 14 and 16.

Q. And what about Mr. Kendrick working in the house-to-house ministry we were talking about with Candace alone?

A. I'm sorry.

Q. With Mr. Kendrick, after 1993, did he ever work in the house-to-house work, alone with Candace Conti?

A. No.

Q. Did you ever see that happen after 1993?

A. No. Not at all.

Q. Did Jonathan Kendrick ever lead a meeting that you had at the Kingdom Hall before your people go out and do door-to-door ministry?

A. No.

Q. Did you ever do that before November of 1993?

A. I don't recall that.

Q. But after November of 1993, your testimony is --

A. Absolutely not. No.

Q. Let's talk for a minute about confidentiality and the congregation.

Why do you have confidentiality in the congregation of reports that are made to you?

A. Confidentiality is vital. It is a scriptural direction that we have. We base it on the scriptures, Proverbs 29 highlights not to reveal confidential talk of another. It could even lead to slander.

It is a vital aspect of a minister in the congregation that the congregation can come to those that can help them spiritually to build them up spiritually and have confidence and trust that they are not going to be spreading or talking to others about this.

Maybe they deal with depression, maybe they deal with a personal issue, or whatever it might be, or something more serious. It is a vital thing. And it is scripturally based, we guide ourselves accordingly with that.

Q. From time to time, does the body of elders get policies from Watchtower in how to conduct various aspects of the congregation?

A. Sure.

Q. Do those instructions come in the form of letters from the Watchtower organization?

A. Yes, letters.

Q. I would like to show you Plaintiff's 1, Defense Number 26, and ask you if you recognize this document.

A. Yes, I do.

Q. What is it?

A. It is a letter to all bodies of elders in the United States regarding confidentiality in various aspects of conducting ourselves as elders in different matters that we deal with.

Q. And what is confidentiality based on in this letter?

A. Scriptures. It is based on scriptural direction. For example, one is highlighted here in Matthew: "What you hear whispered, preach from the housetops."

But that's not the things. It says we cannot stop speaking about the things aired here.

That is the preaching activity. That is something that we engage in. That is very important.

Yet when it comes to confidential matters, Ecclesiastes says keep quiet. It is a confidential matter. Not revealing confidential talk of one another.

Q. Was this July 1st, 1989 letter to all bodies of elders of the United States also a policy statement on child abuse?

A. Oh, I'm sorry. Also, in addition?

Q. Yes.

A. It has a paragraph on that, yes.

Q. Which paragraph is it?

A. On page 3, I think, B. Right at the top of the page.

Q. And how long is this entire letter?

A. Six pages.

Q. And how long is the article -- or the section on child abuse?

A. One paragraph.

Q. And what is the direction that is given by Watchtower in that paragraph regarding child abuse?

A. If there is ever an accusation, to immediately call the Legal Department of the Watchtower.

Q. Anything else?

A. For direction. And, of course, look up -- and articles that can help us to help those that have brought this up, this accusation up.

Q. And does it refer to such an article?

A. Yeah. It refers to the Awake of January 22, of 1985, "If the worst should happen."

Q. I would like to show you what has been marked as Plaintiff's Number 17 -- excuse me. Plaintiff's Number 9. Defendant's Number 17. It has been admitted, I believe.

Do you recognize that document, sir?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. What is it?

A. This is how I, or how we can protect our children. And the highlight of the article with the primary subject of the article is regarding child molesting.

Q. Is that article the one that's referred to in the July 1, 1989 letter dealing with child abuse?

A. Yes, it is. And particularly on page 8. That's what the letter primarily refers to.

Q. What is contained on page 8?

A. It refers to a box there, "If the worst should happen," and how to care for the individual.

Q. Do you recall -- you were with us in 1985?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you recall, yourself, getting this magazine?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you recall how you got it?

A. Yes. Getting a subscription in the mail in the mail box.

Q. Was it your custom at that time to read magazines like this when they came?

A. Oh, yeah, definitely.

Q. Was that magazine available just to elders in the congregation?

A. No. To everybody in the congregation that wanted a copy. Actually, everybody had a subscription. And if they use these -- normally this is what we use out in the ministry, we share this with people knocking on their doors, sharing this information.

It is something that it is so sad to see, this is something infiltrating society. This is what we want people to be aware and how they can help.

Q. Getting back to the July 1, 1989 letter and the paragraph dealing with child abuse, was that the end of the policy begin to you by Watchtower Bible and Tract Society in dealing with the matters of child abuse?

A. The end of the policy? No.

Q. What else was provided to you?

A. Well, we are continuing our instructed, whether it is through articles in the magazines or letters from the Watchtower, to continue to be aware of situations and make us aware of how we can continue to be vigilant in caring for the congregation.

Q. I would like to approach you with Defendant's Exhibit 32, and Defendant's Exhibit 27, which has been admitted into evidence, and ask you if you recognize this document.

A. Yes, I do.

Q. Is that a continuation of the development of the policy of Watchtower on child abuse?

A. Yes.

Q. Is there an attachment to that March 23, 1992 letter?

A. Yes, there is.

Q. Okay.

A. That attachment says or states at the heading of it is what elders can say to abused victims.

Q. Now, I want to call your attention to a time when you first heard about Jonathan Kendrick abusing Candace Conti.

Do you recall that time period?

A. Yes.

Q. What time period? What year was it?

A. It was about a year ago. I'm blank on the date.

Q. Does 2009 sound about right?

A. December, I think it was, 2009. Somewhere around there. Yes, 2009.

Q. Do you remember what month?

A. I think it was December.

Q. How did you first hear about Candace Conti's allegations of abuse by Jonathan Kendrick?

A. At that meeting, when we met with her at the Kingdom Hall.

Q. How did you know to meet her at the Kingdom Hall?

A. She had called Mr. Clarke, I believe, and requested that both of us meet with her at the Kingdom Hall and she wanted to inform us regarding some type of abuse.

Q. And you knew the subject was going to be sexual child abuse?

A. That was what I understood it to be.

Q. And how did you understand it?

You knew from Mr. Clarke?

A. Yes, from the conversation he had with her.

Q. What, if anything, did you do prior to learning about the meeting to prepare for the meeting that you were going to have with Ms. Conti?

A. Right away, I looked up what I could on the subject. And as a matter of fact, this is one of the letters I looked up.

Q. And that is a March 23, 1992 letter?
A. March 23, 1992 letter.
Q. With the attachment?
A. With the attachment, yes, along with some Awake articles and how we can help.
Q. Why did you do that?
A. Just hearing of that just cut me to the heart. You hear about it all the time in the media, and it is going on constantly. And then hearing of that, it hurt. And I wanted to make sure that I can be of some assistance to help by my words, by using the scriptures to comfort her, to help her realize that God cares about her and wants her to be careful.
Q. Prior to the meeting, did you do any looking into your files for anything about Jonathan Kendrick?
A. Prior to that? No, I didn't know who was involved.
Q. Where did the meeting take place with Candace Conti?
A. At the Kingdom Hall.
Q. How did the meeting begin?
A. We sat down and asked her, well, what happened? What is happening?
Q. Did you start the meeting with a prayer?
A. I believe so.

Q. Did Candace join you in that prayer?
A. I would hope so.
Q. Did you bring anything to the meeting to use in your discussions with her?
A. The Bible.
Q. How long did the meeting last?
A. I can't recall. I think it was maybe about an hour. Maybe less than that, half hour. I can't recall.
Q. What did Ms. Conti tell you about what had happened to her as a child?
A. She said that she was abused by Jonathan Kendrick.
Q. Did she provide you any more details?
A. She said that he touched her inappropriately. And she started to break down, which really hurt, seeing her pain. She said that she couldn't continue on. She insinuated that it went beyond that.
Q. And you didn't press her on details?
A. No, not at all.
Q. Did Mr. Clarke press her on details?
A. No.
Q. And as far as you understood, Ms. Conti requested that you would be at that meeting?
A. From what I remember, yes.

Q. Did you have any discussion with Ms. Conti that she had spent time alone with Mr. Kendrick at his home?

A. Any discussion? I believe, she brought that up.

Q. Prior to that conversation, was that something that you had ever known about?

A. No. Not at all.

Q. Did she indicate anywhere else?

A. I can't recall, no. I don't believe so.

Q. Did she indicate to you whether or not she drove a vehicle with Mr. Kendrick away from the Kingdom Hall?

A. I don't think that came up in the meeting, no.

Q. Did you ever observe that?

A. Did I ever observe that? No. Absolutely not.

Q. What did you do to try to comfort and encourage Candace Conti during this meeting?

A. We certainly tried to listen and be empathetic and with heartfelt, honestly, and tried to comfort her in any way.

We shared some scriptures with her and encouraged her to reach out to her family or dad to help her through this.

Q. Let's talk about that for a minute. Did you suggest that she reach out to her father?

A. Yes.

Q. And what was her response?

A. She just, from what I could recall, indicated it wasn't the greatest relationship. I mean, I don't want to put words in anyone's mouth, but it just appeared they weren't getting along, things like that.

Q. Body language, things like that --

A. Yeah.

Q. Let me finish my question.

A. I'm sorry.

Q. Did you reach out to Neal Conti after this meeting with Candace?

A. Yes, I think about two or three days later. After two or three days, we met with him.

Q. And was he a member of the congregation in 2009?

A. No. He was in a neighboring congregation.

Q. So how did you contact him?

A. We got ahold of him, contacted him on the phone, and then we met him at the Kingdom Hall and spoke to him.

Q. Same Kingdom Hall?

A. Same Kingdom Hall.

Q. What did you tell Mr. Conti?

A. We asked him if he was aware what was going on here. And we asked him, "Please reach out to her, and she needs your support now."

And he was pretty upset about it.

Q. And what was his response?

A. He said he would try to do whatever he could to reach out.

Q. I wanted to ask you, too, did you try to reach out to Candace's mother, Kathleen Conti?

A. No.

Q. Did you try to call her?

A. No. I don't recall.

Q. Did you know where she lived at the time?

A. No. Just, I thought she lived somewhere in Southern California. I don't remember where.

Q. How many children attend the North Fremont Congregation?

A. About 30. 20, 30, something like that.

Q. How do you feel about that?

A. They are like family. They mean a lot to us.

Q. Okay.

A. We cherish them. We care for them. We want to see them grow up with good morals, to be an asset to the community, to grow up with spiritual guidance and to be happy and to have a great life.

Q. How many children were in the congregation back in 1994?

A. 1994? Close to the same. We are pretty -- family congregation. We have a lot of kids in our hall. Maybe between 20 and 30.

Q. Would that be true in '95, '96, '97?

A. I would say so, yes.

Q. Did you feel the same back then as you do today about those children?

A. Absolutely. Tremendously. We are like a family. We care about one another. That is part of meeting together even before the meetings. How is it going? How are you doing in school? How is everything going? We really care about one another. It is just the way we feel.

MR. McCABE: Thank you.

REDIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. SIMONS:

Q. Mr. Lamerdin, thank you for your obvious feelings of empathy for Candace. Let me ask you a couple of other questions here.

A. Sure.

Q. Can we go back to the photographs and see photograph 132-C again, please?

Mr. Lamerdin, I'm just a little unclear. Is there an aisle that we kind of just see here in the bottom right of the photograph?

A. Yes, there is the aisle there, and then the same on the other side.

Q. So it looks like there is a seat on the bottom right of the photograph as well?

A. Yes.

Q. And there is about the same number of seats on the right side of the photograph as there is on the left?

A. Yes. On the far left, there is four seats on the wings, if you will.

Q. So what we see here is where, actually, the folks, Mr. Abrahamson and others are standing is, we see sort of the middle section of seats?

A. Yes.

Q. And then there is a section on the left with an aisle. Correct?

A. Correct.

Q. And then a section on the right with an aisle?

A. Correct.

Q. And then you mentioned, there is a little stage, a slightly elevated area in the front?

A. Yes. In the front area, yes.

Q. Where are the elders during the services?

A. All disbursed throughout.

Q. Disbursed in the audience?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay.

A. There is no, "Okay, all the elders sit right here and you sit right there." They are all...

Q. And who is up at the front facing, if anyone, facing the chairs and the people in them?

A. Like I am looking back at that?

Q. Yes.

A. There is no one looking back at that except for the one who is presenting the material from the podium.

Q. So whoever would be, either the speaker or leader of the prayer or song, that would be the person in front?

A. Yes.

Q. And does that person change during the course of the service?

A. Yes. Occasionally, yes.

Q. Does it change from service to service who that person might be who is up at the front leading?

A. Yes. For example, for Sunday we have a public talk or talk for everybody by the way it is taught. And the one who is presenting that, once he finishes, then the chairman will come up, we have an intermission song, and then another person will come up and conduct a Watchtower study.

Q. Now, you mentioned that you did not consider Mr. Kendrick to be a danger before the molestation of his stepdaughter?

A. Right.

Q. And you did not consider him to be a danger to molest other children afterwards because you were keeping an eye on him?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you consider him to be a danger to molest children after 1993, after the stepdaughter report, at times when you, perhaps, didn't keep an eye on him?

A. I really couldn't comment on that.

Q. You knew from -- in the beginning you said that you read in the Awake and the Watchtower that child sex abusers often operate in secret?

A. Yes.

Q. And you knew that they often operate in religious organizations?

A. Yes.

Q. And you knew that they would find ways without any detection at all to get to children that were in the various religious congregations?

A. Yes.

Q. You mentioned that if you saw a child in a car of someone other than a parent that you would inquire and want to know what's going on.

Is that a fair summary of what you told us earlier?

A. Yes.

Q. Wouldn't you say that it is undoubtedly true that sometimes parents could not provide transportation to a child to a Jehovah's Witness event, and it would be done by another member of the congregation?

A. Only under the parents' supervision and that they trust.

Q. But you were aware that the parent from time to time would have their child transported by another member of the congregation?

A. The reason why I'm hesitant on that is the way you put the question. They would be transported at times with someone they would approve of, yes.

Q. Who the parents would approve of?

A. Who the parents would approve of. They have the primary responsibility of taking care of the children.

Q. It would not be surprising to you, however, to learn that the parents had asked another member of the congregation that they trusted to take their child somewhere?

A. It would surprise me. It would surprise me at times, yeah. I would make sure I touched base with the parents and what's behind it and make sure they will be responsible and take care of the safety and welfare of the child.

MR. SIMONS: Let's take a look, your Honor, at Mr. Abrahamson's deposition at page 38, lines 11 through 23.

(Whereupon, video recording was played)

BY MR. SIMONS:

Q. Children sometimes attend meetings without parent?

A. Yes, they do. But, of course, they would have to arrange transportation to get there, so someone would take oversight of that individual to get them to a meeting and to get them home.

Q. When you said "somebody" can you tell me what kind of somebody you are thinking of?

A. The parents would arrange for somebody.

Q. A person -- another member of the congregation?

A. Yes. Undoubtedly.

(Whereupon, video recording was stopped)

BY MR. SIMONS:

Q. Do you agree with that?

A. Another member of the congregation? Yeah, as long as the parents approve it, and ...

Q. When the parents are making a decision of who they approve of, would it be beneficial for them to know if one of the members of the congregation is a -- as you said -- a known child molester?

A. Could you repeat that?

Q. Yeah. Wouldn't the parents be able to make a better decision of who to trust to take their child somewhere if they knew that one member of the congregation was a known child molester?

A. I would have to say no.

Q. You looked at the Awake Magazine from 1993, and that's Plaintiff's Exhibit 64, Defense Exhibit 037.

MR. McCABE: I don't believe he did look at it, your Honor.

MR. SIMONS: He discussed it.

Counsel, I stand corrected.

BY MR. SIMONS:

Q. You discussed having read the October 1993 Awake Magazine.

And you would diligently read all of the Awake Magazines. Correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And in particular, you were interested in information concerning child abuse because you are a father and because you are a man who cares about children, really?

A. Yes.

Q. In your heart, children are very important to you?

A. Yes.

Q. And so can we look at the exhibit, please? Page 4.

So you knew from your reading of Awake that:

> "Adult society often unwillingly cooperates with child abusers. How so? By refusing to be aware of this danger by fostering a hush-hush attitude about it."

A. Yes.

Q. Then you knew from your reading that it was the view of Awake that there was a general conspiracy of silence that allowed gross child abuse to persist among a separate religion, the Catholic Church, for decades?

A. Yes.

Q. And you knew that, not only from your reading, but just from your general knowledge as a member of the community?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, I don't want to have a debate with you about spiritual interpretation.

Let me just ask you this question with regard to the spiritual matters that you talked about as the basis for the policy of keeping child sex abusers confidential and secret.

Your understanding of that basis comes from what you learned through your teachings and studies, from Watchtower of New York?

A. Yes.

Q. Your December '09 letter that we looked at, which is Plaintiff's 18, Defendant's 106, this is the letter that you wrote concerning Candace.

And did you notify New York in 2009 of the report you had received from Candace Conti?

A. Yes. We called Legal.

Q. And when you did that, did you follow it up with any written report?

A. I don't believe so.

Q. Other than this letter of December 20, 2009, did you notify anyone else of the report of Candace Conti concerning her abuse by Jonathan Kendrick?

A. The Oakley Congregation.

Q. That's this letter?

A. Yes.

Q. Anyone else besides -- was it telephoned to New York?

A. Yes.

Q. To Legal. And then you also wrote this letter to Oakley.

A. Yes.

Q. Anyone else you notified?

A. No.

Q. You talked with Candace about reporting it to the police?

A. We talked about that. We said, "If you want to report it, you can report it."

We left that up to her.

Q. Let's look at Exhibit 18.

The sentence says:

"She asked twice if we were going to report this to the authorities. We told her, I said twice, that if she wishes to make a report it is her right to do so."

Is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you understand when she asked you twice if you were going to report it to the authorities, that she was asking for your help to go to the authorities?

A. No. I did not understand that. It did not come through us. That's why we emphasized, "If you want to make a report, you can go ahead and do that."

Q. You knew that she was not willing to confront Mr. Kendrick because it was just too difficult for her?

A. Yes.

MR. SIMONS: Thank you. Thank you, sir.

CROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. McCABE:

Q. Mr. Lamerdin, did you ever see Candace Conti at the Kingdom Hall of Jehovah's Witnesses in North Fremont without one or both of her parents present?

A. No.

MR. McCABE: Thank you. That's all.

THE COURT: Mr. Lamerdin, thank you very much for your time today. You are excused.

To the jury. Same comment. Thank you, as always, for your commitment and dedication, and diligence, based on my observation.

I will look forward to seeing everyone bright-eyed at 8:30 tomorrow morning. Thank you again.

THE COURT: Okay, counsel.

(Whereupon, the following proceedings were heard outside the presence of jurors)

THE COURT: Counsel, we will gather again at 8:00 tomorrow morning.

It is my recollection, Mr. Simons, both your offer of proof as to Mr. Lewis tomorrow, I have a recollection.

MR. SIMONS: Certainly as to Child Sexual Abuse Accommodation Syndrome, which is his regular kind of beat, if you will.

And I have to recheck -- Mr. Schnack and I were conferring about that earlier -- I know there was a couple of things he said that clearly are not going to be admissible that would not be asked about.

I kind of have in the back of my mind, there is one other subject matter that was permissible with his opinions, and I'm having trouble dredging it up.

THE COURT: And I was looking at my notes. I knew what my response was as to a very limited question. So I want, before we go through a drill and bring him in here to have the sort of discussion I am having now, so I can pinpoint a little bit letter.

MR. SCHNACK: Can I confer with Mr. McCabe just for a second?

THE COURT: You used the description dredging. I would be a little more delicate. But the answer is I was doing the same thing.

MR. SCHNACK: Your Honor, if he is just going to testify about Child Sex Abuse Accommodation Syndrome without offering any opinions as to Candace Conti's credibility, that she is an honest person in this regard, we can avoid all this. But if it goes beyond that, I want to know what the topic is.

MR. SIMONS: And I just need to re-review his depo, your Honor.

THE COURT: I guess I made my point as to my other ruling. The answer is I will look forward to seeing you at 8:00. And if it all comes to pass the right way tomorrow. I have plenty to do. Again, the door will be open. I try and open it at 7:00.

(Proceedings were adjourned at 3:07 p.m.)

PROCEEDINGS

(Whereupon, the following proceedings were heard outside the presence of jurors)

THE COURT: All right. Back on the record in the matter of the Candace Conti versus Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc., et al. Let's reiterate for a minute our witnesses today are:

MR. SIMONS: Carl Lewis, Neal Conti. I think we are going to then show excerpts that we had agreed on; although, there may be one last question that we have to -- I don't think the court had to address it. We just have to edit it.

And the depositions to Shuster, we are going to then go into video land -- video deposition of Laura Fraser and three treating physicians from Kaiser.

THE COURT: Okay. In terms of context and time -- and you have been certainly very good about conduct in this trial. Are we going to keep the jury here until 3:00?

MR. SIMONS: I did not calculate the running time after edits in these depositions. But Laura Fraser runs over an hour, and Mr. Shuster runs probably a solid hour. And the other three are probably an hour or so between the three of them.

THE COURT: It is what it is. And we will excuse the jury when the dust settles on it. We will be in recess tomorrow. I will be -- I have a full day already planned. But I will be all over, I'm thinking, as to the proposed jury instructions, I will need just a little bit of time tomorrow to really -- before I run through them. I just need to have enough evidence to assess what I was thinking in terms of their application. But when we come back on Monday, I guarantee I will be ready to roll on all of that.

MR. SIMONS: And I think that is important, your Honor, because I think with one of their experts Dr. Salter, I think she invades the province of some of those issues. At least the standard of care is going to be relevant to how she frames her testimony.

THE COURT: Okay. And when is Dr. Salter coming forward?

MR. SIMONS: Monday morning.

THE COURT: Okay. Well, I'm still going to do what I say and say what I did in terms of I didn't know Dr. Salter, when she was coming. But, yes, standard of care is an emotional issue here, and how it gets framed is certainly crucial to everybody.

Where are we with -- I'm not sure -- is it Mr. Lewis or Dr. Lewis?

MR. SIMONS: Mr. Lewis.

THE COURT: And I've already more than hinted what I thought. Do we need to do that 402 at this juncture? Where are we on it now?

MR. SIMONS: He is only going to testify as to the child sexual abuse accommodation syndrome in the -- I will call it generic -- with various questions about the syndrome and about considerations that may have relevance to this case, but no specific references to this case, the actual people, et cetera.

MR. SCHNACK: And with that limitation, I agree we don't need a 402 hearing. The problem I'm going to have is if Mr. Lewis engages like he did in his deposition saying that what Candace Conti said has rings of truth to it. That's a quote.

Several times during his deposition he was saying, quote, basically forced it upon a delayed report. And we really need to walk a fine line from the defense side on that. That is totally inadmissible.

MR. SIMONS: He did. And I agree, he won't.

THE COURT: Okay. And I thought -- I commented upon the professionalism as to how we all handled Mr. Williams yesterday and whatnot, and it was, I guess, noted. So I will deal with Mr. Lewis, his understanding in much of this case is the bottom line.

MR. SCHNACK: And then I assume, since the silent lambs motion in limine was reserved, that Mr. Lewis isn't going to address that in his testimony.

MR. SIMONS: Yes, you assumed correctly.

THE COURT: We are working well together. I am getting rid of the double negatives. So fair and nicely done. Good touch both. Okay.

MR. McCABE: One other thing. I have three lay witnesses -- percipient witnesses that work -- they are badgering me when, next week, they will be called. So I wonder if Mr. Simons could tell us what his intentions are Monday, Tuesday.

THE COURT: Mr. Simons, certainly Monday.

MR. SIMONS: I know where we are going here. I'm pretty sure next week, because we are getting into the Plaintiff's case so. We have Inspector Davila available Monday. We have Ann Salter, the expert we spoke about. Carolyn Martinez, assuming I can make the arrangements, will be here Monday. And I assume the Plaintiff will testify Monday.

That may or may not complete a day. I only have one witness after that, and that would be Dr. Ponton, the psychiatrist from UCSF, and she is first thing Tuesday morning. And so we might be able to rest, subject to --

MR. SCHNACK: And just so the Court and counsel is aware, Dr. Martin Williams, Ph.D., the defense IME doctor, may not be available Tuesday or Wednesday of next week to testify. We may have to video him on Friday of next week to present it on the following Monday.

THE COURT: Because remember on Thursday and Friday of week, I'm in the great city of Sacramento.

MR. SCHNACK: So, Rick, we can talk as to whether you are available Friday morning.

MR. SIMONS: We will work it out.

THE COURT: You understand my attitude about all that. Okay. All right. Good.

MR. SCHNACK: I guess one other question on the Monica Applewhite motion in limine, we will be submitting some briefing.

Can we just email that to you tomorrow?

THE COURT: Sure. Actually, I am in here a long day tomorrow. But, yes.

MR. SCHNACK: I think we will probably submit some briefing on the standard of care issue as well, just to assist the Court.

THE COURT: That's fine. Because -- I don't think this will shock anybody, but I spent last evening rereading the briefs on standard of care and how to deal with it.

And, of course, Mr. Simons, if I get inundated with another standard of care -- that will apply to anything or any case as presented.

MR. SIMONS: I will appreciate the opportunity to also inundate. If we are through with these matters, perhaps I could confer with Mr. Lewis just to remind him of the --

THE COURT: All right. Everybody can rest easy. At 8:30 we will wrap it up.

(Whereupon the following proceedings were heard in the presence of jurors)

THE COURT: All right. Good morning tin the members of our jury. Today you will have witnesses, and then you will have some videos also in terms of people whose depositions were taken.

In terms of your scheduling, remember, we are not in session on this matter tomorrow. We will commence again first thing Monday morning and work through Wednesday.

And then I have to discharge my educational requirements Thursday and Friday in Sacramento, and you'll come back again the following week, subject to what I told you as to the estimated length of trial.

I'm very cognizant, in terms of the trial work and all the professionalism. We are moving at a good pace each day during trial. And so we are very much in line with the estimate I originally gave you that you would get the case prior to June 15, on or about. So going from there.

So back to the case. Mr. Simons.

MR. SIMONS: Yes, Your Honor. We would call Carl Lewis.

CARL LEWIS,

WAS DULY SWORN TO TELL THE TRUTH BY THE CLERK

AND TESTIFIED AS FOLLOWS:

THE CLERK: Will you please state your name and spell your first and last name for the record.

THE WITNESS: My name is Carl Lewis. Carl is C-A-R-L. Lewis is L-E-W-I-S.

THE CLERK: Thank you.

DIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. SIMONS:

Q. Mr. Lewis, what is your occupation?

A. After retiring from a 25-year career in law enforcement, I'm now in private practice as a consultant, a trainer of child sexual abuse issues and a licensed private investigator.

Q. Can you tell the jury, please, your experience in law enforcement?

A. Certainly. I became a sworn California Police Officer, Deputy Sheriff with the Alameda County Sheriff's Department in 1984.

I was assigned to the Santa Rita Rehabilitation Center. And after about a year and a half, I transferred to the Redwood City Police Department.

I was a police officer with the Redwood City Police Department for about three years. My family grew. I moved to the South Bay. I was a police officer with the Los Gatos Police Department from 1988 through 1995.

In 1995 I was laterally transferred to the Half Moon Bay Police Department, where I was a sergeant.

I returned to Los Gatos, then Monte Sereno, Police Department in 1996.

I served again as a police officer/detective/acting supervisor working primarily on child sexual abuse issues, child abuse issues.

And I spent the last ten and a half years of my career as a criminal investigator and senior investigator with the Santa Clara County District Attorney's office.

Q. Do you have specific experience in the investigation of child sexual abuse?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. And can you tell the jury, please, your experience in that field?

A. Yes. I was introduced to the topic at a basic training course at the basic police academy in 1984, that level of first responder preliminary investigator. And so that was essentially a 24-hour block of instruction.

In 1992, I was selected to be the investigator of crimes against children for the Los Gatos Police Department. For that assignment, I was required by law and by the California Commission On Peace Officer Standards and Training, essentially licensing credentials by police officers in California, to complete training for newly-assigned investigators of sexual assault. I believe that was a 36-hour course at that time in 1992.

From that initial course that I was required to take, I sought out additional training on my own from a variety of sources, not just law enforcement based, but essentially multi-disciplinary, meaning all professions that work in child abuse intervention. To a point where, as I sit here today, I have logged more than 600 hours of classroom seminar workshop training in the field of child sexual abuse, intervention and investigation.

I held that position as investigator for three years, when I transferred laterally to the Half Moon Bay Police Department as a sergeant, I also was in charge of juvenile programs which included child abuse investigation.

As I mentioned, I returned to the Los Gatos, then Monte Sereno, Los Gatos and Monte Sereno Police Department.

And at that time I also was the investigator of crimes against children for essentially a second rotation in that assignment.

In 1998, when I transferred to the District Attorney's Office as a civil police officer, but as a criminal investigator, I was assigned to the high-tech unit where I worked on cases of child sexual exploitation, that is computer child pornography, essentially.

After about eight months in that assignment, I was assigned to be the investigator on a special grant-funded program where I worked very closely with a single prosecutor on aggravated cases of child sexual abuse.

And I did that for, roughly, seven years until I was promoted to senior criminal investigator. I stayed in my same position, but then took on supervision of other investigators who were in similar investigations.

And I held the position of supervisor within the Crimes Against Persons Unit at the DA's office until my retirement in April of 2009.

Q. Have you taught and trained other law enforcement officers in the techniques of investigation of childhood sexual abuse?

A. Yes, I have.

Q. And can you detail that for us, please?

A. Certainly. I began teaching in the field in 1995 when I taught a -- essentially, a quarterly course, a block of quarterly course for police officers who are already well into their careers and just receiving annual update by training and a block of instruction on child interview. I believe I did that for about three years.

I expanded into teaching about particular techniques for conducting investigations of child sexual abuse allegations. And then I taught a block of instruction for the California District Attorneys Association on, essentially, family dynamics in child sexual abuse cases.

For about the last ten years, I have taught a two-day course about four times a year through 2009 and then about once or twice a year since then on a particular technique for conducting forensic interviews of children who are suspected victims of abuse.

I taught courses to police officers, but also to multi-disciplinary audiences that included social workers, prosecutors, family court lawyers, judges sitting on the family court bench in other jurisdictions, a variety of people who work in the child abuse intervention field. In fact, I'm flying to Los Angeles this afternoon to teach a block of instruction there.

Q. Are you familiar with an organization called the California Professional Society on the Abuse of Children?

A. Yes, I am.

Q. And what is that organization?

A. It is a non-profit organization of which I am elected president that works on providing training to professionals and on working to shape public policy as it relates to child abuse and child sexual abuse issues.

Q. In the course of your training and experience, have you become familiar with the professional literature on the subject of interviewing and investigating childhood sexual abuse?

A. Very much so, yes.

Q. Have you become familiar, in the course of your training and experience, with the subject of child sexual abuse accommodation syndrome?

A. Yes.

Q. And without going into detail, can you tell us the specific training you have received on the subject of child sexual abuse accommodation syndrome?

A. Certainly. Because of its nature, which I expect I will get into later, child sexual abuse accommodation syndrome has no particular course of study. So there is not a class one could take necessarily on that topic. But I was introduced to that information at that mandatory course that I took as a new investigator sexual abuse crimes in 1992 during that week-long introductory training.

The block of instruction was, I believe, four hours at that time and provided by a mental health professional.

Q. Have you previously qualified as an expert witness on the subject of child sexual abuse accommodation syndrome?

A. Yes, I have.

Q. And have you done so in the courts in California?

A. Yes.

Q. On approximately how many occasions?

A. Since 1995, approximately 260.

MR. SIMONS: Your Honor, I would offer Mr. Lewis as an expert on child sexual abuse accommodation syndrome.

THE COURT: Would you like to ask any questions of Mr. Lewis?

MR. SCHNACK: No.

MR. McCABE: No.

THE COURT: I will find that he is an expert for the express purpose of testifying about child abuse accommodation syndrome.

BY MR. SIMONS:

Q. Mr. Lewis, can you first tell us in an overview fashion what the words or series of words "child sexual abuse accommodation syndrome" refers to?

A. Yes. It refers to the phenomenon of child sexual abuse accommodation that is intended as background information for essentially adults looking into a reported case of child sexual abuse, and it is used as an aid to understanding some of the unexpected and frequently counter-intuitive things that tend to come up in these types of cases.

Q. Is child sexual abuse accommodation syndrome -- well, let me rephrase that. Is there some debate about the term "syndrome" that is included in this long phrase?

A. There is. The term "child sexual abuse accommodation syndrome" is the name that was given to it by the person who put the information forward to the professional field and that was a Dr. Roland Summit. S-U-M-M-I-T. Dr. Summit is a psychiatrist, so a medical doctor by training. And syndrome was what he felt was the appropriate term at that time to use to describe a collection of things that tend to happen at about the same time that could be traced to a particular source. Meaning, that syndrome often is misunderstood to equal diagnosis. And in this case it is not meant as a diagnosis. The child sexual abuse accommodation syndrome is not diagnostic. It is not a condition that someone could be said to suffer from, for example.

MR. SCHNACK: Your Honor, I'm going to object. He is not a medical doctor, and he is talking about medical issues. It's outside the scope of his expertise.

THE COURT: Mr. Simons, I'm going to overrule you on that, in terms of context. But I do wish you to remain within the lines of your expertise.

BY MR. SIMONS:

Q. Amongst professionals, who you work with in your professional organization that you are now the state president of, and professionals generally based upon your experience in this specific field, is there a debate about the legitimacy of child sexual abuse accommodation syndrome?

A. Yes.

Q. And what is the debate?

A. The debate, essentially, is that it is not predicted; it is not diagnostic. It is -- which is counter to what Dr. Summit, the original author has said. He never said that it was intended to be used that way. In fact, he authored and published a subsequent article called "The Abuse of Child Sexual Abuse Accommodation Syndrome" in which he tries to clarify his selection of the word "syndrome" to describe what it is.

Q. So what is child sexual abuse accommodation syndrome?

A. Well, as I mentioned at the beginning, it is essentially background information that is intended to help adults view a reported case of child sexual abuse with the understanding that, essentially, preconceived ideas about child sexual abuse victims and the nature of the crime don't necessarily match up to reality.

Q. How is it used in the investigation by law enforcement of reports of childhood sexual abuse?

A. Again, as background information to remind us as investigators, as mediators, not to make a decision on a reported case based solely on one of these unexpected possibly counter-intuitive things that we might not expect to see in a case.

Q. Are there categories to child sexual abuse accommodation syndrome?

A. There are. Dr. Summit, in his landmark article published in 1983, outlined essentially five categories that are used for discussion points to fill out his opinion about the child sexual abuse accommodation syndrome. They are not, again, symptoms. It is not a checklist by any means. It is just meant to be an aid to understand.

Q. How are these categories utilized by law enforcement professionals such as yourself in the investigation of child sexual abuse?

A. Well, they provide an alternative explanation for, as I said, some of the unexpected things that tend to come up in these kinds of cases.

And when I say "unexpected," sometimes there are people who have preconceived ideas about child sexual abuse and might expect, for example, that a child would immediately report it, or might expect that a child who had suffered sexual abuse would shun the offender and want to have nothing to do with that person.

The Child Sexual Abuse Accommodation Syndrome offers a basis from observation to rely on, to say, "Well, that's not necessarily the case."

Q. How many cases would you say of child sexual abuse have you investigated in the course of your professional career?

A. My best estimate is 500 or so.

Q. In the course of these investigations, have you come to rely on Child Sexual Abuse Accommodation Syndrome as an important tool in understanding what victims reported?

A. Yes, and how they report.

Q. Are there some categories to Child Sexual Abuse Accommodation Syndrome?

A. Yes. Essentially five categories Dr. Summit talks about.

Q. Can you give us an overview of those five categories?

A. Certainly. The first is secrecy.

Number 2 is helplessness.

Number 3 is entrapment and accommodation.

Number 4 is delayed, conflicted, unconvincing disclosure.

Number 5 is retraction.

Q. And if you could, perhaps, just put these categories, as you discuss each one, up on the board so we can follow along.

Let's talk about the first category.

How does secrecy relate to this topic?

A. In this context, secrecy describes the fact that the sexual abuse of the child occurs almost exclusively when the offender is alone or somehow isolated with the child.

I say "somehow isolated" because it could occur in the public view. But in those cases, the actual molesting behavior is camouflaged by the offender in such a way that is it not readily recognizable by someone who is looking on. But most often it is done in private, in secret.

An offender might do something to either create or take advantage of an atmosphere of secrecy, maybe waiting until everybody has left the area, waiting until everybody else is asleep, if it occurs in the home, going to a secluded room and closing a door, turning up the radio or TV and masking the sound.

And the fact that the offender has to create or take advantage of this atmosphere of secrecy, as I mentioned, can send a message to a child that there must be something bad or wrong about this behavior or we wouldn't have to wait for this set of circumstances.

An offender also can do things, explicitly or implicitly, to communicate to the child that this is a secret.

Depending on the relationship between the offender and the child, the offender could strike a particular body posture or maybe affect a facial expression or a look that can communicate the seriousness of the secret.

An offender could even say something to a child such as:

"This is our secret. You can't tell."

"If you tell," for example, "you will get in trouble."

Or "If you tell, no one will believe you."

"If you tell," for example, "I," the offender "might go to jail."

"If you tell, your family will be mad."

"If you tell, you might have to move out of your house. You might have to go to a different school."

Up to and including:

"If you tell, I will kill you. I will kill myself. I will kill your dog."

Q. What does the category of helplessness refer to?

A. Helplessness, in this context, describes the fact that children under the age of 18 are essentially, dependent upon adults to make things happen in their lives. So they are helpless in that regard.

Certainly children who are closer to age 18 are less helpless, but still require adults to get certain things done.

The younger the children are, certainly, the more they require adults to make things happen in their lives.

And so that makes it that much more difficult in many cases for a child to try to bring to light something negative that is happening.

Most often, for example, the disclosure of child sexual abuse is a process and not a one-time event.

It is unlikely and far less common for a child to come forward and make a one-time and sit-down full disclosure.

What is far more common is a child who struggles with the information, maybe lets out a little bit of information, might seem kind of innocuous, but is an attempt to let caretakers know that there is a problem.

So a child might say something like:

"I don't want to go to the store with him anymore," or "I don't want to go somewhere with him anymore."

To the child, that can be a real cry for help. But to the person hearing it, it could be disregarded, rejected, denied.

And then, if the abuse occurs again, then that can leave the child with feelings of, "Well, I tried to get help, but it didn't work," which just reinforces the sense of helplessness.

Q. Does the feeling that there is no safe person to tell about abuse, is that part of helplessness in this syndrome?

A. Well, it certainly can be. And I may have mentioned this earlier, and if not, I would like to clarify, that these categories are not symptoms, they are not indicators by any means. They are merely meant to be descriptive. And so they are often are very overlapping.

The fact that a child has no sense of a safe person in whom to disclose could be reflected in the helplessness discussion. It could also be reflected in the entrapment and accommodation discussion and the following two categories.

Q. What does the category of entrapment and accommodation refer to?

A. When a child has suffered sexual abuse or is even carrying a secret from just a one-time event, the person is trapped by that circumstance. So that is a thing that has occurred in that child's life.

But children tend to be deemed fairly resilient, will want to go on being children. So going to school, hanging out with friends, those kind of things, and often will find a way to cope with that negative aspect of their lives. So they accommodate it. They put up with it.

Accommodation mechanisms can take on as many forms as there are children. So there is no one particular type of accommodation mechanism you should look for.

But some common ones could be: Change in school performance, change in demeanor, change in friends, change in appearance sometimes, maybe wearing additional clothing or cutting one's hair or something like that, up to and including substance abuse, rebelliousness, promiscuity, things that could be seen as possible coping mechanisms by these kids.

But I would say that far and away, the most common accommodation mechanism, both in my experience and as referred to in the literature, is the child who tries very hard to act as if nothing is wrong.

And we can deny if somebody asks if something is wrong. If we suspect otherwise, a child may not be in a position where he or she is ready to tell yet.

Q. So in your experience, have you seen cases where a child sex abuse victim may, for an extended period of time, act as if nothing is wrong?

A. Yes.

Q. What does the next category refer to: Delayed, conflicted and unconvincing disclosure?

A. Well, we'll break it into three parts.

Delayed describes the fact that most often there is a delay from the time of the abuse until the child is finally able to say something about it.

Because these are not symptoms or indicators, there is no standard to be met for the delay in order for it to have any assistance to us here. But it could be two days, two weeks, two months, two years, two decades.

And so the fact that there is a delay before the child is able to say something about it, should not be an automatic bar to accepting the child's complaint.

The next part is conflicted, which describes the internal conflict a child might be going through in weighing the pros and cons of disclosure.

So if a child is facing that, a child may think:

"Well, if I don't tell, I know what will happen. The abuse will continue, the promises, the gifts, the rewards, the threats will continue. But I know what that is and I have dealt with it, and so I know what that is."

"If I do tell, I don't know what will happen. Maybe some of the bad things I thought of will happen. Maybe some of the bad things the offender told me will happen, and I don't know how that is. I don't know how to quantify that. I don't know what to expect by telling."

And so that internal process just adds to the delay.

Conflicted also describes the fact that children often will make statements -- if they are in the process of disclosing, they might make statements that could appear to be in conflict with each other.

A child might say to one person in one circumstance a particular aspect of the abuse in terms that are appropriate for that discussion, but at another time might describe more fully to another person, might describe a different aspect of the abuse to that person.

And those two statements or two or three or five statements could all appear to be in conflict with each other, when it should be considered that they could all be a part of the larger description of ongoing abuse.

And then the last part of the category is unconvincing, which describes that, when a child finally does make a disclosure of sexual abuse, it often is done at a time or in a manner that makes the child seem unbelievable. So even a delay can make the child seem unbelievable.

MR. SCHNACK: Your Honor, can we approach?

THE COURT: Sure.

(Sidebar discussion)

BY MR. SIMONS:

Q. I think perhaps another question would be appropriate at this point. Have you had experience with investigation of sexual abuse of children who are abused in the age group of 9 and 10 and 11?

A. Yes. That is a common age group for these types of crimes.

Q. And with regard to those children in that age group of abuse, are there, in your experience and your learning and training and education, issues with regard to the completeness of their recollections in terms of quantifying the amount of times that they may have been abused?

A. Yes.

Q. And can you describe that, please?

A. Certainly. In fact, the particular forensic technique I use for interviewing children does not call for asking children how many times something happened for that simple reason.

Children have a difficult time -- people have a difficult time assigning a particular number to the times of occurrences.

So particularly if something happened repeatedly, might leave a child with a sense that:

"Well, it happened every Tuesday."

"It happened every time I went to X."

"It happened every time I went to the park."

So to that child, it might seem like it happened a hundred times. Fifty times. Five hundred times.

The child might not necessarily be understanding the need for, certainly, criminal investigators getting accurate information about the number of times.

It may, instead, assign that to the child, a seemingly large general number: "Well, about a hundred times." Or "About 500 times."

And in my experience, children have told me that it happened a lot. So it seemed like it was a hundred times.

Q. When the disclosure comes, even if it comes when the child who was abused at a younger age makes disclosures as an adult or a late teen, does this element that we are discussing of delayed disclosure, conflicting and unconvincing disclosure, still apply?

A. Very much so. I mean, I have interviewed many children and then adults, who reported abuse as children, who I noticed, and certainly from what the literature describes, the fact that children, or adults describing the abuse as children, often will tell about their feelings from that time.

And their sense, at that time was:

"It happened a lot."

"It happened every Tuesday."

"It happened every time I went to this place."

And, to them, that's a hundred times or that's 500 times.

Q. What is the next category?

A. Retraction.

Q. And how does that play into the overall investigation in interviewing the victims of childhood sexual abuse?

A. Well, retraction is taking it back in whole or in part. And the particular value of this discussion point is to discourage an adult community looking at a reported childhood sexual abuse from washing one's hands of it after the child takes it back.

What it really is is a reminder to look at the whole circumstance, to look at the fact that there could be reasons for a child now taking it back or minimizing, which is far more common, such as pressure from outside sources, pressure from inside sources.

Or a child or adult not reporting, sensing the great attention and focus on her disclosure might want to minimize that intensity.

Might want to say:

"Well, this is getting a little uncomfortable talking about this all these times, so I want to go back to how things were before."

And to many kids, young people, an easy way to go back to how things were before is to say:

"Well, it wasn't really as bad as I first said."

Or, "It didn't really happen as many times as I said."

Or, "It didn't really happen. I just was really angry."

And, again, the message of Dr. Summit's work, and certainly what's seen in my experience, is to look for possible reasons why a child might be taking it back or minimizing, rather than just saying:

"Okay, it didn't happen. On to the next case."

Q. Are all five of these categories present in every case?

A. No. And, again, of course because they are not symptoms or indicators. I have investigated many, many cases, for example, that have no retraction. But the Child Sexual Abuse Accommodation Syndrome is not the kind of information that one uses as a checklist.

So we don't go into cases looking for these things. Rather, once you are in a reported case of child sexual abuse, this information helps you to understand some of those things.

Q. Are the factors all codependent in any way?

A. No. The only statement that Dr. Summit made about that, for example, is that the first two categories, secrecy and helplessness, are essentially pre-conditions to abuse. Meaning that children, by their nature, their young, immature nature, are susceptible to the concepts of secrecy and helplessness.

The three following categories tend to fall in a basic pattern of the child being trapped and accommodating and so forth.

Q. In your professional experience, is the Child Sexual Abuse Accommodation Syndrome now used in the investigative techniques and interviewing techniques of law enforcement agencies throughout the state?

A. Oh, the information is very much so, and it is certainly a part of the training I provide on interviewing and investigation.

MR. SIMONS: Thank you.

CROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. SCHNACK:

Q. Good morning, Mr. Lewis.

A. Good morning, sir.

Q. If I heard your testimony right, you said that the CSAAS is not a checklist that should be used by investigators; is that correct?

A. That's right.

Q. And you also said it's not a diagnostic tool that should be used; is that correct?

A. Correct.

Q. And did I hear you right saying that there is still a debate within the academic community about it's validity?

A. Well, there is a debate. But may I comment?

Q. There is a debate about it. You will agree with that?

A. Yes. And I asked if I may comment.

Q. We'll get to that. But there is a debate within the academic community about its validity. Is that correct? Is that what you are saying?

A. Yes. May I comment?

Q. Sure.

A. The debate in the literature has certainly subsided over the past decade or so, but the original reaction in the professional literature was that it is not empirically-based. It was not conducted in a scientific method, meaning there was no control group, for example.

Of course, it would be impossible to have a control group because you would have to have children that you saw being molested and then gauge their reaction, which we could not do but ...

Q. So does that mean it has not been peer reviewed scientifically?

A. No. It has been peer reviewed for qualification in academic journals.

Q. But there is still a debate within academia?

A. Well, as I said --

Q. Is there or is there not, sir?

You just said it was before.

A. Well, I'll say it is, again, but I would like to clarify that.

Q. Excuse me?

A. I said: I will say, yes, it is, but I would like to clarify that.

Q. But it is used in law enforcement agencies. Correct?

A. It is used by law enforcement investigators who are aware of the information, yes.

Q. And you are just testifying, generally, about CSAAS here today? You don't have any specifics as to the case we are here about today; is that correct?

A. My testimony is about Child Sexual Abuse Accommodation Syndrome as it applies generally to children as a class of people.

Q. Through your law enforcement experience. Correct? Is that correct?

A. Law enforcement and consulting experience, yes.

Q. And you have been a consultant for what, a couple years?

A. Three years.

Q. Have you ever advised churches on what they should do when they receive reports of child sex abuse?

A. No.

Q. You have a curriculum vitae. Correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And the word "religion" or "churches" doesn't show up on that at all, does it?

A. Correct.

Q. Now, would you agree with me that child sex abuse investigation techniques has evolved over time?

A. Yes.

Q. So what might have been applied in the early '90s would be different today?

A. I'm sorry. Are you relating that to the syndrome information?

Q. No. To the evolution of investigation of child sex abuse.

A. Yes.

Q. You just said that the investigation techniques have evolved over time?

A. Yes, they have.

Q. And so, from the '90s up to the present, the techniques have changed. Correct?

A. Yes.

MR. SCHNACK: Nothing further, Your Honor. Thank you.

THE COURT: Okay. Anything further, Mr. Simons?

REDIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. SIMONS:

Q. You wanted to clarify your answer with regard to the debate?

A. Yes. Thank you. As I mentioned briefly, the debate has been about its use as a scientific tool. And as Dr. Summit had stated repeatedly, and I tried to make clear, the Child Sexual Abuse Accommodation information is not a scientific tool. It is not an instrument to be applied to a particular case, rather it is descriptive of the unexpected counter-intuitive conditions that tend to present themselves in these types of case.

Q. And in your experience investigating hundreds of these cases, has this doctrine or this syndrome, if you will, shown itself, in your experience, to be applicable to many of those cases?

A. Very much so. Yes.

MR. SIMONS: No further questions.

MR. SCHNACK: Just one question, your Honor.

CROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. SCHNACK:

Q. You just testified that this is not a scientific tool that is supposed to be applied to a particular case; is that correct?

A. Correct.

Q. Thank you.

THE COURT: Mr. Lewis, thank you for your time. You are now excused.

NEAL CONTI

WAS DULY SWORN TO TELL THE TRUTH BY THE CLERK

DIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. SIMONS:

Q. And, Mr. Conti, where do you live at present?

A. In Fremont, California.
Q. And you are the father of Candace?
A. Yes, I am.
Q. And can you describe your relationship with Candace at present?
A. At present?
Q. Yes.
A. We don't talk too much right now.
Q. How long has your relationship with her been strained?
A. It has been on and off. It started when she was around 12. She was having teenage, growing up issues.
Q. Candace was born of your marriage with Kathy?
A. Correct.
Q. When did you and Kathy first meet?
A. In 1984.
Q. When were you married?
A. In 1985.
Q. How long did that marriage last?
A. About 11 years.
Q. Are there any other children of that marriage besides Candace?
A. No.
Q. When Candace was a little girl, can you describe what your relationship was with her at that time?

A. It was wonderful. She was a spunky little girl. We had fun. We would play and do things. She was just a very happy child.

Q. And as Candace got older, did problems begin to develop inside your family?

A. In the family? Yes. After Candace was born, my wife started having memories, things she felt -- she was depressed. It was hard for her. As Candace was growing, she started having memories of things she felt had happened to her in her childhood.

Q. And how did that affect her ability to function within the marriage?

A. It made things rather stressful. I had to take on a lot of responsibilities of taking care of the family, cooking and shopping, that kind of thing.

I had to spend a lot more time with Candace because her mom was basically in bed. She had a hard time sleeping. She had a hard time functioning.

Q. Did you have to spend a lot more time just doing the activities of daily living that the family required?

A. Yes.

Q. Were things like the shopping and the laundry more and more left to you?

A. I had to pick up where Kathy could not.

Q. And in the last year or so in the marriage, did that become a much more serious problem?

A. Yes.

Q. To what level of function was she reduced during that time period?

A. Well, she had her good days and her bad days. It was just some days you knew to expect you had to get off work early and go home and take care of the family.

Q. Were there any other persons living in the household in that last year or so of your marriage?

A. Well, just right before our break up, she had invited her niece to come stay with us during the summer. My son from a previous marriage was there for the summer as well. So we had three -- Candace and two teenagers with us at the time.

Q. Was your son from the prior marriage -- and that's Rick?

A. Yes.

Q. Was he regularly in your custody during the last few years of the marriage?

A. I had shared custody. He would come visit every two weeks, alternating holidays, alternating two weeks during the summer, things like that. So he was there fairly often.

Q. Was most of his time spent with his mother?

A. Yes.

Q. And would it be fair to say probably about 70/80 percent of Rick's time was spent with your first wife?

A. It was more along 60/40 percent, but, yes, yes, it would.

Q. Now, did you become active in the Jehovah's Witnesses during the time of your marriage to Kathy?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. And do you remain active in that?

A. I do.

Q. Are you in the North Fremont Congregation?

A. No. I'm in the Niles Congregation. We share the same Kingdom Hall. Same building, but different congregations.

Q. Are you holding any title at present?

A. A ministerial servant.

Q. Is it your hope and aspiration to become an elder?

A. Someday, yes.

Q. You are now remarried?

A. Yes.

Q. And in between your marriage to Kathy and your marriage at present, was there another spouse?

A. Yes, there was.

Q. And who was that?

A. That was Carolyn.

Q. How long did that marriage last?

A. Four years.

Q. Did she have children from a prior marriage as well?

A. She did. She had two daughters.

Q. And was there a time that she and Candace got along very well?

A. In the very beginning, yes.

Q. How long did that last?

A. For six months.

Q. And after that did Candace not get along well with Carolyn?

A. No.

Q. Was Candace active in the Jehovah's Witnesses as a girl?

A. As a child, yes. I mean, she was not dedicated and baptized, but she would come with me to the meetings and participate in our activities, yes.

Q. What kinds of activities would she go to?

A. More, I mean, we would go throughout the ministry and talk to people, educate people about the Bible. And so she would participate with me in that activity. She would go to meetings with me, conventions, assemblies and things like that.

Q. Did she go to field service?

A. Yes. Field service is our ministry.

Q. And did she go to meetings at Kingdom Hall?

A. Yes.

Q. And how long would those meetings last?

A. Well, there is three days base -- two days at the Kingdom Hall. It was a two-hour meeting on Tuesday night and a two-hour meeting on Sunday.

Q. And so when Candace was eight, nine years old, would she be at the Kingdom Hall for two or four hours or sometimes six hours in a week?

A. Well, it would be a maximum of four hours in a week, yes.

Q. Is it your recollection that she went to events at the Kingdom Hall on occasions when you, because of some of the family issues that were involved, were unable to go with her?

A. No. She would always be with me.

Q. Always?

A. Always.

Q. And are their occasions when she would be in field service where you, because of the other events going on in the family, were unable to participate?

A. No. She would always go with me.

Q. Is it your best recollection that Candace never went to any Jehovah's Witness event without you? Is that true?

A. That is true. She did not go without me.

Q. Did you know Jonathan Kendrick?

A. I did.

Q. How did you meet him?

A. He came into the congregation later on, a few years after I came in.

Q. And what was your relationship with Mr. Kendrick?

A. He was an acquaintance. We attended the same meetings at the same times.

Q. Did you do the field service with Mr. Kendrick?

A. Occasionally, yes.

Q. And Bible study with Mr. Kendrick in homes?

A. I don't recall that.

Q. Did you and he share some interests, mechanical interests, for example?

A. Yeah, mechanical. He was a welder and I tinkered with welding, yeah.

Q. And were there times when he came to your home?

A. A few times. But, again, we were not best buddies or anything like that, no.

Q. You had, as we understand it, a paint shop in your home?

A. Well, in my garage fixed up for working on cars, yes.

Q. And there were occasions when other members of the congregation would come to your garage to tinker or to work on things?

A. There was one time, one car we worked on. I was getting out of that business. So there was one time we worked on one car for a friend.

Q. Was that Sister Crawford's vehicle?

A. Yes, it was.

Q. And during that time, were there elders and other members of the congregation in your garage and in your home to work on the car?

A. There was other members of the congregation, yes.

Q. Mr. Kendrick was one?

A. He was not one of the primary people working on it. He just came over to, kind of, see what was going on.

Q. Was Mr. Kendrick a ministerial servant?

A. There was a time he was, yes.
Q. And did you become aware at some point that he was no longer a ministerial servant?
A. Yes.
Q. How did you become aware of that?
A. It was announced on a Tuesday night meeting.
Q. Is it accurate to say, Mr. Conti, that you became aware that Mr. Kendrick was no longer a ministerial servant because you happened to notice that he wasn't doing the duties anymore of that position?
A. After the announcement, yes.
Q. At your deposition we talked about this, and you told me that you learned of it because of his no longer being a ministerial servant because you saw that he wasn't doing the duties anymore?
A. Correct.
Q. You didn't mention the announcement at that time. Were you there for the announcement?
A. I don't remember it specifically.
Q. Did you know why he was no longer a --
A. No. That is not stated.
Q. Did it affect your relationship with him?
A. Again, we didn't have much of a relationship. Again, he was an acquaintance. Occasionally, we would talk and engage in the ministry, but it wasn't -- he had his life and I had my life. It wasn't that close.

Q. Is it accurate to say that Candace helped become a caretaker for her mother?

A. Well, unfortunately, at times, yes.

Q. Would it be fair to say that she was asked to shoulder much too much of a load for an eight or nine year old?

A. She wasn't asked, per se, to do it. But she was there, and she loved her mom, and she wanted to help her mom whatever way she could.

She was a very loving, caring child at the time. She wanted her mom to feel better. It was very obvious to her that mom was not feeling well. She was depressed. And this affected Candace as well as myself.

Q. What were the circumstances of the ending of your marriage to Kathleen?

A. Kathy had come home from the hospital after a suicide attempt, and the three children were still there with me. I had taken time off from work, and I was taking care of them.

Within a few weeks after she came home, it was apparent she was very angry. She was even in more pain than she was previously.

That anger -- it was, kind of, directed at all of us. And so I just felt it was better that I remove the children, as well as myself, from that house at that time, hoping it would give her time to continue her therapy and get herself back together again.

Q. So you moved out with the children?

A. Yes.

Q. And you moved to your mother's?

A. Right.

Q. And your mother then moved to another place, but you remained in your mother's residence for some time?

A. Right.

Q. When did you first learn from Candace that she had been abused by Mr. Kendrick?

A. She first brought it to my attention, I believe it was 2005. She came to visit and she brought it up at that time.

Q. And since then have you had discussions with her about the subject?

A. We have had a few, yes.

Q. And when was the last time?

A. It had to be somewhere around 2008 or 2009, maybe where she said she was pursuing it with the D.A.'s office. She was going to try to press charges against Jonathan for doing this.

Q. Did you offer to help?

A. I tried to be helpful for her and tried to, you know, glean more information from her, but she really wasn't giving me any details. She didn't tell me what had happened, and I didn't want to push her real hard for her own dignity.

But she told me she talked to the D.A. and they were going to be calling me and asking me questions, but I never received a call from anybody in the office.

Q. As you sit here today, do you know any details about the abuse?

A. No.

MR. SIMONS: Nothing further.

CROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. McCABE:

Q. Mr. Conti, where are you employed?

A. Currently at Texas Instruments in Santa Clara.

Q. How long have you been employed there?

A. I started at National Semiconductor almost 30 years ago, and Texas Instruments purchased National Semiconductor.

Q. So you have basically have been at the same place for 30 years?

A. Yes.

Q. What do you do there?

A. I'm a certified electronic technician. I work in an engineering lab. The company makes semiconductors. I build prototypes. I build test apparatus to physically test at the facility. More recently, I build evaluation boards and test those for customers as well.

Q. So you put devices together to test semiconductors?

A. Put widgets together, yes.

Q. When you married Kathleen Conti, did you have any idea about her childhood issues that surfaced?

A. No.

Q. When you married Kathleen -- and you lived together for 11 years; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Mr. Simons brought out that you separated around 1996?

A. Yes.

Q. And that was following an attempted suicide?

A. Yes.

Q. Was she hospitalized following that attempt?

A. Yes.

Q. For how long?

A. A week or so.
Q. And you took care of the children during that time?
A. Yes.
Q. And you took time off work to do that?
A. Right.
Q. What changed about Kathleen when she came home?
A. She was very angry. Her attempt, suicide attempt was not successful. She was miserable about that.
Q. How did she exhibit her anger?
A. A lot of yelling and screaming and nobody could do anything right and everybody was getting on her nerves, and every little tiff between the kids blew up into a big, bad thing. Just very painful for everybody.
Q. So is it fair to say it wasn't a very conducive environment to raise children?
A. Not at all.
Q. And is that why you went to your mother's house?
A. Yes.
Q. And about that time, did you seek any counseling for yourself or for Candace?
A. We had already started some counseling.

Kathy had been in and out of counseling for years. And at that time Candace started going to counseling as well because we were already seeing this therapist before this suicide attempt.

Q. And who was the therapist that Candace saw?

A. Her name was Laura Fraser.

Q. And did you take her to some of those therapy sessions with Laura Fraser?

A. Yes. Right after the suicide attempt, I took all three kids, and we had an emergency meeting with her. I figured she was probably the best person qualified to help all of the children and myself deal with it.

Q. And how did you find her?

A. As -- out of the phone book or?

Q. How did you locate her?

A. She was in our health plan organization. I believe it was through Palo Alto Medical Plan.

Q. And your family had been getting some services with Palo Alto Medical prior to her suicide attempt?

A. Yes.

Q. And just to be clear, the memories and the things that Kathy was dredging up and bringing up to light after the birth of Candace and continuing through her suicide attempt had to do with some types of childhood sexual abuse that she experienced in her beginning years?

A. It wasn't -- she didn't say it was sexual, per se, in the beginning. It was just memories of dark places, black faces, you know, memories that were not pleasant, obviously. And that led to her conclusion that there was some sexual abuse somewhere along the line.

Q. Was your wife ever diagnosed with any particular disorder?

MR. SIMONS: Objection; outside scope of this witness.

THE COURT: Sustained.

BY MR. McCABE:

Q. Anyway, it was a difficult marriage; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And Candace, being a loving and caring child, loved her mother; is that correct?

A. She did very much.

Q. And she loved you too?

A. She did.

Q. I would like to the show you what has been marked as Plaintiff's Exhibit 2 and ask you if you recognize this.

We can come back to that.

Do you have any pictures from the time that Candace was 8, 9, 10, 11 years old?

A. No. When we left the house, we didn't take family pictures with us, and since then they have been misplaced. When I went back to the house, they were gone.

Q. Do you know what happened to them?

A. I really do not know.

Q. Well, let's talk about your activity with the North Fremont Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses. When did that begin?

A. I started attending about 1986.

Q. And you weren't raised by Jehovah's Witnesses?

A. No.

Q. And we saw your mother, talked to her yesterday a little bit. She was a Catholic and then raised and educated you as a Catholic; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Is that -- your becoming one of Jehovah's witnesses a source of any friction between the two of you?

A. It did in the beginning, yes.

Q. And how is it now?
A. I think she accepts it.
Q. Where did you go to high school?
A. Mission San Jose in Fremont.
Q. Any education after high school?
A. I had to -- to be a certified electronics technician, I took a year or so of training.
Q. And was your job at National Semiconductor your first job?
A. After that training, yes.
Q. And you stayed with the company ever since?
A. Yes.
Q. When you started associating with Jehovah's Witnesses, do you recall what year it was?
A. What year it was?
Q. Yes.
A. 1986.
Q. And you continued your association from that time forward?
A. Yes.
Q. Were you a regular meeting attender of congregation meetings two days a week at the Kingdom Hall --
A. Yes.
Q. -- during 1994, '95, '96?

A. As much as I could, yes.

Q. Were there occasions when you had to miss because of your wife's illness?

A. Yes.

Q. On those occasions, did you ever send Candace to the Kingdom Hall by herself?

A. No.

Q. To your knowledge, was Candace ever at the Kingdom Hall of the Jehovah's Witnesses in North Fremont without you being present?

A. No.

Q. In the meetings of Jehovah's Witnesses -- and I would like to show you what has been marked as a previous exhibit, Number 132.

Let's go to the first picture first. Do you recognize this?

A. Uh-huh.

Q. What is it?

A. That's the Kingdom Hall, yes.

Q. Has it changed much since 1993?

A. Some remodeling to it. But it's basically the same hall.

Q. Okay. So what are we looking at here with this picture?

A. This is from the street, looking down the driveway and the hall behind the street.

Q. Okay. And let's go to the next picture. What are we looking at here?

A. This is basically the front door, which is at the back end of the Kingdom Hall.

Q. And do you recognize this photograph?

A. Yes. It is inside the Kingdom Hall.

Q. Okay. Now, I want to point out here that it looks to me like there is seats still full here. Is that true?

A. Yes.

Q. Is there anything that would be in this area where people face -- what are the people facing?

A. They are facing a podium, which is on the left side, up on a stage.

Q. How high is the stage?

A. It is about three feet.

Q. And that would be where the conductor of the meeting stands?

A. Correct.

Q. And it looks like there's two aisles; one here and one over there?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you know how many seats are on each side of those aisles up against the walls?

A. They are four wide on the side.
Q. How about the center?
A. Seven.
Q. Do you know how many seats in total there are in the hall?
A. About 200, 210, something like that.
Q. When you were attending meetings at the North Fremont Jehovah's Witnesses in the '90s, how many people were attending those meetings?
A. Roughly a hundred, hundred and ten, something like that.
Q. Would it be a little more on Sunday than the midweek meeting?
A. Sometimes Sundays it would be more.
Q. Were you usually present --
A. Yes.
Q. -- at those meetings?
A. Yes.
Q. Were there occasions that you missed?
A. Yes.
Q. And I notice this is one big auditorium. Are there any separate classrooms for children in this Kingdom Hall?
A. Not for children, no. There are separate rooms, which is a library, a secondary school. But it is not for children. There's no -- we don't separate the children from the rest of the congregation.

Q. Okay. In all the time that you were attending meetings at the Kingdom Hall, did you ever see Candace sit on the lap of Jonathan Kendrick?

A. No, I did not.

Q. Did you ever see Candace give a big bear hug to Jonathan Kendrick?

A. No, I did not.

Q. Did you ever allow Candace to be taken from the Kingdom Hall property by Jonathan Kendrick -- taken away from a meeting before or after?

A. No, I did not.

Q. I want to direct --

MR. McCABE: May we approach, Your Honor?

(Sidebar discussion)

BY MR. McCABE:

Q. Can you tell me where in Fremont you lived when you were first married?

MR. SIMONS: Can we --

THE COURT: As an accommodation to all of us, the jury and whatnot, we could limit at this juncture questions of this witness, who through the effective scope of what Mr. Simons asked him, but that would then necessitate bringing him back on the defense side of the case.

Because of the professionalism and the efficiencies here, Mr. McCabe will now start asking this witness questions as though he were presenting the defense side of the case.

MR. McCABE: Thank you, Your Honor.

BY MR. McCABE:

Q. Where did you live in Fremont in the 1980s?

A. In the 1980s? My home on El Cajon Street -- or Avenue.

Q. And are you familiar with the Francis family?

A. Yes.

Q. How far away did they live from your El Cajon residence?

A. A quarter mile. Five or six blocks.

Q. Do you recall what street they lived on?

A. I want to say Capistrano or something like that.

Q. I think that's what she testified to.

Did you ever attend a congregation Bible study at their home?

A. No.

Q. Were you in the 1980s, early 1990s, assigned to a congregation study or do Bible study for a midweek meeting?

A. Yes.
Q. Do you recall whose home that was at?
A. That was at the Mats' home.
Q. Okay. Was Jonathan Kendrick assigned also to the Mats' home?
A. I don't believe so.
Q. And in that group study, how big was it? How many people?
A. Fifteen, twenty people, maybe.
Q. And I understand in your religion you don't have that meeting anymore?
A. Right. Not a Thursday night meeting, no.
Q. And at the Mats' home which you attended, were there men, women and children attending?
A. Absolutely. Families, yes.
Q. Did you take Candace there?
A. Yes.
Q. Did you ever drop her off there by herself?
A. No.
Q. Did she ever go to that meeting without you being present?
A. No.
Q. I want to bring up an incident that Mrs. Francis talked about with the rollerblades. Did your daughter, Candace, enjoy rollerblading?

A. Yes, she did very much.
Q. Did you buy her a pair of rollerblades?
A. Yes.
Q. Was there an occasion where you went to a parts store with Candace to get parts for her?
A. Yes.
Q. Can you tell me about that?
A. She needed new wheels for her skates. They were slowing her down. So we went to a parts store. It was a second hand type store. They sold new stuff as well. I believe it was Saturday afternoon we went and took care of that.
Q. Did Jonathan Kendrick go with you on that?
A. Yes, he was with us.
Q. And why did he go?
A. He had rollerblades too, and he's the one that mentioned -- we had talked about repairing her skates, and so we all went together.
Q. To your knowledge, did Candace ever go rollerblading alone with Jonathan Kendrick?
A. Not to my knowledge, no.
Q. I want to also take you on the occasion that -- your family enjoyed outings to Sacramento from time to time?
A. We went once.

Q. You went once. What was that occasion?
A. We went on the train up to Old Sacramento.
Q. And what did you do there?
A. We went to the train museum and some other activities they have right there in Old Sacramento.
Q. And who was on the trip at that time?
A. It was Candace. And Jonathan actually went with us that time.
Q. And what time did you leave?
A. I think the trains leave about every two or three hours from the Fremont station. So it was probably 8:00, 9:00 in the morning, something like that.
Q. How long did you spend in Sacramento once you arrived there?
A. Maybe three hours or so.
Q. And did you return on the Amtrak train also?
A. Yes, we did.
Q. What time did you get back?
A. It was probably 7:00 or 8:00 that night.
Q. And do you recall what time of year it was?
A. It was still light, so it had to be summertime. Spring, summertime, something like that.
Q. And on that trip, did you and Jonathan Kendrick engage in the drinking of alcoholic beverages?
A. We moved into the dining car on the way back and we had a little snack to eat and possibly had a beer at the time.

Q. Possibly? Or did you?

A. No, we did.

Q. And how many beers did you have?

A. Well, this was just an outing with my daughter, and Jonathan came along with us. So it wasn't -- it wasn't a party.

Q. Well, did you have more than one beer?

A. No.

Q. Did you get drunk?

A. No.

Q. Did you ever, on that trip, leave Candace by herself with Jonathan Kendrick?

A. No.

Q. Did you fall asleep on the train on the way back?

A. No.

Q. Did you ever see Jonathan Kendrick do anything inappropriate to Candace on that trip?

A. No.

Q. Did you ever take Candace to a movie Gone With The Wind?

A. Yes.

Q. Where was that?

A. It was over in Palo Alto, across the bay.

Q. Do you recall specifically doing that?

A. Uh-huh.

Q. Do you recall how old Candace was at the time?

A. She was 8 or 9.

Q. Just a one time? Anybody else go with you?

A. Jonathan went with us at that time as well.

Q. Seems like Jonathan is going with you and Candace quite a bit. Were you really better friends than you testified to?

MR. SIMONS: Objection. Leading.

THE COURT: Overruled.

THE WITNESS: We just went and did things together. Towards the end, I needed to get out of the house and take my daughter and do things, and Jonathan was there. He wanted to go do it.

BY MR. McCABE:

Q. Okay. Let's go back to 1994, '95, '96.

A. Okay.

Q. How many times had you been a visitor to the Kendrick home during that time period, if you could estimate?

A. Less than a handful. I had no reason to go over to his house. We weren't that close. He had a dog that slobbered, and hair and everything. It was just -- if you went to Jon's house, you were accosted by this messy dog. So it wasn't something I wanted to do.

Q. Did Jonathan live during that time period with anybody else besides this messy dog?

A. He was married at the time.

Q. What was his wife's name?

A. His wife's name was Evelyn.

Q. Did anybody else live in the household?

A. She had a daughter named Andrea.

Q. Can you recall, were they married the whole time that you knew them?

A. I think they came to the Hall, and they got married shortly after that.

Q. So that would have been in the late 1980s?

A. Yes.

Q. From that time forward, were they married, as far as you knew?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you know, did they ever separate or divorce?

A. Later on they did. I don't remember the exact time. It had to be close to the time that Kathy and I separated as well.

Q. Somewhere around 1996?

A. '95, '96, something like that.

Q. How often was Jonathan Kendrick a visitor in your home during the same time period, 1994, '95, '96?

A. Again, very infrequent. Maybe just a handful of times. He came over with the car one time. Sometimes we exchanged tools on the projects we were working on individually, but not very frequent at all.

Q. Let's talk about this time frame in which you talked about the car. Whose car was it that was being worked on?

A. It was just an elderly sister in the hall who had a Volkswagen that needed some repairs.

Q. And who was doing the repair work?

A. There was a couple brothers. One that was very -- he worked at a German car dealership, so he was very familiar with how to repair Volkswagens at the time.

Q. And was he doing mechanic work?

A. Yes.

Q. And was there also some painting and bodywork done?

A. At the end we decided let's throw a paint job on it real quick.

Q. And was your garage set up to paint?

A. Yes.

Q. And, in fact, had you been doing some vehicle painting in your garage before --

A. Yes.

Q. You have to let me finish the question before you answer, if you would, please.

Would you do that?

A. Sure.

Q. What did you use the garage for prior to this occasion of fixing Sister Crawford's car?

A. Right. Well, the reason, I did mechanical work and then I graduated into bodywork and painted. And then about '87, '88, I, kind of, retired. But I stopped doing that because Candace was here now and I wanted to spend more time with the family. So I, kind of, retired from that activity.

The garage was still there. I still had my tools. So when this opportunity to work on Sister Crawford's car came along, I said yeah.

Q. So this wasn't a garage where people from the North Fremont Congregation came over and over again to work on vehicles?

A. No.

Q. This was a one-time event?

A. Right.

Q. How many people from the congregation participated in working on this vehicle?

A. There might have been five or six over the whole course of the whole week and a half, whatever it took us to do it. And I don't recall the names of the specific people.

Q. Was one of them Jonathan Kendrick?

A. Yes.

Q. Did there occur a problem between your daughter, Candace Conti, and Jonathan Kendrick during this time period?

A. Well, there was one occasion I think the garage door was open and she was out playing in the yard. And I didn't see it specifically, but she came to me and said Jonathan had pulled her hand and her arm. And she had a scratch on her arm. She showed me that.

Q. And you saw that?

A. I saw that.

Q. And did you say anything to Jonathan Kendrick?

A. I told him, you know, don't grab a hold of her. Don't hold on to her like that. That's not right.

Q. And did he respond to that?

A. He said, "Okay."

Q. Other than that, did you ever notice that Jonathan Kendrick grabbed your daughter again?

A. No.

Q. I want to talk to you about another occasion. Did you have Jonathan Kendrick and his wife to your home ever for a social event, like a dinner?

A. No.

Q. Was he ever in your home and have a confrontation or a problem with your wife, Kathy?

A. There was one time. And I'm not sure why he had come over. It might have been just to talk when his family was falling apart. I'm not sure.

Q. Do you have a sense of what year it was?

A. It had to be in the same time frame, late '95, early '96, maybe.

Q. What happened? What did Mr. Kendrick do to your wife?

A. She was, kind of, sitting on the couch -- or standing by the couch, and he just, sort of, kind of, fell into her and they both landed on the couch.

Q. Did he do anything else?

A. He was just -- it was almost like he was roughhousing with her. So I got up and walked him outside and said, "You can't do that. That's not right."

Q. And did he leave at that point?

A. Yes.

Q. How many times all together would you say, during the year -- typical year, 1995, '96 or '97 -- did Jonathan Kendrick come to your house for any reason?

A. A few times, less than a handful of times. We weren't that close. We did things. The meeting point was at the Hall. If we decided we wanted to go on the train we decided at the Hall. It wasn't, I would go to his and we did it that way.

Q. When you took Candace to Laura Fraser, did you tell her that Candace had taken on an adult role and had a heavy burden placed on her?

A. Yeah. That was a big concern.

Q. And what kind of adult role did Candace take on during this time period?

A. Just, I mean, when she was home with her mom, you know, just whatever she could for her. Just that caring, nurturing person in your life who would be your mother, Candace started exhibiting those types of activities, trying to the console her mother, trying to be there for her. But she was a child. She didn't understand the issues that Kathy was going through at the time.

Q. Did you try to be there for your daughter?

A. Absolutely.

Q. Did you think you were successful?

A. I hope I was.

Q. During this time period that you were having turmoil in your marriage leading up to the suicide attempt of your ex-wife, Kathleen, did you go to anyone for help, counsel, or comfort?

A. I would go to some of the elders in the congregation.

Q. Did you go to Jonathan Kendrick?

A. No.

Q. During this time period, did you rely on Jonathan Kendrick to help you take care of some of your responsibilities in the family?

A. No.

Q. Did you have to take time off from work frequently to take care of those responsibilities?

A. Yes.

Q. Who was it that you went to? Who was your primary go-to person during that time period when you needed help?

A. I had the opportunity to talk to one brother, in particular, Larry Lamerdin.

Q. Mr. Lamerdin?

A. Mr. Lamerdin.

Q. Who was he?

A. He was one of the elders in the North Fremont

Congregation.

Q. And did you talk to him about the problems that Kathy was experiencing?

A. Yes.

Q. Was he able to help you at all?

A. Well, he would bring scriptural information. He would help me to be more understanding and to be able to listen to her.

Because I'm a techie kind of guy. I'm a, kind of, fix-it kind of guy. So I had to back off from that trying to fix everything, and just try to listen and be more understanding of what she was going through.

Q. Because you couldn't fix Kathy's problems?

A. No.

Q. Did Mr. Lamerdin ever give you any of the literature published by Jehovah's Witnesses?

A. Yeah. The society publishes many different publications, and one of those is the Awake Magazine. And it focused on world events, but it was also articles on families.

You know, you might have articles on butterflies, so you could talk to your children and show them nature.

Other times it was more serious things. With all that Kathy was going through, it was encouraging to see some articles about child abuse, and so we talked about that as well.

Q. And did he direct you to any specific articles?

A. Yes.

Q. I would like to show you what has been previously marked Plaintiff's 64, Defense Number 37, and ask you if you recognize this document.

A. Yes. This is the October 1993, "How to Protect Your Children."

Q. Do you recall if Mr. Lamerdin directed you to this particular issue of the Awake Magazine?

A. Yes, we did talk about it, yes.

Q. I would like to direct your attention to page 14. It's 13 of the exhibit. The last page of the exhibit in front of you.

Do you recognize that particular page?

A. Yes. Because that was our main focus at the time was how to help Kathy.

Q. And what is the title of that page?

A. It is "Consoling Adult Survivors of Childhood Trauma."

Q. And what is the direction that is given to you?

A. It talks about "Listen, Listen, Listen" is the first subheading there.

It talks about if a child had a skinned knee, first impulse is to run to their parents. And so we try to keep an open dialogue with our children, if something like that would happen, let's talk about it.

Q. Now we are talking about your wife?

A. Right.

Q. And so --

A. Well, there was the listening part, to listen and be consoling. Again, I couldn't solve the problems, but to try to be comforting to her and talk through.

Q. Was that hard for you to do, being a fix-it guy?

A. At times, yes.

Q. Did you rely upon anyone else at the Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses during this difficult time period -- I'm talking about the year leading up to Kathy's attempted suicide -- to assist you in taking care of Candace?

A. There was some other brothers I talked to, yes.

Q. How about, did you entrust Candace's care to anyone else outside the Kingdom Hall?

A. Well, my mother stepped in when it was necessary.

Q. She is part of the family?
A. She is part of the family.
Q. How about any brothers or sisters from the Kingdom Hall?
A. Well, Claudia took her one day to go shopping or something like that.
Q. And that is Claudia Francis?
A. Claudia Francis, yes.
Q. Every time you went to the Kendrick home, was he still married?
A. Yes.
Q. Was he still living with his wife and daughter and a messy dog?
A. Yes.
Q. Did you ever go there after he separated?
A. No.
Q. Do you know if Candace ever went there by herself with your approval?
A. No.
Q. When Candace told you that Jonathan Kendrick had hurt her arm, was she bleeding?
A. It was just a white line from a fingernail scratch, and there might have been just some very little blood.
Q. Skin was broken?

A. Skin was broken.

Q. Was there ever any other time when she told you Jonathan Kendrick hurt her?

A. No. There was no other time she said anything about Jonathan hurting her.

Q. That was in 2005?

A. Right.

Q. Now, did there come a time in 2009 when you received a call from Mr. Lamerdin about your daughter, Candace?

A. Right.

Q. What was that call about?

A. Well, Candace had met with Larry and was talking about what we are talking about today, that Jonathan had touched her inappropriately.

Q. Did you follow up that phone call with a meeting with Mr. Lamerdin?

A. Yes.

Q. Was anyone else present?

A. Mike Clarke.

Q. And what did you discuss, generally?

A. Well, they just asked me if I knew anything about this. They, kind of, went through the time frame that we have been discussing here now. And I had not seen anything or -- that's all I could tell them.

Q. Did they encourage you to do anything?
A. They did encourage me to try to reconnect with Candace and try to be there for her since they knew our relationship had become somewhat strained.
Q. Did you do that?
A. I tried.
Q. Did you contact Candace?
A. I did contact her. I would leave messages. She would call me back once in a while and she would chat a little bit.
Q. So just so we are clear, you never saw anything happen inappropriate to Candace with anybody at the Kingdom Hall; is that correct?
A. No.
Q. You never saw anything inappropriate happen with Jonathan Kendrick and Candace at the Kingdom Hall?
A. No.
Q. Did you see anything inappropriate with Jonathan Kendrick and Candace anywhere?
A. No.
Q. Did you ever allow Candace to go in a vehicle -- I think Jonathan drove a truck, didn't he?
A. No.
Q. Did you ever allow Candace to go in that truck with Jonathan Kendrick?

A. No.

Q. In view of the fact that your wife had these issues regarding memories of some childhood abuse, did that make you a little leery regarding your daughter?

A. Her mom was very sensitive to it. So it was now my responsibility to make sure that didn't happen to Candace.

Q. When you went to the Kingdom Hall with Candace, where would you sit?

A. Up in the middle section, up towards the front. The first three or four rows, it is too hard to look up. So it was usually about the fourth or fifth row we sit back.

Q. Is that your normal pew?

A. Usually. That's kind of where I would hang out, yes.

Q. And would that vary at all?

A. Typically not. Pretty much -- unless someone else had taken our seat, we would have to move around.

Q. When your daughter was age 8, 9 and 10, 11, how did you feel about her?

A. How did I feel about her?

Q. Yes.

A. I loved her. She was my daughter.

Q. Were you affectionate with her?

A. To a point.

Q. Would it surprise you to know that she told Laura Fraser she felt very safe with you?

A. It wouldn't surprise me.

Q. Does it flatter you?

A. It means I did a good job.

Q. Still trying?

A. Still trying.

Q. At the Kingdom Hall, we heard some testimony that before and after the meetings people talk and there is a lot of activity going on.

Is that your recollection of what was going on?

A. Yes.

Q. Do the children run around the halls, everything chaos?

A. Well, we try not to allow that. Parents are instructed to keep their children within view, you know, so that they don't get run over by cars or anything like that. We try very hard to teach our children to be obedient.

Q. And how about you and Candace? Did you try and do that with Candace?

A. Yes.

Q. Were there times when you were at the Kingdom

Hall where she was out of your sight?

A. I would usually try to keep her in the hall where I would be talking to people or whatever, and she would leave with me.

Q. When you were talking with people, did you have her in view, or would she be out of view, not around you?

A. I tried to keep an eye on her.

Q. How about going to the restroom?

A. Well, usually we take her to the restroom.

Q. What do you mean by "take her"?

A. Well, I would walk with her to get here there.

Q. So you would walk and wait outside?

A. Correct.

Q. And that was your custom and practice when she was 8, 9, 10?

A. Yes.

Q. Where did Jonathan Kendrick sit in the Kingdom Hall, if you recall?

A. He sat a few rows back, in the middle toward the back.

Q. Did you ever notice him in particular, at the Kingdom Hall?

A. I would see him from time to time.

Q. Did you ever talk to him?
A. Yes.
Q. Did you ever notice he slept through meetings?
A. He would nod occasionally.
Q. Did you do that too?
A. Once in a great while.
THE COURT: Let's take our morning break until 10:30.
(Break taken)
BY MR. McCABE:
Q. Mr. Conti, I would like to show you the picture that has been admitted as Plaintiff's Number 2.
Do you see that picture?
A. Yes.
Q. Do you recognize that picture?
A. Yes.
Q. Who is it?
A. That's Candace.
Q. Have you seen that picture before?
A. I have seen that picture, yes.
Q. Where?
A. There is one similar to it on my mom's refrigerator.
MR. McCABE: I have nothing further, your Honor.

MR. SCHNACK: No questions, your Honor.

THE COURT: Mr. Simons?

MR. SIMONS: I have some Direct.

REDIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. SIMONS:

Q. Mr. Conti, you told us that, because of the concerns that you had about Candace and the effect her mother and her mother's issues were having on her, that you got Candace into therapy with Laura Fraser even before the separation; is that correct?

A. Yes. We, as a family did, yes.

Q. And the separation was in July of 1996?

A. Correct.

Q. And would it surprise you to know that the first appointment with Laura Fraser was August 12, 1996, about a month later?

A. August 6?

Q. August 12, 1996, a month after the separation.

A. After the separation?

Q. Right. When you moved out.

A. We moved out in July.

Q. Yeah. The first appointment is August. So it was after the separation that Candace began therapy with Laura Fraser, not before.

Does that ring any bells with you?

A. Because we went to see Laura Fraser right after -- right after -- okay. It might be.

Q. And wasn't that Kathy who got Candace to go to Laura Fraser, not you?

A. No. I never said it was me. It was Kathy. But we collectively did it as a family. We found someone within our medical plan.

Q. And didn't you tell us in the recess in response to Mr. McCabe's question that because of your concerns you got Candace into therapy?

A. We, as a family, collectively, did it together.

Q. Let's take a look at your deposition at page 25, lines 2 through 17.

(Whereupon, the video recording was played)

BY MR. SIMONS:

Q. What started the process?

How did she get to --

(Whereupon, the video recording was stopped)

MR. McCABE: Counsel, what lines?

MR. SIMONS: I'm sorry. 25, lines 2 through 7.

(Whereupon, the video recording was played)

BY MR. SIMONS:

Q. What started the process? How did she get to a therapist? She is ten years old. So, I'm assuming she didn't call and make the appointment herself. Someone assisted her.

Do you know how that happened?

A. I believe that was Kathy.

(Whereupon, the video recording was stopped)

MR. McCABE: Excuse me, your Honor. That's not the lines I'm looking at.

THE COURT: Let's again. Are we sure we are on the same lines?

MR. McCABE: Okay.

(Whereupon, the video recording was played)

BY MR. SIMONS:

Q. What started the process? How did she get to a therapist? She is ten years old. So, I'm assuming she didn't call and make the appointment herself, someone assisted her.

Do you know how that happened?

A. I believe it was Kathy.

(Whereupon, the video recording was stopped)

BY MR. SIMONS:

Q. Before you came here to testify today, did you discuss your testimony with the attorneys for the defendants?

A. We had talked about it.

Q. And did you have a meeting in person?

A. Yes.

Q. And you looked at the photographs that we looked at earlier of the Kingdom Hall?

A. No. That's the first time I have seen those pictures.

Q. How long did your meeting last?

A. About an hour.

Q. And did that meeting help you focus on what it was that the attorneys for the defendants wanted you to say here today?

A. We basically talked about the things that have happened, that's all. Just trying to discuss and find out what happened.

Q. Did you ever hear Jonathan Kendrick say about Candace that, "She is my number one," and, "I just love Candace," or other terms of affection?

A. No.

Q. Never said that around you?

A. No.

THE COURT: "Never said that around you."

And "No." So we have that double negative circumstance again.

BY MR. SIMONS:

Q. That's correct.

Your recollection is Jonathan Kendrick never said affectionate things about Candace?

A. In front of me.

Q. Is that correct?

A. Correct.

Q. And you weren't really friends, and you didn't see Mr. Kendrick very often, but it happened that when Candace needed new wheels for her rollerblades that Jonathan Kendrick went with you to the rollerblade store. Correct?

A. Correct.

Q. And you weren't really friends with Mr. Kendrick and you didn't see him very often, but when you went on the Amtrak trip, Jonathan Kendrick went with you and Candace.

And you weren't really friends and you didn't see him very often, but when you went to see Gone With The Wind, Jonathan Kendrick went with you and Candace. Correct?

A. Correct.

Q. And there are other occasions when that happened as well, weren't there?

A. Not that I'm aware of.

Q. You saw him hurt your daughter enough to make her cry and to leave a mark on her?

A. She wasn't crying. She was noticeably upset by it.

Q. She told you he hurt her?

A. Yes.

Q. And you said, "Don't grab my daughter."

And he said -- Kendrick said, "Okay."

A. Yes.

Q. That was pretty much it?

A. Yes.

Q. Same thing when he was roughhousing with Kathy. You said, "You shouldn't do that."

And Mr. Kendrick said, "Okay."

A. Yes.

Q. When you would go to these various events, you said you would almost always meet at the Kingdom Hall. Correct?

MR. McCABE: Objection; vague.

THE COURT: I don't understand the question.

BY MR. SIMONS:

Q. When you went to the different events that you mentioned with Mr. Kendrick, you would meet at the Kingdom Hall?

A. We would talk about it at the Kingdom Hall and make the plans. We didn't leave from the Kingdom Hall and take the train, no. That's not it.

Q. So you went by and picked him up or he came by and picked you and Candace up? Which was it?

A. I believe we just met at the train station.

Q. How about Gone With The Wind? Did you meet over there in Palo Alto?

A. I am not sure. I don't remember who drove.

Q. And I think you told us that when your daughter was 9 and 10 years old at the Kingdom Hall you would take her to the restroom?

A. I would walk with her to the back of Kingdom Hall, yes.

Q. When she was ten years old?

A. Yes.

Q. When you were doing these various events with Candace and Jonathan Kendrick, Gone With The Wind or rollerblade shop or Amtrak to Sacramento, did you have any idea you were exposing your daughter to a known child molester?

A. I had no idea.

Q. Would it have mattered to you if you did know that?

A. No. Because we had already -- as a family and Kathy's prior concerns, what happened in her life, we tried to be very vigilant about that and not allow Candace to be in that situation.

MR. SIMONS: Nothing further.

THE COURT: Anything?

MR. McCABE: Nothing further.

MR. SCHNACK: Nothing.

THE COURT: All right, sir. Thank you very much for your time this morning. You are now excused.

Mr. Simons.

MR. SIMONS: May we dim the lights? And under Evidence Code Section 776 present excerpts of the video deposition of The Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc. through Mr. Shuster.

And, Your Honor, may we inquire, because this is a more protracted presentation, if there is any problem with anyone being able to see the screen and may I move to outside of counsel table so I'm not obstructing the view?

THE COURT: Certainly. And noting the circumstances, Mr. Simons, yes.

And then to members of the jury, is that screen set up such that you all have a legitimate view of what is going to go on?

Everybody okay with the view, the view line?

Your site line? Okay.

(Whereupon, the video recording was played)

VIDEOGRAPHER: Good morning. We are now on the record. My name is Terry Carruthers, your videographer. I represent Atkinson-Baker, Inc. in Glendale, California. I am not financially interested in this action nor am I a relative nor employee of any attorney or any of the parties.

Today is February 15, 2012. The time on the monitor is 10:01 a.m. This deposition is being taken place at 100 Watchtower Drive in Patterson, New York. And this is action Number HG41558324 in the Superior Court of California, entitled Jane Doe versus Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York.

Your deponent is Mr. Allen Shuster. Your court reporter is Nancy Flynn from Atkinson-Baker.

Counsel will now introduce themselves, after which, the court reporter will please swear in or affirm this witness.

MR. SIMONS: Rick Simons for Plaintiff, Jane Doe.

MR. SCHNACK: Bob Schnack for Defendant, Watchtower Bible and Track Society of New York, Incorporated.

MR. McCABE: James McCabe for the North

Congregation of Fremont, California.

MR. McNAMARA: Francis McNamara, associate general counsel for Watchtower New York.

ALLEN SHUSTER

WAS DULY SWORN TO TELL THE TRUTH BY THE COURT REPORTER AND TESTIFIED AS FOLLOWS:

EXAMINATION

BY MR. SIMONS:

Q. Please state your full name.

A. Allen Eugene Shuster.

MR. SIMONS: So I think, with counsel's kind permission, I will go through the deposition notices and just clarify which categories you will be testifying as the representative of the Watchtower New York, Inc.

And that would include for the February 15th, 2012 1:00 p.m. Deposition Notice, the matters related to the August 1st, 1995 body of elder letter, categories 1 and 2 in that Notice.

Am I correct in that, counsel?

MR. SCHNACK: Yes. Topics 1 and 2 in that deposition notice.

MR. SIMONS: And similarly, you will be the designated representative to testify as to the correspondence of December 3, 1993 and the matters of policy related to that, again, from the February 15, 2012 1:30 Deposition Notice today.

Am I correct in that as well?

MR. SCHNACK: Yes.

MR. SIMONS: And then, additionally, certain of the categories designated in the deposition notice for February 16 at 10:30 will be in your purview, which I understand generally to be:

Category 1, Corporate Administrative Structure.

Category 2, managerial staff functions, but not as to the Legal Department?

MR. SCHNACK: Yeah. Topic 2 only is Legal Departments. That would not be Mr. Shuster.

MR. SIMONS: Okay. Very good.

And the Topic 3, Service Department, would include Mr. Shuster's subject matter; is that correct?

MR. SCHNACK: Yes.

BY MR. SIMONS:

Q. Now, Mr. Shuster, do you have official job title at present?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. And what is that?

A. Assistant overseer of the Service Department.

Q. To whom do you report as your supervisor?

A. The overseer of the Service Department.
Q. And who is that at present?
A. His name is Gary Breaux.
Q. And who, in turn, does Mr. Breaux report to?
A. It is called the Branch Committee.
MR. SCHNACK: Are you talking about currently?
MR. SIMONS: Yes.
BY MR. SIMONS:
Q. And what is the Branch Committee?
A. It is made up of twelve elders that represent the United States Branch Territory among Jehovah's Witnesses.
Q. Are there twelve separate territories within the United States, or is it twelve elders who represent the territory of the United States?
A. Twelve elders that represent the territories of the United States.
Q. As assistant overseer, what are your general duties and responsibilities?
A. We have, within the department, several desks. We have a number of desks. I work with the area schools that Jehovah's Witnesses conduct throughout the United States.
We have a program of constructing Kingdom

Halls and assembly halls throughout the branch territory. I oversee that. I also oversee the desk that distributes convention assignments for our district conventions.

Q. How long have you held this position?

A. The position of overseeing certain aspects of this work, for probably 11 years.

Q. And prior to holding the position of assistant overseer, what was your previous assignment?

A. I worked as what is called a "contact" within the Service Department.

Q. And what is a contact?

A. A contact is an elder who consults or is consulted with by a number of different elders within the department.

Q. Have you been an elder since 1979?

A. Yes.

Q. And how long have you been performing services and duties here at the national headquarters?

A. Since '76, 1976.

Q. Have you served as an elder in any congregation?

A. Yes, I have.

Q. And where was that congregation or those congregations located?

A. In New York City.

Q. What was the time frame of your service in that regard as an elder in a congregation?

A. Well, from 1979 until transferring up here to Patterson. So that would have been in one congregation from 1979 until 1995, and then from 1995 until the present here at Patterson.

Q. Is your position a compensated position?

A. No, it is not.

Q. Are you, in your own mind -- I'm not asking for a legal conclusion -- but in your own mind, do you work as an employee of one of the Jehovah's Witnesses entities?

A. No, I do not.

Q. As part of the Service Department, currently, are you within the Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc.?

A. No.

Q. Is the Service Department presently operated through the Christian Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses?

A. Yes.

Q. Has that been true since 2001?

A. That's correct.

Q. Are persons who are serving within the Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc. presently holding authority to implement or impose policies, procedures or decisions upon Christian Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses?

A. I believe so.

Q. And tell me what your understanding is of the relationship between those two entities?

A. I mentioned earlier there is a Branch Committee. I do believe some of those members of the Branch Committee are members of the New York Corporation.

Q. What is the general role of the Branch Committee?

A. They oversee the spiritual activities as well as the administering of the properties at the three complexes here in New York State.

Q. Is the Service Committee one of multiple committees within the Branch Committee?

A. When you say "Service Committee" --

Q. Service Department.

A. Service Department. And your question again?

Q. Is that one of multiple departments or entities within the Branch Committee?

A. It is one of a number of departments that the Branch Committee has oversight of.

Q. And speaking in terms of the composition of the Branch Committee, how large a committee is it?

A. Twelve members.

Q. And how are its members selected?

A. It is -- of course, I'm not privy to the deliberations of the Branch Committee, so I'm not sure I can answer that.

Q. And not asking as to any individual who might have been appointed to the Branch Committee, but generally speaking, procedurally, how are Branch Committee members selected? By what authority or process?

A. Members of the Branch Committee collectively -- I should say, the collective Branch Committee makes recommendations as to who should be added in the case of deaths. And so those recommendations are made to the governing body of Jehovah's Witnesses.

Q. And what is the governing body within the administrative structure? I'm not asking for spiritual or theological information here. I'm really looking administratively. What is the governing body?

A. The governing body is a committee that oversees the worldwide activity of Jehovah's Witnesses.

Q. Does the Branch Committee have any sort of written policies, procedures that it follows?

A. Yes.

Q. Is there some form of either a manual or other documentary compilation that the Branch Committee is guided by in its work?

A. Yes.

Q. What is that called?

A. It is called Branch Organization.

Q. And is that -- is the appropriate term a "manual" or would it be some other term?

A. I think the terminology is "guidelines," Branch Committee guidelines.

Q. And is that series of guidelines applicable to the Service Department of the Christian Congregation?

A. Parts of it are.

Q. What other areas --

Well, let me ask you: Have you ever seen the Branch Committee Guidelines?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you use it, at least from time to time, in your work?

A. From time to time.

Q. What are the general subject matters covered under the Branch Committee Guidelines?

A. Matters having to do with branch facilities, branch personnel, and the managing of the spiritual activities within a specific branch or branch territory. Just general operation guidelines.

Q. Are the Branch Committee Guidelines the same for every branch throughout the world, or are there separate Branch Committee Guidelines for different geographical areas?

A. Same throughout the world.

Q. Are the contents of the Branch Committee Guidelines approved by the governing body?

A. Yes.

Q. And would those Branch Committee Guidelines apply to Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc.?

A. I guess my question would be --

Can you say that one more time? I want to make sure I have the question correct.

Q. Do the Branch Committee Guidelines apply to the entities within the Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc.?

A. I would think so.

Q. Do they also apply to the Christian Congregation?

A. Yes.

Q. I know there are other entities such as Watchtower of Pennsylvania. Would the Branch Committee Guidelines apply to these other entities as well?

A. Yes.

Q. Other than the Service Department, what are the other departments that have existed both --

Let me break this down, actually, I'm sorry.

Prior to the formation of the Fremont Congregation, going back to Watchtower New York, what were the various departments within Watchtower New York prior to 2009?

A. I don't know that I could name them all. I know that the Service Department came under the direction of the Watchtower Corporation of New York. I know certain other departments did. I can't say with certainty, no.

Q. All right. We talked about the Legal Department earlier, recognizing that you are not here in that capacity, but do you know of your own knowledge whether or not the Legal Department, prior to 2001, was operated through the Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc.?

A. I don't know.

MR. SCHNACK: I can tell you it was, Rick.

MR. SIMONS: It was. Okay.

MR. SCHNACK: Still is.

BY MR. SIMONS:

Q. In your work in the Service Department, if you have a question that involves legal issues presently, do you go to the Legal Department of Watchtower New York, or do you have a separate Legal Department within the Christian Congregation?

A. The Legal Department here at Patterson.

Q. Is that Watchtower New York?

A. As Rick has stated, it is. I'm sorry. Bob.

Q. Looking down at paragraph 10: Congregation elders are expected to keep confession of other spiritual communications confidential.

Is there a written definition, to your knowledge, in any of the materials that you referenced in your work or have been familiar with in your work, as to what constitutes a spiritual confidential communication?

MR. SCHNACK: I'm sorry. You are asking if there is a written definition?

BY MR. SIMONS:

Q. Yes. What is a spiritual confidential communication?

A. Nothing other than the scriptures. Throughout the Bible it refers to keeping matters in confidence. In Proverbs it refers to confidential talk.

So from a scriptural standpoint, spiritual advice or counsel would be regarded as confidential.

Q. Are some matters, in your experience, that are the subject of communications between an elder and a congregation member not deemed spiritual?

A. Just general, just conversation with fellow members of Jehovah's Witnesses is not regarded as spiritual in nature.

Q. For example, if a congregation member spoke to an elder about a problem he was having with a car that would not operate correctly and asked for some mechanical advice, would that be deemed spiritual in nature?

A. I don't think any of us would regard that as spiritual in nature.

Q. Where, within the definitions that you work with administratively, is the dividing line between the subject matter that is deemed spiritual communications and the subject matter that is deemed nonspiritual communications?

MR. SCHNACK: I'm going to object as vague. I am not sure I understand the question.

You can respond.

THE WITNESS: That is pretty general. I think I would like for you to give me a little more specifics as to what you mean by that.

BY MR. SIMONS:

Q. How do you know in your work whether or not a communication between a congregation member and an elder is to be deemed spiritual or it is to be deemed nonspiritual as the example that we talked about earlier?

A. The example with the car?

Q. Yeah.

A. Well, let me give you an example. If someone came to me and, for example, a woman confessed to committing adultery, I would certainly want someone with me, another elder, to listen to that confession. I think we would both, as elders, regard that confession as confidential.

Q. Because the subject matter would be deemed spiritual?

A. I don't know that you would regard adultery as spiritual, but the fact that the confession is before two elders who represent the Christian Congregation, from that standpoint, it would be spiritual.

Q. Is it the confession of wrongdoing that is spiritual, regardless of the wrongdoing itself?

A. It is written in the context of a spiritual problem that maybe someone has.

Q. If you have a question in your mind as to whether the subject matter of the communication is spiritual in nature or not, how do you resolve that question?

A. Well, again, I think that is pretty general, Mr. Simons. Can you be more specific?

Q. Yes. If you are unable to resolve a question of whether a communication is spiritual in nature or not in your work, how do you get the answer to the question?

Do you ask someone else within the organization in a different department? Do you go to your supervisor? Do you research it yourself and make a decision yourself? How do you resolve a gray area as to whether communication is spiritual or not?

A. I think through experience one is able to determine the difference between what is a spiritual matter that should be -- or, for that matter, anything that should be kept confidential as to something that is not confidential or not spiritual.

Q. When you say "experience," are you speaking of your own individual experience or the collective experience of yourself and others within the administration and leadership here?

A. My own experience.

Q. Have you ever had an occasion during your years of service where you asked for other's guidance in determining whether communication should be deemed spiritual and confidential or not?

A. Yes.

Q. And in those situations or in that situation, to whom do you go for guidance?

A. It depends on the context. It depends on what the issue is as to who I go to.

Q. Can you give me different examples of the types of subject matters of communications that would lead you to another and to --

A. Well, I served as an elder, as I said, since 1979 in various congregations. So in the role of an elder within the local congregation is made up of a number of elders bearing numbers of elders within a body in a local congregation.

So if it is in regard to an issue I referred to earlier, where a woman may confess adultery, then I would consult with another elder in those matters. We would regard that as confidential.

Q. How about if the subject matter was not one which was clear to you as to whether it is spiritual and confidential or not and you wanted further insight from someone else on that in addition to your own experience, to whom would you go for guidance on that?

A. You are talking about spiritual matters?

Q. Well, about the issue of whether or not a communication is a spiritual communication as opposed to one that is not.

A. As an elder in a local congregation, I would consult with other elders.

Q. How about in your capacity here as an assistant overseer in the Service Department?

A. I would consult with elders here in the Service Department.

Q. Is there someone within the administrative structure of the organizations, plural, who is the final arbitrator of whether a specific type of communications that you deemed spiritual and confidential or not?

A. I believe it depends on the nature of the spiritual, confidential question.

Q. And can you explain that for me?

A. There are some issues, some questions that are raised that I can freely discuss with my peers within the department. And based on a discussion, a determination can be made as to whether we have the authority to make a decision. In other cases, not.

Q. Are there situations, in your experience, when the question of whether or not a communication is a confidential communication, you have turned to the Legal Department for determination of that issue?

A. We have gotten legal advice, yes, on a regular basis.

Q. And in your capacity within the Service Department, do you have a discretion to overrule, if you will, legal advice you received from the Legal Department of Watchtower New York?

A. Do we have the authority to overrule? Again, I think it depends on the context.

Q. With regard to the question -- I'm sorry if that question was overbroad, but let me narrow. On the question of whether or not an individual communication is deemed confidential or not.

MR. SCHNACK: I'm going to object to the form of the question. It seems you are co-mingling legal issues and spiritual issues. I'm not sure the church does that.

But to the extent you can respond, go ahead.

THE WITNESS: Yeah. I think, in response to what Bob is saying, anything that is confidential is not always spiritual. And something that is spiritual is not always confidential. So I don't think we can draw a parallel as if they were synonymous.

But again, your question?

BY MR. SIMONS:

Q. Thank you for that clarification. With regard to whether or not a communication is confidential, are you given the authority to make that determination in a situation where the Legal Department has given you an opinion as to that, can you determine to be different than the Legal Department?

A. Do you mean me personally, or do you mean as a department?

Q. You as an assistant overseer in your official capacity.

A. Again, I think it is a judgment matter. There are some things that are given in the way of advice, and it is just that, advice.

There are other things that are presented from the Legal Department that I personally would not want to take it upon myself to make that decision to overrule the good advice that we often get from -- that we regularly get from our legal counsel.

Q. Going back to the time period before 2001, when the Service Department was within the Watchtower New York, were the respective roles that we have been discussing between the Service Department and the Legal Department the same, but just kept within the one organization structure?

A. A little confusing question.
Q. All right. Prior to 2001, was the Service Department, in terms of its authority and role, the same as it is now within the Christian Congregation?
A. Do you mean the difference between when Service Department was working as the New York Corporation, since 2001, and the Christian Congregation?
Q. Yes.
A. Essentially the same.
Q. And was the nature of the relationship between the Legal Department and the Service Department the same before 2001 as it is at present?
A. When you say "relationship," do you mean --
Q. In terms of the nature of the issues that would be brought to the Legal Department and the consequences of information that would come back from the Legal Department to the Service Department?
A. Yes.
Q. Mr. Shuster, have you seen this letter of July 1st, 1989 before?
A. Yes.
Q. And when do you recall first being aware of this letter?
A. Shortly before July 1st, 1989.
Q. Did you participate at all in the drafting of this letter?

A. I'm not certain.

Q. Okay. Do you know any of the individuals who participated in the drafting of this letter?

A. I don't think I could name someone specific.

Q. Is this what is known as a body of elder letter?

A. Yes.

Q. Is the content of this letter, Exhibit 5, one that requires the approval of anyone within the Jehovah's Witnesses organization before it can be circulated to elders throughout the United States?

A. Yes.

Q. What approval or approvals, if there is more than one, must be made before a body of elder letter such as this could be circulated at the time we are talking about July 1, '89?

A. Within the time frame of 1989?

Q. Yes.

A. It would have been a group of elders within the Service Department that would have reviewed this letter. It would have been a collaborative effort.

You are talking about the Service Department. Right?

Q. I'm talking about within the organization.

A. Within the organization?

Q. Completely.

A. Yes. Undoubtedly, the legal departments would have input into this. It would have been approved by a committee of the governing body.

Q. Has this body of elder letter of July 1, 1989 been revoked?

A. When you say "revoked," you mean in total or in part?

Q. First, in total.

A. No.

Q. Have parts of it been modified or revoked?

A. I would have to review the letter --

Q. All right.

A. -- in further detail.

Q. Okay.

MR. SCHNACK: Do you want him to do that?

MR. SIMONS: Yes.

THE WITNESS: It is, actually, the same now. Maybe there is one exception, and that's on page -- on page 4 at the very top, the first sentence:

"If the alleged wrongdoer confesses to the sin, crime, no one else should be present besides the members of the committee."

Just in addition to that, in the case of a child being a minor, likely, in most cases, his parent or parents would be present. But other than that, essentially it is the same.

(Whereupon, the video recording was stopped)

MS. KRAETSCH: Your Honor, may we take a five-minute break until I figure out where the rest of the video went?

THE COURT: Sure. I will see everybody at 11:25.

(Break taken)

(Whereupon, the video recording was played)

BY MR. SIMONS:

Q. Let me ask you a question that may seem somewhat silly to you, but what is the difference in the purpose between the Awake Magazine and the Watchtower Magazine?

A. The Watchtower Magazine is a magazine that deals a lot with prophecy -- Bible prophecy and world events and how we see world events that we see happening today are really part of a prophetic sign as to the times that we are living in.

And so Watchtower is taken from as if a sentry were standing out in the wilderness on top of a tower overlooking a panoramic view, and he can see far in advance these events, what is coming his way. That is the idea behind the Watchtower.

The Awake Magazine is more designed toward the public in general and articles of interest on creation, history, geography. They both have a printing of over 42 million copies.

The Watchtower is in 194 languages, and the Awake is in 84 languages. So it is a worldwide -- both of them have worldwide distribution.

Q. When members or publishers go out to spread the word to the community at large among non-members, do they provide to the community, at least as the persons who are interested, both Awake and Watchtower?

A. Yes. Both Awake and Watchtower and other publications.

Q. So am I correct in saying neither Awake nor Watchtower are published exclusively for the membership of Jehovah's Witnesses, they are directed towards the larger community as well?

A. The Watchtower, about three years ago was -- there is two publications. There is the public edition of the Watchtower and now there is a study copy -- a study edition of the Watchtower. And the study edition of the Watchtower is designed specifically for the membership.

Q. And that's a more recent development?

A. Yes.

Q. If we look back to the 1990s, would we have what is now the equivalent of the public Watchtower and Awake both being distributed for use of members and to the public at large?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, you mentioned the Watchtower now being utilized in certain study committees. Am I correct that there are various kinds of regular meetings and study sessions that congregations hold within Jehovah's Witnesses?

A. Yes, we do.

Q. And are there regular meetings held by congregations at the Kingdom Halls?

A. Yes.

Q. And how frequently would regular sessions at the Kingdom Hall be held in most congregations, at least in your knowledge and experience?

A. Do you mean meetings that a congregation would have, as opposed to meetings that Kingdom Hall would have?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes. A congregation typically would have two meetings a week; one during midweek, and typically one on the weekend.

Q. And do each of these meetings have a different purpose or is the purpose the same?

A. A different purpose.

Q. What are the purposes of the two meetings -- the midweek and the weekend meetings?

A. Well, both are open to the public. So anybody is invited to attend these meetings. The midweek meeting is made up of three different types of meetings. One is called the Congregation Bible Study. And there is a publication that the Jehovah's Witnesses use. It varies from year to year. That is considered for 25 minutes or half hour.

And then we have what is called a theocratic ministry school that helps to train the congregants as to how to perform public speaking or public reading, speaking to others about the Bible.

And then the last part of the meeting is called a service meeting. And information from a periodical called Our Kingdom Ministry is reviewed.

And again, having to do with the ministry. Because that's what Jehovah's Witnesses do is we speak -- speak about matters of God and bear witness about Him and tell others about what we consider to be good news in the Bible.

Q. Are the midweek meetings that are held at the Kingdom Halls attended customarily by children as well as adults?

A. Yes.

Q. What does the weekend meeting usually consist of?

A. It is -- it consists of two meetings, a public talk addressed to the public, and then consideration of the study edition of the Watchtower. There are articles that are taken each week from that Watchtower and considered during the course of that hour on a variety of subjects.

Q. And are the weekend meetings customarily held at the Kingdom Hall?

A. Yes. In this country.

Q. Are there other meetings routinely held, in your experience and knowledge, that would be smaller study groups held, perhaps, in homes of individuals who are congregation members?

A. Not a study group. We do have places, homes, private homes where we gather for a very, very brief period of time, 10 to 15 minutes to meet prior to engaging in the public ministry.

Q. Are the weekend meetings customarily attended by children?

A. The public talk and Watchtower study at the congregation Kingdom Hall?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes.

Q. When you say "public ministry," is service work and public ministry -- are those concepts the same?

A. Service work, meaning?

Q. Does the service work that is customarily used in your vocabulary include the public ministry that you were about to describe.

A. Yes. We don't use the terminology "service work." We do use the word "service." It is a field service or field ministry. And, yes, it is synonymous with the ministry.

Q. So it's service, not service work?

A. Right.

Q. Thank you. My apologies.

And how often are congregations involved, say, on a weekly basis in field service?

A. Typically, we have meetings all during the week and in the homes, usually in the mornings. Sometimes in the afternoons, we have a meeting for field service.

So in some cases it is seven days a week either in the homes or at our places of worship, our Kingdom Halls.

In other areas where the congregations are much smaller, they may have arrangements to meet less than that.

Q. And by field service or public ministry, does that mean going into the community to preach the gospel and spiritual teachings of Jehovah's Witnesses?

A. Yeah. The gospel. Speaking about the Bible and -- yes.

Q. And are children allowed to engage in the field service work -- I'm sorry -- the field service? I beg your pardon.

A. Yes.

Q. What does the term "publisher" mean?

A. A publisher can refer to a baptized or an unbaptized associate of the congregation.

Q. Can a child be a publisher?

A. Yes.

Q. And can a child be an unbaptized publisher?

A. Yes.

Q. What is the role of an unbaptized publisher in field service?

A. The same as an adult publisher.

Q. And what is that?

A. Reading the Bible. Sharing with others one's faith, one's conviction. Teaching them about what the Bible says. There's a hope for the future. It is all part of the ministry whether one is an adult or a minor.

Q. Does field service work include manning a table or a booth or some kind of fixed place in a public location where persons can come by and approach and be given an Awake or Watchtower or other information?

A. That would be part of it. That is one form, one aspect of the public ministry.

Q. Does it include going into communities, into residences or neighborhoods going door-to-door as well?

A. That's part of it, yes.

Q. And that is usually done in smaller groups of, perhaps, two or three individuals?

A. Yes.

Q. And children are allowed to do that?

A. Yes.

Q. What are the other ways in which field service is accomplished?

A. Well, we have the public ministry, which often involves calling on homes, the house-to-house ministry. I think that's probably what Jehovah's Witnesses are more known for than anything else is their public ministry. Waking you up early in the morning is part of it.

Another part of it is, as you mentioned, is the street witnessing, talking to passersby, engaging them in confession. Part of it is making visits on people who have expressed interest and calling back on them. There are many different types of ministry.

Q. Are any of these types of ministry ones which children are precluded from participating in?

A. Some of the work that is done in the public, like, on the street, maybe in metropolitan areas, there is always concern about children, and we want to protect them and keep them from harm. So there may be sometimes when we would recommend that children not participate in that aspect of the ministry, such as in business territories or on the street.

Generally, that is up to the parent to make that decision. They have the authority, the right to dictate where they go, where they do not go.

But the elders in the congregation may make some recommendations that would preclude children more from the standpoint of their safety.

Q. Is there such a thing as a pioneer service school?

A. Yes.

Q. What is a pioneer service school?

A. It is a two-week course that those who are what we call "pioneers" in the congregation, who have agreed to devote a certain set of number of hours per month to the public ministry. Periodically they are invited to the pioneer service school.

Q. Does a pioneer -- I'm sorry. Must a pioneer be baptized to be eligible?

A. Yes.

Q. So an unbaptized publisher would not be eligible to be a pioneer?

A. That's correct. And there is different types of pioneers. But, yes. Right.

Q. So generally speaking, a family of members of a congregation would be included in the midweek meeting, the weekend meeting, possibly smaller study groups and field service?

A. Yes.

Q. And the amount of time, frequency of participation in these various activities and gatherings would vary, I assume, greatly, from family to family. Is that fair?

A. Yes.

Q. However, there is no requirement of a minimum number of hours as to either participation in meetings or in field service in order to maintain membership in good standing with the congregation?

A. That's correct.

Q. Who is deemed to be clergy within the Jehovah's Witnesses?

A. Well, this would be elders, anyone occupying the position or serving within the capacity as an elder.

Q. Are ministerial servants considered clergy?

A. No.

Q. Are all members in good standing considered to be ministers within Jehovah's Witnesses?

A. Yes.

Q. Let me have you -- direct your attention, then, please, to Exhibit 7, the second affidavit of Allen Shuster, signed December 7th, 2011, on page 4.

And that's your signature again. Correct?

A. Yes. In paragraph 7 on page 2, you advise us that the terms "member," "publisher," and "ordained minister" mean the same and are interchangeable within the faith. Am I correct that that does not extend to unbaptized publishers?

A. That's correct.

Q. Are persons who have been removed as field servants, like Jonathan Kendrick in the 1990s, still considered publishers?

A. Yes.

Q. So he was still a baptized publisher?

A. Yes.

Q. What was the predecessor, in terms of function of the Branch Committee?

A. Prior to the Branch Committee, which was formed in 2001, the Bethel operations, is the operations of the three complexes that make up, not only the world headquarters, but also the headquarters for the United States Branch facilities as well as the field operations who were separate. There were two separate entities that care for those functions.

Q. We talked about the Branch Committee Guidelines, the published guidelines and the handbook, so to speak. Was there a predecessor of similar type before 2001 when the Branch Committee was formed?

A. The Branch Organization -- is what you are referring to -- has been in existence prior to the formation of the U.S. Branch Committee.

Q. And so did the Branch Organization have a handbook or guidelines prior to 2001?

A. I'm sure that there was some guideline that they went by. I don't know that there was an official document. Maybe more just internal communications or perhaps some memoranda that gave them some structure.

Q. Who, if anyone, would have been required to approve the content of articles in the Awake before they were published? This is back in the '85 to '93 time period.

A. It would be individuals that work in our writing department.

Q. Were issues of --

I'm sorry.

Were articles on the subject matter of protecting children from sexual abuse subject to approval from anyone other than persons in the Writing Committee back in the time frame that we are talking about, '85 to '93, as to these articles?

MR. SCHNACK: Do you mean the Writing Department?

MR. SIMONS: Writing Department, thank you.

THE WITNESS: I know, on occasion, that the Writing Committee would send -- the Writing Department, that is -- they would send articles to others outside the Writing Department for their review.

BY MR. SIMONS:

Q. Would an article setting forth the policy on something such as childhood sexual abuse, such as the January 22, 1985 article in the Awake, have been reviewed and approved by the governing body or a committee of governing body prior to its publication?

A. My understanding is that they would.

Q. What is that understanding?

A. Whether all of the members of the then existing governing body would review articles from the Awake or the Watchtower -- and I can't say for certainty, but what I do say for certainty is that some members of the governing body would review it, yes.

Q. What is your understanding based on?

A. Based on my knowledge.

MR. SIMONS: We have been going for a while. Any time you want to take a break, just tell us.

THE WITNESS: I'm good.

THE COURT: Or perhaps the court reporter.

(Discussion off the record)

BY MR. SIMONS:

Q. Your last answer was -- that you just stated -- can you tell me a little bit about how you acquired the knowledge of the governing bodies role in terms of approval of the policy articles or Watchtower policy articles?

A. I just know that the Writing Department is directly overseen by the Writing Committee of the governing body, and that there have been members in the past of the governing body who are in the -- on the Writing Committee, and also work in the Writing Department.

And I know the process, that it is reviewed by a number of writers. And it has been the policy of at least a few members of the governing body, reviewing anything of the Watchtower and Awake that is published.

MR. SIMONS: Thank you, sir, for your time today. That is all the questions I have.

THE WITNESS: Thank you.

(Whereupon, the video recording was stopped)

THE COURT: Mr. Simons.

MR. SIMONS: Yes, Your Honor. Give me thirty seconds for us to focus our eyes and then we'll go to the next videotaped deposition, which would be Ms. Harmatz.

THE COURT: How long is that?

MR. SIMONS: About 15 to 20, I thought.

THE COURT: Okay. All right.

(Whereupon, the video recording was played)

VIDEOGRAPHER: My name is John Peace, your videographer. I represent Atkinson-Baker, Inc., in Glendale, California. I'm not financially interested in this action nor am a relative or employee of any attorneys or any of the parties.

MR. McCABE: James McCabe on behalf of the North Congregation of the Jehovah's Witnesses Fremont, California.

HELENE HARMATZ, Ph.D.

WAS DULY SWORN TO TELL THE TRUTH BY THE COURT REPORTER AND TESTIFIED AS FOLLOWS:

EXAMINATION

BY MS. KRAETSCH:

Q. Good afternoon, Dr. Harmatz. Will you please introduce yourself?

A. My name is Helene Harmatz.

Q. And what is your profession?

A. I'm a counselor at Kaiser Permanente Psychiatry Department.

Q. And can you explain what a counselor here does?

A. We do assessments and treatments for clients, patients, who come in with depression or any type of either mental illness or emotional distress.

Q. What is your educational background?

A. I have a Masters in social work, and I have a Ph.D. in clinical psychology.

Q. Can you describe your professional training and experience?

A. Well, my training in social work was at the University of Southern California. And then my training in clinical psychology was through a professional educational university.

And the types of experience I have had is varied. I have worked in medical hospitals, to acute medical settings. I have worked in substance abuse at a non-profit agency. I have worked in sexual assault in a non-profit agency. I have worked in juvenile justice. And long, long ago it was Head Start.

Q. Can you describe your experience working with sexual assault victims?

A. I worked for a year-and-a-half in a non-profit agency with victims of sexual assault, incest survivors as well.

And I was the clinical director, but it was a small agency. So I did a lot of counseling with survivors, but also some hospital interventions and occasionally a court witness.

Q. And where do you work now?

A. I work at Kaiser Permanente in the Psychiatric Department in Downey.

Q. And how long have you been there?

A. I've been here -- I'm on my eighth year.

Q. Do you have a title here at Kaiser?

A. I do. It is psychiatric counselor.

Q. Have you ever treated Candace Conti?

A. Yes, I have.

Q. Over what period of time?

A. There have been five sessions, and I really don't recall when we started.

Q. Do you recall when your last visit with her was?

A. Last visit was last Friday, and that was on April 27, 2012.

Q. How was Ms. Conti referred to you?
A. She was referred by her case manager in addiction medicine.
Q. And what was your goal in Ms. Conti's care?
A. Supportive, but also assisting in the treatment of depression, anxiety, but mostly some PTSD.
Q. When you first started treating Ms. Conti, did you obtain a history from her?
A. I obtained some history. Not the full history.
Q. Do you recall what that history was?
A. She mostly talked about some legal issues that she was involved in, some substance history, her substance recovery that she was working on, some family issues concerning grandparents, mother as well. That's a lot of it.
Q. Dr. Harmatz, turning to page 22.
MR. SCHNACK: Are you using the numbers in the lower right-hand corner?
MS. KRAETSCH: Not the lowest number, but above that page 22.
MR. McCABE: So you are using page 22 of 41 of the right corner?
MS. KRAETSCH: Yes, I am.
BY MS. KRAETSCH:

Q. Dr. Harmatz, here on the Exhibit 1, page 22, there are notes from your October 4, 2011 session with Ms. Conti.

And you state here:

"Patient reports she was sexually abused from the ages of 9 to 12 by a man in her religious community."

What did she tell you about that?

A. She really didn't go into details. She simply stated that this occurred and, you know, that this was -- these were issues she was dealing with.

Q. Did you place any significance on that report that she gave you?

A. Yes. It is telling in terms of what could be going on with the patient.

Q. Can you describe in a little bit more detail why that was an important piece of her history for your treatment?

A. Well, with the diagnosis of PTSD, which was not made by me, this can explain where that comes from, that a client has experienced something so difficult that there are symptoms that can be ongoing and quite difficult. And, again, traumatic for her that ran through her life.

Q. You mentioned that she was diagnosed with PTSD. Who made that diagnosis?

A. You know, I'm not positive, but I believe it was made in addiction medicine, and possibly by the psychiatrist; although, I'm not definitely clear on that.

Q. What was the significance to you of the diagnosis of PTSD?

A. Well, again, that it formulates so much of a patient's life even currently that there are symptoms that continue to be problematic: sleep disturbances, concentration disturbances, but also that interfering relationship issues, trust issues.

Q. Can you elaborate a little bit on what those symptoms were that Ms. Conti was exhibiting?

A. Well, definitely sleep issues. Frequent nightmares. So that kind of exhaustion can lead, again, to depression and, again, more interrupted functioning in daily life.

Also significant trust issues, which damage relationships, or, you know, inhibit somebody from carrying on.

So, again, the symptoms: sleep problems, some depression, heightened anxiety, so fearfulness and a lack of being able to trust.

Q. I see here on page 14 in your notes pertaining to your visit with Ms. Conti on November 29, 2011, and you state: "She continues to have nightmares every night."

A. Yes, I recall her saying that.

Q. Can you go into some detail about what these nightmares consisted of?

A. She talked, and I stated here, about being held down and waves. But she really talked about not wanting to even sleep that, you know, being woken up and not getting a good night's sleep constantly. But this feeling of having no control over herself, that somebody else is holding her down, and she is having difficulty breathing.

Q. And from your professional experience, did you make an assessment as to what was causing those nightmares?

A. She seemed -- I don't think I even needed to make an assessment. She seemed to believe that this was related to the sexual abuse, and it seemed to make a lot of sense to me.

Q. In your profession opinion?

A. Yes. Definitely. Definitely. It made sense. To my knowledge, other things going on with Candace wouldn't make the same impact on her.

Q. So based on your education, training, research, clinical work and familiarity with Candace Conti and her medical records, do you have an opinion as to the most likely cause or causes for her post-traumatic stress disorder?

A. From what I know of Candace, yes, it seems that the sexual assault is truly what's behind this.

Q. And what is the basis for that opinion?

A. My education and the dealing with other survivors of sexual assault and incest survivors.

Q. The notes from your session on November 29, 2011, on page 14, also mentions therapeutic techniques.

Can you explain the techniques that you listed here?

A. The cognitive behavior really has to do with the thought process and on using your thought process as an understanding of an emotional state. So really getting it into your cognitive sphere daily so that you can make some changes.

Is that clear enough?

Q. Yes. How about the psychodynamic?

A. Psychodynamic really is the connection of what happened, in terms of your past, so the social and psychosocial areas of your life and how that is displayed, again, significantly today.

Q. And can you describe the supportive technique?

A. Just really being present, listening, and I would say really kindness and being present in a relationship with a patient.

Q. And in these notes you also describe a plan for Ms. Conti and state that the patient agrees with the plan.

Can you explain what that plan consisted of?

A. Well, if she takes medication in the way it is prescribed, continue her support, 12-Step meetings, because she is continuing to work on her sobriety. And the 12-step meetings being supportive as well as treatment oriented.

And the assertion on limit setting has to do with family members who may lean on her. And she needs to be a little bit more firm about that.

Q. You mentioned some prescriptions that Candace is taking. Do you know what those prescriptions are?

A. You know, I don't have it right in front of me, and I'm not a medical doctor.

Q. Okay. Fair enough. From her clinical care and her medical records, are you familiar with Ms. Conti's history and treatment in the Department of Addiction Medicine here at Kaiser?

A. I have not reviewed those records. I do know that she did have treatment in this department.

Q. Can you describe the program that Ms. Conti was in?

A. I'm not familiar enough to do that. I'm sorry.

Q. Okay. I wanted to talk a bit about Ms. Conti's sobriety. Also in your notes from your visit with Ms. Conti on October 4, 2011, on pages 21 and 22, you stated: "Sober and clean over a year."

Did Ms. Conti undergo any objective laboratory tests to confirm that?

A. In terms of my work with her, no. In terms of her sobriety and working through the Chemical Dependency Department, I'm pretty sure, yes. So that was a self-statement that I put into my record.

Q. So do you know if she went for random drug testing in her program?

A. Yes. I believe that's the case.

Q. In your professional experience, can those random drug tests by faked?

A. Not to my knowledge, no.

Q. In your notes from October 4, 2011, you also state, "Her sobriety is first in her eyes."

What did you mean by that?

A. Well, she said numerous times, and has so not only on that day, that this is a really important part of her life because she feels she has gotten back her life, and that making a decision to become clean and sober has given her a new chance, another chance to have a good life. So it is extremely important to her.

Q. And in your opinion, based on observations and any lab tests --

Let me start over. In your opinion, based on observations of Ms. Conti and review of any lab tests, as well as your own training and clinical experience, can you state with reasonable, professional certainty that Ms. Conti has been and remains free from influence or use of any intoxicating substance other than those that were prescribed for her?

A. I believe that to be the truth.

Q. And what is the basis for that opinion?

A. Her presentation is consistent. She may be at times emotional, but she is clear. She is focused. She seems extremely sincere.

The types of drugs she used in the past, I don't think she would be able to present the way that she does, in my experience.

Q. You mentioned that you saw Ms. Conti five times.

A. Yes.

Q. Was she responsible in her attendance for those five sessions?

A. Absolutely.

Q. Was she on time?

A. Absolutely.

Q. Did she ever miss any appointments that were scheduled?

A. Not to my knowledge, no, not unless she canceled. And I don't even know that that was the case.

Q. To your professional observation, did Ms. Conti demonstrate that she was motivated to obtain the maximum benefits from care and treatment that you provided to her?

A. Yes.

Q. In what ways?

A. She -- in a treatment plan, she has been agreeable to follow the recommendations. She is working on the things that we have worked on in terms of her being assertive with family members; in terms of, you know, taking good care of herself in the ways that we have talked about; in terms of some depression, she has really worked on the issues, you know. So I really hear from her that she is taking the steps that we have talked about.

Q. So you mentioned post-traumatic stress disorder as well as depression. Were those the diagnoses that were made by a medical doctor for Ms. Conti?

A. Yes.

Q. Were there any other diagnoses attributed to her?

A. Probably secondary. Nothing that would stand out. I mean there is some anxiety in all of this, but that can be part of the post-traumatic stress, there is an anxiety portion.

Q. Getting back to your sessions with Ms. Conti, what demeanor does she display in your interactions with her?

A. I'm not sure I'm clear about what you are asking.

Q. Ms. Conti's demeanor while she's interacting with you in sessions, is she --

A. Responsive, receptive. She is attentive. She is very attentive. She seems forthcoming with a lot of material that she is willing and able to work on. There are some things that she is not really ready or willing to approach.

Q. And is that willingness important, clinically, to your evaluation and approach to treating a patient?

A. No. No. Because there are things that take time for somebody to be ready to deal with. There are things that are buried very deeply, things that are very traumatic that really can only be tapped when the patient is really ready. And to force that person before they are ready is, I don't believe, good practice.

Q. Can you explain what Axis 2 means?

A. It is generally reserved for a characterological or personality disorder.

Q. And to your knowledge, was Ms. Conti ever diagnosed with any personality disorders or other pathology?

A. No. To my knowledge, no. There is nothing in the record.

Q. Have you ever known her to be delusional?

A. No.

Q. In your November 2011 notes, you mention that Candace Conti told you:

"She continues to work her program and attends meetings and is feeling good about her sobriety."

That was an important enough observation you made a note of it. Can you explain why it was important for you to put it in your notes?

A. Two things. It is important to her because, again, she stated so many times, but that time as well, that she was working a program and that sobriety is important to her.

But it also shows a commitment. It shows, in my professional experience, it shows somebody who is committed and who really wants their life back.

So this isn't about being manipulative or trying to get away with something. This is really about doing what is right for you, right and healthy and being on that path.

Q. What is your prognosis for Ms. Conti in the short-term?

A. It is a good prognosis. With PTSD, that's very, very difficult. That takes a long, long time.

In terms of any depression, or more anxiety -- and I know that those things weren't diagnosed at first -- but she is doing quite well. You know, I think she can be successful in a lot of things that she does. She still has, you know, plenty of issues, though.

Q. Can you elaborate from your professional experience and interactions and treatment of Ms. Conti, especially relating to the PTSD that you just mentioned, what prognosis do you have in the long-term for her?

A. She is going to need to deal with these things more so than she has with me so that the nightmares can be freed up and so that she can -- I think she is developing more trust in people, but this is still pretty serious in trusting relationships, again, being able to be more comfortable in situations where she is not looking over her shoulder.

Although, you know, this situation wasn't like what you normally see in PTSD, a lot of times you will see a war survivor or a rape victim, as an adult, and they are looking over their shoulders.

But it is still the trust issues and the relationship issues, and, again, for her, specifically, the severe nightmares. So those things are -- I'm hoping will really improve in time.

Q. One final question. Do you have an opinion with reasonable professional certainty as to whether it was more likely than not that sexual abuse Candace Conti experienced as a child was a substantially contributing factor to her post-traumatic stress disorder?

A. From what I know of Candace, that is the only thing I know in her history that would equate with PTSD.

Q. And can you just explain the basis for the opinion that you just stated?

A. PTSD is fairly specific in that it is not -- it is a reaction to something that is -- can be life threatening. Okay. It becomes acute stress to begin with, and then over a period of time, it is post-trauma from a stress. And a serious stress. It is not just, you know, mom leaving home. This has to do with threat of physical harm.

And what I know of Candace this is the only physical harm that she endured. That's all I know.

MS. KRAETSCH: Okay. Thank you. I don't have any more questions.

EXAMINATION

BY MR. SCHNACK:

Q. Hi, Dr. Harmatz. My name is Bob Schnack. I just have a few questions for you. You said you took an incomplete history from Ms. Conti. Why is that?

A. We are limited in time. You know, probably that's the real reason. But incomplete, I'm really meaning in terms of her childhood. Okay. We started with where she was coming in, and I didn't actually go back in that session to go into -- you know, mom and dad and all of that.

Q. Okay. So you don't know a lot about her mother's history?

A. I do know more now.

Q. Now, as in as you sit here today?

A. Yes. Over this course of treatment. So the first assessment where more often I would get a more complete history, I didn't. But I have since that time.

Q. Okay. Is it fair to say you think she is doing very well?

A. Yes, I do.

MR. SCHNACK: That's all the questions I have.

EXAMINATION

BY MR. McCABE:

Q. Doctor, I think we introduced ourselves before the deposition. I just have a few questions.

A. Certainly.

Q. In your dealing with Candace Conti, you did not know her to have any relapses back into crystal meth abuse; is that correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. And how long has she been clean and sober now?

A. I believe she told me it's over a year and a half.

Q. Do you know how long she abused crystal meth?

A. You know, I'm really not clear. I can't say with certainty.

Q. Does eight years sound about right? Starting at age 16?

A. I'm really not positive. I thought it was more like six. But, again, I'm not positive.

Q. But basically for someone who has been involved in the daily use of crystal methamphetamine, she is doing quite well, isn't she?

A. Yes.

Q. It is quite remarkable that she hasn't had a relapse; isn't that true?

A. It's a difficult drug.

Q. But you would agree she is doing really well, remarkably well?

A. Very well.

Q. Ms. Conti seems to be well-oriented socially; wouldn't you agree?

A. From what she told me, yes.

Q. She is either in school or planning to attend school?

A. Yes.

Q. She has got plans to move to Central California with her mother?

A. Yes. She is doing some exercises, yes.

MR. SCHNACK: That's all I have.

MS. KRAETSCH: I have a follow-up question.

EXAMINATION

BY MS. KRAETSCH:

Q. When you said she was doing very well, are you referring to her beating addiction or to dealing with her PTSD?

A. I think I'm saying on all levels -- levels as a whole. She is attending meetings. She is sober. She is social. She has plans for the future. So, yes, on both, I think.

Q. And in your professional opinion, will she require further treatment for her PTSD and her depression?

A. I would say it is indicated.

MS. KRAETSCH: Okay. I don't have anything further.

Thank you so much.

(Whereupon, the video recording was stopped)

THE COURT: All right. To the jury, I will look forward to see you all at 1:30. Thank you for your diligence and attention.

(Whereupon, the following proceedings were heard outside the presence of jurors)

THE COURT: All right. Who do we have left for the day?

MR. SIMONS: Two Kaisers and the Laura Fraser video.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. SIMONS: All by videotape depo.

THE COURT: Understood. And do you think we'll get it done by 3:00?

MR. SIMONS: I think we'll get it done, yes, maybe even a little earlier.

THE COURT: Okay. Thank you.

MR. SIMONS: We're back at 1:15?

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. SIMONS: Thank you, Your Honor.

(Lunch recess)

(Whereupon, the following proceedings were heard in the presence of jurors)

THE COURT: All right, Mr. Simons.

MR. SIMONS: We would play the videotape deposition of Dr. Laura Walton.

THE COURT: All right. Thank you.

(Whereupon, the video recording was played)

MS. KRAETSCH: Kelly Kraetsch for the Plaintiff, Jane Doe.

MR. SCHNACK: Bob Schnack representing The Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Incorporated.

MR. McCABE: James McCabe representing the North Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses of Fremont California.

LAURA WALTON, M.D.

WAS DULY SWORN TO TELL THE TRUTH BY THE COURT REPORTER AND TESTIFIED AS FOLLOWS:

EXAMINATION

BY MS. KRAETSCH:

Q. Good afternoon, Dr. Walton. Will you please introduce yourself?

A. My name is Laura Michelle Walton.

Q. What is your profession?

A. I'm a psychiatrist.

Q. What is the nature of your practice?

A. Currently, I practice psychiatry and addiction medicine.

Q. And what professional services do you perform for your patients?

A. I do evaluation, assessment, diagnosis of mental illness and addictive illnesses.

Q. What is your educational background?

A. I did a BSNB program at the University of Akron in Northeastern Ohio College of Medicine. And then I trained at the University of Pennsylvania in Philadelphia in Psychiatry.

Q. Do you have experience and training specifically with victims of childhood sex abuse?
A. I have a lot of experience. Not specific training, no.
Q. Can you just elaborate on that experience?
A. A large portion, probably 25 of my patients have some history of sexual abuse.
Q. And where are you working now?
A. I work for Kaiser Permanente.
Q. In which departments do you work at Kaiser?
A. Psychiatry and addiction medicine.
Q. Have you treated Candace Conti?
A. Yes.
Q. And over what period of time?
A. I would say the last year.
Q. How was Ms. Conti referred to you?
A. Through her therapy in addiction medicine.
Q. And that's here at Kaiser?
A. Yes.
Q. Can you describe what your role was in Ms. Conti's care?
A. She was referred for nightmares. And so I was to evaluate her medication with nightmares and to treat her.
Q. When you began to treat her, did you obtain a history for Ms. Conti?

A. Yes.

Q. What history did you get from her?

A. I would have to look at the notes specifically.

Q. Okay. This is a copy of Candace Conti's behavioral health records.

A. Okay. My initial eval --

Q. Dr. Walton, if I could direct you to page 3, and looking here at Candace Conti's behavioral medicine records, which will be Exhibit 1, page 3, regarding Ms. Conti's visit with you on January 3, 2012.

Do you recognize these to be records that were taken in conjunction with your treatment of Ms. Conti?

A. Yes.

Q. Are these records kept in the regular course of Kaiser's business?

A. They are kept in electronic medical records.

Q. And were they made at or around the time that you saw the patient?

A. Yes.

Q. During your treatment of Ms. Conti, did you reach any diagnoses for her?

A. I did.

Q. And what were those?

A. Post-traumatic stress disorder.

Q. What was the basis of the diagnosis of post-traumatic stress disorder?

A. Based upon her history of having a traumatic event and then some difficulty with sleep, concentration, focus, interpersonal interactions as she relates to that event.

Q. Can you elaborate on what that event was?

A. She reported that she had been abused by an elder for several years in her youth -- if I had my notes, I would know specifically, but it was some years ago.

Q. Okay. Referring to your note on page 3 of Ms. Conti's records, there is some diagnoses listed here. Would you go through those with us?

A. Sure.

Q. Starting with Axis 1. What does Axis 1 mean?

A. Axis 1 is basically DSM's statistical manual for mood and anxiety disorder. It is the psychiatry way of quantifying mental illness.

So on Axis 1, usually these are affective disorders or anxiety disorders. Typically, they have a -- sort of a -- the best way to describe it is --

It is hard to describe. They weren't influenced by personality, they weren't medical. These are short mental illness diagnoses on Axis 1.

So depression, post-traumatic stress disorder and chronic -- and drug abuse or addiction.

Q. So when you're talking about PTSD, would you prescribe any medications for that initially?

A. I did. Initially, we tried Minipress, which is an antihypertensive medication in the literature. It is medication that is approved for nightmares, specifically.

Q. Another diagnosis for Candace you mentioned is depression.

Can you explain what that diagnosis consisted of?

A. Sure. She basically suffered for a period of two weeks or more of bad mood, low energy, problems sleeping, eating, vegetative symptoms of depression. Here, it was in remission, but it wasn't active, but at some point, she met the criteria for her depressive disorder.

Q. And did you prescribe any medication for her depression?

A. I did. Wellbutrin.

Q. You mentioned that Ms. Conti first came to you because she was suffering from nightmares.

Can you elaborate on what she told you the nightmares consisted of?

A. She told me that she had recurrent nightmares of being held down, of gasping for breath, that she would awaken startled. And I didn't go into more depth of content, but it was her recurring nightmare she talked about.

Q. And in your professional opinion, those nightmares were related to Ms. Conti's post-traumatic stress disorder?

A. Yes.

Q. Based on your education, research, training and familiarity with Candace Conti and her medical records, do you have an opinion as to the most likely cause or causes of her PTSD?

A. Given her significant abuse history, that would be the most likely cause.

Q. So her abuse history is the basis for your opinion. Correct?

A. That is the basis of my opinion.

Q. Thank you. From her clinical care and from her records, are you familiar with Ms. Conti's history of treatment in the Department of Addiction Medicine here at Kaiser?

A. Yes.

Q. Can you describe the program that Ms. Conti was in?

A. You know, let me quantify that. When she came to me, she already had one month sober, so I don't know where she started in the program. But when she came to me, she was clean and sober for at least eight months, and it went from there.

But it likely involved outpatient or inpatient treatment for her addiction and then some work with a sponsor and AA groups is typical treatment.

Q. Do you have enough knowledge to have an opinion as to how Ms. Conti did in her program?

A. I believe she did well because that was never an issue. When we were discussing, it was more her mental health than her addiction. She was clean.

Q. Your entry in Ms. Conti's medical record for January 3, 2012 also states, reports, that she remains clean for meth and drug abuse and full remission.

A. Yes.

Q. Has Ms. Conti reported obtaining sobriety to you?

A. Yes.

Q. Are there objective laboratory tests to confirm she is being truthful about that?

A. There are.

Q. Did she undergo random drug testing?
A. Not based on my mental health care, no.
Q. Do you know if any of the drugs test results indicate that Ms. Conti was taking any other drugs than those prescribed to her?
A. No.
Q. You mentioned that you prescribed Wellbutrin for Ms. Conti's depression.
A. Yes.
Q. Was she taking Wellbutrin on April 25, 2011?
A. I would have to check my notes which I don't have. But I can say, from the time that I prescribed it, she had a good response. So from the point she was prescribed, she took it thereafter. I just don't know when it was prescribed.
Q. In regards to Ms. Conti's sobriety, in your opinion, based on observations of Ms. Conti and reviewing her specific lab tests and your own training and clinical experience, can you state with reasonable professional certainty that Ms. Conti has been and remains free from influence or use of any intoxicating substance, other than those you prescribed for her?
A. It is my opinion that she has been clean and sober.
Q. Can you explain a basis for that opinion?

A. This is all patient report. But her mental status was very alert, engaged. She gave me no physical signs of being under the influence. She was very clear about her history. And it was very consistent in the times that I met with her about her abuse, and she gave a good history. So I didn't think that she was impaired at all.

Q. To your professional observation, does Ms. Conti appear to be motivated to be a responsible person?

A. In my opinion, yes.

Q. And why do you have that opinion?

A. I believe that -- she has mentioned more than once that this is a very difficult process for her to relive her abuse, and that she is doing this -- she sustains for the greater good. So I think that she seems to be a person of good conscience.

Q. Does trust play a role in your treatment of patients?

A. Yes.

Q. How does trust play a role in your treatment of Ms. Conti?

A. Good question. I believe that the basis for a doctor/patient relationship is trust, or any relationship period. Especially with a psychiatrist. I treated her with psychiatry, everything is confidential.

It is not to be judged.

I am looking for signs and symptoms in a medical model to see if there is some treatment I can prescribe. I have to trust that she is giving me the symptoms and I can bring my expertise to remedy her symptoms.

Q. In your professional opinion, based on your education, training and experience, did you feel trust for Candace Conti?

A. Yes.

Q. Was Ms. Conti compliant with your instructions?

A. Yes. Very.

Q. Did she participate in sessions and counseling and keep her appointments with you in a responsible manner?

A. Yes. According to her medical record, yes.

Q. What demeanor did Ms. Conti display in your interactions with her?

A. She is very mature. Very articulate.

Q. Did you ever observe Ms. Conti to exhibit any other psychological afflictions or pathologies, such as schizophrenia?

A. No.

Q. Do you know Ms. Conti to be delusional?

A. No.

Q. What is your prognosis for Ms. Conti in the short-term?

A. Short-term? I would like to say fair. I would say fair, initially. She has a lot to get through in terms of this. But once she is past her real issues, I believe her life will be good. She has goals. She has dreams. She is very bright. She responded well to treatment.

Q. In your opinion what is it about the legal issues that you just mentioned that is difficult for Ms. Conti?

A. Every patient with PTSD, to recount the story is to relive it as it has happened. And there is inherent emotional consequences to reliving a story over and over again.

So given her history and her diagnosis, I believe it is difficult for her to talk about what happened to her.

Q. Is there a likelihood that Ms. Conti will continue to need therapy over her lifetime?

A. Yes.

Q. And what is the basis for that opinion?

A. PTSD can go into remission, but there really is no cure. It can be re-triggered, and it can be episodic. So there may be incidences in her life where she -- it's re-triggered and has relapses.

Q. I want to discuss a little bit more about the prescription medications you prescribed for Ms. Conti. First, the Wellbutrin.

A. Yes.

Q. Was that successful?

A. Yes.

Q. Can you explain how that affected Ms. Conti?

A. She complained of low mood, low energy and problems with the therapist. Actually, the first medication we tried was Wellbutrin, and then she took it, and within a couple weeks she felt wonderful. She felt like she had the energy she needed to get a job. She was sleeping better. She no longer felt sad, and her depression remitted. She actually did very well with it.

Q. In your opinion, will she need to continue with that medication to maintain that in the future?

A. It is my recommendation that she does, especially when she goes through something like this. I think at one point she may be fine without medication, but I wouldn't recommend it until she gets past this, and she has no amount of stress.

Q. And how does the Minipress work that you gave to Ms. Conti?

A. It worked well initially. Her nightmares weren't decreased, but she had side effects.

Q. What were the side effects?

A. She had palpitations, and it lowered her blood pressure to the point where she would awaken at night. And so we had to stop it and her nightmares continue.

Q. Has she reported that her nightmares continue to this day?

A. She has asked if there is something else we can try. And we have tried other medications, but none have really helped.

Q. Based on your professional experience, do you believe that Candace Conti's addictive behaviors are consistent with someone who suffered sexual abuse as a child?

A. It is certainly one of the sequela of abuse that went on for many years.

Q. What is your basis for making that opinion?

A. I believe it is in the literature. But many of the patients who have had early childhood trauma end up abusing substances to self-medicate their anxiety disorders, depressions and everything that comes with childhood trauma. So I believe many times people self-medicate to not deal with what happened to them.

Q. Can you just explain a little more about what self-medicating means?

A. Sure. Patients who have been abused often deal with depression, anxiety, maybe even a psychotic disorder. And in order to feel normal, they often turn to alcohol and drugs until they are really diagnosed and treated for what is a PTSD or anxiety or depression, and they get medications that are illicit and not prescribed.

Q. And based on your professional experience and interactions with Ms. Conti and the treatment she had with you, is it your professional opinion that Ms. Conti was self-medicating with her illicit drugs before she began treating with you?

A. I believe that's a high probability, yes.

Q. Do you have an opinion with reasonable, professional certainty as to whether it was more likely than not that the sexual abuse Candace Conti experienced as a child was a substantial and contributing factor to her post-traumatic stress disorder?

A. I believe the two are correlated, yes.

Q. And could you please explain the basis for that opinion?

A. As I recall, the ages were -- she mentioned something, 9 to 13. And she -- her drug use started shortly thereafter. And as I took her history, I believe that she was trying to not relive the nightmares that she had. And I believe that she turned to illicit drugs. That's my opinion.

MS. KRAETSCH: Thank you. I don't have any further questions now.

(Whereupon, the video recording was stopped)

MR. SIMONS: And next is the videotaped deposition of Laura Fraser.

THE COURT: Okay. And Ms. Fraser is?

MR. SIMONS: She is the MFT counselor that we heard testimony about earlier that Candace Conti saw in '96 to '98.

MR. McCABE: Your Honor, can we approach for one quick second?

(Sidebar discussion)

THE COURT: The last witness, the doctor, through inadvertence, made a statement that Mr. Kendrick was an elder of the church. He was not and is not. I just want to correct that record. That was her misstatement of her history. Do we all understand each other? Mr. Kendrick is not an elder of the church.

All right. Mr. Simons and Ms. Kraetsch?

(Whereupon, the video recording was played)

EXAMINATION

BY MR. SIMONS:

Q. Please state your full name.

A. My full name is Laura Harrington Fraser.

Q. And, Ms. Fraser, where do you presently live?

A. In La Jolla, California.

Q. Were you, for a time, residing in Northern California?

A. Yes.

Q. And what is your profession?

A. I'm a licensed, clinical, social worker and I work as a psychotherapist.

Q. And what is a licensed, clinical, social worker?

A. Uh --

Q. What does a licensed, clinical, social worker do?

A. In my case, I work as a clinician treating children, families, adults, to help them with struggles in their lives.

Q. Did you receive certain education to help you enter that profession?

A. Yes. I have a master's degree and post-masters. I worked for two and a half years or so under the supervision of experienced clinicians, and then sat for boards and oral boards to become licensed.

Q. When were you licensed as a clinical social worker?

A. In 1994.

Q. And where was your practice when you first began your licensed stage of practice?

A. I still worked in San Jose for Eastfield Ming Quong, a large family therapy agency.

Q. Did you then become a professional practicing at the Palo Alto Medical Foundation?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. When did you begin your professional work there?

A. I began my professional work there, I think, around 1995 or '96. I'm sorry that I didn't bring my CV with me to review that.

Q. What was the nature of your patient population, if you will? Who were the people that you were providing your services for at Palo Alto Medical Foundation?

A. It was the psychiatry department of a large medical clinic. And so I feel like I was almost, like, a general practitioner of psychiatry. Although I -- out of the clinic stuff, I worked more with children and adolescents and families.

Q. Was that a particular interest of yours?
A. Yes. Specialty area of practice.
Q. And what was it about that area of practice with children and families that you found most interesting?
A. So many things. Teenagers are interesting and compelling and fun. And families, family work is -- I think, can have an impact over the long-term for children and families. And you can impact many people in one form of treatment versus taking individuals out.
Q. Did you provide therapy and counseling services to Candace Conti?
A. Yes, I did.
Q. And we have looked at some records that we have marked as an exhibit to your earlier deposition.
You have looked at those records?
A. Yes, I have.
Q. And are those records that you prepared during the time that you were counseling Candace?
A. Yes, I did.
Q. And were the records each individually prepared on or about the date that the visits occurred?
A. Yes.
Q. And when you left Palo Alto Medical Foundation, did you bring the records with you?

A. No. I did not. They were the property of the clinic.

Q. So there was a period of some many years until you had seen the records again?

A. Many years.

Q. Do you remember Candace Conti?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. And do you remember her outside of some of the things that are reported in your records? In other words, do you remember things about her that may not even be in your records?

A. Yeah. Probably, just fondness, memories, her bouncing into the clinic. Her dog she brought into the clinic. Things like that. Not necessarily some other piece of clinical information.

Q. Do you remember her appearance?

A. I do. I remember she had really cute freckles and red wavy, curly hair. And she would often come into my office with a big smile on her face.

Q. The records that we have looked at show that you first saw her on August 12, 1996; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And then you last saw her on April 1st of 1998; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And you saw her approximately 30 times; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. When you first saw her in August of 1996, what was your approach? In other words, how do you begin counseling a patient such as Candace?

A. I would have Candace and her parents come into a session. I would try to bring in all members of the family. I don't think her mother was present for that first session. And I don't recall why.

But I start by asking people to tell me why they are there, the presenting problem. And we talk about that a little bit. I ask, usually in families and with children, ask them to tell me something about themselves, just what they like to do or are interested in.

I then would try to set them at ease about being in a therapy situation, if they never have been before. I would often explain to younger children that I'm, sort of, like a coach, but a coach for feelings, or a doctor about feelings. But I don't give shots and things like that.

And I would explain confidentiality, that in our sessions what we would talk about is confidential between us unless there -- I would explain I was an mandated reporter. If I learned anything about any abuse in the past or the present, I would have to report that. That would be a limitation to our confidentiality.

And then I also explain to kids I also have to use my clinical judgment, and if something is going on with them that I'm very concerned about that I feel their parents need to know, then I would have to do that. And I would tell them about that and help them with that so they have that understanding of the parameters of therapy, so we can work from a position of trust.

Q. You use the phrase "mandated reporter." What does that mean?

A. A mandated court reporter is -- I'm sorry. I'm getting distracted. Because I don't know if I am supposed to look at the camera or look at you. Does it matter? Okay.

A mandated reporter is someone who, like myself who works with children, who must, if they have a reasonable suspicion of child abuse, being neglect, emotional abuse, physical abuse or sexual abuse, they must report that to Child Protective Services, which is the Social Services Agency. And then Child Protective Services would initiate an investigation. And from there many things can happen.

Q. Did you tell Candace Conti, in your first visit, that you were a mandated reporter?

A. Yes. I would have explained to Candace Conti and her father, yes.

Q. And did you explain what that meant to Candace?

A. Yes.

Q. Why did you tell, in this case, a 10-year-old patient, that you were a mandated reporter and what that means?

A. I tell all of my clients -- children -- that I am a mandated reporter, because I want them to understand that our work together is confidential and important in terms of our developing a relationship, that if they are being harmed in a way, those ways that are spelled out in the law, that I must protect them. And that would mean telling somebody.

And it is very important for children to know that because, when they do disclose abuse, it creates a huge disruption in their lives. And they might feel violated by their therapist, whom, if they understood the therapist would never tell anything outside of the session, that would be a huge violation of trust. Because once that is reported to the agencies, it is a huge, profound disruption in their lives.

Q. Was it your practice back in this time frame in '96 to let the child make the determination as to whether or not they would disclose to you information that you would be mandated to report?

A. Of course, I couldn't report on something I didn't have knowledge of. So I just let them know the parameters of that. And there are many children who would disclose abuse because they were ready to take it on, so to speak, take on the ramifications of that.

And some have us choose not to disclose because they were not ready to take on the ramifications of disclosing abuse.

Q. Based on your education and training and experience, what are some of the reasons that children will not disclose to a mandated reported counselor such as yourself a history of sexual abuse?

A. Because it is embarrassing. Because they feel like it is their fault. Because they are very concerned about what is going to happen to them if they disclose that abuse either from the perpetrator themselves, from their parents, their church, their community, their school.

Due to the media, children know, they understand that Child Protective Services people would show up at your school to interview you or kids understand that it is very disruptive.

Q. What was Candace's presenting problem when you first saw her in August of 1996?

A. That her parents were going through a very tumultuous divorce, and that she was witnessing a lot of discord between her parents, fighting and what I called shifting alliances in the notes.

Sometimes her parents would be, as she used to say, lovey-dovey and seem like everything is fine, and 20 minutes later they were screaming and yelling and carrying on and saying they couldn't stand each other and seeking out Candace for emotional support.

Q. Did you develop a plan of how you helped or hoped to help, at least, Candace?

A. My primary goal was to demonstrate to Candace that, by my actions, that I would be a consistent adult, that I would do what I said I would do, that I would be very interested in her emotional state. I didn't want her to be interested in my emotional state, which would show her a difference between how I believe an adult should take care of a child versus how her parents' inability to do that for her.

I thought I wanted to show, through my actions, my clinical actions, to role model to Candace ways that I would set limits and boundaries with her parents when they would try to draw her in for emotional support for their adult needs.

Q. In your notes -- which you are free to look at as we go along here -- on August 12, 1996, in your first meeting, you made a summary of what you found to be Candace's mental status at the time.

A. Uh-huh.

Q. And what observations of Candace's mental status did you have in that very first visit?

A. That -- I'm sorry. Could you --

Q. Yeah. Can you tell us what your observations were of Candace Conti that you recorded on August of 1996?

A. Okay. That, as I just said, she was oriented, as we call it. She knew the time of day; she didn't have any psychotic behaviors; she knew the time of day; she knew who she was; she knew why she was there; she was able to communicate with me.

Her emotional responses, when I was asking her questions, seemed appropriate to what we were talking about. Sometimes if somebody is very disturbed, they won't have -- they will laugh at a sad thing or something like that. None of that was off for her. I assessed her for whether she was at risk for suicide, as we do always with a new intake with a new client.

Q. Was she?

A. No. And she denied feeling that way. She did disclose that she is sad more often than not, as we put it, indicating depression and particularly she wished her parents would stay together and they would stop fighting. That was deeply painful for her. That was clear.

Q. You mentioned, in your note, a phrase of "hypervigilance" about how others in the room are feeling?

A. Yes.

Q. What were you describing?

A. I was describing that if I, for instance, asked a question of Candace -- and I observe this in children that are very conscious of how their parents are doing, rather than just answering a question, they might look to a parent to see how their parent is reacting to what they have to say.

And if they see their parent is sad or mad, they might change what they have to say to protect the parents' emotional state.

And so I noticed in that session that she was watching me. She was watching her father, and really paying attention to the others in the room versus freely just answering questions about things, or answering my questions.

Q. What does that tell you about your patient when they behave in that fashion?

A. It indicates that they have been in a caretaker role, that they have learned in their families that they need to take care of others, take care of parents' feelings, most often, and watch all the time -- they won't be safe emotionally unless they can keep the parents safe. Therefore, they better not disrupt the parent, which is, of course, not the way it is supposed to be in a parent/child relationship.

Q. Did you feel that Candace had adopted a role, if you will, of caretaker to the parents?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Why did you feel that way?

A. I gathered that from her hypervigilance. And I believe that both her parents were able to state that they thought she was in the middle of their arguing. They probably would have pointed the finger at the other parent to say, "She has to take care of my spouse when my spouse is upset." And that is often the case with acrimonious divorces.

But I believe that that was one of the reasons -- I wrote "Parents are very concerned that Candace is involved in their struggles and their frequent fighting."

Q. Over the year-and-a-half that she was your patient, did you obtain a more complete view of the home life that Candace had experienced?

A. Yes.

Q. And what did you learn?

A. I learned that it was very chaotic, that she could not count on parents to be able to follow through on plans they had for her.

I learned that it was a very unpredictable environment in which she lived. I experienced -- I mean, there were a multitude of emotional crises, if you will, particularly related to her mother.

But father was unable to follow through on a lot of things I think he wished to be able to follow through on, but was unable to do that.

Q. In your September 5, 1996 note, you mention, towards the bottom of the note:

> "Therapist could work with Candace on being perhaps a little bit discerning about relationships and trusting others, as Candace is likely to have developed a somewhat skewed view of trust and nurturing. When someone is offering nurturing and positive attention, a person will drive it out wholeheartedly because it will go away very soon."

Do you see that sentence?

A. I just found the page. Yes.

Q. What were you recording in that note?

A. I was noting my clinical impression that Candace would be extremely vulnerable to victimization by other people, manipulation by other people, because she was victimized and manipulated by her parents' emotional struggles. And I was very concerned about that.

Q. Did you learn that Candace's mother had been, by history, a victim of some form of abuse?

A. Yes.

Q. And how did that come to your knowledge?

A. I have to go -- my memory -- it is possible it probably was discussed at a treatment team meeting. But I think Candace was aware of that because it was a source of pain and struggle for the family.

Q. In the course of your professional relationship, did you learn the role that the religious membership in the Jehovah's Witnesses played in Candace's life?

A. Yes. It came up quite a bit. And certainly I have it noted toward the end of treatment that she was really struggling with her involvement. But my sense is there was a large time commitment involved in it. And it is not noted in there, but I have memory of sessions of, sort of, negotiating -- I don't know -- maybe their regular Tuesday night meeting or something where Candace would rather see her friends or do her homework or whatever.

And then I think the father had to spend a lot of time there and was also working very hard because he was the only income earner in the family and consequently didn't have much time for Candace and that was difficult for her.

Q. Did the relationship that Candace had with her father change at all over the time period that you provided professional counseling with this thing?

A. Yes. At the beginning he was trying very hard to be attentive to her and meet her needs. But various things would come along and he would get preoccupied with those. Sometimes it was his work. I think it was commitments to the church as well.

And then toward the end of treatment, he got involved with a woman from the church and her children. And I believe that woman had a pretty chaotic life. And Candace was troubled by that because she felt like she needed his help.

Q. Over the course of this time that she was your patient, would Candace grow more distant from her father?

A. Yes. And that would fluctuate. The alliances would fluctuate quite a bit. And I think as Candace was struggling with some of the rules that dad had, related to church and church practices, whatnot, celebrating birthdays and not getting dressed up for Halloween and Christmas celebrations, et cetera, Candace's mother would allow her to have -- participate in those things that all her friends were participating in.

And so I think that would have pulled her toward her mother, yet her mother's life was so chaotic that Candace would get very offended about it, and then her mother would have some emotional event, and Candace would need her father or somebody else.

Q. Did her relationship with her mother change over the course of time that you treated your patient?

A. Yes, it fluctuated a great deal. I think in the beginning, Candace was extraordinarily worried about her mother and her mother's safety.

I think she would then be angry with her, and angry with her mother about involvement with a boyfriend by the name of Steve that is mentioned quite a bit in there.

And then her mother started to abuse benzodiazepines -- tranquilizers -- and that created disruption. And then, when she couldn't get any more of that, she started drinking a lot. And she moved frequently, and really didn't have a stable income. So, yes, it was ever changing.

Q. If you could turn to your note of March 3, 1997.

A. Uh-huh.

Q. Did Candace have a problem setting boundaries in her relationship with her mother?

A. Yes.

Q. And what did you mean by that?

A. Meaning that if children are -- children are supposed to be the -- most of the emotional energy is supposed to be directed toward the child, and the child -- meeting their developmental needs, that the child's a forming human being, and there's lots of tasks they have to do out in the world to grow to be a healthy adult. And the bulk of the emotional energy in a family is to go towards that job of raising those children.

In Candace's case, her mother was extremely limited emotionally and really thought of Candace a lot more like a peer than she did as a mother.

And so -- I have distracted myself from the question.

Q. Well, let me jut ask you: Did you offer some suggestions in your March visit to Candace about how to set boundaries?

A. Yes. And so I would reiterate that -- what I was just saying, and got myself distracted -- but that I was trying to teach Candace that her mom's job, if her mom was not so emotionally limited and damaged, herself, would have been to attend to Candace's needs, not Candace to take care of her.

And so I was trying to help Candace understand, when she got that terrible feeling in her stomach or she felt scared, or her heart was racing or something, that she needed to -- that that was a message to her that she was really uncomfortable with how things were going, and she needed to settle in with her mom, "No, I won't meet this boyfriend."

Or I know she was scared about going to Los Angeles with her mom --

I don't know the substance, but -- and getting stuck down there, and her mom would say she was going to take her there, and then leave her and go see a boyfriend or that sort of thing, that Candace needed to say, "No, mom, that's not okay." Or "I need you here."

Or "I'm scared." Or "Please cake care of me." That sort of thing.

Q. In your note you record that you gave Candace suggestions, many suggestions --

A. Uh-huh.

Q. -- but Candace states that all of them seemed too threatening. What were you trying to record in that statement?

A. To record that the nature of the relationship between Candace and her mother, it was to her feeling of her mom being attached to her, and providing her support and strength and structure and safety was so tenuous, so limited, that if she made her mother angry or didn't do what her mother asked that her mother would stop loving her, essentially. And, for a child, there is no safety in that once that happens.

Q. Did Candace have a relationship with the paternal -- her father's parents -- the paternal grandparents?

A. Just the paternal grandmother. The grandfather was deceased, I believe.

Q. Was that an important relationship in her life?

A. Yes. And it became more substantial in terms of coming to therapy anyway. Toward the end of treatment -- I don't recall her grandmother's involvement toward the beginning of treatment. But my sense was that Candace's paternal grandmother was very enmeshed with her father. Enmeshed, I mean, emotionally, not very separate themselves, and that can be problematic in adult relationships.

Q. Is part of your professional work, in particular working with adolescents as a therapist, to interpret what the patients are telling you?

A. Yes.

Q. And do you look for things that they may not be telling you as part of your therapy?

A. Yes.

Q. And why do you do that?

A. Well, I work particularly from what is called a family systems theoretical orientation. So, as I said before, the job of a family as a system, just like a company or something, is to -- each member has certain roles and responsibilities. But the job of that system is for each member of the family to do what they need to do developmentally at a certain age.

And, in particular, parents need to be full adults to take care of children and meet children's needs.

And so I first gather a hypothesis about whether that structure is happening in a family. If the parents are not occupying that, sort of, executive role, if you will, I try to understand why not.

And so, in the first session, I gather family history so I can get a sense of where I think parents are, how they have done that developmental stage their child is in.

And then from there, try to gather information about how the child is doing in terms of what they need to be doing developmentally at a particular age.

Q. You have learned from me recently that Candace now reports that she was sexually abused as a 9 and 10 year old?

A. Yes.

Q. Outside by a non-family member?

A. Yes.

Q. Well, did she ever disclose that to you?

A. She did not disclose that to me.

Q. Do you have any opinion, based on your education and training and your experience with this patient and her family why she would not disclose to you an important piece of history such as history of sexual abuse?

A. Right. Well, first of all, she -- this is kind of therapisty terms, but she felt like a child who had been sexually abused. But I didn't gather anything that led me to a reasonable conclusion except for she felt vulnerable by the things I stated: looking at other people's feelings, judging how the adults are doing, and that she was craving for adults to take care of her and care about her. So I felt that very strongly.

And in terms of her not disclosing it, there was absolutely no safety for her in her family, which made her vulnerable to a predator in the beginning and at any point in her life.

But also it would mean that she would have to decide, if she were to disclose that abuse, as I stated, I tell kids in the beginning what that means, if I have to report it, there was no safety. There was no one to keep her safe and stable going through a process like disclosing, having been molested.

Q. In your professional experience, is this, unfortunately, a common thread among many childhood sexual abuse victims?

A. Yes.

EXAMINATION

BY MR. SCHNACK:

Q. Ms. Fraser, we were introduced earlier. I'm Bob Schnack and I represent The Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York and I have a few questions for you.

In your meetings and your therapy with Candace, you saw her for roughly a year and eight months; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Throughout that time, isn't it true that Candace felt open to comment on the failings of her mother and father throughout her sessions with you?

A. She would not have characterized it as her failings. She felt open to talk to me about the things that were upsetting or scary to her in one way or another.

Q. And what did some of those things include, particularly with her mother?

A. That her mother got involved with a boyfriend shortly after her parents had separated homes, or shortly after we started treatment, and then wanting kids to meet the boyfriend and like the boyfriend and that sort of thing.

Q. Okay. And Candace shared with you about her mother being abused; is that correct?

A. Yes. To the best of my recollection, I think she did, yes.

Q. You reported that on August 12 of '96 and on September 18 of '96, that Candace had shared that?

A. That Candace did. Okay.

Q. Correct.

A. Then that's true.

Q. And also that Candace came to you at one point with a list of twelve items that she had written down to discuss with you.

Do you recall that?

A. What --

Q. November 11th of 1996.

Do you see that?

A. Uh-huh.

Q. On November 11, 1996, Candace came to you with a list of twelve items that she wanted to talk about.

A. Yes.

Q. Is that true?

A. Yes.

Q. And is that indicative that she felt she could be open and honest with you, that she would write those things down?

A. Can you say more about open and honest?

Q. Well, you testified earlier this morning that you believed that Candace was open and honest with you?

A. To the best of her ability, yes.

Q. You didn't put that limitation on it this morning.

A. Okay.

Q. So is it unusual for a child like Candace to come in with a list of items to talk about?

A. No. I might have even suggested it.

Q. Okay. And did she talk to you about her mother having romantic sounds coming from the bedroom and that it bothered her?

A. Yes.

Q. Did she talk to you at another point about her mother being drunk, and her boyfriend Steve kissing and sucking her toes in front of her?

A. Yes, she did.

Q. So she was talking to you about those types of things?

A. Right.

Q. In fact, didn't Candace bring in a used condom she found in the restroom from her boyfriend and mother having sex?

A. Yes. And she did that because she wanted to prove that what she thought happened really happened.

Q. And why did she feel a need to do that?

A. In case her mother might have tried to dissuade her from thinking that's what happened.

Q. And did Candace express some concerns about being with the court mediator at one point that were dealing with the parents' divorce? Do you recall that?

A. Yes. I recall that was a note in there, and, yes, I would have to look at that note.

Q. Yes. Look at the December 16, 1996 note and it said that:

"Candace came in with a list of ten things from a family law mediator." And you called it an "excellent list."

Do you see that?

A. Yes.

Q. And Candace expressed some frustration in that her mother was in denial about the things that her mother had done to her?

A. Uh-huh.

Q. What did you mean that the mother was in denial about the things she had done to Candace?

A. Making her a promise that we will live in a certain house, or we'll live together, and everything will be fine, or even indicating that the parents were going to get back together and they would live happily ever after and that sort of thing.

Q. And earlier Mr. Simons asked you about the parents' relationships and whether they changed through the course of the therapy you had with the parents, in terms of their relationship with Candace. Do you recall that?

A. Yes.

Q. And you said that the relationship fluctuated for both parents; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. When you used the word "fluctuate," what did you mean?

A. I'm talking about in terms of them not being able to offer her much emotional sustenance, and that fluctuated. I think her perception might have been, "Hey, Mom said we're gonna move here and it's all going to be great, so we are not going to have birthday parties or whatever." And then the next day mom is not there. She's with the boyfriend. Or dad said he was going to have time to do things, and then he can't. In terms of their ability to consistently provide emotional sustenance.

Q. Okay.

A. And that fluctuated all the time.

Q. And let's go back to the court mediator. Then, after she met with the court mediator, is it true that she found it to be a positive result --

A. Yes.

Q. -- because the court mediator had listened to her?

A. Yes.

Q. And that she had asserted what she wanted to say, and the court mediator listened to her; is that correct?

A. I believe so, yes.

Q. And so that's a situation where Candace wasn't afraid to say what she thought. Is that fair?

A. No. But we had worked on it in the context of therapy, and I helped prepare her, as I do for children in that situation, about what they are up for, what they can expect for the court mediator when they are going through sorting out child custody.

Q. Okay. And then on the December 18, 1996 note, that's where you followed up on Candace's meeting with the court mediator?

A. Uh-huh.

Q. And you wrote there that Candace thought she was able to go through her list and her list of items and felt that the mediator was listening to her and was honest in stating at this point in time, et cetera.

So that was a positive interaction for Candace; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Now Candace talked to you a lot about her peers; is that true?

A. Uh-huh. As all kids do.

Q. And by my count, there were at least eight or nine different sessions where she talked about her peers, her boyfriends, those types of things?

A. Uh-huh.

Q. Now, you wrote early on that she seemed to have a wide network of peers. Do you recall that?

A. Uh-huh.

Q. She was developing a network of peers, even on September 12th of '96?

Do you see the very last sentence on that note?

A. Uh-huh.

Q. The positive balance to her mother's relationship, essentially, is that Candace is developing a fairly large network of peers and is feeling very good about those connections and is feeling very cared about.

Do you see that?

A. Uh-huh.

Q. That was true at that time; is that correct?

A. Yeah. In the context of a sixth grade child. So in her classroom she is talking with kids, she was wanting to walk home with them, do things like that.

She wasn't, like, I don't know -- meeting kids outside of that setting anyway.

Q. Okay. But those were her peers?

A. Yes.

Q. Weren't those her peers?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. If you are in sixth grade, your peers aren't people you meet outside. Your peers are in school. Is that true?

A. Well, it could be at Girl Scouts, it could be all different kinds of places.

Q. Okay.

A. So I'm just saying that's my phraseology for meaning that she was talking about being really social at that point.

Q. And on another note, you wrote that she was not isolating herself, that she was talking with her grandmother, with you, with her friends. That's on the October 3, 1996?

A. Right. And that's in the context of evaluating depression, not necessarily like you might say in a day-to-day way. But that she, rather than just staying holed up in her room, she was out there and talking more. That doesn't mean she wasn't depressed anymore, but she --

Q. But she had peer-to-peer interactions?

A. Yes.

Q. Correct? That are consistent with what you would expect from a sixth grader?

A. Yes. Except shifting alliances, friends with one, friends with others. Kind of shifting relationships.

Q. Go ahead.

A. Not necessarily -- my recollection is not that she had a set bunch of good friends that she had a long and deep relationship with. I think she was pursuing what felt good, sort of, in the moment.

Q. And where do you get that from? Because that's not referenced anywhere in your clinical notes.

A. I get that from my memory. I get that from, you know, I think maybe even from talking about, you know, I said at the bottom of another note, I want to help her declare boundaries and be discerning about who she is friendly with or something along those lines we talked about earlier. It is in one of these notes.

Q. Now, with respect to her father, did you get the impression that he was very protective of her dating and going out with boys?

A. He -- I wouldn't characterize it as very protective. They struggled over negotiating those boundaries and, you know, he wasn't rigid -- I don't remember him setting big punishments or something that they would talk about.

Q. Did Neal Conti ever tell you that, because of what his wife Kathy had been through as a child, that he was very protective of Candace as a child?

A. I don't remember that phrase directly. Although, if I noted it, he said it to me. I don't remember that in particular, but I may have noted that again when I did the treatment.

Q. Okay. Let's turn to the mother's boyfriend. And was Candace critical of her mother's boyfriend a lot?

A. Yes.

Q. And was she open and honest with you about that?

A. She told me her feelings about that.

Q. And she told you that quite a bit, did she not?

A. Uh-huh. She felt, I think, disloyal to her father by being connected to the mother's boyfriend too.

Q. And was Candace very direct with you about what bothered her with respect to the boyfriend?

A. I think she would tell me about different incidences that occurred usually, probably closer in time to the timing of sessions because I think a lot went on in her life between sessions. So oftentimes she would come in with what was closest in that time frame.

Q. And did she tell you about the time that she and a friend went camping with her mother and Steve and her mothers exhibitionism?

A. Yes.

Q. And what did she tell you in that regard?

A. That it was embarrassing. I mean I'd have to look at my notes to give you direct quotes, but it was embarrassing, and she didn't like her mother's behavior, and it was uncomfortable.

Q. And, indeed, didn't her mother walk around naked in the campground?

A. She said that, yes.

Q. And did her mother ride horses topless as well in front of her friends?

A. Or rode a horse. I don't know. I would have to go look at the note. But, yes, I remember her saying that, and I knew that that ...

Q. And you remember that Candace told you about Steve and her mother having sex in a tent where it was obvious to Candace and her friend what was going on and that embarrassed her as well in front of the friend?

A. What note are we talking about?

Q. Let me find it. It was a camping trip. Let me find it here.

The date is 7-30-97. In the middle of that first page it says "They were camping at Kings Canyon."

A. "She always runs around naked" I put in quotations.

So Kathy would go skinny-dipping and she rode a horse in public with her top off. And then at home Kathy walked around naked in front of Candace's friend and sort of exhibitionism she was saying.

Q. Did you consider that something that needed to be reported to CPS?

I'm just curious with where that falls.

A. No.

Q. Why not?

A. Because I would characterize it as inappropriate, not necessarily abuse.

Q. Okay. And as a mandated reporter, where does that line fall, sexually inappropriate, but abuse?

A. It is on a very individual basis.

Q. Okay. And does it --

A. It requires clinical judgment.

Q. Okay. Candace talked with you a lot about her feelings about Jehovah's Witnesses; is that correct?

A. Toward the end, yes.

Q. And she was quite open about her struggles with that?

A. Her struggles. Yes. I think I'm having a hard time with you saying "open" all the time like that, because that's not the term that I would use necessarily.

Q. What term would you use? Just so we are on the same page.

A. Just, I think, say what she said -- I think the reason I'm reacting, is when you say "open," I think people might use that term in a whole lot of different ways.

So when you say she stated this at this time, I guess I think it is like you are implying that it is all exclusive about everything, and I think it is specific to an individual incident.

So if you say "She was open and honest with you about her feelings about her mother," what I'm saying is in specific situations, she was telling me what she experienced. But her overall relationship with her mother -- she had great conflicts with her mother. She loved her and she didn't want to disparage her. She wanted her mother to be an okay person. But at the same time she was deeply troubled when these kinds of events would occur.

Q. Okay. How does that relate to being open or not?

A. Well, I guess because my understanding is "open" would mean nothing is ever held back.

Q. So with respect to Jehovah's Witnesses, she told you about the struggles she had with the church. Is that correct?

A. It was coming up related to -- especially wanting to do things with peers, and, you know -- I don't think it is noted in here.

My memory tells me. I didn't write it down. But we talked a lot about Halloween. Because in sixth grade they were having a Halloween party and she wanted to dress up, and that wasn't sanctioned by the church.

And so I remember it coming up then. It would come up with regard to it started with, you know, birthday party celebrations, and I think Christmas also.

Q. Okay. So that was the conflict between her mother's beliefs and her father's beliefs, and that's where she had to try to develop her own belief system. Is that you were trying to coach her on?

A. I wasn't coaching her on that, no. I was just talking to her about how to speak to her parents. It would not be appropriate for me to coach her on her religion.

Q. Okay. But you did discuss with her, her struggles with the religion?

A. Yes. And we use that as an opportunity for her to articulate her needs and concerns to both of her parents in a reasonable way and for them to try and have dialogue about it.

Q. And you encouraged her to explore and question her family's beliefs and values, particularly about religion?

A. As all adolescents do.

Q. Okay.

A. In my opinion.

Q. Okay. And, again, at the end of the note on May 12, '97, it sounds like Kathy Conti had suggested to you that maybe Neal had some feelings for Candace that were inappropriate.

Do you recall that?

A. Yes.

Q. And you had asked Candace very directly --

A. Yes.

Q. -- whether her father kissed her, or whether there was anything inappropriate or uncomfortable?

A. Yes.

Q. And how did Candace respond to that?

A. And she said, "I feel safe around my dad."

Q. And she, indeed, said very strongly that he is appropriate with her?

A. Correct.

Q. And you didn't have any reason to disbelieve that?

A. No. I would have reported it if I did.

Q. Oh, if you had disbelieved her?

A. Yes.

Q. Even if her denial --

A. If I had a reasonable suspicion, I would have reported it.

Q. And you didn't have any suspicion?

A. I didn't.

Q. So that's one instance where you brought up the question of either physical or sexual inappropriateness --

A. Uh-huh.

Q. -- with Candace. Correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you bring it up at any other time during your sessions with her?

A. Not that I'm recalling without reading through line-by-line. But I did discuss with you that my clinical impression is she was -- from the start -- was that she would be somebody who was vulnerable.

Q. Did you ask her, in that first intake session, whether she had been a victim of sexual abuse?

A. I didn't note it. I often did do that as practice, but I didn't know whether I did or not. And when I meet people, I have to decide whether that's clinically appropriate to do at that time or not.

Q. What? Just to even ask that question?

A. Yes.

Q. Why is that?

A. Because it can be frightening to people or disruptive or scare them away from therapy or, perhaps the entire session has been spent in another area around, and so we ultimately get to that.

Q. At any point after that, though, did you ever ask her whether she had been sexually abused by anyone?

A. I didn't know that. So I don't know. It would certainly have been my style and my method of practice, if I felt that she was coming to me with something that I could ask her about, I would have.

Q. And you don't remember, one way or the other, whether you did?

A. No. I didn't note that anyway.

Q. You noted in a July 30th '97 note that you suggested that Candace keep a journal.

Do you recall that?

A. Uh-huh.

Q. Do you know if she ever kept a journal?

A. I don't. I know that we talked about she felt like if she were to try and keep one, that her mother would invade her space.

Q. And you gave her some suggestions?

A. Like, hide it. Right.

Q. But it was never mentioned again?

A. No. It wasn't. And once in a while you will get a child client who is a writer and they will like to do that, and some kids or adults are not.

Q. And in the same July 30th, 1997 note, that's when she talked with you about her mother's walking around naked in the house and riding a horse topless and that.

A. Uh-huh.

Q. And the note suggested that you also talked with Candace about how her mother's sex abuse had manifested itself.

A. Uh-huh.

Q. What discussions did you have with Candace at that point?

A. It was 14 years ago. But I don't know exactly how I phrased it beyond that, except for, in my knowledge of it, what I would have described is that, when people have been sexually abused, they sometimes act out inappropriately, don't have appropriate boundaries, that sort of thing, as one of the ways that sexual abuse can manifest itself.

Q. And how did Candace react to that discussion? Do you recall?

A. I don't think that there was a huge reaction or I probably would have noted it. And not that -- I mean, I don't know. I don't have any recollection of her noting it. I mean, her stating anything. She didn't cry. She didn't have a dissociative state. She didn't giggle.

But she took in that information, but a lot had gone on for her that week. So, as you can see, a lot had gone on with her mother and she was pretty distraught anyway, so...

Q. Now, let's go back, again, to another incident with her mother, the November 3, 1997 note, and you write, about a quarter of the way down the page, Candace's mother consumed a bottle of wine by herself. That was upsetting to Candace. And then, when Candace got home, she found her mom's boyfriend, Steve, in the living room, where her mother was drunk, sucking on her mother's toes and kissing them. And Candace told Steve to go away.

Again, it seems like Candace was pretty assertive with respect to talking with you about things like that. Is that true? Or how would you characterize it?

A. Talking with me about "things like that"?

Q. Would you consider that sexual deviance, for example, what Steve and Candace's mother were doing in front of her?

A. Well, it is inappropriate to do that in front of a child.

Q. Okay. And how did that come up?

A. Well, this was another instance where one of the biggest things that Candace and I would have focused on then is that Candace felt like she had to protect her mother there, that he was taking advantage of an inebriated woman, and she was a young child having to tell him to stop.

Q. So she was stepping into the parental role again?

A. Again.

Q. Okay. And then --

A. Just because her mother was so limited. Not because she was so super mature as a child. It's a pseudo maturity. Sort of -- it is not with a strong emotional scaffolding. It is much more of a survival kind of maturity, "You are hurting my mother right now."

And that is different from somebody who is mature and wise in the way of the world and can be an adult.

(Whereupon, the video recording was stopped)

MS. KRAETSCH: That's not quite the end, your Honor.

THE COURT: Okay.

(Discussion off the record)

(Whereupon, the video recording was played)

BY MR. SCHNACK:

Q. You mentioned this morning, when we talked to you about having to terminate the relationship, you had to terminate it around April 1, 1998 because you were going into a private practice?

A. Right.

Q. And did Candace express some concerns about terminating that relationship?

A. Yes.

Q. What did she tell you in that regard?

A. She was sad. She felt like I was somebody that knew a lot about her family history and all the chaos of it and -- what else did she say?

Q. Well, let's turn to March 23 of '98. I think that's the second to last session.

Do you have that one in front of you?

A. Yes.

Q. And the third full paragraph down, the second sentence, it says: "Talk about the importance of our relationship and the honesty that we've had with each other."

A. Uh-huh.

Q. Was that your words or was that her words?

A. My words.

Q. Your words. And so did you mean that when you wrote it down?

A. Did I mean it?

Q. Yeah. Is that true about the honesty that you and Candace had had with each other?

A. Yes. But I stated that in a clinical sense in that one of the other important goals of treatment was to be authentic with her, that when I was talking with her, if I was saying I was unhappy or concerned or that I truly was feeling that versus some of the manipulations she experienced emotionally in her relationship with both parents.

So it was honest and authentic in terms of what occurred between us in that therapy setting.

Q. Okay. And on the last session on April 1, you wrote that Candace has felt like this has been a safe place for her to get support and help when she is dealing with difficult struggles in her family.

A. Yes.

Q. Is that along the same lines?

A. I said what I was going to do and I did it. And that was really important, because I don't think she experienced that with other adults.

Q. And then what you were going to do with what? Provide a role model for her?

A. Be there when I said I was going to be there. Be available when she called me. Try to teach her parents about attending to Candace's needs instead of having Candace attend to their's. When we set up an appointment time, I was there. That sort of thing.

Q. Okay. And then the last sentence on that April 1st note that references the, I think, the paternal grandmother being a stable force and a very helpful force to Candace in terms of her relationship with her parents.

What did you mean when you wrote that?

A. Well, I don't remember her presence a lot throughout therapy. But I think toward the end, I think Candace's paternal grandmother lived in the same house for many years and, you know, maybe had a routine she observed.

She didn't have a bunch -- I mean, to my recollection -- many different romantic relationships or marriages or whatever, but she had stability.

I don't know that she was emotionally capable of really guiding Candace a lot. My recollection is that there was an emotional enmeshment between the grandmother and Neal, the father, and that they hadn't separated into more separate adult relationships.

Q. Well, that's not referenced in any of your clinical notes. So what is that based on?

A. Maybe that's just my recollection, when I look over my notes and remember my treatment with her. And I think that's why I didn't ask the grandmother to come in and have a bigger role in this. She just -- I don't think she was a really strong force, unfortunately.

Q. But, nevertheless, you thought she was a stabilizing force for her?

A. Stable in that she was in the same house.

Q. And Candace was staying there during the week so she could attend school?

A. Right. And was supposed to help her with homework. And that was everybody's concern, even though the poor kid didn't have much psychic energy to do her homework.

Q. Just to quickly summarize, the things that Candace talked to you about included her mother's alcohol abuse; is that correct?

A. Pardon me? Could you say it again for me?

Q. Certainly. Just to summarize the things that Candace talked to you about over this year-and-a-half plus included her mother's alcohol abuse at times?

A. That came very much at the end. That was not a focus of treatment.

Q. But she did talk to you about it?

A. Yes.

Q. And she also talked to you about her mother's exhibitionist behavior?

A. On that occasion. And on that occasion she told me there were other times when her mother would walk around. That was not a focus of treatment. That came out during --

Q. Okay. I'm not asking you about focuses of treatment. I'm asking you about what Candace opened up and talked to you about.

A. On that one session at that one time.

Q. Okay. Did she also talk to you about her mother having been sexually abused? That came up in a session. Correct?

A. Yes.

Q. She talked about -- Candace talked about her own religious struggles with you?

A. At the end of treatment.

Q. Correct. But in several different sessions.

A. Uh-huh.

Q. She talked about her mother's mental illness in several sessions. Do you recall that?

A. She did not understand it. I think that was a concern of mine. She didn't understand it as her mother's mental illness. And I think I noted that throughout there that Candace wasn't really aware of her mother's diagnosis, and --

Q. But you suggested Candace be told her mother's diagnosis?

A. Right. And I don't think that occurred.

Q. Okay. And then Candace also talked about her mother's boyfriend, Steve, and their sexual behavior together. That was described in a couple of sessions; is that correct?

A. In a couple of sessions, yes.

Q. You asked Candace whether her father had been physically inappropriate with her; is that correct?

A. When her mother brought that up as a concern.

Q. Correct. But you discussed that with Candace.

A. I asked her about that, yes.

Q. But you still don't find it surprising that Candace would not have told you about her own sexual abuse?

A. I absolutely do not find it surprising. There was no safety for this child. Her parents -- we just discussed so many different things that occurred to this child. She couldn't have longer than 20 minutes of safety with a parent. There was no way she could disrupt their -- I mean, there wasn't any safety for her. It would have been so disruptive to her.

She was still rescuing both parents. What would they say if she disclosed that this had happened? How could she stay connected to her father? Would her mother say, "Well, my abuse is worse than yours"?

I mean, there was a myriad of possibilities. This kid had no safety.

Q. And by having no safety in her home, then her home life was truly troubled, probably from the start; is that a fair statement?

A. Yes.

Q. I mean, from birth forward?

A. I didn't treat her from birth forward.

Q. But based on what she told you, was there any doubt in your mind that this was going on for years?

A. That it had been chaotic in her home?

Q. Chaotic in her home for years.

A. Yes, I think so.

Q. And, again, one of those very things that I just listed, her mother's alcohol abuse, and --

A. But, again, you are emphasizing that as the primary area of treatment. I believe her mother -- I don't know that that was her mother's primary issue. And that is important because that was one way her mother was probably handling her own post-traumatic stress or whatever from her childhood. That was not, I think, the first thing that created her mother's difficulty.

Q. Well, why don't you list the troubled things in Candace's life as of the time you treated with her, then.

A. Can you be more specific?

Q. Well, you just -- I tried to go through these things with you, and you agree that Candace has told you about her mother's --

A. Right. But what I'm objecting to is that it sounds like -- and perhaps this is a difficulty in the way we discuss things in psychology and the way things are discussed in the legal field -- but the focus of treatment and the focus of Candace's struggles were not as a result of her mother's drug abuse and alcoholism.

I believe that that was, in her mother's case, more of symptom of the way her mother tried to manage the pain she carried around with her all the time from the trauma she had had in her childhood.

She was not a very evolved or psychologically well-developed human being, nor was Candace's father. They were developmentally like three children, in some respects, living together.

Q. And what kind of effect does that have on a child?

A. It makes it really hard for them to gather a sense of self, to have a core sense of strength. Candace sticks in my memory because she was very resilient. I mean, maybe her temperament and her neurobiology, and I think she was an intelligent kid, helped her to couple together the best she could under the circumstances.

MR. SCHNACK: I don't have any other questions at this point.

(Whereupon, the video recording was stopped)

THE COURT: All right. Members of the jury, thank you very much for your time this week in this matter.

I will look forward to seeing each of you first thing Monday morning by 8:30. I can assure each of you, we continue to make progress time-wise, and there are all sorts of good reasons for it.

But I will continue to assess the day-to-day circumstances. I will inform you on a day-to-day circumstance and I will look forward to seeing each of you Monday morning. Thank you, again, for your time.

(Proceedings were adjourned at 3:30 p.m.)

REPORTER'S CERTIFICATE

I, KATHRYN LLOYD, CSR No. 5955, Certified Shorthand Reporter, certify:

That the foregoing proceedings were taken before me at the time and place therein set forth, at which time the witnesses were put under oath by the court clerk;

That the testimony of the witnesses, the questions propounded, and all objections and statements made at the time of the examination were recorded stenographically by me and were thereafter transcribed;

That the foregoing is a true and correct transcript of my shorthand notes so taken.

I further certify that I am not a relative or employee of any attorney of the parties, nor financially interested in the action.

I declare under penalty of perjury under the laws of California that the foregoing is true and correct.

PROCEEDINGS

THE COURT: Back on the record in the matter of Candace Conti versus Watchtower Bible and Tract Society, New York, Inc., et al. Counsel are present. We are coming back from the weekend. But during the course of the same, counsel was kind enough to file a number of briefs and requests.

Today, in a moment, we are going to have Ms. Martinez as a witness. I requested that Mr. Simons to discuss with her fully the pretrial motions in limine that I made in this case to date.

Have you had the opportunity to do that yet, Mr. Simons?

MR. SIMONS: Yes, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Okay. And certainly I have indicated to counsel off the record the questions related to what she observed involving plaintiff and Mr. Kendrick during congregation activities as well within the realm of relative and relevant information.

Duty has been an ongoing briefed issue. We are going to be dealing with, I guess, Dr. Salter as our -- as your second witness?

MR. SIMONS: Third actually, but yes, this morning.

THE COURT: All right. And just reminding counsel, going back to a number of orders I made, one of which was disfellowship being a protected activity.

And just inferentially, and by one comment the other day, I presume the good doctor is not going to go into any standard of care vis-a-vis disfellowshipping. Correct?

MR. SIMONS: Correct, your Honor.

Counsel and I had a brief discussion about that. And I absolutely agree with that, and she is on board with that.

What many organizations, both secular and religious did with a known offenders was to exclude them.

Part of her opinion is that if you choose not to exclude a known offender, then you have to warn people about that offender's propensity.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. SIMONS: And so by exclusion or banning, we are not talking about disfellowshipping, and it does apply to other organizations other than religious ones. So that would be my offer, if you will, as to how to address that subject.

And that was the context that she talked about disfellowshipping is in either exclude them or doing something else.

THE COURT: Mr. Schnack.

MR. SCHNACK: Your Honor, that gets right into the church discipline issue. He was saying if you don't disfellowship, if you don't exclude, then we have other options. And we are right in the heart of the church discipline, that is that you get into Ecclesiastical extensions doctrine, according to everything we briefed, and if you go there, you are going to have error right from the start.

THE COURT: All right. Again, that will be an initial brief.

So, Mr. McCabe?

MR. McCABE: Your Honor, Mr. Simons' comment made me think of the Janice Perez case out of the Ninth Circuit, which says that religion has the right to associate or not associate with anyone they choose out of the first amendment. So the banned you are excluding is just another way of saying disfellowship.

THE COURT: Well, you know, it is difficult to separate the wheat from the chaff.

So let's see if we can focus on where this one is going.

The disciplining aspects -- and I already had a discussion on the record with counsel, but certainly disfellowship obviously is a protected activity.

If the doctor is going to talk about excluding to this court, that is going to be off limits. That is different from what the congregation and church, what the church could have done, however, in terms of informing and protecting.

Now in terms of duty, where I'm going on duty is not too far away from the proposed special instruction of the plaintiff. I'm not saying that's going to be exactly how it is going to come out.

But I hinted a couple weeks ago when we started this that shorn of the religious cloak, in the Court's opinion, this is a negligence case.

Now, my duty is -- and I think we all agree, notwithstanding all the briefing and arguments, that it is the Court's duty to determine the legal duty.

Now one of the cases -- I thought they did a nice job, kudos to protect his client, is there is a legal duty, and then there is a duty in fact, and then there is causation. And it is kind of an admixture of circumstances --

And I fully understand the nexus between -- and the difficulties of attempting to ferret out the religious aspects and the duty aspects.

However -- and there is a proposed special instruction, too, based upon Juarez that talks about the volunteers with responsibilities.

This case is kind of, what I will call a tweener, because in the duty context or in the action context, the church disciplined Mr. Kendrick by removing him from ministerial duties. So he is not like Juarez who continued, by allegation -- that was a motion for summary judgment, by the way -- and Juarez said, hey, there is a duty. This is reversible error because the standard is known or should have known.

Now this case is different because the church knew it wasn't about should have known by observing and raising questions and concerns. That they knew that there had been inappropriate conduct here. So where the court is going is: Yes, there is a legal duty to do something.

I think it is. And I'm not saying that the duty -- that it is a strict duty to warn. That instruction that was proposed is for the jury to consider whether that was something reasonable to do, and to consider other ameliorative actions that were taken or could have been taken.

And that's how I'm going to frame duty, is basically within the association aspects of Juarez minus the acts of volunteer.

I'm going to find, basically, a common law duty to do something, including considering warning and taking other steps to educate the congregation so the children in circumstances like this do not find themselves in a position of, well, it is not our responsibility, so what happens happens.

And I don't believe -- in the framework of this case -- I have read all those other cases, and there are many, that I think differ from this particular case.

So just in fairness to counsel, and it is not necessarily the instruction I'm going to absolutely give, but I was playing with it for two hours this weekend, but it will be fairly similar to Special Instruction Number 1 proposed by plaintiff as to duty.

So do I think there is a duty? Yes.

Do I think the jury can consider -- certainly they are not going to consider causation, because that is certainly bandied about on pro and con in terms of evidence -- but it will be from a framework of protecting, slash, informing, slash, educating upon that disclosure.

Now, exactly how it fits A-B-C is going to be something similar to that proposed instruction. I'm not going to, as a matter of legal duty -- understanding very precise, well brought arguments -- I'm not going to determine that there is no legal duty in this case.

MR. SCHNACK: So all testimony from Salter regarding excluding Kendrick is out?

THE COURT: Excluding Kendrick is out.

MR. SIMONS: Okay. I should probably grab a little break before she comes in to tell her.

THE COURT: I told you all at the end the other day, I have been very impressed at the professionalism and understanding.

I think I told you, it's a tough case on judges, jurors and lawyers. So -- but in terms of a duty, I'm going to find there is a duty.

And that, of course -- and I got lobbied left and right as to special relationships, which is an evolving concept, by the way, both under the restatement to and case law.

And I believe there is a relationship such that a duty should be imposed, but I have been very clear in some limitations, particularly -- and look, I have got very good defense lawyers here -- particularly as it relates to punishment and activity by the church in response.

MR. SIMONS: It was to be excluded.

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. SCHNACK: Then one other issue, your Honor.

It appears Mr. Simons is going to have Dr. Salter do all the opinions she expressed in her deposition.

He represented that she will be prepared to give a full deposition. She did that. And I asked her if she had any other opinions with respect to what's going to be her opinion and, number one, she said no. And it sounds like she is going to go beyond that. And I would ask that we exclude that from trial.

MR. SIMONS: The specific testimony that I think counsel is referring to is that she had testified particularly about the documents in the deposition that major religions in the United States have adopted policies of transparency, et cetera, et cetera. And I don't think that is the -- the nature of the objection.

One of the things she will say is that the 1993 Awake Magazine that we have all seen in evidence and heard about is consistent with those policies that the other major religions adopted. So I just don't see that as a different opinion or a newer opinion. I just see that as part of the same thing.

THE COURT: All right. Am I going to hear an objection from the defense on that one?

MR. SCHNACK: That's not how Mr. Simons described it to me earlier. But if she is going to say that they had a policy that informed, I guess she can say it. Yes.

MR. SIMONS: Your Honor, I have indicated that there has been a little yen and yang to this trial. And certainly, if that's what she is going to testify to, I don't hear a defense objection.

MR. SCHNACK: That's correct.

THE COURT: Thank you.

Let's get our folks in here.

(Whereupon, the following proceedings were heard in the presence of jurors)

THE COURT: All right. To our jurors, thank you, as always for your commitment in this matter. And I hope each of you had a nice weekend.

All right. In terms of today, a couple things. We have a number of jury trials on this floor, so today you will have your real jury room, which Hill will get you to, which is right to the left here. But he will orchestrate that. That may change again because we are selecting a jury in the department next door.

Further, this week, Thursday and Friday, and -- I'm going to look you all in the eye when I tell you this -- I really dislike interrupting jury trials because of the imposition on each of you.

However, under the laws of the State of California, we judges have to do a number of hours of judicial education.

Now I, of course, get educated in this courtroom every day. But notwithstanding, saying I have to satisfy an obligation. And seven months ago, because they only offer it twice a year, I signed up for it in Sacramento. Otherwise, I was going to get stuck with going to L A. So, I apologize. I wish I didn't have to say that to you, but this is the only time I can satisfy the rule of law. So Thursday and Friday we will not be here.

We remain clearly on pace, and there are a lot of good reasons for that. Certainly the professionalism on both sides as to everything we told you about timing and submission in the case and the like on circumstances.

So I will keep, every day, alerting you of anything going on, pro or con. So we are really very much on pace to submit this to you certainly no later than June 15.

That being the case, Mr. Simons, you have your next witness?

MR. SIMONS: Yes. Investigator Robert Davila.

ROBERT DAVILA

WAS DULY SWORN TO TELL THE TRUTH BY THE CLERK

AND TESTIFIED AS FOLLOWS:

THE CLERK: Please state your name and spell your first and last name for the record.

THE WITNESS: Robert Davila. D-A-V-I-L-A.

THE CLERK: Spell your first name.

THE WITNESS: Oh. R-O-B-E-R-T.

THE CLERK: Thank you.

DIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. SIMONS:

Q. And Mr. Davila, by whom are you currently employed?

A. I am currently employed by the County of Alameda.

Q. And what is your job?

A. I'm the inspector with the county attorney's office.

Q. And very briefly, what is the general nature of the work that you do?

A. Currently?

Q. Yes.

A. Currently, I'm working in the Workers' Comp area of the DA's office.

Q. Do you investigate fraud and that sort of thing?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. Before working for the Alameda County District Attorney's office, where were you employed?

A. Fremont Police Department.

Q. And was that where you were working back in 1994?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you remember what your assignment was in 1994?

A. I was assigned to the Crimes Against Persons unit as an investigator.

Q. And did that unit at that time include crimes of a sexual nature against children?

A. Yes, it did.

Q. Were you notified by CPS, Child Protective Services, of a possible complaint involving a Jonathan Kendrick?

A. Yes, I was.

Q. And have you had an opportunity to go back and look through your old notes from that case?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was the victim cooperative in your investigation?

A. As I recall, she was.

Q. And part of your investigation involved taking statements?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And is it accurate to say you took tape recorded statements at that time?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Okay. But the tape recordings have not survived the many years, is that --

A. I don't know what the status of them are.

Q. You have your notes that are summaries of the statements.

A. I have a police report, yes.

Q. Do you have a recollection, independent of your notes, of this particular case?

A. I vaguely remember it. It has been quite some time.

Q. And do you have a recollection of having taken a statement from Jonathan Kendrick?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did Mr. Kendrick admit to you in his statement that he had had touching of a sexual nature with his stepdaughter?

A. Yes, he did.

Q. And what specifically did he tell you?

A. He admitted to fondling the breast area of his stepdaughter.

Q. Did he admit to you that he had knowledge that the victim had taken Vicodin?

A. I don't recall that.

Q. If you take a look at your report at Page 3.

I'm sorry. I beg your pardon. It is Page 4.

And see if that refreshes your recollection as to whether Mr. Kendrick did or did not tell you anything about Vicodin.

A. Did you say Page 4?

Q. Yes.

Well, let's see if your Page 4 and mine look the same.

It begins with the March 4th, 1994 11:48 hours.

A. Okay.

Q. Did he or did he not tell you anything about Vicodin?

A. Not in this paragraph. There is nothing to indicate that.

Q. And in his statement to you, did he describe or admit to the same degree of physical contact with the minor victim that was reported to you independently by the victim?

A. As I recall, he kind of minimized what occurred.

Q. Based on the statements that you took, did you make a recommendation to the District Attorney's Office?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. What did you recommend?

A. I took the case over to the District Attorney's Office for review.

Q. And did you make a recommendation as to that?

A. Yeah. I filed a formal complaint.

Q. Do you know who the district attorney was who was assigned to that case?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. Who was that?

A. Reg Saunders.

Q. And do you know what capacity he serves in presently?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. What is that?

A. He is a judge in Alameda County.

Q. Now, in the course of your investigation, after taking these statements and before going to the district attorney with them, did you have any need to contact anyone from the Jehovah's Witnesses congregation?

A. No.

Q. And did you feel you had sufficient information that you could present your case to Mr. Saunders of the District Attorney's Office?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You now work in the District Attorney's Office as an investigator.

Were there investigators in the District Attorney's Office back in the 1994 time frame?

A. Yes.

Q. And if -- based on your experience in the system for all these years, if the district attorney in the case required further information, could he assign a district attorney's investigator to go get it?

A. Yes, they can. Once the complaint is filed, it then becomes their job to do whatever duties or whatever else needs to be done after the fact.

Q. But this was a pretty complete case, just with what you thought you had.

A. I thought it was.

MR. SIMONS: Thank you.

Nothing further.

CROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. SCHNACK:

Q. Officer Davila, you wrote the police report that Mr. Simons showed you; is that correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And I notice on the second page it calls it a confidential report; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And it was confidential why?

A. Well, based on the fact that because the victim was a juvenile at the time, there were laws that protect them from their names being on police reports.

Q. And your police investigation was initiated by a report from the Child Protective Services; is that correct?

A. Yes, sir, it was.

Q. And do you know who reported it to Child Protective Services?

A. I don't recall at this time.

Q. And your police report also mentions that when you conducted the interviews, there was a Child Protective Services case worker with you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And do you recall that?

A. Yes.

Q. So you have some specific memory?

A. Basically. It has been a long time.

Q. Yes.

A. I investigated a lot of cases in that time frame.

Q. But it has been 18 years.

And is there anything in the report that you would say is not accurate, essentially, now, 18 years later?

A. Yes. I didn't see anything that is inaccurate.

Q. Okay. And at the time that you wrote it, you intended it to be accurate?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. So you wrote in the report that the victim -- and her name has been out here, Andrea is what she has been called -- she told you that, quote, she took one Vicodin for her back problem and laid down in her room around 7:00 or 8:00 p.m., close quote.

So is it your testimony that the victim told you that she had taken the Vicodin?

A. Yes.

Q. And she didn't tell you that Mr. Kendrick had given her the Vicodin; is that correct?

A. I don't recall.

Q. But you would have written that in your report if she had told you that Kendrick had given her the Vicodin.

A. It's been a long time. I don't know.

Q. But you intended the report to be accurate when you reported it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You also wrote that Andrea told you that Jonathan Kendrick had admitted the incident to, quote, the elders of the church, close quote.

Do you recall writing that?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. And do you recall her telling you that?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you didn't talk to the elders in the church at all, did you?

A. No, I did not.

Q. And if you had interviewed them, you would have written that in your report, as well?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you ever notify any of the elders or anyone else in the church that Kendrick had been charged with a sex crime?

A. I don't believe so.

Q. Do you know what the results of the charges that were brought against Mr. Kendrick were?

A. No, I do not.

Q. So you didn't take any steps to inform anyone at the church that Mr. Kendrick was a child molester; is that correct?

A. No, I did not.

Q. Do you know if anyone else at the police department did that?

A. I don't know.

Q. And do you know if the Child Protective Services took any steps to notify the congregation or anyone at the church that Kendrick was a child molester?

A. I don't know.

Q. Do you know if the DA's office did that?

A. No. I don't.

Q. You don't know if the probation department did anything in that regard either?

A. No, I do not.

Q. In fact, in the 1993 and 1994 time frame, was there any type of community notification regarding child molesters?

A. I don't know if there was in that time frame. I don't know if it came out after the facts with the Megan's Law and all that.

Q. But nonetheless, you didn't take any steps with regards to community notification at that time; is that correct?

A. No, I did not.

MR. SCHNACK: That's all I have, your Honor.

CROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. McCABE:

Q. Just a couple questions, Officer Davila.

You took this report seven months after the incident?

A. I remember being notified several months after the incident.

Q. So the incident took place sometime in the summer, in July?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And I believe the victim said it took place real close to her birthday on July 16?

A. As I recall, yes.

Q. And the family had continued to live together during the interim?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And do you know what happened though once you referred the case to the District Attorney's Office?

A. I know the case was filed, but as far as what the ultimate outcome was, I do not know.

Q. You were never called to testify in a trial or anything?

A. I don't believe so.

Q. And just prior to the report being made to Child Protective Services and then to your office, was there some kind of altercation at the Kendrick home?

A. I do recall being advised there was some type of altercation that had been reported to the police.

Q. Then this report was made shortly thereafter?

A. Correct.

MR. McCABE: I have nothing further.

Thank you.

THE COURT: May I have counsel up here for a minute.

(Sidebar discussion)

REDIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. SIMONS:

Q. Officer, just two further things.

Number 1, since you were informed by the victim that the elders of the church were already aware of the incident, would there have been any purpose in your contacting them to notify them of it?

A. At that point, I didn't think it would be necessary, based on what I had.

Q. And secondly, we talked about confidentiality of a minor victim.

But once the charges were filed, there was no confidentiality as to the name of Mr. Kendrick, was there?

A. I'm not sure what the reporting processes or the records were in that time period. I don't know.

Q. Charges are filed in court. Correct?

A. Well, they were filed with the DA's office.

Q. Yeah.

And the complaint is filed in the Alameda County Superior Court?

A. Correct.

Q. And that would be People versus Jonathan Kendrick?

A. Correct.

MR. SIMONS: Thank you.

THE COURT: Anything further?

MR. SCHNACK: No, your Honor.

MR. McCABE: No, your Honor.

THE COURT: All right. Just for a minute to the jury.

I'm going to introduce you to the concept of limiting instructions.

At the start of the case, we, counsel, and court indicated Mr. Kendrick is a defendant in this matter. And the concept of limiting instruction is that you are sitting here considering evidence against each and all defendants, including Mr. Kendrick who is not here before us, physically.

At the close, when I give you these instructions, I will give you limiting instructions as to certain evidence that is being offered as to a specific defendant.

So the evidence you are all listening to is not necessarily offered against each and all defendants. And when you deliberate, your deliberations will be subject to the limiting instruction I give you as to which defendants certain evidence has been offered, relative to your consideration.

Does everybody understand the concept that at least certain evidence will go perhaps solely to one defendant? And I will instruct you accordingly which evidence that is for those deliberations as to any liability of questions.

Do we all understand each other on that concept?

JURORS: (Jurors indicate).

THE COURT: Okay, thank you.

MR. SIMONS: May this witness be excused, your Honor?

THE COURT: Everybody agree?

MR. SCHNACK: Yes, your Honor.

MR. McCABE: Yes, your Honor.

THE COURT: All right. Thank you for your time.

MR. SIMONS: Next witness is Carolyn Martinez.

CAROLYN MARTINEZ

WAS DULY SWORN TO TELL THE TRUTH BY THE CLERK

AND TESTIFIED AS FOLLOWS:

THE CLERK: Will you please state your name and spell your first and last name for the record?

THE WITNESS: Carolyn Martinez. My first name, C-A-R-O-L-Y-N. And the last name, Martinez, M-A-R-T-I-N-E-Z.

THE CLERK: Thank you.

DIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. SIMONS:

Q. Good morning, Ms. Martinez.

Where do you live at present?

A. In Carlsbad.

Q. And that's down by San Diego?
A. Yes. North of San Diego County.
Q. Was there a time that you lived up here in Alameda County?
A. Yes.
Q. What is your occupation?
A. I work in accounting in a biotech company.
Q. And when you lived up here in Alameda County, were you employed outside the home?
A. Yes.
Q. What kind of work did you do?
A. Accounting as well.
Q. Were you ever a member of the North Fremont Jehovah's Witnesses?
A. Yes.
Q. When did you first become a member?
A. I believe I was baptized in probably 1985.
Q. Was that into the North Fremont Congregation?
A. It was in the Central Congregation, but then shortly after, a year later, I became a member of the North Congregation.
Q. And were you married at the time?
A. Yes.
Q. And to whom were you married?
A. His name was Paul Inman.

Q. Was he also involved in the North Fremont Congregation?

A. Yes.

Q. And what position, if any, did he serve in?

A. Well, eventually, he became an elder in the congregation.

Q. You had children as well?

A. Yes.

Q. And were they also involved in Jehovah's Witnesses activities?

A. Yes.

Q. In the time period in the mid-1990s, 1993, '04, '05, '06, in that time period were you very active in your congregation?

A. Yes.

Q. And describe for us, if you would, the level of activity that you had in congregation activities in the mid-1990s.

A. Well, I was very active, I was a member of the Theocratic Ministry School, in which, you know, you participate by giving talks.

I was out in field service and, you know, a lot of social activities with the congregation.

Q. And were social activities with the congregation a part of life for a Jehovah's Witnesses' family?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you know Jonathan Kendrick?

A. Yes.

Q. And how did you meet him?

A. He was a member of our congregation and became a friend of my husband's.

Q. Can you describe him for us?

A. Well, I would say -- I would say I was just disappointed that my husband chose to associate with him, because he kind of gravitated toward people that were a little weaker and I tended to gravitate toward people who were stronger in the faith.

Q. You are talking about faith?

A. Yes, in the faith.

Q. Do you remember Mr. Kendrick having a dog?

A. Yes.

Q. What do you remember about the dog?

A. Slobbering all over.

THE COURT: You know, I have been thinking about this throughout the trial. And there was another dog, relative to that other dog, I was thinking I needed to appoint a lawyer for him. Let's see what happens with this dog.

BY MR. SIMONS:

Q. Did you know Candace Conti?

A. Yes.

Q. And how old was Candace when you first met her?

A. I think she was a baby. She was the same age as my oldest daughter.

Q. And did you know the parents?

A. Yes.

Q. What do you remember about Candace Conti as a child?

A. Annoying.

Q. Why?

A. Just in need of attention. She was just kind of a little bratty. You know, she had some brightness to her, but mainly she was annoying.

Q. Now, is it true that your marriage to Mr. Inman came to an end?

A. Yes.

Q. And did you remarry?

A. Yes.

Q. Who did you marry?

A. Candace's dad.

Q. Neal Conti?

A. Yes.

Q. In what year?
A. 1998.
Q. And that marriage ended?
A. Yes.
Q. In divorce?
A. Yes.
Q. Approximately when?
A. I think the divorce was final in 2003, but we separated in 2002.
Q. Did you have a good relationship with Candace during those years?
A. Not really, no. It was very strained. There was a lot of distractions -- a lot of stuff going on with ex-wives and -- you know, Neal's mom. And there was a lot of stuff going on at that time, so it was very strained with Candace. It was just a lot of, you know, difficulties to deal with.
Q. After your relationship with Neal Conti ended, did you continue to stay in touch with Candace?
A. Not at all.
Q. Have you been in touch with her all these many years?
A. Not at all.
Q. Back at the time that Neal was married to Kathy Conti, do you remember having an impression of Kathy Conti?

A. Yes.

Q. Were you acquainted with her from the North Congregation?

A. Yes.

Q. What did you see in her?

A. Just -- I don't know. Maybe like some mental illness. That's just my impression.

Q. Now, were there times that you saw Jonathan Kendrick together with Candace Conti?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. And where do you recall having seen them together?

A. Well, they were, at times -- Neal Conti, when he was married to Kathy -- they were in our book study which was at our house. And Jonathan was in that book study as well. So I would see Jonathan around Candace there too.

Q. Did you ever see them together at the Kingdom Hall?

A. Yes, all the time.

Q. What do you recall seeing?

A. He just was very enamored with her. He just looked at her inappropriately. That's what I remember. And, you know, I remember them holding hands. I remember his arm around her. I remember them being out in service together. And that's what I remember.

Q. And when you say you remember his arm around her, was that on more than one occasions?

A. Yes.

Q. Was it something you saw frequently?

A. Well, frequent enough that I remember it.

Q. Was that something you saw in the Kingdom Hall or around the Kingdom Hall property, at least?

A. Yes.

MR. SIMONS: Is there an objection to Exhibit 30?

MR. McCABE: No.

MR. SIMONS: Your Honor, we are going to offer into evidence, Exhibit 30.

THE COURT: Plaintiff's Exhibit 30?

MR. SIMONS: Plaintiff's Exhibit 30 does not have a corresponding number.

THE COURT: Any objection from defense counsel?

MR. McCABE: No, your Honor.

MR. SCHNACK: No, your Honor.

THE COURT: Plaintiff's 30 is in.

(Whereupon, Plaintiff's Exhibit Number 30 was admitted into evidence)

MR. SIMONS: In fact, let me perhaps give a copy to the witness to look at.

BY MR. SIMONS:

Q. Now, do you recognize this as the aerial view?

A. Yes.

Q. And is this the Kingdom Hall?

A. Yes.

Q. What is this big area here?

A. That's the parking lot.

Q. And how about that kind of triangle, brown triangle up there?

Do you remember that?

A. That's just an open area.

Q. Was it accessible?

A. I think it was, but I have never been over there.

Q. Do you recall it being used for overflow parking sometimes?

A. Up there, that triangle?

Q. Yeah, the dirt part. Yeah.

A. Possibly.

Q. Do you recall from time to time maybe kids running around the parking lot, either before or after services?

A. You know, I don't really recall that, but it is possible because kids do things.

Q. Do you remember that there would be kids at the Kingdom Hall on service days?

A. Yes.

Q. And before and after, would there be socializing in and around the building?

A. Of course, yes.

Q. And you mentioned field service.

A. Yes.

Q. Describe for us what field service is.

A. That's when we go off in pairs. They go off in pairs, and they go and knock on people's doors and they try to teach people the Bible. So that's field service.

Q. Does field service start with a meeting somewhere?

A. Yes.

Q. Where, back in the mid-1990s, did field service for the North Congregation usually start?

A. It depended on the day. It could be at someone's house or it could be at the Kingdom Hall.

Q. And how would people know where to go for field service?

A. Because you were assigned by the congregation where to go.

Q. Would there be an elder or someone who would have made that assignment?

A. Uh-huh.

Q. Is that a yes?

A. Yes.

Q. I'm sorry.

A. Sorry.

Q. That's okay.

And you saw Jonathan Kendrick and Candace Conti together in field service?

A. Yes.

Q. And more than once?

A. Yes.

Q. And that was during the time that Candace was still living with her parents? They were married together?

A. Yes.

Q. When did you learn that there was an allegation that Jonathan Kendrick had sexually molested Candace during the time that they were in the North Fremont Congregation?

A. When you contacted me.

Q. And how long ago was that?

A. About ten months ago.

Q. Before that, you had no idea?

A. No idea.

Q. Did you know that Jonathan Kendrick had molested any child before you and I spoke a few months ago?

A. No. No knowledge.

Q. And during the time that you were a member of the North Fremont Congregation, were you aware of any allegation of child sex abuse against Jonathan Kendrick?

A. No.

MR. SIMONS: Thank you, your Honor.

CROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. McCABE:

Q. Good morning, Mrs. Martinez.

You mentioned in your testimony that you saw Jonathan Kendrick holding hands with Candace Conti.

Did you ever speak to an elder about that?

A. No.

Q. You also mentioned that you saw him with his arm around her.

Did you ever speak with an elder about that?

A. No.

Q. Did you ever see Candace Conti come to Kingdom Hall without one or both of her parents?

A. No.

Q. Did you ever see Candace Conti come to field service without one or both of her parents?

A. No.

Q. You mentioned about the ground area of the exhibits you were just shown.

Have you ever seen cars parked there at Kingdom Hall meetings?

A. I believe so. I think there were times that we had a memorial and there would be a need for overflow parking.

Q. So the memorial, what's that?

A. That's a celebration of Jesus' death once a year.

Q. Okay. So once a year you saw cars parked there?

A. Yeah.

Q. And would that be for a daytime meeting? Nighttime meeting?

A. Kind of right before it turns to the evening.

Q. Okay. When did your family host a congregation book study that you talked about? What years?

A. Oh, boy.

Somewhere around 1990 to maybe '92.

Q. Okay. And during that entire time period was the Conti family attending that book study?

A. I believe so.

Q. And what about Mr. Kendrick, during that entire time was he attending the book study?

A. Yes.

Q. But after '92 that stopped?

A. Yes.

Q. And you stopped having the Bible Study in your home?

A. Uh-huh.

Q. How old is your oldest child?

A. She is 26.

Q. About the same age as Candace, I think you said?

A. Yes.

Q. When you married Neal Conti, did your daughters get along with Candace Conti?

A. I think my oldest daughter did, but, you know, they kind of picked on my youngest daughter, so that was a problem.

Q. They would gang up together?

A. Yes.

Q. How about you; did you get along with Candace during your marriage to Neal?

A. Well, it was a little bit of a challenge because at that time I would want --

You want a straight answer? No.

MR. McCABE: That's all I have, your Honor.

MR. SCHNACK: Nothing, your Honor.

THE COURT: Anything further?

MR. SIMONS: Yes. Just one further. I neglected to mention this. I apologize.

REDIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. SIMONS:

Q. Did you ever see Candace Conti sit on Jonathan Kendrick's lap?

A. Yes.

Q. More than once?

A. I think so, yes. Uh-huh.

MR. SIMONS: Thank you.

CROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. McCABE:

Q. Where?

A. This would be at our book study.

Q. In your home?

A. Yes.

Q. In 1991 and '92?

A. Yes, to '92.

MR. McCABE: Thank you. Nothing further.

CROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. SCHNACK:

Q. And Candace Conti's parents were present at that book study?

A. Her dad. Her mom was rarely there.

Q. But her dad was there?

A. Yes.

Q. And your husband was an elder at the time?

A. Yes.

Q. And did you think that was strange that she sat on his lap at that book study?

A. Well -- okay. It was noted. In my mind, I noted it. So I would say, yes, I thought it was strange.

Q. And it was in the presence of Neal Conti?

A. Yes.

MR. SCHNACK: Nothing further.

MR. SIMONS: May this witness be excused?

THE COURT: Ms. Martinez, thank you very much for your appearance. You are now excused.

MR. SIMONS: Dr. Anna Salter.

ANNA SALTER, Ph.D.

WAS DULY SWORN TO TELL THE TRUTH BY THE CLERK

AND TESTIFIED AS FOLLOWS:

THE CLERK: Please state your name and spell it.

THE WITNESS: Anna Carol Salter.

Anna, A-N-N-A. Salter, S-A-L-T-E-R.

VOIR DIRE EXAMINATION

BY MR. SIMONS:

Q. Dr. Salter, where do you live?

A. I live in Madison, Wisconsin.

Q. And what is your current occupation?

A. Well, I do several things.

I consult to the Department of Corrections half time. I also train lots of different groups that deal with child sexual abuse.

I have trained in 50 states and ten countries on child sexual abuse.

I also do civil commitment evaluations for the State of Iowa. That involves evaluating sex offenders to determine how dangerous they are.

And I also, on occasion, testify in court cases as an expert witness.

Q. Do you hold a license in a professional capacity?

A. Yes. I am a clinical psychologist, and I'm licensed in the State of Wisconsin.

Q. And we call you Dr. Salter.

What is your formal education?

A. I have a BA in Philosophy and English from University of North Carolina. And I have a Master's in Child Studies from Tufts University. And I have a Ph.D. in Clinical Psychology and Public Practice from Harvard.

Q. Now, you mentioned that your work is in the field of child sexual abuse.

How did you become first interested in this field?

A. When I finished my degree at Harvard, I first worked in a small liberal arts college for a couple of years but didn't like it so I got a job at a community mental health center. And what I discovered right away was that a huge percentage of the kids who were coming in were child sexual abuse victims.

And I didn't have any preparation for that. I had had maybe one lecture on sexual abuse victims in my entire five years at Harvard, and never had a course on it or had sufficient information. So I had to really start studying about what childhood sexual abuse was all about.

Then offenders started coming in. And I knew for sure that I didn't have the training and experience to work with offenders.

The victims, you could use some of the techniques we used with non-victims.

But offenders, I knew required a different type of treatment.

So I obtained a grant from the State of Vermont, and I went around the country in the early '80s looking for programs that treated sex offenders, and I found several. One in particular in Seattle, Washington that had been treating them really with state of the art techniques for a number of years in Northwest Treatment Associates.

And I started writing my report for Vermont, and I just kept writing, and that ended up my first book, which I brought today, which was published in 1988 on treating child sex offenders and victims.

I kind of got drawn into it.

During this period of time, I was invited by Harvard Medical School to serve as the consultant for their child abuse program. This was actually a child sexual abuse program.

And this was actually before I had done much work on the book. And my initial reaction was, I don't want to deal with childhood sexual abuse. It upsets me.

They said, you will be dealing with clinicians who deal with it. You will be supporting them. You won't be dealing with it directly.

And that's how I got involved initially. Ended up in a faculty department, growing two departments, working in a number of areas, one was their child abuse program.

Q. As part of the book that was published in 1988, did you do a research project into the history of information and knowledge available on the subject of childhood sexual abuse and its causes and prevention?

A. Yes. The first part of the book was a review of the history of childhood sexual abuse and how it had been treated.

Q. And your book was published in 1988.

When did you complete the research that was necessary to get it out and published in '88?

A. I think there was almost a two-year wait for publication. So it probably went out in mid-1986, so I had to have all research done by that time.

Q. Have you continued to do research and writing in the field of child sexual abuse and its prevention and understanding its causes?

A. Well, it's been my field ever since. I have published two additional books, and I'm working on my fourth book on child sexual abuse now.

Q. You mentioned training.

What kind of training do you conduct?

A. Well, I conduct training in just about every aspect of child sexual abuse. I train on impact on victims. I train on characteristics of offenders. I train on ways we can protect ourselves. I train on assessment and treatment of offenders. I train on deception and how sex offenders infiltrate organizations and -- full organizations and full families.

And I train on the deception of detection. And I have even made videotapes that organizations use -- I guess they're called DVDs now -- that organizations use to understand sex offenders better and what they are up against. And those DVDs are comprised of interviews with sex offenders on how they fooled people, how they operated for as long as they did without being detected. Many of them do operate for a very long period of time without detection.

Q. Who are the people that receive the trainings that you conduct?

A. I trained -- last week, I was in Idaho training police and prosecutors. I have trained for organizations many times. I have trained child protection workers, teachers, members of organizations that have activities involved with mental health, judges. My trainings are all for professionals. I have trained probation and parole. I have trained corrections.

Most of my trainings are for anyone who works in the field of childhood sexual abuse or has a need to understand about offenders in order to protect children.

Q. And where have your trainings been conducted over the years?

A. Well, just about everywhere. I have been in all 50 states. Most of them several times.

Last week was Idaho. Thursday was Nebraska. The week before that was Salt Lake. I'm on the road a fair amount now. I have also trained in Costa Rica, in six cities in Australia and six cities in New Zealand and England and France and the Netherlands and Sweden, in Scotland, and Canada many times, and so forth.

Q. Are your books published in languages other than English?

A. Yes, they are.

Q. And without tooting your own horn necessarily, can you give us a description of some of the other languages that your books have been published in?

A. Yes, sir.

I'm not sure all the countries it has been published in because I can't read the books.

I believe it was published in Japan, a number of other countries that speak other languages have published the books.

Q. Have you consulted with differing organizations involving the subject of protection of youth from child sex abuse?

A. Yes. Over the years I have consulted with a number of them. I have consulted with residential programs frequently for abused and non-abused kids. I have done training for church organizations. I did a videotape for an insurance company that wanted to develop a protection program because they were insuring churches.

Last week I got a call from the Madison School System about consulting with them.

I regularly consult because a large part of what I do has to do with protecting children from child sexual abuse.

Q. Were you conducting these various training sessions and consultations in the mid-1990s?

A. Yes, I was.

After my first book came out, I was doing quite a lot of training and consultation.

Q. And have you become familiar with the different standards and policies of institutions and organizations, including religious organizations, in which there are activities that are sponsored or promoted that involve children and adults together?

A. Yes. The book I'm familiar with -- first of all, with the general public, knew at that period of time, and secondly, what organizations were doing in response to that knowledge, in two different decades.

MR. SIMONS: Your Honor, I would offer Dr. Salter as an expert in childhood sexual abuse and its causes and prevention.

THE COURT: Gentleman, want to voir dire Dr. Salter?

MR. McCABE: No, your Honor.

MR. SCHNACK: No, your Honor.

THE COURT: Okay.

I find Dr. Salter qualified to give expert opinions for the reasons requested.

DIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. SIMONS:

Q. Dr. Salter, in your research and your own experience, was there significant information available by 1993 to organizations, including religious organizations, who were involved in activities of youth and adults together on the subject of prevention of childhood sexual abuse?

A. Certainly.

In the '90s, there was -- there was -- there was material available to professionals long before that, but it didn't hit the press and it didn't really -- organizations didn't have sufficient awareness of it until, I think, the mid-'80s, and that was when the Catholic Church scandals first broke.

And those church scandals largely had to do with the fact that the abuse was covered up, the outrage of it seemed to be as much about the fact that higher-ups knew about it and did nothing and moved priests from one place to another as it was about the actual abuse itself.

The first one was -- located, in 1984, in Lafayette, Louisiana. And that was the first time that evidence that a bishop who had done the abuse had become public. Turns out that he reported the abuse to the bishop several times since 1997.

In 1992, the Porter cases broke in Boston. And Porter had numerous priests, and bishops and dioceses had known about him, and had not warned the congregations in which he was a priest. And he admitted abusing more than 200 children.

Now, this hit the press so big that I actually found in my records a San Jose Mercury News from 1987 that was entirely devoted to the church's secret child abuse dilemma and had articles on:

"Church hushes up child molester cases."

"Hiding molesters ensures more victims."

This was a nationwide expose. And I think that was really warning in the '80s, organizations got warnings that child molesters could and would infiltrate organizations that had activities that involved youth.

They had clear warning on that. In fact, the Baptists, I believe when they passed their 1997 policy, said that we had had notice since 1984 of this problem.

So, yes, by the mid-'90s, this problem was front and center on the national stage. And the problem that was particularly -- people were particularly concerned about was covering up abuse and not warning congregations about abuse.

Q. Had the major youth groups and religious organizations that involved activities that had youth and adults together adopted policies of transparency regarding known sexual abusers by 1993?

A. Yes, they have. There were a lot of organizations that had talked about the problem in general. For example, the American Cancer Association in 1982 talked about adopting a policy about child sexual abuse and screening.

But the issue here isn't screening. The issue is speaking out about abuse or keeping it secret. And the 1992 United States Conference of Catholic Bishops published five principles involving receiving accusations of child sexual abuse.

And the first is to respond promptly, relieve the alleged offender promptly of his ministerial duties. There are others. And the last was one was within the confines of privacy for the individual involved, deal as openly as possible with the members of the community.

I think that the Catholic Church, at least they knew that covering this up was not going to help them.

In 1992, the United Methodist Church put out a policy. And they said the church is an entirely appropriate place for these issues to be addressed. And the father said before that in 1988 that the United Methodist Church shall uphold the rights of children to speak out when abuses occur and advocate for victims in strict enforcement of these rights.

The Unitarian Universalist Association, as early as 1977, put out a policy that said that the general assembly urges all persons to support the National Center for Child Abuse and Neglect, and they should report incidences of child abuse and neglect and that they should promote and support inter-agency coordination of services by courts, police, legal counsel, social rehabilitation agencies, medical screening facilities, foster family services and other agencies. In other words, that they should not keep this secret, but that they should report this.

So there were a number of programs that overtly said that these cases need not be covered up. They need to be reported and they need to speak out.

In fact, I believe that the Watchtower had a letter that was sent out a month before they were across the 1993 case. In fact, in that letter, they talked about the need not to hush these cases up, but the need to deal with them openly.

Q. Now, have you reviewed information that is specific to Jonathan Kendrick, Candace Conti and the North Congregation of Fremont Jehovah's Witnesses?

A. Yes.

Q. And can you give us a general overview of the information, that you have reviewed?

MR. SCHNACK: Your Honor, can we have a side bar please.

(Sidebar discussion)

BY MR. SIMONS:

Q. Dr. Salter, can you give us an overview of the information that you reviewed in connection with this specific case?

A. I reviewed the school records of Candace Conti. I reviewed the National Holistic Institute records, tax records, Superior Court of California, the Petition to Revoke Probation, criminal records, deposition of Kathleen Conti, Claudia Francis, Neal Conti, Jonathan Kendrick's criminal records, deposition of Lawrence Lamerden --

MR. SCHNACK: Your Honor, can we have another sidebar, please.

(Sidebar discussion)

THE COURT: To the jury, we will take a 20-minute break.

(Whereupon, the following proceedings were heard outside the presence of jurors)

MR. SCHNACK: It bothers me I have to jump up and down. It looks like we are hiding something. And Mr. Simons knows better than this.

We brought up issues of credibility that happened twice with Lewis. This is happening here. And it bothers me that this is intentional.

THE COURT: I'm not going to agree with that, but I wanted you to talk to make sure this is within bounds. And I will also talk to the jury.

(Whereupon, the following proceedings were heard in the presence of jurors)

THE COURT: Back to the jury for a minute.

I won't do that too often. It is just the court administering the process of the case to make sure it goes according to that rule employed, the Old English rule.

And again, in terms of all of that, it is my decision when and under what circumstances -- you are to make no inference whatsoever. It's just this judge administering to what I see as the needs of the case at that time.

So hopefully we don't do that too often.

Back to you, Mr. Simons.

BY MR. SIMONS:

Q. Dr. Salter, now, we were talking about materials reviewed.

You reviewed several depositions in the case. Correct?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. And you reviewed the medical records of Ms. Conti?

A. Yes.

Q. And you reviewed the deposition of Laura Fraser?

A. Yes.

Q. And you reviewed, I believe -- you said the Fremont Police report from Officer Davila?

A. Yes.

Q. And you reviewed some of the correspondence that was involved as exhibits to these depositions. Correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, based upon your training and experience and materials that you reviewed in this case, did you form an opinion as to whether or not the Jehovah's Witnesses met the applicable standards of care for organizations who sponsor or promote activities that involve adults and children together in their handling of the Jonathan Kendrick report of abuse in 1993?

A. Yes.

Q. And in your opinion, did they meet that standard?

A. They did not meet that standard.

Q. And would you tell us, please, the basis for your opinion?

A. By the mid-'80s, it was well known that you cannot either move sex offenders from one congregation to another, or leave them in a congregation unaware, where their people are unaware.

It was well known that -- well, in my terms, secrecy is the life blood of sexual aggression. And it was well known that this policy was a complete failure and that you needed to report these cases.

Standard of care was -- by the '90s. In the '90s it was too late for an organization to say we really didn't know what happened if we turned them loose.

But in the '90s, the standard of care involved reporting these cases and it involved not -- not making people aware of -- if they had a sex offender in their midst.

Q. Now, have you prepared some slides that go through the basis of this opinion and the information that was known to organizations at that time?

A. Well, the slides that I prepared are mainly on related topics. One was -- there is a set of slides -- when experts knew, when it was known in the field. And this is -- and some other things. This is the prevalence.

When I did the 1988 book, I looked at the research available at that time. And by that time, there was a significant amount of research that I could summarize.

So what you see here are just some prevalence studies that were done back in '84. And what these studies did is they tried to determine how many children were being sexually abused, male and female.

Continuing to the next line.

As you can see, there was significant literature out there by the '80s. The watershed from this literature was somewhere in the mid-'70's, and that was where you begin to get useful data on the prevalence of sexual abuse and the predatory offenders.

The next slide.

So I had no trouble finding studies at that point in time. It would not be correct to say that there was no information out there.

The next slide.

And the book I wrote in '87 -- '88, I had 257 references. I could have had quite a lot more.

So that's what the experts knew. Now, what I have talked about --

Could you go to the next line and see what it is.

Sorry. I think that's a previous one.

What I talked about is the fact that this body of knowledge that the experts had became public knowledge when these cases broke. Not just the Catholic Church scandal, but in 1991, there was a huge revival of the series of the Boy Scouts, and how many children had been abused before they instituted their new child protection policy. And the numbers were really staggering on how many children had been abused. Well over a thousand.

That was true, even though the Boy Scouts had started by the '20s, they had started developing a list of ineligible volunteers, people who could not volunteer to be around children in their program because they were child molesters.

So the Boy Scout thing came out in '91. The Catholic Church came out in '84.

Other scandals -- the George Reardon case came out in '92. And that was the case of the endocrinologist who had taken 60,000 pornographic pictures of his child patients. And when it came out in '92, he was immediately relieved of his license, so that he was not able to be around children anymore.

By the '90s, people knew what the risk was when you had a child molester. And the standard of practice was not to keep it secret and let the person continue in the same activities with the same access to children. That was not the standard of care.

Q. Let me move to a different subject now, if we could.

You reviewed Candace Conti's medical records?

A. Yes.

MR. SIMONS: Your Honor, Exhibit 55 has previously been marked. I would move it into evidence at this time.

THE COURT: Plaintiff's 55?

MR. SIMONS: Yes. No corresponding number.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. SCHNACK: Your Honor, I think that contains hearsay. There has been no doctor to basically testify to the doctor's report. So we would object.

MR. SIMONS: Well, may we?

(Sidebar discussion)

THE COURT: All right. Mr. Simons.

MR. SIMONS: May Exhibit 55 be admitted?

THE COURT: It may be admitted. I will make a record later about it.

THE COURT: Okay.

(Whereupon, Plaintiff's Exhibit Number 55 was admitted into evidence)

BY MR. SIMONS:

Q. Now are you familiar, Dr. Salter, with the concept of delayed disclosure as it applies to victims of childhood sexual abuse?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, first of all, can you explain for us what that concept involves?

A. It is really just more -- has to do with research findings and being a concept.

When research has been done on children who were sexually abused, they have pretty much -- the studies have pretty much universally found that the majority of children do not report right away.

There is something called delayed disclosure. And I brought just a sample of this research, but there is really quite a number of studies on this topic.

That's the next slide.

Okay. This is a summary of 11 retrospective studies. And they discovered that one-third of the children who were sexually abused revealed it to anybody during childhood, and that only 10 to 18 percent of those cases ever got to authorities.

The majority of sexual abuse just isn't disclosed, period. And when it is disclosed, it is typically not disclosed immediately.

Next slide.

These are other studies, 6 to 12 percent ever got to authorities.

Next slide.

This is a study in 2000 by Smith. What they found in an example of 388 children or adults who had been sexually abused as children, was that only 18 percent reported it within the first 24 hours. 4 to 7 percent took more than five years. And 28 percent never told anybody before the researcher asked them on the phone or in person.

And consistently up to a third of adult survivors of sexual abuse, when they have done surveys on them, they told the researcher, you are the first person I have ever told about it.

Next slide.

This shows how long we have had this knowledge. Back in 1989, Sauzier did a study and discovered that of the children who were sexually abused, 24 percent reported within a week, 21 percent reported within less than a year, 17 percent reported more than a year, and 39 percent never reported, during childhood, the sexual abuse.

Next slide.

I just brought a few of these slides. There is much bigger, broader research on this.

In 1990, immediately boys, 40 percent. Females, 40 percent.

Later, 14 percent males, 24 percent females.

Never as children, 42 percent males and 32 percent females.

Next slide.

Delayed discloser, Gomes-Schwartz, et al, '92, within a week, 24 percent.

Elliott and Briere, in '94, more than one a year, 75 percent. More than 5 years, 18 percent.

Next slide.

Pipe, et al, 2007, the delay since the last incident, less than a month, 43 percent. One to six months, 19 percent, and so on.

So the point being that I have yet to see a study, I have never seen a study that found that the majority of children who were sexually abused reported it right away. It is one of the rare cases in which the research is in agreement.

I think that's the last one.

Q. Now one of the things you were asked to do in this case was to take a look at the report prepared by a Dr. Martin Williams. Correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And do you recall the report offering the opinion that Candace Conti would likely to have been addicted to drugs in a substance abuser because of her mother's addiction?

A. Yes. I do recall that.

Q. Do you agree with that opinion?

A. No, I don't agree with that opinion. Although it is true that the children of addicts have a higher rate of addiction than other people.

But that doesn't mean a majority of them are addictive. At least 50 percent of the variants is due to the environment in these cases.

You could have -- let's say the rate of population of people addicted is 2 percent. Well, you could have, maybe even a four-time increase in children of addicts to 8 percent. That doesn't mean it is the majority of them.

I'm not aware of studies. And I hope he produces them if that's a claim he is going to make that shows that a majority of children of addicts become addicts themselves. There is a huge environmental factor involved.

Q. And additionally, in reviewing the question of the report with Dr. Williams -- and we haven't heard from him yet, so we are kind of doing this in a vacuum, but he performed certain testing on Candace Conti. Correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And you reviewed his report of that testing?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you agree with the testing approach as a method of diagnosis in this kind of case?

A. Well, you can use testing in support for your testimony. But if you are going to evaluate someone who is claiming to be a survivor of sexual abuse, you have to use the right instruments. And I don't have his report in front of me. But my memory tells me that the instruments he used had to do with general personality traits.

But today the assessment of adult survivors is much more specialized. So you would use tests that specifically picked up trauma. Tests for PTSD. Tests for disassociation. Tests for trauma-related symptoms.

If you are going to use tests, you should use the tests that have to do with the trauma, not general personality tests that were not designed to pick up trauma or address issues of trauma. And he didn't do that.

MR. SIMONS: Thank you, your Honor.

CROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. SCHNACK:

Q. Dr. Salter, first of all, you are not aware of any laws that existed in 1993 that required religious organizations or their ministers to inform members of their congregation of a one-time child molester; is that correct?

A. Well, I believe that there was a law in place that required people who were involved with children to report. But it was not specific to the clergy until a later period of time. They didn't single out clergy until a later period of time.

Q. Right.

So ministers weren't required to report in California until January 1st of '97; is that correct?

A. That's correct. There was not a law that specifically addressed ministers.

Q. Yeah.

The earlier law addressed school teachers and health professionals and things like that. Correct?

A. Well, I believe it was a little bit broader. I don't have it in front of me. But there was a section talked about institutions that involved children.

Q. Okay. But not ministers or clergy. Correct?

A. Didn't exclude ministers or clergy. My belief is that if they probably made it -- singled them out in '97 to make it sure that people understood that ministers and clergy should be reporting child sexual abuse, unless it was in the context of other professions.

Q. Well, mandated reporting isn't "should." Is it? It's required. Isn't mandated reporting required?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. And clergy and ministers were not required to report until January 1 of '97 in California. Correct?

A. Clergies and ministers were not singled out. I think there was a question about whether the case law applies to them, and they certainly made it clear that it applied in 1997.

Q. Okay. Let's talk a little bit about the concept of confidentiality.

Are you familiar with the concept that ministers who provide spiritual help have an open confidentiality with regard to what they learned in concept with ministers? Are you familiar with that?

A. I'm familiar with the concept that they are required to keep things confidential if it is in the form of a discussion.

You know, I'll be honest. For instance, the Catholic priest taking confession. I'm not aware that if a minister learns it from any source or in any context, that he is required to keep it confidential.

Q. So what is your familiarity with the practice of the Jehovah's Witnesses in that regard?

A. Well, their practice is definitely to keep it confidential and not to report it at that time, you know, and keep that safe, not to alert the congregation to the fact that they have a child molester in their midst.

Q. My question didn't involve child molesters, ma'am.

A. Okay.

Q. So are you familiar with the concept of confidentiality within communications that are made to the ministers?

A. Yes.

Q. And within the Jehovah's Witnesses, how is that done in practice? What is your familiarity with that?

A. I can only answer it in relation to child sexual abuse because I didn't study the general policies of the Jehovah's Witnesses. The only material I reviewed was having to do with this case.

Q. As a psychologist, do you have an obligation of confidentiality when you learn something in confidence from a patient?

A. Yes and no.

I reviewed several. The APA Code of Confidentiality. In fact, I looked at the APA American Psychological Association Code in the 1992 ethics code compared to the 2002 ethics code. And what I found was what every psychologist knows and is taught, and that is, you cannot keep everything confidential. You cannot keep things confidential in which the person may harm themselves or may harm someone else.

Give me a second. I will find the place where it says that. That is true today. That was also true -- I'm sorry. This is a large ethics section. That was true then and it is true today.

I also reviewed the confidentiality codes from some other organizations, and I found the same thing, that there are exceptions to confidentiality and those exceptions have to do if a person is a risk to themselves or a risk to someone else.

Q. Let's turn to the publications that you testified about in --

Are you finished paging through, ma'am?

A. I was trying to find it and I guess I didn't highlight it. But I didn't entirely finish my answer.

Q. Well, you were talking about non-psychologists. So that's why I assume you were non-responsive to my question.

A. I found it. Please ask your question again.

Q. Let's turn to the publications there that you reference in your deposition.

You referenced a number of publications on childhood sexual abuse published by religious and other organizations.

Do you recall that in your deposition?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. And you referenced the American Baptist publication in 1993.

Do you recall that?

A. I recall mentioning the Baptists.

Q. Are you paging, still, for the ethics, ma'am, or what are you doing?

A. No. I was looking for the actual statement that they made.

My memory is that they had a policy that came out in, I believe, '97. But what the policy said was they have been served notice of this problem since '84.

Q. And in 1993 did the American Baptists have a policy of informing their congregations about a congregation member who was a one-time child molester?

A. Well --

Q. Did they? Yes or no, ma'am.

A. I am not aware of the policies.

Q. And neither did the United Methodists at that time, in 1993, did they?

A. I believe they did.

Q. Did they have a policy of informing their congregation about a congregation member who was a one-time child molester in 1993?

A. Well, in 1988, the policy was to speak out when abuses occurred. And so I take that as a policy --

Q. Within the confines of privacy. Correct?

A. No.

It says, the statement is:

"Be it resolved that the United Methodist Church shall uphold the rights of children to speak out when abuses occur and advocate for the strengthening and strict enforcement --"

Q. So it advocates for the children to speak out. Correct?

A. No.

Q. That's what you just read.

A. Well, I don't believe so, sir.

"Therefore be it resolved that the United Methodist Church shall uphold the rights of children, speak out when abuses occur."

It is not the right of children to speak out. It is that the Methodist Church will speak out when abuses occur.

Q. You just said to "uphold the rights of children to speak out."

A. Well, then I made a mistake. It's:

"Uphold the rights of children, speak out when abuses occur, and advocate for the strengthening and strict enforcement of these rights."

Q. And did the Unitarians have a policy in 1993 that they would inform congregations if there was a one-time child molester within their congregation?

A. Their policy was to --

Q. Is that a yes or no, ma'am?

A. Can I finish my answer?

Q. I would appreciate if you just answer the question asked.

THE COURT: All right. For just for the minute, Doctor, could you be kind enough, it is a yes-or-no question.

Just answer it, and then counsel will go to the next question if we have some time.

So for a minute.

The question again, counsel, on that.

BY MR. SCHNACK:

Q. Did the Unitarians in 1993 have a policy of informing their congregations about a congregation member who was a one-time child molester?

A. Yes. That's how I interpret the material on that.

Q. So read the specific passage.

A. Reporting -- they should --

Well, let me read the whole passage.

"The 1977 General Assembly of the Unitarian Universalist Association urges all persons to support the National Center for Child Abuse and Neglect and state and local programs for child abuse and neglect, specifically, 5, reporting incidents of child abuse and neglect."

And then it has several other things, publicizing, finding and utilizing programs.

And the last one is:

"Promoting and supporting interagency coordination of services by courts, police, legal counsel, social rehabilitation agencies, medical screening facilities, foster family services, and other agencies."

When you report that, you make it public. That's my interpretation of what they are recommending.

Q. So reporting it to the police is what you are saying? To the authorities?

A. Yes. Reporting it and cooperating with other agencies. Cooperation with other agencies to address the problem.

Q. Are you aware whether the issue of Jonathan Kendrick's incident of molestation of his stepdaughter, Andrea, in July of 1992, was that ever reported to the police?

A. I believe it eventually was reported to the police.

Q. And do you know when that happened?

A. I don't know when that happened. There are not sufficient criminal records for me to follow them.

Q. Well, you stated that you reviewed the Fremont police report from '94.

A. I did. So it must have been '94. I won't forget that.

Q. And were you aware that Jonathan Kendrick and his wife, Evelyn, were trying to work out their marital issues in connection with that from July forward into early 1994?

A. Yes.

Q. Where did you learn that?

A. I think it was in some -- I don't remember. It was either in deposition or some of the letters. But I believe that's correct information.

Q. So in any event, the issue of Jonathan Kendrick was reported to the police in February of 1994.

Is that your understanding?

A. Yes. I don't believe the Jehovah's Witnesses reported it.

Q. But it was reported to the police?

A. It was reported, but not by the Jehovah's Witnesses.

Q. And it was reported by Andrea's mother Evelyn? Evelyn Kendrick reported it.

Is that what your understanding was?

A. Yes.

Q. And are you aware of whether the police took action in 1994?

A. I'm not aware of the outcome of that case.

Q. Were you aware that the police recommended charges be brought against Mr. Kendrick as a result of that?

A. I'm not remembering the records very well.

I'm aware that he went to the police. And I'm aware that --

Yes, I do remember that charges were brought.

Q. And, indeed, he was convicted; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. That's your understanding, that in 1994 he was convicted?

A. I really don't remember the records of what happened to him at that point.

Q. Now, with respect to the policies and practices of Jehovah's Witnesses, are you familiar with publications issued by the Jehovah's Witnesses starting in the 1970s regarding child abuse?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. And what was the first one that was issued that you are aware of?

A. I don't have them in front of me. They issued several publications. The most important one being in 1993, in October, a month before the case came.

Q. Are you aware that in July of 1976 the Jehovah's Witnesses published an Awake Magazine article concerning "Child Abuse, What Can Be Done About It?"

A. Yes.

Q. Would you say that's hushing it up if they publish an article like that?

A. Well, the problem is -- wait. They actually --

Q. I would ask that you answer my question, and then we can see if you can explain it.

THE COURT: And, Doctor, please, yes or no, and then we will see whether the context deserves an explanation.

BY MR. SCHNACK:

Q. Would you say that publishing an article in July of 1976 called "Child Abuse, What Can Be Done About It," is hushing up the issue of child abuse?

A. It isn't hushing up this issue that is at stake. But it isn't hushing up the issue to publish an article that is providing information on child abuse.

Q. And that is educating parents who read these articles; is that correct?

A. Yes, it is.

Q. Educating elders who read the articles?

A. Yes.

Q. And are you aware of a June 22nd, 1982 publication in Awake concerning child abuse?

A. Yes.

Q. Are you aware that they also published a January 22nd, 1985 child molesting, "You Can Protect

Your Child."

That is Exhibit 17.

Are you aware that they published that?

A. Yes.

Q. And how about October 8, 1991, Exhibit 29, I believe.

A. Yes.

Q. Are you aware they published that?

A. Yes.

Q. And, again, would you consider providing --

Do we have the October 8, '91 article up?

Are you aware they published that, "Healing The Wounds of Child Abuse"?

A. Yes.

Q. Then let's go to October 8, 1993, Exhibit 37.

A. Yes.

Q. Are you aware that was published?

A. Yes.

Q. And do you know who these articles go to within the Jehovah's Witnesses Church?

A. They go to the elders, they go to members of the church.

Q. And these are mailed to every church member's household --

A. Correct.

Q. -- back in the '80s and '90s.

Are you aware of that?

A. Yes.

Q. And do you still say that is hushing up the issue of child abuse?

A. My difficulty in answering is, are you talking about hushing up a particular case of an offender or are you talking about hushing up the issue?

My testimony has to do with what happens when someone is caught and whether institutions and churches were aware that they should not hush that particular case up. That's a different question than whether they talked about the issue in general.

So they didn't hush up the issue in general. I agree with that. The question is: Did they follow their own policies when it actually came to a real case.

Q. And then with respect to other organizations, you mentioned the Boy Scouts, wasn't it true that the Boy Scouts had a policy that no scout master should be alone with a child?

A. Yes.

Q. And you are aware the Scouts have activities in which children are separated from their parents?

A. Yes, they do.

Q. They have, what, overnight camping --

A. Yes.
Q. -- that type of thing?
A. Yes.
Q. And you are also aware that Jehovah's Witnesses do not have any activities in which children are separated from their parents; is that correct?
A. They are not separated. It looks to me like they are included in all activities.
Q. So the children are always included with their parents in all activities.
A. Yes.
Q. And are you aware that Candace Conti never attended a Kingdom Hall meeting without either one or both of her parents?
A. Actually, I don't know that. Whether she was there or not. I know that her parents were frequently there. I don't know if she ever came on her own.
Q. Well, Candace Conti, herself, testified in deposition that that was the case.
And you read her deposition, didn't you?
A. Yes, I did.
Q. Okay.
A. I said that, that she said that in her deposition.
Q. Okay.

A. And I said that.

Q. And there was also testimony by her parents that they never were at any church-related activities -- that Candace -- Candace was never at any church-related activities unless one or both of them were there.

You're familiar with that testimony as well?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, I'm going to shift gears on you here, just because this is cross-examination. I don't have an outline, necessarily, like Mr. Simons had.

With respect to your trainings you conducted, you said they were all for professionals that were people in the field of child sex abuse; is that correct?

A. Yes. I don't remember ever training the general public, except for one training for foster care. But that's professionals as well.

Q. Okay. And you also commented that the whole issue in the Catholic Church, they were moving priests from one place to another, that type of thing?

A. Yes.

Q. And you are aware that that's not the situation in this case that we have here today, that Kendrick wasn't moved from one congregation to another?

A. No. But it seems very similar to me. The issue was not informing the congregation where the priest would be, and leaving him in the same congregation and not informing them, it seems to me that it has the same impact. The issue wasn't moving.

Q. Okay.

A. The issue was not informing.

Q. Okay. So the issue was not that Kendrick was moving from one to another?

A. No, it wasn't.

Q. Are you aware when two elders met with Andrea Kendrick and her mother and Jonathan Kendrick in November of 1993, they informed Andrea and Evelyn that they could go to the police?

A. Yes.

Q. That they had the absolute right to?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you call that hushing it up?

A. They didn't inform the congregation, and they didn't go to the police. And the standards of care at that time, I believe, said that they should have.

Q. Now, do you know whether others in the church congregation were informed? The other members of the body of elders, do you know if they were informed?

A. I believe the elders were informed, yes.

Q. And the elders were parents? Do you know that? Or grandparents?

A. I assume many of them were.

Q. Now, you mentioned a doctor who was removed from practicing, or his license was revoked or suspended because he had reportedly abused his patients?

A. Yes.

Q. And was that a situation where the doctor was alone with his patients when he was treating them?

A. Yes.

Q. And you also -- it sounds like you agreed that children of addicts at least have a higher rate of drug use and drug addiction, that there is some percentage of increase over the normal population?

A. Yes.

MR. SCHNACK: That's all I have, your Honor.

THE COURT: Mr. McCabe?

MR. McCABE: Yes, your Honor.

CROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. McCABE:

Q. You are aware that Mr. Kendrick was not a priest in the Jehovah's Witnesses view of ministers and pastors and things like that?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Okay. He was a just a member of the congregation.

A. Well, he was a brother. And they called them all ministers. But he was also a publisher. So he was doing church-sponsored activities with children as well.

Q. And so was Candace Conti at the time? She was a publisher, isn't that true?

A. That's true.

Q. And she was a little girl.

A. That's correct.

Q. And everybody in the congregation is called, who is a member, is a publisher; isn't that correct?

A. There is a requirement that they publish, that they go preach in other neighborhoods, yes.

Q. Well, whether it was a requirement or not, all the members of the congregation are called publishers; isn't that true?

A. I believe the term "publisher" is not equivalent to "brother." That it is conferred on everybody. My understanding is that publishing refers to people who go to neighborhoods and essentially preach the gospel according to the Jehovah's Witnesses.

Q. And you understand that men do that?

A. Pardon?

Q. And you understand the men in the congregation do that?

A. Yes.

Q. And women do that?
A. Yes.
Q. And children do that?
A. Definitely.
Q. So who was not a publisher in the congregation, then, that attends the meetings?
A. Well certainly there were people that didn't publish. I don't believe that Candace Conti's mother was publishing.
My understanding is that they ask people, require people to publish, but it doesn't look like to me that they all do.
Q. But that is no special designation?
A. I think it is a special designation. It is a church-sponsored activity that involves the members and the children together. They are not going out on their own and representing themselves. They are representing the church.
Q. Okay. And so is going to a meeting, that is a church sponsored activity. Is that true?
A. Yes, it is.
Q. And the congregation goes to the meetings?
A. The congregation goes to the meetings. But I still think the term "publisher" refers to a specific sponsored activity within the Jehovah's Witnesses.

Q. I understand what you understand. But I just want you to understand that a publisher is not a priest.

Do you understand that?

A. I do.

Q. Right.

And Mr. Kendrick faced some consequences after this meeting with the two elders in 1993; isn't that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. He was removed from his position as a ministerial servant; isn't that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And that was announced to the congregation.

A. But not the reason.

Q. It was announced to the congregation, wasn't it, Doctor?

A. Only that he was removed.

Q. Thank you, Doctor.

Now, in regards to public notification, that took place in February of 1994; isn't that correct?

A. I don't understand what you mean by "public notification."

Q. Well, it went to Child Protective Services, didn't it?

A. Yes, but not by the Jehovah's Witnesses.

Q. Evelyn Kendrick was a Jehovah's Witness, wasn't she?
A. Yes.
Q. Okay. So she brought it to the police with her daughter, Andrea; isn't that correct?
A. Yes, her mother did.
Q. And went to the District Attorney's Office after that?
A. Yes.
Q. Okay. And then it went to court?
A. Yes.
Q. Okay. So there was public notification within three months of the elders taking the initial report from the Kendrick family; isn't that correct?
A. I would not agree with the implication that the Jehovah's Witnesses made this public.
The mother went to the police on her own. Jehovah's Witnesses did not, nor did they notify the congregation, nor did they notify later congregations.
Q. Well, did the police notify the congregation?
A. No.
Q. Did the District Attorney's Office?
A. No.
Q. Did Child Protective Services?
A. No.

Q. They all knew, didn't they?

A. Yes, they did.

Q. And they all knew the congregation was involved because in the police reports you read, it was discussed?

A. Yes.

MR. McCABE: I have nothing further, Your Honor.

MR. SIMONS: I have no redirect.

THE COURT: Dr. Salton, thank you for your testimony. You are now excused.

The jury will take a break until quarter to 11.

(Break taken)

THE COURT: Mr. Simons, your next witness?

MR. SIMONS: Candace Conti.

THE COURT: Okay. Ms. Conti, come forward and be sworn.

CANDACE CONTI

WAS DULY SWORN TO TELL THE TRUTH BY THE CLERK AND TESTIFIED AS FOLLOWS:

THE CLERK: State your name and spell your first and last name for the record.

THE WITNESS: Candace Conti. C-A-N-D-A-C-E. Conti is C-O-N-T-I.

DIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. SIMONS:

Q. Ms. Conti, how old are you now?

A. I am 26.

Q. And where are you living?

A. I live in Stockton, California.

Q. And you live there with your mother?

A. Yes.

Q. What is the most important thing for you right now?

A. I would say the most important thing right now is my sobriety.

Q. And why would you say that?

A. Well, my sobriety has offered me to have a new chance at life. I have been able to feel -- have my feelings back again, to experience life, the good and the bad. It has given me better coping skills. Better coping skills with my life.

Q. Do you now have a plan that you hope to be able to fulfill to move into your future?

A. Yes.

Q. What is your plan?

A. My hope is for working with animals, specifically with horse and large breed animals. And my goal is to go to school and be a vet tech. That is my passion, and I can't wait to pursue that.

Q. And you said you are able to have feelings. Are some of them good?

A. Yes.

Q. Can you describe some of the good feelings that you now have in your life?

A. I have been able to have positive relationships, positive friendships, and express my feelings toward my family. It is a lot different. A lot different.

Q. Are some of the feelings that you have now tough to face?

A. Very much so.

Q. And tell us in what way.

A. I think one of the biggest things is that when I was using, my dreams stopped, my nightmares stopped. And when I stopped using, my nightmares returned with a vengeance, I would say.

Q. Let's talk a little bit about the years between high school and when you stopped using.

What was the date that started your sobriety?

A. June 10, 2007.

Q. So you are going to be two years here in a couple of weeks.

A. Yes.

Q. Do you feel you will ever go back?
A. One day at a time. But, no. I have too much to live for.
Q. Now, you graduated from high school?
A. Yes.
Q. And in what year?
A. 2003.
Q. Let's talk about the years between 2003 and June of 2010. You talked about friendships.
Did you have friendships during those years?
A. I didn't have any friendships that were meaningful in the terms that friendships should be, no. They didn't have any substance. They were all just more casual acquaintances than being real true friends.
Q. What did your friendships center around?
A. Substance abuse.
Q. What about work; did you hold a regular job between high school and June 22nd of 2010?
A. I had quite a few jobs, but I don't -- I was never able to really make them last.
Q. Why not?
A. I think I was having a hard time making a commitment to really -- to really stick it through.
Q. How was your relationship with your mother during those years?

A. Well, my mother was in Florida since before I graduated high school, so she really wasn't around.

Q. And your dad?

A. I had no relationship with my dad.

Q. How about with your grandmother?

A. My nana?

Q. Yeah.

A. My nana was the only cool person, only family in my life at that time.

Q. Was that an emotional relationship between the two of you in those years?

A. No, it wasn't.

Q. What kind of relationship was it?

A. Well, when my parents were starting to separate, my nana -- and I was starting to stay at my nana's more often, she sat me down and said this is going to be our business agreement. So that is kind of how she has treated me. She didn't want the responsibility of me. She figured it should be on my parents.

Q. Let's talk about in those years your relationship with yourself.

How would you describe that?

A. I think I spent a lot of time running from myself.

Q. And tell us what you mean.

A. Just running from everything that happened in the past. Running from nightmares. Running from my family. Not wanting to confront anything.

Q. Before high school, in those, say, five years, your last year in middle school and your four years of high school, tell us a little bit about your life in those years.

A. I went to five different high schools. The majority of those were actually home schools. So that made it very difficult. I didn't really stay in one spot long enough. I think I was -- I think I was starting to really start hiding from people.

Q. How was your relationship with your mom during that time?

A. Very difficult.

Q. And why?

A. She was still going through a lot of what she was going through, and she wasn't very emotionally there to kind of go through the things that I needed her to go through. She was also using alcohol. So it made it very difficult.

Q. And how would you describe your inner feelings during those years as you grew to maturity from junior high to high school?

A. Very troubled. I felt like I was going to explode a lot of times. I was trying to keep it all together.

Q. When you were 16, do you remember who you were going to for your health care?

A. Juliana Wong.

Q. Where was she?

A. Bay Valley Medical.

Q. And one day when you were 16, did you see a different doctor? A Dr. Afruma?

A. Yes. Possibly.

Q. Do you have any recollection of seeing a Dr. Afruma one time in 2002?

A. No.

Q. Do you remember telling Dr. Afruma that you had been sexually abused?

A. No, I don't.

Q. Do you remember telling your parents?

A. I told my parents later on when I was almost graduating -- I think I told me dad. And then I told my mom a little bit after I graduated.

Q. So that would have been early in 2003?

A. Correct.

Q. Before telling these people about your abuse, had you told anyone?

A. No.
Q. Let's talk about while it was happening. Why didn't you tell someone while it was happening?
A. I was scared.
Q. And what specifically were you scared of?
A. I was scared of him.
Q. Who?
A. Jonathan Kendrick.
Q. And what was it about Jonathan Kendrick that you were scared of?
A. He seemed like a monster.
Q. Did he have a physical intimidating force on you?
A. Yes, he did.
Q. Describe it.
A. He was very big. I was little but he was very big and always very loud and physical. And when he kind of got hold of you, he wouldn't really let go.
Q. What did it feel like to you when he would give you a hug?
A. Felt like he was crushing the air out of me.
Q. Did you feel you could tell your parents in 1995 and '96 when this was happening?
A. I don't feel that I could.
Q. After your parents separated, you were seeing Laura Fraser.

Do you remember her?

A. Yes.

Q. And you saw her deposition here in court?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. And she looked the same as when you were seeing her?

A. Same haircut, everything.

Q. And do you remember your very first meeting with Laura Fraser?

A. I do.

Q. And how did it start?

A. It was like, you know, being introduced to somebody new. You know, she made you feel like a friend.

Q. Did she talk to you about confidentiality?

A. Yes, she did.

Q. What did she tell you?

A. She actually, I think, had asked my dad to leave the room. And she told me that there were certain things that if, you know, we were to talk about, that, you know, she would have to report them either, you know, if somebody was hurting me and if, you know, if I wanted to hurt myself, those are the things that she would have to tell my parents and she would have to report.

Q. And was that a disclosure that you were willing to have happen to you at that time when you were 12?

A. No.

Q. Why not?

A. Well, I think the thought of it was just really scary.

Q. Now, in your high school years, until you were 16 and talked to Dr. Afruma, you never told anyone.

Why not?

A. I think I was afraid nobody would believe me.

Q. And so as you got into your later teens, you felt you were ready to at least share with some people; is that right?

A. I think I was at a point where I was so -- I had so much inside me, that I needed to reach out to somebody. I think I was in a lot of pain, and I needed to reach out to somebody. That's why I eventually told my parents. And I just don't remember talking to the doctor about it, but I remember talking to my parents.

Q. What do you remember talking to the doctors at Bay Valley about in those years when you were 15 and 16 and 17?

A. I was having a lot of problems sleeping, and I would have nightmares. And I would wake up crying and wake up short of breath. And I think that was something that Juliana had tried to help me with.

And I think I had -- you know, she was trying to address anxiety that I was feeling and being depressed, being sad.

Q. And when you were having those problems and trying to get Dr. Wong's help to address them, is that the same time that you started using illegal drugs?

A. It was very shortly after.

Q. Now, let's talk about Mr. Kendrick.

What is your first memory of him?

A. Seeing him at the Kingdom Hall.

Q. And how did you know him?

A. Just another brother in the Kingdom Hall.

Q. Did you know anything about his family at that time?

A. Andrea, his daughter, was a little older. But, you know, when we played, he was just a father of another child at Kingdom Hall that I could play with.

Q. Did he become friends with your family?

A. Eventually, yes, he did.

Q. And what do you remember about that?

A. I mean, I remember the talk of sports, you know, my dad and he would be talking sports in the Kingdom Hall before and after the meetings. And then I think it kind of progressed into something more that, you know, he would come out and hang around at the house and fiddle around in the garage with my dad.

Q. Do you remember that you knew as a child that Mr. Kendrick and his wife, Evelyn Kendrick, were having troubles between them?

A. I do. In fact, the last time that I saw them, they were like -- they were in the back of the Kingdom Hall arguing, having a verbal argument, and that was the last time I had ever seen them. They left.

MR. SCHNACK: Could you just move a little closer to the microphone? I'm having trouble hearing. I apologize.

BY MR. SIMONS:

Q. When you remember that argument, and you said you never saw them again, who did you never see again?

A. Evelyn or her daughter, Andrea.

Q. After you were no longer seeing Evelyn and Andrea at any kind of Jehovah's Witnesses events, did Mr. Kendrick start to pay more attention to you?

A. Yes.

Q. Tell us what happened.

A. He got more physical. It was like he was starting to pay more attention to me. And --

Q. How would he show that affection or attention?

A. He would come up and give me these hugs and he would just squeeze me. It was like the air being taken out of your body. And then he would just usually say, you know, "who loves you" and he wouldn't let me go until I would say it to him. I guess that's kind of how it started.

Q. What would you have to say to him?

A. I would have to say, "you are." And then he wouldn't let me go.

Q. And did these hugs happen in the Kingdom Hall?

A. Yes.

Q. And around the Kingdom Hall?

A. Yes.

Q. We heard Elder Clarke talk a little bit about the time before and after the meetings. I think he used the words "distractions." That there is a lot going on when the service was not actually happening, before and after.

Tell us what you remember about what it would be like at the Kingdom Hall before or after a service.

A. Well, I was a kid back then, so, you know, the adult talk really didn't interest me that much.

So there is -- in the pictures that you saw, there is the assembly hall -- I mean auditorium. And then alongside that, there is a side hall, and there is two back rooms. And us kids would go back there and run amuck, we would play tag and -- you know. Or even, you know, bug our parents, maybe in the main auditorium, and running between the seats and things of that nature.

MR. SIMONS: Can we see Exhibit 30?

BY MR. SIMONS:

Q. When the weather was good, nice weather, where would the kids be before and after the meetings?

A. Well, we would play in that front area, like right in front of Kingdom Hall in those first handicapped spots. We didn't really have that many handicapped people in our congregation. And so there was a couple spots right there and we would just run around and play.

Also the front is a little bit different than I think it is now. There was a bench right there and a little walkway on the side. You can't really see it, but we would hide behind stuff right there.

And you know, sometimes when we would get away with it, you know, which was a lot, we could go run in the parking spots, and then that back area where it's not paved, that's all open.

Q. The triangle at the top?
A. Yes, that's all open.
Q. And were there times that you would see Jonathan Kendrick out there when you were out there with the other kids?
A. Yes.
Q. And were there times that he approached you when you were out there with the other kids?
A. Yes.
Q. And can you tell us about what would happen on some of these other occasions?
A. I can remember just, you know, be out there and playing with the other kids. And he would -- it was almost like he would single me out. He would come and would grab me. Just along the same lines, I just remember being so scared of him.
Q. Do you remember being in the services inside Kingdom Hall with your parents and Jonathan Kendrick being there?
A. Yes.
Q. And do you remember there were times when he sat with your family?
A. Yes.
Q. And were there times that you sat next to him?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you go to the meetings at the Kingdom Hall without at least one of your parents?

A. No.

Q. So on the meetings that you would go to, the Sunday meetings at the Kingdom Hall, one of your parents would always be there?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you do field service?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Tell us how you became involved in doing field service.

A. Well, at that point, I wanted to be the best Jehovah's Witness I could be. So I had made -- I had made the commitment to myself to do a certain amount of hours every month out in field service. And it would range between 15 to 20 hours a month.

Q. Now, we have heard that there was a time in 1994 and 1995 when your mom started to become very ill.

A. Yes.

Q. And she didn't come to the Jehovah's Witnesses events anymore.

Is that fair?

A. That's fair.

Q. And your dad still came?

A. Yes.

Q. Were there times that you went to field service without your dad?

A. Yes.

Q. And why?

A. My dad would stay and take care of my mom, and I didn't want that to get in the way of going out in service, and so that's why.

Q. You told us about your commitment to field service.

Would it have been pleasant for you to stay home with your parents when things were that bad?

A. No.

Q. So if you were doing field service without either parent, how did you go?

A. Usually, you know, we would have groups, groups that would go. And it was kind of something that we had scheduled. I would go with somebody in the group.

Q. And how would you know what group to be in?

A. Those were -- are you talking about the actual service meetings?

Q. Yes.

A. I think those were predetermined by the elders.

Q. And how would you know where to go for your service, your field service on any given day?

A. Those are usually prescheduled.

Q. And who would tell you where to go?

A. Well, in that room that I was talking about, usually it was on the board. Anything that was -- you know, it was just paper on the board that the service meetings were scheduled and where they would be held.

Q. And that was at the Kingdom Hall?

A. That was at the Kingdom Hall.

Q. How would you get to Kingdom Hall if your dad wasn't going to go to field service with you?

A. I would get a ride.

Q. Were there times that he dropped you off?

A. Yes.

Q. Were there times you got a ride with someone else?

A. Yes.

Q. Were there times that Jonathan Kendrick volunteered to take you?

A. Yes.

Q. Were there times that you went out in the field service with Jonathan Kendrick but without either of your parents?

A. Yes.

Q. Did your abuse by Kendrick occur on some of these occasions?

A. Yes.

Q. Tell us what would happen.

A. Our groups would go out, we would get our territories, and we would go out and service. And we would do door to door.

And then there was times when our groups would separate even further. And we would go to, you know, laundry mats or -- and things like that. And sometimes he would take me, he would take me to go do some of these things and then we would end up at his house.

Q. He would take you in his --

A. In his truck.

Q. What do you remember about riding with him in the truck?

A. The dog hair.

Q. I'm sorry. What?

A. A lot of dog hair.

Q. What else do you remember?

A. The windows. It was an older truck, and the -- the passenger door didn't work. And I was -- I wasn't strong enough to push the button, so he would open it for me, and then I would get in. And then it didn't work, and he would have to let me out. It was a dirty truck.

Q. What do you remember besides the dog hair being inside the truck?

A. I remember tools being had a multicolored bench seat in his truck, and he had a blanket over it.

Q. Did he play music?

A. Yes. He listened to classic rock.

Q. And what would he say -- well, there were times that he took you to his house?

A. Yes.

Q. More than once?

A. Yes.

Q. More than twice?

A. Yes.

Q. Many times?

A. That's what it feels like.

Q. And what would he say to you?

A. He would just say, "Let's go play."

Q. How would he take you from the truck inside his house?

A. I could never open the door, so he would come and open the door. And he would lead me to the house and usually with his hands on my shoulders.

Q. Now, were Evelyn and Andrea ever in the house when he took you there?

A. No.

Q. Did you even know they still lived there?

A. No.

Q. Was anyone ever there?

A. No.

Q. And did he do things to you there?

A. Yes.

Q. What did he do?

A. It started with him touching me and putting his hand up my shirt and down my pants.

Q. Did he remove all of your clothing at times?

A. Yes, he did. He would take pictures.

Q. Did he remove all of his clothes at times?

A. Yes.

Q. Did he have you do things orally with him?

A. Yes.

Q. Did he sometimes do things with some kind of object?

A. I was too small. And then it would seem to excite him, and he would use a pen.

Q. Where did you go after this was over?

A. Maybe to the Kingdom Hall. Maybe to lunch with the rest of the service group.

Q. Did you maybe want to show anyone what had happened to you?

A. No. I was scared.

Q. What did you do to hide it?

A. I just tried to act normal. That was the best I could do then.

Q. After you no longer were being abused by Mr. Kendrick when you were 12 and 13, did you still from time to time see him in Fremont?

A. Yes. I would always be scared by the sound of a truck that was like his.

Q. What kinds of occasions would you see him?

A. When I still resided in Fremont and my nana liked to go to the Albertson's or Lucky's in Centerville, and I would quite a few times see him there or somewhere in Fremont.

Q. What would you feel when you saw him or his truck?

A. I was scared.

Q. And what would you think of?

A. Where can I hide?

MR. SIMONS: I have nothing further.

THE COURT: Would you like to take a break for a few minutes?

Let's take a break until 11:30.

(Break taken)

THE COURT: All right. Mr. McCabe.

MR. McCABE: Thank you, your Honor.

CROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. McCABE:

Q. When I took your deposition back in August, you mentioned that you were intending to go to Cerritos Junior College.

Do you recall that?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. Did you ever get to attend classes there?

A. No, I didn't.

Q. And that is down in the Downey, Norwalk area, that college?

A. Yes. Down in Los Angeles.

Q. When did you move from that area?

A. Very recently. It has only been a couple months.

Q. And you now live in Stockton?

A. Yes. That's correct.

Q. You live with your mother?

A. Yes, that's correct.

Q. Do you live in a house or an apartment?

A. In an apartment.

Q. Does anyone else make up that household?

Just you and your mom?

A. Just my mom and I.

Q. Do you have any pets?

A. I have a hamster.

Q. A hamster?

And you are interested in being involved with veterinary work; is that correct?

A. Very interested.

Q. Now, when you informed my clients, Mr. Clarke and Mr. Lamerden about your abuse, where did you meet?

A. We met in the back room of the Kingdom Hall in Fremont.

Q. Kind of like a library room?

A. No. It was the actual school.

Q. So next to the library?

A. Correct.

Q. And you arranged that meeting with them; is that correct?

A. It was arranged.

Q. Did you call Mr. Clarke and set it up?

A. No, I did not.

Q. How did you happen to go to the Kingdom Hall and meet them?

A. The meeting was arranged by Cliff Williams.

Q. And when you met with them, did they pray with you at the start of the meeting?

A. Yes, they did.

Q. Did they have their Bibles with them.

A. Yes.

Q. Did you ask them after that meeting to contact your father?

A. Did I ask them?

Q. Yes.

A. I can't recall.

Q. Now, your claim against Mr. Clarke and Mr. Lamerden and the representatives of the Fremont Congregation was that they didn't protect you from Mr. Kendrick; is that correct?

MR. SIMONS: Objection. Your Honor. I think it is vague and calls for a legal conclusion.

THE COURT: Well, I think it certainly might call for a legal conclusion.

Counsel, why don't you rephrase it. It doesn't seem to me to be a factual basis for the claim rather than --

BY MR. McCABE:

Q. Your claim is that my clients were negligent in protecting you; is that correct?

MR. SIMONS: Same objection.

THE COURT: Same ruling.

BY MR. McCABE:

Q. All right. You want money damages from the Fremont Kingdom Hall, right?

A. Yes. But there's a lot more than that.

Q. But you want money damages from the congregation for your pain and suffering; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And for your past medical expenses and your future medical expenses?

A. Yes.

Q. And for any other lost economic damages that you have had; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And you want the same money damages from the Watchtower Bible and Tract Society also, don't you?

A. I guess.

Q. Okay. And what about Mr. Kendrick, the monster? You want money damages from him as well, don't you?

A. I guess.

Q. Well, that's what this process is all about; it is about obtaining money for your damages?

A. There is more to it than just that.

Q. Okay.

A. I believe.

Q. But money is a factor in this case?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. And you want money from the monster, Mr. Kendrick.

A. (Witness nods).

Q. Is that a yes?

A. Yes.

MR. McCABE: Your Honor, may we approach please?

(Discussion off the record).

BY MR. McCABE:

Q. Ms. Conti, back on December 28, 2012, did you execute an agreement that basically states that if you got any judgment against Mr. Kendrick in this case, you would not seek to execute on that judgment or obtain the moneys that would be due and owing to you?

MR. SIMONS: And the objection is, your Honor, is that it calls for a violation of the evidence code privilege and the settlements and that is irrelevant and factitious.

THE COURT: All right. And I will overrule you. But I will allow you to ask questions of your client regarding context.

THE WITNESS: The question you are asking, did that agreement ever -- is there an agreement?

MR. McCABE: Yes.

BY MR. McCABE:

Q. Did you have an agreement with Mr. Kendrick in this case?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. And that agreement is not to seek any money from him if you are awarded it in this case?

A. Yes.

MR. McCABE: I have nothing further, your Honor.

THE COURT: Counsel.

CROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. SCHNACK:

Q. Do you need another break?

A. I'm fine.

Q. Do you recall your deposition back in August of 2011?

A. Yes.

Q. And I didn't attend that; is that correct?

A. No.

Q. I did not, correct?

A. No.

Q. Okay. So you testified during that deposition that you never went to Kingdom Hall without one or both of your parents.

Do you recall that testimony?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. And is that still true today, that -- your testimony being you never went to Kingdom Hall without one or both of your parents?

A. Yes.

Q. So what that means is, you never went to Kingdom Hall by yourself, without either Neal or Kathy Conti. You know those names? Those are both your parents?

A. Yes.

Q. And you also testified that you sat with your parents at the Kingdom Hall during meetings.

Do you recall that?

A. Yes, I recall that.

Q. Did you ever go to a meeting at the Kingdom Hall where you did not sit with your parents?

A. I don't know.

Q. You don't remember any. Correct?

A. No.

Q. Okay. You don't remember any?

A. I don't recall.

Q. And your testimony was that the first time anything occurred at the Kingdom Hall was in the main auditorium with Mr. Kendrick.

Do you recall that testimony?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. And you said he bear hugged you; is that correct?

A. That's correct.

Q. Is that the type of hugging you were describing earlier?

A. Yes.

Q. And you testified that that was in front of others and it happened during meetings?

A. Yes.

Q. And you also testified that the bear hugs occurred at every meeting you went to at the Kingdom Hall.

Do you recall that testimony?

A. It felt like that.

Q. And do you recall testifying that Mr. Kendrick made you sit on his lap during meetings?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. Did that occur with your parents right next to you?

A. I don't recall.

Q. Where in the auditorium did he make you sit on his lap during the meetings?

A. It was either -- the only seating in the Kingdom Hall is in the main auditorium or in the back school.

Q. But others were always present when he made you sit on his lap; is that correct?

A. That's correct.

Q. Now, you also testified that his abuse of you started when you were about age nine; is that correct?

A. I believe so, yes.

Q. And you would have turned nine in November of '94.

Do I have the math right on that?

A. Yes.

Q. And for what period of time did this abuse occur? When did it end?

A. It ended when I didn't see him anymore.

Q. Do you remember testifying in deposition that it ended right after your parents divorced, when you stopped attending the Kingdom Hall?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you recall that testimony?

A. Yes.

Q. Is that when the abuse stopped, then?

A. When I stopped going to the meetings.

Q. And you stopped going to meetings when? After your parents divorced?

A. I couldn't say. Give me -- I couldn't give you a specific time when I stopped going.

Q. Well, did you continue to attend meetings after your parents separated in July 1996?

A. On and off.

Q. You attended with your father at that point; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And did the bear hugs in the Kingdom Hall after you attended with your father after your mother and father separated?

A. If he was there, yes, I believe so.

Q. Okay. So after July of '96 there were still incidents involving Jonathan Kendrick and you. Correct?

A. It feels that way, yes.

Q. And what is your understanding of when your parents actually divorced? Is that July 1997; is that what you remember?

A. I think when you are a kid, the divorce might not necessarily be when the court says it is.

Q. Okay.

A. It is when turmoil is in your family.

Q. But you still attended the Kingdom Hall after your parents separated; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And when your parents separated, did your mother stay in the family home?

A. Yes.

Q. And that was on El Cajon?

A. Yes.

Q. And when your parents separated, you moved out of the house right away, right, with your father?

A. Yes, for a short time.

Q. And you lived at your grandmother's house at that time. Correct?

You and your father moved into your grandmother's house, and she moved to another house?

A. Correct.

Q. And while you were living with your father at your grandmother's house, you still attended meetings at the Kingdom Hall. Correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And was the abuse by Mr. Kendrick still ongoing then during that time period, after the separation, when you were living at your grandmother's house with your father?

A. I can't be for certain.

Q. Now, you also testified that at the Kingdom

Hall, the only abuse that occurred were these bear hugs and sitting on his lap; is that correct?

A. That's correct.

Q. None of these other things you talked about with Mr. Simons occurred at the Kingdom Hall. Correct?

A. Which part?

Q. Well, we will get into the sexual things where he was undressing you, taking photographs, using a pen, those types of things, those all happened at Mr. Kendrick's house; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. None of that happened at the Kingdom Hall?

A. No.

Q. Do you recall, in the deposition, that you testified that at some point, after he was giving you hugs at the Kingdom Hall and having you sit on his lap, that you said the abuse escalated, and he took you to him home after Sunday meetings at the Kingdom Hall.

Do you recall that testimony?

A. Yes.

Q. When did he start taking you to his house after Sunday meetings?

A. I couldn't give you an exact timeline.

Q. Would it have been after -- you know, after you were age nine, then, into, like, late '94 into 1995, in that time frame; is that what we're looking at?

A. When you are a kid, I don't think you can go by years that much.

Q. Okay. So was your mother attending the meetings at the Kingdom Hall when Mr. Kendrick started taking you from the Sunday meetings?

A. No.

Q. So it was after that time period, at least, correct?

Is that correct?

A. I believe so.

Q. And do you recall testifying that the abuse that occurred at his house, including the use of pens and that, went on for a couple years.

Do you recall that testimony?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. Is that your testimony here today, that that abuse went on for a couple of years?

A. Certainly feels like that.

Q. And you also testified that it happened several times a month during those couple of years.

Do you recall that?

A. Yes.

Q. And the abuse was always at his house that it occurred. Correct?

A. If you are being specific to the things that were later stated, like undressing me and taking pictures, that took place at his house.

Q. Okay.

A. The squeezing me and bear hugs took place at the Kingdom Hall.

Q. Okay. So other than squeezing you with the bear hugs and sitting on his lap, the abuse took place at Jonathan Kendrick's house. Correct?

A. Correct.

Q. And it always happened on Sundays. Correct?

A. I don't think so.

Q. That's what you testified back in August.

A. I don't believe it only happened on Sundays.

Q. How many times did it not happen on Sundays? In other words, how many times did it happen on other days of the week other than Sundays?

A. I can't give you an exact answer on that.

Q. But your testimony is that it occurred several times a month over, perhaps, a two-year period. Correct?

A. That's what it feels like.

Q. What do you mean when you say that's what it feels like?

A. It felt like it was -- it happened over and over again, and it just didn't stop. It didn't stop.

Q. It sounds like you are not certain how many times it happened. Is that a fair statement?

A. I believe that's a fair statement.

Q. So you are saying it could have happened five or ten times, and that's it?

A. It feels like a lot more.

Q. But you just cannot be certain?

A. I cannot be certain.

Q. And your testimony was that neither Andrea nor Evelyn Kendrick were ever at the house at the time that Jonathan Kendrick took you to his house. Correct?

A. That's correct.

Q. Were they living at the house at the time this abuse occurred?

A. They were never there.

Q. But do you know whether or not they were living there?

A. No, I don't.

Q. Now, you also testified that there was an incident on an Amtrak train; is that correct?

A. That's correct.

Q. Okay. Tell us about that.

A. I think we had -- I don't know where exactly we went. But on the way back, it was my dad and Jonathan Kendrick. And they were drinking. And I recall -- I remember that he had grabbed me and put me on his lap and he wouldn't let me go and I was trying to get away.

Q. And you testified you had gone to see the movie, "Gone With the Wind," in Sacramento on an Amtrak?

A. I believe so.

Q. And was that an open Amtrak car that that occurred?

A. Yes.

Q. Where was your father at the time?

A. We were in the dining car, so he was sitting across the way from us.

Q. Across from the little table in the dining car?

A. Yes.

Q. And then you and Kendrick were across from your father?

A. I think I was standing, probably running from table to table or something.

Q. And then what did Kendrick do to you on that trip?

A. He grabbed me and he stuck his hand up my shirt.

Q. And do you know when that trip occurred?

A. I couldn't give you a time.

Q. Was Jonathan Kendrick already in the process of taking you to his house to do these other things you described when that Amtrak trip occurred?

A. I don't know.

Q. You don't know if it was before or after?

A. No.

Q. So other than Amtrak and the hugs and sitting on the lap at the Kingdom Hall and what happened at his home, is there any other abuse you are claiming here against Jonathan Kendrick?

A. I don't believe so.

MR. SCHNACK: Your Honor, this might be a good time to break.

THE COURT: I agree.

I will look forward to seeing the jury at 1:30.

Thank you as always for your patience and attention.

(Whereupon, the following proceedings were heard outside the presence of jurors)

THE COURT: All right. Let's get a couple things on the record.

Number 1 is, I allowed into evidence Plaintiff's 55.

Counsel -- and I have said this on and off the record -- have been very professional in terms of their dealings with each other during the course of this case.

They apparently had an agreement that medical and business records would be admissible, rather than bringing in the custodian of records as to each document and/or exhibit proffered.

The court did spend some time with counsel relative to securing an agreement as to joint admissibility, and I agree with both the comment and the agreement to allow the admission of 55 in.

I know that under questioning, the plaintiff didn't recall her meeting with the physician, Dr. Afruma, nor whether she reported the abuse and its nature. I just make that comment.

Relative to the comment "not to sue," the court was just made aware of the existence of the same. And thought it was a legitimate line of impeachment based upon the question and answer just before I was alerted to its existence.

I don't believe it is a settlement agreement per se, because its outline, basically, were plaintiff to secure any judgment, that she would not pursue collection of the same. I will revisit that ruling in a sense, having already allowed it personally, I will say that he can give context to the nature as to the reason for the agreement.

If anybody wants to seek to move it into evidence, then I think there may be a need for substantial redactions. Again, I don't have it in right in front of me, but I would highlight that as I sit here.

In terms of the progress of the case this afternoon, certainly defense will do whatever cross-examination they continue to do.

Mr. Simons may want to be with the plaintiff for a little bit, after which I would dismiss the jury for the day and deal with the number of issues regarding the expert, Dr. Applewhite. And then we will continue going forward.

I can't say, and I want to say it now, earlier than later, understanding the schedule for the week, which also includes this judge being in Sacramento for 16 hours of professional education, I have reviewed the proposed instructions, many of which there seems to -- I thought I would direct counsel to meet and confer. There are a number of Casey instructions that are either offered by one or the other that I think with having made a number of rulings I made and whatnot, I would like to think with the quality of lawyers I have here that we could get through much simpler than when they were submitted to me, a number of those instructions based on my motion in limine rulings.

I clearly understand, and I will let a record be made, that -- and I expect it, candidly, almost from moment one of the briefings, that we will continue to have some debate about a specific language of the duty instruction.

I have also indicated inferentially that the proposed Plaintiff Number 2, as to Kendrick being a volunteer, I am not convinced within the context of this case, because he still was a ministerial servant with whatever attended privilege that attached. So I'm not sure if that portion of Juarez is applicable. I will certainly allow argument on it and context.

But what I'm looking for, and I have already said, I am going to give a duty instruction in this case and the issue is the nature and the substance.

I have also indicated, and I gave some consideration this weekend as to how it was going to effect this, I am not going to tell the jury that I ruled a certain way. I want to frame what I have done in the context of privilege, communication privilege, and the reference to scripture in the context of what the civil law of California provides without saying I ruled, because I don't want to tilt the balance either way in terms of giving the jury a sense one way or the other.

But I am going to do something with the jury, and I'm starting to work on how I'm going to effect that.

I got something from Mr. Simons relative to a proposal.

So I invite both your meeting and confer on any other circumstance as to dealing with the so-called privilege issue.

Now my record at this juncture doesn't have any reference to privilege, and everybody has behaved themselves relative to that.

But certainly, I, and we, have a very knowledgeable jury here. So when they start deliberating, I am sure they are going to start to talk about what weight can we give the scriptures and the nature and context of how the information was delivered. So I want to give you a preliminary set of thoughts about that.

Then finally, I am going to retire to chambers, and I'm going to work through Mr. Simons' admissibility of statistical evidence or the absence thereof. Nice work.

And I also have glued to my work station in there, the motion in limine number nine, I believe, of plaintiff, as to Monica Applewhite.

I have a full set of documents from the defense as to Plaintiff's Request to Exclude Portions of Applewhite's Testimony. And I will, as soon as we deal with the witnesses here this afternoon, I will deal with, contextually with the video of Dr. Applewhite so we can be in good order to proceed, I presume, tomorrow morning.

And just to kind of cut to the chase, since we adjourned a little earlier, tomorrow I would expect or should expect the video of Applewhite, I presume.

Mr. Simons, you will have the psychiatrist also, for the plaintiff.

MR. SIMONS: Right. She will be here early.

THE COURT: Okay.

And then at that point in time, subject to rebuttal, the plaintiff would rest?

MR. SIMONS: Yes.

THE COURT: And then the defense, tomorrow would intend to have or call upon?

MR. McCABE: After Applewhite, Mr. Shuster. And I have three women from the congregation who will testify, and then Mr. Clarke.

THE COURT: Okay.

All right. And then we will be in session Wednesday. I was trying -- because I'm a script guy, I was trying to figure out when we are going to have that session on instructions.

And I'm the problem. And I'm the problem because I will get in my humble vehicle and I will drive to Sacramento for a couple days.

And in the sense of thinking of all that, and that's no negative inference to Sacramento, so that's the fact of presenting to judges twice a year, one in Sacramento and one in LA. And negative inference to LA, I spent four lovely years down there.

All right. Anything further?

MR. SIMONS: Yes, your Honor.

Generally speaking, three women from the congregation, there is not a particularly specific identification of who these witnesses would be. And more significantly, whether their testimony is cumulative or even relevant.

THE COURT: Well, I will start with names.

MR. McCABE: All right. Sylvia Munoz, Bernice Munoz, and Pam Figuerido. They are all going to testify about their observations and observances during the 1993 to 1997 period of time in the North Fremont Congregation.

And they are not cumulative because they all have a different view. And I think in view of the number of doctors we had testify from Kaiser and the length of time that my witnesses are going to testify is hardly something --

THE COURT: Well, I don't make premature rulings on evidentiary objections.

Certainly, Mr. Simons can ring the bell if the story line is the same on the basis of all three.

I can think of a number of ways they would not necessarily be duplicative. But I will await their testimony and the ringing of the bell.

MR. McCABE: If we finish with the plaintiff's testimony and rebuttal Wednesday morning, would we be able to talk instructions in the afternoon?

THE COURT: Oh, absolutely. Absolutely.

But the sense I want to give everybody here is, because this has been so well put together by counsel, that you are well ahead of the cliff of time.

So there is no hurry way to work with the judge on this one all all in terms of where you are. So, do your work, and if that ends up being the case, the answer is absolutely.

MR. SIMONS: Your Honor, if we are -- since we are kind of on schedule, if we are able to resolve all the instruction issues on Wednesday, then it seems to me that we can show Dr. Williams' video Monday morning, and then proceed to instruction and argument, or argument and instructions whichever seems to support follows, but --

THE COURT: And I will tell you what I generally do and I would want to do in this case in particular.

What I generally do is instruct before closing argument. I have my reasons for it. Some are obvious; some aren't.

But in a case like this, and this is a compliment to all of you, is that this is as engrossed a jury as you are going to find. They have been educated in many ways as to many circumstances of the actions of many, forgetting the umbrella of how the pleadings evolved.

But in this particular case, it would be my druthers, absolutely, to resolve the instruction aspects and have those ready to give to a jury, as they go in a jury room, with those instructions, and the exhibits go in.

And to the extent you are legitimately ready on Monday, I would instruct them and you would argue.

But I have found and have assessed the number of cases, the more interesting and complex a case, the more you really want give the instructions before you argue.

Because I think the problem is, I already have -- you know, attorney's statement is not evidence. But everybody wants to know what the burden is. I mean, every person, every juror who comes in here, say, I'd like to hear from the judge early on, on what is the burden here. The same thing, I believe most of them say they would like to hear the instructions before.

All right. On that high note, I will look forward to seeing everybody at 1:30.

(Lunch recess)

MR. McCABE: Your Honor, I'm going to discuss the redaction.

THE COURT: May I see the redacted version? I understand as redacted.

Is that okay with you?

MR. SIMONS: The only redaction I think that should be made, your Honor, is Toy Register. Because central to this agreement is that this guy is not going to be coming into court and intimidating and threatening all the witnesses, all the women witnesses. And they all testified except for Toy Register.

THE COURT: Okay.

And to that specific issue as to whether Kendrick, et al, refraining from contacting and harassing --

MR. McCABE: We don't have an objection.

THE COURT: Here is the redactions I'm going to direct, that the only thing being redacted from the first page is Toy Register.

Now, let's see what else is on the second page.

Back to you, Mr. Simons, relative to one paragraph on Page 2.

Do you have any objection to that being redacted, understanding I made my ruling?

MR. SIMONS: And with that understanding, your Honor, I'm not sure why it would be redacted. There doesn't seem to be anything confidential or misleading there.

MR. SCHNACK: Your Honor, we don't have an objection.

With that one redaction, we were being overly cautious.

THE COURT: All right. I will leave that.

MR. SIMONS: And your Honor, in explaining this agreement, part of Ms. Conti's reason and willingness to do this is the criminal system had already dealt with him. He was a registered sex offender and he was convicted in 2004 and she knew that. And therefore, I would suggest that the door has been opened for her to tell why she entered into this agreement.

MR. McCABE: Well, that's novel, your Honor.

THE COURT: Quite frankly, it is good lawyering, but novel?

MR. SCHNACK: Well, novel -- novel after the fact.

MR. McCABE: That conviction can't come in.

THE COURT: And I agree. I am good one to judge when doors are open and all that. So, I would not agree to the condition of 2004 comes in.

MR. SCHNACK: Your Honor, and everything related to it, including the Megan's Law listing, Kendrick being on the website, all of that has to be out.

THE COURT: Well, we haven't gone into that yet, and absent some form of really opening the door, we are not going to go into that at this time.

I will let you ask her -- I have already told you, you should give context to the circumstance.

Now, basically, I ruled it, this is not a civil cell network type of nature that is excludable. And it was, in my view, a legitimate area, based upon the question and the answer.

That having been said, I know that you said you have had the door opened in terms of giving context to why she did this.

So long as she doesn't refer specifically to the 2004 conviction, we have had a rule of testimony about the 1993 conviction, she can testify truthfully as to whatever she felt about him having been dealt with.

But no express duty as to 2004 and all the intended circumstances.

MR. SCHNACK: Including names, all websites, all that kind of thing?

THE COURT: Correct.

MR. McCABE: Okay. And there is one other issue while we're on record.

THE COURT: All right, Mr. McCabe, I'll hold you to that.

MR. McCABE: For right now.

The plaintiff testified several times, when I asked her about money, well, were there other reasons. And I suspect that she -- what her other reasons were something that we heard from her is that she wanted a change of policy. There is no request for injunctive relief in this complaint. I think she needs to be instructed that she can't tell us that she wants us to change our policy in this case, because it is not a remedy that she sought. And I think it should be excluded.

THE COURT: Mr. Simons?

MR. SIMONS: Well, first of all, Cliff Williams testified that's what she talked to him about before there was a lawsuit --

THE COURT: That's the personal thought I had.

MR. SIMONS: Secondly, although we have redacted part of it, part of that same sentiment is expressed to the Fremont elders, and that's in evidence in one of the exhibits, and that's all before she brought the lawsuit.

THE COURT: I would deny the request of Mr. Williams' testimony.

Anything else, counsel?

MR. SCHNACK: Not right now.

THE COURT: All right. Then that redaction as related in Toy Register is out. Otherwise, it is in. And --

MR. McCABE: So that would be Defendant's

Exhibit Number 135.

THE COURT: Do we agree on that, Mr. Simons?

More importantly, Madame Clerk, you and Ms. Kraetsch will read it as Number 135.

MR. SIMONS: Thank you, your Honor. Another appropriate exclusion.

THE COURT: All right. Then 135 is in.

(Whereupon, Defendant's Exhibit Number 135 was admitted into evidence)

THE COURT: And then put that on your list so we end up with our complete record.

MR. McCABE: Your Honor, I think that Mr. Simons would agree, but I could be wrong, we don't want to redact the top line that shows that it was a fax from Linda Kendrick.

THE COURT: You do or you don't?

MR. McCABE: I do.

THE COURT: Well, let me see. I almost hate to ask this question in terms of the lineup here. I heard the name, but I still haven't filled a spot on this.

Linda Kendrick is whom to Jonathan?

MR. SIMONS: His current wife --

THE COURT: Current wife.

MR. SIMONS: -- and the grandmother of his 2003 victim.

THE COURT: We will redact from Linda Kendrick, because they don't know who she is. I'm not sure. I will even do it under a 352 analysis in terms of confusion.

MR. McCABE: Thank you, your Honor.

(Whereupon, the following proceedings were heard in the presence of jurors)

THE COURT: Okay, Mr. Schnack.

MR. SCHNACK: Thank you, your Honor.

CROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. SCHNACK:

Q. Ms. Conti, let's go back, briefly, to your August 25, 2011 deposition that was taken in your attorney's office.

Do you remember that?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you remember the admonitions that were given to you prior to your testimony by Mr. McCabe?

A. Do you mean the rules of the --

Q. Yeah. The rules of the road for depositions, what was going to happen, what you had a right to do.

Do you recall that?

A. I can honestly say that I remember getting those. As far as singling them out, I don't know.

Q. Okay. Well, let's go through at least a couple of them.

Let's turn to page 8, line 1 of her

Can you see that there?

MR. SCHNACK: Your Honor, may I approach?

THE COURT: You may.

MR. SCHNACK: And, your Honor, may I just stand here and read with her?

THE COURT: Well, I think with that -- up there.

BY MR. SCHNACK:

Q. So Mr. McCabe asked you, he said:

"And I will assume if you answer my question that you understand the question, but I'm just here to get your testimony. I'm not going to try to get any trick questions or anything like that. So if I ask you a question that's unintelligible to you or you don't understand, please ask me to rephrase it or tell me you don't understand so I can try to do that. Is that fair to say?"

And your answer here was what?

A. Yes.

Q. And Mr. McCabe said:

"Whatever you testify to here today will be put in a booklet form, and it is a booklet form like this that is in my hand. And it reads like a script in a play sometimes, and it will be presented to you to read and sign. You are free to make changes in the transcript if you feel that there is a material mistake being made in the transcript. But if you do make changes, that can be commented upon by me or someone else and affect your credibility in a future proceeding. Do you understand that?"

Your answer was?

A. Yes.

Q. And then Mr. McCabe said:

"So what I'm saying, we just want your best testimony today, your best recollection. I don't want you to guess about anything. If you don't know, that is certainly an acceptable answer. Do you understand that?"

And your answer was a simple yes; is that correct?

A. That's correct.

Q. Now, in your deposition you never mentioned that you were taken by Jonathan Kendrick from field service; is that correct?

A. That's correct.

Q. Shifting gears.

Do you have information -- or back in February of this year, did you have any information about Jonathan Kendrick's financial status at all?

A. No.

Q. No?

A. No.

MR. SCHNACK: That's all I have, your Honor.

THE COURT: Okay. Mr. Simons.

REDIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. SIMONS:

Q. Your Honor, I'm showing Exhibit 18, which is Exhibit 106.

Now, you were here when the elders testified about your meeting with them in 2009, the Fremont elders.

Do you remember being here for that testimony?

A. Yes.

Q. In their letter of your meeting --

MR. SCHNACK: Your Honor, this is beyond the scope of direct or cross. He had the opportunity to bring this up in his direct.

THE COURT: Overruled.

BY MR. SIMONS:

Q. You were asked if you wanted to confront Jonathan Kendrick, and you said what?

A. I said no.

Q. And in that meeting, what did you tell the elders in Fremont was your biggest concern?

A. I wanted to protect other children.

Q. Did you ask for any money?

A. No.

Q. And we heard Cliff Williams come up and testify about the meeting that you had with him down in Los Angeles.

Do you remember that meeting?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. And there were two telephone calls as well over a period of a year.

Do you remember that?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. And Mr. Williams told us that you had talked to him about changing the policy so that children would be protected.

Was that testimony that he gave true?

A. Yes, it was.

Q. And did you that conversation with Elder Williams that you wanted to have policies changed so that children would be protected?

A. That was my main concern. That was the whole reason why I talked to them.

Q. Did you ask for any money?

A. No.

Q. In any of these meetings did any of the elders that you talked to ever express any interest in helping you change the policies so that children could be protected in the future?

A. No. In fact, it was quite the opposite.

Q. If the witnesses had agreed to change their policy of secrecy involving children and sex abuse, would you have ever brought this lawsuit?

A. No.

Q. Why not?

A. Because I don't want to have to go through this.

Q. Now, with regard to your agreement with Mr. Kendrick, did you feel that the civil court was really the right place to deal with Mr. Kendrick?

A. No.

Q. You knew you had to name him because he was the perpetrator; isn't that right?

A. Yes, it is.

Q. And where did you feel was the right place to deal with Mr. Kendrick?

A. Criminally.

Q. And have you reported to the Fremont Police Department that Jonathan Kendrick abused you when you were a child?

A. Yes, I have.

Q. Did that matter -- well, let me ask you this: Have you met with the Fremont Police Department?

A. I have met with both a sergeant and gave the report to the sergeant, and the sergeant felt that it was an adequate story or allegation to bring in an investigator. And I sat down with the investigator on a separate occasion.

Q. What do you understand is the status of that, as far as you have been told?

A. It is a very active investigation.

Q. Now, there were some other terms in this agreement that you made to me through Mr. Kendrick, weren't there?

A. Yes.

Q. And one of them was that he would not harass, molest, intimidate, contact or annoy you during any of the proceedings related to this lawsuit.

Do you remember that term?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. Was that important to you?

A. That was very important to me.

Q. And that if Mr. Kendrick was subpoenaed by either side, he should still have to come to court?

A. Yes.

Q. And not just you, but Mr. Kendrick agreed to refrain from contacting and intimidating and annoying and harassing the other women, witnesses in this case, including Evelyn Kendrick. Correct?

A. Correct.

Q. And Andrea Becerra?

A. Yes.

Q. And Claudia Francis?

A. Yes.

Q. And your mother, Kathleen Conti?

A. Yes.

Q. And Carolyn Martinez?

A. Yes.

Q. Was that an important part of the agreement to you?

A. That was a very important part.

Q. And why?

A. I felt that -- I'm sure that, you know, for a lot of reasons, they are not as scared of him as I am, but I know that for the sake of this case, for people to come forward and be completely honest, that it was important for them to not feel his presence.

Q. And lastly, you were asked about not mentioning the field service in your deposition.

Were you asked about field service in your deposition?

A. No, I was not.

Q. When you met with Dr. Williams, who was the mental health examiner hired by the defendants to conduct an examination, did you tell him about the field service?

A. Yes, I did.

MR. SIMONS: That's all the redirect, your Honor.

THE COURT: Okay. Mr. Schnack.

MR. SCHNACK: Thank you, your Honor.

CROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. SCHNACK:

Q. Ms. Conti, you mentioned aspects where you agreed to not take any money from Mr. Kendrick no matter what this jury does.

You said it was important that Mr. Kendrick not harass these other people.

Was that important to you prior to February 28th of 2012?

A. What is the significance of February?

Q. That's when you signed the agreement. Prior to that, he supposedly could have harassed all these people.

A. He very well could have.

Q. Yeah.

So why in late February of 2012 did that become important enough to you to sign an agreement?

A. I felt that for this case, for people to be able to testify to the truth of what happened, that if his presence was here, that people might be scared or intimidated by that fact.

Q. But the agreement says also not to show up at depositions and things like that.

And this case was filed in early 2011, wasn't it?

A. Yes.

Q. So why wasn't that important when depositions were being taken? Your deposition was taken in August of 2011, other depositions were taken in 2011.

So why wasn't that important then?

A. I think when this case was started, it has been a fear of mine that he be around.

Q. But nonetheless, you have a very explicit agreement not to take any money from Mr. Kendrick no matter what this jury does; is that correct?

A. Yes. But there is more to that.

Q. Excuse me?

A. There is more to that. There was a reason for that.

Q. And you have explained that. Correct?

A. Correct.

Q. But again, you are not going to take any money from Mr. Kendrick no matter what this jury does.

A. No.

MR. SCHNACK: Nothing further, your Honor.

MR. McCABE: May I have just a moment, your Honor.

I have nothing further.

MR. SIMONS: May we approach?

(Sidebar discussion)

THE COURT: To give the jury some context, on January 12, 2012, Mr. Kendrick defaulted in attending this proceeding. And I entered an order setting that aside, allowing him to come forward within this proceeding, on January 19, 2012. I'm telling you that only to give you context, okay.

MR. SIMONS: Okay. Thank you, your Honor. Nothing further.

MR. McCABE: Nothing further, your Honor.

MR. SCHNACK: Nothing further, your Honor.

THE COURT: All right. Ms. Conti, thank you very much for your time.

MR. SIMONS: Your Honor, with the exception of Dr. Lynn Ponton, who has been arranged in advance to appear tomorrow morning, the Plaintiff rests.

THE COURT: Okay. To the jury, I'm going to excuse you now. I'm going to --

You have a sense of this because you have seen this judge at work.

I'm going to make another series of decisions that will continue to frame the presentation to you of evidentiary issues that have been presented on an ongoing basis to me.

That will allow us, with one minor exception and perhaps a little or some of both --

You would have one more expert tomorrow, Mr. Simons, is that --

MR. SIMONS: Yes, your Honor.

THE COURT: Okay. The defense would then commence the defense case. And we talked about that also.

And please understand the context. A lot -- and forgetting there have been a couple interruptions in this matter. But the timing of the case proceeds on a day-to-day basis, and oftentimes in response to decisions that I make as a jurist. I make all forms and types of decisions. So this case --

Well, for instance, on Wednesday -- and I told counsel, they are well ahead of the time schedule to you, I will be very much more demonstrative late tomorrow afternoon to see where we are. But the goal, of course, is to get, understanding my educational issue, is to allow each side to present their evidence fairly within the time agreed, and to submit it to you for decision, legitimately and as early as we can.

So I will see you tomorrow at 8:30. I will take my time to listen to argument and make another series of decisions, and then I will really be able to assess late tomorrow afternoon where we are and what time burdens will be on you.

But I'm going to look at you collectively in the eye and tell you that we continue to be ahead of a tough calendar judge's schedule, very legitimately in terms of quality and collaboration of all counsel here. So I will look forward to seeing you here tomorrow at 8:30.

(Break taken)

(Whereupon, the following proceedings were heard outside the presence of jurors)

THE COURT: All right. Let's talk about Dr. Applewhite's depo. I'm going to be as simple as this judge can be.

There are a number of the objections, I do believe go more to weight than admissibility. I am very expressed about a couple of them.

I don't want any reference by Dr. Applewhite to remain about the duty to inform nonexisting religious organizations in 1993, particularly in connection with how I am intending to instruct as to general civil duty.

So I just want you, as best, to -- I'm not looking at that vision -- but her comments to say duty to warn did not exist at that time. I understand what she was saying, but the jury very well may not. And there may be some confusion there.

As Opinion Number 9, privacy and confidentiality considerations, most of that is okay with me, except it appears she started talking about the vast part of the law for a reason, dot, dot, dot.

Mr. Simons, what did she dot, dot, dot with, relative to that?

"And so I recognize that it is part of the code of ethics for a reason, that's part of the law for a reason, and that's part of what religious organizations across the board talk to their leaders about."

I think that's the answer we --

MR. SCHNACK: Your Honor, we have that deposition loaded if you --

THE COURT: I'm concerned about that sentence talking about the law and now religious leaders. Okay, I think that can be problematic.

MR. SCHNACK: Page 36, line 22 to page 37, line 14, is what is referenced in Plaintiff's motion.

(Whereupon, video recording was played)

BY MR. McCABE:

Q. Was part of your opinion that confidentiality religious organizations and other organizations that you worked with, was that a good thing or bad thing?

A. It is not part of my opinion to say whether it is a good thing or a bad thing. I just know that with counseling, with social work, or therapists, with religious leaders and pastoral counselors, there is a trust relationship that is built, and when people need to go to someone for help, they need to feel that they are going to disclose information, and the person they disclose to is going to be trustworthy. They are not going to gossip about them, and they are not going to be reckless and share information.

And so I recognize that that's part of the codes of ethics for a reason, that is part of the law for a reason, and it is part of what religious organizations across the board talk to their leaders about.

(Whereupon, video recording was stopped)

THE COURT: Okay. Her voice just dropped down for the last part of that sentence.

MR. SIMONS: "What religious organizations across the board talk to their leaders about."

THE COURT: Okay.

I'm inclined to strike that sentence, because, particularly in this case, we have got information they talked to lawyers back in New York, and all sorts of stuff.

But it also starts to meddle with what the law applies as to confidentiality. And I don't want confusion with that jury as to "the law" because I'm going to set forth a standard of care that they are going to interpret and apply. And I don't want them to have a sense that, again, that's an expert saying what the law is.

And so is that saying to religious leaders across the board, the understanding is they are following the law?

MR. SCHNACK: So you are taking out a couple sentences out?

THE COURT: She ran them together. I am taking the sentence that started with, "That's part of the law for a reason."

And it sounds to me like it was a full sentence. And that's why religious leaders rely on -- you know, I couldn't tell as a matter of sentence structure whether that was a one long sentence or were two sentences with appropriate grammatic structure.

TECHNICIAN: Your Honor, do you want to hear that last part one more time?

THE COURT: Yeah, I do.

(Whereupon, video recording was played)

A. "That was part of the code of ethics for a reason, that is part of the law for a reason, and that is part of what religious organizations across the board talk to their leaders about."

(Whereupon, video recording was stopped)

THE COURT: Yeah, she took a pause, "that's part of the law for a reason," but it is still connecting notwithstanding the law, the response to what religious leaders across the board for a reason is, and it could be linked up because that's what the law provides. But whether there are two sentences or one -- I don't want that in there.

MR. McCABE: So starting with, "That's a part of the law --"

THE COURT: Right.

MR. McCABE: -- for the rest of the answer.

THE COURT: And those would be my ruling about Dr. Applewhite.

MR. SIMONS: All right. So 8 is out, and 9 is the last sentence.

THE COURT: Modified as related.

MR. SIMONS: Okay.

THE COURT: And the rest of the objections are overruled. I think they do, again, largely go to the weight and -- I'm not privy, but I certainly will be tomorrow. It is a vigorous cross-examination of plaintiff's counsel vis-a-vis the nature of those objections and substance.

MR. SIMONS: And so, your Honor, when we were showing some of the videotape depositions of the health care providers, counsel courteously agreed that we would just edit out the objections that were in there.

THE COURT: I do that almost case-to-case, so we have a clean tape.

MR. SIMONS: Yeah.

I preserved my objections with the motion, so they can be edited out of the deposition.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. SCHNACK: Your Honor, one final thing. During his brief cross-examination of Ms. Applewhite, he asked whether one of her partners in another business entity had been -- faced charges of sexual harassment back in the 1990s. And --

THE COURT: Well, to me, that shows a lawyer doing his work. Thorough investigation.

MR. SCHNACK: I'm not sure it comes in at trial, your Honor, so --

THE COURT: I got your drift on that. We could play that. Was there any more link-up as to potential bias as to the expert, other than whatever the width and breadth was of a department getting sued for harassment?

MR. SCHNACK: He just asked her if she was aware that that charge had been made, and she said yes.

MR. SIMONS: Well, no. I asked a little bit more than that.

MR. SCHNACK: Well, let's see it. Let's play it.

It was at the very last part of the deposition. Literally, the last paragraph.

THE COURT: The stinger paragraph?

(Whereupon, video recording was played)

BY MR. SIMONS:

Q. During that time you were sending representatives off to potential clients as an organization that could effectively provide certainty --

(Whereupon, video recording was stopped)

MR. SIMONS: We are talking about during the time of the proceeding. So I'm already in the subject matter here.

(Discussion off the record)

(Whereupon, video recording was played)

BY MR. SIMONS:

Q. Do you do business as Monica Applewhite?

A. I do business as Monica Applewhite, but I also have a limited liability corporation called Confianza.

Q. And before that did you have a partnership called Presidium?

A. Yes. I was a partner in Presidium.

Q. And during what years were you a part in Presidium?

A. Well, when we started the company, it was called Child Safe Environments, but they kept getting us mixed up with playground equipment and things of that nature. So we also began working with organizations that serve adults, like adults with autism. So we ultimately changed the name to Presidium in 1994. And I worked with Presidium as a cofounder and an owner until 2009.

Q. During the time that you were a partner, was there a partner named Richard Dengel?

A. Yes. Richard Dengel was one of the partners that I had at Presidium.

Q. And is it true that Presidium -- how many total partners were there during the time that you and Mr. Dengel were partners?

A. It's Dr. Dengel. But there were four of us to begin with. There was Dr. Richard Dengel, Dr. Wayne Duehn. And there was -- D-U-E-H-N.

And then there was Mr. Ted Blevins and myself.

And we began with four partners. And Ted Blevins left early on in the partnership. And then Richard Dengel and I brought out the shares of the stock in the company from Dr. Duehn.

And then it was just Dr. Dengel and I for most of the time. We did the majority of the work at Presidium and supervised and brought all the employees and grew the company.

Q. And during that time, Presidium represented itself to its potential clients as an organization that could effectively provide services in the field of prevention and education of sexual abuse and sexual harassment. Correct?

A. It began with all forms of abuse, because we dealt a great deal in the early years with physical abuse as well, working in foster care and residential treatment. But over time, sexual abuse became the primary focus.

Q. And is it true that during the time you and Mr. -- excuse me -- Dr. Dengel were partners, that he was suspended in 1996 for a semester from his faculty position at the University of Texas without pay for the sexual harassment of a student?

A. That's my understanding.

Q. You knew about that at the time?

A. Yes.

Q. I don't have any other questions.

(Whereupon, video recording was stopped)

THE COURT: Any further argument?

MR. SIMONS: I would say, your Honor, it goes to her qualifications as an expert in sexual abuse prevention. She didn't know her partner was one.

MR. SCHNACK: The question, your Honor, dealt with sexual harassment. And when he asked whether they provided prevention -- prevention policies, et cetera, it dealt with sex abuse, not sexual harassment. It's not related to anything in the case.

MR. McCABE: In addition, your Honor, it was at the University of Texas, and not in connection with his work at the Presidium. He was suspended for a semester from the University of Texas.

THE COURT: I got that. And I made the judicious decision not to -- but that rule will stick on the last two lines as to Professor Dengel. I love that argument. But as to Dr. Dengel, we will leave that out.

Any further circumstances to deal with, counsel?

MR. SIMONS: Not at this time.

MR. McCABE: Not at this time.

THE COURT: Be prepared. We are moving along well. To the extent -- I guess -- well, and again, get your case and take care of it, and at least be prepared this afternoon to do jury instructions if we can.

Okay. Thank you, counsel.

(proceedings were adjourned at 2:12 p.m.)

PROCEEDINGS

(Whereupon the following proceedings were heard outside the presence of jurors)

THE COURT: On the record, Candace Conti versus Watchtower Bible and Tract Society, Inc., et al.

Counsel, what would you like me to address this morning?

MR. SCHNACK: I see that Dr. Ponton is in the audience here today. I wanted to make sure, given the deposition testimony and some other things that have happened here during the trial that she not mention Kathy Conti's abuse by an elder, that she not mention that Kathy Conti --

THE COURT: Why don't you hold because, Doctor, I want you to listen.

Doctor, why don't you come on in and sit in the jury box.

Why don't you come on up. Welcome. And let me get you settled.

THE WITNESS: Thank you.

MR. SCHNACK: And, again, that there be no mention in front of a jury of Kathy Conti's abuse by an elder. And, again, Kathy Conti is Candace Conti's mother. And Kathy Conti's parents were Jehovah's

Witnesses.

THE WITNESS: I'm just going to write some of these down. Sorry, your Honor.

THE COURT: Let's do that. So let's go topic number one. And, Doctor, I made -- just for your information, I made a series of rulings effectively detailing and putting standards and limits in evidence on both sides. So I want you to listen very clearly as to what is off limits relative to your testimony.

First of all, Kathy Conti having been abused by an elder in Jehovah's Witnesses.

THE WITNESS: Okay.

MR. SCHNACK: And second thing is that Kathy Conti's parents were Jehovah's Witnesses.

THE WITNESS: Okay. The grandparents for Candace.

MR. SCHNACK: Correct.

THE WITNESS: Okay.

MR. SCHNACK: That Kathy Conti was raised as one of Jehovah's Witnesses.

The only thing that can be referenced with respect to Kathy Conti is that she was sexually abused as a child, period. Nothing within the church, nothing referencing the church in that regard.

THE COURT: All right.

And in fairness, Doctor, in terms of context, I have allowed Ms. Conti to testify about having been sexually abused.

THE WITNESS: Uh-huh.

Was she unable to mentioned that it was a Jehovah's Witness?

THE COURT: Right. Absolutely. That's part of my orders.

THE WITNESS: Okay.

THE COURT: But we don't want any association stuff relative to that abuse in the church.

THE WITNESS: Thank you.

MR. SCHNACK: The next topic deals with delayed reporting or delayed disclosure or as what might be called Child Sexual Abuse Accommodation Syndrome. One is that, although the syndrome can be mentioned, the credibility of the person making the delayed report cannot be mentioned.

THE WITNESS: This will be a little more confusing, I think, for me.

So I can mention the syndrome --

MR. SCHNACK: Sure.

THE WITNESS: -- the Childhood Accommodation Syndrome. But the credibility, I don't quite understand what you are saying.

MR. SCHNACK: You testified that delayed reports should not be discounted, that they should not be viewed as not being credible just because they were delayed. And that you cannot do that here today.

THE WITNESS: Okay.

MR. SCHNACK: Do you understand the ruling?

THE COURT: Well, let's talk about that one, Doctor, just for a minute.

So let's go -- you see, I haven't seen this deposition testimony.

So you say the Doctor testified how? As to what?

MR. SCHNACK: She testified that delayed reports or delayed disclosure should not be discounted and not be believed simply because they were delayed. And, indeed, she went further to say that, statistically, false reports constitute, I mean, 2 to 8 percent of all reports, something along that line.

THE WITNESS: All right.

MR. SCHNACK: And that gets into the credibility of reports. We discussed this with respect to Carl Lewis, Mr. Simons tried to get him to bring it in. We had a couple side bars.

THE COURT: Your Honor, I fully understand and I know the history.

MR. SIMONS: I would disagree with the depiction of Mr. Simons trying to get that in.

THE COURT: Oh, don't worry about that. I think that is just lawyers being lawyers. But the false reporting aspects, I don't think are germane to what we are doing here. So the testimony as to what is false reports and the credibility, the inferred credibility we shouldn't be talking about. But the delay and the reasons why and whatnot, of course.

MR. SIMONS: Your Honor, if I may, sort of, restate that for the Doctor.

What we are trying to stay away from is any testimony where we say, I found her believable, or I believed her, or her testimony is consistent with what other victims may show connecting Candace Conti and the issue of her credibility directly with the various statistical and research information that we have on delayed disclosure.

THE COURT: And, Doctor, I don't know how many times you have been an expert witness, but the jury has its function, you have yours with the expertise you bring to it. And you are not the judge of the credibility aspects.

You know, you are sitting here to educate the jury as to the nature of the syndrome and the circumstances without pinpointing it as to the credibility of a particular person.

THE WITNESS: So if I were to say delayed disclosure is very common in childhood sexual abuse victims, would that be --

THE COURT: I think that's fine.

THE WITNESS: Okay.

MR. SCHNACK: Your Honor, I do discourage what Mr. Simons' said only to the extent that it is not narrowed to what he said. Yes, you cannot tie Candace Conti's reports. I believe her that she is credible because of the delayed report. But that indeed delayed reports are credible.

It is a general statement as well that it's excluded, not that it's delayed reporting is common. I don't disagree with. But the fact that they are common and they should not be disbelieved goes a step further.

THE COURT: I don't disagree with that.

MR. SIMONS: And neither do I.

THE COURT: No.

MR. SCHNACK: So the next topic I have is the whole issue of church discipline. Your Honor, the issue of disfellowshipping that came up, what you call "the walking dead" in your report.

Anything related to church discipline, other than Jonathan Kendrick having been removed as a ministerial servant in the November 11, 1993 report, should not be referenced whatsoever.

THE WITNESS: So run this by me again.

Mr. Kendrick's was removed is my understanding. I can say that, yes?

MR. SCHNACK: Yes.

THE WITNESS: Believe me, disfellowship -- I am not an expert on the faith, so I will stay away from that topic.

MR. SCHNACK: It doesn't matter whether you are an expert on it, but that you shouldn't reference that at all.

THE COURT: Doctor, I want you to know that I ruled that effectively disfellowshipping is a protected activity. You acknowledged to me that you are not an expert on the process or the nature of that. Stay away from talking about what happened to Mr. Kendrick.

By the church, I have allowed evidence into the fact that he had been removed as a ministerial servant, but I don't want any editorializing on that either other than acknowledgment of the fact.

MR. SCHNACK: And along with that, no other form of church discipline. If they didn't disfellowship him, they should have done something else. Nothing along that line.

THE COURT: That's not your problems, Doctor, and nor is it hardly evidence.

MR. SCHNACK: The next category I have, there were several references both in your report and within your testimony about child abuse within the Jehovah's Witnesses church organization or words to those effect, that we ask be stricken as well and not referenced whatsoever here.

MR. SIMONS: I agree.

THE COURT: Now, Doctor, any questions as to that?

Again, we are focusing on this particular matter, not other goings-on and whatnot.

THE WITNESS: I will do my best. But just, if I am overstepping, please interrupt me.

THE COURT: Oh, I can assure you counsel will.

I am having this little session to avoid -- and if you have any questions -- because what I'm going to do is I'm going to direct you to obey the rules I've already made contextually so that we don't have issues with the jury.

And if you have any questions, the point is to ask them now so we can make sure we have a clean presentation.

MR. SCHNACK: And that's my concern too with the last comment, Judge, is if she forces us to set up and have another side bar that we have to do repeatedly, that creates the problem we are trying to avoid. So I don't appreciate that you should try. I think you should just do it. That's my suggestion.

THE COURT: Well, gosh, I wish life were that --

MR. SCHNACK: I do too, judge, but we have had to do a number of side bars in this trial.

THE COURT: But I'm a judge that observes the jurors' reactions and whatnot, and they understand it, and I have told them specifically. So, counsel, understand this, that I have a lot of -- here and I think they get it. I think they understand the nature of the process here. And I think they are all very much on board understanding what is going on and why.

But, Doctor, I need -- we are going topic to topic now to assist you in the organization and understanding so we can avoid any problems.

I mean, we have all been here over two weeks to present this case and I have commented, which is rare for me, that counsel have gone the extra number of yards, if not miles, to make sure that the jury gets a clean presentation of each side of their case. So I need your attention and backing on that, at least.

THE WITNESS: Well, I will make every attempt to follow this. I was just thinking that there might be something that I had not thought about or known about. That's all. I'm really intent on following the rules.

THE COURT: I know. And if you have any questions before you answer, I will allow a break just so there is no misunderstanding.

MR. SCHNACK: There was also reference in the report that Jonathan Kendrick was an elder or that Candace was abused by an elder within the church.

There has already been an instruction that he was not in that position ever. So that should be excised from your testimony completely.

THE COURT: And for whatever reason, and I'm not sure what the reason is, there was some misunderstanding, in at least a couple areas of evidence here, that Mr. Kendrick was an elder. He never was. And I don't know -- it is like a virus. You get that in one report and then you find it in three reports. But I would want you to know this, as a matter of fact, he was not an elder.

THE WITNESS: He served in the capacity as a ministerial assistant.

THE COURT: "Servant" is, I think, what you call it.

MR. SCHNACK: Yeah. You didn't get the name right. But it is "ministerial servant."

THE WITNESS: A ministerial servant. Okay. Am I allowed to say that?

THE COURT: Yes.

THE WITNESS: Okay.

THE COURT: And actually, it has been a wonderful education for this Court in terms of the structure. But ministerial servant, I believe, is the title.

MR. SCHNACK: And the last thing I have is, again, because Paul Inman was referenced yesterday when she shouldn't have been during Carolyn Martinez's testimony. We don't want any references to Paul Inman. The name Inman should not be brought up. And I didn't see it in your testimony, so that's probably not an issue.

THE COURT: I think we are giving Inman maybe a little more due than he's worth.

But, again, I don't know what this profession did in terms of Inman.

How is Inman in your report?

MR. SCHNACK: Did you review any depositions of Paul Inman?

THE WITNESS: Not to my knowledge.

MR. SCHNACK: Okay. So just don't use the word "Inman" during your testimony, I think we will be fine.

THE COURT: It sounds like that is almost a given.

MR. SIMONS: And I would, your Honor, disagree with the Soviet style of removal of Paul Inman from history. The fact that Carolyn Martinez was married to him was certainly not, I think, intrusive in any way of the Court's rulings.

THE COURT: Yeah, I didn't regard it as a make way pieces of circumstance. I can have a little sketch up here to try to keep everybody, the family tree here in order.

MR. SCHNACK: Well, we disagree with the scope of the ruling then.

But, nonetheless, for our purposes here today, the word "Inman" shouldn't cross your lips, Doctor.

That's all I have, Your Honor.

THE COURT: All right.

And if you want to chat with Plaintiff's counsel, again, I will certainly give you an opportunity.

All right. I'm glad we had this session. You can review your notes and relax. We start at 8:30 and I will swear you in at that point in time.

And, again, I will advise you to stay within the lines of the rulings I have made. And I have done this specifically because of where we are in the trial and everybody's good faith effort to comply.

All right. Anything else?

I saw your special verdict. I haven't had a chance really to consider it.

MR. SIMONS: That's fine, Your Honor.

Were you able to open it?

THE COURT: I can open it and -- it could only happen in this trial. For some reason, when I get emails from you, they won't print. Sometimes they will print from you; sometimes they won't.

I have had my IT guy in here once. He's going to be back in here.

But I have been able to open it and read it. I'm just not able to print off of it. I'm having my clerk print off of hers.

MR. SIMONS: I think I have a hard copy here with me today somewhere.

THE COURT: Well, you said you were going to bring it so --

MR. SIMONS: Yeah.

THE COURT: -- you know, with plaintiffs' lawyers there's always hope. So I was hopeful you'd show up with it.

MR. SIMONS: Yes. And I'm wondering -- I didn't notice it in the top of my notes where it usually would be, and I'm wondering if I walked out of the door without it.

THE COURT: Well --

MR. SIMONS: But in which case I decided to bring it --

THE COURT: -- I am certainly not going to hold you to --

(Discussion off the record)

MR. McCABE: You know, one thing I noticed is that, Your Honor, that it lumps the two defendants together and I object to that.

MR. SCHNACK: There are other issues.

(Discussion off the record)

(Whereupon the following proceedings were heard in the presence of jurors)

THE COURT: Good morning, Ladies and Gentlemen of the jury.

Mr. Simons?

MR. SIMONS: Yes, your Honor.

The Plaintiff would call Dr. Lynn Ponton.

LYNN PONTON, M.D.

WAS DULY SWORN TO TELL THE TRUTH BY THE CLERK

AND TESTIFIED AS FOLLOWS:

THE CLERK: Would you please state your name and spell your first and last name for the record.

THE WITNESS: Certainly.

Lynn, L-Y-N-N, Elisabeth, E-L-I-S-A-B-E-T-H, Ponton, P-O-N-T-O-N, M.D.

VOIR DIRE EXAMINATION

BY MR. SIMONS:

Q. Dr. Ponton, what is your occupation?

A. I am a child and adolescent psychiatrist and a professor of child and adolescent psychiatry at the University of California in San Francisco at UCSF.

Q. And could you tell us, please, about your formal education.

A. Yes, I will. Hopefully, I will remember it.

I am from a French Canadian background from Northern Wisconsin. Went to the University of Wisconsin in Madison, and studied English and biochemistry. Then followed that up and went to the University of Wisconsin Medical School.

After that, I completed medical school in 1978 and then trained in pediatrics in New York City at Bellevue and St. Vincent's Hospital.

And then following that, I went to the University of Pennsylvania in Philadelphia and trained in adult psychiatry.

Then I came here to the University of California in San Francisco. I trained in childhood adolescent psychiatry, fellowship, for three years.

And then I stayed on as faculty. And I have been at the University of California in San Francisco since 1980 teaching and working.

In addition, I have psychoanalytic training and I'm a trained psychoanalyst at the San Francisco Psychoanalytic Clinic.

So I do a lot of teaching, probably the main doctor there who teaches in the area of adolescent psychiatry. And I work with all the kids with cancer and psychological problems at Moffett Long. So it is a great job, and I get to work with some great people.

Q. Can you tell us if you are board certified?

A. Yes, Mr. Simons.

I am board certified in adult psychiatry and in child and adolescent psychiatry. Both were obtained in 1985.

And then following that, I worked for both the boards, and I have been a board examiner from 1985 to the present time.

In my area of expertise, child and a adolescents, I served on the board committee and wrote the psychiatry boards, both adult and child and adolescents, for ten years.

So I'm very involved in really helping young psychiatrists learn about the field and hopefully pass their tests and go out and work with people.

Q. Now, what does it mean to be "board certified"?

A. A couple different things, Mr. Simons.

It is a lengthy process because you have to first pass the American Medical Boards, three parts, and get your basic licensure.

Then, within your subspecialties, your specialty areas, you have to take both an oral and a written exam.

Unfortunately, for the young doctors, it costs a lot of money and time, and we are trying to look at how to make it as expedient as possible so we can really educate more doctors.

Q. And, Doctor, after having taken the exam yourself, now you work on creating the examinations for these future specialists in adult and child psychology?

A. That's correct. I do. I love writing. You know, I sound like I'm a nerd. But writing is my strongest skill probably because I studied English in addition to chemistry. And that's probably why I have been able to be adept in certain areas.

Q. Tell us a little bit about the writing that you have done during your career.

A. I have written -- to be a full professor at the University of California. That, I have to say, was not easy for a woman. In 1989, I sued the University of California, Class Action for the Women's Faculty. And I won equal pay and equal advancement for Women's Faculty in a class suit.

I obtained tenure before that time and then had some struggles with them, as might be expected.

So I am very active at the university trying to welcome young faculty, and really faculty from all backgrounds and help them to become teachers and clinicians there.

I have written probably about -- you know, I would have to look at the CV because they change every couple of times, and see how it is listed here -- but somewhere between 125 and 150 articles.

I have written The Textbook of Adolescent Psychiatry. I'm one of the five authors on that. The Handbook of Adolescent Risk Taking.

I have written other things. I have written some popular books about risk-taking behaviors, sexuality, sexual abuse, that are well known, and I have also written fiction.

Q. Are you licensed as a doctor in California?

A. Yes, I am. I have been since I moved here in 1980.

Q. And have you had specialized experience and training in the field of childhood and adolescent sexual abuse?

A. Yes.

I had the good fortune to have trained in pediatrics in New York City when the first mandatory reporting was coming about. And I remember the first case that I had to report as an intern at Bellevue. And three daughters were abused by their father. And they said -- I remember my attending saying, "We have a new rule that you are going to have to report these cases."

And it took me all day to write them up and report them. And that, I have to tell you, has continued over these 35 years. There is a lot of reporting.

At UC, we report about one case a week in Moffett Long of sexual abuse. So I have trained the younger doctors in how to do that. I work with the social work team. And I work actually with the state agency some too.

Q. Now, in your teaching assignment, who are the students that you are teaching?

A. I teach young and child adolescent psychiatrists, and then also the pediatricians because they have to be alerted about sexual abuse reporting. The nursing staff at UC, so, psychologists who are training there and social workers.

It is really a wonderful environment to work in, a collaborative environment of about 45 to 50 people working as a team to help the kids.

Q. Now, do you actually see patients? You call it, I guess, clinical practice.

Is that the right term?

A. I see patients in two contexts. In the morning -- not today because I'm here -- but we have walk-arounds, and we will see the cases that are in the hospital at UC. And I'm the main attending. And there is a group of other attendings of younger doctors. We walk around with the kids with cancer.

One of the boys is dying today who has cancer. And the team is meeting with him and with his father to really help them accept the situation. He is very traumatized by it and is in the intensive care unit. And I work with all of those inpatient cases. And I'm involved in both the psychological and some of the medical areas related to it.

I'm quite knowledgeable about pain control as connected with psychological aspects of illness.

Then in the afternoon, I see the patients in the outpatient setting. Usually about 25 to 30 per week.

I'm known particularly for working with young people, like Candace Conti, so the age group of young people, both boys and young men who have been abused too.

Sadly, many young men have been abused also, and it is not as well-known. You know, sometimes the Catholic priest abuse cases have made it more familiar to people, and some of the cases with coaches. And I work with those cases too.

And in the afternoon, I see a lot of patients and I enjoy that. And hopefully I'm done by 7:00 to have dinner with my husband, or if any of my kids are in town, you know, I have dinner with them. I try to get them to have dinner with me.

Q. Have you experienced, outside of the University setting, with childhood trauma, and in particular with addressing programs for childhood trauma?

A. Oh, yes. I'm very active working with the American Psychiatric Association and with the American Academy of Child and Adolescent Psychiatry.

I was the founding chair in the '80s of the Disaster and Trauma Committee for the American Academy.

You probably appreciate this because I got the idea after the Loma Prieta earthquake, when I watched my own children react to the earthquake and have a lot of traumatic symptoms.

And then we organized town meetings for Oakland and San Francisco and for Marin for parents about how to help your children within a few days after the earthquake. I also worked with the Oakland Fire. And I'm currently very involved in the San Bruno fire cases.

So my expertise is really dealing with post-traumatic stress disorder and disaster and trauma. I think what I am most well-known for in that area is that I went on national television and then went to New York City after 2011 -- or September 11th, and went on after President Bush to talk about helping the nation's children with post-traumatic stress disorder.

So I know a lot about that area and especially how to help children, adolescents and adults reduce their trauma load really through a lifetime of being in a traumatic event.

MR. SIMONS: Your Honor, I would offer Dr. Ponton as an expert in the field of psychiatry and child and adolescent psychiatry.

THE COURT: Any questions for Dr. Ponton?

MR. McCABE: No, your Honor.

MR. SCHNACK: No.

THE COURT: I would find her qualified as an expert for the two reasons sought.

DIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. SIMONS:

Q. Now, Dr. Ponton, did I ask you to evaluate Candace Conti?

A. You did, Mr. Simons.

Q. And did you meet with her?

A. I did. I met with her several times.

Q. And in addition to meeting with her, did you review some other materials?

A. I did.

I want to follow all the guidelines here, but

I reviewed a number of depositions and medical records and many documents, really looking at them related to this case.

Q. Did you review Candace's medical records, including the medical records from her childhood and adolescent years?

A. I did.

Q. And did you review the depositions of various health care providers who have treated Candace over time?

A. I did, Mr. Simons.

Q. When was the first interview that you had with Candace Conti?

A. Let me look at this and make sure of this.

I think the date was incorrect on my evaluation, but I saw her in the fall of 2011. And I believe the first date was September 20th, 2011.

Q. And when was the last date that you saw her?

A. I don't have it. I would have to check my billing records, but I would say within the last two months I met with her.

Q. Did you develop an opinion as to whether or not the childhood sexual abuse Candace Conti experienced was a cause of harm to her?

A. Yes, I have, Mr. Simons.

Q. And what is your opinion in that regard?

A. I believe that the childhood sexual abuse such as Candace Conti endured for a lengthy period of time significantly harmed her.

Q. And you mentioned earlier post-traumatic stress disorder, PTSD.

What is post-traumatic stress disorder?

A. Post-traumatic stress disorder came out after, actually, the war that the world has participated in.

We probably saw the first cases of the Shell Shock Syndrome, you know, after World War I and World War II. Even the Spanish American War had early reportings of it. You can see throughout time -- or human time -- stories referring to it.

But beginning in the '80s -- after '70s and '80s, after Vietnam, and particularly at the University of Pennsylvania where I worked, we worked with a lot of Vietnam Vets and it came up. Really started to see a syndrome. At first they attributed it to Agent Orange in the Vietnam war. And then they realized that it was some sort of anxiety disorder.

And post-traumatic stress disorder is a anxiety disorder. So it is important to keep that in mind.

Other anxieties are global. There is a global anxiety disorder that is very common. Fears. Specific fears are also anxiety disorders. But they are traumatic, really, events that really awaken in the body, psychological and physical responses.

So with post-traumatic stress disorder -- which I sometimes call it the Queen of Anxiety Disorders -- there is a traumatic event that makes the person feel that really under very serious threat or jeopardy that occurs in that way. It can be a fire, such as those who witnessed the San Bruno fire.

Sexual abuse makes a child feel very threatened in terms of body integrity. And the DSM, which is our diagnostic manual in psychiatry, this red book, it really describes how with children, post-sexual abuse, really makes them feel traumatized and attacked.

Because you can see, it is hard to see, but a fire and a sexual abuser, if you're a child, are similar. But they really are similar in terms of some of the body's response to it.

So there's a traumatic event. It really disturbs the functioning of the young person. And that can be how they do in school, how their emotional state, their physical response.

And then there are three categories of symptoms that we're really looking at. The first one, almost everybody knows about. The re-experiencing symptoms, which are like flashbacks, bad dreams, that you just can't forget this trauma. You can't get it out of your mind and it keeps coming back.

And with Ms. Conti, one of the most disturbing things -- she is quite a well-read young woman, and the first to really describe Edgar Allan Poe's The Pit and the Pendulum story to me.

But she feels like she is down in the pit in her dreams and she is being held down and abused. And that recurrent dream really re-enacts the trauma that she has experienced. So the re-experiencing symptoms are very important.

The second category are avoidance symptoms. You try to avoid thinking about, feeling or talking about the traumatic event. And we have all done that. I really strongly encourage avoidance, if there is a traumatic event in play and it is on the television. You don't want to watch it. You don't want to expose your children to the trauma of the repeated viewings of videos that are traumatic.

So that aspect is really, really important to use some avoidance.

But if you avoid it completely, then it still is inside you, as it was with Ms. Conti. She avoided talking about it. Really hid it. Not feeling safe to talk about it. And it really affected her internal world in a very important way and contributed, I think, to some of her significant problems, you know, which were substances and also depression, you know, that were used, I think, to soothe her and help her with this.

The third category are physical symptoms with post-traumatic stress disorder. And that can be hypervigilance, you are jumpy, you are watchful, you are really checking things out. You are carefully looking at everything because you have been through something that has really taught you to watch things in a different way.

So that's what the diagnosis is. That is how it is made, through the three categories. And that is really the way we think about it.

Q. Do you have an opinion, with reasonable, professional certainty, based on your knowledge and education and training, and your work in this specific case, as to whether or not Candace Conti experienced post-traumatic stress syndrome as a result of her sexual abuse?

A. I do, Mr. Simons.

Q. And what is your opinion?

A. That she has severe chronic post-traumatic stress disorder.

Q. You used the word "chronic." What does that refer to?

A. Chronic means that it's lasted longer than six months. And, for her, it has lasted for years.

Q. And if we could look at Exhibit 55.

Now, you mentioned that you had reviewed Ms. Conti's medical records?

A. That's correct. I have. And I actually tagged this and my copy of it. This particular record, I think I have it.

Q. And this is a record from August of 2002.

A. That's correct.

Q. Why is this record significant to you in forming your opinions? And particularly with regard to the opinion you just expressed about chronic PTSD.

A. Well, this is an early disclosure of abuse. I mean, it is really going to be, you know, years before Ms. Conti is fortunate enough to get the treatment that she needs.

But if we look -- look at the star -- this is Dr. Afruma's report. And if you look midway down there, the abuse is reported, presumably, by Candace to him for age 9 to 13. And it is interesting -- that's an approximate, you know, age. And I would guess that Candace said that she had been abused for a couple of years.

Why this is important is she is much younger at this point in time, but she is giving this disclosure. And it really aids in credibility and it is really looking at the story over time.

So it is important that that had come up and she was thinking about it. It is important to know, in sexual abuse, that it can be disclosed and then the person gets scared again and doesn't talk about it. So it has to do, really, with how safe you feel in the environment talking about it.

So she talks about it here. She also acknowledges, at this point, that it began at about 9 years of age when she was a very young child. And you have to think, 9 is very young. It is really an elementary student. And you see those kids on the playground, probably have your own grandkids and kids, and they are very, very young.

I think what is interesting about this -- and I have to say something about our pediatric group, which I'm part of too with some training -- it is written, "not discussed further."

And I will just say something about it, not so much a comment about Candace, often they do not say "not discussed further" because there is the question of mandatory reporting applicable at this point in time. And they say that because that covers them in terms of not reporting.

So I think that that's why that is written in that particular way, but it supports Candace's later disclosure.

MR. SCHNACK: Your Honor, can we have a side bar, please?

THE COURT: Sure.

(Sidebar Discussion)

BY MR. SIMONS:

Q. Let's look at the second page of the Dr. Afruma's health form, August 2002.

Now, are you familiar with the standard medical recordkeeping techniques?

A. I have to say that we just went to Apex today at UC. And not being there, I am missing being oriented on it. And so it is changing. But I read a lot of medical records every day. Yeah.

Q. Is there a standard designation for the "OAP" that we see in the middle?

A. Yes. It is actually "SOAP". They are called "SOAP notes." Subjective Objective Assessment and Plan is what they mean. It is our standard formatting for notes. Not everybody uses it. And it has become really -- we are going to the box system with Apex all over the country. It starts today at UCSF. And we check boxes. And we are using a new format. So SOAP is probably going to go by the wayside. So it is challenging.

But what is important here is, if you look at the assessment part there, these are the doctors' diagnoses and post-traumatic stress disorder, depression and insomnia. And then the recommendation under the plan is really encouraged to discuss with the counselor, psychiatrist, consider cognitive therapy as part of the treatment plan.

And I think that's -- what cognitive therapy is, cognitive therapy is a therapy that targets thoughts. And cognitive therapy was developed by Aaron Beck at the University of Pennsylvania. And it really is useful in recurrent thoughts from post-traumatic stress disorder in helping the individual to cope with them.

You generally need it, along with a lot of other treatment in somebody who has a chronic case like the one with Ms. Conti.

Q. Is this record the first suggestion in any of Ms. Conti's medical records about a possible post-traumatic stress disorder that existed prior to your evaluation of her?

A. It is the first one, Mr. Simons, that I have seen. You know, we don't always have every medical record.

I think there is one more point I would like to make off of it, as I put on my glasses here, I can really see better -- and this doctor also saw, and it says -- it mentioned how the drugs can be used to numb the experiences.

So Ms. Conti's use of substances could have been used to numb her symptoms of post-traumatic stress disorder. And the doctor very nicely said that it is best to have a proper diagnosis and treatment plan.

So I think what the doctor was trying to do was redirect here and set her on a proper course. Of course, she is a very young girl when she comes in for this.

Thank you.

Q. Now, with regard to the chronic part of PTSD, does PTSD that has existed in a chronic state of more than six months have more difficulty being subjected to treatment than other forms of PTSD that may be acuter or of shorter duration?

A. That's correct, Mr. Simons.

There is a couple of things we look at. What makes a case require longer periods of treatment? One is the chronicity, really how long it has been there.

The other are what we will call "co-morbid diagnoses," the other problems that go along with it.

In Ms. Conti's case, the depression that goes along with it makes it harder to treat, and the history of substances makes it harder to treat too.

So those things really mean that you have to spend more time, you have to have a much more of a talking relationship with the young person.

For example, after the San Bruno fire, we worked in several of the schools in the San Bruno area to target post-traumatic stress disorder in the first four weeks after the fire. And we had some success with that.

But that's very early intervention, you know. And if you have a situation that is existing much longer, it is really much harder to work with.

Q. You mentioned the drug use.

First of all, you are aware of Candace Conti's sustained history of substance abuse?

A. I am. I don't know how much of that we are to talk about. I want to follow all the rules here, Mr.

Simons, though.

Q. Do you have an opinion as to whether or not her years of substance abuse are caused in substantial portion from the sexual abuse she experienced as a child?

A. I do.

Q. What is your opinion?

A. As Dr. Afruma said here, I think it is very likely that Candace was using these drugs to numb her symptoms. I think she had very strong symptoms of post-traumatic stress disorder. And I think those drugs -- many of the drugs that people sell on the street are antidepressants. You know, they are not what we buy or use and they are not what we wish for people because they are badly made and have lots of side effects, and they ruin people's lives. But they are antidepressants.

Q. Now, do you have familiarity with the various studies and statistical information concerning genetic factors in substance abuse?

A. I do.

Q. And based on your information working on this case and your professional knowledge, do you have an opinion as to whether or not it would be more likely than not that Candace Conti would have been in sustained substance abuse absent the child sex abuse?

A. I don't know how I can say this and stay within the rules, but I will try.

I believe she suffered very significant sexual abuse at an early age. Nine is very early. You know, it is not just fondling. I don't know if the details of the disclosures have been given. And it went on for a significant period of time, and there were multiple episodes. So all of that makes it very significant.

With respect to your question about genetics and substance abuse, if a family member was using substances and, you know, genetically carried that predisposition, you know, how would that affect Ms. Conti?

There are studies that indicate that there are higher rates in children of substance abusers that are going to use substances too.

But there are -- also, the vast majority of children of substance abusers do not use substances. You know, and many of us know this, because we have parents who might drink, and we instead decide we are never going to do that and we are going to stay away from it, and, you know, things like that.

So I think that is the majority of people.

So just because your parents had a genetic propensity, you know, to use and carry that genetic loading, doesn't mean that you are necessarily going to become a user.

Q. Did you do a trauma assessment of Candace Conti?

A. I did. I will look for that right here.

Q. And while you are looking, can you tell us what a trauma assessment is?

A. We are trying -- much in the last few years, we have tried to normalize the testing that we are doing. And we are especially trying to do it with the big cases, so we can get validity on our testing mechanisms for post-traumatic stress disorder. So this is the post-traumatic stress checklist, the civilian variant. And in terms of her symptoms, you know, I will go through them so that you have some idea about them.

She has repeated disturbing memories, as I mentioned the dream of The Pit and Pendulum, you know, and being held down. That is one of the most disturbing things for her. She has a lot of triggering with physical reactions, which is heart pounding, trouble breathing or sweating.

You know, one of the ways you can find out if somebody has had trauma is if they are taken in for panic attacks to the emergency room, you have a family member at home that has had an experience like that, often that is linked into that. So that is a key, I think, to keep in mind.

And she had a lot of physical symptoms that were reported to various docs.

Then loss of interest in things that she used to enjoy is very, very important.

What is also noteworthy about adolescents in this, in post-traumatic stress, is they feel as if their life is going to be cut short if they have experienced a traumatic event. And she has that feeling that she will die young. Just because she experienced something so bad so early, she is convinced that this is going to happen to her.

That, with adolescents and children who have had trauma, is incredibly characteristic of it. So that is a major problem.

Then other things, she is super alert and she feels jumpy.

So those are the things that showed up on this scoring mechanism.

Q. Over the time that you have seen Candace Conti, have you seen significant improvement in her overall condition?

And first of all, let me start out, you are aware she's been in treatment?

A. I am aware of that, Mr. Simons. I strongly supported that.

Q. And have you seen improvement from the first time you saw her to the last time you saw her?

A. Very much so.

Q. And is that improvement a significant finding?

A. Yes. Because it really indicates -- I think when the abuse is disclosed and a person is able to talk about it and really figure out how it made them feel and respond as a child, it is very helpful.

And knowing that she has responded so well, now that the abuse story has come out, is really very important in this case.

Q. What is your prognosis for her?

A. With treatment -- and she will require a lot of treatment -- I believe she has a fair to good prognosis.

They say you never really recover from chronic severe post-traumatic stress disorder. Meaning that if a traumatic event happens later in your life, it re-triggers it.

But you get wonderful coping strategies from therapy, and really the sense that your resiliency is increased and you can master this.

As I said in my report, I am recommending two years of intensive, three times per week, therapy for her and followed by six years of individual treatment of one time per week.

I think the total amount, financially, was about $160,000 for that in today's world in money.

Q. Do you have an opinion as to whether or not Candace Conti exhibits or suffers from any other psychiatric illness or diagnosis of significance that would affect any of the matters we have talked about so far in your opinions?

A. Yes. I already mentioned the depression. And she meets -- she was diagnosed as depressed here by Dr. Afruma years before.

The type of depression that I diagnosed her with is dysthymia. And that is a depressed mood that is really ongoing, chronic and over a period of time. It contrasts with major depressive disorder, which you have probably heard about.

Both need treatment. Dysthymia is more common when somebody has had depression. They may have had a major depressive disorder, as she did, probably at the time of the abuse and felt like harming herself, did some self-mutilation and cutting, which is very characteristic of young girls who have been sexually abused. But then it evolves into a chronic depressed state, which is what this did.

In addition, as you know, Mr. Simons, the substance abuse disorders are psychiatric diagnoses too.

Q. What about paranoia or other similar types of diagnoses? Does she have any evidence that she exhibits in her records or in your interviews with her of those types of diagnoses?

A. It is important to say, I think, what paranoia is.

She does not, first of all, and her thinking is very clear. I am very impressed with her ability to read, use her mind, use therapy. That is really coming to light. And I wish her well in her career with animals. Animals need treatment too. They are not my favorite. I'm not an animal person. But they really need help and she loves them.

And so I think that that's very important. So she has got a path of pursuit, and is really intent upon that. And that is really very important.

MR. SIMONS: Thank you.

I have no further questions.

CROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. SCHNACK:

Q. You testified that Candace experienced what you call a lengthy period of abuse; is that correct, ma'am?

A. Yes. If you could please call me "doctor." I know it is a lot to ask, but it is my title and function here and I worked hard for it.

Q. I'm not sure that I didn't address you as doctor.

A. You addressed me as, "ma'am." But that's okay.

Q. Okay. There is no malice intended there.

A. Thank you very much. Thank you for doing that.

THE COURT: All right, Mr. Schnack.

MR. SCHNACK: Thank you, your Honor.

BY MR. SCHNACK:

Q. In your report, you wrote that Candace told you that she had been abused, quote, more than twice per month, and often it happened four to six times per month, close quote, by Mr. Kendrick.

Do you recall that?

A. Yes. I have got my report here, and I knew you were going to question me on that.

Q. Ma'am -- I'm sorry, Doctor, if you could just answer the questions without the sidelines, I would appreciate that.

A. Okay. Can you please repeat that?

Q. Certainly.

Do you recall writing in your report that Candace reported to you that for three years she had been abused, quote, more than twice per month and often they happened six times per month, close quote, by Jonathan Kendrick?

A. I have it here. I don't recall writing it, but it is in front of me and I wrote it.

Q. And then further down in that same paragraph, you, quote, in summary, Candace's sequence of abuse by Jonathan took place over three years and involved hundreds of episodes of sexual abuse, close quote.

Did I read that correctly?

A. Yes. This is in my part of the report, description of the events as reported by Candace Conti.

So it was what she told me during that first interview.

Q. And -- okay. Let's turn now to your deposition. You charged $800 an hour for that deposition; is that correct?

A. The rates are set by the University of California, which I am a faculty member of. And then they go into my university compensation plan which pays for my staff.

Q. Is that a yes or a no?

A. I did charge that. They charged that, yes.

Q. And how much are you charging Mr. Simons for appearing here today?

A. I think the rate might be $900 for court testimony.

Q. And is it fair to say you have charged 25 or $30,000 or more for the evaluation of this case?

A. Not at all. I think you saw the billing. And I will get it for you, and I can tell you.

Q. How many hours have you put into it?

A. I will find it. I want to make sure.

I think, if you remember from my deposition, that the billing was remarkably low in this case, partly because I'm very -- I'm a speed reader, and it is relatively quick. So let me look at this.

And I think --

Q. With all due respect, we didn't discuss your billings in your deposition.

But go ahead and respond.

A. I brought them there for discussion and was not asked about them.

But I think, approximately, the total billings here are well under $8,000. And that's up until the time of the deposition. I would guess that since that time, probably, you know, in preparation, you depo-ed me in one hour, so that was $800.

I probably --

Q. But I paid that. Correct?

A. Yes. But I got that money. So you did pay me.

Thank you for doing that. I put it in my comp plan.

But I think probably the total on this is much closer to twelve to $15,000 for being more than a year at work on the case.

MR. SCHNACK: Okay. No further questions.

THE COURT: Mr. McCabe?

MR. SIMONS: No, thank you, your Honor.

THE COURT: Mr. Simons?

MR. SIMONS: Yes. I have one question.

REDIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. SIMONS:

Q. Doctor, did I understand you correctly that the money that you charge and receive actually goes through the Regents and into your department, and not to you personally?

A. Right. It goes into a shared university compensation plan and pays for a percentage of our salary and is used -- I have two assistants. And especially, since I'm switching to the Apex, we all have to train, and they help me a lot. They are younger.

Q. So that does not go to you personally?

A. Does not go to me personally, no.

MR. SIMONS: That's all I have.

MR. SCHNACK: Nothing further.

THE COURT: Doctor, thank you very much for your time. You are now excused.

(Whereupon, the following proceedings were heard outside the presence of jurors)

THE COURT: All right. Please have a seat. The jury is outside of the courtroom.

MR. SCHNACK: Yes, your Honor. We wanted to move for a directed verdict on the punitive damages claims, the last cause of action alleged in The Watchtower Bible and Tract Society's Complaint, there is no evidence of malice of pressure and thought, or much less clear and convincing evidence of that, and we ask that that be stricken from the case at this point.

THE COURT: All right. Motion for Directed Verdict noted as to its timeliness and circumstance.

I will reserve it until tomorrow for argument and in briefing and what anybody wants to do. Because I expect we will conclude fairly early tomorrow. And I will decide the motion at that time, after due consideration of anything further and all evidence.

All right. Let's take a break until twenty to 10 and we continue to go forward.

(Break taken)

THE COURT: All right. Mr. McCabe, your first witness.

MR. McCABE: Defense would call Ms. Bernice Munoz to the stand, your Honor.

THE COURT: Welcome, Ms. Munoz.

Please stand and raise your right hand.

BERNICE MUNOZ

WAS DULY SWORN TO TELL THE TRUTH BY THE CLERK

AND TESTIFIED AS FOLLOWS:

THE CLERK: Would you please state your name and spell your first and last name for the record.

THE WITNESS: Bernice Munoz, B-E-R-N-I-C-E, and last name Munoz is M-U-N-O-Z.

THE COURT: Would you please move the chair forward so that you are more comfortable, a little more forward. And then is that comfortable for you?

THE WITNESS: I think so.

THE COURT: Okay.

DIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. McCABE:

Q. Could you tell us where you live?

A. Fremont, California.

Q. And are you married?

A. Yes, I am.

Q. What is your husband's name?

A. Daniel Munoz.

Q. How many children do you have?

A. Four sons.

Q. Do you have any grandchildren?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. How many?

A. Twelve.

Q. Wow, congratulations.

Do you have great grandchildren?

A. Eleven.

Q. Okay. And are you one of Jehovah's Witnesses?

A. Yes, I am.

Q. When did you become baptized as one of Jehovah's Witnesses?

A. In June of 1987.

Q. And were you associated at the time of your baptism with the North Fremont Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses?

A. Yes, I was.

Q. Are you still associated with that congregation?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you attend meetings at that congregation in 1993 through 1997?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. I'm going to show you what has been previously marked as Defense Exhibit Number 132, and ask you if you recognize this photograph.

Do you recognize that?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. Can you see it well enough?

A. Yes.

Q. What is this?

A. It is the entryway of the Kingdom Hall of Jehovah's Witnesses.

Q. Okay. Is that the Kingdom Hall that you attend, the entryway?

A. Yes.

Q. The next slide.

Do you recognize this one?

A. Yes.

Q. What is it?

A. It is the back side of the Kingdom Hall.

Q. Okay. It looks like there is double door there.

Is that what you see?

A. Yes.

Q. And is that the entryway to the Kingdom Hall?

A. Yes, it is.

Q. And is that where most folks come into the meeting and enter in through that door?

A. Yes, uh-huh.

Q. And do they also exit out that door?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. The next photograph I would like to show you is another picture.

Do you recognize any of the people in that picture?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. Okay. Do you recognize the interior, what that room is?

A. Yes, it is the Kingdom Hall.

Q. Okay. And this looks like an auditorium with a -- looks like an aisle going down here.

Is there one or more aisles separating that are these seats?

A. There is two aisles.

Q. Okay. So one down this side?

A. Yes.

Q. And then one down the other side where the main group of people are pictured?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you know how many seats are on each side of the aisles?

A. Maybe 25.

Q. On the sides or in the middle?

A. On the side aisles?

Q. Yes, on the sides.

A. Maybe like around 30.

Q. Okay. How many people can be seated in this auditorium, if you know?

A. Sometimes maybe over 200.

Q. Okay. For a normal meeting currently, what is your attendance like?

A. Maybe about a 180.

Q. How about back in the 1990s? '94, '95, '96?

A. It was pretty much the same.

Q. Okay. It's a mix of adults, children, younger, older people, families?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you remember back in the mid-1990s a family in the congregation known as the Conti family?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. Do you remember who made up that family?

A. The father, the mother and a child. A little girl.

Q. Do you remember what the little girl's name was?

A. I believe it was Candace.

Q. Okay. Do you remember what she looked like?

A. Yeah. She was white and she had reddish brown hair.

Q. Do you remember what the father and mother's names were?

A. I'm sorry.

Q. Father and mother's name, do you remember what they were?

A. Neal Conti and the mother, I believe, was Kathy Conti.

Q. Okay. Did you see them at the Kingdom Hall during the mid-1990s when you went to meetings?

A. Yes.

Q. Were you a regular meeting attender? Did you go to each of the meetings at the Kingdom Hall?

A. Yes, most of the time.

Q. If you were sick or on vacation, you didn't go; is that correct?

A. Right.

Q. But if you were in town, did you go to the meetings?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you remember another family in the congregation by the name of Kendrick?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. All right. Do you remember who composed that family?

A. It was Brother Kendrick and his wife and a child. A little girl.

Q. Do you remember what the girl's name was?

A. The little girl? No, I don't remember.

Q. How about Mrs. Kendrick; do you remember her first name?

A. No, I don't.

Q. Do you remember seeing both of these families attend meetings at the same time back in the mid-1990s at the Kingdom Hall?

A. Well, I would say so.

Q. Did you ever see Candace Conti sit on Jonathan Kendrick's lap at the Kingdom Hall before, after or during the meetings?

A. No. Never.

Q. Did you ever see any little girl sit on Jonathan Kendrick's lap at the meetings?

A. No.

Q. Do you remember where Jonathan Kendrick used to sit in the meetings?

A. I remember him sitting with his wife and child, and they used to sit in the middle.

Q. Okay.

A. But when he was alone, sometimes he sat in the back row or so. And I remember this because sometimes he used to fall asleep in the back row.

Q. How did you know he was asleep?

A. Well, because he had his eyes closed and he had a silent snore.

Q. So at least when he was sleeping, no one was sitting on his lap.

A. What was that again?

Q. When you saw him sleeping, no one was sitting on his lap?

A. No.

Q. Did you ever see Mr. Kendrick give Candace Conti big bear hugs at the Kingdom Hall?

A. No.

Q. Did you ever see Jonathan Kendrick leave in his vehicle with Candace Conti, in the vehicle alone?

A. No.

Q. Did you ever see Jonathan Kendrick and Candace Conti out together in a field ministry going from house to house together alone?

A. No.

Q. Did you ever see Candace Conti at the Kingdom Hall without her father or her mother or both of her parents at the Kingdom Hall?

A. No.

Q. Did you ever observe anything about Mr. Kendrick that, as a mother or grandmother, would cause you any concern about his behavior at the Kingdom Hall?

A. No.

Q. I'm going to show you what has been marked previously as Plaintiff's Number 64 and the Defense Number 37, and ask you if you recognize this document.

A. Yes, I do.

Q. Could you tell me what it is?

A. Well, it is talking about protecting your children.

Q. Well, first of all, what is this document?

A. It is an Awake Magazine.

Q. Okay. And back in '93, how did you obtain copies of the Awake Magazine, if you did?

A. In the mail.

Q. So you got them delivered to you in the mail. Were they also available at the Kingdom Hall?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you recall getting this magazine back in the 1990s?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. Do you recall reading it?

A. Uh-huh.

Q. Was it your custom and practice to read the magazines when they came?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you have a general idea of what the magazine was about?

A. No. Not now, I don't. It is talking about protecting your children and things that could happen to them.

Q. Okay. Sexual child abuse. Correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you have this magazine still available to you in your home?

A. No.

Q. Do you have a computer in your home?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you have an electronic library in your home?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you have a Watchtower electronic library in your home?

A. Yes.

Q. And does it have a search engine in it?

A. Yes, it does.

Q. So if you typed up "child abuse" in the search engine, would it bring up this article?

A. Yes.

Q. And other articles that dealt with this subject?

A. Yes.

MR. McCABE: I have nothing further, your Honor.

THE COURT: Mr. Simons?

CROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. SIMONS:

Q. Were you paying special attention to Brother Kendrick?

A. Special attention? No.

MR. SIMONS: I have nothing further. Thank you.

THE COURT: Ms. Munoz, thank you for your time.

You are excused.

MR. McCABE: Your Honor, the Defense would call Sylvia Munoz.

SYLVIA MUNOZ

WAS DULY SWORN TO TELL THE TRUTH BY THE CLERK AND TESTIFIED AS FOLLOWS:

THE CLERK: Will you please state your name and spell your first and last name for the record.

THE WITNESS: Sylvia Munoz, S-Y-L-V-I-A M-U-N-O-Z.

DIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. McCABE:

Q. Good morning, Ms. Munoz.

A. Good morning.

Q. Could you tell the jury where you live, please?

A. 35958 Adobe Drive, Fremont, California.

Q. Are you related to the Ms. Munoz that just testified?

A. Yes. That's my mother-in-law.
Q. What is your husband's name?
A. Daniel Munoz.
Q. And how long have you been married?
A. Twenty-seven years.
Q. Do you have any children?
A. Two sons.
Q. How old are they?
A. Nineteen and 26.
Q. So one is the same age as Candace Conti?
A. Yes.
Q. Are you one of Jehovah's Witnesses?
A. Yes.
Q. What congregation do you attend?
A. North Fremont.
Q. And when did you start attending meetings at North Fremont Congregation?
A. Since before I was baptized before 1991.
Q. So you were baptized in 1991 but you were attending meetings before you became baptized?
A. Yes.
Q. Were you a regular meeting attender during the 1990s?
A. Yes.
Q. Did you miss many meetings?

A. I tried not to. Only when my children were sick.

Q. And when they weren't sick or you weren't on vacation, was it your custom and practice to be at the meetings?

A. Yes.

Q. I want to show you what has previously been admitted to evidence as Defense Number 132, and ask if you recognize this picture.

A. Yes.

Q. What is this?

A. That is the front of the Kingdom Hall where they have the meetings.

Q. And that's the Kingdom Hall you still attend today?

A. Yes.

Q. I want to show you a picture of the interior of that -- or looks like the interior of a room.

Does that look to be like the Kingdom Hall that you attend?

A. Yes, I recognize the friends there.

Q. Okay. And do you recognize the interior of the building too?

A. Yes.

Q. Is it pretty much the same as it has been since, say, 1993 or 1994?

A. Yes. I think they had a paint job done to the interior. But, yeah, it is the same.

Q. But structure is still the same?

A. Yes.

Q. Same amount of seats in the facility?

A. Yes.

Q. What's it like before and after the meeting ends? Is it chaos in the Kingdom Hall, kids running around, things like that?

A. It's not chaotic. I mean, you know, we are encouraged to speak to one another and communicate and associate before and after the meetings.

Q. Kids running around and playing tag?

A. Sometimes. I mean, they're children. They do like to play with their friends and talk to their friends. But it never gets out of hand or anything like that.

Q. Your children didn't do that?

A. No. We always had our boys right by us.

Q. Back in the mid-1990s, do you remember a family by the name of Conti?

A. Yes.

Q. And who made up that family?

A. Neal Conti, the father, Kathy, and they had a daughter, Candace. And I believe Neal had a son, but I can't remember his name.

Q. And do you remember them coming to the Kingdom Hall to meetings there?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you remember specifically Candace? Do you remember what she looked like?

A. Yes.

Q. What did she look like?

A. She was light-skinned. She had freckles on her face, dark brownish red hair, kind of long. She was a cute little girl.

Q. And do you also remember a family by the name of Kendrick attending meetings at the Kingdom Hall during the same time period, the mid-1990s?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. Do you remember what their names were?

A. Jonathan Kendrick, Evelyn. And Evelyn had a daughter by the name of Andrea, I believe.

Q. And do you remember both of these families being at meetings together at the same time?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you ever see Candace Conti getting a big bear hug from Jonathan Kendrick?

A. No.

Q. Would that have been appropriate in your mind to have something like that happen?

A. That would not be appropriate, no.

Q. How about -- did you ever see Candace Conti sitting on Mr. Kendrick's lap either before, during or after a meeting?

A. No.

Q. I'm talking about when she was 9, 10, 11 years old.

A. No.

Q. Would you have thought that would be appropriate?

A. That would not be appropriate.

Q. Okay. What about, did you ever see Mr. Kendrick -- do you remember what kind of vehicle he drove?

A. No, I don't remember.

Q. Did you ever see Mr. Kendrick and Ms. Conti, as a little girl, 9, 10, 11, 12 years old, leaving the Kingdom Hall property together in the same vehicle?

A. No.

Q. Did you ever see Mr. Kendrick and Ms. Conti working together in the field ministry?

A. No.

Q. Did you ever see them driving anywhere in a car together?

A. No.

Q. In doing your field ministry, do unmarried men go in a car with an unmarried woman together alone?

A. No.

Q. Why not?

A. Because it is not appropriate.

Q. Now, did you ever see Candace Conti alone at the Kingdom Hall without one of her parents being there?

A. No.

Q. I wanted to show you Plaintiff's Number 30. It is an aerial photo. And I want to see if you recognize what it is.

Can you see that photograph?

A. I can see it, yes.

Q. Would you like one in your hand to look at?

A. I would probably like to see it a little closer.

Q. Let me give you a copy of what is on the board.

A. Looks like the parking lot.

Q. The parking lot of what?

A. Of the Kingdom Hall.

Q. Do you notice there is kind of like a triangle to what is my right side of the photograph as I'm looking at it?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you see that?

A. Yes.

Q. What is that area?

A. It is -- now it is kind of like an overflow of the parking lot, I guess. Or sometimes the friends do park. But back then I don't think it was really used for that.

Q. And how often do you see cars parked in this area?

A. Now, probably pretty much every meeting now. But before, no.

Q. Is there more than one congregation that meets at this Kingdom Hall?

A. Not at the same time.

Q. Is this a dirt area?

A. Yes, uh-huh.

Q. How do children dress when they come to the meetings at the Kingdom Hall currently?

A. They are very nicely dressed. The girls wear nice dresses and even the young ones, little boys, wear suits, nice shoes.

Q. Was that true back in the 1990s as far as you remember?

A. Yeah, my boys were always dressed in a suit.
Q. And your boys were -- one of them at least was the age of Ms. Conti.
Did you allow your boys to play out in this dirt area that we are talking about?
A. Never, no.
Q. Before and after meetings?
A. No, never.
Q. You never caught them out there --
A. No.
Q. How about running around in the parking lot?
A. No.
Q. Why not?
A. It's dangerous. The friends are coming in and out of the parking lot.
Q. I want to direct your attention now to Plaintiff's Exhibit 64 and Defense 37, which has been admitted into evidence in this case, and ask if you recognize what this document is.
A. Yeah. It is an Awake Magazine.
Q. Back in -- looks like it's in October 8, 1993 Awake Magazine.
Do you recognize that?
A. Yes.
Q. And do you recall if you received this magazine back in 1993?

A. Yes.

Q. What is the general subject matter about this magazine?

A. Protecting your children.

Q. I would like to draw your attention to a picture in this.

Do you recall reading this when you got it?

A. Yes.

Q. All right. And let me ask you this too while we are looking at the picture -- I'm going to go to page 8 of the exhibit.

Excuse me.

Seven out of 13 of the exhibit. But there is a number, like, 7 over 13. Do you see that?

A. Seven over 13, yes.

Q. And currently, do you have this magazine available to you in your home?

A. I would have it in our -- what we call our CD-ROM that is our Watchtower library where we have a lot of our publications.

Q. And you have that on a CD-ROM?

A. CD-ROM, yes.

Q. Do you have a computer?

A. Yes.

Q. Does your CD-ROM have a search engine in it?
A. Yes.
Q. So if you wanted to look at any articles about childhood sexual abuse or protecting children, what would you do?
A. I would log on to the CD-ROM in the Watchtower library and I could just put in a couple words and hit search and it would bring up a couple articles.
Q. Articles like this?
A. Right.
Q. As you look at page 7 of 13 in that photograph that's there, do you know what that is depicting?
A. Yes. It is depicting an adult trying to talk to a young child.
Q. Okay. And the subject matter of sexual abuse, does it look like there is a mom and a dad here coaching a child?
A. Yes.
Q. Do you remember seeing Jonathan Kendrick specifically at meetings back in the mid-1990s?
A. Yes.
Q. Anything significant ever stand out about him?

A. I do recall sometimes he would fall asleep during the meetings. Not all the time, but sometimes.

Q. And that was noticeable by you?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you know where he sat at the meetings when he came by himself?

A. I believe it was toward the back.

Q. Did you ever see him do anything inappropriate with a child at the Kingdom Hall?

A. No, never.

Q. Out in the parking lot?

A. No.

MR. McCABE: I have nothing further.

CROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. SIMONS:

Q. Good morning, Ms. Munoz.

A. Hello.

Q. Did you have any reason to keep a special eye on Jonathan Kendrick?

A. No.

MR. SIMONS: Nothing further.

THE COURT: Are we done with Ms. Munoz?

MR. McCABE: She can be excused, your Honor.

THE COURT: Thank you for your time this morning.

You are now excused.

MR. McCABE: The defense would next call Mrs. Pam Figuerido.

PAMELA FIGUERIDO

WAS DULY SWORN TO TELL THE TRUTH BY THE CLERK

AND TESTIFIED AS FOLLOWS:

THE CLERK: Would you please state your name and spell your first and last name for the record.

THE WITNESS: It's Pamela Figuerido. P-A-M-E-L-A, F-I-G-U-E-R-I-D-O.

THE CLERK: Thank you.

DIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. McCABE:

Q. Good morning, Mrs. Figuerido.

A. Good morning.

Q. Could you tell the jury where you live, please?

A. Fremont, California.

Q. How long have you lived there?

A. Let's see. Since 1983.

Q. Are you married?

A. Yes.
Q. What is your husband's name?
A. Gary.
Q. All right. Do you have any children?
A. Yes.
Q. What are their ages?
A. Thirty-four and 39.
Q. Do you have any grandchildren?
A. Seven.
Q. Are you one of Jehovah's Witnesses?
A. Yes, I am.
Q. When were you baptized as one of Jehovah's Witnesses?
A. In 1961.
Q. How old were you at that time?
A. Thirteen.
Q. Were you baptized at the North Fremont Congregation?
A. I was baptized in San Jose.
Q. Okay. Were you attending the North Fremont Congregation at the time of your baptism?
A. No.
Q. How long have you been attending meetings at the Kingdom Hall at North Fremont?
A. Since 1983 when we moved there.

Q. And back in the mid-1990s, what was the frequency of your meetings? Since I heard they had three meetings a week, what would be your custom and practice of going to meetings back in the mid-1990s?

A. That would be correct. We have two mid-week meetings and a Sunday meeting.

Q. Did you go to all the meetings?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you ever miss?

A. Well, when we were on vacation or if one of us was sick.

Q. Okay. In the Kingdom Hall which you attend, I want to show you what has been marked as Exhibit 132. And I want to show you a picture of -- looks like some people standing together, and ask if you recognize anybody in this picture.

A. Oh, yes.

Q. Who are those people?

A. They are members of the congregation.

Q. Okay. And it looks like they are either standing or singing or something.

But how many rows of seats are in this -- I mean, like, are there aisleways in the seating arrangement?

A. Well, there is three sections of seats and two on the sides and one center section.

Q. Now, on the side section, I assume you are talking about what is just going off camera here in the corner?

A. That's correct.

Q. How many seats are in those rows on that side?

A. I think there is four.

Q. How about on -- there is another row on the other side, I take it, in this area?

A. On the far wall?

Q. Yeah.

A. The same.

Q. Four seats in the middle?

A. I think there is about ten.

Q. Okay. How many people attend the meetings currently on Sunday?

A. Usually around a hundred.

Q. A hundred?

A. Uh-huh.

Q. How about back in the 1990s; was that similar?

A. Similar.

Q. I want to show you another picture that's been -- before we go to that other picture -- what's the meetings like at the Kingdom Hall in North Fremont before and after the meeting?

A. Before and after? We just visit with one another, greet one another as we come in. Children are talking amongst themselves. And then the meeting is called to order and we sit down.

Q. How about after the meeting? How long do the meetings last?

A. About an hour and forty minutes.

Q. So after the meeting, do the kids go berserk?

A. Absolutely not. They are not allowed to.

Q. Okay. Do they ever run and play tag, things like that?

A. Well, you're going to have the occasional child that's going to run and hide. But for the most part, they are well-behaved.

Q. Do the ministerial servants attendants try and keep that pretty orderly after the meetings?

A. Yes.

Q. I want to show you another picture that has been marked Defense Exhibit Number -- Plaintiff's Exhibit Number 30, excuse me.

I will bring you up a copy because it might be a little hard to see from there.

Do you recognize what that photograph is?

A. It is the Kingdom Hall on Peralta.

Q. An aerial photograph of it?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. And I'm looking at the brown -- looks to me kind of brownish greenish triangular area as I'm looking at this photo to my right.

Do you see that?

A. I do.

Q. What is that?

A. That's an ease way, I believe, for the city. It is just a dirt area. They do use it for parking cars in.

Q. How often do you see cars parked?

A. Every meeting.

Q. And that is a dirt area?

A. Uh-huh.

Q. Do you ever see children playing out there?

A. No.

Q. Well, was that true in the 1990s?

A. Same. They always try to be very cautious in the parking lot. It's dangerous with all the cars.

Q. How are children dressed when they attend the meetings?

A. They wear their Sunday best.

Q. So did your children play out in this dirt area from time to time?

A. My son may have snuck out there a time or two. But my daughter, no.

Q. Did you catch your son out there?

A. You better believe it.

Q. Okay. I want to show you what's been marked Defense Exhibit 17 and Plaintiff's 59, and ask if you recognize this document.

A. Yes. I remember this one.

Q. What is it?

A. It is an article in the Awake Magazine on child molesting and how -- it gave advice on how to protect your child.

Q. Do you remember receiving this particular issue of the magazine in January of 1985?

A. Yes. This one stands out in my mind. I remember the shadowing and the child with the baby.

Q. Was it your custom and practice to read the magazines when you received them?

A. Yes.

Q. How did you receive them back in 1995 and '96?

A. Through the mail.

Q. Were they also available anywhere else?

A. You could pick them up at the Kingdom Hall.

Q. And were they also made available to anybody else outside the Congregation of the Jehovah's Witnesses?

A. They could subscribe to them, yes.

Q. What about when you do your -- what do you call it? -- house to house work?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you also offer those to people?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you recall what this series of articles was generally about?

A. Well, the one thing that stood out in my mind was the importance of communication with a child. Because a child that is ignorant becomes vulnerable. And so the communication to let the child -- teach them ways that it's never wrong to come to myself or their father if somebody did something to them that they felt uncomfortable with.

Q. Do you recall ever going over this material with your children?

A. I did.

Q. I want to show you what has been marked Plaintiff's Number 64 and Defense 37, and ask if you recognize this document.

A. Yes.

Q. What is that?
A. This is another article on protecting your children.
Q. And did you receive this article?
A. I did.
Q. How did you receive it?
A. Through the mail.
Q. And was it also available down at the Kingdom Hall like you mentioned?
A. Yes.
Q. Do you remember reading this particular article?
A. I do.
Q. Do you still have this article available to you?
A. On CD-ROM.
Q. What is a CD-ROM?
A. It is the Society's CD that has been made available to us, and it has the publications on it that we can reference when we need them.
Q. So it has a search engine in it?
A. Yes.
Q. You can just type in a few words and get articles that you want?
A. Yes.

Q. If you type in "child abuse," you think this article would come up?

A. It would.

Q. Do you remember the Conti family at the Kingdom Hall in North Fremont in, say, early 1990s to mid-1990s?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. Do you remember what their names were?

A. Yes. The father was Neal Conti; the mother, Kathy Conti; daughter, Candace Conti and her stepbrother, Ricky.

Q. Okay. Do you recognize Candace here in court today?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. Do you remember what she was like as a little girl?

A. She was your typical little kid. I mean, she tended to be a little bratty at times. I'm sorry to say that. But she was strong-willed and had a mind of her own.

Q. That's okay. We have heard that description before.

Did you remember also another family in the congregation at that time in the mid -- early, mid-1990s by the name of Kendrick?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you recall who was in that family?

A. Jonathan Kendrick and then his wife was Evelyn, and they had a daughter, Andrea. Well, it was his stepdaughter. It was Evelyn's daughter.

Q. Okay. Do you recall the Contis and the Kendricks being together at the Kingdom Hall at the same time?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you ever see Jonathan Kendrick give a big bear hug to Candace Conti?

A. No.

Q. Did you ever hear him say, "Who loves you," and then holds on to her until she said, "You do" and then he let her go?

A. Never.

Q. If you had seen that, would that have been remarkable to you?

A. Absolutely.

Q. Did you ever see Candace Conti as a 9, 10, 11-year-old girl sitting on Jonathan Kendrick's lap at any Kingdom Hall events?

A. No.

Q. Would you have thought that was appropriate?

A. For a 9- or 10-year-old girl?

Q. Yes.
A. Yes. It was inappropriate.
Q. Did you ever see Candace, even as a littler child, sitting on Mr. Kendrick's lap?
A. No.
Q. Did you ever see Candace Conti leave the Kingdom Hall premises alone with Mr. Kendrick?
A. No.
Q. Did you ever see Candace at the Kingdom Hall without either her mother or her father or both her parents being present?
A. No.
Q. What about, you talked about the field service or field ministry when you go door-to-door.
Did you ever see Candace Conti and Mr. Kendrick going in the field ministry alone by themselves?
A. No.
Q. Did you ever see them together in the field ministry?
A. No.
Q. Would it have been appropriate had they been together in the ministry?
A. Working together just the two of them?
Q. Yes.

A. Inappropriate.

MR. McCABE: I have nothing further, your Honor.

THE COURT: Mr. Simons.

CROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. SIMONS:

Q. It sounds like you had a long and stable and happy marriage; is that correct?

A. That's correct.

Q. And you have been blessed with great stability in your home?

A. That's correct.

Q. And is that also true of all the other families in the North Fremont Congregation?

A. Yes. For the most part, yes.

Q. And you talked about communication with the children and all.

And would you agree that in all of the families that you know within the congregation, over the years that you have been there, that the families have good communication with their children?

A. Yes.

Q. With regard to Mr. Kendrick, you mentioned that he would sit in the back of the Kingdom Hall during the services?

A. I didn't say that.

Q. Did he used to sit in the back mostly?

A. I remember him sitting about halfway up. When I visualize him in there, I remember him sitting about halfway up on the right-hand side.

Q. So it would not really be accurate to say that he sat in the very back and would, maybe, sleep through the services?

A. He would sleep through the services, yes.

Q. But he was not in the back?

A. Not when I saw him, no. He would mostly sit in the middle.

MR. SIMONS: If we could see that third photograph from Exhibit 133.

MR. McCABE: I think it is 132.

BY MR. SIMONS:

Q. Do you see that back wall there behind the seats? Are you able to see that from where you are sitting?

A. Yes.

Q. What is behind that?

A. Over the bathrooms in back there.

Q. They are in the back?

A. Yes.

Q. Are there some other rooms, storage rooms and things like that?

A. There is a closet and a conference room and what we call our second school.

Q. So if, for example, you wanted to go to the bathroom somewhere in the middle of the hour and forty-minute service, would you have to go to the back of the seats and then out through one of the doors there to get to the back?

A. You wouldn't go through a door. You would go through that opening right there in the back.

Q. Let me just use my laser pointer here.

Is this the opening?

A. No.

Q. Okay. Where would you --

A. It would be to the left of that, where you were pointing.

Q. To here?

A. Yes. That, that right there are the doors going outside.

Q. Okay. So if you went through this doorway, is there something between that looks sort of like the doors that are right there but, in fact, there is some space between that?

A. That's correct.

Q. That's just hard to see on the picture.

A. Right.

Q. But you would go through there and then you would go in the back and that's where the bathrooms would be and these other rooms?

A. That's correct.

Q. And when your children were at the -- when your children were at the Kingdom Hall services, you kept them pretty close. Right?

A. Yes. They sat right with us.

Q. And before and after, you didn't allow them to kind of run out and maybe mix with the other kids while you would be visiting with other members of the congregation?

A. They would be inside the Kingdom Hall, but I always had them in my sight.

Q. So you wouldn't really be watching what was going on in the parking lot if you would be there inside the building.

A. Well, how could I see the parking lot if I was in Kingdom Hall?

MR. SIMONS: Very good. I agree.

Thank you.

MR. McCABE: May this witness be excused, your Honor?

THE COURT: Ms. Figuerido, thank you very much for your time this morning. You are now excused.

MR. McCABE: Your Honor, our next witness has previously been videotaped. It's our expert, Dr. Monica Applewhite. And we are calling her as an expert in child sex abuse as related to historical standards of care, and also an expert in prevention and response of organizations, and an expert in patterns of molesters and standards of care for religious and church organizations.

THE COURT: All right. And, Mr. Simons, do you agree that Dr. Applewhite is an expert for those purposes?

MR. SIMONS: Well, your Honor, I think we have discussed that outside the presence, so I'll defer to you for that.

THE COURT: All right. I will rule that she is an expert for these purposes.

MR. McCABE: May we play the video then, your Honor?

(Whereupon, the video recording was played)

MR. McCABE: James McCabe on behalf of the Defendant, North Congregation Jehovah's Witnesses of Fremont, California.

MR. SCHNACK: Bob Schnack on behalf of the defendant, Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York.

(Whereupon the video was stopped)

(Sidebar Discussion)

MR. McCABE: May we resume playing, your Honor?

THE COURT: You may.

MR. McCABE: Thank you.

(Whereupon, video recording was played)

MR. McCABE: James McCabe on behalf of the defendant, North Congregation of the Jehovah's Witnesses of Fremont, California.

MR. SCHNACK: Bob Schnack on behalf of the Defendant, Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York.

MR. SIMONS: Rick Simons for Plaintiff.

MS. KRAETSCH: Kelly Kraetsch for Plaintiff.

VIDEOGRAPHER: Thank you.

Will the court reporter please swear in the witness?

MONICA APPLEWHITE, Ph.D.

WAS DULY SWORN TO TELL THE TRUTH BY THE COURT REPORTER AND TESTIFIED AS FOLLOWS:

DIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. McCABE:

Q. Dr. Applewhite, good morning.

Could you tell us your name and spell your last name for the record.

A. Monica Applewhite. It is M-O-N-I-C-A. A-P-P-L-E-W-H-I-T-E.

Q. Are you married, Dr. Applewhite?

A. Yes, I am.

Q. And you have children?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. How many?

A. I have a daughter who is twelve years old and a son who is eight years old.

Q. And what kind of work does your husband do?

A. My husband teaches high school physics and advanced placement biology.

Q. And do you have an educational background that qualifies you to testify in this case?

A. Yes, I do. I have a Bachelor's degree in Social Work, a Master's in Science and Social Work, and a Ph.D. in Clinical Social Work.

Q. Where did you earn those degrees?

A. I earned the Bachelor's degree from Texas Christian University, and the Master's and Ph.D. from University of Texas in Arlington.

Q. And your principal focus of your work is -- what would you describe it as?

A. The primary focus of my work, since I began my career, has been working with organizations to better prevent, detect and respond to child abuse of various forms, including physical abuse, emotional abuse and sexual abuse.

Q. Have you had any professional experience working with social service agencies, governmental entities?

A. Sure.

I have worked with residential treatment programs for children who have been removed from their homes, having been abused in their own biological homes, and worked with foster care and emergency shelters, which have been in place. And I have also worked with protective services in several states.

Q. What states would that be?

A. Texas, Wyoming, State of Washington, Montana and New Jersey.

Q. Do you have any professional experience working with youth organizations?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. Which organizations would that be?

A. The youth organizations would be the YMCAs and the Boys and Girls Clubs. I have worked with Scouting programs. I have worked with private and public schools, residential schools, charter schools, and just a variety of small, single entity youth-serving organizations.

Q. And what has been your role in working with these organizations?

A. The roles change, depending on what is necessary within the organization, but I have conducted many risk assessments, and that is to examine the organization and determine if there were to be an incident of abuse in this organization, this is the most likely way for it to happen, and this is what you can do to prevent that from happening in the future, as well as to come in after there has been an incident and work with the organization to be sure an incident doesn't happen like that in the future.

Q. Do you have any professional experience working with religious organizations?

A. Yes. I have worked with religious organizations since beginning in about 1996, working with organizations in a similar area of youth organizations of other types. But also in developing large-scale prevention programs to prevent incidents of abuse from happening within the religious organization and in the child's life when they're in it.

Q. Could you tell the jury what are some of the religious organizations that you have worked with?

A. Sure.

I have worked with the United Methodist Church, the Presbyterian Church. I work with many Roman Catholic Diocese as well as religious orders and congregations of men. I have worked with Southern Baptist, and there are also organizations around the world where they're ecumenical in nature, and so they bring together various denominations.

For example, there is one in Australia called Sadist Church, and that is all of the religious denominations together, working to prevent sexual abuse misconduct and other types of misconduct within their churches. So I work on a very broad scale in some of these organizations.

Q. What is the basis of the recommendations you give to these organizations regarding the prevention of child abuse?

A. The primary basis for the recommendations that I provided are prevention and detection and response.

The primary basis for that is analysis of actual cases. In other words, that you take a case or a group of cases and you try to figure out how did that happen?

How did this person come into the organization?

Could it have been prevented?

Could it have been detected sooner?

Is there a way to respond in the future where a system could be set up to prevent this type of an incident from happening in the future.

Or in these other cases, to determine how to prevent and respond properly in the future.

And I have conducted an analysis of more than 1800 cases of abuse that have happened within organizations, not just religious organizations but in all different types of organizations.

Q. Do you have any experience working with victims on sexual abuse?

A. Yes. I haven't worked as a therapist directly with victims, but I have worked on many, many occasions to either identify how the abuse was perpetrated in a particular case or to receive the allegation of abuse that a person is bringing to an organization. And that is both with children who are still children and also adults who had experiences of abuse when they were children.

Q. And do you have any experience working with offenders, sexual offenders?

A. Yes. Very early in the work that I did, I was working with juvenile sexual offenders because we had residential treatment programs and foster care and rescue shelters where a young person who was sexually offended, other children was placed in that situation. And we had a need to develop supervision programs for them.

Later on, I began doing a similar type of work with adult sexual offenders who were going to be in an environment where they needed supervision. And so I also worked with the adult sexual offenders in developing supervision for them.

Q. Can I ask you what motivated you to do research in the field of historical standard of care?

A. When I first got interested in the history of this area of care, it was not central to my work. It was back in 1993, 1994 when I began learning about the development of the knowledge base. And I began conducting educational seminars. And in many cases those educational seminars would be the first time that someone had ever heard anybody speak up about sexual abuse.

And so afterwards people would just line up and want to talk about their stories that they had of their own experiences of sexual abuse. And it was not uncommon for people to feel a real sense of devastation that their families hadn't noticed or they even told someone and that person didn't believe them.

And so I became interested in the ability to articulate to them why is it that maybe their parents didn't notice or that maybe they told someone and they didn't believe.

So that's how I started in the interest in standard of care. But then in 2007, I really started an exhaustive review to go as far back in history as I could to understand the way the standards of care developed over time.

Q. Okay. and in regards to the historical standard of care for children, could you explain to the jury what you mean by standard of care?

A. Sure.

A standard of care in the area of -- in particular, sexual abuse with organizations, is the benchmark for what would be expected of an individual or an organization in a similar circumstance during this time frame.

In order to come up with that standard of care, I look at the criminal justice system initiatives, how criminal justice handles this as a criminal matter, how other similar organizations handling similar situations, what is known by researchers and professionals who work with sexual offenders, who work with people who have experienced sexual abuse. And then what is the general public awareness? And when we put those things together, that is the way you can develop that benchmark standard of care.

Q. What is your main work today?

A. My primary work to date is conducting educational programs with organizations as well as with broad groups of people, such as the work that I do in Ireland and Australia, is to educate people on a very broad scale and that would be social welfare agencies, schools, religious organizations, youth serving organizations, to teach them about the dynamics of sexual abuse, how to prevent, how to protect, how to respond in a way that's compassionate. I do those types of education programs.

I also continue to do risk assessments in organizations and that is, again, to identify what could be done more proactively in this organization to prevent abuse. And I also provide an outside ear if an organization has someone who is coming forward who has experienced abuse in that organization and they want to meet with somebody who is outside of the organization, then it is not uncommon for me to do that work.

Q. And I take it, because you are here testifying for us today, that you also -- part of your work is consulting on lawsuits. What percentage of your work would you say is involved in being involved in some type of forensic testimony or examinations?

A. The portion of my work that is really involved with this type of an activity with lawsuits, consulting or providing a deposition is about three to five percent of the work that I do today.

Q. And previously you and I have worked together on another case; is that correct?

A. Yes, it is.

Q. And that case was in San Diego?

A. Yes.

Q. And you gave a deposition in that case also?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. How many depositions have you given altogether in cases involving issues of sexual abuse?

A. I have given four other depositions in cases that are similar to this.

Q. Okay. So what is that? About one a year would you say?

A. About one a year.

Q. And you testified in a trial before like we are having here today?

A. I have never testified in a trial.

Q. What are your areas of expertise? What are they with respect to child abuse?

A. My areas of expertise are the evolving and historical standards of care for organizations in preventing, detecting and responding to incidents of abuse. I also have expertise in the patterns of sexual offenders in terms of how they operate within organizations. I have expertise in the supervision and management of sexual offenders as well as the standards of care for response to individuals who come forward.

Q. In terms of response, does that also include investigations of allegations of child abuse?

A. I have expertise in internal investigations as well as the standards for organizations to investigate.

Q. Okay. And in connection with your preparation to testify in this case, could you tell us what you reviewed to formulate your opinions in this case?

A. In this case I reviewed many of the Awake and Watchtower publications that are published by the Jehovah's Witnesses organization. I reviewed depositions and exhibits that were particular to this case. I went back and reviewed state law, federal law that had relevance to this case. And I also reviewed some professional codes of ethics from counselors and social workers.

Q. Okay. Have you formulated some opinions on this case?

A. I have formulated opinions on this case.

Q. And could you tell the jury what the general basis is of all your opinions?

A. The general basis of the opinions that I have formed in this case are the prevailing laws in the State of California and the federal law at the time, the activities, with respect to all forms of abuse, but specifically sexual abuse within organizations that serve children as well as religious organizations specifically.

I have also utilized my own experience in working with religious organizations and other youth-serving organizations, and taken the facts of this particular case, paired them with those elements and that's the basis for my key opinions.

Q. Okay. Could you tell us what your first key opinion is in this case?

A. The first opinion that I have is that the knowledge base regarding the sexual abuse of minors and the skills and protocols needed to prevent and detect and respond properly to sexual abuse had developed over time in an incremental basis, and therefore, any evaluation of reasonable care in any case has to be examined within a particular historic context that those activities occurred.

Q. So why is a historical framework important to your opinion?

A. The historic framework is really critical in this particular area because the body of knowledge surrounding sexual abuse is very, very young. We really only began studying human sexuality in a research-based way in the late 1940s. And so we have a very young body of knowledge overall about human sexuality. Then within that the knowledge base regarding sexual abuse of children is even younger.

And so we have made some dramatic shifts in just the past 20 years. We have made even dramatic shifts in the past ten years. That is with respect to our knowledge, within our skills and within our expectations for what happened after an incidence of sexual abuse occurs and what happens in terms of prevention in the primary matter as well.

Q. Do you have some benchmarks regarding the historical standard of care that you can show the jury?

A. I do. I've actually prepared a timeline that I think is helpful in looking at those benchmarks.

Q. Do you recall what my question was?

A. Are there some benchmarks?

Q. Yes.

In the historical framework of responding to child abuse issues?

A. Yes.

Q. Can you tell us what some of those are?

A. Sure.

I think in terms of just understanding when I say that the knowledge base is young, the first benchmark that I would point to is 1982 when the experts within the United States decided that they were going to get together and talk about everything that they knew about child sexual abuse. And that was in Denver Colorado in 1982.

And at that symposium, the experts made a decision that they were only going to discuss intra-familial abuse, incest abuse. They weren't going to have any conversations about abuse that occurred outside the family because they didn't have enough information to really make presentations about that.

That was just 1982. And so I think that that is a critical benchmark to know.

The next piece that I think is really critical is to look at the 1994 benchmark, which is when we first had a law in the United States that said, if a violent rapist is released from prison and moves into a neighborhood, we will let that community know that this violent sexual offender is going to be living in this neighborhood near children. The very first time in the United States that we had a law that said that that was the thing to do, was 1994 in the State of New Jersey.

Q. What was that law called?

A. That was called Megan's Law. It was named for Megan Kanka who was raped and murdered by a twice-convicted sexual offender. And the public was outraged and said that we don't want to have a violent sexual predator move into the neighborhood and have the police know about it and not inform us.

And that was the very first state that had that law, Megan's law. It became actually Federal law then in 1998 when the Federal law said that every state will have some form of what is called community notification.

Q. And what do you mean by "community notification"?

A. Community notification is the proactive informing that we have a predatory violent sexual offender that is coming into a particular community. That is community notification.

Q. Did a version of the Megan's Law passed in New Jersey in 1994 become part of the law in the State of California?

A. Yes. The State of California actually passed the California Megan's Law and enacted that law in January 1 of 1997.

Q. Have there been any significant changes as far as historical standards of care since the mid-1990s?

A. Yes.

The other significant changes would include that -- well, first -- up until this point, our federal government, state governments, hadn't provided to youth organizations any real, tangible resources to help them know how to screen select? How do you monitor volunteers? What are the ways in which we can protect children? Those things had to be developed by individual youth organizations on their own.

But beginning in 2002, the Points of Light Foundation provided information about how to screen volunteers. And then in 2007, the Centers for Disease Control published the first national guidelines for organizations that gave guidance to the variety of ways in which an organization can prevent sexual abuse from happening in that organization. And that was called the Preventing Child Sexual Abuse Within Youth-serving organizations: Getting Started with Policies and Procedures.

Q. Does that pretty well cover your first opinion that you have in this case?

A. Yes.

Q. Could you tell the jury what your second opinion was in this case?

A. Yes.

With respect to access and responsibility with children, religious organizations in particular are divided in three categories. The first category would be members. Ordinary members of a congregation. The second would be the employees and the volunteers who have particular roles with children and youth programs.

And the third category would be clergy and spiritual leaders. Some individuals who have a sexual attraction to minors unfortunately do target religious organizations as a means to gain access to children. And depending on the individual, their own skills, their own abilities, and their own roles that are available within a religious organizations, they will make choices about how they are going to attempt to use that religious organization.

Q. And you mentioned clergy and spiritual leaders.

Was the defendant, Jonathan Kendrick, in this case, a clergy or a spiritual leader during the time period he was alleged to have abused the Plaintiff?

A. Jonathan Kendrick was not a member of the clergy or a spiritual leader within the Jehovah's Witness organization.

Q. Okay. And I would like to go into your third opinion and, perhaps, introduce it by asking you this question: Do the Jehovah's Witnesses have positions of special access to children who are in positions of trust with children?

A. In working extensively with religious organizations, I am very skilled to identify the special roles that are available within an organization who gain access to children.

For example, if there is a Vacation Bible School or a youth camp, then that person working at a camp or an overnight environment such as that has access to children overnight, is there when undressed, is there when they're swimming, they may go horseback riding or mountain climbing and have legitimate opportunities to have physical touch with children. Those are some higher access positions.

You also have people who are there to specifically teach children and have a Sunday School class and take ten children into a room and teach them about the Bible. So in most religious organizations, there are times when children are separated from their parents and the adults who are in charge of that program have special access.

What is unique about the Jehovah's Witnesses Organization is that they don't have programs that are geared specifically toward children or that at these times separated children from their families.

And so there are no unique positions of access with children or positions of trust with children that are in this particular organization because the unit of service that is the family, so they always stay together throughout all the programming.

Q. Does that pretty well cover your third opinion then?

A. There is one other dimension of that opinion that I would like to share and that is that there are positions of responsibility within the Jehovah's Witnesses Organization.

The first one is called the ministerial servant. And the ministerial servant is not in a pastoral role or counseling role or spiritual worker. They are really there to manage the singing or hand out the literature or hand the microphone if they are going to speak. But they don't have any special access to children.

The second would be more in line with the leadership of a congregation, is the elder. And elders actually don't have special access with children either because they are not teaching children, they are not separating children from the families. So they do provide pastoral care, but they are not in a unique position of trust for children.

Q. Thank you.

Could we hear your fourth opinion. What is that?

A. The fourth opinion is that, as a result of this distinctive structure of the Jehovah's Witnesses, it is not possible -- it was not possible for Jonathan Kendrick to get himself into a position of unique access or trust with children.

As a result, Jonathan Kendrick chose the methods that were available to him, and that was to gain access through family and friends and target the children within that family or friend.

As a result of this unique structure, the standard of care question that I believe I needed to consider in this particular case was:

During the time frame of 1993 to 1997, what measures were religious organizations taking to regulate the access to children that is provided by the child's own parents?

What was the standard of care in the mid-1990s?

And the answer is this. I don't know of any mainstream religious organization that has ever attempted to regulate the access to children that they provide, that is provided by the child's own parents. I have never seen that in a religious organization.

But in addition, I would not recommend that as a risk management technique, to give the authority to make decisions about a child's interpersonal relationships over to the clergy versus allowing the parents to make those decisions for themselves. That's not a risk management strategy that I would recommend.

Q. Dr. Applewhite, since the standard of care didn't require and you would not recommend them telling parents who can have access to their children, what can religious organizations like the Jehovah's Witnesses do to protect their children?

A. Well, it is critical when trying to figure out how best to protect children in a given organization, is to figure out what are the particular activities of this organization.

In the Jehovah's Witness Organization, because children aren't separated from their parents, the really best method for protecting children in that organization is to give the parents as much information as you possibly can about the warning signs, about the need to protect children, about the prevalence of sexual abuse. And tell them there is a need and explain to them how to meet that need.

And in that instance is where I really believe that the Jehovah's Witness Organization has done an exceptional job. And that is providing real materials directly in the hands of parents, not keeping that information just with religious leadership but giving it directly to the parents and saying, "Here is what you need to know about sexual abuse. Take this. Protect your children. Here are the warning signs. Here is what you watch out for. Here is what you do if you see it."

And that is what the Jehovah's Witness Organization has done, both in the publication of the Awake and the Watchtower. And those publications began in the 1970s and have continued to be published periodically adding on as the knowledge base grew on through the 1990s.

Q. I think maybe my question kind of evoked you to get into your fifth opinion; is that true?

A. I think it did.

Q. Okay. Sorry about that.

What were other religious organizations doing as far as providing material and education for families during this time period?

A. During the time frame of the mid -- well, from the '80s on through the mid-1990s, most of religious organizations were not providing specific educational programs for parents. And there were policies being developed about response and there were some things that were happening in religious organizations, but this idea of educating parents directly, I didn't see that in other religious organizations during that time frame.

Q. Do you see it now in those religious organizations?

A. Since 2002 there have been religious organizations that have developed specific educational materials for parents and families.

Q. Does that pretty well cover your fifth opinion in this case?

A. Yes, it does.

Q. How about your sixth opinion?

A. The sixth opinion is that, based upon my reading of the depositions and exhibits, at no time was Jonathan Kendrick placed into a position that required or allowed him to be alone with children, to be in supervision of children, to spend time with children away from their families, or to engage in those higher activities such as overnights, changing clothes or legitimate physical contact.

He was not authorized by the congregation to work with or spend time with Jane Doe or any other child or particular group of children. He just didn't get that assignment.

Q. Does that pretty well cover your sixth opinion in this case?

A. That's my sixth opinion.

Q. And when you said that Jonathan Kendrick wasn't placed in any position that required or allowed him to be alone with children, you were specifically referring to whom would be placing him in that?

A. Yes. That's a big clarification.

My opinion is about Jonathan Kendrick not being placed by his congregation or his congregation leaders into a position that required or permitted him to be alone with children.

Q. And just referring back for a minute here to your fifth opinion, which had to do with educating parents and family members about this issue, do you have an opinion about whether Jehovah's Witnesses, as a religion, met the standard of care for educating and protecting children?

A. In the mid-1990s?

Q. Yes, ma'am.

A. My opinion was that, in the mid-1990s, that the Jehovah's Witnesses well exceeded the standard of care for educating parents about sexual abuse.

Q. Okay. Does that cover your fifth and sixth opinions?

I know I mixed them up going back and forth.

A. I'm pretty sure I didn't mix them up. But I think it has been covered.

Q. Okay. So can we go to your seventh opinion? What is that?

A. It does appear that in 1993, Jonathan Kendrick self-disclosed, in the presence of his wife and stepdaughter, that he had touched the breast of his stepdaughter.

He first disclosed to an elder, and then two elders met with the family, with Jonathan Kendrick, Evelyn Kendrick and Andrea. And in the presence of his family, Jonathan Kendrick disclosed that he had sexually touched his stepdaughter.

At that time the adults in the marriage of Evelyn Kendrick and Jonathan Kendrick made a decision to stay married. And the elders listened to his disclosure and left the decision to report to the police up to the family.

Even though the position of ministerial servant is not a position of trust with children, it is a responsibility in the congregation. And so the elders made a decision at that time to remove Jonathan Kendrick from that position of ministerial servant and to make an announcement to the congregation that he had been removed from that position.

If he had had a position of trust with the children, such as youth minister or camp counselor, it would have been necessary at that time to evaluate whether or not he could continue in that position. But since he wasn't in that position, that's not really relevant in this case.

Q. Did the elders do anything more than remove Jonathan Kendrick as a ministerial servant by your reviewing the materials that you examined in this case?

A. In addition to removing him as a ministerial servant, Michael Clarke and Larry Lamerdin both said they kept a special watch on him and paid attention to whether or not he had any inappropriate contact with children within the meetings at Kingdom Hall.

Q. And do you find that to be appropriate within the standard of care?

A. I find it to be appropriate.

Q. Can we go on then to the ninth opinion?

A. Yes.

Privacy and confidentiality considerations for individuals who are alleged or known to have committed wrongdoing.

Considering their privacy is part of their criminal justice system and part of the codes of ethics for most human service professionals and helping non-professionals as well as the policies for confidentiality that are in the procedures of most religious organizations.

So considering the private information a person discloses is a very common theme for counselors and others like them.

And the wording of the letters to the bodies of elders in the United States that were provided by Watchtower, the wording that they used to caution elders against recklessly disclosing private information, the wording of that very closely mirrors the National Association of Social Workers Code of Ethics, the American Counseling Association Code of Ethics and even the Child Welfare League of America Standard of Excellence.

Those concerns about confidentiality and privacy -- the wording is very, very similar to religious organizations as well as those codes of ethics.

Q. You were referring to letters from the Watchtower Bible and Tract Society who are the defendants in this case.

Those letters were directed to whom?

A. The Watchtower Society sends letters to all bodies of elders in the United States. And that's really the way that policies get implemented within the Jehovah's Witness Organization. They -- the Watchtower Society will send the letter out to all of the bodies of elders. The bodies of elders will oversee the congregation. So when they want the elders to know how to be respond to the situation, they send out letters to the bodies of elders.

Q. Okay. So specifically did you have reference to a July 1st, 1989 letter?

A. I am referring to the July 1st, 1989 letter as well as there were two other letters that were sent prior to the particular dates of consideration here.

There was another letter, March 23rd of 1992, which was three years later, and then another letter, which was February 3rd of 1993.

And I think when you read those letters, you really get a sense for the critical concern being that the elders need to respond to victims of sexual abuse with a great sense of compassion and sorrow for what's happened to them and to take some time to listen to them.

They also -- the letters to the bodies of elders really caution elders against being insensitive and saying things like, Why don't you just forget about that? They say take some time. Understand that the person who has experienced abuse may have some real mixed feelings and you have to really reach out to them with a heart of compassion.

Q. Well, is part of your opinion, then, that confidentiality within religious organizations and other organizations that you work with, is that a good thing or a bad thing?

A. It is not part of my opinions to say whether it is a good thing or a bad thing. I just know that, with counseling, with social work, with therapists, with religious leaders and pastoral counselors, there is a trust relationship that is built. And when people need to go to someone for help, they need to feel that they are going to disclose information and the person they disclose to is going to be trustworthy. They are not going to gossip about them. They are not going to recklessly share that information. And so I recognize that that is part of the codes of ethics for a reason.

Q. For training, education and experiences, are confidentiality a part of social service agencies and other organizations other than religious organizations?

A. As a social worker, it is part of my code of ethics. As a social worker, it is in my training and education and expertise. I see that in religious organizations and counseling environments that concerns about privacy and confidentiality are pervasive within the professions.

Q. Now, earlier in one of your previous opinions you mentioned about the Awake and Watchtower Magazines that are provided to members of this religious organization. You referred to articles that educated them.

And did you have any specific article in mind?

A. I read many articles, but I did pull just a few of them because I think that they are good examples of why I feel like the standard of care was exceeded.

The first was in July 22nd, 1976, was just a broad article about how we just call attention to the problem of child abuse in general. And it is called "Child Abuse: What Can Be Done About It?" And that was published in Awake.

Then in January 22nd of 1985, the Awake Magazine published an article called "Child Molesting: You Can Protect Your Child." And I really found this striking because it explained to parents the pervasiveness of the problem and explained that it contradicted what many people believed in 1985.

It might not be a stranger and it might not be somebody who appeared to not be a nice person. It could be a neighbor, it could be a good friend, it could be a member of the family and it could be a minister.

And they provided very specific scenarios that people could relate to. And I find that, in educating people, it is really critical that you provide those very specific scenarios so that people can relate to them and see those behaviors in their own environments.

So they also really gave specifics. There is a section called, "If The Worse Should Happen." And it says be suspicious, pay attention. And if the child does disclose, how to manage that disclosure in a way that it is not going to cause harm to the child. So I found this to be more of a parents education program. And that was in January of '85.

In 1991 Awake also published an article called "Healing The Wounds Of Child Abuse." And this one also I thought was really far ahead of its time because it explained the very, very complicated feelings that an adult can have who experienced sexual abuse as a child and provided guidance to elders and other members about how they can respond to that person.

And then about a month later, they also published letters that people had written in about how important it was to them to read this information, and those letters were also published.

Then lastly, in October of 1993, there was another publication called "Protect Your Children." And it gave an updated version of the adult education program that was published in 1985. And one of the really strong things that said in there is, don't limit your training to one time with your child. And I still have to tell parents that now, that you can't think you are going to sit down and have a talk with your child.

You have to know it is going to be an ongoing project to work with your children.

So much of what was published in 1985 and then in 1993 I would still use in an adult education program for parents.

Q. And all these magazines that you refer to, the Awake Magazines are published by Watchtower Bible and Tract Society; is that correct?

A. These publications are all published by The Watchtower Society.

Q. And do you know how they are disseminated to the public or to the members of this religion?

A. These are disseminated in a variety of ways depending on what the publication is. And they are also referred back to in those letters to elders that come from Watchtower, they'll say, please remind yourself about the information that was contained on this day.

But the way it is generally disseminated is they come out in the publication, and then the members go and educate other people using those publications.

So they read them themselves. They come directly to their house. At this time, they were coming directly to their house.

And so they would come to their home, as well as to be in the Kingdom Hall. And also there would be meetings around certain of the publications, where there would be teachings directed to the articles.

Q. Do these articles refer to scientific community in this area or experts in the field?

A. It was -- it was actually one of the things that I found interesting and striking, was that, for example, in 1985 David Finkelhor and Gail Sheehy were cited -- were quoted.

And David Finkelhor was clearly one of the most important writers at that time, one of the most important researchers. He was the researcher who first began explaining to people that sexual abuse could at times cause long-term effects.

And so both David Finkelhor and Gail Sheehy are quoted in the 1985 article. But there are always in these particular publications, authoritative researchers and experts who were cited in the material. So it is not just providing scriptural references or spiritual references. It also gives really solid information from a social work perspective.

Q. Thank you, Doctor.

I would like to take you to your tenth opinion at this time.

Can you state what that is, if you can?

A. Sure.

One of the things I considered in this case was whether or not it was reasonable that the elders in the North Fremont Congregation didn't notice or didn't suspect that it was possible that Jane Doe was experiencing sexual abuse. And my opinion was that it was reasonable that they didn't detect.

And the reason that I have that opinion is because there were two groups of people that were in a better position than they were to know or suspect, who also did not know or suspect. And those two groups of people are, first, those individuals in her family who were so close with her. And that would be her father, her mother and her paternal grandmother with whom she lived on and off.

And then there was a second group of people who also didn't know or suspect, that were professionals. And that would be her therapist, Laura Fraser, the mediator who she met with about the divorce, Barbara Ryan. And she also had professional contact with her school counselor, Dana Takamoto.

And so neither of the people within she was intimately involved nor the professionals who were involved in her life knew or suspected that she was experiencing sexual abuse. And, therefore, it's my opinion that it was reasonable that the elders also did not know.

Q. Okay. So, Dr. Applewhite, based on your education, your training, your experience and all the materials that you've examined in this case, did the elders, who received information from Jonathan Kendrick in November 1993, violate any standard of care in how they handled that situation?

A. My opinion is that the elders who heard the disclosure from Jonathan Kendrick and his family did not violate any standard of care that I know for religious organizations or leaders within religious organizations in the mid-1990s.

MR. McCABE: Thank you. I have no further questions at this time.

CROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. SIMONS:

Q. Dr. Applewhite, back in the time period we are concerned about in 1993 and 1994, you were starting to get your Ph.D. at the University of Texas; is that correct?

A. At the University of Texas in Arlington.

Q. During that time, you did some research as part of your dissertation in getting your Ph.D. Correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. And what was that research in?

A. That research was on women who were involved in violent relationships.

Q. Were you actually doing consulting and training with religious groups about childhood sexual abuse prevention in 1993 and 1994?

A. I was not yet working with religious groups in 1993 or 1994.

Q. You used the term, or counsel did, "historical research."

What context is historical research involved in the opinions you have given us today?

A. I'm sorry. Can you -- can you ask me that again?

Q. Yes.

Is it fair to say that the opinions you have given about standards of care in 1993 and 1994 are based upon the research that you have done and library work, rather than your own personal experience in 1993 and 1994 in the field?

A. I don't think that that is entirely correct. Because during that -- from 1992 to 1994, I was already gathering cases and doing root cause analysis of cases. And so those particular cases that I was doing the analysis on had happened normally within the past ten years.

But I was also already gathering the cases during that time frame. And so there were some contemporary cases from '93 and '94, but they would have gone back about ten years. So I gathered about 300 cases during that two-year time frame and did root cause analysis on those.

So I don't think that everything that I'm basing today on is just from literary research or just from professional research. It is also the work that I did during that time.

Q. Was any of that work directly with the victims themselves?

A. Some of that work was directly with victims because when we were trying to figure out how in relation to respond, I also met with people who had the experiences of abuse and asked them questions about -- for example: When you made that call, what were you hoping to hear? What could have been said?

So, yes, I -- I was never doing therapy with them, but I certainly spent a great deal of time listening to what their concerns were.

Q. And how many of those different individuals that you might have interviewed in '93 and '94 were sexually molested in a religious institution context?

A. Just a handful at that time. I would say five or six people. I'm sorry. Probably two or three children as well that I met with the families and they were still children.

Q. Your work does, however, include extensive research into the same periods that other religious organizations had implemented in the time period during and before 1993 and '4. Correct?

A. My?

Q. Your opinions today rely in large part upon your research into what other religious organizations were doing in the same time frame.

A. Yes.

Q. And part of the different religious organizations that you looked at was what the Catholic Church was doing.

Is that fair to say?

A. The Catholic Church was included in that.

Q. Okay. And you are also very familiar yourself with the standards involving, if you will, positions of the Catholic Church with regard to child and sexual abuse issues.

A. I'm not sure I know what you mean by "positions."

Q. Have you done a lot of consulting with various either dioceses or other Catholic-based organizations?

A. I have done a great deal, a great deal of work with the Catholic Church in various ways.

Q. And I think you have, in your resume, two published articles, one of which was published in the American Magazine, which is a publication of the Catholic Church. Correct?

A. Yes. The American Magazine is published by the Jesuits.

Q. And in your research and work with the Catholic Church, did you become aware of a public standard of the U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops from 1992 on the subject of childhood sexual abuse?

A. I am familiar with that.

Q. And was that a five-point policy statement?

A. Yes.

Q. And do you remember whether any of the five points dealt with the subject of communicating and disclosing information to the community?

A. Yes. I recall.

Q. Do you recall what the exact language was?

A. I don't recall the exact language. I remember that the fifth point of the five points that the bishops published in 1992 said that -- to deal as openly as possible with -- within the confines of confidentiality with the public and the community. But I may not have -- well, you have it.

Q. Do you recognize that as the 1992 Conference of Bishops Policy Statement?

A. Yes.

Q. And what did policy statement five say?

A. There is five points. The fifth point says:

> "Within the confines of respect for privacy of the individuals involved, deal as openly as possible with the members of the community."

Q. All right. Thank you.

Have you published any articles on the subject of childhood sexual abuse prevention in any professional peer review journal?

A. I have not published academic articles in this area.

Q. You work for a firm called Park Dietz at present. Correct?

A. I contract with Park Dietz and Associates. That is correct.

Q. And what is the fee that you charge for your services in this case?

A. There is two different fees. There is the fee that Park Dietz and Associates charges, and then there is the fee that I charge to Park Dietz and Associates.

In this case, Park Dietz and Associates charges $450 an hour and I charge to Park Dietz and Associates $300 an hour.

Q. And Park Dietz is a forensic consulting firm. Is that fair to say?

A. I think that's fair to say.

Q. And what does that phrase "forensic consulting firm" mean to you?

A. Dealing with matters -- well, consulting in matters of law and criminal law.

Q. And you testified, as counsel pointed out, in deposition in San Diego last month in another case of Jehovah's Witnesses alleged sexual abuse. Correct?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. And do you have a number as to the amount of billing dollars that have been submitted for your combined work for the Jehovah's Witnesses in this case and that case?

A. I'm sorry. What was the word that you used? Do I have a --

Q. How much has Park Dietz charged for your forensic services in these two cases?

A. I'm sorry. I don't have that number on the top of my head.

Q. Do you have an estimate as to the number of hours that you have spent in your review of materials in preparation for testimony in this case?

A. Yes.

Q. What is your estimate as to that?

A. I can look it up.

Q. Okay.

A. Prior to this month, there were 41 hours. And then this month I believe that there has been another -- probably another 25 hours. And then here coming to testify as well. That would be in addition to that.

Q. So we are somewhere in the neighborhood, for this case, of $30,000?

A. Okay. My math is not that great, but it sounds like about $30,000, yes.

Q. And what were the fees charged in the San Diego case?

A. That, I don't know. I'm sorry. I just don't know.

Q. Were the hours you spent in that case similar to the number of hours that you spent in this case?

A. Similar.

Q. You talked about the exceptional child abuse prevention program that, in your opinion, the Jehovah's Witnesses had in place.

Can you tell me whether or not you agree that whether a program is effective or not in child sex abuse prevention and education is best evaluated by whether it has reduced or prevented childhood sexual abuse occurring within the institution?

A. Well, let me begin by saying that what I said was that it was an excellent parent education program, which is different than a sexual abuse prevention program. Parent education is a dimension. And I believe that those materials that were provided are excellent.

And then, is the best way to evaluate the effectiveness of a sexual abuse prevention program to measure whether or not instances of sexual abuse are in fact reduced is -- in an ideal world, that would certainly be the best empirical basis for evaluating a program.

In the real world, I very rarely see that type of empirical evidence being gathered to evaluate sexual abuse programs. I just don't see it very often, but I certainly think that that is the ultimate question, does it reduce sexual abuse.

Q. Have you received any data as to the incidence of child sexual abuse within Jehovah's Witnesses organizations during the past 30 years?

A. I have not asked for that.

Q. And so, as you sit here today, is it accurate to say that you have no statistical or empirical data at all upon which you rest your opinions with regard to the appropriateness and effectiveness of the Jehovah's Witnesses child sex abuse education and prevention programs?

A. Actually, because it is so -- you can't have, really, a control group, in a sense, in a program like this.

What I base my opinions on are the root cause analysis of cases. And so, for example, would I make a recommendation that this is an appropriate way to prevent?

What I'm basing that on is a case in which the -- for example, I interview the perpetrator and the perpetrator says, Well, I chose this child instead of that child because this child said that they were going to tell their parents. Or this child had an older sister who kept coming over to my house and asking questions.

So rather than going afterwards and saying, "This is the number of children who weren't abused." The way I base the recommendations is on cases where we know what allowed the abuse to slip through the cracks.

And in this particular instance, the reason I say these are good materials is they provided the specific information that, first of all, the adult survivors have said, It is critical for people to understand. And also, they provide the particular types of protections that I have seen prevent cases of abuse in the past.

So it is not a statistical analysis for me. It is really a case-based analysis.

Q. So the direct answer to my question about whether or not you base your opinions at all on any statistical data about prevalence or absence of child sexual abuse within Jehovah's Witnesses is, no, you do not.

A. No, I don't base it on statistics.

Q. All right. Before Park Dietz, you consulted with another business group as your -- if you will, your method of consulting. Is that correct?

A. Well, first, the only thing that I do with Park Dietz, so just the few legal cases that I work on, the --

(Side bar discussion)

THE COURT: First of all, we are going to stop the depo now. That was not the subject of discussion between counsel and the judge. But had -- and I will take responsibility for it. We have been working through a number of issues as we go along.

Here is what I expect. I am going to dismiss you now and ask you to come back at 1:00 o'clock, early.

We will have some more testimony this afternoon. One of you has a very legitimate circumstance in the morning.

What I would intend to do, and call it, if you would, an executive decision because I'm going to take responsibility for it -- this has been, obviously, a -- well, I have been meeting with counsel off and on outside of your presence, as I have related.

I am not going to bring you in tomorrow. You know, I have got the obligation Thursday and Friday in Sacramento. But I can tell you and look you in the eye that, with all that has been going on and very professional circumstances and cooperation, this case is going to go to you on Monday, instead of deeper into the week.

And when all this is over and you have rendered your decision, as a matter of procedure, certainly I will welcome any questions. And, of course, as I have already instructed you, you can talk to the lawyers. And, of course, you don't need to talk to anybody. But we will -- I expect closing argument by everybody on Monday.

As part of the work of the case, as I have told you, you get to be the judges. But what I didn't tell you is, I still have to do a little judging. And I have been doing judging every morning. And as part of what -- already I have given you, what I call, pre-flight instructions, to give you a sense of what your responsibilities are and who has got burden of proof and whatnot.

The instructions in this case -- I will be working with counsel, again, in the morning to agree upon or to make rulings upon as needed the entire set of closing instructions, which will be far greater in number than the so-called pre-flight.

But in terms of the planning of your daily lives, we will not be in session tomorrow. We are back in session at 1:00 o'clock this afternoon. I want to be very clear on that. And I'm hopeful that we will get through the testimony today such that we will be in a position on Monday to argue and go to -- I'm very confident you are going to get the case on Monday. I can't tell you exactly when, but that is what is going to happen.

So that being the circumstance, I am going to excuse you now, and I will look forward to seeing you at 1:00.

We will go as long as we need to today to accommodate and structure what I have told you, notwithstanding the calendar I have this afternoon.

So as always -- and I wanted to say this directly right now. I'm not much a fan of history does this, not this judge, of sitting on high up here, but I would already like to thank you, in terms of the obvious diligence each of you are giving and attention to what has been going on here.

So thank you, and I will see each of you at 1:00.

(Whereupon the following proceedings were heard outside the presence of jurors)

THE COURT: Counsel, let me see if I understand.

You are going to have Mr. Shuster?

MR. McCABE: Yes, your Honor.

MR. SCHNACK: And then we are going to discuss depositions real quickly here. And it might be a few lines at most.

THE COURT: Okay. Well, I am in here taking care of other business, so I'm not going anywhere. So, if you need me.

All right. I will look forward then to seeing everybody as 1:00 o'clock. Thanks.

(Break taken)

MR. SIMONS: Housekeeping.

Now that Dr. Applewhite has testified, I would request the court rule -- I request for judicial notice the statutes that were in effect in California on January 1st, 1993.

THE COURT: I will take judicial notice of it.

What would you like me to do other than that?

MR. SIMONS: Well, once it is judicially noticed, I think, your Honor, then it can either be read to the jury or at least referred to or read to the jury in closing argument and shown to the jury in closing argument. At least I'm thinking that.

THE COURT: I'm not sure of that. I will take a look at that. Certainly I have the power to take judicial notice of it but I don't think that necessarily answers the questions as to whether we show it to the jury or not.

And that kind of dovetails with some consideration we will talk about tomorrow in terms of instructions and the law.

MR. SIMONS: Yeah. Because, yeah, one alternative is to instruct that, the section on such-and-such a date said. But it is not evidence per se.

THE COURT: Well, that's what I'm thinking through as we are having this discussion, is I have to be very careful with that. Because certainly I wouldn't -- under the statute, I took judicial notice of, I wouldn't give a per se instruction on that statute.

MR. SCHNACK: Yeah. We do want to be heard on that later then.

THE COURT: We will do it tomorrow when we do our instruction stuff.

MR. SCHNACK: Thank you.

THE COURT: I'm not surprised by your request. The issue is: How to present it?

MR. SIMONS: Yeah. And we have heard conflicting testimony from the experts as to what the statute said.

MR. SCHNACK: Particularly the one that doesn't reference clergy whatsoever.

THE COURT: All right. We will hash that out tomorrow on how to present it and we'll rule on it potentially.

MR. SCHNACK: Since we are doing housekeeping, do we have a time in mind for having the court reporter present tomorrow?

THE COURT: And here is the time I have in mind just because of the nature, that we start at 10:00 a.m? Fair enough. Because after that, that's fine, if I can get in here and continue to deal with all my sundry decision making then, I will be clear and clean at 10:00. Okay?

Madame reporter, 10:00 o'clock. I'm sure you'll take part in that.

THE COURT REPORTER: Of course.

THE COURT: And we can go as long as we need to to get it right tomorrow.

Okay. If you want to arrive earlier, you are always welcome to, if you want to have the jury room or whatnot, whatever rooms available, you can do that, and then we can meet at 10:00 and we can go from there.

(Lunch recess taken)

THE COURT: All right. Mr. McCabe.

MR. McCABE: Thank you, your Honor.

I will call Mr. Allen Shuster to the stand.

THE COURT: All right, then. Mr. Shuster, come on up. I will remind you, you have been previously sworn and remain under oath. Please have a seat.

ALLEN SHUSTER,

WAS PREVIOUSLY SWORN TO TELL THE TRUTH BY THE CLERK AND TESTIFIED AS FOLLOWS:

DIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. McCABE:

Q. Mr. Shuster, where were you born?

A. Monmouth, Illinois.

Q. And where did you grow up?

A. I grew up in Hope, Arkansas.

Q. And did you go to high school there?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Did you graduate?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. What did you do upon graduation from high school? Did you do any college?

A. I did not, no.

Q. What did you do?

A. I began my ministry then, you know, as what is called a regular pioneer. And that means agreeing and volunteering to devote a certain amount of time to the ministry. And so I began that in September of 1971.

Q. Okay. So you were previously baptized as one of Jehovah's Witnesses; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. What year was that?

A. That was in 1968.

Q. And how old were you then?

A. I was 15.

Q. On your pioneering activity, that is primarily done door-to-door, conducting Bible Studies, things like that?

A. Yes. That is a form of ministry.

Q. How long did you continue in Hope, Arkansas as a pioneer for Jehovah's Witnesses?

A. About three years in Hope, Arkansas. And then I moved to a small town called Prescott, Arkansas and pioneered about a year-and-a-half there.

Q. Okay. What did you do next?

A. I sent in an application to serve at the world headquarters of Jehovah's Witnesses in Brooklyn, New York, and was accepted in April 1976.

Q. When you arrived in New York, what was your job assignment?

A. I worked in the factory. We did -- that's where the Bibles and other literature for Watchtower are printed and distributed.

Q. What specific job did you have?

A. I worked in the -- what's called the paint shop. I did finishing and refinishing of furniture.

Q. Are you intimately familiar with the beliefs and practices of Jehovah's Witnesses?

A. Yes.

Q. And you know about the policies and procedures of the organization of Jehovah's Witnesses on child abuse?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. Okay. After you worked in the paint shop, did you have a job change?

A. Yes. I was transferred to the Service Department in the early part of 1981. I think it was January or February.

Q. What, exactly, is the Service Department?

A. The Service Department is an office that has oversight of the United States field, the congregations of Jehovah's Witnesses. We have 13,400 congregations.

Q. What does the Service Department do with the 13,400 congregations?

A. It provides spiritual advise and counsel to our elders who are serving in these 13,400 congregations.

Q. Would that include some of the letters that the jury's seen and heard about?

A. That's correct, yes.

Q. So those letters come from the Service Department of The Watchtower Bible and Tract Society?

A. Yes.

Q. I'm going to approach and show you an exhibit that's previously been marked Defense 131, and ask you if you recognize that document, seen it before.

A. Yes, I do.

Q. I want to take you through it and ask you some questions.

Is this an accurate depiction of the structure of the church of Jehovah's Witnesses?

A. Yes, it is.

Q. And it looks like it's a hierarchy of the organizations from the top down?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. At the top there it mentions the governing body.

Who are they?

A. The governing body is a body of seven men, seven elders who make up the spiritual leadership of the church structure of the Jehovah's Witnesses.

Q. And where do they do their service work?

A. They live in Brooklyn, New York. They are from varied countries. Mainly in New York.

Q. Okay. Next I noticed there is a U.S. Branch Committee.

What is that?

A. It is a committee of twelve men, twelve elders, who have oversight of the United States field activity, oversight of the Service Department. They are one branch of about a hundred branches throughout the world.

Q. And does the U.S. Branch Committee provide any spiritual instruction or guidance for the Congregation?

A. Yes, they do.

Q. Where do they get their instruction from?

A. Their the governing body.

Q. And next you have the Service Departments underneath the Branch Committee?

A. That's correct.

Q. And then I notice there's district overseers and circuit overseers.

What's that?

A. Yes. These are elders who travel to various congregations and provide spiritual instruction and encouragement, patterned after the first century Apostle Paul, that's who traveled with the congregates.

Q. So are they kind of like field representatives of the Service Department?

A. Yes.

Q. Now down to the Congregation level.

Who was the spiritual leaders of the congregation on the local end?

A. It would be the elders.

Q. And what is their function and role?

A. They provide spiritual direction to the congregation, and they teach, shepherd, they do evangelizing work. And so they basically take the lead in these aspects within the congregation.

Q. So if we could use terminology from another religion, they would be like the priests or the pastors of the congregation?

A. Like the clergy. Yes. Pastors, ministers.

Q. And then the next level we heard some testimony about ministerial servants. They do mostly administrative things and physical things around the Kingdom Hall?

A. Yes. They are helpful to the elders. They handle microphones in the congregation. They work with latecomers who arrive and can help seat them. They work in parking lots parking cars. A variety of things, distributing literature to the members.

Q. Okay. Regarding the beliefs of Jehovah's Witnesses, you believe you are a Christian organization?

A. Yes, we do. That is somewhat of a misconception among some. We do believe in Jesus. We recognize him as our Savior and leader, and we respect the teachings that he gave in the gospel accounts.

And so we try very hard to adhere to the teachings of Jesus, as well as his conduct in the way he treated people. We don't always measure up, but we try our best to follow his example.

Q. How many Jehovah's Witnesses are there in the United States?

A. There are approximately a million two-hundred thousand active Jehovah's Witnesses.

Q. I think it seems like more with the number of hands that were raised about people calling at their doors.

Why do Jehovah's Witnesses call on people's homes from house to house?

A. Well, it's -- we feel there is some encouraging Good News that we have to offer. I know at the jury selection it was commented that they were a little irritated by Jehovah's Witnesses calling at their home. And it is understandable. I don't want to be awakened on Saturday morning either.

But we do feel there is a message we have to offer and that is Good News about the Kingdom of God. We are taught to pray as Christians and let Your Kingdom come and that Your will be done on earth as it is done in heaven.

So that Kingdom offers a prospect of hope to the future that is encouraging. Many are receptive to the message that we have and we are experiencing growth as an organization.

Q. How does a person become a Jehovah's Witness?

A. We're not born as one of Jehovah's Witnesses. We don't perform infant baptisms. But we feel that it's important that each individual make a decision based on his own knowledge of the Bible, to encourage taking the knowledge.

John 17:3 says: This means everlasting life, taking the knowledge of the only true God and the one whom you sent forth, Jesus.

So based on that knowledge, we feel that individuals can make an educated decision as to whether they want to become a member of Jehovah's Witnesses. And then symbolize that by means of watered baptism as Jesus himself did.

Q. Okay, sir. How is the activities of Jehovah's Witnesses supported?

A. It is purely by voluntary contribution. We have some boxes in the back, contribution boxes, that if an individual wanted to contribute something, they are welcome to do that. We don't pass the plates or we don't tithe. It is all on a voluntary basis.

Q. Go back to Exhibit 131, where it mentions "baptized publisher."

What does that terminology refer to?

A. It refers to a member of the congregation, one who has been baptized.

Q. And why the use of the word "publisher"?

A. Because it is an individual who has his own love of people and a desire to imitate Jesus who was an evangelizer who go from door-to-door, from village to village someone who has agreed voluntarily to publish the Good News of the Kingdom.

Q. What about an unbaptized publisher?

A. They are individuals who have expressed a desire to publish and have met moral requirements and as a result they want to join the members in preaching and sharing the Good News.

Q. Are they kind of like a baptized publisher in training?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. Are the elders and ministerial servants baptized publishers?

A. Yes, they are.

Q. Okay. Now, are the meetings of Jehovah's Witnesses open to the public?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you have any rules or regulations about excluding people or the public who want to come and visit?

A. No. It's open to -- all of our meetings are open to the public.

Q. So if we look at the chart here, then you mention that they're -- the chart mentions visitors and guests, children and other family.

Is that what you mean by open to the public?

A. Yes. We have -- of course, children of Jehovah's Witnesses attend with their parents. We have other family members who have an interest in being at our meetings. We have people that we study the Bible with that attend the meetings. And so all in all we have quite a group, ministry. It is probably 2.5 million in this country.

Q. Who attend meetings?

A. Who attend meetings.

Q. Okay. We heard the elders aren't paid for their work in congregation.

Are you paid as a member of the headquarter staff in New York?

A. No, I am not.

Q. So you are a volunteer?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. We have also heard testimony about congregation members being ordained ministers.

Is that true?

A. Yes, that's true.

Q. What does that term mean in the religion of Jehovah's Witnesses, a person being an ordained minister?

A. Yes. An ordained minister is one who is baptized and we regard it a little bit different than a secular person's.

We feel that at Jesus' baptism, he commenced his ministry and thus that was the recognition, his ordination as a minister. He didn't need any accreditation, accreditations, such as presented in a school. But from that point on, he became a minister. And we regard Jehovah's Witnesses who are baptized members as ministers.

Q. So an ordained minister, is that a word that can be equated with just a member of the congregation?

A. That's right.

Q. Doesn't represent any leadership role or teaching role of congregations of the Jehovah's Witnesses?

A. No.

Q. So you are telling us there is about 1.2 million ordained ministers in the United States?

A. That's correct.

Q. Of Jehovah's Witnesses?

A. Of Jehovah's Witnesses.

Q. What is The Watchtower Bible and Tract Society?

I have heard a lot about it, but I don't know what it is yet.

A. It is a legal entity that was established to print and to distribute Bible and Bible literature and to provide spiritual direction and convey the appointment of elders and ministerial servants to the local congregations prior to the year 2001.

Q. And what is happening since that year?

A. That now comes under a different corporation.

Q. Oh.

How big are the congregations of Jehovah's Witnesses on average, if you know?

A. On average, we have between 75 and 150, including our publishers and members in our congregation.

Q. What happens if the congregation grows larger than that?

A. We usually -- we usually divide from another congregation. And that allows the elders to give closer attention to shepherding and teaching. And so we are a family-like atmosphere, and so having smaller groups is more conducive.

Q. Are you an elder?

A. Yes.

Q. When did you first become an elder?

A. In 1979.

Q. So when you were in New York?

A. When I was in Brooklyn, New York, yes.

Q. Are you still in the congregation today?

A. Yes, I am.

Q. How many congregations have you been in where you have been an elder?

A. Two.

Q. Can you tell me what the position of the Watchtower Bible and Tract Society is -- is it fair, when I say "Watchtower," is that -- we know what we are talking about?

Is that just the organization of Jehovah's Witnesses when you say "Watchtower"?

A. That would be a simpler way of addressing it.

Q. Okay. So what is the position of Watchtower on the issue of childhood sexual abuse?

A. Well, I can say that's -- and this is probably an understatement -- that we absolutely abhor child abuse. We hate it. It is an egregious sin. And we are not going to tolerate anyone who is a child abuser in a congregation and to be a member of the congregation and to be actively involved in that kind of activity.

Q. So what about a repentant child abuser? Can they be attending congregation meetings, being part of a congregation?

A. Yes, they can.

Q. Okay. Can a person who is known to be a child molester be a ministerial servant?

A. No, he cannot.

Q. Can he be an elder?

A. No, he cannot. Absolutely not.

Q. Can he be a pioneer?

A. Absolutely not.

Q. How long has that been the policy of Jehovah's Witnesses?

A. That has been a long-standing policy of Jehovah's Witnesses, ever since I can remember.

Q. We talked a lot about The Watchtower and Awake Magazines. I want to take you to what has been marked and admitted as Exhibit Number 17 for the Defense and Number 59 for the Plaintiff. Just touch on a few points of that with you.

Do you recall this issue of the Awake Magazine?

A. Yes.

Q. Have you read it recently?

A. Yes.

Q. Are you well familiar with what is contained in there?

A. Yes.

Q. What basically is the cover series addressing?

A. Well, I think, as has been discussed a number of times already, that this is an article that is talking about child molesting, that you can protect your children. And the first article talks about the growing trend in societies, which was printed and distributed back in 1985.

So at the time it was -- this problem was growing, and there was more education, more learning being achieved as a result of research. And so, as a result, there was a need to -- our organization, Watchtower, felt the need to provide education for parents so as to protect them. And this article cites a number of sources, a number of experts that comment on the growing trend of child abuse in society.

Q. Were some of those experts the ones that Dr. Monica Applewhite mentioned?

A. That's correct.

Q. I would like to direct your attention to page 6 of 10 in this exhibit. I think it is entitled "Child Molesting: Can You Protect Your Child?"

What is the advice that is given to parents in this portion of the exhibit?

A. Yes. It is just talking about the first line of defense.

It says:

> "The first line of defense is to avoid situations that leave our children vulnerable. For example, parents are advised to be careful about using as babysitters young adults who seem to prefer being with children rather than with folks their own age. One clinical psychologist reports that two-thirds of the molesters he is treating committed the offense while babysitting."

Q. So strong warning to parents?

A. Yes.

Drawing attention to the fact that child abusers are not just your next-door neighbor, not just a stranger, but it could be someone you know.

Q. I would like to draw your attention next to that same exhibit to the box on page 8 of 10. "If The Worst Should Happen."

What does this information advise parents to do?

A. This is a teaching box and it outlines, despite the fact you may take precautions, there may be situations where, God forbid, the worst thing happens and that is your child is abused. And so it says there are some things that can be done to deal with that.

One is that, first, the child and other children too must be protected from any further abuse. This must be done whatever the cost.

And, second, the child must be given a lot of love and emotional support. The parents must make it very clear that the little victim is not to blame. The crime, anything that happens as a result of it, even if a close relative goes to prison, is not her or his fault.

Q. The next page of that exhibit, perhaps it is page 10, was there any practical advice given to parents about how to train their children regarding this issue of child abuse?

A. Yes.

Q. What was it?

A. The article cites a book written by a Linda Tschirhart Sanford, The Silent Children. And she suggested using a tool, The what if? What if the babysitter did this? What if the babysitter did that? What if the babysitter said, "Let's keep a secret"?

So it's a way of parents running some scenarios with the children so as to prepare them with the possibility of maybe someone wanting to molest them and how to deal with it.

Q. Why is that information published in your Awake Magazine?

A. It is because we recognize with children that parents are really the first line of defense in helping their children. So we want to educate our parents to know what they can do to protect their families.

Q. Okay. I would like to take you to the next Awake article. It's October 8th, 1991. It's Defendants' Exhibit 29, and Plaintiff's Number 60. I don't believe this has been admitted, but by agreement we agreed this can come in.

MR. McCABE: May it be admitted your Honor?

MR. SIMONS: No objection.

THE COURT: Plaintiff's 60 is in.

(Whereupon, Plaintiff's Exhibit Number 60 and Defendant's Exhibit Number 29 was admitted into evidence)

BY MR. McCABE:

Q. What was this series of articles about?

A. This was one of the magazines or journals that Dr. Applewhite spoke about in her deposition about individuals who have been victims of child abuse. And it just gives some suggestions as to what individuals can do to deal or cope with their feelings and what others -- those who can support them and help them through this difficult period.

Q. Okay. I would like to take you to the next exhibit. It has been admitted, Defendants' Number 37 and Plaintiff's Number 64, the October 8th, 1993 issue of the Awake Magazine.

Do you recall this article?

A. Yes. "Protect Your Children."

Q. And what were some of the highlights discussed in these articles?

A. On the page 4 of the exhibit, there was an article there from Awake Magazine that mentioned "All experts agree that the best defense against child abuse is public awareness."

Q. Is that what Watchtower is trying to do by publishing this information?

A. That's correct. By publishing magazines of this sort, we were helping parents realize that they really are the first, are the best defense against child abuse and helping promote public awareness at least.

Q. I would like to draw your attention to page 6 of 13 of this exhibit. There is a book described there.

Do you know who the author of that book was?

A. Yes. Her name is Cheryl Fraser.

Q. And what was her advice that spoken here?

A. She says:

> "That while children should feel free to ignore, scream at or run from an abuser, many children who are abused explain later that they didn't want to seem rude. Children thus need to know that some grownups do bad things and that not even a child has to obey everyone who tells him or her to do something wrong. At such times a child has a perfect right to say no."

Q. Okay. So directing your attention to the first page, was some practical advice given and illustrated to help parents teach their children to protect themselves?

A. Yes. It's pictured there. I think we have seen already that the purpose of this was to run scenarios which help to demonstrate what a child can do by using words, by being firm in body language to resist any improper advances.

Q. Okay. I would like to take you to the next page of this exhibit and ask you: Was it a policy of Jehovah's Witnesses to encourage their members to hush-hush up this subject matter?

A. Absolutely not, no. We would not have published information of this nature if we were trying to hush-hush.

Q. And I would like to direct your attention to the end of the first paragraph in the box that is highlighted.

Could you read the first two sentences for me?

A. Beginning with "Repeatedly"?

Q. Yes.

A. Okay.

"Repeatedly reassure the child that you will do your best to provide protection. That the abuse is the abuser's fault, not the child's. And that the child is not bad. That you love the child. Some experts advise reporting the abuse to the authorities as soon as possible. In some lands the legal system may require this."

Q. Now, these articles that we have looked at and the jury has seen repeatedly to other witnesses, are these the stated Watchtower policies regarding the issue of child abuse?

A. Yes, they are.

Q. Is there any other way that Watchtower policy is communicated to the congregations of Jehovah's Witnesses?

A. Yes. Not just through the journals of our Awake and Watchtower but through letters to our bodies of elders.

Q. Okay. Let's take a look at Defense Exhibit 26, Plaintiff's Number 1, that has been admitted into evidence.

Can you tell us what this is?

A. This is a letter to all bodies of elders, dated July 1, 1989, and it has to deal with a variety of subjects that was addressed to our bodies of elders, subjects such as search warrants and subpoenas, crimes, criminal investigations, when service and publishers move, lawsuits, the issue of confidentiality and also child abuse.

Q. And would this be considered a policy letter from Watchtower Bible and Tract Society?

A. Yes, it would.

Q. You mentioned child abuse.

How big a section of this letter was devoted to that subject, child abuse?

A. On page 3 of the exhibits, I believe there is just four sentences, again, read the paragraph that highlights reporting child abuse when the law requires it, but especially when these things happen, we want to the protect our young people and then report that to our Legal Departments.

Q. Was this the be-all end-all of Watchtower's child abuse policy, this July 1st, 1989 letter?

A. No, it was not.

Q. Do you continue to publish from the Watchtower on this subject matter?

A. Yes, we have.

Q. And do you continue to publish up to the present time?

A. That's correct.

Q. We heard this morning from members of the congregation about CD-ROMs.

Can you tell us what that is?

A. It is a library of information over the last 40 years that is available to anyone who is associated with Jehovah's Witnesses. And it contains articles like the one we just discussed in the journals of the Awake, Watchtower and various other publications. So it has a search engine. You can just type in an expression and it pulls up all the articles on that subject.

Q. Is it updated from time to time?

A. Yes, every year I believe it is.

Q. Okay. And so a new member of the congregation would have access to all this information?

A. Yes.

Q. Are CDs made available to all the members of the congregation?

A. Yes, they are.

Q. Where would they get it?

A. They can get it at the literature counter in our Kingdom Halls.

Q. And that is one of the functions of the ministerial servants to take care of?

A. That's correct.

Q. Okay. I'd like to turn your attention next to what's been admitted as Plaintiff's Number 27, but it's also marked as Defense 32.

Do you recognize this document?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. What is it?

A. Again, it is a letter to all bodies of elders in the United States.

Q. And what was the purpose of sending this letter out to the congregations?

A. It was recognized that victims of child abuse may not have physical scars but they have emotional scars. And it is important that the elders who are interested in protecting and helping the individuals. And so the purpose of this letter was to educate our elders, further educate our elders, as to what they can do to help the victims of child abuse.

Q. Was part of it to help them to be sensitive to things they say when they hear about allegations of sexual child abuse?

A. Yes. That is one of the letters that I believe Dr. Applewhite referred to in her interview.

Q. There was a, I believe, one page attachment to this letter also as part of Exhibit 32.

A. Yes.

Q. Do you recognize that document?

A. I do.

Q. Is that a document you received as an elder in your congregation?

A. Yes, it was.

MR. McCABE: Can we have that on the screen?

BY MR. McCABE:

Q. What was the purpose of this one-page handout?

A. This was given to every elder at the time. And it was for the purpose of filing it, keeping it within his personal belongings so in the event if someone was victimized as a -- or was abused a child, was abused as a child, then they could look up the various Watchtower and Awake articles referenced there as well as the scriptures. It has many scriptures, many Bible references in there, to familiarize themselves with the materials so as to be sensitive to these victims.

Q. And did you personally use this exhibit yourself?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. What did you do with it?

A. I read it and I looked up all the references and read the biblical -- Watchtower references, Awake references and Bible references.

Q. Next, I would like to take you to Exhibit Defense Number 44, Plaintiff's Number 29. Appears to be another letter to all bodies of elders in the United States.

MR. McCABE: And I would ask that this be admitted into evidence?

THE COURT: What number is this?

MR. McCABE: It's Defense 44, Plaintiff's 29.

MR. SIMONS: This is the '95?

MR. McCABE: Yes, sir.

MR. SIMONS: No objection.

MR. McCABE: Thank you.

THE COURT: It shall be admitted as requested.

(Whereupon, Plaintiff's Exhibit Number 29 and Defendant's Exhibit Number 44 was admitted into evidence)

BY MR. McCABE:

Q. Is this also part of The Watchtower policy on dealing with allegations of sexual child abuse?

A. Yes, it is.

Q. What's the policy stated in this particular letter?

A. In paragraph 3, it states very simply that when someone has abused a child, that they should talk really frankly to the former child abuser, strongly cautioning him as to the dangers of hugging or holding children on his lap, and that he should never be in the presence of a child without another adult being present.

Q. Okay. I notice it says that they should talk frankly to a former child abuser.

Do you know why it uses the word "former"?

A. That would be a member who has exhibited a repentant attitude and remains a part of the congregation.

Q. Okay. If they were an active child abuser that the congregation knew about, what would happen? Never mind. Withdraw that question. Excuse me.

Let's go to Exhibit Number 50. It is also Plaintiff's Number 12.

MR. McCABE: And, again, I would move that this be admitted as an exhibit at this time.

MR. SIMONS: No objection.

THE COURT: It shall be admitted.

(Whereupon, Plaintiff's Exhibit Number 12 and Defendant's Exhibit Number 50 was admitted into evidence)

BY MR. McCABE:

Q. What is this letter?

A. This is a letter to all bodies of elders, March 14, 1997, that outlines some of the policy that we have in regard to child abusers.

Q. Okay. And this is part of the written policy?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. What is the policy stated that's made in this March 14th, 1997 letter?

A. It begins in paragraph 4. It raises the question: Who is a known child molester? And quoting from the January 1st, 1997 Watchtower article on "Let Us Abhor What Is wicked," mentions on page 29 that a man known to have been a child molester would not qualify for privileges in the congregation.

Q. What does that mean?

A. That means he would not serve as an elder nor as ministerial servant nor pioneer.

Q. And how long has that policy been in effect?

A. That has been a long-standing policy ever since I can remember. It's because he has not measured up to the scriptural or biblical standard for an elder or ministerial servant.

Q. Okay. And on the second page of this exhibit, what is the focus of the policy that is stated here?

A. This is on page 2 of the exhibit?

Q. Page 2, yes.

A. It outlines what the elders should do whenever a former molester moves to another congregation. And the secretary is to prepare a letter, that's signed and sent to the new congregation outlining the background of that individual and the need for the elders to be cautious and cautioning him in his association with others.

And then a copy of that is sent to the Branch Office, the Service Department, so that he doesn't slip through the cracks.

Q. Okay. So what else is mentioned in here about protecting children?

A. That they want to be very alert to the activities of anyone who is known to have molested a child in the past, recognizing that he may have certain weaknesses that he needs to deal with.

Q. I notice it refers to a Watchtower Magazine. I would like you to look at Defendant's Number 49, Plaintiff's Number 65.

MR. McCABE: And I would ask that this be admitted into evidence.

MR. SIMONS: 65, 049. No objection.

THE COURT: So admitted.

(Whereupon, Plaintiff's Exhibit Number 65 and Defendant's Exhibit Number 49 was admitted into evidence)

BY MR. McCABE:

Q. Why did the March 14th, 1997 letter refer to this particular Watchtower?

A. Because this Watchtower basically mentions the policy referred to in the March 14, 1997 letter that a known child molester would not qualify for responsibilities in the congregation.

Q. Is this information that we just reviewed, these letters in The Watchtower and Awake Magazine articles, do they constitute a Watchtower policy regarding allegations or issues that arise dealing with childhood sexual abuse?

A. Yes, they do.

Q. And you indicated that Watchtower continues to publish articles on the subject. Is that correct?

A. Yes. Up to the present, they are interested in the ongoing education of parents to protect their children.

Q. How many issues of Watchtower and Awake are printed every month?

A. 42 million of each journal per month.

Q. Are they all just in English?

A. No. The Watchtower is printed in 194 languages and Awake in 84 languages. It is a worldwide distribution of magazines.

Q. And so is it your contention that Watchtower treats the issue of childhood sexual abuse in a hush-hush manner?

A. Absolutely not, no.

MR. McCABE: Thank you. I have no further questions.

THE COURT: Mr. Schnack?

MR. SCHNACK: No.

THE COURT: Mr. Simons?

MR. SIMONS: Thank you.

CROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. SIMONS:

Q. Mr. Shuster, part of your duties over the years has been to provide depositions and declarations and testimony in lawsuits involving the Watchtower New York. Correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And let me ask you a couple of questions that we did not go over at the time of your deposition.

First of all, when people are in field service, do they sometimes collect money?

A. They do accept voluntary contributions from individuals, yes.

Q. And the money that is collected during field service, that goes to Watchtower New York. At least it did before 2001.

A. I'm not sure of the entity, but it does go to what we call the World Wide Work, yes.

Q. Now, after 2001 -- I just want to get that structure that you gave us straight here.

The Legal Department still remains in Watchtower New York?

A. I believe that was the deposition testimony, yes.

Q. And before 2001, the Service Department and the Legal Department were both in Watchtower New York.

A. I believe that's correct.

Q. Now, you said a person known to be a child molester cannot be an elder or ministerial servant or pioneer.

Can they continue to be a baptized publisher?

A. Yes.

Q. They can continue to be a minister?

A. Yes.

Q. And they can continue to be called "brother"?

A. Yes.

Q. And they can be sent out as a baptized publisher into neighborhoods to spread the word of the gospel?

A. Yes. But not by themselves or with a child.

Q. Is there in writing anywhere the caveat that you just gave to us? I haven't seen it in any of the exhibits.

A. I believe we have something in writing, yes. I couldn't put my finger on it right now, but yes.

Q. Is it here with us today?

A. I don't know if it is here. I don't recall.

Q. We have been in this trial now for a couple weeks. And you certainly know that one of the issues is whether or not a person who is positively identified as a child molester was going into field service with children who did not know and whose parents did not know that he was a molester. Correct? And you have heard all that for the last couple of weeks.

A. Yes.

Q. Any reason why, if there was a policy that specifically prohibited baptized publishers who were known to have molested children from going into field service with a child, that that written policy wouldn't be right in front of you right now?

A. That policy is specific to each individual situation. In each situation there are instructions given in the letter to a body of elders where that individual is and that instruction is given in that letter.

Q. Okay. But where is the written policy?

A. I'm not sure. You are talking about to the public in general?

Q. Or to the elders specifically.

A. As I mentioned, the instruction is specific to the individual's case.

Q. So there is no corporate written policy from Watchtower New York and there never has been that says a positively identified child molester cannot go into field service with a child?

MR. McCABE: Your Honor, may we approach?

(Discussion off the record)

THE COURT: Do you want to repeat the question, Mr. Simons?

BY MR. SIMONS:

Q. We were talking about a written policy that advises elders that a person possibly identified as a child molester cannot go into field service with a child.

Are you aware of any such administrative policy in writing that is with us here in this courtroom?

A. Not in this courtroom.

Q. Now, we looked at the 1985 Awake Magazine, and we talked about the first line of defense. I don't want to look at the Awake Magazine again. We have seen it enough.

But let me just ask you this: In any Awake Magazine, was the members, the public who are members of Jehovah's Witnesses, the congregation members who receive Awake Magazine, told that, if there was a positively identified child molester within the congregation, that that information would not be shared with the parents who are the first line of defense?

A. I do believe we have information to that effect.

Q. And which Awake Magazine is that in?

A. It was not in the Awake Magazine.

Q. You were part of the drafting of the July 1st, 1989 body of elder letter?

A. I think I mentioned to you at the time, but I am not certain. Possibly. It is hard to remember. It is quite a few years ago.

Q. That letter was not distributed, like Awake Magazine is, to the general congregation membership?

A. That's correct.

Q. You talked about sensitivity to child abuse victims.

Would telling the mother of a 13-year-old victim that it was her fault that her child was molested because she was not having enough sex with the molester fall under that general umbrella of sensitivity?

A. I don't know of any elder who would say something like that. That is not being sensitive. If he said that, it would be wrong to say that.

Q. And do you disagree, sir, that, if the first line of defense is the parents, that warning the parents of the existence of a positively identified child molester within the congregation gives them the tools they need to protect their children from a very specific individual threat?

A. I don't agree with that. And if I can explain the reasons.

Q. All right.

A. The reason is because we are very much interested in protecting our children, and that's why we have educated the parents over the years.

We have given cautions to our elders about individuals who are child molesters, who are repentant, who remain part of the congregation.

We have assured them to sit down, very frankly, as stated, don't sit, don't be around, don't hold or hug or kiss or take into ministry anyone who has that proclivity.

We also comply with the legal requirements.

If the law says to report that, then we are sensitive to the responsibility that we, as ministries, have to be in subjection to the superior rules, Romans 13:1.

If the law doesn't require it, then we as ministers will instruct the parents or the guardian or the victim that he has a responsibility. If he wants to report that, that is entirely up to him. But it is his absolute right to do that. We are not going to restrict him from doing that.

And in addition to that is the issue of confidentiality. It's something that we are very concerned about as ministers.

And the Bible has outlined this issue from even before Christ. In Proverbs 25:9, Do not reveal the confidential talk with another.

So when someone comes to us and has a problem -- and it could be a variety of problems -- it doesn't just have to be child abuse. It could be child abuse -- they have a certain expectation that what they say to us is going to be private. It is going to be kept confidential.

So we take that responsibility seriously. Otherwise, you could have individuals that withhold saying anything, and then you do have a problem with that.

Q. And if the individuals say, "Don't keep this private, protect people," is it still confidential?

A. I'm not sure of the question.

Q. You are assuming that the report of the childhood sexual abuse must remain secret because it was given in confidence, in your answer, your lengthy answer that you just gave us.

A. We provide warnings to the elders that give them cautions as to how to deal with that individual. We continue to educate our parents so that they can be the first line of defense to try to protect their children.

Q. I'm not sure that you answered my question, Mr. Shuster.

If the communication reporting a child molester is not requested to be kept private, but instead is delivered so that people can be protected from that molester, does that still mean that it has to be kept secret under the policies of your organization?

A. We regard that as a confidential communication.

Q. And that's because the --

A. We comply with the laws of the land.

Q. Do you do both?

A. Yes.

MR. SIMONS: Nothing further.

THE COURT: Anything further?

MR. McCABE: Just two questions, your Honor, although I risk putting a number on it.

REDIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. McCABE:

Q. The Watchtower and Awake Magazines, are they distributed worldwide free of charge?

A. Yes.

Q. And do you go door-to-door in public ministry yourself?

A. Yes.

Q. When is the last time you ever received any money doing that?

A. I can't remember the last time.

MR. McCABE: Nothing further.

THE COURT: Anything further, counsel-person?

All right. You can step down. Thank you for your time.

Anything more?

MR. SCHNACK: Next, your Honor, we are just going to put on a minute and a half or so of the Plaintiff, Candace Conti's, deposition.

MR. SIMONS: Yes. I've reviewed it. There's no objection.

MR. SCHNACK: (Reading from video screen)

Question by McCabe to Candace Conti:

I'm sure your attorney's explain to you that everything that is being said in the room is being taken down by the court reporter and you have just sworn to tell the truth.

And so your testimony here, even though it's in your lawyer's office, in the conference room, has the same force and effect as if you were testifying in a court of law.

Do you understand that?

And Ms. Conti replied: Yes.

And Mr. McCabe asked: Also, whatever you testify here to today will be put down in a booklet form like it reads like a script in a play sometimes, and it will be presented to you to read and sign.

You are free to make changes in the transcript if you feel that there is a material mistake being made in the transcript, but if you do make changes, that could be commented upon by me or someone else and affect your credibility at future proceedings.

Do you understand that?

And Ms. Conti answered: Yes.

MR. SCHNACK: Next clip.

Mr. McCabe asked: How many times did it take place, the bear hugs?

Ms. Conti said: I couldn't give you a number.

Mr. McCabe: Frequently?

She replied: Very frequently.

Question: Every meeting?

Ms. Conti replied: I would -- I could safely say that.

MR. SCHNACK: And then the last clip.

Mr. McCabe asked: Referring to the abuse that took place at the Kendricks' home, was anyone else present during any of these instances?

Ms. Conti replied: No.

Question: Was he married at that time?

Answer: No.

Question: Did he live alone?

Answer: Yes.

THE COURT: Okay. Any further evidence from the defense?

MR. SCHNACK: Watchtower Bible and Tract

Society rests.

MR. SIMONS: North Congregation rests.

THE COURT: Anything further?

MR. SIMONS: No, your Honor.

THE COURT: All right. The parties have rested. I will look forward to seeing each of you well rested on Monday morning. The closing argument will be made.

Generally speaking, I like to instruct before final argument, particularly in a case like this. So we will be working tomorrow morning on the instructions and related matters. The matter will be, again, submitted to you on Monday for your deliberations and decisions.

And again, I say this as sincerely as a judicial officer can say it, I thank you for your obvious attention in this matter, your patience, and I look forward to seeing you Monday morning, 8:30, right here.

(Whereupon, the following proceedings were heard outside the presence of jurors)

THE COURT: We have pending, your meet and confer, particularly Casey non-special instructions.

I, again, will be in here early tomorrow morning. You can arrive anytime you agree. Let's presume we will go on the record at 10:00, and that's not fixed in stone, so make sure we have a reporter here.

I am going to deal with the motion to strike Lewis' testimony.

I'm going to deal with the request for directed verdict.

As to the punitive damages count. And again -- I can open -- actually, the printer, at least for a minute, was working. So if anybody wants to email me and make any argument about a motion for directed verdict, have at it. I'm not going to see it before 6:45 tomorrow morning. However, the demands I have for the rest of the day --

So I will deal with the directed verdict motion. Motion to strike the Lewis' testimony. I will consider the application and -- looking into a cohesive fashion, the judicial notice for request in that statute.

I am also looking for anything anyone would like to proffer relative to dealing with the concept of privilege, its definition, and a presentation to the jury that, as a matter of law, separating the rest of the process -- their decision making process contextually.

MR. SCHNACK: My list also says limiting instructions.

THE COURT: Well, are you talking about the special instructions?

MR. SCHNACK: No. Limiting instructions regarding --

THE COURT: Right. Correct. Thank you.

And just -- and I'm operating from memory, which right now is a dangerous thing, but limiting instructions going to Kendrick's admissions, the grooming incident. There were four by my count. And I have a little note in chambers, but we will discuss those openly in terms of the limiting instructions.

And then certainly maybe saving the best for last, a special instruction dealing with the duty issue here.

And I'm not set in stone on this, because I have looked at several. And I have thought -- I was scratching a little bit myself on this.

I don't think this case fits directly into Juarez with the active volunteer. One reason, of course, is that the testimony is consistent, and Mr. Kendrick was not acting -- after the incident report -- was not acting in a ministerial manner, unlike the Juarez.

So I took a long look at the proffered

Special Instruction Number 2 of plaintiff, and I thought that was a Men's Warehouse fit to the case, suit fit to the case, certainly not the quality of clothing worn by all counsel here.

But my focus on my so-called weekend was an associational instruction, not entirely consistent with, but not dissimilar from that proffered by Plaintiff Special 1.

So again, that's open field, and I will look forward to comments and whatnot.

My goal remains, obviously, is to -- for the lawyers and the judge -- is to tell everybody, I don't care who wins in my courtroom, but I try to get it right. So that's my goal tomorrow in a case that has a lot of shimmy -- shim to it.

So on that high note -- well, I am in here. You are all welcome to get here as early as you agree. But my goal, again, which is movable, is to have the reporter here at 10:00 o'clock so we can act and react and really make some progress.

I won't have any -- unlike the last two weeks at least -- my day tomorrow is much calmer than it has been since at least the week before we started this trial. So we have plenty of time to get it right tomorrow in terms of our discussions and in term of dealing with the numerous instructional issues.

MR. SCHNACK: Shall we meet and confer on what needs to be redacted on the medical records as well?

THE COURT: Any housekeeping tasks.

MR. SIMONS: Nobody actually offered them, I thought.

MR. SCHNACK: I thought you offered them.

THE COURT: Tell me the number.

MR. SIMONS: It is 51/120. And I thought we just said, you know what, after she testified we didn't need the records. It seems to me we had that discussion.

THE COURT: I don't believe it was admitted. I will have my clerk check it. It was in testimony -- but I don't recall. I put it in for identification, but I don't believe I admitted it.

MR. SCHNACK: I understood it was admitted.

THE COURT: So, Madam Clerk, I'll have you take a look at that question.

All right. Nice work. I'll see you in the morning.

(Proceedings adjourned at 2:10 p.m.)

REPORTER'S CERTIFICATE

PROCEEDINGS

THE COURT: Back on the record in the Watchtower Bible and Tract Society Inc. All counsel -- counsel had a meet and confer relative to proposed jury instructions in this particular matter.

As a matter of process, I'm going to ask Mr. Simons, counsel for Plaintiff, to go, as I say in Latin, in seriatim, Casey instruction specifically referenced by chronology as to what the parties may be given in this matter.

If there is agreement as to a certain instruction being modified, just indicate, if you would, as to the defense version or to the written version that we will submit to the court on Saturday so I can see all of it.

And we will -- first of all, as I said, put behind door "A" the agreed-upon instructions from Casey, the agreed upon instructions as modified by your agreement.

And then, because of the nature of the interplay, there are a number of instructions as to punitive damages.

What I have proposed is: I will listen to motions, specifically defense Counsel's motion to submit the testimony of Mr. Lewis and then their motion for directed verdict, and Plaintiff's response directed verdict/non-suit.

I will make my rulings and then we will return to the instructions and proceed accordingly. Okay?

MR. SIMONS: All right.

THE COURT: Mr. Simons, to you as to specifically agreed-upon instructions, their source and then any comments as to any specific instruction if modified by agreement of the parties.

MR. SIMONS: All right. Your Honor, thank you.

Beginning with Casey 200, 201, 202, 203, 208, the Plaintiff's's supplemental version with the videotape heard part, 210, 212, with an agreed modified version, 218, 219 --

MR. SCHNACK: We have 218 as modified?

MR. SIMONS: Yes.

THE COURT: And I -- thank you. I have it as modified.

MR. SIMONS: 219, 220, 221, 223, 400, the defense version, however, with the names changed from Jane Doe to Candace Conti.

I'm sorry, your Honor, 401, we deferred; is that correct?

THE COURT: By my note, yes.

MR. SIMONS: Yes. Okay.

THE COURT: And let me state for the record, as I understand it, it is Plaintiff's position that 401 contextually should be given, notwithstanding any other special instruction given on that statute, on that duty and standard of care while defense objects to the introduction of 401.

And I will listen to that argument when we come back.

MR. SIMONS: And similarly, 406, there is an issue. It is agreed to be given, but there is an issue.

THE COURT: And let me say for my record, the agreement in my understanding, is there is no objection as to named parties to this lawsuit, there is an issue -- I will call it a Prop 51 allocation issue -- as to un-named parties, as I understand it. Okay.

MR. SIMONS: 412, 413, 430, 431, which needs to be modified to fill in the party names.

434, which needs to be modified to change Jane Doe to Candace Conti.

MR. McCABE: Just so we are all clear, on 431, we are going to change "negligence" to be "negligence" or "fault."

MR. SIMONS: Yes.

THE COURT: And my notes say that.

MR. SIMONS: Yes. Thank you.

1005. 1306 is the instruction that was not specifically requested until this morning with regard to sexual battery. And the parties have agreed on language as to 1306.

3700. 3701 as modified by the parties.

3703 as modified by the parties.

3720 as modified by the parties.

3900, the Plaintiff version.

3902, the Defendant version with Candace Conti instead of Jane Doe.

3903, as modified by the parties to just limit it to the one specific item.

3904A. 3904B.

MR. SCHNACK: Again, those are already modified again to exclude any reference to the claim of wage loss and future earnings.

MR. SIMONS: Right. The Plaintiff's versions would exclude the claim of wage loss. Counsel is correct.

THE COURT: All right.

MR. SIMONS: 3905 and 3905-A. 3925.

3933 is agreed to, but the issue of non-parties remains unresolved.

3934, as modified to reflect the different theories.

3960 is agreed to but, again, the non-party issue is unresolved.

3964, 5000, 5002, 5003, 5005. 5006. 5009.

5010, which will be edited to reflect and the notes will be destroyed.

5011, at this point we would request mutually and insert jury instruction Casey instruction 114 and 116. 5012.

The question of 5016 is before the court.

5017 agreed to.

5020 agreed to.

THE COURT: All right. Does defense counsel agree with that?

MR. SCHNACK: Yes, your Honor.

THE COURT: On that recitation. Thank you, gentleman.

All right. At this time I will invite argument. First of all, I want to ensure, counsel that I have read the motion. I have got emails which I could read. I got a copy from the Plaintiff in response. So I read all writings that have been presented to the court for a purpose of making a record and a bit of argument to the defense and the moving party.

MR. SCHNACK: With respect to Carl Lewis, your Honor?

THE COURT: With respect to Carl Lewis.

MR. SCHNACK: Basically it is what we put in the motion, your Honor. He testified that there was no scientific or empirical evidence to support the CSAAS. And he further testified that it has no particular application to any particular case. He did that on redirect and recross. And for that reason, it can't assist the jury. And that's why we think his entire testimony should be stricken. That's the only topic he testified on.

THE COURT: Mr. Simons.

MR. SIMONS: That standard, your Honor, may be applicable in federal court. It is not the standard in the state court. And the question is helpful to the jury. And under People vs. Brown, I think that standard can come in in this case.

THE COURT: Clearly, it is the Court's belief that there are differences between the state law and the federal law on this. Having considered a well-phrased motion and reply, I'm going to deny that motion.

All right. Let's move on to the request. And on my record at this juncture is a directed verdict motion and, of course, plaintiff has replied directed verdict/non-suit.

Having said the same on my record, and at the close of the Plaintiff's case, defense made a motion for directed verdict. Let's, on our record -- who is going to handle it for defense?

MR. SCHNACK: I would.

THE COURT: Okay. Mr. Schnack. Frame it very specifically as to the nature of the motion. I will allow you to argue and Mr. Simons to reply, so I can consider the motion and make a ruling.

So to the defense for argument purposes.

MR. SCHNACK: Yes, your Honor. Just to supplement the briefing on this. This is for a directed verdict on the punitive damages claim that has been alleged against Defendant, Watchtower.

The standard is brief. I'm sure you're familiar with. That's the oppression, fraud or malice by clear and convincing evidence.

The only issue raised in the pleadings, and indeed in the evidence, was that the July 1, 1989 letter was a policy, and that that evidence, malice, oppression or fraud -- the only evidence about that letter that even rises to a level of negligence was argument of counsel. Not one witness testified that that was a policy to keep child abuse secret, which is the whole basis of the claim. If you read through the Complaint, that is the basis for it.

And there was no evidence whatsoever from any witness. Dr. Salter, the expert, did not address that letter in her testimony. Dr. Ponton did not address it. Carl Lewis did not address it.

The only evidence came from the defense witnesses that were called by the Plaintiff, and none of them said it was a policy of secrecy. None of them said it was directed specifically to child sex abuse. And, therefore, it just cannot meet the standard to even submit for the punitive damages claim to the jury.

I guess one final point, your Honor, is, because that is a national policy, the last part of our brief under the BMW case, you cannot effect -- try to effect national policy by awarding punitive damages in state court. And so that is a further reason why it is improper here.

THE COURT: And, again, I thought that was good work again.

MR. SIMONS: In reverse order, the BMW case, that applies to whether or not the punitive damages can be included in assessing the amount, conduct towards persons other than the plaintiff.

That's a separate question from whether or not despicable conduct is -- or indifference, if you will, with conscious disregard is, itself, subject to proof only by the conduct to the plaintiff.

Those are separate issues. So I would distinguish the BMW case in that regard.

Secondly, I do not think that it requires an admission by the defendant of malice in order for the jury to find malice.

And, in fact, in many cases malice, and particularly, and in a malice in a negligence context, as this case is recited in Plaintiff's motion to amend, negligence citations involving findings of indifference all involve cases where the defendant is not admitting malice, but that it is inferred from the other facts and circumstances in the case.

And in this case, I think there is more than sufficient evidence from Dr. Salter as to the timing and the events involving the Catholic Church, and the other evidence we have set forth in our written opposition from which a jury could find by clear and convincing evidence that the true purpose of this policy was protection of The Watchtower and not protection of the children.

MR. SCHNACK: Just briefly, your Honor, the only evidence on this July 1,1989 letter was that it was very broad. It addressed subpoenas of counseling records with couples who would seek out an elder. It addressed subpoenas, criminal matters, things unrelated to child abuse.

The only reference to child abuse -- two things: One, there's mandatory reporting laws if you recall in that paragraph at the top, it was shown several times. One is their mandatory reporting laws of calling the Legal Department so you can comply with legal requirements.

And two, help protect the victims.

Nothing in there said cover up, hush-hush on child abuse. If he refers to conduct by Abrahamson and Clarke, they were not managing agents. They were agents of Watchtower, but not managing agents. And again, the evidence doesn't reach even the preponderance, much less the clear and convincing evidence.

MR. SIMONS: May I respond to that point, your Honor.

First of all both the managing agents, both Abrahamson and Clarke were following instructions from New York which were issued from the policies issued by the governing body. And the governing body is the managing agents, according to Mr. Shuster. I don't think there is question of who the managing agents are or where the policies come from.

And, secondly, on the question that counsel raised with regard --

I'm sorry. I just lost my train of thought .

-- that the policy does not address child abuse by determining that information that is not confidential, such as the report of Jonathan Kendrick sexually abusing Andrea, is deemed confidential by corporate policy rather than by law.

That is a function of effecting through the policy of confidentiality, actual secrecy regarding the report of child sex abuse that was not received in confidence.

So I think that, while the policy is well-written to, perhaps, masquerade its effect and intent, the policy's actual effect and intent is different.

MR. SCHNACK: Might I respond, your Honor?

THE COURT: You may.

MR. SCHNACK: Two things. One, the testimony was that there was scriptural requirements to confidentiality, not that it was a legal requirement.

Second, there was no evidence that Watchtower told Clarke and Abrahamson to keep it confidential.

Again, we are dealing with two individuals who were agents, yes, but not managing agents. It is their conduct that is being measured.

THE COURT: All right. I have given a lot of thought to this, and history would tell you that I have granted a number of non-suits and motions for directed verdict.

I'm going to decline to do so in this particular case. Nobody cited to me a case -- and I'm going to find it in a minute.

First of all, the rule of law is that, in my reviewing and judging in this particular matter, I do adopt the standard of clear and convincing, since it is limited to the request for punitive damages.

Having said that, I have considered the couple weeks of testimony here, the evidence before me, and I'm going to decline to grant the motion as to punitive damages. That is not to say either party certainly can make any post-trial motions they want.

But the policy itself -- first of all, in Turk -- and I will get the cite in a minute -- that was a case involving apportionality. Absolutely no evidence in a bad faith case as to malice or any of the nature or arguments relating to the imposition of punitive damages.

And I think this type of argument or application is inherently -- unless there is just no evidence whatsoever -- and understanding the difference between the evidentiary standards, I am going to deny the motion because I think the letter, the policy, the testimony of witnesses and whatnot that there is a lot in play in this case.

You know, part of the readings go to whether you make a conscious and deliberate action that imperils the safety of others.

And inherently in a case of this nature where child abuse is alleged, that would give me great pause, relative to directing a verdict at this time in this particular case, and effectively serving the jury function here; although, it is certainly a consideration as to the Judge's call, as to whether I exercise it or not.

So I'm going to deny the motion for directed verdict as to punitive damages in this case.

It is Stewart versus Truck Insurance Exchange, which that does put on the burden to the plaintiff to meeting the standard of clear and convincing evidence.

There is also a lot of language in Stewart versus Truck Insurance Exchange as to the burden -- I mean the admonishments as to a juries in this.

> "When ruling on a motion for a directed verdict, the judge may not waive the evidence or determine the credibility of witnesses. All of the evidence presented by the party opposing the motion must be accepted as proved, understanding it is evidence not argument. And all evidence presented by the moving party must be disregarded."

Stevens versus Parke, Davis.

So applying the legal standard, the evidentiary standard, and whatnot, I am going to decline to order a directed verdict in this matter at this time.

All right. Let's go back through the open issues, and we will get to the special verdict requests at the end of our continuing discussion regarding the basic instructions.

Now, on my checklist, let's go to 401 for a minute.

And, Mr. Simons, your pitch on that. Basic standard of care: Casey.

MR. SIMONS: One second your Honor. I'm catching up here.

Your Honor, 401, it is the reasonable person standard of negligence which would apply in this case.

The specific standard of care and whether it was reasonable to need it or not and the specific duty and whether or not it was met are supplemental, I think, to the basic understanding of the standard of care.

Additionally, this would apply to any other person, so certainly if the court is inclined to include non-parties, this would be the only standard of care instruction as to those individuals, and I'm not suggesting it should.

THE COURT: I understood that.

All right. To defense counsel. Absent the non-named parties, your thoughts on giving the 401.

MR. McCABE: Well, one thought, your Honor, is it talks about the failure to act. And that gets to the whole question which is: Was there a duty to the warn?

THE COURT: I agree. I agree. And so your point is entirely and legitimately made as to whether there was a duty to warn. As directly. And you said it. All right. By the time we get down to the special instruction, I will then quote that 401.

All right. Where in the 3900s, there was a question about use of the table. I guess --

MR. SCHNACK: The life expectancy table, I think it is that one.

MR. SIMONS: Yes. It says 3932.

THE COURT: And all counsel, notwithstanding my fondness for each of you, to remain in my good graces, I want to get my instruction books back up here before you leave.

MR. SCHNACK: We actually stole it from the table next to us.

THE COURT: Well, there might be a factual issue as to how it got here.

Okay. Standard of care.

Okay. To defense counsel on this one.

MR. SCHNACK: Your Honor, on 3932, there is no evidence whatsoever of life expectancy for Plaintiff, Candace Conti.

There is no expert witness testimony, no lay testimony on it, period. So we don't believe it is appropriate to give it.

THE COURT: This is just one of those yin and yang circumstances in this case again. I am going to give it. I would be more attentive and understanding if there was a concern that she wouldn't live the average life span and the need for testimony as to that. But on 3932, I would use the table for life expectancy. And that's my ruling.

Okay. Let's get to the non-parties aspect because that affects a few things here.

All right. So I presume the defense is saying to this judge --

First of all, to counsel for the defense, who would you like to be included for purposes of the jury's consideration as to verdict?

MR. SCHNACK: Kathy Conti, Neal Conti, Fremont Police Department, Child Protective Services, and the Alameda County District Attorney's office.

THE COURT: Mr. Simons?

BY MR. SIMONS:

Q. Your Honor, Fremont Police Department, Child Protective Services and Alameda County District Attorney's Office, I do not believe there is any evidence in the record that would support the finding of a duty breach causation as to them. So I think that the prima facia case required before it can be included on the allocation is not met there.

Kathy Conti, there was no evidence that she was able to take care of herself, much less anyone else during the critical time period. I don't think there was any evidence for this jury to find that she was negligent.

And Neal Conti was not aware that Jonathan Kendrick was a threat to molest his child. He may not have been the warmest parent, but there is no evidence that he knowingly allowed his child to be molested. And, in fact, there was substantial evidence that at that time his relationship with his daughter was such that had he known, he would have protected her.

THE COURT: Well, I certainly agree, because I have been doing what I consider a review of the evolving Prop 51 expansions. Certainly, I would not be inclined to instruct or allow a verdict consideration as to the Police Department in Fremont or the D.A.

MR. SCHNACK: Can we respond to that, your Honor?

THE COURT: Sure.

MR. SCHNACK: In the same way that he contends there was no evidence by the Fremont Police, the evidence was that do not ever take any community notifications at the very same time that the elders worked on it.

And they worked -- they got the very same confession that the elders did. They prosecuted him criminally, and yet they took no community notification.

How is that any different than what they are alleging that the elders did not do?

THE COURT: Well, but you are now bringing in the D.A. and the police and whatnot, and it raises, I think, different questions as to the duty and the analysis of the same.

MR. SCHNACK: I have defended public entities, your Honor. These types of claims are brought against them all the time.

THE COURT: I know that, but the issue is: How are they disposed of? And I assure you in this particular case based on the evidence, given that instruction.

MR. McCABE: Your Honor, it just goes back to the duty to warn. The police didn't have a duty to warn. The elders didn't have a duty to warn.

So if you take the police out of it -- he knew about the elders involved. He knew the congregation was involved. He knew that there were children in the congregation. So it was the same thing.

THE COURT: I'm not sure it is. At that point in time -- well, I'm going to think about it. I mean, this is a fairly sophisticated point. But that is a very -- well, I'm going to think about it a little bit.

Anything further from Mr. Simons.

MR. SIMONS: On the law enforcement agencies?

THE COURT: Right.

MR. SIMONS: Yeah. Where was the evidence of standard of care that required them to notify the general community?

THE COURT: Well, of course it is very clear that at this juncture, all the elements would have to be established contextually within the evidence before me.

I can tell you, the easiest decision on this one, as far as I'm concerned, is the father. Okay. I'm not going to put him into the loop there.

MR. SCHNACK: If we could be heard on that as well, your Honor.

THE COURT: Sure.

MR. SCHNACK: He testified that he read all the materials that came from Watchtower that told him what to do to protect his daughter. And if he didn't do it, there was a negligence issue there.

THE COURT: Well, I know. And I mean, that's almost an application negligence, per se, because he's simply a parent that didn't pick up the fact that his daughter was getting molested.

MR. SCHNACK: As did the professionals who saw his daughter at the very same time.

THE COURT: Well, but I think the congregation -- well, certainly in terms of they knew and they had the confession relative to that.

Remind me about the mother. She was not there -- it is going to be kind of a linked in with the father too. The mother was not there for the confession, so-called confession, neither was the stepmother.

MR. SCHNACK: We are talking about Andrea Kendrick?

THE COURT: Right.

MR. SIMONS: The victim and the mother were both there with Jonathan Kendrick and the two elders.

THE COURT: At the time of the elders?

MR. SIMONS: Yes.

THE COURT: Now, what is your view as to when the mother of the Plaintiff first learned as to the -- well, the alleged molestation by Kendrick?

MR. SIMONS: Do you mean Kathy Conti?

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. SIMONS: First learned in 2003.

THE COURT: Okay. I will take a look at that in a minute.

MR. SCHNACK: Your Honor, going back again to this law enforcement agency, if you are not going to include them on a similar duty to warn, you are converting this to a clergy malpractice case. We are running back in those circles. If there is duty to warn based on information that Kendrick had abused his stepdaughter and the police, the D.A., and Child Protective Services got that same information in the same time period, and they didn't warn anyone.

They knew she was attending church, they knew Jonathan Kendrick was involved in the church, yet they did not take any notification, whether the community notification was specific to the church, if you are just going to hold the elders responsible on duty to warn, that's a clergy malpractice case again.

We are running in these same circles.

THE COURT: Well, it has certainly been an interesting case trying to separate out from the duty analysis and responsibility of the church as to anyone else.

But if I can speak. If you convinced me to put the police department in on this one, then every time they deal with any clergy case, then they have to go to the congregation, I guess the congregation, to insulate themselves, and make a broad public statement. And boy, that seems to me to be an incredibly burdensome duty. And, of course, the duty concept is largely an expression of public policy as to the imposition of a duty.

So in the context of evaluating duty, I brought Palsgraf into this one long ago, as to the limits of duty, is it more appropriate as a matter of public policy with the facts in this case that the duty extends to, effectively, the elders here under these circumstances. And were I to adopted it to the police department, to a D.A., to anyone who knew about it, because that's essentially the argument that you are making, is it doesn't need to be the police department or the D.A. or the Child Protective Services. If I accept as a matter of policy that the duty to warn extends out there, then the question is analytically, where does it cease?

Let me give you a hypothetical. If I'm walking down the street in Fremont, California, and I overhear somebody say to me, "I know for a fact Joe Smith molested his 15-year old stepdaughter," do I have a duty to go run to the cops and report that?

MR. SCHNACK: In 18 states in this nation, you do.

MR. McCABE: But, your Honor, if you have a special relationship -- and that's what is lacking here, and that's the same problem because the same duty that you are worried about imposing on the police, Mr. Simons wants to impose on every not-for-profit church group or any member's activity that they happen to know about, he did it once before.

So if you take your analogy, if I hear that somebody in my Little League operation has been arrested for a DUI, and then three years later he kills somebody in the DUI who happens to be a Little Leaguer, I should be on the hook. That's what we are doomed with.

THE COURT: Well, thank you. That kind of goes, because I have already ruled against you on this. You have tried to limit your responsibility --

And, look, good lawyers do crazy things, and I really thought this was fabulous, but forgetting defining the breadth and width of the duty, you said to me, "This must be limited to acts on church property." Actually, we argued property. But church functions. To which my immediate and quick response was, you know, if you find breach there, I don't think causation and damages, because of that breach, are limited by geography. Okay. I have already ruled that. I am going to stick with my ruling on that.

I will tell you what I will let you do, though. I will let you give me a five-page brief on the Prop 51 aspects and the application to this case as to the cops and whatnot.

I can tell you what I'm thinking -- well, I'm going to reserve my question about the parents on this one. But if I'm going to be consistent, I really thought through, once there is a breach here, there is a matter of causation damages, the church is not limited to ask that it occurred on the premises. And I really thought that through, so I'm not going to change on that one.

I will let you brief, and you can email to me tomorrow, and I will try to do what I can from Sacramento. I will respond to them on Saturday morning. As far as my thinking -- and I haven't thought it through -- was that I was going to keep it between the parties here. But I will -- I will give you ten pages, because it is a very interesting issue.

I can tell you, I'm not going to change my mind as a judge in terms of geography on this in terms of breach. But I will consider on the failure to warn aspects whether the cops, the D.A. and whatnot, I guess should be included contextually and analytically.

MR. SCHNACK: If you are not going to read it until Saturday, can we have until Friday noonish?

THE COURT: Sure. I am not going to leave a lot of dangling participles here. And that affects several jury instructions.

All right. Let's move on for a moment to special instructions. Now, I'm not sure I have seen all of these. But I have seen: Sexual misconduct outside the scope of the agency.

Let me read that into the record:

"Criminal sexual misconduct falls outside of the course and scope of the agency and should not be imputed into the principle. A person is otherwise responsible for harm caused by the wrongful conduct of his agent while the agent is acting within the scope of the authority given to him."

All right. Any response from Plaintiff on that?

MR. SIMONS: Yes. I think its confusing and unnecessary because we do have instructions with regard to who is an agent and the scope of their agency by our modifications of the 3700 series on that topic.

This, being more generic, runs the risk that people are going to wonder what to do. If we want to do a specific instruction, as the court has indicated it does, that Kendrick's sexual abuse, if any, of Candace Conti is not imputed or an agency relationship, I think that would be the way to address that issue, otherwise, this issue is addressed by 3700.

THE COURT: I'm a little hamstrung, because I haven't seen your modified instructions on agency. I do want to give an instruction about criminal sexual misconduct not being imputed. Okay. I think we can keep that pretty simple.

MR. SCHNACK: Your Honor, we have no objection to what he suggests in making it specific to Kendrick.

THE COURT: Right. I should make it even simpler by just simply saying: The criminal and sexual misconduct of Jonathan Kendrick falls outside the course and scope of agency and should not be imputed to -- and you can say "defendant's" here or "principle."

MR. SCHNACK: I would mention the defendants by name.

MR. SIMONS: I agree.

THE COURT: I do too, and make that simple.

MR. SCHNACK: Could we also have a special instruction that Jonathan Kendrick is not an agent of either of the entity defendants?

THE COURT: I was just going to go to that. That's Number 2. And I have no objection to that. Just keep it simple.

MR. SIMONS: Well, yeah the instruction as proposed is --

THE COURT: I can tell you, it is too wordy for my taste.

And the wording instructions on this stuff, you heard what I said about the first one, and I would be as simple on Number 2 as basically saying that Jonathan Kendrick was not and is not the agent of the named entities.

You know, keep it simple without explanation. I always try to walk through the jury's shoes on these things.

MR. SIMONS: My concern is there may be circumstances where he could be considered to be an agent, for example, if he is in field service where they collect money that goes to Watchtower New York, and he robs a house, and there is all kinds of scenarios that have nothing to do with this. So I don't want to make it overbroad. I want to say when he sexually molests somebody, he is not an agent.

MR. SCHNACK: But there is no evidence that Mr. Kendrick ever did that.

MR. SIMONS: Right.

THE COURT: Good argument by Mr. Simons, but my evidentiary record doesn't have him going out of the agency. I will entertain being very simple on these things. I think you are right. I want it very simple. I don't want it predicated, and if I have to write it myself, I will do it. But it should be only one or two sentences each.

MR. SCHNACK: What would you prefer, your Honor? Do you want us to submit something or would you --

THE COURT: I want you to talk about it after this little discussion. I'm really only going to give two lines, name the defendants, the sexual misconduct is not imputed, and he was not the agent of the defendant entities based upon his conduct here. Whatever way you want to word it is fine with me.

All right. Special relationship. I fully understand the dynamic there.

MR. SCHNACK: We preserved our record that we, the defense, wants --

THE COURT: You may, and I technically denied it. So you have your record. You presented Special Jury Instruction Number 3. The court declines to give that.

Special Jury Instruction Number 4. That will contextually ride on what I do with other entity parties, but it does highlight. And look -- I could have taken this case and put it out in bold for a tort class and a candidly tort question.

The request and the dealing, the dealings of -- I mean, a lot of things follow from putting in play as effectively, un-named parties to this action, people like the parents.

MR. SCHNACK: Your Honor, and that goes to what Neal and Kathy Conti are alleged to have done.

THE COURT: Or not done for that matter, because it just goes right back to 400 in terms of failure to take action.

MR. SCHNACK: Because if the jury believes that the parents allowed her to leave with Kendrick, that puts them on the verdict form.

MR. SIMONS: Well, I disagree with that most strenuously.

THE COURT: Well, Mr. Simons, you don't need to say that, because it is really kind of a spin we have been spinning ever since we started discussing the breadth and the width and the duty argument. And so far we have done pretty well with that. Because, I believe when you mentioned Palsgraf -- you know, this just continues to raise, where does the buck stop in terms of issues like this for definition of imposition of the duty. I fully understand the nature. So I will reserve the request at this time, pending my ruling as to the duty aspects as to -- and your briefs as to the un-named parties.

Now, add 1 -- I know I have read it. I'm going to deny that as to being responsible only for abuse on church property or during a church-sponsored activity.

Number 2, that will go to our ultimate standard of care instruction, the duty to warn.

All right. Now, is Special Number 1, Plaintiff Special Number 1, duty to protect?

MR. SIMONS: Yes. I think there are two, however, supplemental or additional requests from defense.

THE COURT: Okay. I was going to ask that. I think there were additional mentions from the Plaintiff, too in terms of what I'm looking at here.

MR. SIMONS: Yes.

THE COURT: So let's go to the defense first.

MR. SCHNACK: Let me find the supplemental.

THE COURT: And that's what I'm doing. There is a lot of stuff that has been delivered to me.

MR. SCHNACK: Here they are. I have them. Should I just read them into the record.

THE COURT: Why don't you do that because I'm looking for them. I'm not sure where they are. And I have them all segregated up here.

MR. SCHNACK: These were the supplemental special jury instructions that the defense proposed. One reads:

"Defendant Watchtower and Defendant North Fremont Congregation can be found negligent only if you find that they failed to act reasonably to prevent Plaintiff from being injured by Kendrick; one, on church property; or two, during a church-sponsored activity."

THE COURT: Denied. Go ahead.

MR. SCHNACK: Second one reads:

"I direct you that under California and United States law, elders have no legal duty to warn or inform other members of the congregation that a child molester attends religious meetings or participates in church-sponsored activities. Therefore, you cannot find either Defendant Watchtower Bible and Tract Society New York, Incorporated, or Defendant North Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses Fremont, California, liable based upon the elders' failure to warn or inform plaintiff or the congregation that Jonathan Kendrick was an alleged child molester or had committed an act of child sexual abuse."

THE COURT: I will reserve on that pending the final definition of duty.

MR. McCABE: Your Honor, we have a proposal.

But Dr. Salter testified that she believed the 1993 the law made elders mandatory reporters. And that's clearly not the law.

THE COURT: I agree.

MR. McCABE: It is outside her province to make that statement. And I think we have to have an instruction that the law for clergy for mandated reporters did not come into effect in California until January 1st, 1997.

MR. SIMONS: That was not her testimony. Her testimony was persons in groups -- persons in youth groups as advisors and supervisors had a duty to report. And it could be construed that clergy would be included in that, since they didn't consider that they were involved in that, and we had to specifically name them to get them to do it. And that's a little different.

THE COURT: Well, it goes to your request for me to take judicial notice, which I am prepared to deal with. But I don't want to get off center right now of the instructions. I will deal with that when I go right to the request for judicial notice and deal with that. Okay. I'm prepared to deal with that when I have thought that through.

I did interpret her testimony, and I will review the testimony as to the duty to report circumstances. What your view or testimony was that she inferred to the jury that the clergy had a duty to report in 1993?

MR. SCHNACK: Absolutely.

MR. McCABE: Yes, sir. And she said the 1997 law made that clear by specifically naming...

MR. SCHNACK: I believe the court has the obligation to instruct on the law.

THE COURT: Well, I was just thinking of the irony of all this in my work in this case. And noting the objection, depending upon which side the ball lands on this.

If that were her testimony -- I'm going to clean up the record. Okay. I am going to review it in a minute -- if she said there was a duty.

In the same vein, I would clear up any inference as to privilege being involved in this case at all.

And if you had seen my conduct at all these other jury trials, I do that with the greatest reticence -- but I'm an activist about it. I don't want the jury mislead by anybody in terms of these cases.

So I'll look forward to hearing everyone about Dr. Salter and the duty to report.

When did she testify? On what day?

MR. SIMONS: Dr. Salter was here on Monday morning. So that would have been June 4.

MR. SCHNACK: And it would have been during my cross-examination of her that she testified to that.

THE COURT: I can make everybody's job a little easier on that. If that's what she testified to and inferred, I will clean that up. But I'm not going to answer your question yet as to the statute. Okay. And that's a different application and a certain argument under the circumstances.

MR. SCHNACK: I believe the court reporter had a question. Do you want that portion of her testimony, then, printed out?

THE COURT: That would be nice just so that I don't have to look for that myself.

But that was, I think, easier to relate to a jury as to duty to report and when and the nuance of communication and inference and judicial rulings. That was no easy job to this judge, but that was easier than the other one.

MR. SIMONS: Although, we did have Dr. Applewhite testify that no one had any duty to report anything before 1998.

THE COURT: Well, and they did.

MR. McCABE: She did not testify to that.

MR. SCHNACK: She did not testify to that.

THE COURT: Well, they both -- you know, I get the cases brought to me, and they are both talking about standard of care and duty. But the answer is I'm going to clean that up if that existed.

MR. SIMONS: There is one other twist to this, your Honor, which is Dr. Applewhite based her opinions upon the law, not requiring anyone to report or community notification, whereas Dr. Salter said, "I don't base my opinion on the law, I base my opinion on what the standard of practices were."

MR. SCHNACK: And we can disagree about what she testified to as well, because that's not what she said.

THE COURT: We can. But I'm going to have that little printout just to see if she said that. And then, again, without attributing it to her, I'm just going to simply -- because this jury has taken a lot of notes. I could see somebody writing that down and relying on it.

MR. SIMONS: And I would, from the Plaintiff's side, feel the jury would be being misled if they were told or left with the impression that youth supervisors and administrators in 1993 had no duty to report. That would be a misstatement of the Penal Code.

THE COURT: And I'm not even sure I'm going to wrestle with that. I'm just going to try to limit it to clergy. Okay.

Let's go to -- and I will give you my preliminary thoughts, subject to the extension of duty argument.

I think we have taken care of all the requests for defense at this point. Am I correct?

MR. SCHNACK: I believe so, with the addition of Mr. McCabe's motion. Yes.

THE COURT: Okay.

(Brief Break)

THE COURT: We are back on the record. The Plaintiff requested Special Instruction Number 1. It is framed, "A duty to protect." And of all that I reviewed in this case in terms of proposed instructions, this is the closest to what I have been thinking in terms of dealing with --

First of all, I believe it should be framed as "A duty to protect," rather than otherwise. And, of course, at line 13, the presence or absence of any warning, again, will basically be in play as to other defense and/or circumstances, but I will say on the record in terms of what I have been thinking about for the last few days, this is the closest to the way I have been considered framing "the duty."

I understand the argument about clergy malpractice. And I'm going to consider the same contextually in terms of these arguments as to duty to others, obviously including warning or not. And so I'm going to leave that there.

Number 2 from the Plaintiff is the duty to protect. What I did like about that, and why I have been centering on one as a basic starting spot is the inference in 2 is, you know, Houston or Juarez, that there was that status of being placed in a position of trust, which in this case would have been a ministerial servant rather than congregant. And Juarez, for instance, was a scout leader.

And this case, my first appearance was different because -- and this was the nuance of the case -- we have largely gotten rid of punishment on constitutional grounds.

So I am more inclined to frame the duty to protect very much like and substantially like Number 1 rather than Number 2, because I think this case is different.

I mean, in the congregation, the elders took action. They removed him from a position of trust and responsibility. They did not remove him from the congregation. That, I understand.

So when I come back at you and reply on Saturday, I'm going to be working diligently on Number 1 to see how I end up on how to define the duty including whether to warn or not.

MR. SIMONS: I should be the first to speak?

THE COURT: You should.

MR. SIMONS: Your Honor, it does not mention trust.

THE COURT: I understand.

MR. SIMONS: But it does say placing the person in a function or environment which contact with children is inherent. That would apply not only to ministerial servant, but in this case it would apply to field service. And there is evidence that the elders sent Kendrick to field service with Candace Conti.

MR. SCHNACK: There is not.

THE COURT: Well, the defense is on one side of the table, I think.

MR. SCHNACK: Well, just a version of the evidence that there is no testimony that the elders sent him on field service with Candace. There is no evidence whatsoever.

THE COURT: Well, you know, it is kind of like that directed verdict. You know, the inferences are that he was doing field service, based on testimony, and that provided him --

MR. SCHNACK: Your Honor, there is also no special relationship that has been established between Candace Conti and either of the entity defendants. And we have briefed that, and --

THE COURT: Everybody has briefed that ad infinitum. And, basically, I have come down, in these cases under these circumstances, understanding the evolution of special relationship doctrine, largely started with land owners and others, effectively, I'm finding that there is a relationship, a special relationship that gives right -- and it is a statement -- kudos to Mr. Simons -- I thought his brief on that issue was spot on -- understanding -- two things -- and I'm going to make it very clear on the record, the defense has very appropriately said, "Hey judge, there is not a single case in the State of California that you are aware of --"

And candidly, after incredibly diligently researching it online, it specifically holds that there is a duty to warn here.

Okay. And I understand that. And I understand the constitutional umbrella of arguments and whatnot.

But what is the consequence of finding otherwise?

Sounds of silence are deafening. I think we all understand. So...

MR. SCHNACK: If I could be heard briefly, too, your Honor. Juarez was very different. And that's what this proposed one is, on Juarez, commented that the Boy Scouts had these educational materials, but because -- the only reason summary judgment was reversed was because they had not been provided to the plaintiff and his family in Spanish.

THE COURT: That was a part of it. Also, you remember, that was a summary judgment grant, candidly, against the judge of this county, who is now an appellate justice, not related to me.

But there was also broad comments about on the reversal they knew or should have known about Mr. Juarez and his proclivity.

This case -- and this is a move for plaintiff -- is different from Juarez because defendants here knew. It wasn't knew or should have known, and Juarez basically flipped the judge because should have known.

Now, what is different here, and I fully acknowledge the same as the judicial officer is, we are not dealing with the Boy Scouts, we are dealing with religion.

And so a lot of my rulings here, I have had to be very, both, respectful and trite and act upon and respond to arguments that separate out the application of church and state.

At a certain point -- you know, the first time you said that, I made that decision about whether it was a penitential communication. I would have loved to have somebody go up -- although, I think there is an inference what would happen -- but go up to the start and better define the separation -- and this is a case that really based the question in a number of ways.

But I have come down where I am using what I call just kind of basic fundamental duty analysis. One of my favorite quotes is "This case does have a coat like Joseph's in the Bible." And it has got a lot of colors to it. And part of my responsibility is to separate the colors where applicable.

So, yeah, I knew of Juarez well before I got involved in this case. And I have reread it three times for application. And I don't actively disagree with what you said, but to me Juarez said a lot more, understanding it was a motion for summary judgment view.

MR. SIMONS: Your Honor, I believe that

Juarez does included the Roman Catholic Church as defendant and does discuss the church's liability and does say they didn't have notice and therefore --

THE COURT: It does. And that was one of the very strong reasons why I'm coming down where I'm coming down, because I think notice gets rid of a lot of academic discussion.

MR. SCHNACK: Which would apply equally to the police department and these other agencies we are talking about.

THE COURT: And I'm going to bully on the point, because it is -- it's not an easy analysis, but without seeking to appear as glib. That's why I jumped right into Palsgraf, because I didn't see the orbit out there as to where does one draw the line as defendants in these cases and duty to report.

And I don't need to repeat myself, but I am concerned about, basically, putting on everybody in the State of California duty to report analytically, if not practically.

MR. SIMONS: If I may offer one more comment that may have already occurred to everyone, but just in abundance of caution.

Juarez does not change anything. Unilaterally, it applies to all cases. But what it does say is the Rowland versus Christian analysis is the framework to apply it to other cases.

THE COURT: Nice work, Mr. Simons, because I certainly took that out of Juarez also, which by the way, I read Juarez after I read your trial brief with Rowland v. Christian and restatements.

But as I went down the line of legal research here, I was pleased to see the settlement reference to Rowland v. Christian and the restatement.

MR. McCABE: Your Honor, I know a record was made, and I got a drift, I think, of where you are going with Plaintiff's Number 1, but there is still some other problems we haven't talked about I wanted to point them out.

THE COURT: Please.

MR. McCABE: First one is volunteers.

THE COURT: I have it highlighted.

MR. McCABE: The second part is the presence or --

THE COURT: I already have that circled.

MR. McCABE: Okay. There is no evidence Mr. Kendrick was a volunteer for either of the defendants.

THE COURT: Well, representative of my jagged way of thinking, because I have already highlighted that from my way of thinking. If we do not describe him as a volunteer -- I'm going to open this up. I'm having a very open discussion with very good lawyers, what would be the description? Because if you saw my sheet here, it says question as to description.

MR. McCABE: Members or others. He is only a member.

MR. SCHNACK: I think rank and file member.

MR. McCABE: He is not a member of Watchtower, he is a member of the North Fremont Congregation.

THE COURT: Well, I can tell you, I already underlined your "volunteer" and have a question, I guess, as to the appropriate characterization.

MR. SIMONS: I scratched out the word "volunteers" in my proposed one and wrote "persons."

THE COURT: Well, if I were you, I would take the suggestion of "members," but you know, we are having an open discussion here.

MR. SIMONS: And I have scratched out "persons" and put in "members."

THE COURT: Oh, my goodness. If I keep you through lunch, I can get you all to agree to anything I suggest.

All right. And Mr. McCabe, do you have other thoughts.

MR. McCABE: We would leave out the classification all together and just say "by Kendrick."

The other thought I had, moving along as to the Roman Numeral 1, the presence or absence of any warning.

THE COURT: Well, that's crucial. And I have that with about three stars to it.

MR. McCABE: It just highlights and points the jury into a direction which I don't know as of yet -- I don't know what instruction they are going to have on that particular subject. But there are certainly a lot of other things you can do other than warn. And there is evidence in this case that those things happened, that the elders admonished Mr. Kendrick, told him to stay away from children and watched him like a hawk thereafter. So there is a longer litany of things that could be put in here.

THE COURT: If I were in your shoes, I would look at Number 4, "Such are the facts and circumstances contained in the evidence," because I think you have to have a logical starting spot as to duty what is the nature of duty to do what.

What I liked about this was presence -- the reason was the jury is going to consider here, and the presence or absence of any warning. Candidly, I liked that. Before I even saw this or looked at it, I was playing with it, and I would have done something like that.

"For such other facts and circumstances contained in the evidence," that can be broad a little bit.

So you can play with this as far as I'm concerned, because I want the jury to weigh. I'm going to find a duty here. And I'm going to let them consider everything that should be considered in determination of breach.

We are doing as well as we could under a very complex circumstance. I'm not going to get the request for judicial notice yet.

I have other supplemental requests from the Plaintiff, but I think we agreed on three -- oh, no. And I can assure you, I'm going to -- and I have invited you to do so also, but I am getting the sense as to 3. As to being entirely neutral and making the jury understand that a penitent communication is a question of privilege decided ultimately by me, and not giving them any inference that should affect them in any way.

MR. SCHNACK: Was the result of the search that the word "privilege" was never mentioned with expect to penitent --

THE COURT: It was actually mentioned twice, by contextually different than Mr. Simons believed.

I think Mr. Shuster said it was a privilege to do something. I think he was asked whether he was paid money. And I think he said something to the equivalent it was a privilege to serve.

MR. SIMONS: He did.

THE COURT: And I'm saying that out of respect for Mr. Shuster. We are not into evidence privileges at this point. But in terms of what Madame Reporter told me, it was not used as a make way for not disclosing.

MR. SIMONS: Well, he did not use the word "privilege." Apparently, Mr. Clarke did not -- do we have Mr. Clarke's testimony?

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. SIMONS: Because I'm trying to remember whether or not -- I don't believe Mr. Shuster's deposition was on the same day as Mr. Clarke's testimony.

THE COURT: Not according to what I have here in terms of what is in the record.

MR. SIMONS: So did we search Mr. Clarke's testimony from May 29th?

THE COURT REPORTER: I searched every day for the word "privilege."

MR. SIMONS: What he said is, it is just like a Catholic priest receiving confession in a confession booth.

THE COURT: All right. I wanted to be fair here. Is that Clarke?

MR. SIMONS: I think it was Clarke.

MR. McCABE: It was Clarke. He was just trying to make an analogy illustration.

THE COURT: That's the line we are walking. All right.

MR. SIMONS: So on the Court's thinking on this, your Honor, how do we avoid allowing the jury to either be:

A, determining itself whether or not these specific communications were confidential or not?

And then:

B, how do we determine whether or not the jury is notified that they are not confidential under the law?

THE COURT: Well, the second prong of your concern, I don't think is that difficult, when I would tell them that the application and consideration of the determination of privilege is exclusively provinced to the Court.

The first prong is one I shared as to concerns for everybody here as to how and what they will do.

I don't want any -- what I'm trying to avoid -- and I'm a pretty good wordsmith, but I want to do it when I'm well rested and analytical -- is any inference that they would get that because the confidential communication is not privileged, that somehow that is a breach --

Okay. I can say it better I'm sure. But I think you get my drift .

-- is a breach of duty. That's what I want to really work in separating out.

MR. SIMONS: A breach of duty to Kendrick? I'm not sure where it is going.

THE COURT: No. To the Plaintiff. The inference. That's why -- that wasn't clear. I want to deal with it. I want to deal with it. I want to deal with any expert who said what the law was on the reporting, I want to clean that up. And I just want that as clean as I can present to a jury, leaving them in a neutral fashion to weigh, themselves, the reasonableness, the duty and any argument based on breach.

And that's my goal and that's simple as I can say it. And it is not a simple thing to say.

Do we agree that the deposition substance evidence is fine? I believe we do.

MR. SIMONS: Yes.

MR. SCHNACK: I believe there was a Casey on that that we agreed --

THE COURT: Yeah, Casey 208 is modified.

All right. Now, that, I think, takes care of the instruction question.

So let's kind of rehearse where we are.

And look, I'm going to deal with the request for judicial notice. And that is a very interesting circumstance, too.

But before I do that: Here is where I believe we are. Effectively, for the presentation of several instructions yet, we need to consider the addition of un-named, un-served parties that you are going to brief. That is going to dovetail into Plaintiff's Supplemental 1.

I'm going to direct you to meet and confer, based upon my ruling to strike the verdict as to several punitive damages instructions that are in play here.

I would welcome any language so I can make my record, but as to having heard my remarks, any further presentation as a matter of instruction as to --

Let's talk about the limiting instruction. Try to do the limiting instruction as to the testimony as to Kendrick's criminal conduct, the grooming of a ten year old. There were four that I had on my notebook.

MR. SCHNACK: I can list at least five for you.

THE COURT: I get to be the judge of that. It is the number 5, I believe.

MR. SCHNACK: The black bra incident.

THE COURT: That's the grooming of the 10 year old, so we are on board there.

MR. SCHNACK: Kendrick rollerblading with Candace.

THE COURT: That's not agreed. That's another time.

MR. SCHNACK: Kendrick being seen in a photo with children.

There was no evidence that was conveyed to the elders.

MR. SIMONS: That's correct.

THE COURT: I was just reflecting and thinking about that. Okay.

MR. SCHNACK: Kendrick buying gifts for children.

THE COURT: I agree. Absolutely. Okay.

MR. SCHNACK: And Kendrick holding Candace on his lap at a Bible study in 1991 or 1992. That was from Carolyn Martinez.

MR. SIMONS: That's a little different. The elders were at the Bible study.

MR. McCABE: There was no evidence, though.

THE COURT: I haven't heard evidence of who was there.

MR. SIMONS: Well, the testimony of -- who was it? The elder's wife who said that the Contis, that they hosted -- no actually, I think it might have been Mr. -- I'm not sure who said, "Oh, yes, the Bible study group met at my house for a year or two years, and then we stopped having it at our house." That might have been...

MR. SCHNACK: Carolyn Martinez said it was at her house.

MR. SIMONS: Well, somebody else said is was at their house for a year or two, and the elders were always there, and her husband was an elder.

THE COURT: There was a disconnect as to when. That's the problem with it.

Okay. So I heard six, not five.

MR. SCHNACK: Black bra, rollerblading, photo, buying gifts, holding plaintiff on his lap at the Bible study.

THE COURT: Five. Okay.

MR. SIMONS: Photo.

THE COURT: And basically the content of the limiting instruction refers specifically to that evidence and its use and purpose, which is to be limited to the jury's determination and consideration of any liability of Jonathan Kendrick.

MR. SIMONS: The one exception I have to that is the things where Claudia Francis said, "I thought it was weird at the time but I didn't connect the dots until I heard."

THE COURT: Right.

MR. SIMONS: Which does go to causation.

THE COURT: I agree with that.

MR. SIMONS: So I don't want to be precluded from arguing that people saw things that if they had known would have had more significance.

MR. McCABE: She didn't connect the dots until she heard about it in 2004.

MR. SIMONS: Yeah. And she learned Kendrick was a molester.

THE COURT: Right. I will let the jury listen to that.

MR. SCHNACK: That defeats the limiting instruction, your Honor.

THE COURT: It is going to be very specific as to Kendrick and those incidents. Okay. Anything you propose, I will make my decision as to the exact nature.

MR. SCHNACK: My suggestion is if he is allowed to argue that, that goes counter to the limiting instruction.

MR. SIMONS: No. It doesn't go counter to the part where it limits to whose liability it is, it does go to causation, which is a different issue.

THE COURT: Well, it certainly is a different issue.

MR. SIMONS: It doesn't go to negligence, it goes to causation.

THE COURT: Well, causation goes to liability. I mean you have the duty --

MR. SIMONS: Right. But it is relevant to causation, it is just not relevant to negligence. So the limit cannot be -- you can't consider it that people who saw nothing suspicious, but didn't know the background, and if they had, may have done something differently. That's a little bit of a stretch.

THE COURT: Well, here we go again.

MR. SCHNACK: Causation is a part of liability. I don't see how it separates the two. And if he is allowed to argue that these five things that we listed can be used to prove causation, then the limiting instruction is worthless.

MR. SIMONS: Well, it is not worthless, it is just limited to the issues that the evidence is not relevant to, and that would be negligence.

MR. SCHNACK: As to the liability of Kendrick. It only goes to the liability of Kendrick. It can't go to the liability of the entity defendants and causations of elements of that.

THE COURT: I suspect -- I don't think you can separate duty and liability for purposes of instruction.

MR. SIMONS: Evidence is frequently limited to a purpose, and in this case it would be limited to the purpose for which we are talking about, and that's negligence.

THE COURT: I'm going to consider it. But I'm troubled in terms of whether they can really effectively split the entity. It is like when you read the legal duty stuff we read in this case, and just as the client says, legal duty is public policy on the left, and then causation based on the right as to legal duty, which I thought was a very smart writing.

But then, of course, as we are all taught in law school, we have the causation itself is an element of the tort, not generally separated out.

So, again, I will make it pretty simple. I will make a simple ruling after some considerable thought on the limitations. But you have got the acts nicely lined up.

I'm concerned with -- I'm going to deal with it now -- about the back door aspects of some of this stuff.

I want to listen to Mr. Simons in terms -- and I have got to frame it, because when you asked me yesterday to take judicial notice of the text of California Penal Code Sections 1116517(a) and 11166 as, far as the Court is concerned, it is almost mandatory I take judicial notice of a statute.

However, I'm going to listen to you as to what you are trying to do and why.

But let me read you this, because it was when I was trying to explain how meticulous I try to be on those occasions.

> "When the Court has reviewed certain source material and decided to take judicial notice of some fact, it should convey that fact to the jury if it relates to a matter that would otherwise have been for determination by the jury."

Okay. So we had a very quick reparteed, because I didn't know what you wanted to do with it, but clearly, I was going to be difficult, relative to it being used as negligence, per se, under the state of the law at that time and how it subsequently changed.

So certainly you want the debate on judicial notice. I do that every time the lawyer asks me to take judicial notice of a statute.

Now, how is it going to relate to something -- and I might add, that was People versus Archerd, how is it going to relate to something that this jury is going to determine?

MR. SIMONS: The credibility of conflicting expert opinion.

THE COURT: You know, as soon as they started talking about that stuff, I knew I was going to get to this.

Okay. Well, I'm going to try to avoid a conflict in terms of what the law was at the time. Okay. And that is, I think, a conflict that needs to be addressed.

I have a very specific concern if I started putting in front of a jury specific statutes that inform, if not, in fact, they start using it as a basis as though it was negligence per se because the statute says.

Everything I'm doing in this case is like separating fine wheat from fine chaff or mercury pouring through my hands.

MR. SIMONS: Can it be part of the judicial notice instruction that you are not to consider this statute on the issue of evidence but limited to the issue of credibility of conflicting expert testimony on the issue of standard of care, or some other explanatory duty?

THE COURT: I think that is difficult to do. And I haven't -- every time I have experts inferentially doing this, we have the same problem, which is the problem we are dealing with here now, which is putting in play -- and you know it is -- I'm not chiding you at all on this. I expected this discussion earlier today. But I'm very concerned if it gets bootstrapped more than it should be.

MR. SCHNACK: Your Honor, I think to keep it simple, the easiest thing to do, the clergy, they were or were not mandated reporters at the relative time period. And the answer is clearly they were not. And if that is going to be an instruction, that's what it should be.

MR. SIMONS: That's not the conflict of the evidence, though.

THE COURT: We have gone full circle on that in terms of what the conflict of the evidence is. And I wanted to avoid conflict. I want to clean the record up if there was testimony that if there was a duty to report, and I'm going to clean that up.

MR. SIMONS: The conflict in the evidence -- and, your Honor, we objected to Applewhite testifying on the basis of law to begin with.

THE COURT: I understand.

MR. SIMONS: So once she gets to testify that based on what the law is, there were no reporting requirements for anyone until 1998, and that's just not right.

And that's why we get to Salter saying -- well, how that was interpreted may differ, but you were included in reporting requirements. That was her testimony as I recall it, basically.

MR. SCHNACK: They asked specifically about clergy. You will have to wait for the transcript.

THE COURT: And that's what I'm going to do.

MR. McCABE: Talks about community notification.

MR. SIMONS: That was covered by both.

MR. SCHNACK: The mandated reporting that was struck from Opinion Number 8, that was the part that was deleted from her testimony based on --

THE COURT: I'm always sensitive to these issues. Okay. Anything else?

If I keep you here until 1:00 o'clock, can we get it all resolved?

MR. SCHNACK: What about the verdict forms?

THE COURT: Where are we? Because I'm not sure I have seen the latest.

MR. SCHNACK: Well, I think we submitted one this morning.

MR. SIMONS: This one here? I haven't seen the cleaned up one.

MR. SCHNACK: So just for us to further meet and confer on punitive damages instructions and the limiting instructions regarding Kendrick? Those two items?

THE COURT: You did a verdict form. Actually, you have done two, because I saw a prior one. So this morning or sometime this morning --

MR. SCHNACK: We have added the police department and some other entities to it. That's the substantive change.

MR. SIMONS: And I think -- well, I don't know if you want to talk about it. One of the issues about the verdict form that the defendant submitted this morning is it doesn't actually ask about whether the defendants were negligent or not, it asks about Gary Abrahamson, Michael Clarke, Gary Lamerdin. Not the defendants in this case.

MR. SCHNACK: Corporations only act through agents. I think that's the only way you can have it.

THE COURT: Well, I can give you this little ad hominem. I have been pretty rigorous in scrunching down these verdict forms and getting rid of more players than -- I wanted less, so we get rid of possibilities of very inconsistent verdicts, particularly in a case like this. But I will take a look at that stuff. Remind me, though.

I haven't seen yours, but I have seen the prior one. And so when I resolve the question as to these other un-named defendants, hopefully that will take care of a huge issue there.

And I believe I got one with your original papers. But I will tell you all that in a case more complex than this, we started out with 37 pages and we came up with two and a half pages on a verdict form, and that's where I'm going with this.

MR. SIMONS: Mine is seven questions.

There is a bit of a problem with regard to whether -- well, how to separate the negligence of Mr. Abrahamson and Mr. Clarke that is not only in the course and scope of their duties with Fremont, but is, by admission, within the course and scope of their duties as agents with Watchtower.

So it would be -- and that's kind of joint negligence, if you will. You can't allocate the fault between the defendants. They are both a hundred percent responsible for that.

THE COURT: Right.

MR. SIMONS: Versus an allocation of fault for any other conduct which the agents may have engaged in, not in the course and scope of their agency with both defendants. And it is an interesting intellectual issue.

THE COURT: Well, isn't the admission that they were acting in the course and scope? I mean is there any argument what they undertook was outside the course and scope? Not in the evidence before me or what I heard to be the admission. So is there any real concern that -- certainly a jury could find on the evidence that one may be more responsible than the other in terms of what they did, but when the dust settles, does that really matter?

MR. SIMONS: Because I proposed there is one line of percentage on the verdict form for the defendants because all of the conduct of the elders is all to do within the course and scope of the agency with both entities.

THE COURT: And you picked up on what I just said.

MR. SCHNACK: Except that in the instructions, you are going to see it also references negligence of elders in the Service Department. And I think Mr. McCabe might object to being lumped with those.

MR. McCABE: Absolutely.

MR. SCHNACK: And that's an instruction that they, apparently, have agreed to.

MR. SIMONS: Yes. And so that's the non-issue about some of it is overlapping and some of it is not. How do you segregate that, intellectually?

THE COURT: Well, I could do it probably intellectually, but more important to me is practically. All right.

MR. SCHNACK: We could eliminate the elders of the Service Department from the instruction, and we could argue that from there.

THE COURT: All right. Bring at me anything you want to do before 9:00 on Saturday. I will be very active in replying. I am a little bit concerned about getting all this done. Tell me what weekend plans are everybody.

Well, we are going to use our computers as a basis for communication.

MR. SIMONS: By Saturday if we have a final set of instructions and a final set of special verdict form, you know, I can have it all prepared.

THE COURT: Well, I can tell you, I'm just going to be ready -- I'm looking forward to those limiting instructions. I'm looking forward to any further choices or changes you want to make in the supplemental Plaintiff's on the duty. And then I'm looking forward to your briefs in terms of expansion to the un-named parties. And then I'm going to be -- I have heard enough argument.

MR. SIMONS: That may answer the question I'm about to impose. May I submit a page or two or on the variations, if you will, of limiting instructions, sometimes limiting only to a specific issue as to --

THE COURT: Sure.

MR. SIMONS: And just a page or two.

THE COURT: I will just tell you, I will consider what you write.

PROCEEDINGS

THE COURT: All right. We are back on the record in the matter of the Candace Conti versus the Watchtower New York Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc.

The Court is going to take a moment -- first of all, I would like to thank counsel -- and the record should reflect, a fairly intense weekend between court and counsel -- to continue the discussions and efforts as to -- in one case, mutually agreed upon jury instructions in this matter, and secondly, for any issues that were unresolved for the Court's decision.

I'm going to go through the jury instruction meet and confer table that we used last Wednesday. But more importantly, I'm going to go through the Exhibit -- or I'm sorry -- the jury instructions that have been presented to me for reading to the jury this morning.

And I will comment where either I have made a decision for these purposes, and then after I am through reciting the series of instructions that I have and my comments otherwise, I will invite comments from anyone as to -- from either side -- as to the state of jury instructions at this time.

All right. In order, Casey 200: Obligation to Prove.

It is the Court's understanding that is a mutually agreed upon instruction. Correct?

MR. SIMONS: Yes.

MR. SCHNACK: Yes.

THE COURT: Casey 201?

MR. SIMONS: Yes.

MR. SCHNACK: Yes.

THE COURT: Casey 202?

MR. SIMONS: Yes.

MR. SCHNACK: Yes.

THE COURT: And these are again, instructions I will read to the jury.

Casey 203?

MR. SIMONS: Yes.

MR. SCHNACK: Yes.

THE COURT: Let me ask for record purposes, in the packet this morning was Casey 204, willful suppression, I believe it is agreed that that was withdrawn?

MR. SIMONS: Yes. It was not offered to Plaintiff. It was withdrawn.

THE COURT: 205?

MR. SIMONS: Yes.

THE COURT: All right. Evidence -- 206:

Evidence for a limited purpose?

MR. SCHNACK: As modified, yes.

THE COURT: And I believe it has been modified, the one I'm looking at.

MR. SIMONS: Correct.

THE CLERK: 207. Let me make note of this. I have indicated, pursuant to the defense requests, that I am going to issue a limiting instruction as to certain evidence presented in this matter as to Mr. Kendrick only.

Now what I'm reading, we need to retool 207. It provides in pertinent part as follows:

> "Then read limited instruction regarding consideration of certain evidence only against Jonathan Kendrick and not Watchtower North Fremont Congregation."

In terms of preparing what is going to go into that instruction, I can tell all of you that I'm going to listen to a little argument as to Ms. Martinez and the field service aspects here. But I'm going to direct that the proposed limiting instruction presented by defendants on Friday will be the instruction I'm going to give as to four incidents related thereon. The only one in play is the incident regarding Martinez and field service.

So Mr. Simons, as simply as I can say it, what I got on Friday is a proposed instruction from defense, and I don't have it directly in front of me, but there were four incidents. I can remember the black bra incident. Pictures with children, there were four in total on that instruction, which I'm going to give exactly as redacted with the exception of it being a little bit -- the dealings with Ms. Martinez and her testimony as to field service.

Okay. So that's 207 to be modified.

208. I dealt with this contextually. First of all, I believe it is as modified. There was a supplemental request for jury instruction by the Plaintiff to add effectively or video and I think now, as modified, it is agreed. Correct, counsel?

MR. SIMONS: Yes.

MR. SCHNACK: Yes.

THE COURT: Casey 210?

MR. SIMONS: Yes.

MR. SCHNACK: Yes.

THE COURT: 212?

MR. SIMONS: Yes.

MR. SCHNACK: Yes.

THE COURT: 218?

MR. SIMONS: Yes.

MR. SCHNACK: Yes.

THE COURT: 219?

MR. SIMONS: Yes.

MR. SCHNACK: Yes.

THE COURT: 220?

MR. SIMONS: Yes.

MR. SCHNACK: Yes.

THE COURT: 221?

MR. SIMONS: Yes.

MR. SCHNACK: Yes.

THE COURT: 223?

MR. SIMONS: Yes.

MR. SCHNACK: Yes.

THE COURT: Casey 400. I think this was agreed upon. It's 401, there was an issue. 400? Casey?

MR. SIMONS: Yes.

THE COURT: That is just essential factual elements?

MR. SIMONS: Yes.

THE COURT: All right. 401, at plaintiff's request, I'm going to give 401 a basic standard of care. I spoke to counsel yesterday. I think contextually in terms of the duty instruction, which I'm going to talk about in one moment, that I have to give framework as to basic standard of care. So over defense objection as to 401?

MR. SCHNACK: That's correct. Over our objection.

THE COURT: Noted for the record. Okay. 401.

Let me talk about the duty instruction, which follows next.

First of all, I will be very clear on the record that throughout -- and I will let the defense make a record, once I'm done.

The defense has made a number of arguments. Basically, first of all, I'm hoping I'm going to state it as succinctly and directly as I can, that under the factual circumstances here, there was no duty of care, relative to the defendants.

There was also a second argument that contextually, that to allow a duty of care would result in the creation of the tort of clergy malpractice.

Now, I'm going to let you go on the record in a minute. I issued an email yesterday that was fairly succinct -- and I'm taking responsibility for the duty instruction in a very nuance case -- but first of all, I denied Plaintiff's request as drafted. Plaintiff presented two supplementals as to duty. I denied the request as to Number 2 because it was filtered and littered with Mr. Kendrick being a volunteer.

And under the factual circumstances of this case, clearly defendants, upon learning of the incident, were quick and concerned, went through their process, and Mr. Kendrick was stripped of his ministerial servant status.

So I think, continuing to use and characterize him as a "volunteer" under Juarez was and would be misleading to the jury.

Once I can print it out, I'm going to put in the email that I wrote to counsel as to why I was finding a duty of care, and I will deal right now, since it is timely, as to why on the jury verdict form I did not include unserved, un-named parties.

As to duty, I wrote in the email of counsel quotes from Tarasoff, which of course was a quintessential duty case, actually arising in Alameda County.

But the Court's analysis of Delgado, which followed in Juarez, I did, in effect, find a special relationship of a minor child contextually under the circumstances alleged here.

The Court is fully aware of the legal doctrine -- of the general legal doctrine of no duty to warn. I'm fully acquainted with it; I'm acquainted with the evolution of exceptions to that doctrine.

I read candidly, probably 30 cases or more, and I have very skilled lawyers here, including a number of out of state cases.

Even in the out of state cases, those courts that were finding no duty under these circumstances, often would talk in a sense or two about vulnerable Plaintiffs.

And I'm imposing a duty under the circumstances here for the reasons related in my email, but clearly an evolution of the doctrine, perhaps the best example not involving a church was Juarez, as to the duty inherent to adults and their organizations vis-a-vis the taking care of children.

So the duty ruling is mine for the reasons I related.

As to un-named parties, un-served parties, I was the one who raised the Prop 51 aspects possibility in this proceeding. And I did it because of the evolving nature of Prop 51 and un-named, un-served defendants.

I requested counsel to submit further briefing on the matter, and I ruled effectively on it Sunday by email -- which, again, I'm going to run it and put it into the record -- that I wasn't, for purposes of the verdict form here, added the trio of the Fremont Police Department, the District Attorney of Alameda County and Child Protective Services, largely for the cases and the reasons related in Plaintiff's brief that I referenced contextually in the email.

The parents, that being the Conti's's, were also asked to be added as un-named, un-served defendants for purposes of the verdict form. I declined to do so and ruled accordingly.

I would ask the question on Wednesday as to, for instance, when in the evidentiary record here, when did Mr. Conti learn about the disclosure.

And the cases that I think are fairly uniform as of logic, that it is tough to impose a duty under circumstances like these if one is not aware and has any reason to be aware of and react to the nature of the circumstances here.

So I declined under several cases related, and I'm going to reference, again, on the record, the brief submitted by Plaintiff as to both the trio of public agencies, and then the parents themselves, which are different in terms of legal reasons for denying same, but I referenced the reasons in the email, which I'm going to put in the record.

So the duty instruction, the Court understanding -- I'm going to let the defense in a moment make their record, but I think it is certainly clear in terms of the number of briefs, the number of discussions between the counsel and the Court that -- and their position has been very well brought, as I said earlier on in this case, it is a difficult case on the parties, the judge, the jury and counsel.

412, by agreement, Casey?

MR. SIMONS: Yes.

MR. SCHNACK: A lot of your comments you just made, I question the validity here, but we will say yes.

THE COURT: 413. I don't think there is any question about that, I'm hoping.

MR. SIMONS: Yes.

MR. SCHNACK: Yes.

THE COURT: 430: Causation?

MR. SIMONS: Yes.

MR. SCHNACK: Yes.

THE COURT: 431: Multiple causes causation?

MR. SIMONS: Yes.

MR. SCHNACK: Let me look at the wording just to make sure we changed -- yes, as modified.

MR. SIMONS: I don't have my hard copy here. I'm looking around, did we do nonparties?

THE COURT: Yes. But since you were kind enough to give me a hard copy.

MR. SIMONS: Yes.

THE COURT: Then we have agreement?

MR. SIMONS: Yes, we do.

THE COURT: 434: Alternative causation?

MR. SIMONS: Yes.

MR. SCHNACK: Yes.

THE COURT: 1306: Sexual battery, essential factual elements?

MR. SIMONS: Yes.

MR. SCHNACK: Yes.

THE COURT: All right. After that, I indicated to counsel on Wednesday, I was concerned about some of the testimony serving as a basis for --

Well, I have already told the jury they are going to get limiting instructions.

I was concerned and I want to say on the record that I reviewed the transcript because I requested whether the word "privileged" was used by anybody in this proceeding.

And I want to be very clear, I thought counsel were very professional, as were the witnesses, preparing on this issue; however, there was testimony as to privilege being used as a basis for not disclosing.

So I wrote an email to counsel yesterday. I'm going to read it into my record, because I'm going to read this to the jury on the privilege issue, and then I'm going to take the opportunity to talk about the statutory duty to report, because we had an interplay with one of the experts as to whether there was a statute and whether there was a duty to report, and candidly, I'm going to characterize her testimony as a mixed bag.

So I'm going to read to the jury:

"In this particular matter, you heard the use of the word, quote, privilege, end of quote. Under the California Evidence Code certain communications are privileged such that they may not be disclosed upon the assertion of a claim of privilege by the holder and the same. Whether a particular communication is privileged is a matter for decision by the trial court. Your deliberations are to be based solely upon the evidence presented and the instructions given without any consideration whatsoever as to whether any communication within the evidence presented in this matter was privileged under California law."

Now, I got an email from Plaintiff's counsel saying that was, I think, okay with Plaintiff?

MR. SIMONS: Yes. It wasn't what we asked for, your Honor. But --

THE COURT: Be careful in this court what you ask for.

MR. SIMONS: But we basically said, "Okay, the Court has ruled and we move forward from there."

THE COURT: Counsel, just for a minute on that.

MR. SCHNACK: We do object to this instruction. We think if you are going to give that instruction, you need to get into Evidence Code Section 1034, where the ministers hold privilege separate and apart from the penitent.

And if you read through the law revision commission comments -- I would like to read this into the record, if you don't mind. Again, this is Section 1034 of the California Evidence Code, and the Law Revision Commission comments state that:

> "The law will not compel a clergyman to violate, nor punish him for refusing to violate the tenets of his church which require him to maintain secrecy as to confidential statements made to him in the course of his religious duties."

Further along in those Law Revision Commission comments states that:

"The extent to which a clergyman should keep secret or reveal penitential communication is not an appropriate subject for legislation. The matter is better left to the discretion of the individual clergyman involved and the discipline of the religious body of which he is a member."

We think this instruction basically is an area which the Court should not go, but if you are going to give it, we also think the instruction needs to be given that says that the clergyman holds a separate privilege. We don't think there should be any instruction on privilege.

THE COURT: And the only reason I'm doing it is because of the record, it being used as a justification.

MR. McCABE: And could I just add for the record, your Honor, that the only indication of anyone using privilege, I think was the testimony of Michael Clarke, who was not a lawyer, was not claiming the privilege not to testify in this court or any other proceeding, but was using the word in delayed vernacular of confidentiality.

THE COURT: Well, I read what he said. And the problem as to the hearer, I'm not sure that they would understand that, because it is part of, in my view, the use of the term itself.

When you use the term "privilege" it inevitably raises issues as to what and why. And I tried to limit my comments to the process itself.

See, that argument, in use of 1034, is not very different from kind of the subliminal argument as to whether there is a spiritual privilege not to disclose, which I have largely avoided, seeking to avoid confusion to the jury.

I have broken it out to make sure it is very clear that it is a matter of evidentiary privilege -- and this court has determined, by the way, early on that the nature of the discussions here did not come within the penitent clergyman privilege.

So you have made your record. Now, let's go.

MR. SCHNACK: And, your Honor, to that extent you have up until time of trial here to change what we consider an incorrect ruling in that regard, because if you go through Section 1032 of the Evidence Code, which defines penitent privileges, it says that it requires a communication confidence in the presence of no third person as far as the penitent is aware to a member of the clergy.

Here, there's been no evidence that Jonathan Kendrick was aware of any third person there.

Again, I wasn't involved in this case when that was briefed and the matter was presented to the Court.

But within the Jehovah's Witnesses faith a wife and family members are not considered third persons to such penitential communications.

Here, the penitent, again, was Kendrick. He could have had the belief his wife and stepdaughter were third persons under Section 1032. So we would urge that you correct the prior ruling.

THE COURT: Thank you, Mr. Schnack.

Early on, before we even got into trial here, I said, if I may quote myself, "I wish somebody would have taken that to the court of appeal."

I haven't made a glib decision in this case. My thoughts are succinct. But I gave a lot of thought to that because I thought it was a threshold question at the time. And candidly, I was thinking if this case goes to trial, certainly I was going to get a replay, which I just did, of the nature of it.

And I think everybody has the sense this judge doesn't pretend beyond admission in these matters, but I made that ruling on a very extensive presentation of process, who was there, what happened when it goes to New York, the letter and all of that. So good or bad, you know --

And I actually reviewed that ruling twice, early on in this case to reassess what I did then and why I did it. And I'm going to stick with the ruling.

Number 2. You have heard two -- and let me say -- I want to be very clear as to why I didn't use the Plaintiff's instruction -- the Plaintiffs's instructions talk about privilege or confidentiality. Okay. And the way I framed it for the jury in my instruction, I want to talk about evidentiary privilege to hopefully avoid any confusion they would have there. I wouldn't have and did not use confidentiality because of the nature of the presentation --

I will go with you a little bit on this in terms of the expectations when one goes through that process. So I have limited my comments to privilege.

Number 2, I'm going to read to the jury the following:

> "You have heard two experts here testify as to the standard of care regarding child abuse reporting.

Whether there was a statutory duty to report to lawful authorities a purported incident of child abuse by anyone hearing or reporting the same is a matter of law for determination by the trial court. Your deliberations are to be based solely upon the evidence presented and instructions given without any consideration whatsoever as to whether there was any statutory duty to report an incident of suspected child abuse to lawful authorities at any time involved within the evidence presented here."

Now, I sent that to lawyers yesterday. Plaintiffs's counsel, you can respond. Probably the same way as you did to the other.

MR. SIMONS: Well, your Honor, we said our position on the submissions, so I just rest on that.

THE COURT: All right. And the defense?

MR. McCABE: Our position is that there was no mandatory duty to report in this instance, because that's the law. And I think if you don't tell the jury the law, then you are leaving it up to them to wonder about it and speculate.

Even though if you tell them not to do that, you are leading them down that path and they are expecting to hear the law from your Honor, and you don't tell them the law.

MR. SCHNACK: And further, your Honor, we submitted a proposed instruction that would indeed instruct the jury that when mandated reporting became the law for clergy in California, and with respect to this case, they should not consider the mandated reporting law because there was no such law in place with respect to clergy in '93 and '94.

THE COURT: There is that old comment, the tangled web, which, again, I will try to walk in the jurors' shoes in a matter such as this.

First of all, I told counsel yesterday, if somebody had objected to the discussion about what the law was at that time, I would have granted it, because it is exactly what I feel and how I would have made the decision.

I would and did let the experts testify as to their opinions as to standard of care. Again, I probably have everybody satisfied here, but if I start to get into mandated, I think that carries inferences into the jury's discussions and deliberations.

I don't think the lawyers or this court have disagreed at all that the duty under that statue to report by church or clergy did not occur until January 1, 1997 as a matter of the statute.

I have already found, over defense objection, that there was a common law standard of care existing in 1993. And in all of my -- not just -- well, a simple way and not so simple case is trying to direct the jury to the evidence.

None of the discussion about what the law was, who it would apply to, whether it was mandated -- I think that gets them off into a territory that I am seeking to close down because I want them to consider this matter from a common law standard of care and the evidence deduced. So I'm going to read that.

So let's get to simpler territory.

3700?

MR. SIMONS: It was briefed.

MR. SCHNACK: Yes.

THE COURT: 3701?

MR. SIMONS: As modified, agreed.

MR. SCHNACK: I'm reading it briefly, your Honor.

THE COURT: Good morning to everyone.

MR. SCHNACK: Yes, agreed as modified.

THE COURT: 3703?

MR. SIMONS: Yes.

MR. SCHNACK: Although, your Honor, with respect to 3701, we don't waive any of our arguments that there was no duty whatsoever. I guess that's the danger in consenting to this. We don't want to waive any of the arguments we presented on the lack of special relationship, all of those things that we had briefed. By consenting to 3701, we waive those.

THE COURT: I understand what you are saying. Basically, by agreeing that that may be given, it is not in agreement that there is a standard of care. Right? Or a duty?

MR. SCHNACK: Or that there was a duty.

THE COURT: All right. Okay. Noted.

3703: Relationship not disputed?

MR. SIMONS: Agreed.

MR. SCHNACK: Agreed.

THE COURT: 3720: Scope of employment?

MR. SIMONS: Agreed.

MR. SCHNACK: Yes.

THE COURT: 3900: Introduction to tort damages?

MR. SCHNACK: Yes.

MR. SIMONS: Yes.

THE COURT: 3902: Economic and non-economic damages?

MR. SIMONS: Yes.

MR. SCHNACK: Yes.

THE COURT: 3903: Items of economic damage?

MR. SIMONS: Yes.

MR. SCHNACK: Yes.

THE COURT: 3903: Medical expenses, past and future?

MR. SIMONS: Actually, the title is misleading.

THE COURT: We should give it a pass.

MR. SCHNACK: They are going to have them in the jury room. Correct?

THE COURT: Yeah. We should get rid of "past."

MR. SCHNACK: And I think medical expenses should be changed as well in the title.

MR. SIMONS: Actually, there is a typo in here besides.

THE COURT: All right. So let's agree. And this is for our duty, speaking of duty -- so we need to change the title, and I think the temporal -- or time period.

So how would we like to do it? Certainly we get rid of past and -- should we say therapy expenses, future therapy expenses?

MR. SCHNACK: Or therapy and counseling expenses.

MR. SIMONS: Therapy and counseling.

THE COURT: So let's change the title on that. And I'm going to put this aside. I can read it, I think, into the body. So we need to change the title.

MR. SIMONS: There is a typo in the body, too.

THE COURT: Okay. And I want to -- I will put this on the record. With the magnificent amounts of paper produced by counsel on both sides, this is the first typo I have noticed.

MR. SCHNACK: Also in the last phrase, again, on 3903-A, it says:

"Must prove reasonable cost or reasonably necessary medical care that she has received."

THE COURT: Yeah, that needs to be addressed.

MR. SCHNACK: That's past tense, and it is medical care.

MR. SIMONS: And where in 3903?

MR. McCABE: The second line.

MR. SIMONS: Future therapy and counseling.

THE COURT: That she will receive.

MR. SIMONS: Medical care. Oh, I see. Yes.

MR. McCABE: And then you have to change it to future tense.

MR. SCHNACK: It has past tense.

MR. SIMONS: She will receive. Yes.

MR. SCHNACK: Or may receive.

THE COURT: Actually, "may" is more appropriate in terms of tense.

MR. SCHNACK: So it is going to be future therapy and counseling that she may receive?

THE COURT: Correct.

MR. SIMONS: Okay. Let's see if we can get that back.

THE COURT: 3904-A: Present cash value.

And I will say on the record, as I already have, over defense objection, I am allowing the use of the actuary table. But forgetting that -- or certainly not forgetting that, otherwise agreed?

MR. SCHNACK: Yes. Subject to your comments, agreed.

MR. SIMONS: Agreed, yes.

THE COURT: 3905: Non-economic damage?

MR. SIMONS: Agreed.

THE COURT: 3905-A?

MR. SIMONS: Agreed.

THE COURT: 3924?

MR. SIMONS: Agreed.

MR. SCHNACK: I'm trying to catch up here. I have been sick over the weekend, Judge.

THE COURT: I won't detail for you my challenges.

MR. SCHNACK: We are up to where?

THE COURT: 3924.

MR. SCHNACK: Agreed.

THE COURT: 3925?

MR. SIMONS: There was no objection.

MR. SCHNACK: Yes.

THE COURT: Life expectancy, 3932?

MR. SCHNACK: We objected, your Honor, no evidence of life expectancy.

THE COURT: With that exception noted.

3934: Damages from multiple legal theories, I believe we all agreed on that.

MR. SCHNACK: Yes.

MR. SIMONS: As it was modified, yes.

THE COURT: 3946: Punitive damages and any independent bifurcated trial, first phase.

I understand we agreed on that?

MR. SCHNACK: The only question I have, your Honor, is the title, if this is going to go into the jury room?

MR. SIMONS: Yes.

THE COURT: Yes. That is a legitimate comment.

MR. SCHNACK: I think just Casey 3946, period, punitive damages, should be the only thing in the title?

THE COURT: Okay. Let me make a note.

3964: No attorneys fees or costs?

MR. SCHNACK: Agreed.

THE COURT: 5000: Duties of judge and jury?

MR. SCHNACK: Agreed.

THE COURT: I'm just going to go right through it, since I know we agreed on all this.

So I'm just going to go and ask yes.

5042: Evidence.

5043: Witnesses.

5005: Multiple parties.

5006: Non-person party.

5009: Pre-deliberation instructions.

5010: Taking notes.

5011: Reading back.

114: Bench conferences and conferences in chambers.

116: Electronic communications and research being prohibited.

5012: Introduction to special verdict form.

5016: Judges commenting on evidence.

And I might add that I discussed with counsel yesterday leaving in the first two sentences, striking in the next three, telling them to disregard my comments and contextually, I struck the last three sentences of that.

5007: Polling the jury.

5020: Demonstrative evidence.

With the exception of the comment I made, those are agreed?

MR. SIMONS: Yes.

THE COURT: All right. Let's deal first with 2007. I have instructed Mr. Simons to adapt the defense proposed instruction of Friday as to four acts referenced thereon that are to be considered for liability as to Mr. Kendrick only.

All right. So a one-minute debate about Ms. Martinez and her testimony as to field service.

Mr. Simons, to you.

MR. SIMONS: As we stated, your Honor, I think the evidence supports admissible inference that the time frame within which Ms. Martinez saw Ms. Conti is indeed the time that Ms. Conti stated that they were in service together, which was after her parents were no longer attending regularly with her for family reasons, and that would be during time that the abuse was occurring.

THE COURT: Mr. Schnack?

MR. SCHNACK: What Mr. Simons left out and this is what we emailed to, your Honor. And we can even include that in the record if we have to.

Ms. Martinez also testified that she never saw Candace Conti in field service without either one or both of her parents.

So that undercuts the argument that somehow this is admissible as against either Watchtower or the North Congregation.

MR. SIMONS: And I think that misquotes what she stated.

THE COURT: Well, you are both reasonably accurate. But I read both -- I, of course, listened to Ms. Conti's testimony. I read both transcripts.

I'm not going to instruct them. I'll let the jury consider the time and circumstance. And I will introduce as part of the record, Mr. Schnack, the email you sent me.

But the questioning and the cross-examination started with at the Hall, and then went on to field service. So there are various inferences one could get from the testimony of Ms. Conti to that testimony.

MR. SCHNACK: So the ruling is what?

THE COURT: The ruling is on the limiting instruction, I'm not going to instruct as to Ms. Martinez and her comments about field service. Only to be considered against Kendrick.

MR. SCHNACK: What about her comments about Candace Conti sitting on Jonathan Kendrick's lap from 1991 to 1992 during Bible study?

That was included within the limiting instruction as well, to be applicable only to Kendrick.

THE COURT: I don't think it was within the limiting instruction. So let's get it up.

Do you have it on your computer?

MR. SCHNACK: No. I go by Blackberry, your Honor.

MR. SIMONS: I have it here.

THE COURT: So let's read it in a minute. Hopefully, I can get it up on my computer.

MR. SIMONS: The instruction says five -- Conti/Martinez's testimony that Candace Conti sat on Jonathan Kendrick's lap in about 1991 or '92 during a Bible study.

THE COURT: Okay. Is that in a proposed limiting instruction?

MR. SIMONS: It is. It's the last item, Number 5.

THE COURT: Okay. So can somebody kind of give me a curve ball in terms of her testimony as to the field service? Because that's going to be in as far as I'm concerned.

MR. SIMONS: The field service was separate, that was a separate issue.

THE COURT: Okay. 1991 or '92, I will limit on that. Okay.

MR. SCHNACK: So as the limiting instruction is drafted, then that will be submitted?

THE COURT: Yes. Was that in it?

MR. SIMONS: It was.

THE COURT: All right. Then .5 will be in my limiting instruction as to 1991 and '92.

But -- and Mr. Simons to you, gives you one point; although it wasn't, I guess, part of the limiting instruction.

MR. SCHNACK: I have a copy here, your Honor, if you want to see it.

THE COURT: That would be helpful.

MR. SIMONS: It was part of the original request of limiting instruction. The field service was not, but the sitting on the knee was.

THE COURT: Yeah, and I'm going to go along with that. And I told you in terms of the brief submitting that was convincing that the field service stuff was in and will not be subject to limiting instruction.

All right. To the defense for a moment, I understand we have some changes to effect, do you want to make a further record about either the duty of care or un-named, un-served parties being part of the verdict form?

And I'm going to deal with the special verdict form as it stands at this point.

MR. SCHNACK: Just briefly, your Honor, we do obviously, follow all the briefing we submitted. And as your Honor has noted in prior proceedings, you are breaking new ground here. There has never been a case in California that anyone could find in which a special relationship was found with respect to a minor with regard to a mere church member like Kendrick was here, but otherwise we will rely on our briefing, which has already been submitted.

With respect to the allocation of fault issue, the cases we've submitted show that we think there is clear error not to include the other parties on the verdict form.

And there has been several reversals of trial courts by the California Appellate Court to allow such allocation. We think it's clearer here.

MR. McCABE: Especially, your Honor, with regard to the parents. If they allow their child to go hundreds of times with Kendrick, that is just beyond the pale.

That is an inference the jury could draw in this case if they believe Ms. Conti's testimony. And the parents have a duty under the statute of the Welfare and Institution Codes to care for their children, and no parent today, in 1993 to 2012, should or could conscionably allow their child to go hundreds of times with an adult single male, as Ms. Conti testified. And if they did that, our belief is that they should be added to the jury form. And we will submit on that.

THE COURT: And look, I was considering, you know, where -- I guess in terms of the intonation, the buck stops here as a judge, but if I went along with that ruling, I, as a committed parent -- and we were and am and are -- and my best friend whom I have known for forty years, I have no knowledge and no observations of activities that would lead a reasonable person acting reasonably to believe that that person whom I have known -- I can make -- if you want to use a sports figure, Jim Boheim, the Syracuse coach, the coach that was next to him for 36 years, was accused.

But under those circumstances, if I choose to expand duties, then every parent of every child in the State of California is subject to a lawsuit by their children as to not protecting them.

That's why, you know, I have effectively ruled that unless the evidentiary record shows these parents had actual knowledge or -- and I guess under Juarez --

Well, I don't know. That's kind of a volunteer case. But the cases that were cited that I went and did more legal research on, minimally, they would have to have actual knowledge. We could have a debate or reason to believe, but I don't think either standard is met in this case.

MR. SCHNACK: Your Honor, if I could be heard on that just briefly?

THE COURT: Sure.

MR. SCHNACK: There was evidence submitted by the Plaintiff that Neal Conti was on the same train sitting across from a table in the an Amtrak train when Kendrick abused Candace. In his presence, sitting across the table. And yet he allowed her then to go hundreds of times? We think the evidence is there. But we will submit it on the briefing.

THE COURT: And look, I didn't say it wasn't an interesting question. It was a good job done by lawyers. But I really do have concerns, part public policy and part is specifically contextually within the record here as to reasons for making my ruling.

Okay. So we are working, as far as the Court is concerned, on redoing 207.

3903-A.

There is one more.

3946. I'm going to let counsel do that for a little bit. I told the jury we are going to have them here at 9:00.

MR. SCHNACK: We also have a verdict form, your Honor.

THE COURT: Let's take a pause to refresh and catch up to what we just did.

MR. SIMONS: So here's the updated 3903-A.

MR. McCABE: Can I give you a copy of our proposed special verdict form?

THE COURT: Why don't you give it to Rick?

MR. McCABE: I just did.

THE COURT: So this would be 2000?

MR. SIMONS: Your Honor, can I just call her? It is a lot easier to do it on the phone.

THE COURT: Yeah. What I have is between have to get -- are you with me?

MR. SIMONS: No.

THE COURT: Well, do it with me so we can be productive.

MR. SIMONS: On the limiting instruction on 207, I'm not sure we have a draft. She will have to basically type it up from scratch.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. SIMONS: (To a person on the phone) So we are in court. Here is the thing, opening up 3903-A, do you see how it says "medical expenses" in the bottom in here?

THE COURT: Yes, here is what I'm going to suggest. Mr. Schnack and Mr. Simons, give me your proposed limited instruction. I'm just going to read that to the jury, and then we will have Mr. Simons' staff --

Mr. Simons, I'm going to make it easier. Give me, in handwriting, your revised 3903. You have to deal with changes on the title and a little bit on substance. But give me your handwritten version and I will read that to the jury, the agreed upon change.

MR. SIMONS: Okay. I think we can do that. And for some reason the public network access just collapsed. Email. Off the record.

(Break taken)

THE COURT: Back on the record. This was presented to the Court, and this Court deals with this.

"Criminal sexual misconduct falls outside the course and scope of agency and should not be imputed to the principle.

A person is otherwise responsible for harm caused by the wrongful conduct of its agent while the agent is acting within the scope of authority given to him."

Now, Mr. Schnack, to you, you want to add a sentence: Jonathan Kendrick --

MR. SCHNACK: I would start:

"I instruct you that Jonathan Kendrick was not an agent of defendant Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York or North Fremont Congregation; however, that defendant is being named. Watchtower Bible and Tract Society."

THE COURT: I want to say a little more than that. Not -- because we want to let the jury do their job.

He wasn't an agent -- and I'm going to read the defendants' names. In the event you determine a sexual battery occurred here, okay --

Do you understand the Court's thinking on that one, folks?

Mr. Simons, any comment?

MR. SIMONS: No.

MR. SCHNACK: That's fine, your Honor.

MR. McCABE: That's fine, your Honor.

THE COURT: All right. Further, for record purposes only -- give me a second. Let me take a pause and refresh this.

All right. I'm pleased to relate I have the instructions in good order. We are going off the record for one second.

(Break taken).

THE COURT: On the record.

3903 is in good order. So allow me to -- okay.

Nice work to the defense on -- yeah. Good. All right.

Mr. Simons, we are down to title of 3903-A and the punitive damages title. Now, I'm really ready to instruct. All right.

MR. SIMONS: I think you have the 3903-A.

THE COURT: I do.

MR. SIMONS: So 3946 we just need to print out.

THE COURT: Well, I have 207 ready to go. I have 3903-A ready to go. I have the special duty and the special instruction that is going to go after 3920. So done.

MR. SCHNACK: I do have one comment, your Honor.

THE COURT: Punitive damages title is what I'm looking for.

MR. SCHNACK: 207, it has the bracket language in there.

THE COURT: I already took that out.

MR. SCHNACK: Okay. That is gone from what will go in the jury room?

THE COURT: Actually, I scratched out. But we need to mechanically do it. I wasn't going to give it to the jury.

MR. SIMONS: 207 is the one you -- basically, the one you submitted, is the one we used.

MR. SCHNACK: I know. But it has bracket, "then read limiting instruction."

If that's going to the jury, that should not be in there.

THE COURT: Well, actually, I think we can just get rid of 207 and deal with the special jury instructions. I was already with you on that one.

MR. SCHNACK: All right.

THE COURT: So we are down to the punitive damages instruction and the special verdict.

So let's take a pause and refresh us.

I want to make my record on this. There have been a -- my father used to say "a slew of special jury instructions submitted."

So I'm going to go through them as follows:

Plaintiff supplemental Number l, I have effectively dealt with by rewriting the duty and care instruction. So it was denied as presented.

The Plaintiff's supplemental Number 2 went to a volunteer note under Juarez. I denied that.

Number 3 was a retooling of 208 to include the quote or video that was agreed to by counsel all as modified. There have been a series of --

Plaintiff also submitted Number 4, I believe, which talked about confidentiality and privilege. I effectively rewrote -- I denied it in part but not in substance. I have included that within my limiting instruction and explanation to the jury. And we have already put that on the record.

Now, the defense has submitted an entire number of supplemental proposed jury instructions, relative to duty of care. Denied --

Well, let me reframe it this way: I have denied defense's request for supplemental jury instructions with the exception of the one that has now become the special jury instruction Number 207 as to sexual misconduct not being within the scope and course.

Give me a second in terms of comments; otherwise, I have this all lined up.

And I might add, the one I have just agreed to gives a bit of special jury instruction number -- strike that.

Number 2 about him not acting within the scope.

I denied Number 3. I have found a special relationship existing here such that a duty of care --

This is defense supplemental.

Duty of care does exist.

I have denied request Number 4 in terms of the parents' duty, effectively and contextually.

I note, just in passing, that in the May 16 filing of special instructions, there is no reference Number 1. It is like the 13th floor of the hotel.

All right. That is our record for the minute.

MR. SCHNACK: Your Honor, one additional thing. The appellate lawyers always tell us that in case you didn't specifically mention any special instruction, that the request had been denied due to the extent we haven't addressed one.

THE COURT: They are denied.

The special verdict form.

Let me make a preface set of remarks. And the record will reflect nice work from the Simons Law Office. 3946 is done.

Okay. There has been -- well, first of all, have we agreed on a special verdict yet? I ask a bullet question.

MR. SIMONS: There is one remaining issue. We are going with the form that the defense prepared because of the Court's decision to include Abrahamson and Clarke on the verdict form.

However, the defense special verdict form as presented has the question of malice on a separate page after the signature line.

THE COURT: You win on that one. I noticed that before we even had a discussion. I want that where you had it.

MR. SCHNACK: Actually, the one we just submitted has the signature line for the presiding juror after the malice question.

Things move quickly here, your Honor.

THE COURT: Well, you are starting to read the judge's mind. That's nice work.

But Mr. Simons, you are going to win that point.

Well, let's see. I just got handed a new one.

MR. SIMONS: Well, it's still a separate question on the new one. And in my view, I think it should go after -- it should be Number 5, and then 5 becomes 6, and 6 becomes 7.

MR. SCHNACK: We think it should come after percentage allocation. That should be the last question on the form.

THE COURT: Well, let me see -- I want to see the latest Simons' version right now.

MR. SIMONS: The latest Simons' version has already been junked. But it is here. This is how I did it.

THE COURT: That was junked with an E-D?

MR. SIMONS: Junked with past tense.

THE COURT: Now, having said that -- okay.

Okay. I will go with -- let me put on the record there were issues as to me to specifically identify the elders/agents. I indicated that -- and that was promoted by defense. And having read the agreed upon instruction 3701, I believe for consistency and explanation purposes that was legitimate on the verdict form, which apparently has been changed to reflect that.

The question as to malice will be as prepared in the latest version of the verdict form of Mr. Simons.

MR. SCHNACK: Can we see a copy of that?

THE COURT: It is -- and for the future, it looks like to me, but I am reading the handwritten version.

And, counsel, let's be very clear on the record, I'm not saying it's going into that jury room on a special verdict until we see the cleaned up copy of same.

MR. SIMONS: Which I would like to be able to show the jury during closing arguments as well and discuss with them.

THE COURT: Okay. That's not unusual.

MR. SCHNACK: Your Honor, we would ask that question Number 7 regarding malice go at the end of the verdict form rather than before, asking for amount of damages and allocation.

THE COURT: Mr. Simons, I think that I want to keep that portion separate and apart. I don't want to write above it the economic damages question. I want it right after the "before."

MR. McCABE: Your Honor, I have this electronically in court. We can just take off this section here and make this question Number 7.

THE COURT: That's fine. That's fine. So there is consistency of the questions, but the damages that are not -- with malice --

MR. SCHNACK: Malice at the end.

THE COURT: Okay. So, Hill, go address the jury. Tell them we are still working. We will not be long.

Let's get the special verdict form and go to work.

Mr. Simons, I want to put on the record, all the changes referenced have been made. Nice work, counsel.

Now, let's retool the special verdict form.

(Break taken)

THE COURT: On the record, we are going to review a special verdict form and we are all in agreement with it as structured at this time?

MR. SIMONS: Based on the Court's rulings, yes.

MR. McCABE: Yes, your Honor.

MR. SCHNACK: Yes, your Honor.

THE COURT: Okay. Based upon my rulings. All right.

(Whereupon, the following proceedings were heard in the presence of jurors)

THE COURT: All right. First of all, thank you as always. Hopefully you had a nice weekend.

If I knew then what I know now, I would have brought you in at 9:30. So I apologize for not getting you on board at 8:30.

I can tell you counsel worked this weekend and early this morning, so the time was valuable and used well by everyone.

In a moment, I'm going to give you the instructions in this matter. For those who are going to retire to deliberate, you will have a copy of the instruction in that room with you. So as far as instruction, I don't think you need to take notes.

My preference, particularly in a case of such sophistication, is to give you the instructions before the closing argument.

The studies say, and my observations confirm, that it is often helpful to have you thinking about the instructions as you listen to argument from various counsel in a case like this.

So I'm going to ask you all to relax for a moment. It is going to take a little while to read these instructions. Understanding, of course, that you are going to have them in the room with you.

You also have -- you can request any exhibits you want, and I will explain to you the process of how you deliberate and under what circumstances in a moment within the context of the instructions.

After I finish, counsel will make closing argument. After innate closing argument my bailiff will be sworn, he will be your steward, the ones who go into deliberating, he will be the access point between court and counsel and yourselves.

And we have had to play a little musical chairs with, you because we have so many juries going on, but I believe you are in the Department 15, in that jury room for as long as you need to deliberate. We will see what your verdict is and then we will go from there.

Having said the same, I'm going to instruct you as follows:

JURY INSTRUCTIONS BY THE JUDGE

THE COURT: Casey 200: Obligation to prove more likely true than not true.

A party must persuade you by the evidence presented in court that what he or she is required to prove is more likely to be true than not true. This is referred to as, quote, the burden of proof, end of quote.

After weighing all of the evidence, if you cannot decide that something is more likely to be true than not true, you must conclude that the party did not prove it.

You should consider all the evidence no matter which party produced the evidence.

In criminal trials the prosecution must prove that the defendant is guilty beyond a reasonable doubt, but in civil trials such as this one, the party must only prove that it is more likely to be true than not true.

Casey 201: More likely true with clear and convincing evidence.

Certain facts must be proved by clear and convincing evidence, which is a higher burden of proof. This means the party must persuade you that it is highly probable that the fact is true. I will tell you specifically which facts must be true by clear and convincing evidence.

Casey 202: Direct and indirect evidence.

Evidence can come in many forms. It can be testimony about what someone saw or heard or smelled. It can be an exhibit admitted into evidence. It can be someone's opinion.

Some evidence proves the fact directly, such as testimony of a witness who saw a jet plane flying across the sky.

Some evidence proves the fact indirectly such as testimony of a witness who saw only the white trail that jet planes often leave.

This indirect evidence is sometimes referred to as "circumstantial evidence." In either instance, the testimony is evidence that a jet plane flew across the sky.

As far as the law is concerned, it makes no difference whether the evidence is direct or indirect. You may choose to believe or disbelieve either account. Whether it is direct or indirect, you should give every evidence weight you think it deserves.

Casey 203: Party having power to produce better evidence.

You may consider the ability of each party to provide evidence. The party providing the weaker evidence, or it could provide stronger evidence, you may distrust the weaker evidence.

Casey 205: Failure to explain or deny evidence.

You may consider whether a party failed to explain or deny some unfavorable evidence. Failure to explain or deny unfavorable evidence may suggest that the evidence is true.

Casey 206: Evidence admitted for a limited purpose.

Certain evidence may be admitted for a limited purpose. You may consider that evidence only for the limited purpose that I described and not for any other purpose.

Special instruction.

Certain evidence in this case can be asserted only against defendant, Jonathan Kendrick, and not against either defendant, Watchtower, or defendant, North Fremont Congregation.

I instruct you that the following evidence can only be considered against Jonathan Kendrick.

One: Claudia Francis's testimony that Jonathan Kendrick rollerbladed with Candace Conti.

Two: Claudia Francis's testimony that Jonathan Kendrick bought a black bra for Breanna Decker.

Three: Claudia Francis's testimony that she saw a photograph of Jonathan Kendrick with children.

Four: Claudia Francis's testimony that Jonathan Kendrick bought rollerblades for Candace Conti and gifts for other children.

Five: Carolyn Conti Martinez's testimony that Candace Conti sat on Jonathan Kendrick's lap in about 1991 or 1992 during a Bible study at Ms. Martinez's home.

You will have that, but that is a limiting instruction. I told you during the course of evidence I would be giving you a limiting instruction. Those incidences, that evidence goes only as to Mr. Kendrick.

Casey 2008: Deposition and substantive evidence.

During the trial you heard or watched testimony read from a deposition. A deposition is a testimony of a person taken before trial.

At a deposition the person is sworn to tell the truth and is questioned by the attorneys. You must consider the deposition testimony that was read to you or presented by video presentation in the same way as you considered testimony given in court.

Casey 210: Requests for admissions.

Each party has a right to ask another party to admit in writing that certain matters are true. If the other party admits those matters you must accept them as true. No further evidence is required to prove them.

Casey 212: Statements of a party.

A party may offer into evidence any oral or written statement made by an opposing party outside the courtroom. When you evaluate evidence of such a statement you must consider these questions.

One: Do you believe that the party actually made the statement?

If you don't believe the party made the statement you may not consider the statement at all.

Two: If you believe that the statements made, you believe it was reported accurately, you should view testimony of that oral statement made by the party outside the courtroom with caution.

Casey 218: Statements made with previously pre-existing condition.

Certain healthcare providers have testified that Candace Conti made statements to them about her medical or mental health history. These statements helped the healthcare providers diagnose the patient's condition.

You can use these statements to help you examine the basis of the healthcare provider's opinions. You cannot use them for any other purpose. However, the statement made by Candace Conti to any healthcare provider about her current medical or mental health condition may be considered as evidence of that medical condition.

Casey 219: Expert witness testimony.

During the trial you heard testimony from expert witnesses. The law allows an expert to state opinions about matters in his or her field of expertise, even if he or she has not witnessed any of the events involved in the trial.

You do not have to accept an expert's opinion as to any other witness. It is up to you to decide whether you believe the expert's testimony and choose to use it as a basis for your decision. You may believe all, part or none of an expert's testimony.

In deciding whether to believe an expert's testimony you should consider:

A, the expert's training and experience;

B, the fact the experts relied on;

C, the reasons for the expert's opinion.

Casey 220: Expert's questions containing assumed facts.

The law allows expert witnesses to be asked questions that are based on assumed facts. These are sometimes called "hypothetical questions."

In determining the weight to give the expert's opinion that is based on the assumed facts, you should consider whether the assumed facts are true.

Casey 221: Conflicting expert testimony.

If the expert witnesses disagree with one another, you should weigh each opinion against the other. You should examine the reason given for each opinion and the facts or other matters that each witness relied upon. You may also compare the expert's qualifications.

Casey 223: Opinion testimony of a lay witness.

If a person who is not testifying as an expert gave an opinion during the trial, you may, but you are not required to, accept that opinion. You may give the opinion whatever weight you think is appropriate.

Consider the extent of a witness's opportunity to perceive the matters upon which the opinion is based, the reasons the witness gave for the opinion, and the facts or information on which the witness relied in forming that opinion.

You must decide whether the information upon which a witness relied was true and accurate. You may disregard all or any part that you find unbelievable, unreasonable or unsupported by the evidence.

Casey 400: Negligence, essential factual elements.

Candace Conti claims that she was harmed by Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc. and Fremont California Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses North Unit.

Negligence: To establish this claim, Candace Conti must prove all the following:

1, that Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc., or Fremont California Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses North Unit was negligent;

2, that Candace Conti was harmed;

3, that Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc. or Fremont California Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses North Unit's negligence was a substantial factor in causing Candace Conti's harm.

Casey 401: Basic standard of care.

Negligence is a failure to use reasonable care to prevent harm to one's self or others. A person or an entity can be negligent by acting or by failing to act.

A person or entity is negligent if he, she, or it does something that a reasonably careful person or entity would not do in the same situation or fail to do something that a reasonably careful person or entity would do in the same situation.

You must decide how a reasonably careful person or entity would have acted in Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc. and Fremont California Congregation Jehovah's Witnesses North Unit's situation.

Duty: The defendants Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc. and Fremont Congregation Jehovah's Witnesses North Unit have a duty to take reasonable protective measures to protect Candace Conti from the risk of sexual abuse by Fremont Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses North Unit member Jonathan Kendrick.

In determining whether or not Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc. and Fremont Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses North Unit took reasonable, protective measures, you may consider the following:

1, the presence or absence of any warning;

2, whether or not any educational programs were made available to Plaintiff, her parents or to other Jehovah's Witnesses from the Fremont Congregation Jehovah's Witnesses North Unit members for the purposes of sexual abuse education and prevention;

3, such other facts and circumstances contained in the evidentiary record here as to the presence or absence of protective measures.

Casey 412: Care of children.

An adult must anticipate the ordinary behavior of children. An adult must be more careful in dealing with children than with other adults.

Casey 413: Custom or practice.

You may consider customs or practices in the community in deciding whether persons acted reasonably. Customs and practices do not necessarily determine what a reasonable person would have done in that person's situation. They are only factors for you to consider.

Following a custom or practice does not excuse conduct that is unreasonable. You should consider whether the custom or practice is reasonable.

Casey 430: Causation as a substantial factor.

A substantial factor in causing harm is a factor that a reasonable person would consider to have contributed to the harm. It must be more than a remote, contributing factor. It does not have to be the only cause of the harm. Conduct is not a substantial factor in causing harm if the same harm would have occurred without that conduct.

431: Case of causation, multiple causes.

A person's negligence or fault may combine with another factor to cause harm. If you find that Jonathan Kendrick, Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of

New York, Inc., or Fremont, California Congregation Jehovah's Witnesses North Unit's negligence or fault was a substantial factor in causing Candace Conti's harm, then Jonathan Kendrick, Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc., or the Fremont Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses North Unit is responsible for the harm.

Jonathan Kendrick, Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc., or Fremont, California Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses North Unit, cannot avoid responsibility just because some other person was or also a substantial factor in causing Candace Conti's harm.

Casey 434: Alternative causation.

You may decide that one or more of the defendants was negligent or at fault, but the negligence or fault of only one of them could have actually caused Candace Conti's harm.

If you cannot decide which defendant caused Candace Conti's harm, you must decide each defendant is responsible for the harm.

However, if the defendant proves that it did not cause Candace Conti's harm, then you must conclude that that defendant is not responsible.

Casey 1306: Sexual battery essential to factual harm.

Candace Conti claims that Jonathan Kendrick committed a sexual battery. To establish this claim Candace Conti must prove the following:

1, that Jonathan Kendrick intended to cause a harmful contact with Candace Conti's sexual organs, anus, groin place, or breasts, and a sexually offensive contact with Candace Conti resulted either directly or indirectly;

2, that Candace Conti did not consent to the touching;

3, that Candace Conti was harmed by Jonathan Kendrick's conduct.

Court's duty recessed by issues.

In this particular matter you have heard the use of the word, quote, privilege, end of quote. Under the California Evidence Code, certain communications are privileged such that they may not be disclosed upon the assertion of a claim of privilege by a holder of the same.

Whether a particular communication is privileged is a matter for decision by the trial court. Your deliberations are to be based solely upon the evidence presented and the instructions given without any consideration whatsoever as to whether any communication within the evidence presented here in this matter was, quote, privileged, end of quote, under California law.

2, you have heard two experts here testify as to the standard of care regarding child abuse reporting. Whether there was a statutory duty to report to lawful authorities in purported incident of child abuse by anyone hearing a report of the same is a matter of law for determination by the trial court.

Your deliberations are to be based solely upon the evidence presented and instructions given without any consideration whatsoever as to whether there was any statutory duty to report an incident of suspected child abuse to lawful authorities at any time involved within the evidence presented here.

Casey 3700: Introduction.

A corporation is responsible for harm caused by the wrongful conduct of its agents while acting within the scope of their authority.

Casey 3701: Tort liability asserted against principle essential factual elements.

Candace Conti claims that she was harmed by the negligence of Elders Gary Abrahamson, Michael Clarke, and elders in the Service Department of the Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc.

Candace Conti also claims that Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc. and Fremont California Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses North Unit are responsible for the harm because Elders Gary Abrahamson and Michael Clarke were acting as its agents when the conduct occurred.

Candace Conti further claims that Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc. is responsible for the harm because elders in the Service Department were acting as agents of Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc. at the time of the conduct.

If you find that Elders Gary Abrahamson and Michael Clarke's negligence harmed Candace Conti, then you must decide whether Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc. or Fremont California Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses North Unit are responsible for the harm.

Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc., or Fremont California Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses North Unit are responsible if Candace Conti proves both of the following:

1, that Elders Gary Abrahamson and Michael Clarke, or Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc's., or Fremont California Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses North Unit agents;

And 2, that Elders Gary Abrahamson and Michael Clarke were acting within the scope of their agency when the conduct that caused Candace Conti harm occurred.

If you find that the negligence of elders of Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc.'s Service Department harmed Candace Conti, then you must decide whether Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc. is responsible for that harm.

Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc. is responsible if Candace Conti proves both of the following:

1, that elders in the Service Department were Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc.'s agents;

And 2, that elders within the Service Department were acting within the scope of their agency at the time that the conduct that caused Candace Conti harm occurred.

Casey 3703: Legal relationship not disputed.

In this case, Elders Gary Abrahamson and Michael Clarke were the agents of Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc. and Fremont Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses North Unit.

Additionally, elders in the Service

Department were the agents of Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc.

If you find that Elders Gary Abrahamson and Michael Clarke were acting within the scope of their agency when their conduct that harmed Candace Conti occurred, then Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc. and Fremont Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses North Unit are responsible for any harm caused by Elders Abrahamson and Clarke's negligence.

If you find that elders in the Service Department of Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc. were acting within the scope of their agency when the conduct that harmed Candace Conti occurred, then Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc. is responsible for any harm caused by the negligence of the elders in the Service Department.

Casey 3720: Scope of employment.

Candace Conti must prove the alleged negligent actors were acting within the scope of their authority when Candace Conti was harmed.

Conduct is within the scope of authority if:

A, it is reasonably related to kind of tasks the agent was authorized to perform;

Or, B, it is reasonably foreseeable in the line of the corporation's business or the agent's responsibility.

Sexual battery not imputed. Criminal sexual misconduct falls outside the scope and course of agency and should not be imputed to the principle. A person is otherwise responsible for harm caused by the wrongful conduct of its agent while the agent is acting within the scope of the authority given to him.

Jonathan Kendrick was not an agent of the Watchtower Bible and Tract Society or the North Fremont Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses in the event that you determine a sexual battery occurred here.

Casey 3900: Introduction of tort damages liability contested.

If you decide that Candace Conti has proved her claim against Jonathan Kendrick, Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc. or Fremont California Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses North Unit, you must also decide how much money will reasonably compensate Candace Conti for the harm.

This compensation is called "damages." The amount of damages must include an award for each item of harm that was caused by Jonathan Kendrick, Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc. or Fremont California Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses North Unit's wrongful conduct, even if the particular harm could not have been anticipated.

Candace Conti does not have to prove the exact amount of damages or provide reasonable compensation of the harm; however, you must not speculate or guess regarding damages.

Casey 3902: Economic and non-economic damages.

The damages claimed by Candace Conti or the harm by Jonathan Kendrick, Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc. or Fremont California Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses North Unit fall into two categories called "economic damages" and "non-economic damages."

You will be asked on the verdict form to state the two categories of damages separately.

Casey 3903: Items of economic damages.

The following are the specific items of economic damages claimed by Candace Conti:

Future therapy and counseling expenses.

Casey 3908: Future therapy and counseling expenses.

To recover damages for future therapy and counseling expenses, Candace Conti must prove the reasonable cost of reasonably necessary future therapy and counseling that she may receive.

Casey 3904-A: Present cash value.

If you decide Candace Conti's harm includes economic damages for future therapy and counseling expenses, then the amount of those future damages must be reduced to their present cash value. This is necessary because money received now will, through investment, promote to a larger amount in the future. Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc. and Fremont, California Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses North Unit must prove the amount of future damages should be reduced to present value.

To define present cash value, you must determine amount of money back if reasonably invested today will provide Candace Conti with the amount of her future damages.

3904-B: Use of present value tables.

Table A. Use Table A to compute the present value of future therapy and counseling expenses.

1, determine the amount of Candace Conti's future therapy and counseling expenses each year. Enter this amount into Worksheet A, Step 1.

2, determine the number of years that this loss will continue. Enter this amount into Worksheet A, Step 2.

3, select the interest rate you decide represents the most likely rate of return on money invested today over the period of years. Enter this amount into Worksheet A, Step 3.

4, select appropriate present value factor from Table A. To locate this factor, use the number of years from Step 2 on the worksheet and the interest rate from Step 3 on the worksheet, and find the number that is the intersection of the interest rate column and number of years row.

For example, if the number of years is 15 and the interest 10 percent, the corresponding present factor is 7.61. Enter this factor into Worksheet A, Step 4.

5, multiply the amount of Candace Conti's annual future loss from Step 1 by the factor from Step 4. This is the present value of Candace Conti's total future loss. Enter this amount into Worksheet A, Step 5.

3905: Items of non-economic damages.

The following are the specific items of non-economic damages claimed by Candace Conti.

3905-A: Physical pain, mental suffering and emotional distress non-economic damages.

1, past and future physical pain, mental suffering, depression, anxiety, humiliation and emotional distress.

No fixed standard exists for deciding the amount of these non-economic damages. You must use your judgment to decide a reasonable amount based on the evidence and your common sense.

To recover for future physical pain, mental suffering, depression, anxiety, humiliation and emotional distress, Candace Conti must prove that she is reasonably certain to suffer that harm.

For future physical pain, mental suffering, depression, anxiety, humiliation and emotional distress, determine the amount in current dollars paid at the time of judgment that will compensate Candace Conti for future physical pain, mental suffering, depression, anxiety, humiliation and emotional distress.

This amount on non-economic damages should not be further reduced to present cash value because that reduction should only be performed with respect to economic damages.

3924: Punitive damages.

You must not included in your award any damages to punish or make an example of Jonathan Kendrick, Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc. or Fremont California Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses North Unit. You must award only the damages that will fairly compensate Candace Conti for her harm.

Casey 3925: Attorney argument not evidence.

The arguments of the attorneys are not evidence of damages. Your award must be based on your reason, judgment applied to the testimony of witnesses and the other evidence submitted and admitted during trial.

3932: Life expectancy. If you decide that Candace Conti suffered damages that will continue for the rest of her life, you must determine how long she will probably live.

According to national vital statistics for June 28, 2010, a 26-year-old female is expected to live another 56.1 years. This is the average life expectancy. Some people live longer and others die sooner.

This calculates how long a person is likely to live, but it is not inclusive. In deciding a person's life expectancy you should also consider, among other factors, that person's known health and occupation.

3934: Damages for multiple legal theories.

Candace Conti's damages from Jonathan Kendrick, Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc. and Fremont California Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses North Unit, under more than one legal theory.

However, each item of damages may be awarded only once regardless of the number of legal theories alleged.

You will be asked to determine whether Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc. or Fremont California Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses North Unit are liable to Candace Conti under the following legal theories:

Negligence. You will be asked to decide whether Jonathan Kendrick is liable to Candace Conti under the following legal theory:

Sexual battery.

The following items are recoverable only once under all legal theories:

1, physical, mental and emotional injuries;

And 2, future therapy and counseling expenses.

3964: Attorneys fees or costs.

You must not consider or include as part of any award attorney's fees or expenses of the parties incurred in bringing or defending this lawsuit.

Casey 3946: Punitive damages.

If you decide that Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc's. conduct caused Candace Conti harm, you must decide whether that conduct justifies an award of punitive damages. The amount, if any, of punitive damages will be an issue decided later. At this time, you must decide whether Candace Conti has proved that Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc. engaged in that conduct with malice.

To do this, Candace Conti must prove one of the following by clear and convincing evidence:

1: That the conduct constituting malice was committed by one or more officers, directors or managing agents of Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc. who acted on behalf of Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York Inc.

Or 2: That the conduct constituting malice was authorized by one or more officers, directors or managing agents of Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc.

Or 3: That one or more officers, directors or managing agents of Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc. knew of the conduct constituting malice and adopted or approved that conduct after it occurred.

Malice means that Watchtower Bible and Tract

Society of New York, Inc. actually meant to intend to cause injury or that Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc.'s conduct was despicable and was done with a horrible and knowing disregard of the rights or safety of another.

A person acts with knowing disregard that he or she is aware of the probable dangerous consequences of his or her conduct and deliberately failed to avoid those consequences.

Despicable conduct is a conduct that is so vile or contemptible that it would be looked down on and despised by reasonable people.

An employee is a managing agent if he or she exercises substantial independent authority and judgment in his or her decision-making such that his or her decisions ultimately determine corporate policy.

Casey 5000: Duties of the judge and jury.

Members of the jury, you have now heard all of the evidence and will hear all the closing arguments of the attorneys. You must follow these instructions I have given. Again, you will have a copy of these instructions with you when you go to the jury room to deliberate.

You must decide what the facts are. You must consider all the evidence and then decide what you think happened.

You must decide the facts based on the evidence admitted in this trial. Do not allow anything that happens outside this room to affection your decision.

Do not talk about this case or the people involved with anyone, including family and persons living in your household, friends and co-workers, spiritual leaders, advisers or therapists.

Do not do any research on your own or as a group. Do not use dictionaries fiction or reference material.

These prohibitions on communications and research extend to all forms of electronic communications.

Do not use any electronic devices or media such as cell phone or smart phone, PDA, computer, Tablet device, the Internet, any Internet service, any text or instant messaging service, any internet chat rooms, social networking sites or websites or online outlets to send or receive any information to or from anyone about this case for your experience as a juror until after you have been discharged from your jury duty.

Again, do not investigate the case or conduct any experiments. Do not contact anyone to assist you such as a family accountant, doctor or lawyer.

Do not visit or view the scene of any event involved in this case. If you happen to pass by the scene, do not stop and investigate. All jurors must see or hear the same evidence at the same time.

You must not let bias, prejudice or public opinion influence your decision.

You must follow the law exactly as I have begin it to you even if you disagree with it.

Again, if the attorneys say anything different about what the law means, you must follow what I say.

In reaching your verdict, do not guess what I think you verdict should be from anything I have said or done.

Please pay careful attention to the instructions that I have given you. All the instructions are important because together they state the law used in this case. You must consider all of the instructions together.

After you have decided what the facts are, you may find that some instructions apply. In that case, all the instructions that do apply, you can use that together with the facts to reach your verdict.

If I have repeated any ideas or rules of law during these instructions, that does not mean that these ideas or rules are more important than others, and in addition, the order in which the instructions are given does not make any difference.

Casey 5002: Evidence.

Sworn testimony, documents or anything else may be admitted into evidence. You must decide what the facts are in this case from the evidence you have seen or heard during this trial, including any exhibits that I have admitted into evidence.

You may not consider as evidence anything that you saw or heard while the court was not in session, even something done or said by one of the parties, attorneys or witnesses.

What the attorneys say during the trial is not evidence. These are only statements, and in the closing arguments the attorneys talk to you about the law and the evidence.

What the lawyers say may help you understand the law, but their statements and arguments are not evidence. The attorneys questions are not evidence. Only the witnesses answers are evidence.

You must not think something is true just because an attorney's question suggested that it was true.

Each side had the right to object to evidence offered by the other side. If I sustained an objection to a question, you must ignore the question. If the witness denied answering, you must not guess at what he or she might have said or why I sustained the objection. If the witness already answered, you must ignore the answer.

Casey 5003: Witnesses.

A witness is a person who has knowledge related to the case. You will have to decide whether you believe each witness and how important each witness's testimony is to the case.

You may believe all, part or none of a witness's testimony. In deciding whether to believe a witness's testimony, you may consider among other factors the following:

A, how well the witness sees, hears or otherwise says what he or she described;

B, how well he or she remembered and described what happened;

C, how the witness looked, acted and speak relative to testifying;

D, did the witness have any reason to say something that was not true?

Did the witness show any bias or prejudice?

Did the witness have a personal relationship with any of the parties involved in the case?

Does the witness have a personal stake in how this case is decided?

E, what was the witness's attitude towards this case while testifying?

Sometimes the witness may say something that was not consistent with something else he or she said. Sometimes different witnesses will give different versions of what happened.

People often forget things or make mistakes in what they remember.

Also, two people may see the same event but remember it differently.

You may consider these differences but do not decide the testimony is untrue just because it differs from other testimony.

However, if you decide a witness deliberately testified untruthfully about something important, you may choose not to believe anything that witness said.

On the other hand, if you think a witness said testified untruthfully about some things, but told the truth about others, you may accept the part you think is true and ignore the rest.

Do not make any decision simply because there were more witnesses on one side than on the other. If you believe it is true that the testimony of a single witness is enough to prove a fact.

You must not be biased in favor of or against any witness because of his or her disability, gender, race, religion or ethnicity, sexual orientation, age, national origin or socioeconomic status.

Casey 5005: Multiple parties.

There are three defendants in this trial. You should decide the case against each defendant separately as if it were a separate lawsuit. Each defendant is entitled to separate consideration of his or her own defenses.

Different aspects of the case involve different party defendants. Each instruction will identify the parties and to whom it applies. Pay particular attention to the parties named in each instruction.

Casey 5006: Non-person party.

Two corporations, Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc. and Fremont California Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses North Unit are parties in this lawsuit.

Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc. and Fremont California Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses North Unit are entitled to the same fair and impartial treatment that you would give to an individual in this case.

You must decide this case with the same fairness you would use if you were deciding the case between individuals.

When I use words like person or he or she in the instructions, it refers to a party. These instructions also apply to Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc. and Fremont California Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses North Unit.

Casey 5009: Pre-deliberation instructions.

When you go to the jury room, the first thing you should do is choose a presiding juror. The presiding juror should see to it that your discussions are orderly and that everyone has a fair chance to be heard.

It is your duty to talk with one another in the jury room and consider the views all of the jurors.

Each of you must decide the case for yourself, but only after you have considered all the evidence with the other members of the jury.

Feel free to change your mind if you are convinced your position should be different.

You should all try to agree but do not give up because others think differently.

Please do not state your opinions too strongly at the beginning of your deliberations or immediately announce how you plan to vote, as it may interfere with an open discussion.

Keep an open mind so that you and your fellow jurors can easily share ideas about the case.

You should use your common sense but do not use or consider any special training or unique personal experience that any of you have in matters involved in this case. Your training or experience is not part of the evidence involved in this matter.

Sometimes jurors disagree or have a question about the evidence or about what the witnesses said in their testimony. If that happens, you may ask to have testimony read back to you or ask to see any exhibits admitted into evidence that have been not been provided to you.

Also a juror may incur an explanation about the laws as a part of this case. If this happens during your discussions, write down your questions and give them to my court attendant.

I will talk with the attorneys before I answer so it may take some time. You should continue your deliberations while you wait on my answer. I will do my best to answer them.

When you write a note do not tell me how you voted on the issue unless or until I ask for this information in open court.

At least nine jurors must agree on a verdict. When you finish filling out the form, the presiding juror must write the date and sign at the bottom and then notify my court attendant.

Your decision must be based on your personal evaluation or evidence presented in this matter. Each of you may be asked in open court how you voted on each question.

While I know you will not do that, I'm required to advise you that you must not base your decision on chance, such as the flip of a coin.

If you decide to award damages, and you cannot agree in advance, simply add up the amount each juror thinks is right and then without further deliberation make the average your verdict.

You may take breaks, but do not discuss this case with anyone, including each other, until all of you are back in the jury room.

Casey 5010: Taking notes during the trial.

If you're taking notes during the trial, you may take your notebooks with you into the jury room.

You may use your notes only to help you remember what happened during the trial. Your independent recollection of the evidence should govern your verdict. You should not allow yourself to be influenced by the notes of the other jurors if those notes differ from what you remember.

At the end of the trial your notes will be collected and destroyed.

Casey 5011: Reading back of trial testimony to the jury.

You may request in writing that trial testimony be read to you. I will have the court reporter read the testimony to you.

You may request that all or part of a witness's testimony be read.

Your request should be as specific as possible. It will be helpful if you state the name of the witness, the subject of the testimony you would like to have read, and the name of the attorney or attorneys asking the questions when the testimony was given.

The court reporter is not permitted to talk with you when he or she is reading the testimony requested. While the court reporter is reading the testimony you may not deliberate or discuss the case. You may not ask the court reporter to read testimony that was not specifically mentioned in the original request.

If your memory is different from the testimony, you must accept the court reporter's record as accurate.

Casey 114: Bench conferences and conferences in chambers.

From time to time during this trial it was necessary for me to talk with the attorneys outside of your presence, either by having a conference at the bench or by calling a recess to discuss matters outside of your presence.

The purpose of these conferences would not be relevant information from you, but to decide how certain evidence is to be treated under the rules of evidence. Please do not be concerned with what I might have said or try to guess what was being said.

Casey 116: Why electronic communication and research are prohibited.

I know that many of us are used to communicating and perhaps even more by electronic communications and research.

However, there are good reasons why you must not electronically communicate or do any research on anything having to do with this trial or the parties.

In court, jurors must make important decisions that have consequences for the parties. These decisions must be based only on the evidence that you heard in this courtroom.

The evidence that is presented in court can be tested. It can be shown to be right or wrong by either side, and it can be questioned. And it can be contradicted by other evidence which you might read or if you are on your own, it could be wrong, out of date or inapplicable to this case.

The parties can receive a fair trail only if the facts or information on which you base your decision are presented to you as a group with each juror having the same opportunity to see, hear and evaluate the evidence.

Also, the trial is a public process. It depends upon the disclosure in the courtroom of the facts and evidence. Using information gathered in secret by one or more jurors undermines the public process and violates the rights of the parties.

Casey 5012: Introduction of special verdict form.

You will be given a verdict form with questions you must answer. I have already instructed you on the law which you are to use in answering these questions. You must follow my instructions and the special verdict form carefully. You must consider each question separately.

Although you may discuss the evidence and the issues that you decide in any order, you must answer the questions on the special verdict form in the order they appear.

After you answer the question, the form tells you what to do next. All twelve of you must deliberate on and answer each question.

At least nine of you must agree on the answer before all of you can move on to the next question. However, the same nine or more people do not have to agree on each answer.

When you have finished filling out the form, your presiding juror must write the date and sign at the bottom and then notify my court attendant that you are ready to present your verdict in the courtroom.

Casey 5016: Judges commenting on the evidence.

In this case, I exercised my right to comment on the evidence. However, you, the jury, are the exclusive judges of all the questions of fact and the credibility of the witnesses.

Casey 5017: Polling the jury.

After your verdict is read in open court, you may be asked individually and indicate whether your verdict expresses your personal vote. This is referred to as polling the jury and it is done to insure that at least nine jurors have agreed to each question.

The verdict forms that you will receive ask you to answer several questions. You must vote, again, separately on each question.

Although nine or more jurors must be on each answer, it does not have to be the same nine for each answer; therefore, it is important for each of you to remember how you voted on each question, so that if you are polled, each of you will be able to answer accurately about how you voted.

Each of you will be provided a draft copy of the verdict form for your use in keeping track of your vote.

Casey 5020: Demonstrative evidence.

During the trial materials have been shown to you to help explain testimony or other evidence in the case. Some of these materials have been admitted into evidence, and you will be able to review them during your deliberations.

Other materials have been also been shown to you during the trial, but they have not been admitted into evidence. You will not be able to use them during your deliberations because they are not, themselves, evidence or proof of any facts. You may, however, consider the testimony given in connection with those materials.

Mr. Simons, do you have closing argument on behalf of the Plaintiff?

MR. SIMONS: Thank you, your Honor. I do.

CLOSING ARGUMENT BY MR. SIMONS

MR. SIMONS: And, your Honor, and counsel, Ladies and Gentlemen, I would begin by thanking you, not just for your jury service, but also for the attention that you have given to this case.

As the Court has noted and we have all noted as the attorneys, the degree of attention that you have paid to the testimony of the evidence in this case is very much appreciated and very much acknowledged.

We know jury service is a service. It is a manner in which disputes between two parties may be resolved by a mutual voice of the community. It is a way in which the community can pass on whether or not an individual charged with a crime is guilty or not guilty. It is a service.

But occasionally your work as a juror in a civil case is a larger task. It is a task that involves setting standards that will apply, not just to the parties in a given case, but will be heard and followed as a standard by others who know of the verdict.

It is a way that the community passes judgment on what is or is not a standard. And the community coming together from many different backgrounds, from many different experiences, speaks with one voice.

And in this case there is an opportunity to speak to a very significant issue, and that issue is whether or not the standards that apply to organizations who have activities involving youth together, whether those standards for the prevention of further abuse by a known child sex molester will be applied equally to all.

Now, I think the story that we heard really begins in the home of the Kendricks. In the meeting that was held with Elders Abrahamson and Clarke and with Evelyn Kendrick, Jonathan Kendrick and -- or at least some of the time with Andrea Kendrick.

What the elders took away from that meeting, according to their own testimony here, was that Kendrick had committed an act of sexual abuse on a child, and he had lied about it to them.

Now, it took a little work to get

Mr. Abrahamson to say, "Yeah, Kendrick lied."

I think it took me asking three times. And he said, "Well, it wasn't a complete story."

It was a little misinformation.

I said, "That's a lie?"

"Yes."

They knew he lied about it. And the fact it took so much effort to get Mr. Abrahamson to acknowledge that to me says there is still an element of protecting Mr. Kendrick in the approach that the elders have to this case.

If we are to follow what Evelyn and Andrea Kendrick told us -- and I really do not see any reason that their testimony would not be credible -- there was a lot more that was said during that meeting.

The elders were told that it was skin-to-skin contact and included inside of pants, that Andrea had been given some Vicodin and was under the influence of some drug at the time that the abuse occurred, that the Evelyn and Andrea -- that the Kendricks had come to the elders because that was the Jehovah's Witnesses ways, when there is a problem you go to the elders, and that's what they did.

And they went to the elders not because they wanted this to be private. In fact, they said just the opposite, they did not want this to be private.

"We wanted to be saved."

And they brought the elders in to help them find safety when they were not able to deal with Mr. Kendrick on their own for sometime after the act of abuse occurred.

And the elders, if you believe Evelyn Kendrick -- and, again, why would she make this up -- did not provide them safety.

In fact, it was a few weeks later there was another incident, and the police were called and eventually, as you heard from Officer Davila, there were criminal charges brought.

And not only were there not elements of safety provided, but Evelyn was told, "This is your fault because you did not have enough sexual relationships with Jonathan Kendrick, and that's why this happened."

And that is such a profound misunderstanding of what child abuse involves.

So the elders reported back to New York, and they received their instructions. And we know what they did to this person who they knew had abused the child and lied about it.

They took away his title of ministerial servant and they didn't let him pass out books at the Kingdom Hall.

And if you believe the defense, that is a severe and harsh punishment for committing child sexual abuse and lying about it.

But let's look a little closer at what they didn't do. They didn't tell anyone. They didn't tell the parents, the first line of defense, they didn't give any ammunition to them.

And I'm not saying they should be gossipping, you know, "Oh, you know what Jonathan did to Andrea," you know, it's not that kind of telling.

It's, "Jonathan Kendrick has been removed as a ministerial servant because he sexually abused a child."

That is all they had to say and every would know.

Not a single woman in the congregation was aware of his abuse of Andrea.

Not a single mother was aware of the abuse of Andrea.

And so they didn't tell anyone. And that's not all they didn't do. They didn't restrict Mr. Kendrick in any way that was meaningful.

He is still a minister.

He is still Brother Kendrick.

He is still a member in good standing of the congregation.

He is still sitting or sleeping in the back row or whatever it was of the Kingdom Hall there with children and adults all present.

And he is still a baptized publisher going out in the neighborhoods and collecting and spreading the Jehovah's Witnesses message.

He is doing all of that with children.

Now, we heard from Mr. Shuster that there is a policy. "No, he would never have been allowed to go out into field service with a child. That's our policy."

And when I say, "Okay, well, can I see it?"

No policy produced.

Is there really a policy? We heard from all the elders, of course, that would never happen. But we heard from Carolyn Martinez differently.

And again Carolyn Martinez drove up here from San Diego to testify in a case involving a brat who she didn't even like when she was a kid, and when she was married to Candace's father she really didn't have much a relationship with Candace, and she hasn't talked to her now in 13, 14 years, and she came up here to tell us what she saw, because it's so important that we hear the truth from those who are willing to speak it.

Now, let's look at what else they didn't do. They didn't monitor Mr. Kendrick. They said they did. "Oh, we kept an eye on him. We were watching." We heard that from the elders. But they never discussed Mr. Kendrick, again, in another elder's meeting. Never came up again.

Elders come, elders go, like everyone else, you can change the congregation with new elders and have no information about Mr. Kendrick.

They said, "Well, we kept an eye on him."

But no one had the specific responsibility to monitor Mr. Kendrick. And we know that when no one has the responsibility and everyone just kind of says, "Well, we will do it," that no one does it. No one took that responsibility. No one was assigned that responsibility.

We know that they didn't actually get very involved in Mr. Kendrick's life because we heard a little bit about where that was going. They weren't monitoring Mr. Kendrick and helping him with the problems that he was having, and getting more an idea where he was at and what was going on in his life.

They weren't monitoring in any reasonable way.

So we have a lot of things that were not done in this case.

When we talk about the standards, which I'm going to get to in a moment and which his Honor just read to you, that is important testimony. That is important evidence to keep in mind.

Now, we know because it is undisputed that the elders are all the agents of Watchtower. They are agents of Fremont because they are the managers of the Fremont Jehovah's Witnesses corporation. They are also agents -- remember I read that first day after Mr. Abrahamson testified that request for admission, that is just a way the instructions cover it for you. That's a way of showing this is not disputed, that these elders are agents of Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York when they're acting as elders, so we know that.

We know that the elders must follow all of the policies and instructions provided to them from the Service Department in New York. They have no ability to deviate from that.

And we know that the governing body, seven elders in New York, is the group that sets each and every policy for Watchtower; and therefore for every elder and every congregation throughout the United States. See, this is the Service Department.

And I would like to show you a couple of quick clips, because Mr. Shuster, remember we had his video deposition, he testified as the Watchtower. He was the designated person at the Watchtower, so this is corporate testimony from Watchtower.

And Mr. Shuster told us that the body of Elder letters, including the policy letter we are going to talk about, that came from the governing body.

(Whereupon, the video recording was played)

BY MR. SIMONS:

Q. Was this body of elder letter approved by either the committee or the entire governing body prior to its circulation?

A. Yes.

(Whereupon, the video recording was stopped)

MR. SIMONS: And we were told that all the things we learned about in the Awake Magazines were approved by the governing body.

(Whereupon, the video recording was played)

BY MR. SIMONS:

Q. Were all of the members of the then existing governing body who would review articles from Awake or Watchtower?

A. I can't say for certainty. But what I do say for certainty is that some members of the governing body would review it, yes.

(Whereupon, the video recording was stopped)

MR. SIMONS: And in addition, we were told that the Service Department supervisors are the governing body.

(Whereupon, the video recording was played)

BY MR. SIMONS:

Q. And how many members of the Service Committee are members of the governing body?

A. All of them.

(Whereupon, the video recording was stopped)

MR. SIMONS: So it is the policies of the governing body that we are here to discuss.

I want to bring up Candace Conti for a moment to talk about why we have this lawsuit.

Candace has emerged from her personal nightmare of years to say that the policy that keeps secret known child molesters in the congregations is wrong and needs to be changed.

She told that to Cliff Williams in the three conversations you heard about, one on the phone, one a couple of months later on the phone, and an in-person meeting.

You notice Mr. Williams never reported anything to New York about the sexual abuse that Candace reported.

But she told him, and she told the elders the same thing when she met with them in Fremont, that this is about protecting children so that what happened to her doesn't happen to someone else.

That's why we are here.

Now, the particular policy that we are concerned with is Plaintiff's Exhibit 1. And I just want to go through it again a little bit now that we have heard so much about it.

Let's take another look.

First of all, I want to note the date, July 1, 1989.

We heard from Dr. Salter that that's the time frame when the public was beginning to be aware of lawsuits against, primarily the Catholic Church. She had that San Jose Mercury news article that she showed us.

That people were beginning to bring lawsuits against the church, Louisiana and other places, for hiding sexual molesters and allowing them to offend again.

So that was in the mind of everyone who ran these major religious organizations in 1989. That's the timing of it. So if we look at this first paragraph, it says:

"Dear Brothers, we are writing to help you regarding the handling of your duties that involve legal issues or questions."

This is about legal matters. This is about legal issues. This is not a religious policy memo.

Let's look down a little further.

Now the wording is:

"The elders must be careful not to divulge information about personal matters."

That's an interesting set of words, that's a very particular set of words. It doesn't say "privilege matters." It says "information about personal matters."

And it says:

"Improper use of the tongue can result in serious legal problems for the individual congregation and even the Society."

Now, we were told we wouldn't want to be sued by a convicted child molester who accused us of defamation. But, in fact, the only lawsuits of any kind involving this issue that we have heard any evidence about are sexual abuse lawsuits by children who were molested within these institutions. That's the only lawsuits that were out there then. That's the only lawsuits that are out there now.

And will the persons be quick to resort to lawsuits if they feel their rights have been violated.

Well, again, this is about lawsuits.

Let's go a little further. We will go up to the top.

> "The spirit of the world has sensitized people to their legal rights and what may happen is people may initiate lawsuits against the society."

Further:

"If the elders fail to follow the Society's directions --"

In other words, that all the instructions are coming from the top.

-- in handling confidential matters, such mistakes could result in successful litigation by those offended, substantial money damages."

This is about lawsuits. And the only lawsuits we have heard about are child sex abuse lawsuits.

Let's go to the next page.

Now we heard that child abuse is just a very small part of this policy letter. The first section involves their internal processes. That's not our concern.

The second section involves child abuse. So there is one subject matter, specific subject matter that it is about. Child abuse.

The third subject matter is search warrants.

Again, that's a process. That's not subject matter.

> "No elder should ever consent to the church of Kingdom Hall or any other place where confidential records are stored."

And then we go down to the next section about crimes and criminal investigations. Well, child sex abuse is a crime. It certainly pertains to that. We don't have a separate section on any other crime.

Let's go to the next page.

"When servants and publishers move" is the next section. All right.

Well, Jonathan Kendrick moved, but that's not a section that talks about a different subject matter. So far the only specific subject matter that we have talked about is child abuse.

And then we have F:

"When the lawsuits are threatened."

I think I might have mentioned this is about lawsuits.

Let's go to the next page.

"Child custody."

All right, we are still dealing with children, with issues of child custody that come up.

And then we get down to "Points to remember."

So now we talk about all the specific subject matters that are specified and drawn out and emphasized in this policy letter.

It's about child abuse.

"Confidential information about the private lives of others."

There's that strange phrasing again.

"Unauthorized disclosure, confidential information can result in costly lawsuits."

That's because people like Candace Conti will learn that Jonathan Kendrick was known to have molested before.

And let's go from there to the signature page.

The signature, as we pointed out earlier, is the corporate signature. No individual signs it.

And then it says this:

> "Please do not make any copies of this letter, nor should it be read by others.

It should be kept in the congregation's confidential files."

So I guess the question will be: If this is a plain old memo about you have to follow the rules about confessions, then why is this a top secret memo that shouldn't be copied or disclosed to anyone, it should remain only in the files.

What is top secret about keeping confessions private?

Let's take that down. Thank you.

Now, his Honor read an instruction on the issue of privilege. I want to go back over it because it's going to make your job a lot easier.

There is a lot of confusing things that we have had to deal with so the Court has decided to clarify this for us.

You heard the word "privilege" brought up. Whether a particular communication is privileged is a decision for the Court. That is his Honor's job. We don't decide whether a communication is privileged or not.

So you get to decide this case based solely upon the evidence presented and the instructions given without any consideration whatsoever as to whether a communication was privileged. That has all been decided. That is not your matter to discuss.

The whole privilege issue is not part of what your deliberations are. You are to decide the case based on the evidence you heard in court and the exhibits that will be sent to you.

There is a second part to this, and I'll just detour for you, if I might. And that's about the question about the laws are mandated and reporting and there is questions back and forth about, and you have heard two experts testify about that.

Your deliberations are to be based solely upon the evidence presented and the instructions given without any consideration whatsoever as to whether there was any statutory duty to report an incident of suspected child abuse.

That, again, has nothing to do with what the standards are of care and negligence issues.

To put it another way, there might be a policy that a youth group adopts that says an adult and child cannot be together behind a closed door. That's a standard to prevent child abuse.

But there is no law that says a child and adult can't be together behind a closed door. It's a different set of thinking.

So we are dealing with the evidence of standards of care, and the instructions -- we will go over them in a minute -- that the Court has given us.

Thank you.

Now, we have sexual abuse in this case. We have an abuse of the concept of what is confidential. And we have something more.

I would like to look at now, if we could, Exhibit 65, which is also 049. This is one of the Awake Magazines that we have seen so much of.

And this quotation, I highlighted it, because Jesus used children as an example of humble innocence. Children are vulnerable to abuse by a scheming adult whom they know and trust. The congregation has a responsibility before Jehovah to protect its children.

And the biblical citation is to Matthew. And that's interesting, because that's the quote that I think every one of us, whether we were religious or not has heard, and that is:

"Who shall offend against the little ones --"

Who shall harm a child.

"-- it is better that he have a millstone hung around his neck and be sunk in the depths of the deepest sea."

That's not quite the same as keeping it quiet and saying he can't pass out the books.

Let's change subjects for a minute and talk about Candace for a minute. Every healthcare provider who testified basically said exactly the same thing about Candace Conti.

And I want to start with Dr. Afruma who saw her one time when she was 16. She doesn't remember it. But we have the record. That survived.

And in that record we see, first of all, up at the top, that "Please call her back. The psychiatrist is saying that can't see her until October."

She is having a hard time getting in. So let's scroll down.

So she sees Dr. Afruma. And Dr. Afruma notes that she's got a low attention span. She's depressed. She's crying a lot. She's complaining of depression. And she discloses to Dr. Afruma sexual abuse from ages nine to question 13.

Dr. Afruma does not discuss it further for reasons that Dr. Ponton talked about.

Let's go to the next page.

We see in this note the Assessment, Question, PTSD. Depression, insomnia. She is encouraged to talk to a psychiatrist or counselor and consider therapy.

Dr. Afruma mentions how about alcohol or drugs and even prescription medications can be used as a way to numb the experiences, and that it is best to have a diagnosis and treatment plan.

All of that was set out when Candace was 16. And this is before she is using. This is before she has turned to self-medication.

And we know that because one of the pages in Exhibit 55 is a drug test. There it is. And every drug is tested for negative, negative, negative, negative, negative.

She is not able to get into a psychiatrist and soon thereafter she is, as she said, running from the post-traumatic stress and running from the nightmares into other means of self-medicating. So that's Dr. Afruma.

Let's look at what Dr. Walton who is treating her now down at Kaiser said.

(Whereupon, the video recording was played)

A. So addiction, post-traumatic stress disorder, which is chronic, and drug abuse at (unintelligible)

(Whereupon, the video recording was stopped)

MR. SIMONS: And --

(Whereupon, the video recording was played)

A. PTSD, to account her story and to relive it as it has happened. And there is inherent emotional consequences to reliving a story over and over again.

(Whereupon, the video recording was stopped)

MR. SIMONS: And.

(Whereupon, the video recording was played)

A. PTSD can go into remission, but there is no cure.

(Whereupon, the video recording was stopped)

MR. SIMONS: And one more.

(Whereupon, the video recording was played)

A. Maybe a psychotic disorder and in order to feel normal they will turn to alcohol and drugs until they're diagnosed or treated for PTSD and anxiety or depression and given (unintelligible).

(Whereupon, the video recording was stopped)

MR. SIMONS: Then let's refresh ourselves.

This is what Dr. Laura Fraser said. She said she saw Candace when she was 12 and 13. And 14 years later, now down in San Diego, still remembers her.

Let's see what Dr. Fraser said.

(Whereupon, the video recording was played)

A. She felt like a child who had been sexual abused.

(Whereupon, the video recording was stopped)

MR. SIMONS: And most significantly because this was actually in response to a question that my colleague asked.

(Whereupon, the video recording was played)

BY MR. SCHNACK:

Q. And yet you still don't find it surprising that Candace would not have told you about her own sexual abuse?

A. I absolutely do not find it surprising. There was no safety for this child. Her parents -- we just discussed so many different things that occurred for this child.

She could not have longer than 20 minutes of safety with a parent.

There was no way she could disrupt -- I mean, there wasn't any safety for her. It had been so disruptive to her.

She was still rescuing both parents. What would they say if she disclosed that this had happened? How -- could she stay connected to her father?

Would her mother say, "Well, my abuse is worse than yours?"

There was a myriad of possibilities. This kid had no safety.

(Whereupon, the video recording was stopped)

MR. SIMONS: And lastly we heard from Dr. Ponton. Dr. Ponton is a professor who has been a pioneer in sexual abuse trauma. She is a professor at one of the leading medical universities in the world, and she had three very simple things to offer us.

One: She said, you know, we know we are on the right diagnosis with PTSD because the patient is responding to the treatment. If you are treating her for the wrong thing and with the wrong vehicles and the wrong therapies and the wrong medications, she's not going to respond.

So the diagnosis of PTSD is confirmed because the medication and treatment work and she responds, and Candace is doing better, as we heard, and as we are all glad to hear.

She told us secondly that Candace met all the criteria from the DSM, the big book that she had, the diagnostic and statistical manual that mental healthcare providers use in their evaluation of patients, and has all kinds of stuff in it, included in that PTSD.

She mentioned that, and she gave her a test to conclude that. And we heard from Dr. Ponton that Kaiser has been doing a great job but what this young woman really needs is a program of intensive therapy.

She put the bill on it of $160,000, she needs to be able to do more than what they can do and the kinds of programs that she's been able to participate in.

So all of the healthcare providers agree.

Now, we heard from Dr. Salter that she disagreed with Dr. Williams who examined Candace on behalf of the defense.

And Dr. Williams, Candace told -- she went down there and told him, "Yeah, I was abused in field service," because he asked.

And Dr. Salter said she didn't agree with his testing methods.

And Dr. Williams said, "Well, he will be here to explain them."

But we don't have any Dr. Williams. He wasn't called to testify.

And so don't we think that if there was a single thing that any of the healthcare providers said that could be reasonably disputed in any way, that we would have heard some professional testimony from a mental healthcare expert of some kind to the contrary? But we didn't.

So what do we know? Well, we know Candace was abused in serial fashion in a somewhat very intrusive manner.

We know that she suffered mightily and relived it over and over, because she couldn't tell anybody, it was trapped inside of her as a nine-year-old, as a ten-year-old, as an 11-year-old, as a 12-year-old, all the way up to 16 and beyond, nightmares, reliving it over and over again, no one to be able to share it with.

In the nightmares over and over again. Even when she might just be awake and see his truck in Fremont until everybody moved away. It is that feeling and reliving that experience of being crushed by this monster.

And so we know as well from Mr. Lewis about Child Sexual Abuse Accommodation Syndrome, and that's that kids are not reliable in the number of times when they say something happened, because they are reliving it over and over again inside them, and they perceive things differently, and they are not keeping a diary, they're not keeping a calendar.

Mr. Lewis is not just a police officer. I mean, he's the state president of the Child Sexual Abuse Protection Professional Association.

He's the state president of all the mental healthcare and child protection. They get together and try to address the issues of child abuse. And so we know that.

And yet, with that knowledge, what we still have by the defense in this case is a fixation on the number of times it occurred.

And I want to show you some of the cross-examination of Candace.

This is by my colleague Mr. Schnack.

(The following was read by Mr. Simons)

"Question: But your testimony is it occurred several times a month, perhaps over a two or three-year period. Correct?"

Answer: That's what it feels like.

Question: What do you mean when you say that's what it feels like?

Answer: Well, it happened over and over again and didn't stop.

Question: It sounds like you are not certain on the time frame.

Answer: I think that's fair.

Question: So you are saying it could have happened five or ten times and that's it. That's it."

(end of reading by Mr. Simons)

MR. SIMONS: See, here's the thing. If it happened once, that's too many. That's what they don't get. If a perpetrator who has already molested one child in the a small congregation gets to molest a second, that is unacceptable.

There is no way to erase the harm that is done to a child who is abused.

I think we have all had the common experience of being kids in this age group, and maybe it was a big room, the auditorium at the elementary school or something we would go to and maybe we got to get up on stage or whatever and it seemed like such a big room.

And maybe we got a tree that we would climb and it just so far up to the top of that branch.

And maybe it was a new dress or pair of shoes we got at the time that made us feel so grown up. And the shoes are so big they almost come off our feet.

Maybe it was a baseball bat that we got as a kid.

You know, it seemed like a telephone pole to us at the time, but when you go back and you look at these things as an adult, you know, it's a 27-inch bat. The dress, the kids shoes, the trees, there is the branch. The room is not that big.

This is how children perceive things, and this is how Candace perceives things because she is frozen in time as a nine-year-old and ten-year-old experiencing and re-experiencing and re-experiencing abuse by Kendrick. It doesn't matter if it happened only -- only -- only ten times.

Now, I would like to look at the jury verdict form that we are going to answer because this is important.

The first question -- can we blowup question one.

Did Jonathan Kendrick sexually batter Candace Conti?

That is under the more likely to be true than not true. And this is where you can consider some of the other stuff that you heard, the black bra for Brianna, the rollerblading, all that stuff, the pictures, all that stuff can come in on this particular question, I think that is more likely than not that he did.

So Question 2 is: Did it cause harm?

We know that sexual abuse of a child causes harm.

And let's go to Question 3. And Question 3 is a long one. And it breaks down whether or not Mr. Abrahamson or Mr. Clarke as the agents of Watchtower and North Fremont were negligent.

And then separately, were the elders in the Service Department in New York negligent?

So to figure out the answer to this question,

you have to look at the instruction that says:

What is the obligation here?

Did they violate their obligation?

Well, let's look at the instruction that addresses that.

So the defendants, Watchtower and Fremont, had a duty to take reasonable protective measures --

Reasonable protective measures.

-- to protect Candace Conti from the risk of sexual abuse by the Fremont Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses North Unit member Jonathan Kendrick.

In determining whether or not reasonable protective measures were taken you may consider the following:

The presence or absence of any warning.

We talked about that.

Whether or not any educational programs were made available to Plaintiff or her parents for the purpose of sexual abuse education and prevention.

Two parts: Sexual abuse education and prevention.

And I make that distinction because of the testimony that Dr. Applewhite gave on behalf of the defense in which, we kind of heard, at least to me, that she was saying that their sexual abuse education and prevention programs were exceptional.

And so I asked her in the video about that. And here's what she said.

(Whereupon, the video recording was played)

BY MR. SIMONS:

Q. You talked about the exceptional child abuse prevention program that, in your opinion, the Jehovah's Witnesses had in place.

Can you tell me whether or not you agree that whether a program is effective or not in child sex abuse prevention and education is best evaluated by whether it has reduced or prevented child sexual abuse occurring within the institution?

A. Well, let me begin by saying that what I said was that it was an excellent parent education program, which is different than a sexual abuse prevention program.

(Whereupon, the video recording was stopped)

MR. SIMONS: She never said that they had a reasonable sexual abuse prevention program. It got right by me, but she made it clear. And we went through the numbers that she was paid. If you did the math, it turned out to be $60,000 for the two cases that she worked on this year, and we couldn't get her to say that the child sex abuse prevention program met the standards. She wouldn't say it.

When I asked her about it and lumped it together, she said, "That's not what I said."

So we don't have any evidence that says their prevention program was up to standard.

Can we go back to the instruction?

Lastly, such other facts and circumstances as contained in the record. And that's where the so-called monitoring comes in.

Did they really watch this guy like a hawk? Or is that something that we hear now in the courtroom?

There is the obligation, I think because that obligation was not met, reasonable measures were not taken, that all of the elders, the ones in the field carrying out the instructions and the ones in the Service Department giving the instructions were negligent.

And it comes from this policy of keeping it secret.

Okay. Let's go a little further down the verdict form.

Next question is: Was that a cause of Candace's harm?

Well, to prevent a known sexual molester within the congregation from being able to figure out some way to get to the kids.

So that answer I would submit is yes.

Then we go to Number 5. And this is the question of damages. In order to answer this, I'm going to come back to this in a minute because there is two more questions that still pertain to this whole fault and responsibility question, responsibility to the organization.

So let's skip down, first of all, to Number 7. The very last question is an important one.

And that's this question: Do you find by clear and convincing evidence, in other words, that's different than just more likely to be true or not true. It has to be clear to you. You have to be convinced that the negligent conduct of Watchtower that was a substantial factor, was engaged in with malice by a managing agent of Watchtower.

Now, the managing agents are the governing body. They are the ones that give all the instructions. And that part isn't the hard part.

Malice. What does malice mean? Does it mean somebody in New York who never met her meant to specifically harm Candace Conti? Does it mean that?

No. Here is what it means:

Malice means they acted with intent to cause injury to Candace.

They didn't intend to injure Candace.

Or -- or that the conduct was despicable and was done with a willful and knowing disregard of the rights and safety of another.

A person acts with knowing disregard when he or she is aware of the probable dangerous consequenced and conduct and deliberately fails to avoid those consequences.

So now the question becomes: Did the governing body set policies where the elders had to knowingly disregard the probable consequences of their conduct?

Did the governing body set policies knowing the probable dangerous consequences of hiding known sexual molesters within the congregation?

And I want to show you some of the Awake Magazine articles, which are relative to that point.

Let's go first to Exhibit 59, which is 017.

"What did they know?

Well, in 1985 they knew, "Who would molest a child? Most parents would answer this question wrong.

Parents, the first line of defense? Don't know.

They knew that religious people from religious church groups would molest.

Let's look then at Exhibit Number 64/037:

They knew that fostering a hush-hush attitude about it, silence gives safe haven to abusers, not to victims.

And they knew it was a general conspiracy of silence that a lot of gross child abuse to persist among Catholics for decades.

They knew this before Jonathan Kendrick was identified positively as a child molester.

Let's look at Number 65/049.

Experience has shown that such an adult may well molest other children. Not everyone does, but many do.

And so they knew that Jonathan Kendrick was at risk to molest another. They knew that individuals who are identified as molesters in their congregation that they were keeping secret were at risk to molest others.

That is deliberate and indifference to the safety of other children in the congregations, and that is despicable.

And so your answer to Question 7, I believe, should be yes.

Now, let's go back up to Question 6 for a moment.

You are going to be asked to assign percentages of fault between Watchtower, Kendrick and North Congregation.

So Kendrick, he's the abuser. I think everybody should agree that he gets the largest share. He is the molester.

And so Watchtower. Well, Watchtower is certainly complicit, because while Kendrick may be the vicious dog, Watchtower knew he was vicious and let him run around anyway.

And then we have North Congregation. The elders in North Congregation are following the instructions and policies from Watchtower.

So in my view, Kendrick gets 51 percent, Watchtower New York forty percent, Fremont, single digits, nine percent.

The real responsibility here lies with those who are the most culpable, and they are at the top of your form.

Now let's go back to Question Number 5, damages.

Again, the question of how to determine damages is an expression of the community given by a consensus of a jury. It is a statement of values. How do you value the losses and harm that have been experienced by Candace Conti from her abuse?

How do we say through a number what is important to us in the protection of children?

And we do that by assigning a value to a child who has lost the things that you lose when you are abused as a kid.

She has lost those things of innocence, a healthy relationship and all the things we heard about. She's lost sleep, she's lost happiness, she's lost the ability to have friends. She lived in isolation and depression.

She has lost the sanctity of her own body, both from the abuse itself and the from the toxic substances that she filled it with.

These are all losses. They are the loss of the integrity of a young child for a sustained period of time. That's the harm we are measuring.

So if we value having our children be free from this kind of harm, if that is an important statement for us to make, then the number should reflect that.

And yes, that would be a large number because this is a large issue of great importance in our values. And so we treat harm to a child of this nature seriously. And that number has to reflect it in this case.

And secondly, the number has to reflect all the different permutations and ramifications of what this young woman has gone through.

Can we see the instruction?

We have to consider, not just her physical pain, but mental suffering, depression, anxiety, humiliation and emotional distress. All of these things.

And we have to consider over four separate time periods. While the abuse is occurring the year, year-and-a-half, and the quiet years the years when she is 11 and 12 and reliving it, no one to tell up until she is 16, 17, the time period when she is in turmoil and flight from herself and from her experience, drug using, and then the rest of her life starting almost two years ago when she went sober.

And you have to consider all four of those time periods. And each one has a little bit different ramifications and each has a little bit different significance.

And I would say that, no, you might say that the actual abuse itself and experience of child abuse is worth a hundred thousand dollars.

But I don't think that would fairly reflect how serious child sexual abuse is and what our values are on that issue.

We could say that's worth a million dollars. You could say it is worth $10 million.

But I think we have to find something that reasonably reflects how our society values it. I would submit that should be a million dollars.

And then the second period of time when she is in turmoil, and the kid that Dr. Fraser told us about. I would submit another million dollars for that time period and another million dollars for the years of her life that were lost and will never become hers again.

And lastly, there is the rest of her life. Over 50 years. She is 26. PTSD, you can treat it, but you can't cure it. And she is at risk the rest of her life.

She is doing well now, but we are still facing nightmares and the long tragedy is not over. The long tragedy will go for many a year to come. And the long tragedy was caused by the organization to which she committed herself to be the best Jehovah's Witness that she could be. She committed herself to that and the organization betrayed her into the hands of Jonathan Kendrick.

So for that last period of time for the rest of her life, I would say you should submit a figure of $2 million to $3 million. That's a lot of money. I know it. And it's an important statement to make.

And so again, I appreciate the attention that each of you have given throughout the trial. I appreciate you listening to me for such a long time, and I appreciate your service in this case. Thank you.

THE COURT: Let's take a 15-minute break and come back at 11:25.

(Break taken).

THE COURT: All right. To the jury, defense counsel will make their closing argument, and then after that we will swear Mr. Martin to be your steward. We have ordered lunch for all, paid for by counsel, and all twelve jurors and the three alternates.

Now I'm going to deal with the three alternates independently, once the deliberation has commenced.

I think it was set up so you all can have lunch together, including the alternates, but I need an article of faith from you that you will not talk about the case while you're having a simple lunch together.

To the alternates, the members of the jury, can I have that article of faith with you that you won't start deliberating over sandwiches?

I don't think that's going to take very long. We have already ordered them.

Then the twelve jurors will commence deliberations after a short lunch, and you will continue to deliberate until you reach a verdict. And I have already given you the deliberation instructions and whatnot.

But I wanted to highlight for you that, apparently -- it is a very hot day outside. As a matter of fact, I do not know that, but I do have circumstantial evidence about it, so...

But we decided to do that to accommodate you, to take care of your lunch, and perhaps keep you out of the heat.

And having said that, Mr. McCabe, you have a closing argument.

MR. McCABE: Yes, sir, I do, your Honor. Thank you.

CLOSING ARGUMENT BY MR. McCABE

MR. McCABE: May it please the Court, counsel, members of the jury, thank you very much for your, really your most valuable possession, which is your time.

And you are giving it to us maybe not entirely freely, but we appreciate that you have been here. And I think the judge commented and Mr. Simons commented you have been a very attentive jury. And we know it is not easy to have your lives disrupted like this, to come into court and take part of this process, but for our system of justice to work, it is essential you do what you do, and we thank you for it. We can't thank you enough for it.

Like I said in my opening remarks, this is an important case. It's important for Mrs. Conti who has been here and bared her soul, and told through medical records, and told you about intimate details of her life and her early upbringing, which was rough, to say the least.

But on every case there is two sides. And on the other side, my clients are represented here by Mr. Abrahamson, Mr. Clarke and Mr. Lamerdin, the Fremont Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses.

And I think it is an important case to them because their dedication and devotion, not only their faith, but to what they do in their congregation is on trial here.

I know we talked a little bit about during the -- we were going through the finishing touches of the voir dire process. I asked you if you all were nervous, and I got a lot of head nods. It is not easy to ask questions to a room full of strangers, but we appreciate that you cooperated. I think we have a very good jury here.

Hopefully you are not nervous anymore. But I still am, because I represent some decent people. And I think this is a very important case for them.

It has been hard for them to sit here, too, and hear the claims of things that happened to someone that they cared about, someone that was precious in their congregation when she was a little girl.

It was hard for them because they would have never, ever, wanted anything like Ms. Conti described to happen.

No one ever wants a child to be abused. No one in the Fremont Congregation, no one in this courtroom would want for any child to ever be abused. And that was certainly true of the members of the congregation that came to testify; Bernice Munoz, her daughter-in-law, Sylvia; Pam Figuerido, and even former members like Carolyn Martinez and Claudia Francis.

I think it was kind of the whole feeling that all of us could share and join in with Mr. Shuster's comment, the last witness who testified when he said Jehovah's Witnesses, abhor child abuse. We all abhor it. We hate it.

But my clients are here to stand up for the good work they do do in their congregation and say to all of you they didn't allow, they didn't condone, and they didn't cover up and they didn't cause, they didn't turn a blind eye.

They didn't perpetrate child abuse or negligently allow it to happen on their watch to Ms. Conti.

But I think as Mr. Simons brought out about the standards in the community, this case is not only important to my clients in the congregation and to Ms. Conti, but it is important to groups who deal with families and children on an everyday basis.

I think it is also important to our sense of confidentiality and the need that human beings have to go to a counselor or pastor, a priest, a therapist, a lawyer, a doctor, and reveal confidential things about themselves, private things to expose their needs, their fears, their insecurities, sometimes their flaws, maybe even sometimes like in this case a serious, serious sin.

So this case is not only important to members of the Fremont Congregation, but I think it is important to members of all congregations, regardless of religious backgrounds.

I think it is important to other groups like soccer clubs, the Little League, PTAs, anybody who deals with families, with children.

It is important because the allegations here essentially say that an organization, any organization can be held responsible for the sexual abuse committed by a member of that organization, even when the sexual abuse has nothing to do with the organization. It doesn't happen on their property. It doesn't happen while an organization function is going on, and no one from the organization even knows it's happening.

And when Ms. Conti and her attorney had to acknowledge that they worked out a deal with Mr. Kendrick not to pay 1 cent for his alleged crime, I submit that we learned what this case is really about.

What it is really about is not holding the alleged villain, the monster, accountable, but it is for holding the church accountable for what a villain did that they didn't know about.

So the problem with that is, though, it says that an organization, any organization should be held accountable, but Mr. Kendrick, the alleged perpetrator should not, the villain, the monster.

Why? Because they made a secret deal that they won't have to pay.

So the message is not a good message to send to our community. That there are people like this, that Mr. Kendrick did what he did, did what she claims he did, and strike a deal and cover it over enough to punish and pay for it.

Remember what I told you at the beginning of my opening remarks at the beginning of the trial. I told you what this case is not about.

And I think that is important for us to recall for just a minute, that inevitably after this case is over, after you have given your verdict, your friends and family are going to say, okay, what have you been doing? What is going on? Tell us about the case.

And I think you want to remember, you can tell them very succinctly and positively that this was not a case where a pastor or a member of the clergy abused a child and gained that child's trust and confidence.

It is not a case where the abuse happened in the church or in the back room of a church.

It is not a case where a pastor or clergy member saw what was going on and turned a blind eye and let it go.

It is not a case where the church transferred the molester from one location to another.

It is not the kind of case where any of us, friends or relatives, or anyone here in this courtroom have read about in the media.

But what it is about is what I'm hear to talk about today and sum it up with your indulgence. I want to tell you what I think the evidence has revealed in this case and what it's really about.

And I want to stand up for some decent people who I represent who did not know, have a way of knowing or stopping any of the abuse that Ms. Conti may have suffered.

This case is also about our concepts of justice and fairness. In our system, one cannot be responsible for something that they did not know was happening, did not know was occurring, did not cover up, did not cause.

What I believe, to review the evidence with you -- I would just like to mention that -- before I do that, the burden of proof, as the judge has instructed you, rests with the Plaintiff. They have that responsibility.

And if after weighing all the evidence that you decide the fact is probably true, more likely true than not true, then that is a fact.

But if you can't make that decision, then you must decide that the Plaintiff has failed to meet their burden of proof.

My clients have no responsibility to produce any evidence in this case. They start off on that level playing field we have talked about, and they don't have any obligation to produce evidence.

But they did so. About nine members of the Jehovah's Witnesses testified in this trial. Most of them were called by me to tell you their story and to round out the evidence for your review.

So the question is: How do you discharge your duty to decide the facts in this case?

Well, it is not rocket science. It is just the simple way that you make important decisions in your own personal family affairs. You make those decisions every day and you need to make those decisions in this case, and we look forward to you coming to those conclusions.

When we selected you as jurors in this case, we did talk about that level playing field. It is simply of way of saying the scales of justice. There is nothing on the scale coming into the trial. Most parties start off with zero. And the evidence comes in in bits and pieces, and we have to put it together.

So what I would like to do and I'm going to do it within an hour is kind of tie up in what I think is logical fashion of what the evidence shows in this case and do it logically, because it's not like the television dramas where we see everything is tied up in a neat, little package within 60 minutes, less the commercials. Everything you have seen comes in in bits and pieces.

But if you will bare with me, these are four things that I want to discuss with you, which I think are the crux or the heart of this case. And we will walk through them to see if the Plaintiff met their burden of proof in this case.

The first question is: Did Plaintiff prove that her abuse happened as she testified?

And I'm going to spend the majority of my time speaking about that issue, and the other three issues will be less time.

The second one is: Did Plaintiff prove that the situation with Andrea has any bearing on this case, and the claims of this case.

And Number 3 is: Did Plaintiff legally prove that keeping a private family matter private following a Biblical standard somehow proves that the elders were negligent in allowing the abuse of Ms. Conti.

And my fourth one is going to be simply: Did Plaintiff prove that any act or any failure on the part of the elders might be due to negligent really cause Plaintiffs's damage?

First, did Plaintiff prove that the abuse happened as she said?

Well, what's the evidence?

Let's put it on a scale.

Plaintiff says she was abused, and admittedly this trial is a pretty hard thing to put yourself through if it didn't happen.

So you might think, well, that's more probably true than not true just the mere fact she has gone through the trial.

So we can put her testimony, her direct testimony on the scale, and it begins to weigh down.

You might think even because we are here in court today discussing this, it is probably more true than not true.

But remember in our opening discussions, we talked about a criminal case and a civil case.

The criminal case goes through filters before it gets in front of a judge and a jury.

A civil case is just you file a lawsuit, and it will end up here.

So filing a lawsuit does not make the claims true.

And also as the judge instructed you, you can't be swayed by emotion, sympathy, conjecture or guesswork.

Everyone hates child abuse. Everyone feels emotional for someone who has been the victim of a child abuse.

For Ms. Conti, the horrible upbringing she had. We all feel sympathy for her. If she was abused on top of that, it is not only horrible, it is tragic.

But this is an extremely emotional issue. So it's important that you as the arbiters of the facts of this case follow the facts. Because we all feel for Ms. Conti. We can't guess what happened to her.

So what are the facts?

Well, on Plaintiffs's side we have Ms. Conti's testimony, and it weighs on the scale.

On direct examination, Ms. Conti told you what she had experienced as a child with the abuse that she suffered.

She mentioned that it was several Sundays a month at the Kendrick home.

Ms. Conti stated her mom and dad let Jonathan

Kendrick take her to his home week after week, and he abused her several hours and then returned her to her parents, either at the Kingdom Hall or at the family home.

Now Plaintiff would have us believe that because she's now told her therapist and others that the abuse was more likely to happen.

When she told Dr. Ponton, she said the same thing. Basically, she started of in her testimony and, of course here, that it happened hundreds of times over a two- or three-year period.

She also told the Kaiser doctors that she was abused repeatedly.

She also testified in a deposition, just before she met for the first time with Dr. Ponton.

And I would like to read to you what she said on Page 28, line 6, I asked her:

"Did the abuse ever increase to be more than bear hugs?"

She said yes.

"When did it increase to be more; how old were you?"

"Still nine," was her answer.

"QUESTION: What happened?"

"ANSWER: He would take me to his house after meetings."

"Were those day meetings or night meetings?

"ANSWER: Sunday meetings."

"QUESTION: Sunday meetings? What happened when he would take you to his house after Sunday meetings?"

And she answers.

And then the question: "How many times did this incident take place where he would use pens?"

She said, Answer: "Several times a month."

"Over what a period of time? A number of years or all within one year?"

"ANSWER: A couple of years."

"When did the abuse stop?"

"When he moved."

"QUESTION: He moved at about 1997 when your parents divorced?"

"ANSWER: Yes, that's correct."

So the abuse started when she was nine in 1994 and continued until sometime in the year 1997.

But if we look at the scales, the testimony is really all Ms. Conti.

What she told me in the deposition is the same that she told on her direct examination. It is the same thing that she told her doctor. So really it is 100 percent her testimony.

The doctors take history. They base their treatment and diagnosis based on solely what the patient tells them.

So really when we start looking at the scale we need to take off the deposition, the Kaiser therapist, the doctor, Dr. Ponton, and we still just have Ms. Conti's testimony.

But what about the other side of the scale? What about the Defendant's side?

First of all in the Defendant's presentation, you heard Mr. Simons already talk about Plaintiffs's cross-examination, when she was asked how many times it took place after hearing all the testimony in the court.

And she backed off "hundreds of times."

She said it might have been five or ten, and it seemed like more.

And the reason that testimony is important is because it comes in after we examine the living situation of Jonathan Kendrick.

Jonathan Kendrick did not live alone. He was not a bachelor. He lived with his wife, Evelyn, and their stepdaughter, Andrea.

And when you think about it, that's very important because they lived together in the same house.

Week after week, month after month. They lived together.

So where is the evidence that Jonathan Kendrick could have access to her week after week at his house? Going home after the Sunday meetings?

I submit to you, ladies and gentlemen, that it couldn't have happened that way. It just couldn't happen that way.

Think about that. They were only separated from October 11, 1996. He only lived alone for a month before moving to the Francis home.

We have heard about shady testimony from Mr. Abrahamson. But I think the Plaintiff started shading her testimony when she saw all the evidence when Mr. Schnack cross-examined her. It had only been five to ten times.

But then we have to add to that, cross-examination experience. We have to add to the testimony of Kathy Conti. We have to add the testimony of Neal Conti. We have to add the testimony of the three elders who have testified. We have to add the testimony of the women who came forward from the congregation testify.

And none of them, not one of them saw the things happen which Ms. Conti described as happening week in and week out.

Namely, Ms. Conti leaving with Jonathan Kendrick in his truck to go to his home to be abused by him.

None of them saw Ms. Conti testify to that it happened on a weekly basis, the big bear hugs, the squeezing and holding her until she would answer the question "Who loves you" and saying "You do," then he would let her go. The sitting on his lap.

Then we have the testimony of Carolyn Martinez, Claudia Francis, their own witnesses did not see any of these things happening at the Kingdom Hall.

You might wonder what the parents were doing.

I think it is shaded that Neal Conti might have been a little cold and not caring so much.

That isn't what I saw when he testified. He had a very difficult situation dealing with a very ill and emotional life. He was struggling to keep his job, keep his family together, and then he had to flee the family home when she came back from a suicide attempt so angry. He had to leave to protect the children.

I remember, though, Kathleen Conti when Mr. Simons asked her, "Did you let your child go alone with anyone, to service, to Kingdom Hall, to Bible studies?"

And remember the look she gave? She was stunned, she was incredulous. She couldn't believe that he would even think that she allowed that to happen.

Yet we are supposed to believe it happened week after week after week.

Now Carolyn Martinez said the same thing. She said that it did not happen. She didn't see it when she was at the Kingdom Hall.

It is very troubling, especially because if we think about mom. The Plaintiff lives with her mom. She's helping to take care of her mom right now. Her mom a hundred percent supports her in this lawsuit. She's even testified she has been to counseling sessions with her.

If the mom let Ms. Conti go with Jonathan Kendrick once, twice, a dozen times, why wouldn't she just come out and tell us?

But she didn't because it didn't happen. She wouldn't allow it.

And if she didn't do it but she knew that Neal did it, he allowed Ms. Conti to go with Jonathan Kendrick week in and week out, well, why not point the finger at him?

And again, she didn't do that because it didn't happen.

Additionally, when the elders of the church came in and told you that they had admonished Jonathan Kendrick to stay away from children, to be careful because they were watching him, there was no evidence that they did not watch him. They all said that they watched him.

And they watched. And they did not see Jonathan Kendrick take Candace Conti from the Kingdom Hall in his truck week after week after week. Not even once.

The three elders testified they didn't see it. We could have brought all twelve of them in, but three is a significant number.

If you need more reason and more evidence to see that this didn't happen in the way Ms. Conti testified to, we have Sylvia Munoz's testimony, Bernice, her mother-in-law, we have Pam Figuerido. Each of them told you that they did not see Ms. Conti being taken away from the Kingdom Hall every week for years. And these are women with children. Grandchildren.

Now, one of them Sylvia, has a child, has a son who is now the same age as Ms. Conti. They were in the congregation together. They did not see what Ms. Conti testified to happening week after week or even once.

They did not see the bear hugs, the squeezing, the sitting on the lap.

Now, if they had seen it, they would have talked about it.

If they had seen it, they would have commented on it to the elders.

If they had seen it, Pam Figuerido stated it wouldn't have been tolerated. It wouldn't be appropriate congregation activity.

The things that Ms. Conti told me, told Dr. Ponton would happen for a couple of years week in and week out just didn't happen.

Now, if the evidence does not allow for that conclusion, but it shows that Ms. Conti has PTSD, well, where does that come from? Could it have been from having to flee the home when the father and mother attempted suicide? Was it something else?

We heard some of the other things it possibly could be, eight years of drug abuse.

Has Ms. Conti confused reality with some of the nightmares that she has experienced?

I don't know and I'm not going to say because I just don't know.

But I think it shows us that there is a lack of proof there. She hasn't proved it by the evidence.

But remember, it is her burden. She has the duty to prove the evidence of what caused her PTSD.

And I want to make something very, very abundantly clear -- I think it is clear, but just to go on the record with all of you.

I do not represent Jonathan Kendrick. I have nothing to do with Jonathan Kendrick. I'm not arguing he is not guilty of horrible crimes, all I'm saying is that Plaintiff has not met the burden of proof.

Plaintiff calls this man a monster. So even if we assume that Jonathan Kendrick did abuse Ms. Conti, as counsel said, one time, that's horrible. That's too many times.

But I'm pointing all this out because we need to question Ms. Conti's credibility on this point. It is extremely important because it tells us something about my clients. It points out how little the elders knew. How little the congregation could have known that abuse was taking place, how their actions could not have been negligent because they didn't see bear hugs, sitting on the lap, be ferried away from the congregation week after week, because whatever happened between Ms. Conti and Jonathan Kendrick did not happen because of their involvement in the congregation of the Jehovah's Witnesses in North Fremont.

Only one person said that she ever saw Ms.

Conti sit on Jonathan Kendrick's lap. That was Carolyn Martinez. She said that it happened at her home when Ms. Conti was four, five or six years old in 1991 and 1992.

And there was no testimony that there were any elders present at that event. And anyone else that saw it would have considered that it was not unusual for a little girl to be sitting on a man's lap.

But I think it is important that we look at that in view of the testimony that she gave me last August in her deposition.

Here is what she said about the bear hugs, the lap sitting.

I asked her: "Where did this abuse take place?"

She answered: "The Kingdom Hall, the North Fremont Kingdom Hall Congregation."

"Where in the Kingdom Hall?"

"Just in the Kingdom Hall."

I asked her: "Was it in the main auditorium?"

She said yeah.

"What took place in the Kingdom Hall; what did he do to you?"

"He would grab hold of me, on to me."

"Where would he grab you?"

She answered: "Just like a bear hug and hold me."

I asked her: "Were there people present when this happened?"

She said yes.

"QUESTION: Who was present?"

She answered: "The attendees of the North Fremont Congregation."

And I asked: "During the meeting?"

She answered yes.

"During the time the meeting was going on? Before or after?"

And she answered: "Before and after."

"Other than the bear hug, what did he do?"

"ANSWER: He used to make me sit on his lap during meetings."

"Where were your parents? Were they at these meetings?"

She answers: "My dad was."

"QUESTION: So the first time this took place was when you were about nine years old?"

And she answered by shaking her head affirmatively.

"How many times did this take place, these bear hugs?"

"ANSWER: I couldn't give you a number."

I asked: "Frequently?"

She said: "Very frequently."

I asked: "At every meeting?"

She said: "I would -- I could safely say that it happened at every meeting."

The hugs, the sitting on the lap, but why didn't everybody else see it?

And that's what is important why we look at her story, why we look at her credibility. Why didn't anyone else see it? And equally important why didn't anybody, if they saw it, tell the elders?

Well, because this is not a case where a clergyman was transferred from one church to another or where the elders buried their heads in then the sand, or where the entire group in the congregation, the mothers, the grandmothers and the elders together looked on while Ms. Conti was being ferried away from Kingdom Hall week after week.

The congregation did not know or have a reason to know that Jonathan Kendrick had targeted Ms. Conti.

So the evidence in this case demonstrates that any sexual abuse could not have taken place the way

Ms. Conti said it did.

If Mr. Kendrick abused Ms. Conti, it happened in some other way that we have seen in this trial. And no one could have known about it or stopped it but Jonathan Kendrick.

If Jonathan Kendrick abused Ms. Conti in any way, at any time, just one time, then he is at fault. Not the elders, not the congregation, not the church.

But here is where I'm really having a hard time with Ms. Conti's evidence. Not Ms. Conti herself. I'm talking about the evidence. She called Jonathan Kendrick a monster.

I don't know. Maybe he is. We just haven't had enough evidence on that.

And then she told me and you that she wanted the monster, Jonathan Kendrick, to pay for her future therapy and counseling, and she wanted him to pay for her pain and suffering.

And she said she wanted the money. She filed a lawsuit asking for money damages against him. He wasn't just another necessary party, he was the principal defendant. He was the one who intentionally and criminally touched her.

But then that changed when I brought out the agreement. Notice it wasn't brought out in her direct testimony. Mr. Simons didn't bring it up. I brought it up.

I had to bring it up and say, well, do you have an agreement with Mr. Kendrick that no matter what the jury awards in this case, no matter what how many millions of dollars you may award, she will not try to collect 1 penny from Mr. Kendrick.

Why?

Because they had a secret deal, a secret deal they didn't tell us about directly and openly.

So doesn't that make you wonder as a juror in this case, why are we here?

If you look at the document, the exhibit, you will take it in the jury room, you will see both Mr. Simons' signature on it and Ms. Conti's signature on it. It is not just something that the lawyer did on his own. They did it together. They agreed on this.

But doesn't that make you wonder why we are here? We are letting this man off.

I think -- remember Mr. O'Brian in the Voir Dire? He was kind of colorful. He said he didn't think this case should be here in this court. It is the wrong court. It should be in criminal court.

I think that Ms. Conti and Mr. Simons agree. If he doesn't want money from them, then he should be prosecuted. He should have to pay in some way for what she is claiming he did.

Mr. Simons refers to a policy of secrecy on the part of Jehovah's Witnesses, and this document shines the light really on the policy of secrecy. It is a secret deal that the Plaintiff has made with the monster.

Now, Jonathan Kendrick is responsible for Ms. Conti's damage. If he is not, who is?

And really, you heard the testimony that he was a man that had a serious problem. He had sexually touched his stepdaughter in 1993.

But if he went on from there to abuse Candace Conti, I think what he really is, is not a monster but a chameleon, a man who changes his personality to fit his audience and circumstances to get what he wants.

Remember some of the testimony? Some witnesses said he was quiet and contemptible; others said he was loud and outrageous and full of life. He was a rough and tumble iron worker; yet he played the violin.

Like a lizard changes colors, Mr. Kendrick did these things. He changed colors. He would be what he could be in front of whoever he needed to fit into his audience to get what he wanted.

And isn't that what child abusers do? They hide what they want, they bury themselves in organizations. They hide what they want. They hide in society, they hide in the local church or the soccer club, the Boys and Girls Club and the local church.

But in all of this do you see what is missing? The evidence. We just have Ms. Conti's testimony and it doesn't stack up against any of the other evidence in the case.

Now, maybe you think Claudia Francis saw something. She saw and talked to you about the rollerblading incident. But it is interesting because Ms. Conti doesn't say she was abused when she went rollerblading with Mr. Kendrick.

And, you know, when she saw this, Claudia Francis didn't think it was some part of a dirty plot on Mr. Kendrick's part to abuse Ms. Conti. They came rollerblading over to her home. And I think her testimony was that Mr. Kendrick was then living at their home.

You heard testimony that Ms. Conti lived a few blocks away. They rollerbladed over. Significantly, she didn't report this event to the elders.

She didn't say, I saw Mr. Kendrick with

Ms. Conti and I think it's suspicious."

Had she done so, the elders would have dome something about it. They would have looked into it. They would have told Mr. Kendrick he wasn't supposed to be around children.

And Ms. Conti didn't tell us anything about that. And that's why the judge just gave you a limiting instruction that this incident and the other incidents involving Mr. Kendrick, they were outside of the purview of the elders. They weren't done in the Kingdom Hall. They weren't done on the Congregation's watch. It cannot be used against them.

So we need to take Claudia Francis off that side of the table, because you cannot legally, intellectually put that testimony on my clients. And that is because of our system of justice.

It is simply because they didn't know that it happened. No one told them. You can't be held negligent for things that you did not cause or that you did not know were happening or that you did not cover up.

So where is negligence on the part of Mr. Clarke and Mr. Abrahamson? It doesn't exist.

The plaintiff on this key issue, really the only issue in this case is still back on her side of the scale without tipping it at all, she has her testimony sitting on his lap, getting the bear hugs, leaving the Kingdom Hall.

No one else supports that testimony. No one else has any evidence to support it at all.

Now if Ms. Conti was abused by Mr. Kendrick, it's horrible, and we all feel sorry for her. But we can't give her a verdict because we feel sorry for her. She has the burden of proving it and she hasn't met that burden.

So what did the elders do to allow this abuse? How were they negligent in not protecting Ms. Conti?

There is no question about it that they relied on their understanding of the Bible principle and they kept the matter of the home visit at the Kendrick family confidential.

But it didn't stop there. That wasn't the end of the evidence. They came back to the body of elders, they removed Mr. Kendrick as a ministerial servant, they announced it, and they said they watched him, and they admonished him to stay away from children.

And there is no evidence that they didn't watch him. They watched him.

There is no evidence that Ms. Conti was in danger from this man.

Had they seen any event, they would have acted to protect her.

Jonathan Kendrick simply did not have the access to Ms. Conti that she claims that he had every week, several times a month for a number of years.

So the evidence in this case demonstrates that any sexual abuse could not have taken place the way Ms. Conti said it did.

If Mr. Kendrick did abuse Ms. Conti, it happened some other way than we have heard in this courtroom, and no one could know about it or stop it, except Mr. Kendrick.

Now if Mr. Kendrick abused Ms. Conti in any way, at any time, it's his fault, not the elders' fault, not the congregation's fault, not the church's fault.

And that brings us to our second and shorter question that I want to ask. It is a question that Plaintiffs's counsel has made one of the primary issues in this case.

Has Plaintiff proved anything about the situation with Andrea? Does it have any bearing on this case? Or does it prove that the elders were negligent concerning in the abuse of Ms. Conti?

I submit to you it is really a smoke screen.

It is a false clue. It is designed to divert attention from the real issue or the real problems in this case.

This trial is not the end. You didn't see anywhere on the verdict form where it said Jonathan Kendrick abused Andrea. He confessed to that.

Instead, this information just diverts our attention.

When talking about Andrea, there is only one important question that needs to be asked, and that is: Did the elders respond appropriately to the private allegations raised by the Kendrick family at that time?

I think you heard Mr. Simons' argument and my argument. You remember what the evidence is. But it wasn't Evelyn Kendrick that called the elders over to the house, it was Mr. Kendrick. He testified that he called Mr. Clarke and asked if they would come over and address the family.

And what happened? Mr. Clarke and Mr. Abrahamson, fathers themselves, workers, volunteers they took their bibles on a Thursday afternoon, and in 1993, in November, they went to the Kendrick family home.

They were invited in, they sat down at the kitchen table, and they opened with prayer, and they used the Bible after they listened to the family.

Jonathan Kendrick disclosed what he did, the family was sitting there. He -- Kendrick said it was inadvertent. You don't confess to something that is inadvertent. They weren't fooled.

And what was the confession? That four months earlier this event had taken place near Andrea's birthday in July. The family had kept it confidential until November.

Four months later, the elders met with them, going to the police was discussed as an option.

No hush-hush here by the elders, no counsel not to talk about it to anybody else, not to go to the police.

And remember, no one told the elders anything until November. Remember, it happened four months earlier.

Well, after they did what they did with Mr. Kendrick, admonished him, told him to stay away from children, be careful, they were going to watch him.

They went back to the congregation and met with the rest of the body of elders. And they had a meeting and they all agreed that Mr. Kendrick was no longer qualified to be in the menial task of being a ministerial servant.

But they kept the matter confidential. They thought they should.

You heard conflicting testimony from Evelyn and Andrea that they didn't consider the matter confidential, they didn't care. But they didn't tell anybody else other than the two elders until late February when they went to the Fremont Police and made a report about the abuse.

Now, I told you at the beginning, this event took place 20 years ago, 19 years ago, that memories would be different. People would say different things happened. And that's what happened in this case.

Evelyn says that more was disclosed, but Evelyn couldn't remember whether Andrea was at the entire meeting. Andrea didn't remember being at the meeting at all. So memories fade.

But the important think is, it is not whether she had a Vicodin before the incident or whether it took place in the bedroom or the living room. The important thing is that the elders knew and understood what this was. This was child abuse. And they called it exactly what it was. It was child abuse. And they acted accordingly.

They wrote a letter to Watchtower and said it was child abuse. And they said that they removed him from being a ministerial servant in the congregation. And they asked for some spiritual clarification, direction.

If there was an incident about Vicodin or if there was something about the bedroom or if there was something about skin-to-skin contact or more contact than just the touching of the breast, why would they withhold it when they are asking for guidance of counsel two days after the incident was reported to them?

Well, of course, they had no reason to falsify their letter to Watchtower, so they reported what they were doing.

But the important thing is, what the elders knew is that Mr. Kendrick had a problem with his stepdaughter, and it was inappropriate child abuse.

They reported it as it was. They removed him as a ministerial servant. They didn't cover over the matter.

They didn't tell the victim to be silent, not to go to the police. In fact, they told her she had an absolute right to. The congregation did not shield Jonathan Kendrick from the authorities.

In fact, when you think about it, think about the terms of the family wanting to keep something quiet, they continued to live -- Andrea and her mother, Evelyn, continued to live with Mr. Kendrick for another two years, six, seven months. They did not separate until almost three years later from the report being given to the elders in October of 1996.

But then think about this. As was their absolute right, they went to the police in late February. They went to Fremont Police, reported it. Child Protective Services investigated it.

Officer Davila's testimony is interesting because he knew the elders were involved prior to his involvement and he saw no reason to follow up.

Why not?

Because the elders didn't do anything wrong. They were ministers. They did their job as ministers.

He was a policeman and he was doing his job as a policeman. And regardless of whether some of the things the policeman was told or not, it doesn't really matter because they removed him as a ministerial servant and his position because of child abuse.

As much as this Plaintiff would like to focus this case on what happened with the Andrea situation, it's really just a smoke screen.

The only important issue is: Did the elders respond to it? They acted appropriately. They, along with the other elders, continued to watch Mr. Kendrick after this point.

Again, this is not about Andrea, what happened to her. That case was dealt with by the elders, by the Fremont Police, by the Child Protective Services, by the District Attorney's office. Where is this cover up? Where is this conspiracy of silence? Where is the smoking gun? Where is the hush-hush that Mr. Simons just talked about on the part of Evelyn or Andrea?

On the contrary, it is out in the open. That leads me to our third question: Does Plaintiff's attack on confidentiality somehow prove that the elders were negligent in allowing the abuse of Ms. Conti?

Now, Plaintiffs say that the elders kept the abuse confidential. I don't think they did. It is clear they did not stand Mr. Kendrick up in the middle of the congregation. You see the pictures of what their hall looked like. Four seats on one side, about six in the middle, and four seats on the other end. They didn't stand him up the next Sunday and say, "Mr. Kendrick, I want everybody in the congregation to know that he sexually touched his stepdaughter in July, about 5 months ago."

They didn't do that. But confidentiality is a policy that's promoted by Dr. Salters, their expert. Confidentiality is not a four letter word. It is not identified by Jehovah's Witnesses. It is practiced by religion, doctor, therapist, social worker and so forth.

Now, we talked a lot about, from Mr. Simons, this July 1, 1999 letter, which was Exhibit 26. And when we talked about that, we didn't talk anything about Laura Fraser.

I bring her up not as any attack on her at all. She was a good therapist who was doing a job to try to help a very troubled child going through a very acrimonious divorce.

But think about this: Laura Fraser kept confidential the things that Ms. Conti was telling her about her mother, walking around naked in front of her and doing other outrageous things with alcohol and drugs. She did not tell the divorce mediator in the case. She did not tell the father, Neal, so he could protect his daughter. Why not? Confidentiality.

These are concepts that we live with in our society.

Dr. Applewhite testified about that. And she also said that it is important for all organizations. So this policy letter that's been picked on by Plaintiffs, this July 1, 1989 letter to all bodies of elders, I invite you to read it because it really has only one paragraph about child abuse. It is on Page 3, paragraph B.

And maybe we can make it a little bigger. This is the policy that Watchtower handed down to the congregation. It says:

> "Many states have child abuse reporting laws. When elders receive reports of physical or sexual abuse of a child, they should contact the Society's Legal Department immediately. Victims of such abuse need to be protected from further danger."

What is the cover up there?

We have, as we heard, child reporting laws. Every state has a different one. They need to get legal advice to find out what they need to do in response to this allegation.

Now you read the letter as a whole, and along with the rest of evidence before you, and I think you will see that the Defendants care a great deal for children.

Like Mr. Lamerdin testified on Cross-Examination, they were precious, they were the future.

So confidentiality is not a nasty word, it is not a concept that is unique to Jehovah's Witnesses, and it is not a concept that caused the elders to be negligent in this case.

No one. No one. Not Ms. Conti's mom, not her dad, not her therapist, not others in the congregation, not her grandmother, no one saw or heard anything that showed them that Candace Conti was in danger of being abused by Mr. Kendrick.

Confidentiality has nothing to do with the complete lack of evidence on this point.

Now, Mr. Simons' tells you it was the standard. But that if Jonathan Kendrick was stood up in the middle of the congregation and was labeled as a child abuser, it wouldn't have changed the facts in this case.

No one saw him holding her on his lap, a 9, 10, 11-year-old girl. No one saw him giving the big bear hugs in the middle of the congregation, squeezing her.

No one saw them leaving week after week from the congregation meetings alone together in the vehicle.

The evidence in this case just demonstrates that any sexual abuse could not have taken place the way Ms. Conti said it did.

Jonathan Kendrick, if he did abuse her, it happened in a way that hasn't been presented as evidenced in this courtroom. It hasn't been before you.

No one could have known about it or stopped it but Mr. Kendrick, and only he can be responsible for it.

Which brings me to my final question. The link between negligence and causation. And the judge just read you the causation instruction. It mentioned that to be responsible, the elders' negligence, and I submit that I don't think the evidence leads there, but if you see that it does in some fashion, it must be contributed to the harm.

It must be more than a remote or trivial factor. It doesn't have to be the only cause of harm. Conduct is not a substantial factor in causing harm if the same harm would have occurred without the conduct.

So the only negligent conduct that Mr. Simons talks about is the elders didn't reach their responsibility to keep this matter confidential. They didn't stand Mr. Kendrick up in the congregation labeling him as a child abuser.

So what does that mean?

Well, if you believe that there is evidence that it is more likely than not that they were negligent, you need to next find that their negligence, their not standing him up in the middle of the congregation and labeling him as a child abuser caused harm to Ms. Conti.

But to answer that question, you need to look at two issues. And the first one is since Plaintiffs spent so much time -- like the situation we had with Andrea. What the elders did or did not do is a substantial factor in causing of her harm. Not Andrea's harm, but the Plaintiffs's harm.

But if that's the case, if they didn't label him as a child abuser in the congregation, and that's the negligence that we are looking at here, what would you say about Officer Davila and the Fremont Police?

They knew the congregation was involved. They didn't go down there and start telling people. Child Protective Services didn't, the District Attorney's Office didn't.

Were not any of these the cause of the Plaintiff's harm?

Well, you might look to me and say, "Well, that's pretty much of a stretch."

And I say it is a stretch, too, for the elders.

Why is Mr. Simons only pointing to the church and the elders, and not to these other agencies?

Well, I think we know, why isn't he pointing to Mr. Kendrick?

He's saying he's only 51 percent responsible for the horrible abuse that he perpetrated over a two- to three-year period?

Well, I think we know the answer to that. It is the covenant. It is the covenant not to go after him no matter what your jury verdict is.

You can award the $260,00 or the $160,000 in special damages. You can award the, what did he say? $5 million to the $8 million in damages? But we won't go after Mr. Kendrick.

That's just hard to understand.

And the only substantial factor in the cause of Ms. Conti's abuse was the criminal acts of one man, the chameleon, the iron worker, the violinist, the quiet, contemplative man, the extrovert, the man who could be what he wanted to be.

And if he did this abuse just one time to Ms. Conti, he is the monster, he is the true villain, not Michael Clarke, not Gary Abrahamson.

If he did this he should be held 100 percent responsible. You should put the blame where it goes. If you say he is only 99 percent liable, what message are we sending to the community about the child abuse that's out there?

You can shift your responsibility. You can blame your institution, your organizations. We don't blame you for causing abuse.

If he did this, he has gotten away with it for far too long, and he should be finally be held accountable for what he's done. But Ms. Conti and her lawyer have made a secret deal to take your power away.

I sincerely believe that this case, like Mr. Simons says, has more far reaching implications than for the two parties before you, or the three parties before you.

It is not just a case that has implications for churches, but it has implications for all organizations that deal with families.

It basically says that if you have knowledge that any member of your organization has ever committed a sexual battery before, even when you have no knowledge that he is doing anything currently or presently, even if what he's doing doesn't happen on your organization's property or your organization's functions, you are going to be held responsible.

Now, I'm not saying this to shirk responsibility. If Mr. Kendrick had been an elder, I wouldn't be here defending the congregation, I would advise them to settle this case, pay, whatever they want.

If this abuse had happened in the middle of the Kingdom Hall or in the back room, I think that would be inexcusable, it would be on their watch. I would not be here defending them.

But this is not a case where that happened. This is not that case. It's going too far to attribute responsibility to these good men and to their congregation.

Now, you can disagree with their faith. Many of us do. We disagree with their teachings. We may find it irritable if they showed up on our door step on Saturday morning. But I think we can all agree that they are decent people trying to do what is right. They are not here covering up. They are not here condoning. They are not here encouraging child abuse.

So I would like to conclude by just asking you to tell Mr. Simons that you don't care for his secret deal that he made with Jonathan Kendrick.

Don't let your time be wasted here. Don't let Mr. Simons and Ms. Conti take away the power that you have to really send a message in this case.

Stand up for what is right and not what is craftily devised by a clever lawyer. Use your power to send a message back to all the congregations and the groups that work with children, the Little League coaches, the soccer coaches.

The congregations of elders who shepherd their flocks. Tell them coach the kids, encourage them to excel, to do better.

Do your job. Just let all these groups do the good they do in the community without the fear that they will be held responsible for what a monster did that they didn't know was happening. They didn't cause and they didn't cover up.

Justice really is about affixing blame. And I think what this trial has shown to all of us is that if anyone is to blame, it is Jonathan Kendrick. He is absolutely 100 percent to blame and not Jehovah's Witnesses.

Plaintiff and her attorney are looking for the wrong sort of justice. I think they are in the wrong court.

If she called him a monster, she should charge him with a crime. She said she went to the Fremont Police, but we don't know when. It wasn't revealed to us.

We are here today deciding about money, money for a crime. Not time in jail like it should be. But money. Money that actually wouldn't come from a criminal. And I think this is an abuse of our system of justice.

It would be an injustice to make good people pay on this set of facts and on this set of evidence. This is simply the wrong court and the wrong defendant.

And I encourage you. I know you will do your duty as the judge has instructed you on competence, that you will feel a great satisfaction of sending a message to child molesters that if you operate like they do in secret, we won't let you make a secret deal with the Plaintiff so you can shift your responsibility, your accountability to some organization or institution.

Send a message to the Plaintiff's bar association, to the lawyers out there, don't make secret deals with people who operate in secret.

Child abuse is a horrible thing. Ms. Conti suffered enough. I don't think she should have been manipulated the way she has been in this case, and I encourage you to send that message, that good people should do what they do best, and let them coach, shepherd, inspire.

I thank you for your time.

MR. SIMONS: May we approach?

THE COURT: Sure.

(sidebar discussion)

THE COURT: Mr. Schnack?

MR. SCHNACK: Thank you, your Honor.

CLOSING ARGUMENT BY MR. SCHNACK

MR. SCHNACK: Like the other two lawyers have talked to you, I appreciate your time and energy that you devoted to this.

It is difficult to disrupt your lives and we sincerely appreciate it, and you have paid undue attention without question.

I'm not going to be as smooth in my presentation as Mr. Simons or Mr. McCabe. I'm more of in-the-trenches type of lawyer. So don't hold that against me or my client.

I think you have heard a number of witnesses now, and you have seen a number of exhibits in the case.

And the question can be, as Mr. McCabe suggested, why are we here?

This really appears to be the wrong court and the wrong defendants.

Again, it is going to be somewhat repetitive of what Mr. McCabe said, but this is not a situation where a priest abused a child, this is not a situation where the elders in the congregation, or an elder from Watchtower abused a child. This isn't a soccer coach who abused a child, this isn't a scout leader. This is a rank and file member of the congregation who allegedly abused Ms. Conti. And that's what brings us here.

But what is missing? The claimed sexual abuser isn't here. They struck a deal. Candace Conti and her attorney struck a deal. And you saw it before. It was on the screen. And you will have it in the room.

Candace Conti signed that agreement herself. And rather than ask you to hold him responsible for what he did, they decided to let him off the hook.

As a result of this deal -- and again, you'll see the deal. It says, if you don't show up here, I agree not to pursue, I will not try to collect any money that the jury might award. That's what it basically says.

And what was really strikingly absent, Mr. Simons talked for over an hour to you this morning, he didn't read it.

You can ask yourself why? Why didn't he address it so that Mr. McCabe and I could respond?

Now he is going to have a rebuttal so he can address it then, and we don't get a chance to respond.

Is that fair?

That's for you to decide.

But nonetheless, let's be clear. Mr. Kendrick is not here because Plaintiff struck a deal that if he did not appear at trial, if he did not participate in depositions, if he didn't show up at court hearings, then we won't pursue you for any money no matter what you as a jury might decide.

As Mr. McCabe says -- we need to be clear. No one who is here in court today wishes any harm on Candace Conti.

She has had many challenges in her life. Laura Fraser's testimony, you hear what happened to her as a result of what her mother did. It shouldn't happen to anyone.

But for there to be justice in this case here on the evidence that was presented, the information on which you base your verdict has to be done with reliable and trustworthy testimony.

Keep that in mind. With accusation comes responsibility. That's the burden of proof. If you accuse people of things, you have the responsibility to prove it.

You were here when Candace Conti said in open court that she wanted money from Mr. Kendrick. The monster she called him.

You will also hear just minutes later, she said, yes, I have an agreement with him that I won't take any money from him.

Why did she contradict herself within minutes?

We probably would never know.

Perhaps she thought she could get away with not telling the truth on that first question.

I think Mr. Simons, when he talked about Mr. Abrahamson, he said he had to press Mr. Abrahamson, did Mr. Kendrick lie to you?

Well, can we ask the question? Did Candace Conti lie to you when she said she wanted money from Kendrick?

Again, we won't know the reasons why she said what she did, but she showed right in that minute that she's not always reliable and trustworthy in her testimony.

Let me turn to the burden of proof. And, again, this has been addressed. But I want to reiterate what Mr. McCabe told you and what the Court instructed you.

Watchtower, my client, has no burden of proof here. They don't have to prove anything. It is the Plaintiff who has the burden of proof by a ponderance of the evidence. Again, an accusation, no responsibility.

After reviewing and weighing the evidence, I think you as a jury -- well, let me just go into the evidence. Mr. McCabe addressed that.

Let me address what the evidence shows about

Ms. Conti's claims. First, the evidence is undisputed that Jonathan Kendrick was only a rank and file member of the congregation at the time Ms. Conti says he abused her.

The evidence also showed that he did not have unrestricted access to her. The evidence was undisputed that in the Jehovah's Witnesses faith children are not separated from parents.

They also told you there is no Sunday School for kids, they don't have Vacation Bible School, they don't have any summer camps. The children are not separated from their parents.

Mr. Kendrick did not have any unique or special assess to Candace Conti or any other children. You heard Dr. Applewhite testify to that in her trial testimony.

It is also undisputed that Candace Conti never went to the Kingdom Hall without one or both of her parents. She even confirmed that in her deposition testimony and she testified to that here in trial as well. So, again, she was never at the Kingdom Hall unless either one or both of her parents were there.

She also testified, Ms. Conti did, that Jonathan Kendrick bear hugged her at the Kingdom Hall at every meeting.

You can show Candace Conti's deposition, Page 27, lines 5 through 11.

It says on the screen.

"How many times did it take place, the bear hugs?"

She answered: "I couldn't give you a number."

"Frequently?"

She said, "Very frequently."

"Every meeting?"

Then she said, "I could safely say that it happened at every meeting."

She also testified that Jonathan Kendrick made her sit on his lap at the Kingdom Hall. Again, she testified that her parents were present every time she went to the Kingdom Hall.

She also testified that she was allowed to leave the Kingdom Hall alone with Jonathan Kendrick when Kendrick took her to his house. And that's where she says Kendrick sexual abused her.

She claims this happened hundreds of times, like Dr. Ponton testified.

Let me go through what Dr. Ponton said that Candace Conti told her. I'm going to read this. This came from Dr. Ponton's report.

Dr. Ponton said that for three years she had been abused, quote, more than twice per month, and often it happened four to six times a month, close quote.

And then upon further questioning, Dr. Ponton said she had written, quote, in summary, Candace's sequence of abuse by Jonathan took place over three years and involved hundreds of episodes of sexual abuse, close quote.

Now that's what Candace told Dr. Ponton.

Did she ever tell Dr. Ponton, "Well, I was only 9 to 11, I wasn't sure." You know, it could have been more, it could have been less? No. She was very resolute. Dr. Ponton testified she told her that it was basically hundreds of episodes of sexual abuse.

Candace's parents -- again, I'm going to talk about a lot of things that Mr. McCabe talked about. But Candace's parents, both Neal and Kathy Conti both testified that they never allowed Candace to sit on Jonathan Kendrick's lap at the Kingdom Hall, and that they never saw Kendrick bear hug her at the Kingdom Hall.

Candace's parents also testified that they never allowed her to leave the Kingdom Hall alone with Jonathan Kendrick.

Neal Conti testified that Candace never went on field service unless he was with her. And, indeed, Carolyn Martinez who is, again, like Mr. Simons said, drove up here from Southern California to testify for Candace. Let's see what she said and what she saw Candace in field service.

It's at Page 36, lines 1 through 3.

She was asked:

"Did you ever see Candace Conti come to field service without one or both of her parents?"

And Carolyn Martinez said no.

So any suggestion that Candace was in field service alone with Kendrick based on what Ms. Martinez said is just false. The testimony just isn't there.

You also heard the three elders, and they are sitting here today, Mr. Abrahamson, Mr. Clarke, Mr. Lamerdin. They each testified that they kept an eye on Mr. Kendrick. They didn't see anything. They didn't see the hugs at the Kingdom Hall, they didn't see Kendrick having Candace sit on his lap. They didn't send children out in field service without their parents.

The four women from the congregation, Claudia Francis, Bernice Munoz, Sylvia Munoz, Pam Figuerido, they all came and testified, well, they didn't see any bear hugs at the Kingdom Hall. They didn't see Candace sitting on Kendrick's lap at the Kingdom Hall. They didn't see Candace leave the Kingdom Hall alone with Kendrick.

That's a count of nine different witnesses. And I think they were on the scales there that Mr. McCabe showed, but nine different witnesses. All regular attenders at the Kingdom Hall, none of them saw any of this happen that Candace said happened.

If, indeed, it happened, why didn't Mr. Simons bring in witnesses? Why didn't he bring in people that said, you know, what Candace said is true. I saw it happen. He didn't do that.

Why?

You are going to have to ask yourselves that.

You know, I earlier talked about Ms. Conti's testimony and how she contradicted herself about the secret agreement she had with Mr. Kendrick.

Again, that testimony in and of itself is not reliable, not trustworthy. And as the judge instructed you, if you are false in part of your testimony, then you're entitled to disbelieve the other parts of the testimony.

But there were other inconsistencies that she presented to you. Again, when Dr. Ponton testified about the, her words, hundreds of instances -- or what was the word again? "Hundreds of episodes of child abuse." Candace told that to Dr. Ponton.

She also testified in deposition -- go ahead and show that clip. It is Page 30, lines 13 to 14, counsel. It says, and the question:

"Can you tell me about how many times this incident took place where he would use pens?"

And again you recall she testified that Jonathan Kendrick used pens to violate her.

She said: "Several times a month."

"QUESTION: Over what time period? Number of years? All within one year?"

Candace said: "After it escalated?"

"QUESTION: Yes."

"A couple of years," she said.

"When did the abuse stop?"

"When he moved. When Kendrick moved."

Now, I showed you the deposition transcript and indeed what the instructions from the judge about depositions -- that's sworn testimony as if it occurred in court. So you should treat that just as if it was live on the witness stand.

Two, you saw in the deposition testimony, as well, she was told that she had the right to change that transcript if the testimony was incorrect.

She and her attorney knew that, but they never changed it. They didn't even try to qualify that. They didn't say, "Well, that might have been wrong," but she was only 9 to 11. They didn't change that testimony. So keep that in mind.

She also testified in her deposition that the abuse by Kendrick occurred at his house when he lived alone after his marriage to Evelyn Kendrick had ended.

Can you show that? It's at Page 43, line 23, to 44, line 5, counsel.

It says:

"QUESTION: Referring to the abuse that took place at Kendricks's home, was anyone else present during any of those instances?"

"ANSWER: No."

"QUESTION: Was he married at the time?"

"ANSWER: No."

"QUESTION: Did he live alone?"

"ANSWER: Yes."

Again, that was Candace Conti's testimony back in August of last year, and she had the absolute right to change that testimony if she thought she had testified incorrectly. She and her attorney made no changes to that testimony whatsoever. Again, they didn't try to qualify it to say it wasn't totally accurate. Again, they let that evidence stand.

Here at trial, though, what did we learn?

Again, Mr. McCabe touched on this. The evidence became clear that Jonathan Kendrick only lived at his house alone for three, maybe four weeks.

Evelyn came in -- Mr. Simons called her as a witness -- and she testified that they separated on October 11, 1996. That's when she and Andrea moved out of the house.

It also came out from the next witness, Claudia Frances, that Mr. Kendrick then moved into her and her husband's home in early November. So that's three weeks plus. Maybe four weeks.

Evelyn also testified, when Mr. Simons asked her, "Oh, yeah. We were gone every weekend."

At least that's what Mr. Simons wanted you to believe.

When I went back in on cross-examination, what came out?

In '94, in '95 and January 1 of '96, she moved out in the winter of '96, she and Andrea were out of the home, what, five to eight weekends during that approximately two years and nine months.

It wasn't that Jonathan had free reign of that house on weekends. It's just not what she testified to. It's not what the Plaintiff would like you to believe.

She did say they were out one or two hours on some Sundays. But again, for what Candace alleges Jonathan Kendrick did, the violations of her that she said he did, the photographing of her when she was naked, all the things that you heard, within an hour or two? Ladies and Gentlemen, I just submit it doesn't add up.

Again, I apologize. I'm not feeling that well today. I kind of came down with a cold. So let me apologize here.

And again, let's talk about the secret agreement that came up. They didn't tell you about that. It didn't come up in opening. The agreement didn't come up in Mr. Simons' direct examination of Ms. Conti.

What also didn't come up was that either during the opening or Ms. Conti's direct examination was that she said she reported Kendrick to the police.

If it was so important to her that Kendrick be stopped, why didn't they bring that up in opening argument? Why didn't she testified to that in her direct examination?

It was only after Mr. McCabe got her to admit that, "Oh yeah, I forgot, I do have this agreement. I don't want money from Kendrick."

Then she brought up, "Oh well, it was important for me to go to the police."

Well, did they bring a police officer in here to verify that?

They certainly knew how to bring the police in. Officer Davila testified about his 1994 investigation. But they didn't bring anybody in here to confirm that.

And I asked, why?

So what does all this evidence show? I submit to you that the evidence shows that Jonathan Kendrick did not have the unrestricted access to Candace that she said he did.

No other witnesses corroborate what Ms. Conti said happened at the Kingdom Hall. Like I said, there were regular attenders who said they did not see anything like what Ms. Conti said happened.

Neal Conti said that given what his wife had been through, he was even more vigilant with protecting his daughter.

You recall that Kathy Conti said she had been abused as a child. Neal said that as a result of that, he was even more vigilant in protecting his daughter.

Has Plaintiff met her burden of proof here? That's for you to decide. And again, I'm not going to speculate why Candace Conti has given the various versions of events here today. But this does raise questions that you as a judge of fact, I think, should ask and should consider.

Again, I want to be clear, like Mr. McCabe mentioned -- and Mr. Simons suggested that I was being glib with the phrasing of a question, that somehow I condone child abuse?

Don't be fooled by his deliverance on that. Everyone here abhors child abuse. And if Jonathan Kendrick abused Candace Conti, he is the one who should pay. Not the church. Not the congregation.

And to suggest for some reason I condone child abuse is just -- it is just off the charts.

Another point on this case. This case in my experience -- again, I'm probably the spring chicken of the three lawyers here at 59, but this is an unusual case, because I have never seen one of these agreements made with the child abuser like this, that they don't want money from him.

This is a very unusual set of circumstances to have the Plaintiff who said she was abused hundreds of times let the child abuser off the hook. It just makes no sense.

Were they going to tell you about it? You know, the way this has been handled in this courtroom, I think probably not.

Why? Is there an answer for that?

I'm not sure there is.

Perhaps it is because they wanted to shift the blame.

To who? To the church? To the congregation?

They want to have the church and the congregation do what the Fremont Police didn't do, what the Child Protective Services didn't do, what the DA's office didn't do.

They are asking the same thing. Think about it. The Fremont Police and the Child Protective Services had the same information that the local elders had about Candace Conti.

But who do they want to pay? They want the church, they want the congregation, they do not want Mr. Kendrick to pay.

And I think that -- is that justice?

Let me move to the claimed policy of secrecy that Mr. Simons refers to. And I think far from any policy of secrecy what we presented to you shows that Watchtower, through its publications, through its body of elder letters exposed the issue of child abuse in our society, not try to hush it up.

The July 1, 1989 letter that reminded the elders the importance of maintaining confidentiality in their church duties, they had to maintain the trust of their congregation members.

The letter specifically dealt with subpoenas, child custody matters, search warrants, criminal matters.

And even when Mr. Simons -- and you will have this letter in the jury room -- Mr. Simons kind of glossed over when he showed you the criminal matters. "Oh, that's child abuse."

Well read that. It says theft, it says assault, it says various things. This was not a letter focused on child abuse.

The one short paragraph that addresses child abuse -- and you have seen it a number of times, we don't have to put it up on the screen here. But first it said call the Legal Department.

Why?

Because Watchtower wants you to comply with your legal obligations in every state. Every state has different reporting laws. So call and see what you have to do in your state.

Second they want to protect the children.

That's what those two or three sentences in that paragraph say.

Mr. Simons tried to portray this letter as some sinister policy of secrecy to avoid lawsuits.

Was this secrecy?

Let's look at the facts.

In November 1993, when the elders met with the Kendrick family, what was the evidence? That they told Evelyn Kendrick and Andrea Kendrick that you could report this to the authorities. You go to the police.

Was that secrecy?

Clearly, the answer is no.

Watchtower was ahead of the curve, not only within religious organizations, but also within organizations at large that deal with youth by publishing and distributing information so that parents or the church members could learn how to protect their children, how to educate them.

You have seen the 1995 Awake article. It says parents should go so far to question your ministers even, that it could be a leader in your church, it could be someone you know down your street, it could be neighbor.

Is that a policy of secrecy?

I don't think so.

Those Watchtower articles also said that victims and parents have the absolute right to report this to authorities.

Is that secrecy?

Go report it to the police?

I think not.

Watchtower also has a longstanding policy that child abusers cannot serve as either ministerial servants or elders.

You heard Mr. Shuster testify on behalf of Watchtower. I think he said he's been an elder since 1979, and that policy draft has been in place at least that long. So that's, what, 30 years plus or more, if my math is correct?

Again, the article helped to educate parents and families about child molesters, what methods they use, what parents can do to protect their children, how parents can work with their children so the molesters don't get access to them.

Clearly this is no policy of secrecy.

What the testimony also shows is that the elders in the local congregation deal with many confidential matters in their role as elders. They deal with couples who have had marital problems, with families that have issues.

There is a lot of other issues that come up. And the whole function of the elders in those situations is to provide spiritual guidance, direction, spiritual assistance, all based on the teachings of the Bible.

The relationship between elders and the congregation members has to be based upon trust and confidentiality. That is no different than other religious organizations.

And, indeed, it's just like therapists and counselors, who testified in this case about the issue of trust and confidentiality in their relationships.

Remember Laura Fraser? She testified about trust and confidentiality.

You saw the clip of the psychiatrist Dr. Wolfe down in Downey, down at Kaiser. You recall her testimony too, that was videotaped and presented. She addressed the issue of trust within the relationship with a client.

The bottom line is, if members of the congregation thought elders would disclose their information to the others in the congregation, would those members ever go to the elders again?

The answer, I think, is clearly no.

You can call that Dr. Applewhite testified about that in her testimony, and that's precisely the issue here, is should the elders breach their confidentiality and do certain things?

Also, as of the time this July 1, 1989 letter, confidentiality was already a longstanding Bible-based policy that was needed to protect the privacy of the congregation members.

And let's go to the second page. And if you blowup that highlighted paragraph.

It says:

"The need for elders to maintain a strict confidentiality has been repeatedly stressed."

And then it references the Watchtower of April 1, 1971.

And then it goes to September 1, 1987.

There is also reference to a September 1977. So is this a new policy of confidentiality like Mr. Simons suggests?

This is Bible-based policy, and to suggest that liability can be imposed for a Bible-based policy? That's not what we are here about.

There is also evidence before you that other religious organizations did not undertake educational efforts for families until the Catholic Church crisis was ten, twelve, 15 years ago. But Watchtower was providing educational material in the 1980s.

Watchtower actually published an article on child abuse itself, separate from sex abuse, in the mid-'70s.

Dr. Applewhite testified that Jehovah's Witnesses far exceeded the standard of care for organizations in educating parents and members on child sexual abuse.

She also testified that the congregation of elders did not fall below the standard of care by not informing the congregation members that Kendrick molested his stepdaughter.

Think about it. If you go to the church, and you know, if there is Catholic confessional, what are they supposed to do?

Mr. Simons suggested, "Oh, we removed Mr. Kendrick. He's a child molester."

So you go to Catholic Church. Do you want the priest to stand up and say, "Well, Mr. Kendrick in pew four, stand up, everyone should know he is a child molester."

Does any church do that?

Does any church organization do that?

Does a PTA do that? Go to parent/teacher association at school. Are they going to stand someone up and say, "Oh, stand up. Please, identify yourself as a child abuser."

That just doesn't happen.

What is also interesting here, as I mentioned, the police and Child Protective Services are trained professionals, and they have the same information that the elders did. But they aren't here today, they aren't sitting at the table with us.

The bottom line here is that there is simply no evidence that this July 1, 1989 letter is some policy of secrecy. That's purely Mr. Simons' spin on it. And again, it's a smoke screen by the Plaintiff here to suggest that this July 1, 1989 letter somehow affects this case.

What is the other evidence that even suggests that Watchtower is negligent here, that Plaintiff has satisfied her burden of proof with proving that Watchtower is negligent?

Again, Mr. Kendrick was a rank and file member of the congregation. He wasn't an elder. And we probably beat that to death, but that is a key fact here.

He wasn't an agent of Watchtower when Ms. Conti -- when he sexually abused her. The judge instructed you on that. Mr. Kendrick was not an agent of Watchtower.

Ms. Conti and her lawyer will have you believe that Mr. Kendrick's confession to the elders in November of 1993 creates liability here because they did not announce Mr. Kendrick's sin to the congregation.

What he is suggesting is they should announce, "Oh, by the way, he has been removed, and he did it because he committed the sin of child abuse."

That's what he suggests should have been done.

But remember the role of the elders. They were not police, they were not Child Protective Services. They had no role to protect the public there. The elders were religious leaders within the congregation. Their role was to listen in confidence when Jonathan Kendrick confessed and to assist the families by providing spiritual comfort.

That's the reason they were called to the Kendrick home. And they did their best by opening that meeting with prayer. They had their Bibles with them. They gave spiritual counsel and comfort to the family.

But again, what did they tell Evelyn?

What did they tell Andrea?

You have the absolute right to report this to the authorities.

And within a couple of months that's what they did.

That's not secrecy. That's not negligence.

The elders also took immediate steps. They removed Jonathan Kendrick as a ministerial servant. They announced his removal to the congregation. They monitored him there.

And there is no evidence that anyone in that congregation saw what Ms. Conti said happened there.

No one saw her sitting on Kendricks's lap.

No one saw her being bear hugged against her will by Kendrick, or even with her will.

No one saw a bear hug.

No one saw her leave the Kingdom Hall with Jonathan Kendrick.

Also, it is interesting, I think, about this case. The people most involved with Candace Conti's life in '94, '95, '96, her parents; you have Laura Fraser, her therapist; you have Dana Takamoto, who was her school counselor. We haven't heard from any school teachers. Her grandmother, none of those people suspected she was being abused at that time. And yet the elders are supposed to be responsible? It just doesn't add up.

I submit to you that the elders in this case, whether it is Watchtower or the congregation, should not be held negligent because they asked the congregation, the elders and whom -- the members of the congregation, that they instilled their trust and confidence in them, that the elders should not be held liable because they followed what the Bible states on confidentiality.

The is scriptural reasons for what the elders did here, and that's been explained to you from the witness stand.

Let's turn to the actual claim that Ms. Conti is making here against the local elders. They say the local elders should inform the congregation that Kendrick sinned by inappropriately touching his stepdaughter.

If they had done that, how would the evidence be different here today?

Remember, no one testified that they saw Kendrick give Candace a bear hug.

No one testified that they saw Kendrick put Candace on his lap.

No one testified that they saw Candace leave the Kingdom Hall by herself with Jonathan Kendrick.

No one testified to any of the things she saw. There were indeed nine witnesses who disputed that.

Would other testimony have presented that the elders breached their vow of confidentiality?

Plaintiff would have you speculate about that. But if those witnesses were out there, they would have been here to testify in this trial the last couple of weeks. They weren't.

They had the opportunity to call witnesses to support their case. You can assume because they didn't bring them in, they don't exist.

Let me try to wrap up here so we can move on. I know you are all pretty eager to get into the jury room with this.

Let me address the issue of punitive damages. As the judge advised you during the instructions this morning, Candace Conti seeks punitive damages only against Watchtower.

Have you thought about that?

Why are they not seeking punitive damages against Jonathan Kendrick?

If he did what Candace alleges, these hundreds of incidents of abuse, why would they not want to punish him?

Punitive damages, by their nature, are to punish. But they don't want to punish Jonathan Kendrick?

It must be a theme from that side of the table. We don't want money from him, and we don't want to punish him, even though if he did these vile things to my client. That's what he's saying.

Does that make sense?

Now, the judge instructed you on the burden of proof for award of punitive damages. It is not preponderance of the evidence; it is clear and convincing evidence. It is much higher burden of proof; it's a much higher standard.

And if you recall, Mr. McCabe illustrated the preponderance of the evidence with the scales. Well, if one scale is slightly longer, that is a preponderance, but that is not clear and convincing evidence. It is more than just the judging of the scale on one side. You have to make a fact highly probable. You have to be persuaded that it is, indeed, a fact.

Now, if you decide that Watchtower's conduct caused Candace Conti harm -- again, I don't think you should do that -- but if you do make that finding, then you have to decide that she and her attorney proved by clear and convincing that Watchtower's conduct justifies an award of punitive damages.

But as I discussed, if you decide that Watchtower was not responsible, that Plaintiff, Candace

Conti, has not met her burden of proof, then there is no need to even address the last question on that verdict form.

And that's what I do ask you to do here. There is no finding of negligence on the part of Watchtower here.

But again, turning to punitive damages, if you do get to that issue, there is three things they have to prove. They have to prove, one, that by clear and convincing evidence. That's Number 1.

Two, that Watchtower acted with malice through a managing agent of Watchtower.

So what does that mean?

Proving negligence is not enough.

Also, proving negligence by a mere agent is not enough.

What does that mean? A mere agent?

Well, the local elders that we talked about, Mr. Shuster, those are agents, but they are not managing agents.

The judge instructed you on what a managing agent was. They have to be able to effect corporate policy, create corporate policy. So any suggestion that any of the elders sitting there in that front row, that their conduct could lead to punitive damages is just wrong.

The judge defined the term malice for you. And even as Mr. Simons put that up there, I think in reading that, I think that answers the question for you. Malice means that Watchtower acted with the intent to cause injury in issuing that July 1, 1989 letter.

That's quite a statement. Just a statement makes it sound just absolutely false.

The second element of that: Was Watchtower's conduct despicable and done with a willful and knowing disregard?

It has to be despicable and then "and" going to what Mr. Simons talked about with the willful and knowing disregard.

Now, the judge also defined despicable conduct for you. And, again, you are going to have these instructions in the room with you. But if you get to this point -- again, I don't think you should -- but if you get to this point, look at the instruction.

The judge defined despicable conduct to mean conduct that is so vile, contemptible, that it would be looked down on and despised by reasonable people.

That July 1, 1989 letter, does that meet that?

I think clearly not.

And, again, Mr. Simons made it clear. He relies totally on this July 1, 1989 letter. There is nothing else that he relies on to suggest that this was malice as defined by the judge.

We have looked at that letter. We can go through it again? Again, with time moving on, I am going to try to cut this short. But I don't believe there is any evidence in this case that that letter, even with the preponderance standard, meets the malice standard.

But that's not the standard. It is by clear and convincing evidence, you would have to find by clear and convincing evidence that letter was malicious, it was malice, in the way it was, it was despicable. And the evidence just isn't there. It hasn't been presented to you.

Indeed, I think, the only testimony in that letter was favorable testimony from these folks. No one from the Plaintiffs testified about that letter. It is purely a spin from Mr. Simons.

Just in closing -- well, let me just move to closing, so we can move this on. Mr. Simons is going to have the opportunity to give a rebuttal. He gets the last word. The reason the court procedures have it is the party with the burden of proof gets to have the last word. We can debate whether that is fair or not. But that's what is going to happen.

What you should do when he gives you his rebuttal, think to yourself what questions would Mr. McCabe, what questions would I ask? What information would we have to counter that?

We are not going to be able to get up and talk again after Mr. Simons' rebuttal. So keep those types of things in mind.

Just a few more remarks, as Mr. McCabe mentioned, this case on the Plaintiff's side is about holding the organization responsible for conduct about which it did not know, didn't know what was going on. It didn't happen on its premises; it didn't happen at any organization sponsored activity.

That doesn't just affect this church. It affects other churches, it affects Little League, it affects public schools, it affects Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, Boys and Girls Clubs, you name it. So this case has implications well beyond this.

I would submit to you that holding any organization responsible under these facts just creates a wrong precedent.

Is that the message you want to send to the community?

I don't think it is.

Particularly when you have got a Plaintiff who is in cahoots with the perpetrator, and saying, well, we are just going to try to shovel fault off and shift it over to the organization.

Fifty-one percent. I don't know how that strikes you, but what Mr. Simons is suggesting you do with 51 percent is, "Hell, Mr. Kendrick, you know 49 percent of what you did wasn't your fault."

Does that make sense to you? Telling a child abuser that 49 percent of what he did wasn't his fault?

I think you can send a message clearly that in this case if something happened to Candace Conti, Mr. Kendrick should be a 100 percent at fault.

I ask you to return a zero percent verdict that, again, Watchtower was not negligent, that the congregation was not negligent, and then we can all move on.

Again, I appreciate your time. I know it has been a long drill for you. We are getting to the end of it. Thanks for your attention. God bless.

THE COURT: All right. And the call is my initiative. I am going to allow Mr. Simons to do his rebuttal now. And there is many reasons for that, including just continuity of argument.

I can assure you we have lunch for you. And again, once he is finished, and it is a rebuttal argument, and there are some inherent limitations to that, we are going to swear Hill. He will become your steward and we are going to set you up for lunch.

I need a couple of minutes with our alternates. I need to address you independently. After which you are going to huddle for lunch together without talking about the case until we put the twelve in the room to commence deliberation. Again, we all have that understanding.

Mr. Simons, to you for rebuttal argument.

MR. SIMONS: Yes, your Honor. May we inquire if anyone needs a quick restroom break?

THE COURT: Would anyone like to take a five-minute break?

Let's take a five-minute comfort break.

Back at 1:20. We will be ready to roll.

(Break taken)

THE COURT: All right. Mr. Simons rebuttal on behalf of the Plaintiff.

REBUTTAL ARGUMENT BY MR. SIMONS

MR. SIMONS: Thank you. Ladies and Gentlemen, this is my opportunity to reply to the arguments that you have just heard from my colleagues on the defense side.

And first of all, let me say that I am not offended by the kind of, what you might say, attack-type of arguments that we have heard, and particularly once you focus on me, because I understand and I think you should understand that that is part of the give and take of our system.

And it does give you the opportunity to hear everybody's perspective candidly so that you can get a better understanding of what the real dynamics are on the case.

But I want to talk a little bit about the secret deal. Now, first of all, I always thought if it is a secret deal, nobody knows about it. But if the lawyers all know about it, it is not really a secret deal.

But let's go a little further than that.

First of all, let's take a look at Exhibit 18/106. And this is the letter about Jonathan Kendrick sent out to the Oakley Congregation in '09 about Mr. Lamerdin and Mr. Clarke after they met with Candace Conti and she talked a little bit about what the things were that were on her mind, and in particular if we go down to the paragraph there at the very bottom of the page that is almost all blacked out, her biggest concern seems to be protecting other children from harm.

That was her biggest concern in 2009.

But the reason that letter is interesting is because, as his Honor pointed out, when we had the testimony about the secret agreement that Mr. Kendrick had defaulted on this lawsuit, he had failed to appear and lost all right to be part of the lawsuit, and wasn't in the lawsuit at all until January of this year when, as our May trial date approaches, suddenly out of Oakley comes Mr. Kendrick saying, "I want to have my default vacated, set aside. I want the right to appear in this case and to confront all of the witnesses."

Now, who put him up to that? We don't know. But there he was. And it was quickly decided by Ms. Conti that we were not about to let this case and the important witnesses who had things to say be hijacked by Jonathan Kendrick.

And so the important part of the agreement, if we could see it, is right here. In exchange for not collecting any money against Mr. Kendrick, there is no evidence that he has any, there is evidence he lost his house, but no evidence he has any. Neither he nor his attorneys shall in any way harass, molest, intimidate, contact or annoy Plaintiff, and not only the Plaintiff, but also Evelyn Kendrick, Andrea, Claudia, Kathleen and Carolyn Martinez.

In other words, Mr. Kendrick was pushed out of this case so that you could hear the truth from these witnesses without being subject to intimidation.

And where was he pushed to? He was pushed to the Fremont Police Department where his plan to stalk whoever he was going to stalk here could be stalked. And that's where the case is, for active investigation.

And so all this secret agreement stuff is really a smoke screen to distract us from what the case has always been about, and that's the policy with regard to known childhood sexual abusers.

So on that question: There were two words that I did not hear from my colleague, Mr. McCabe. One is "field" and the other is "service." He never spoke of the words at all.

And field service is where they are out in the neighborhoods. And Candace was out with Mr. Kendrick. And that's where he got the best opportunity to abuse her.

Now, that is actually related to the Jehovah's Witnesses because field service is what they do. But Mr. Schnack, who did address this subject said, but Carolyn Martinez said she never went to field service without her parents, and he showed you a book and her testimony about going to the field service meetings before they go out into the field.

Here's what was not mentioned in that particular part of the argument.

Here's Carolyn Martinez:

"And you saw Jonathan Kendrick and Candace Conti together in field service?"

"Yes."

"And more than once?"

"Yes."

"And that was during the time that Candace was still living with her parents? They were married together?"

"Yes."

Well, someone did see something. We heard all the things that people said they didn't see. But we also heard, Number 1, that nobody had any reason to look.

Why would you be looking at Jonathan Kendrick out of all the people in the congregation?

No one knows he is an abuser except a few people at the time, and New York.

So all the nice women who came and testified:

"Did you have any reason to keep an eye on Jonathan Kendrick?"

"No. Just seemed like another nice man from another nice family," I think one them said, "in the congregation."

And what about not seeing things like, oh, the stuff that Claudia Francis testified about?

You know, if somebody had seen something, we heard from Mr. McCabe, they would have said something.

Well, yeah, but remember Claudia Francis told us at the end of her testimony that it was only after she learned that he had molested Andrea that she then "connected the dots." Those were the words in the question.

And so it is not really fair to say nobody saw anything, therefore, it didn't happen. Nobody looked for anything because they did not have the information that they needed to be able to see what was in front of them.

We have heard a lot of argument about confessions. Actually, what we heard in the testimony was this was not a confession. Kendrick lied to them. He didn't confess anything. They didn't believe him. That's not a confession.

This isn't in some booth like a -- maybe an analogy of a Catholic priest. This is five people. And it's not a confession. And if it was, something that had the privilege attached to it, it wouldn't be in evidence.

But the instruction we reviewed earlier said all the evidence before you, you may consider. The judge is the gatekeeper here on this issue. And so that argument justifies you of the right to listen to the evidence and consider it, and that's what you should do.

Now, it was also said that it is just like Laura Fraser. But remember what Laura Fraser said about her very first meeting with Candace Conti.

And she said:

"I told her right at the very beginning. There are some things I can't keep in confidence. And if you tell me about sexual abuse, I can't keep that confidential."

So not everything that is said is confidential. And, in fact, "confidential" is, in this case, an excuse to keep secret child sex abuse.

We have heard every major religion, from Dr. Salter, about Methodists, and all the others had adopted resolutions by this time about transparency and reporting and not keeping child sex abuse a secret, except one. And that's the defendants, whose policies are before you now.

We heard that the police should have gone around and done something. Well, you know, Mr. Shuster said it best. He said the Jehovah's Witnesses congregation is like family, and it is a family of people who are together and close and spend a lot of their time together.

The police aren't part of that family. Child Protective Services isn't part of that family. It is not their job to go around and warn the congregation. The congregation already knew.

Officer Davila said the congregation already knew, he knew all the elders knew. Why did he know? He didn't have any evidence from them. He had sufficient evidence to do his job, and he did his job.

The people who did not do right, who did not take the responsibility, and still will not take the responsibility for letting a known child molester in a small family, congregation, get a second kid. That's the folks who are before us in this case.

We heard a little bit about Exhibit 1, and I went through it in such detail. And, again, I just want to raise a question that wasn't answered. Why, if this was nothing secret and nothing new, and just sort of a restatement of the old rules we always had and everyone always knows.

And why, Number 1, is it about lawsuits, about twelve times.

And why, Number 2, is it to be kept locked in the safe, confidential, no one is supposed to see it?

If it is just the average thing that we all deal with, why is it top secret?

It just doesn't make sense. It is like what we said about Mr. Kendrick's supposed confession. He said it was inadvertent, but he was feeling like he needed to confess it.

Why would you confess to something that's inadvertent? They don't fit together.

This doesn't fit together, and that's because the shine that is being put on it isn't true.

What we are seeking to do in this case is to impose responsibility on the people -- on an organization that knew of important information and didn't act on it.

The instruction I went through with you is very clear on what the duty is.

The instruction I went through with you is very clear on what you should consider in terms of the duty.

The instruction that we went through is very clear on what you don't consider.

And all you have to do is read and follow those instructions and apply the evidence, and you will find the responsibility on an organization that refuses to join with every other organization in the country and expose known child molesters before they molest again.

That's what our case is about. That's what our case is about from day one. That's what our case was about before there even was a case. And that's what our case would be about when you have completed your deliberations.

Let me see 60/29 please.

Here is one of the Awakes.

"Overwhelming, damaging and humiliating assault."

Let's see the other quote, please.

"The helpless child cannot run, dare not scream, and dare not tell anyone, but yet she may have to face her abuser every day and act as if nothing happened."

That's the evidence in this case. That, from Awake Magazine, is what happened to Candace Conti.

And Ladies and Gentlemen, to say that it has nothing to do with us when the one piece of information that could have protected her was withheld from her parents.

And believe me, since Kathy Conti had been abused herself, there is no way if she knew about that, she would have ever let her kid anywhere near Jonathan Kendrick. And that's before she became so dysfunctional.

To blame her in '95 and '96 when the abuse was going on and as she said couldn't take care of herself, that's attacking the victim and her family.

To say, well, Mr. Kendrick's house, he was still living Andrea and Evelyn. Well, they were living pretty separate lives, as we heard that Mr. Kendrick knew just how to get them out of the house, start a fight, get them out of the house, he knew when he could bring a kid over here. He knew when the house was empty.

As Candace said, she thought they were already divorced. Evelyn and Andrea were never there. So to take that kind of shot at the victim, that's attacking the victim.

I think in every way that we have heard the numbers of times it happened, numbers of perceptions how this happened and when it happened, when there is corroborating evidence, and we heard people who saw things, but didn't have the information. It is all just a way to attack the victim rather than take responsibility for what happened, and should never have happened, and should never happen again. Thank you.

THE COURT: Madame Clerk, would you swear our attendant, please.

(Attendant Mr. Hill Martin was sworn)

THE COURT: All right. Mr. Attendant, will you take our jury, and you can all stay for a minute, and I will get you down for lunch in three minutes.

(Whereupon, the following proceedings were heard outside the presence of jurors)

THE COURT: All right. To our alternate jurors, please be seated.

First of all, all the juror admonitions in terms of not discussing the case between yourselves, as a set of alternate jurors or with the jurors, particularly in a moment you will have lunch.

It is my rule that -- let me say this, because I want to say it to all twelve jurors whenever they return a verdict. Each of you was most impressive in terms of your diligence and attention throughout this trial. I always try to walk in other people's shoes. I know with alternate jurors, sometimes it is more difficult because there is a sense you are in a little more different zone.

But each you was very impressive in terms of your commitment to listening to the evidence and being in a position to judge as a juror.

I want to be very clear in terms of history, and I believe in history, oftentimes we need to replace jurors. So what I do in this department is give you an option. Certainly you are going to have lunch with the jury in a moment. You can be at the courthouse if you would like to be close in the event you are needed.

Or alternatively, if I can have your assurance, if you give me a method of contacting you, whether it is by handheld device or telephone, and that you can return to court within 30 minutes, then I will set you free for that period of time so that you can get back to some normalcy in your everyday life, as long as we have an understanding if I were need to call you that I would be able to get you back here in a reasonably short period of time.

I generally use 30 minutes. If it is 45, we can work with it. But we have 12 jurors, we have the lawyers, we have a number of interested witnesses and participants otherwise here.

So the choice is each of yours whether -- if you are around the courthouse, by the way, we have some very interesting trials going on here. You can do that as long as I know where you are. Or alternatively, go back to your lives and your daily circumstances.

I can assure each of you if you choose the latter course, that we will call you and make sure you are brought up to speed as to what the jury does in terms of rendering a verdict. I think common courtesy dictates that.

So I can assure you that were you to choose to leave and go otherwise, that we can keep in contact with you and make sure you are fully informed as to what the ultimate result is.

So what would you like to do? Of course, we have this afternoon. The jury can deliberate as long as it takes. I am not the steward of that.

ALTERNATE JUROR: I could be available because I live eight minutes away in a car, 15 minutes on a bus. I can hang around. How long would I be hanging around for?

THE COURT: As long as you want, as long as I can contact you.

ALTERNATE JUROR: But today, not tomorrow, just any time?

THE COURT: Give me your number and then you are fine.

And then gentlemen, what would you guys like to do?

ALTERNATE JUROR: You can call me. I can still be here.

THE COURT: And sir, what would you like to do.

ALTERNATE JUROR: I will just be around here.

THE COURT: Okay. Why don't the two of you come on up here and give my clerk the contact numbers, and then you can keep in contact with Hill as to where you are going to go, and otherwise go and enjoy your lunch.

(Proceedings were adjourned at 3:47 p.m.)

JUNE 12, 2012 8:36 A.M.

PROCEEDINGS

THE COURT: All right. Back on the record that the matter of Conti versus The Watchtower Bible and Tract Society New York, Inc. et al. The jury has -- first of all, Mr. Huey is your foreperson.

He has requested the court as follows:

> "On May 29th, Elders Michael Clarke and Gary Abrahamson were directly examined by the Plaintiff's attorney. The congregation sent a letter, Plaintiff's Number 9 letter, from North -- and then Congregation Body of Elders -- The Watchtower Body of Elders for direction and guidance.
> What were the documented and/or undocumented responses and instructions from the Watchtower Body of Elders to the North Congregation?"

I haven't had a chance to research this. I recall the letter in December of 1993. Was there not a response letter that's in evidence?

MR. SIMONS: The response letter is not in evidence because after the redactions there is really nothing left of it.

MR. SCHNACK: I think the answer is "no, it is not in evidence."

MR. SIMONS: So, no, it is not in evidence then.

THE COURT: Okay. So -- I have got my shoulders squared up. Nice work, Mr. Simons. So let's go back.

And I will go to the Plaintiff first. What would be your suggestion as to how to respond to that request?

MR. SIMONS: Your Honor, there is testimony from Mr. Abrahamson at page 90, of the transcript, line 25, to page 91, line 18.

THE COURT: You're a little quick, Mr. Simons, this morning. So page 90.

MR. SIMONS: Ninety, line 25, to 91, line 18. And there is testimony from Mr. Clarke on the subject at page 183 of the transcript, line 24 through -- page 184 line 5; 183, line 24 to 184, line 5; and also from page 190 from lines 4 through 8.

THE COURT: Defense counsel, any thoughts?

MR. SCHNACK: There is no letter. There is no exhibit. We haven't seen the testimony.

THE COURT: Well, you got me centered. I was just going by memory, non-admissibility as to letter of December of 1993 is my recollection.

The way I would answer it is to say that -- I would refer them that there is testimony regarding the same without necessarily directing onto whom. That may be the subject of read back if they were to request it.

Now, is there any objection if I answer it that way?

And I will give the defense a little time to take a look at that testimony that they asked for because -- you know, I have already given instruction how to ask for a read back, if they have a witness in mind or a specific topic or whatnot.

But, if you would like, we can -- certainly Mr. Simons could help direct you to the quotes he gave you.

MR. SCHNACK: If we could see it, that would be great.

MR. SIMONS: Yes. Sure. I have got it right here.

THE COURT: But the way I would answer it is to say, there has been testimony about the body of elders' reply which may be requested on read back.

MR. SCHNACK: I would like to see whether there was testimony first, so...

THE COURT: Fair enough. So let's take a moment.

(Off the record)

THE COURT: Back on the record. I would reply as to documented responses, that there are no documented responses in evidence. Do we agree on that?

MR. SIMONS: Yes.

MR. SCHNACK: Yes.

THE COURT: All right. Now, there's the second prong as to whether there is undocumented responses and instructions; i.e., testimony as to how I will interpret that.

So I have not seen the referenced testimony from Mr. Simons to defense counsel.

MR. SCHNACK: Your Honor, Mr. Simons referenced testimony to Mr. Abrahamson on page 90, line 25, to page 91, line 18.

That is not responsive.

But the testimony he referenced from Mr. Clarke at page 183, line 24 to page 184, line 5; and on page 190 lines 4 to 8 is responsive.

THE COURT: Mr. Simons. Do you agree or disagree as to --

MR. SIMONS: Well, agree with the part where they agreed with me. I disagree on the Abrahamson testimony, because he says -- the question is:

"Why were you reporting this to Watchtower

New York?"

And the answer was:

"To get direction."

And then:

"In all of your work as an elder that involves anything in this type of matter, you would get your direction and instruction from New York. Correct?

And the answer was:

"In a lot of these cases that legal matters are involved, we are always encouraged to call the legal department because how could we know all the laws?

And the testimony continues:

"You said you were encouraged to call New York. Were you required?"

And he said:

"You might put it that way."

THE COURT: You were what?

MR. SIMONS: Required. He said "encouraged."

And I said:

"You actually were required to call New York?"

And he said:

"You might put it that way."

I said:

"I didn't put it that way. Do you agree?"

And he said:

"I agree that you put it that way."

And I said:

"Do you agree that you were required to call New York?"

And he said: "Yes."

MR. SCHNACK: So the difference, I think, is this conversation is about calling New York. And the question comes from the jury about a document.

THE COURT: Well, it's not. It says undocumented also.

MR. SCHNACK: But an undocumented response, It says, not that the call was made.

THE COURT: I think we are splitting hairs a little bit on that. Give me a second and I will tell you how I'm going to respond to this.

And, again, I'm not looking at the written terms, that was testimony from Messrs. Clarke and Abrahamson?

MR. SIMONS: Yes. Actually, Clarke is the one we agreed on. Abrahamson is the one --

THE COURT: There are no documented responses in evidence as to undocumented responses.

Messrs. Clarke and Abrahamson testified about saying, and you can request read back as related and the instructions given which say person, content and whatnot.

MR. SCHNACK: Your Honor, perhaps the way to short-circuit, just so we don't have to come back in an hour and have that read back. They're so short. Why not read the responses -- have the court reporter read the responses to the jury?

THE COURT: That's fine with this judge. Now, that goes to process as to how we do read back. And do you have any druthers?

What I generally do, in a request like this, as long as we agreed as to what you read to the jury directly, if you agree as to what she will read.

MR. SIMONS: I find it easier for the court to take the court reporter to the jury rather than take the jury to the court reporter.

THE COURT: I can't have that every which way. And if it is really sophisticated stuff and content is really at issue, I will do that. But on a request like this where we have been provided very specific read back, I have no objection.

Any objection to madame reporter reading the responses referenced? I wanted to make the record right now as to reference so it is clean, because I know that there is translation in page and lines.

MR. SCHNACK: That was going to be my point that. It really needs to be specific.

THE COURT: We're going to do that right now, because of the translational stuff. So I would reply otherwise now as follows:

> "There are no documented responses in evidence. Madame reporter will read back the germane responses of Messrs. Clarke and Abrahamson."

All right. Now, part of the burden is now on you for a moment, madame court reporter, to be specific as to the -- what you are going to read as to Messrs. Abrahamson and Clarke.

(Brief break)

THE COURT: Back on the record for a minute. I'm looking at the hard copy that was provided to each and all of us.

As to the Clarke testimony it starts with:

> "A. We felt the important thing was that he was an admitted child abuser. He touched his stepdaughter in a sexual way."
>
> Q. And you communicated that?"

A. In a letter, yes."

I think the context is okay. Of course I can't say what is ahead of that.

MR. SCHNACK: That's fine. And that would be on this hard copy, page 190, line 1.

THE COURT: That's up on the top left.

MR. SIMONS: Yeah, lines 1 through 8. Line 9, then becomes a different subject matter.

MS. KRAETSCH: Your Honor, this is page 189.

THE COURT: All right. So let's keep talking for a minute. I have another page here.

MR. SIMONS: I have taken out the pages reduced it to five pages with the testimony highlighted. Maybe that will help us. It is highlighted for our reference.

THE COURT: Why don't you show it to defense counsel, because we are making progress, belatedly.

(Brief Break)

THE COURT: All right. Back on the record. We have taken a bit of time to assess testimony of Messrs. Clarke and Abrahamson in response to the jury foreperson's question. As to Clarke's testimony, it is my understanding it is agreed that Madame Reporter may read Mr. Clarke's testimony to the jury as follows:

"Q. And because of that, you took certain actions afterwards?

A. Yes. We advised our branch office and told them our position was to remove him as a ministerial servant and immediately responded. They confirmed our assessment and it was announced that he was no longer a ministerial servant."

That's the first aspect of the Clarke testimony.

Second prong of the Clarke testimony:

"Q. The fact that he minimized it or lied about the nature and extent of it, was that important for you to communicate to Watchtower?

A. We felt the important thing was that he was an admitted child abuser. He touched his stepdaughter in a sexual way.

Q. And you communicated that?

A. In a letter? Yes.

Q. And The Watchtower did respond to the letter and he was removed as ministerial servant?

A. Correct. And we announced that."

That is my understanding that that's the agreed upon Clarke testimony; is that correct?

MR. SIMONS: That's correct.

THE COURT: And, Madame Reporter -- and, actually, counsel have organized, in order, the pages and the testimony. It is yellow highlighted testimony starting "As presented to you."

Going on to the Abrahamson testimony.

"Q. Why were you reporting this to Watchtower New York?

A. To get direction.

Q. And in all of your work as an elder that involves anything in this type of matter, you would get your direction and instruction from New York?

A. Correct. In a lot of these cases that legal matters are involved, we are always encouraged to call the Legal Department because how could we know all the laws. And the laws change from state to state. But our Legal Department could help us through this.

Q. And you used the word "encouraged," but, actually, you are required to call New York.

A. You might put it that way.

Q. I did put it that way. Do you agree?

A. I agree you put it that way.

Q. Do you agree that you were required to call New York?

A. Yes."

THE COURT: And that is the Abrahamson testimony. Correct?

MR. McCABE: Yes. You could put it that way.

THE COURT: All right. We have worked through that.

So what I'm going to ask you to do, Madame Reporter, is, I'm going to hand you these so you can see them, but you can probably just read it from your machine, whatever you want to do. But we have them lined up person-to-person highlighted testimony. Certainly, anything that has an "X through it is redacted material.

MR. SCHNACK: I have no objection to her reading it from the page, your Honor, just to be safe.

MR. SIMONS: And I agree.

THE COURT: I have no objection either. We can agree that we agree on that.

MR. SCHNACK: You could put it that way.

THE COURT: All right. We are off the record.

(Off the record from 9:17 to 2:56)

MR. McCABE: Back on the record. All counsel are here. The jury requested Reference Table A of 3904 Casey, (B), and we agree that it should be included, I believe. Correct?

MR. SIMONS: We do.

MR. McCABE: Yes. It is hard to read, your Honor. I wonder if we should copy it off the book.

MR. SIMONS: At the risk of being technically dinosauric, I agree.

THE COURT: Okay. Hill, here it is.

MR. SCHNACK: Your Honor, the reporter did not read the entire record.

THE COURT: Apparently Madame Reporter did send me an email, but I was writing decisions so I wasn't looking for it.

MR. SCHNACK: My understanding is she sent us the entire testimony, but the jury asked her to stop at a certain point. And I understand you did stop at that point; is that correct?

THE COURT: Define what point we started and what point we stopped.

MR. SCHNACK: Are we on the record? This is one of the problems with not having it read back in the courtroom is that the court reporter makes decisions based on what the jury wants, not what your Honor wanted to decide.

THE COURT: We reacted to "We want to hear Dr. Ponton's testimony." It wasn't limited in terms of substance or terms. So were I to get that request again, I might bring the foreperson out just to see if there was any more specific, but we marked what we read to the jury for record purposes.

(Proceedings adjourned at 3:30 p.m.)

PROCEEDINGS

THE COURT: To our jury foreperson, has the jury reached a verdict?

JUROR: Yes, we have your Honor.

THE COURT: Would you be kind enough to secure the verdict?

COURT ATTENDANT: Here is the verdict as presented.

THE COURT: Madame clerk, would you please read the verdict.

THE CLERK: Ladies and Gentlemen of the jury, you will now listen to the reading of the verdict, omitting the title of the court and cause.

Special verdict.

Number 1: Did Jonathan Kendrick sexually batter Candace Conti?

Answer: Yes.

Number 2: Was the sexual battery by Jonathan Kendrick a cause of harm to Candace Conti?

Answer: Yes.

Number 3: Was Gary Abrahamson as an agent of Watchtower and the North Fremont Congregation negligent?

Answer: Yes.

Was Michael Clarke, as an agent of Watchtower and the North Fremont Congregation negligent?

Answer: Yes.

Were the elders in the Service Department as agents of Defendant, Watchtower, negligent?

Answer: Yes.

Number 4: For each person or persons who received a yes answer in Question 3, answer the following:

Was Gary Abrahamson's negligence as an agent of Watchtower and the North Fremont Congregation a substantial factor in causing harm to Plaintiff, Candace Conti?

Answer: Yes.

Was Michael Clarke's negligence as an agent of Watchtower and the North Fremont Congregation a substantial factor in causing harm to Plaintiff, Candace Conti?

Answer: Yes.

Were the elders in the Service Department's negligence, as agents of Watchtower, a substantial factor in causing harm to Plaintiff, Candace Conti?

Answer: Yes.

Number 5: What are Plaintiff, Candace Conti's total damages?

A: Future counseling and therapy, $130,000.

B: Non-economic damages, $6,870,000.

Total of A and B $7 million.

Number 6: What percentage of responsibility for Plaintiff, Candace Conti's harm do you assign to the following?

Insert a percentage only for those who received yes answers to Questions 2 and 4.

Jonathan Kendrick, 60 percent.

Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Incorporated, 27 percent.

North Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses Fremont, California, 13 percent.

For a total of 100 percent.

Number 7: Did you find by clear and convincing evidence that any of the negligent conduct of Watchtower that was a substantial factor in causing harm to Plaintiff, Candace Conti, was engaged in with malice or by managing agent of Defendant Watchtower?

Answer: Yes.

Signed, Presiding Juror, Hugh Huey, dated June 13, 2012.

THE COURT: Mr. Huey, is that the verdict of the jury?

JUROR: Yes, your Honor.

THE COURT: Would any counsel wish to have the jury polled?

MR. McCABE: Yes, your Honor.

MR. SCHNACK: Yes, your Honor.

THE COURT: All right. Let's do it collectively, rather than one-by-one.

But as I explained to you in the original instructions, we are going to ask how jurors voted. And as part of the process, to the extent the clerk asked the question as to who voted yes, please raise your hands so we can calculate that, and then we will go question-to-question.

We are going to poll, effectively, each of you through raising your hands.

Okay. All right. Madame Clerk.

THE CLERK: As to Question Number 1: Did Jonathan Kendrick sexually batter Candace Conti?

Please raise your hand if you answered yes.

(Jurors raised hands)

THE COURT: All right. The record should reflect as to Question Number 1, 12 jurors voted yes.

THE CLERK: Number 2: Was the sexual battery by Jonathan Kendrick a cause of harm to Candace Conti?

If you answered yes, please raise your hand.

(Jurors raised hands)

THE CLERK: Twelve.

THE COURT: And the record should reflect, the jury voted 12 yes to Question Number 2.

THE CLERK: Number 3: Was Gary Abrahamson as an agent of Watchtower and the North Fremont Congregation negligent?

If you answered yes, please raise your hand.

(Jurors raised hands)

THE COURT: All right. It appears that 11 jurors voted yes to that.

Do we have one no vote on that?

JUROR: Yes.

THE COURT: Okay. So 11 to 1 vote by the jury. Okay.

THE CLERK: Was Michael Clarke, as an agent of Watchtower and the North Fremont Congregation, negligent?

If you answered yes, please raise your hand.

(Jurors raised hands)

THE CLERK: 11 to 1.

THE COURT: All right. Let me just confirm. One no vote answer?

JUROR: Yes.

THE COURT: All right. Thank you.

THE CLERK: Were the elders in the Service Department, as agents of Defendant, Watchtower, negligent?

If you answered yes, raise your hand.

(Jurors raised hands)

THE CLERK: 11 to 1.

THE COURT: And it was one no?

JUROR: Yes.

THE COURT: Thank you.

THE CLERK: Number 4: For each person or persons who received a yes answer in Question 3, answer the following:

Was Gary Abrahamson's negligence as an agent of Watchtower and the North Fremont Congregation a substantial factor in causing harm to Plaintiff, Candace Conti?

If you answered yes, please raise your hand.

(Jurors raised hands)

THE CLERK: 11 to 1.

THE COURT: And again, one no vote.

Sir, one no vote?

JUROR: I didn't vote.

THE COURT: Okay. So one abstained?

THE CLERK: Was Michael Clarke's negligence, as an agent of Watchtower and the North Fremont Congregation, a substantial factor in causing harm to Plaintiff, Candace Conti?

If you answered yes, please raise your hand.

(Jurors raised hands)

THE CLERK: 11 to 1.

THE COURT: Juror, did you abstain or no?

JUROR: I didn't vote.

THE COURT: No?

JUROR: Because it is not required.

THE COURT: Okay.

THE CLERK: Were the elders in the Service Department's negligence as agents of Watchtower a substantial factor in causing harm to Plaintiff, Candace Conti?

If you answered yes, please raise your hand.

(Jurors raised hands)

THE CLERK: 11 to 1.

Number 5: What are Plaintiff, Candace Conti's total damages?

Total: $7 million.

If that's correct, please raise your hand.

JUROR: We have a question about that.

THE COURT: Okay.

JUROR: By majority, the jury did vote and agree upon $7 million.

THE COURT: Okay.

JUROR: But if there were others who actually voted for a different amount, how would you like for us to answer?

THE COURT: We will treat that as a no. But in terms of $7 million, how many voted for $7 million?

(Jurors raised hands)

THE COURT: Okay.

THE CLERK: 9 to 3.

MR. SCHNACK: Can we see the hands again?

THE COURT: Just get them up so there is no question.

(Jurors raised hands)

THE COURT: Thank you.

THE CLERK: Number 6: What percentage of responsibility for Plaintiff, Candace Conti's harm do you assign to the following:

Insert a percentage only for those who received yes answers to Questions 2 and 4.

Jonathan Kendrick, 60 percent.

(Jurors raised hands)

THE CLERK: 11 to 1.

THE COURT: Okay.

THE CLERK: Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Incorporated, 27 percent.

(Jurors raised hands)

THE COURT: Ten votes for.

THE CLERK: North Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses Fremont, California, 13 percent.

(Jurors raised hands)

THE CLERK: 10 to 2.

THE COURT: Correct.

THE CLERK: Number 7: Did you find by clear and convincing evidence that any of the negligent conduct of Watchtower that was a substantial factor in causing harm to Plaintiff, Candace Conti, was engaged in with malice by a managing agent of Defendant, Watchtower?

If you answered yes, please raise your hand.

(Jurors raised hands)

THE CLERK: 10 to 2.

THE COURT: Okay. Did you ask about the economic damage, $130,000?

Did we take care of that?

How many voted for the economic damages of $130,000? Can I have hands on that?

MR. SCHNACK: That wasn't asked. Future.

THE COURT: I didn't think it was asked. That's why I'm asking.

Okay. Let's go back in time, because I was just picking up as to whether it had been asked.

I believe the economic damages was $130,000.

Those of you who voted for $130,000 can you raise your hands please?

(Jurors raised hands)

THE COURT: All right. And that was 12 hands.

Can I have counsel up here for a moment.

(Sidebar discussion)

THE COURT: All right, to the jury, I want a show of hands, if I might, as to those who voted for $6,870,000 in non-economic damages.

If I could have a show of hands.

(Jurors raised hands)

THE COURT: Let's see that appears to be 9 to 3 for the record.

All right. Let me address the jury.

In light of your verdict, we need a little bit more help from you in terms of how you answered the last question. It will be a -- by a series of orders, I have made a very -- well, we will certainly be within what I told you in terms of being done with this case by the 15th.

Because of the nature and length of the deliberations that you have just gone through, I'm going to again meet with counsel, and there is going to be -- I hasten to use this term -- a mini trial .

And because you are the jury and just rendered the verdict and you answered the last question that the fashion that you did, there will be a presentation here tomorrow.

And it has to be you because you are the jury. You are the jury for this matter.

In light of the nature and the length of the deliberations to this portion of the verdict, I'm going to ask that you arrive here at 10:00 tomorrow morning.

In the meantime, again, I will be working with counsel to fashion the proceeding contextually within the framework of a mini trial.

I expect the case to be finished this week in terms of what I told you originally. I need to work with counsel a little bit on the detail, but I'm going to request each of you to be here at 10:00 tomorrow morning, and we will work through the course of the rest of the day to assure a presentation in a mini trial tomorrow.

I will look forward to seeing each you each of you in the morning. With the understanding that, again, I have been doing much of the work outside, and I will continue to do so with the view that this case will be presented to you tomorrow.

So thank you all for your time, and I will look forward to see seeing you at 10:00.

THE CLERK: Your Honor, the verdict has been recorded.

THE COURT: Thank you, Madame Clerk.

(Proceedings were adjourned at 3:09 p.m.)

TRIAL COURT PROCEEDINGS 22

ARGUMENT 24

I. DEFENDANTS' SPECIAL RELATIONSHIPS WITH PLAINTIFF AND KENDRICK IMPOSED A DUTY TO PROTECT PlAINTIFF; IN ANY EVENT, THEY COMMITTED ACTUAL *MIS*FEASANCE BY ASSIGNING HER TO FIELD SERVICE WITH KENDRICK. 24

A. Standard Of Review. 24

B. Regardless Of Whether Defendants Owed An Affirmative Duty To Protect Plaintiff, They Committed Misfeasance By Assigning Plaintiff To Perform Field Service With Kendrick. ... 25

C. Defendants' Special Relationships With Plaintiff And Kendrick Imposed On Them A Duty To Protect Plaintiff. 27

1. There was substantial evidence that defendants exerted custody or control over plaintiff. 28

2. There was substantial evidence defendants took charge of Kendrick. 30

3. Defendants' cases are inapposite. 31

D. The Imposition Of A Duty To Protect Plaintiff Is Also Supported By Application Of The Rowland v. Christian Factors. 33

1. Forseeability of harm. 34

2. Degree of certainty that plaintiff suffered harm. 35

3. Closeness of the connection between the harm and defendants' conduct. 36

4. Moral blame. 37

5. Policy of preventing future harm. 37

6. Social and financial burdens. 37

7. Societal consequences. 38

II. IMPOSING A DUTY TO WARN DOES NOT VIOLATE THE CONSTITUTION. 38

A. The 1993 Report Was Not A Confidential Or Spiritual Communication. 39

1. Standard of review. 39

2. Substantial evidence established the report was not confidential. 39

B. Imposing A Duty To Warn Of Kendrick's Admitted Prior Acts Would Not Violate His Constitutional Rights. 44

III. THE INSTRUCTIONS ON DUTY TO WARN, THE MANDATORY REPORTING STATUTE, AND ALLOCATION OF FAULT TO OTHERS WERE NOT PREJUDICIALLY ERRONEOUS. 46

A. Standard Of Review. 46

B. The Duty-To-Warn Instruction Was Not Erroneous And Even If It Was The Error Was Waived And Was Harmless. 46

1. The instruction was properly phrased. 47

2. In any event, any defect in the instruction was waived by defendants' failure to request a clarifying instruction. 47

3. Moreover, because it was undisputed that defendants gave no warning at all, any error in failing to instruct on the scope of an adequate warning was obviously harmless. 48

C. The "Mandated Reporter" Instructional Error Is Actually A Claim Of Evidentiary Error That Was Invited By Watchtower, Waived By The Congregation, And Was Harmless. 49

D. The Evidence Was Insufficient To Permit The Jury To Allocate Fault To Law Enforcement Agencies Or Plaintiff's Parents. 53

1. Defendants' burden of proof. 53

2. There was no evidence plaintiff's parents had actual knowledge of Kendrick's propensity to abuse children, which is required for imposition of a duty. 54

3. There was no evidence of a special relationship that would support imposition of a duty on the law enforcement agencies. 56

IV. THERE IS NO EVIDENTIARY OR CONSTITUTIONAL BASIS TO VACATE OR FURTHER REDUCE THE PUNITIVE DAMAGE AWARD. 59

A. Substantial Evidence Established Watchtower Was Guilty Of Malice In Keeping Kendrick's Abuse Secret And In Assigning Plaintiff To Field Service With A Known Child Molester..... 59

1. Standard of review. 59

2. Trial court proceedings. 59

3. Substantial evidence supported the finding of malice. 60

B. The Remitted Punitive Damage Award Was Not Excessive And Did Not Violate Due Process Standards. 65

1. Standard of review. 65

2. The jury was properly permitted to consider that the harm to plaintiff resulted from a national policy; the punitive damage award was not based on harm to persons other than plaintiffs. 66

3. The reprehensibility of Watchtower's conduct amply justified the 3:1 punitive-to-compensatory damages ratio. 67

V. DEFENDANTS' FAILURE TO FOLLOW THE RULES OF COURT PREJUDICES THEIR APPEAL. 69

INTRODUCTION

Plaintiff Jane Doe (Candace Conti) was nine years old when the elders of defendant North Fremont Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses ("Congregation") repeatedly assigned her to participate with Jonathan Kendrick, a man known to them as a child molester, in the Congregation's door-to-door ministry known as "field service." For nearly two years, Kendrick took advantage of this opportunity, taking Candace to his home where he repeatedly sexually abused her.

Before Candace was abused the Congregation elders and the national Jehovah's Witnesses organization, defendant Watchtower New York ("Watchtower"), had actual knowledge that Kendrick had sexually abused at least one child. In 1993, Kendrick's wife Evelyn and his 13-year-old stepdaughter Andrea told the elders Kendrick had molested Andrea, placing his hands under her clothing when he thought she was asleep. The elders blamed Evelyn for this, telling her she was not performing her "wifely duties."

Despite knowing the risk Kendrick posed to other children in the Congregation, Watchtower, pursuant to its national policy embodied in Exhibit 1 (8 AA 1973), instructed the Congregation to keep Kendrick's molestation secret. The elders nevertheless continued to allow Kendrick to participate with children in all Congregation activities—including field service.

Ignoring all contrary evidence, defendants minimize their misconduct. They argue they had no special relationship with Candace and hence owed no affirmative duty to protect her. However, regardless of whether defendants owed an affirmative duty to protect plaintiff, their conduct in actively assigning her to participate in field service with a man they knew to be a child molester constituted a *mis*feasance that separately supports the verdict. Furthermore, the trial court's finding of the existence of a special relationship (and hence an affirmative duty to protect) is supported by evidence that defendants (1) exercised custody and control over Candace and (2) undertook to control Kendrick.

Defendants also argue that the affirmative duty imposed by the trial court impinges on their religious freedom. However, it is well established that a religious organization cannot insulate itself from liability by designating legally-proscribed conduct as "religious belief." Moreover, the duties imposed on defendants apply equally to similarly-situated secular defendants and hence do not violate the First Amendment.

Defendants assert a variety of instructional errors. First, they claim error in the trial court's refusal to instruct the jury on the requirements of California's mandatory child abuse reporting statute in effect in 1993. The claimed error is actually evidentiary, not instructional, because defendants contend the refused instruction was necessary to "correct" expert testimony concerning the mandatory reporting statute. Watchtower invited this error by eliciting the allegedly improper testimony and the Congregation waived it by failing to object to the testimony. In any event, mandatory reporting responsibilities were not part of the case and thus the trial court properly instructed the jury not to consider the statute or the expert's testimony concerning it in deciding defendant's liability.

Defendants claim error in the court's decision to exclude plaintiff's parents and law enforcement agencies from the special verdict form as potential tortfeasors. However, the evidence was insufficient to raise a prima facie case of liability as to any of these nonparties.

Finally, Watchtower attacks the punitive damage award. First, it contends that the evidence was insufficient to establish malice. Substantial evidence, however, established that Watchtower consciously disregarded the risk that Kendrick, a known child molester, posed to children of the Congregation, including plaintiff. Although Watchtower knew child molesters are difficult to identify and often reoffend, it nevertheless chose to keep secret from Congregation members the fact that Kendrick had abused a child in order to protect itself from civil liability. Furthermore, it actually assigned plaintiff to perform field service with Kendrick.

Second, Watchtower contends the punitive damages were unconstitutionally excessive. The jury awarded $7,000,000 in compensatory damages and $21,000,001 in punitive damages, the latter being remitted by the judge to $8,610,000. The punitive damages were firmly supported by the reprehensibility of Watchtower's conduct. They were not based on evidence of harm to others because no such evidence was admitted; furthermore, the jury was instructed not to consider any such harm in assessing punitive damages. Finally, the remitted amount was only three times the "base level" of compensatory damages as found by the judge (7 AA 1938)—well within constitutional limits.

Defendants fail to demonstrate any error, much less prejudicial error. Their selective and highly inaccurate reporting of the facts along, with their failure to cite relevant and controlling authority, are tacit admissions that the appeal is without merit. The judgment must be affirmed.

STATEMENT OF FACTS

A. Defendants Are Aware That Children Participate In Congregation Activities Without Their Parents.

Watchtower is the national corporation that establishes, supervises, and implements the legal and administrative policies and procedures for all Jehovah's Witnesses entities in the United States. (WNY AOB 4-5.) The men who make and approve all policies for the many corporate organizations of Jehovah's Witnesses worldwide, including Watchtower, is a group of elders in New York called the "Governing Body." (5 RT 531. (WNY AOB 4-5.)

Local congregations, such as North Fremont Congregation, are separate entities from Watchtower; nevertheless, local congregations have no discretion to depart from Watchtower's policy mandates. (3 RT 141-142, 229-230.) Local congregation elders may not interpret those policies other than as prescribed by Watchtower. (3 RT 230-231.)

Watchtower appoints the administrators and supervisors of the individual local congregation corporations. (2 RT 139, 141.) The Congregation had about eight to twelve elders. (3 RT 139; 4 RT 405-406.) Watchtower admitted that the Congregation's elders, including Elders Gary Abrahamson, Michael Clark, and Larry Lamerdin, acted as agents of Watchtower in regard to all matters of their activities and duties. (3 RT 205-206.)

Only men are allowed to hold appointed positions within Jehovah's Witnesses, so no mothers or wives could serve as either elders or ministerial servants (the title given to the elders' helpers). (3 RT 147, 149.)

In the 1990s, the North Fremont Congregation had about 120 total members; approximately 25 percent of them were under the age of twelve. (3 RT 139-140, 189.) The Congregation supervised and sponsored numerous activities including field service; both adults and children as young as six participated together. (3 RT 139-140; 5 RT 548-550.) The elders knew that on some occasions children would participate in these activities—including field service—without their parents. (3 RT 140-143.) They also knew there would "undoubtedly" be occasions when parents would have other Congregation members transport their children to church activities. (3 RT 145-146; 4 RT 437-438.)

Candace and her parents were active members of the Congregation; Candace had been a member "since she was a baby." (6 RT 660-661.) When she was nine and ten years old she spent 15 to 20 hours a week performing field service (5 RT 549; 6 RT 665), trying to be "the best Jehovah's Witness I can be" (6 RT 726).

Field service is the door-to-door ministry of Jehovah's Witnesses. It is preceded by a brief meeting at the Kingdom Hall, after which members go into neighborhoods to "publish" the "Good News." (3 RT 139-140, 142-143, 183-184, 184-185.) Elder Abrahamson, the Congregation's Service Overseer, supervised the assignments of partners for field service. (3 RT 184-186; 6 RT 666, 727.) Members were assigned in pairs to knock on doors in specified neighborhoods. (3 RT 184-185; 6 RT 665.)

B. Defendants Are Aware Child Abusers Are Difficult to Identify, Often Reoffend, And Thrive On Secrecy.

Watchtower published magazines called Awake! and Watchtower that were distributed to all Jehovah's Witnesses members and made available to the general public. (8 AA 2015; 3 RT 160-161; 5 RT 544-545.) The magazines' articles were approved by the Governing Body. (RT 555-556.) The Congregation's elders read and studied these publications. (3 RT 160-161, 188, 238-239; 4 RT 439.)

Beginning as early as 1985, a number of articles were published in Awake! and Watchtower concerning child abuse. (8 AA 2014 [1985], 2024 [1991], 2034 [1993], 2047 [1997].) The articles demonstrate that Watchtower, its Governing Body, and the Congregation elders all knew that sexual abuse of children was a widespread problem with as many as 27 percent of girls and 16 percent of boys being sexually molested. (8 AA 2014, 2016, 2025, 2036; 3 RT 258.) They knew it caused "overwhelming, damaging" injury, including "depression, … guilt, shame, and rage" as well as alcohol and drug abuse and post-traumatic stress disorder. (8 AA 2026-2027, 2030.)

They also knew child abusers operate in secret and take advantage of trust relationships (8 AA 2036, 2045; 3 RT 168; 4 RT 436) and that the usual child molester is not a "weird stranger" but a trusted or well-liked person who may hide in a church group and is likely to use "sophisticated and cunning tactics" (8 AA 2017, 2019, 2038; 3 RT 161-162, 168, 258-259; 4 RT 436). They warned parents that at the outset abuse is often disguised as "playful or affectionate conduct." (8 AA 2018; 3 RT 162.) They advised them to "avoid situations that leave our children vulnerable" (8 AA 2019) but acknowledged that "parents cannot always keep … a close watch on their children" and "cannot always be with them" (8 AA 2020).

Defendants knew that many child molesters reoffend—and that it was impossible to predict which would do so. (8 AA 2052.)

Defendants also knew that adults often unwittingly collaborate with child abusers by "fostering a hush-hush attitude about it." (8 AA 2037; 3 RT 165; 4 RT 439.) They recognized that silence gives a "safe haven to abusers, not their victims." (8 AA 2037; 3 RT 165; 4 RT 439.) A "conspiracy of silence," they observed, allowed gross child abuse to persist in the Catholic Church. (8 AA 2037; 3 RT 167, 169; 4 RT 439.)

C. In 1993 Defendants Learn That Kendrick Had Molested His Stepdaughter Andrea.

In 1993, two years before Kendrick began his abuse of Candace, Congregation Elders Abrahamson and Clarke learned that Kendrick had sexually molested his 13-year-old stepdaughter Andrea. (8 AA 1992, 1993; 3 RT 247.) Kendrick gave Andrea Vicodin, then, when he thought she was asleep, entered her bedroom and put his hands down her pants and under her shirt on her breast. (4 RT 342-343.) Andrea was awake enough to roll over, get up, and go into the bathroom; she then immediately told her mother Evelyn (Kendrick's wife) what had happened. (4 RT 293, 343.)

At the time, the Kendrick family belonged to the Congregation. (4 RT 291-293.) Evelyn and Andrea, however, had stopped participating. (8 AA 1992; 3 RT 194.) Nevertheless, after trying for a time to "fix it" herself, Evelyn called an elder because she believed they "were the ones to help us," "they would protect us." (4 RT 293, 294, 301.)

Soon after, Elders Clarke and Abrahamson met with Evelyn, Andrea, and Jonathan at the Kendrick home. (4 RT 294-95.) Evelyn and Andrea informed them that there was skin-to-skin contact beneath Andrea's clothes and that Kendrick had drugged Andrea with Vicodin. (4 RT 294, 295.)

At trial, the elders claimed they were not given this information. (3 RT 158, 159.) They said that at the meeting Kendrick stated he had "inadvertently" touched Andrea's breast over her bra while she was asleep on a couch. (3 RT 152, 153, 191, 216.) Evelyn disputed that Kendrick described the touching as inadvertent. (4 RT 302.) In any event, both of the elders admitted they knew Kendrick's characterization of the touching as inadvertent was a lie. (3 RT 156, 157, 216, 240-241.)

Elders Clarke and Abrahamson also admitted it was "clear" that Kendrick was a child abuser. (3 RT 218.) In keeping with the administrative procedures required upon receipt of a report of child sexual abuse, Elder Clarke immediately called Watchtower for direction and instruction. (3 RT 154, 230, 246.) Elders Clarke and Abrahamson then sent a written report to Watchtower documenting Kendrick's child abuse. (8 AA 1992, 1923; 3 RT 217, 218.)

The written report did not mention that that they believed Jonathan Kendrick had lied in describing the touching as inadvertent. (See 8 AA 1992, 1993 [Exhibit 9].) It stated that Andrea was "now using [the incident] as a tool to threaten with when she wants something." (8 AA 1992.)

Elders Abrahamson and Clark did not seem to be overly concerned about the incident. (4 RT 295, 296.) At the meeting, Jonathan expressed repentance for what he had done and promised he wouldn't do it again. (3 RT 190.) Although the elders knew Kendrick had lied to them and knew child molesters often falsely claim to be repentant, they believed that Kendrick was sincere in his repentance and not a threat to children. (3 RT 166, 191, 203, 204, 219.) They told Evelyn that the molestation was her fault because she had stopped sharing a bed with Kendrick and had stopped performing her "wifely duties." (4 RT 296.)

A few months later Evelyn and Andrea reported Jonathan to Child Protective Services and the Fremont Police. (4 RT 303; 6 RT 646-648.) He was ultimately convicted of a misdemeanor. (4 RT 307; 6 RT 648.)

D. Despite This Knowledge, Defendants Allow Kendrick To Continue To Participate In Congregation Activities Without Taking Steps To Protect Children From Him.

1. Pursuant to Watchtower policy, defendants do not inform congregation members that Kendrick is a child molester.

Pursuant to Watchtower's written policy, the Congregation did not share with members of the Congregation its knowledge that Kendrick had sexually abused a child. (3 RT 222, 230.) The policy was embodied in a July 1989 letter from Watchtower to the bodies of elders of all congregations. (8 AA 1973-1978 [Exhibit 1]; 3 RT 223-225.)[1] (3 RT 223-225.) A "body of elder letter" was one method used by the Governing Body to communicate administrative policy to local congregation elders. (5 RT 542, 543.) It was undisputed that Exhibit 1 stated Watchtower's national policy on child sexual abuse. (4 RT 423, 424.)

Pursuant to this policy, reports of child sexual abuse within the Jehovah's Witnesses were required to be kept secret. (3 RT 222, 230.) Accordingly, the elders never warned any of the Congregation's members, including those with children, that Kendrick had sexually abused a child. (3 RT 222.)

The elders removed Kendrick from his position as a ministerial servant. (3 RT 166.) Ministerial servants do "administrative and physical things," such as distributing literature to the congregation, handling microphones, seating latecomers, and parking cars in the parking lot. (7 RT 909.) At the time Kendrick molested Andrea he was serving as a ministerial servant, having been recommended for that position by the Congregation elders. (3 RT 147, 221.) His appointment to ministerial servant had been approved by Watchtower. (3 RT 177, 178, 233, 234.) (WNY AOB 7.)

Although the elders announced to the Congregation Kendrick had been removed as a ministerial servant, they did not announce the reason for the removal. (3 RT 244.) Removal of a ministerial servant had occurred

[1] A copy of Exhibit 1 is attached to this brief.

several times before in the Congregation. (4 RT 281, 282.) Servants could be removed for any number of reasons unrelated to child abuse. (3 RT 148.) Removal did not in any way communicate to members the fact that Kendrick had molested a child or that he was at risk to do so again. (3 RT 147, 148; 4 RT 281, 282, 409.)

Dr. Anna Salter, a psychologist who has performed research and child sexual abuse prevention training for organizations in all 50 states, testified that defendants' failure to warn parents violated applicable standards of care for organizations "that sponsor or promote activities that involve adults and children together," (6 RT 671-672, 678, 684, 685, 687, 707.)

2. Although the elders claim to monitor Kendrick, he openly holds and hugs Candace at the Kingdom Hall.

Despite the fact that he was a known child molester, Kendrick was allowed to continue to participate in Congregation activities, including field service, home Bible study groups, and Kingdom Hall meetings; he also continued to hold the titles of "Minister" and "Brother." (3 RT 171; 7 RT 933.)

Elders Clarke and Abrahamson said they placed Kendrick on "restrictions"; they said he was instructed he could not show affection to children, put them on his lap, work with them in field service, or work with them at the Kingdom Hall. (3 RT 166, 250.) They said he was told the elders would be watching him. (3 RT 250.)

The elders said that in fact they did watch Kendrick, monitoring his relations with children to make sure he was not "too friendly." (3 RT 165, 247-250; 4 RT 420-421.) They asserted he was not a threat to abuse children because they were "keeping an eye on him." (4 RT 435.) They said that if they had observed Kendrick getting "close" to a child they would have informed the parents. (3 RT 165.)

Although the elders claimed they never saw Kendrick violate the restrictions (3 RT 247-249, 253; 4 RT 420-421), there was evidence that he did. At the Kingdom Hall he often hugged Candace, held her hand, held her on his lap, and put his arm around her. (6 RT 663, 723, 738, 739.). In addition, he often isolated her in an open parking lot area next to the Kingdom Hall where children went to play while elders were occupied with pre- or post-meeting greetings and talk (4 RT 280, 281; 6 RT 723-725).

Nevertheless it was undisputed that the elders never informed plaintiff's parents about Kendrick. (3 RT 222.) He was never the subject of discussion at any elders' meeting after the report of his abuse of Andrea. (4 RT 408.)

3. In fact, defendants assign Candace to perform field service with Kendrick; he uses the opportunity to molest her.

Elders Clarke and Abrahamson denied that Candace or any child would ever be assigned to perform field service with Kendrick. (3 RT 171, 248.) Elder Alan Shuster, Assistant Overseer of Watchtower's Service Department, said he "believed" Watchtower had a written policy prohibiting molesters from performing field service with children; no such policy, however, was ever produced. (5 RT 526, 527; 7 RT 933-935.) Elder Abrahamson said he would never assign a child to work with an adult of the opposite sex in field service because it would not be "appropriate." (3 RT 186.) Elder Clarke acknowledged that it would have been "suicidal" to assign Kendrick to perform field service with a child knowing that he had molested Andrea; he claimed the Congregation would not have allowed it. (3 RT 248.) In fact, he claimed Kendrick was not allowed to perform field service without an elder being present. (3 RT 248.)

Nevertheless there was plenty of evidence that in fact Candace was assigned to perform field service with Kendrick. She testified that sometimes, when neither parent was available, she went to field service without them and that on some of those occasions she was assigned to perform field service with Kendrick. (6 RT 726-728.) Her testimony was corroborated by Congregation member Carolyn Martinez, who saw Kendrick and Candace in field service together. (6 RT 662, 663, 666.)

Kendrick seized these opportunities to molest Candace. When their field service group began to spread out, Kendrick, saying, "Let's go play," would take Candace in his truck to his house. (6 RT 727-730.) There he would sexually abuse her; the abuse included nudity, oral sex, groping, and insertion of foreign objects into her. (6 RT 729-731.) This routine was repeated many times. (6 RT 730, 731.) Afterwards, Kendrick would take Candace and rejoin the field service group or drive her back to the Kingdom Hall. (6 RT 731.)

E. Defendants Give Improbable And Conflicting Reasons For Their Policy Of Keeping Child Abuse Secret.

Defendants proffered a number of justifications in support of their policy of keeping secret from Congregation members the fact that there was a known child molester among them. Even though defendants viewed parents as the primary protectors against child abuse (3 RT 167), and even though they knew child molesters operated in secret and could be difficult to identify (3 RT 168, 258, 259; 4 RT 436), they nevertheless took the improbable position that knowing the identity of a child molester would not place parents in a better position to protect their children (3 RT 165, 168, 169; 4 RT 438). Elder Lamerdin testified:

> Q. . . . Wouldn't the parents be able to make a better decision of who to trust to take their child somewhere if they knew that one member of the congregation was a known child molester?
>
> A. I would have to say no.

(4 RT 438.)

Elder Abrahamson took the position that providing parents with the traits and warning signs of child molesters was just as effective as telling them a molester's actual identity:

> Q. And so the best way to allow parents to protect their children in the congregation is to identify for them the individuals who are positively identified already as having sexually molested a child.
>
> Don't you agree?
>
> A. How about identifying the traits of individuals. And you can look at a person, and if he shows those traits, and then you have a suspicion, don't let your child go with that. If you have a suspicion, you are under no obligation to let your child go with that person.
> Q. Well, from the last Awake Magazine that we looked at, we know that one of those traits might be they are a pleasant, well-liked church group leader?
>
> A. That's true. That has happened.
>
> Q. Wouldn't it have been much more helpful to the parents in the congregation to know what to look for with Jonathan Kendrick and to protect their own children if they knew that he had sexually molested a child?
>
> A. I think this information gives them good ammunition to look at individuals to see how they line up to these situations, and if they would want to trust their children with them. And they can make a call on that.

(3 RT 168-169.)

Defendants also claimed that keeping this information secret was necessary in order to protect the privacy and confidentiality of members. Elder Clarke testified that the confidentiality they sought to protect was that of the victims, not that of the perpetrator; he claimed that it was Andrea and Evelyn—not Jonathan—who requested that Jonathan's molestation of Andrea be kept confidential. (3 RT 226, 227.) But both Andrea and Evelyn disputed this. Andrea said that she did not want it kept private—that she wanted it "out," and that she told others about it soon after it happened. (4 RT 344, 345, 347.) Evelyn testified that at the meeting with the elders neither she nor Andrea asked the elders to keep the matter private, saying, "I wanted them to do something, so I wouldn't have said keep it quiet…." (4 RT 296.)

The Assistant Overseer of Watchtower's Service Department, on the other hand, testified that it was Watchtower's policy to keep reports of child sex abuse secret even if those reporting it did not wish it to be confidential. (7 RT 938.)

Furthermore, the report of Kendrick's abuse of Andrea was not kept confidential from everyone. At least some of the elders in the Congregation were told, as were administrators at Watchtower, a separate corporation. (8 AA 1992, 1993; 3 RT 223, 224, 241.) And if a perpetrator moved to another congregation the elders were instructed to notify that congregation's elders of the perpetrator's prior abuse. (8 AA 1995.)

Finally, defendants' position that the overriding reason for the policy was to protect the confidentiality of those involved was inconsistent with the fact that in certain circumstances they would disclose the information to parents. Elder Abrahamson testified:

> Q: And did you tell anyone in the Congregation, the parents in the Congregation who have an obligation to protect their children, that Jonathan Kendrick had sexually molested a child?
>
> A: There was no need to. If we, upon observing Jonathan Kendrick, we saw him isolating a child, we saw him getting close to a child, then we would inform the parents.

(3 RT 165, italics added.)

F. Plaintiff Presents Substantial Evidence That The Real Reason For The Policy Of Secrecy Is So Defendants Can Avoid Litigation And Liability.

Exhibit 1 belies defendants' contentions that the purpose of keeping reports of child abuse secret was to protect the confidentiality of those involved. Nowhere does it state that the purpose was to protect either the victims or the abusers. Nowhere does it state such reports were to be kept secret regardless of the desires of the victim. (8 AA 1973-1978.)

Instead, it establishes that the real reason for this policy was to benefit defendants by helping them avoid litigation and liability. This theme is repeated throughout the document. Exhibit 1 cautions that those who oppose the Kingdom's work may take advantage of legal processes in order to "interfere with it or impede its progress." (8 AA 1973.) It states, "In recent years, this matter has come to be a cause for increasing concern. The spirit of the world has sensitized people regarding their legal 'rights' and the legal means by which they can exact punishment if such 'rights' are violated." (8 AA 1974.) It warns,

> If the elders fail to follow the Society's direction carefully in handling confidential matters, such mistakes could result in successful litigation by those offended. Substantial monetary damages could be assessed against the elders or congregation.

(8 AA 1974.)

The final section of Exhibit 1, entitled "Points to Remember," reiterates this theme. It states, "Unauthorized disclosure of confidential information can result in costly lawsuits." (8 AA 1977.) It directs elders to be careful about putting things in writing and not to make statements to secular authorities without first consulting the Legal Department. (8 AA 1977.)[2]

Watchtower asserts that no witness testified that Exhibit 1 constituted a policy of secrecy. (WNY AOB 54.) But in fact Elder Clarke expressly did so. (3 RT 224.) He testified:

> Q. [B]ut parents were not separately warned that [Kendrick] had committed an act of child sex abuse?
>
> A. No. We don't do that.
> Q. And you don't do that because there is a policy that Watchtower New York has provided to you and provided to

[2] Indeed, Exhibit 1 even suggests that the policy of confidentiality may be important to avoid criminal prosecutions: "In some cases where the authorities are involved, certain complications could lead to a fine or imprisonment. These possibilities underscore the need for elders to be discerning and to follow carefully directions provided by the Society." (AA 1974, original boldface.)

you before this that says that information is not to be divulged to the congregations?

A. Yes. . . .

(3 RT 222.)

Furthermore, the elders were directed that the policy of secrecy embodied in Exhibit 1 was itself to be kept secret. It was marked "CONFIDENTIAL." (8 AA 1973, original emphasis.) A postscript directed that it was not to be copied or read by others and that it was to be kept in the congregation's confidential files. (8 AA 1978.)

Exhibit 1 by itself supports an inference that the true purpose behind the policy of keeping reports of child abuse secret was to further defendants' self-interest in avoiding legal liability for damages, and was not to protect the privacy or confidentiality of those involved in the abuse as claimed by defendants.

G. As A Result Of Her Molestation, Candace Suffers Severe And Permanent Emotional And Psychological Harm.

A high percentage of abused children often do not report their abuse for many years. (6 RT 688-690.) Carl Lewis, a retired law enforcement child abuse investigator and trainer, testified as an expert on Child Sexual Abuse Accommodation Syndrome. (5 RT 456.) He explained that children in the 9- and 10-year-old age range often do not know the number of times the were abused, that a victim's normal range of responses to abuse includes "helplessness" when she has no safe person to whom to disclose the abuse, and that "far and away the most common accommodation mechanism" is to pretend nothing is wrong. (5 RT 464, 467-469.) He said delayed disclosure was a common feature of abused children. (5 RT 465, 466.)

Candace fit these patterns. She did not disclose her abuse for many years; her first instinct was to act like nothing happened. (6 RT 731.) She kept her abuse secret while it was occurring because she was afraid of Kendrick. (6 RT 718-719.) After her parents separated in 1996, she went to family counseling with LCSW Laura Fraser for eighteen months. (5 RT 589-591, 593.) Although Ms. Fraser thought Candace "felt like a child who had been abused," she was "absolutely" not surprised that Candace did not disclose the abuse. (5 RT 607, 608, 632, 633.)

Not until August 2002 did Candace, then 16, tell a physician (Dr Afruma) about the abuse; Dr. Afruma's notes for that date state, "sexual abuse from age 9-?13." (8 AA 2009.) He requested expedited counseling services because the psychiatrist "can't see her until October." (8 AA 2009.)

Although Candace was not using drugs at that time (8 AA 2012), she began to self-medicate with drugs soon after. (6 RT 715.) For several more lost years she was in and out of drug use, having neither real relationships nor steady employment. (6 RT 715, 716.)

All of the mental health experts agreed she suffered from chronic post-traumatic stress disorder (PTSD) secondary to her sexual abuse. (8 AA 2010 [Dr. Afruma]; 5 RT 563 [Dr. Harmatz]; 5 RT 578, 581, 585, 586, 588 [Dr. Walton]; 7 RT 802-806, 810, 811 [Dr. Ponton].) Dr. Ponton diagnosed Candace as suffering from major depressive disorder and concluded that her years of drug use arose in large part from Kendrick's abuse. (7 RT 811-813, 816.)

Candace's chronic PTSD is permanent; it will present episodically for her lifetime. (5 RT 585, 586; 7 RT 815, 816.)

TRIAL COURT PROCEEDINGS

Ms. Conti filed this action in 2011 (1 AA 4), initially appearing as Jane Doe. (See Doe v. Lincoln Unified School Dist. (2010) 188 Cal.App.4th 758, 765.) Against Watchtower and the Congregation she alleged negligent supervision and control of Kendrick, negligent failure to warn, and negligent failure to protect plaintiff and other minors participating in religious activities at the Congregation from the risk of sexual abuse by Kendrick. (1 AA 6 [¶7].)

Over defendants' objections of confidentiality and privilege the trial court compelled production the Congregation's 1993 report of Kendrick's abuse Andrea. (2 AA 492, 495.) Defendants did not seek a writ despite the judge's invitation to do so. (2 AA 495.)

The trial granted plaintiff leave to amend her complaint to allege punitive damages against Watchtower. (2 AA 497, 498.)

At the commencement of trial the court again ruled that the report of Kendrick's sexual abuse of Andrea was not confidential and was not protected by a "spiritual privilege." (1 RT 8, 9, 25, 26.) It also partially granted defendants' motion to exclude evidence of Kendrick's sexual abuse of children after he left the North Fremont Congregation in 1997. (1 RT 14.) It also excluded under Evidence Code section 352 Kendrick's 2004 felony conviction for molesting an 8-year-old child in the Oakley Jehovah's Witnesses Congregation. (1 RT 14-16.) Finally, it granted defendants' motion to exclude evidence of other lawsuits or claims against the Jehovah's Witnesses involving child sexual abuse (1 RT 33, 34), reaffirming this ruling during trial (RAB 99-101).[3]

Certain testimony was admitted only as to Kendrick's liability. (3 RT 264; 9 RT 1049.) This included Congregation member Claudia Francis's testimony (1) that she had observed "odd" conduct and heard affectionate terms used by Kendrick towards Candace and (2) that Kendrick had bought a black bra for another young Congregation girl named Brianna, saying "every young girl needs a black bra." (4 RT 324-327.) It also included Evelyn Kendrick's testimony as to Kendrick's fetish for "little girl" sexuality. (4 RT 293.)

[3] "RAB" refers to Respondent's Appendix.

The jury found unanimously that Kendrick abused plaintiff and caused her harm. (5 AA 1285; 10 RT 1216.) They found the Congregation elders and the Watchtower Service Department elders negligently caused harm to plaintiff. (5 AA 1285-1286.) And they found Watchtower guilty of malice. (5 AA 1286.) They awarded compensatory damages of $7,000,000, allocating 60 percent fault to Kendrick, 27 percent to Watchtower, and 13 percent to Congregation. (5 AA 1286.) They awarded $21,000,001 in punitive damages against Watchtower. (5 AA 1299.)

The defendants made a motion for new trial and for judgment notwithstanding the verdict. The motion for new trial was conditionally granted unless plaintiff accepted a remittitur of punitive damages to $8,610,000; the motions were otherwise denied. (AA 1936-1939.) The remittitur was accepted. (7 AA 1941.) This appeal followed.

ARGUMENT

I. DEFENDANTS' SPECIAL RELATIONSHIPS WITH PLAINTIFF AND KENDRICK IMPOSED A DUTY TO PROTECT PLAINTIFF; IN ANY EVENT, THEY COMMITTED ACTUAL *MIS*FEASANCE BY ASSIGNING HER TO FIELD SERVICE WITH KENDRICK.

A. Standard Of Review.

Duty is a question of law for the court and is reviewed de novo on appeal. (Cabral v. Ralph's Grocery Co. (2011) 51 Cal.4th 764, 770-71.) However findings of fact giving rise to a duty are reviewed for substantial evidence. (Strong v. State of California (2011) 201 Cal App.4th 1439, 1452-53 [appellate court will not "disturb" trial court's "credibility determination" of facts underlying the existence of special relationship]; see Alcaraz v. Vece (1997) 14 Cal.4th 1149, 1162, fn. 4 [court determines legal questions of existence and scope of duty, trier of fact determines existence of facts giving rise to legal duty].)

B. Regardless Of Whether Defendants Owed An Affirmative Duty To Protect Plaintiff, They Committed Misfeasance By Assigning Plaintiff To Perform Field Service With Kendrick.

The rule that, absent a special relationship, an actor has no duty to control the conduct of a third person or warn of that conduct has no application where the actor's negligence consists of misfeasance rather than mere nonfeasance. (Weirum v. RKO General, Inc. (1975) 15 Cal.3d 40, 48-9.) Watchtower contends that the trial court did not instruct the jury on liability for misfeasance and that "doing so would have been contrary to the entire record, since there is no evidence that Watchtower interfered in plaintiff's affairs to bring a new harm to her." (WNY AOB 27.) The contention is wrong on both counts.

Contrary to Watchtower's first contention, the trial court in fact instructed on both misfeasance and nonfeasance:

> A person or an entity can be negligent by acting or failing to act. [¶] A person or entity is negligent if he, she, or it does something that a reasonably careful person would not do in the same situation or fail[s] to do something that a reasonably careful person or entity would do in the same situation.

(9 RT 1053, 1054; see CACI No. 401.)

Contrary to its second contention, the evidence clearly supported a finding of misfeasance. It showed that field service was a church-sponsored activity that included "publishers" as young as 6 years old (3 RT 140, 184.) When Candace's parents were occupied with her mother's mental disability Candace often participated in field service without them. (6 RT 726, 727.)

The evidence further showed that Elder Abrahamson, as Service Overseer, supervised the Congregation's field service, presiding over field service meetings, systematically assigning members to neighborhoods, and assigning field service partners. (3 RT 184-186; 6 RT 665, 666.) On numerous occasions, Kendrick was assigned to perform field service with Candace. (6 RT 665, 666, 728.) On at least some of these occasions, Kendrick took Candace to his house, molested her there, then returned her either to the Kingdom Hall or to field service. (6 RT 728-731.)

Finally, the evidence showed that Kendrick was paired with Candace despite knowledge (1) that Kendrick had previously molested his stepdaughter and had lied about it (3 RT 152-154, 156, 157, 216, 240, 241, 247; 8 AA 1992, 1993) and (2) that molesters often reoffend, act in secret, and use the trust of a religious setting to accomplish abuse (8 AA 2017, 2019, 2036, 2038, 2045, 2052; 3 RT 161, 162, 168, 258, 259; 4 RT 436).

"Misfeasance" means performing an act that makes "the plaintiff's position worse, i.e., defendant has created a risk." (Lugtu v. California Highway Patrol (2001) 26 Cal.4th 703, 716, italics added.) Defendants made Candace's position worse by assigning her to field service with a man they knew was a child molester—thereby obviously creating a risk that he would seize the opportunity to molest her.

"When two independent bases exist to support a jury's verdict, one of which is lawful and one is not, a reviewing court presumes the jury's verdict rested on a lawful basis unless the record affirmatively shows otherwise." (Gombiner v. Swartz (2008) 167 Cal.App.4th 1365, 1376.) Assuming arguendo that defendants did not owe plaintiff an affirmative duty to protect or warn against Kendrick, the verdict should nevertheless be upheld on the basis of plaintiff's independent theory that defendants committed actual misfeasance by sending plaintiff into field service with Kendrick.

C. Defendants' Special Relationships With Plaintiff And Kendrick Imposed On Them A Duty To Protect Plaintiff.

Defendants attack the trial court's findings as to the facts supporting the existence of a duty, specifically the facts giving rise to a special relationship. Watchtower argues that the trial court's factual determination of a special relationship was erroneous. (WNY AOB 23.) The Congregation argues that the trial court's determination lacked "factual support." (NFC AOB 14.) These findings are reviewed for substantial evidence. (Strong v. State of California, supra, 201 Cal App.4th 1439, 1452-53.)

Restatement Second of Torts, section 315, states that there is no duty to control the conduct of a third person unless there is a special relation between either (a) the actor and the third person or (b) the actor and the potential victim. (See Giraldo v. Dept. of Corrections & Rehabilitation (2008) 168 Cal.App.4th 231, 245 [Sections 315-320 of the Restatement Second of Torts govern imposition of affirmative duty arising out of special relationship].) Here, there was substantial evidence that the defendants had a special relationship with both the third person (Kendrick) and the victim (plaintiff).

1. There was substantial evidence that defendants exerted custody or control over plaintiff.

Watchtower argues that it "did not place the Plaintiff in the care, custody, or control of Kendrick … for any church sanctioned event," (WNY AOB 31) and that Candace "was not entrusted to either Watchtower's or Kendrick's custody." (WNY AOB 32.) The Congregation asserts that "the record is devoid of evidence that Fremont Congregation" "put the Plaintiff in Kendrick's company" or placed her "in a zone of danger." (NFC AOB 36.) These claims misrepresent the record. There was substantial evidence that defendants exerted custody and control over Candace by assigning her to perform field service with Kendrick.

Restatement Second of Torts section 320 states that a special relationship exists where an actor voluntarily takes custody of another and subjects her to association with persons likely to cause harm. Comment b to section 320 observes that one "who takes custody … of a child is properly required to give him the protection which the custody or the manner in which it was taken has deprived him." Comment c emphasizes the applicability of this rule where the victim is exposed to a person "likely to do him harm from which he cannot be expected to protect himself."

These principles have been applied to impose a duty to protect a child from sexual abuse in schools, homes, and day care centers. (See Juarez v. Boy Scouts of America (2000) 81 Cal.App.4th 377, 410 ("Juarez"), and cases cited therein.) The key element in these cases is taking custody or control of a child—which carries with it an obligation to care for the child's safety.

Here, substantial evidence supports the trial court's determination that Watchtower and Congregation took custody and control of Candace by assigning her into field service, thereby creating a special relationship with her. (See Strong v. State of California, supra, 201 Cal App.4th 1439, 1452-53 [findings of facts giving rise to duty reviewed for substantial evidence].) The trial court properly concluded that this special relationship imposed a duty on the Congregation to protect Candace from Kendrick. That duty obviously extended to Watchtower by virtue of its admission that the Congregation elders acted as its agents. (3 RT 205-206.)

2. There was substantial evidence defendants took charge of Kendrick.

"One who takes charge of a third person whom he knows or should know to be likely to cause bodily harm to others if not controlled is under a duty to exercise reasonable care to control the third person to prevent him from doing such harm." (Rest.2d Torts, § 319.) To "take charge" of a person within the meaning of section 319 one must possess the ability to control that person. (People v. Heitzman (1994) 9 Cal.4th 189, 213.)

The Congregation argues that Kendrick was not in its "care, custody, or control" and that it "lacked the ability to control" him. (NFC AOB 18, 20.) The evidence, however, was decidedly to the contrary. For one thing, defendants clearly took charge of Kendrick when they determined where and with whom he was to perform field service.

In addition, the elders' own testimony established that defendants had the ability to control Kendrick. They testified they placed Kendrick on "restrictions," instructing him as to what he could and could not do. (3 RT 166, 250; see p. 13, ante.) They kept an eye on him and would have warned parents if he was "getting close" to a child. (3 RT 166, 247, 249; 4 RT 435.)

In short, there was substantial evidence defendants had the ability to control Kendrick and undertook a duty to protect children from him—even if they failed to adequately perform that duty. Their situation mirrors that in Pamela L. v. Farmer (1980) 112 Cal.App.3d 206, 210-212, where the defendant was held to have a special relationship with minors she allowed to use her pool without protecting them against her husband, whom she knew to be a molester. Here the elders brought a known child molester into association with Candace and failed to protect her.

3. Defendants' cases are inapposite.

The cases relied on by defendants are inapposite. Neither Nally v. Grace Community Church (1988) 47 Cal.3d 278 nor Richelle L. v. Roman Catholic Archbishop (2003) 106 Cal.App.4th 257 involved a minor plaintiff. In Nally, a wrongful death case by the parents of an adult suicide victim, the court held that unlicensed non-therapist religious counselors who exercised no custody or control over the decedent owed no duty to refer him to licensed mental health providers. (47 Cal.3d at pp. 293-295.) The court observed that the closeness of the connection between the failure to refer and the suicide was "tenuous" at best, where the religious counselors were aware that the decedent had been under the care of multiple physicians and a psychiatrist. (Id. at pp. 296-297.)

Richelle L. involved a suit by an adult parishioner who had an illicit sexual relationship with her priest. There was no counseling relationship between the two and no condition or characteristic of the plaintiff (such as old age or youth) rendered her particularly vulnerable. (106 Cal.App.4th at pp. 280-281.)

Roman Catholic Archbishop of San Diego v. Superior Court (1996) 42 Cal.App.4th 1556 is also factually inapposite. In that case the court affirmed summary judgment against a 15-year-old plaintiff molested by a priest. The undisputed evidence showed that the church "had no prior knowledge or reason to know the priest was a risk to engage in a sexual relationship with a minor." (Id. at pp. 1559, 1565.) Furthermore, there was no evidence "the church somehow placed [plaintiff] in [the priest's] custody or control." (Id. at p. 1567.)

Finally, in Eric J. v. Betty M., (1999) 76 Cal.App.4th 715, an eight-year-old boy was molested by his mother's boyfriend. The court held that the molester's family had no duty to warn the mother of the molester's prior convictions for child sexual abuse, even though some of the molestations occurred on family members' property. The court held that no special relationship existed between the family members and the mother that would give rise to a duty to warn and that the mere fact the molestations occurred on property owned by the family members did not give rise to such a duty. (76 Cal.App.4th at pp. 727-728.)[4]

[4] The result in Eric J. was different for one of the defendants—the molester's sister, Dorothy. She was found to have breached a duty to the molested child by once leaving him alone in her house with her brother. (Id. at p. 718, fn. 2.) In the case at bar, defendants' conduct in assigning plaintiff to field work with Kendrick is much more similar to Dorothy's—although much more egregious than Dorothy's.

D. The Imposition Of A Duty To Protect Plaintiff Is Also Supported By Application Of The Rowland v. Christian Factors.

Many recent authorities argue that the special relationship duty analysis should be eliminated completely in favor of the traditional duty analysis set forth in Rowland v. Christian (1968) 69 Cal.2d 108. (See Juarez, supra, 81 Cal.App.4th at p. 411 & fn. 10.)

Juarez involved a claim by a youth molested by a scoutmaster during camping trips and other Scout-sanctioned activities, as well as at the scoutmaster's home. (Id. at p. 385.) Because there was no evidence the defendants were aware of the scoutmaster's risk to abuse (id. at p. 395), summary judgment was upheld on the plaintiff's claims of respondeat superior liability and negligent hiring and supervision (id. at pp. 395-397).

Summary judgment, however, was reversed on the plaintiff's claim of negligent failure to take reasonable protective measures to prevent the abuse. (Juarez, 81 Cal.App.4th at pp. 397-410.) Division Two of the First District held that the Rowland factors supported "imposition of a duty of care on the Scouts to have taken reasonable protective measures to protect Juarez from the risk of sexual abuse by adult volunteers involved in scouting programs…." (Id. at p. 409.)

The Jehovah's Witnesses had many activities, including field service, where adults and children participated together. The elders were aware that children, for many reasons, might associate with other

Congregation members in their church activities. The logic of Juarez concerning the duty of youth-oriented groups to protect against molestation by adult volunteers applies equally to groups that sponsor and supervise activities in which adults and children participate together, even though the overall purpose of the organization is not exclusively youth-oriented.

The Rowland factors are appropriately applied to determine duty in cases of third party institutional liability involving child sexual abuse. (C.A. v. William S. Hart Union High School Dist. (2012) 53 Cal.4th 861, 877 & fn. 8.) Application of those factors to the case at hand overwhelmingly supports the imposition of a duty of protection.

1. Forseeability of harm.

The Congregation argues there is no high degree of foreseeability that Kendrick would molest another girl in the Congregation. (NFC AOB 28-31.) This argument utterly ignores the evidence that defendants knew (1) that persons who abuse a child are at risk to abuse again (8 AA 2052) (2) that Kendrick had abused Andrea and had lied to them about it (3 RT 156, 157, 216, 240-241), (3) that molesters use positions of trust and participate in religious organizations to cloak their intentions (8 AA 2017, 2019, 2036, 2045; 3 RT 161, 162, 168, 258, 259; 4 RT 436), and (4) that molesters are adept at acting in secret so that persons in authority cannot detect them (3 RT 168; 4 RT 436).

This knowledge made it highly foreseeable that sending Candace into field service with Kendrick put her at grave risk of being molested by him. Elder Clarke called it "suicidal" to send a known molester into field service with a child. (3 RT 248.)

The Congregation argues that there was no foreseeability because of the many precautions the elders claimed to have taken to prevent further molestations by Kendrick. (NFC AOB 31.) But the recognition such precautions were needed merely demonstrates the foreseeability of the harm posed by Kendrick.

2. Degree of certainty that plaintiff suffered harm.

Congregation's analysis of the degree of certainty of harm avoids the issue completely. (NFC AOB 32-33.) It attempts to impugn the jury's unanimous finding that Candace was abused by Kendrick and suffered harm as a result by rearguing the evidence. (NFC AOB 33 ["Only the Plaintiff testified that Kendrick acted inappropriately; no one else saw it or knew about it"].) It asserts that the elders "did not observe Kendrick acting inappropriately with the Plaintiff…." (NFC AOB 32.)

The Congregation's argument is not relevant to the question of the certainty of harm. There was no dispute that Candace suffered greatly as a result of the abuse. Every mental health care provider who testified confirmed she suffered serious harm. There was no contrary evidence.

Watchtower implies there is no certainty of harm because Candace "made no mention of this sexual abuse [i.e., the abuse during field service] at her deposition." (WNY AOB 11.) Watchtower does not mention that Candace was not asked about abuse during field service at her deposition. (See 6 RT 767.) Candace described her abuse during field service to defense medical examiner, Dr. Williams. (6 RT 767.) Defendants, however, chose not call Dr. Williams to testify at trial.

3. Closeness of the connection between the harm and defendants' conduct.

There was a direct cause-and-effect connection between Congregation elders assigning Candace to field service with Kendrick and his abuse of her during field service. Both Watchtower and Congregation dispute that Candace was abused "during" field service because the abuse occurred at Kendrick's home. The argument is sophistic. The evidence established that the two were assigned to perform field service together and that instead of performing field service Kendrick often took her to his home, molested her, then returned her to field service or to the Kingdom Hall. (6 RT 728, 729, 731.) There can be no doubt that it was defendants' conduct in assigning the two to perform field service together that provided Kendrick the opportunity to molest Candace.

4. Moral blame.

The elders sent Candace into field service with Kendrick with actual knowledge that he had previously molested another child and had lied to them about it. They also knew that molesters are likely to molest again. They acted with both actual knowledge of the risk and reckless indifference to it. They affirmatively placed Candace in a zone of danger. The moral blame is substantial.

5. Policy of preventing future harm.

"Our greatest responsibility as members of a civilized society is our common goal of safeguarding our children…" (Juarez, supra, 81 Cal.App.4th at p. 407.) The policy of preventing future harm is best served by imposing on organizations that sponsor and supervise activities in which children and adults participate together a duty to warn and protect against known child molesters.

6. Social and financial burdens.

Congregation paints a doomsday picture of what it terms the "extremely burdensome" responsibility of protecting its members and their children from further acts of molestation by a known child molester in their Congregation. (NFC AOB 40.) The Congregation's scenario is highly exaggerated. The actual burden and can be summed up in three minor responsibilities: (1) actually keep a "watchful eye" on the molester (which defendants claim was done anyway), (2) don't send a known child molester out into church activities with a vulnerable child, and (3) use the power Elder Abrahamson admitted he had to inform parents of the presence of a known child molester.

7. Societal consequences.

The Congregation warns of "unbridled liability in all instances" and of infringement on the First Amendment right to free exercise of religion if a duty to protect children against a known child abuser is imposed. (NFC AOB 42-44.) It vastly overstates the nature of the duty.

On the other hand, the societal consequences of failing to impose a duty—of tolerating, protecting, and enabling known child molesters to find new victims—are clear. Sexual abuse causes devastating injuries to the victim and to all of society. Child sexual abuse has for too long been seen as a minor problem to be ignored, one unworthy of soiling the public image of important social institutions such as football programs, churches, school districts, the BBC, the Boy Scouts, swim clubs, and others.

In sum, in the circumstances presented here, all of the Rowland factors favor imposition on defendants of a duty to protect children from an individual they actually knew to be a child abuser.

II. IMPOSING A DUTY TO WARN DOES NOT VIOLATE THE CONSTITUTION.

Watchtower argues that imposing upon it a duty to warn violated its First Amendment right to freedom of religion as well as Jonathan Kendrick's privacy, liberty, and due process rights. Both arguments are without merit.

A. The 1993 Report Was Not A Confidential Or Spiritual Communication.

1. Standard of review.

The standard of review for rulings rejecting claims of confidentiality and privilege is whether or not substantial evidence exists to support the trial court's determination that the information was not confidential. (In re the Clergy Cases I (2010) 188 Cal.App.4th 1224, 1240.)

2. Substantial evidence established the report was not confidential.

Watchtower argues that imposing liability for Candace Conti's molestation during field service violates their First Amendment right to free exercise of religion. It argues that "disclosing information received in confidence from Kendrick, his wife, and stepdaughter would have violated defendants' Bible-based religious beliefs, practices, and policies on confidentiality." (WNY AOB 42.) It further argues, "Maintaining the confidentiality of Congregation members is a fundamental religious precept which defendants believe is directly derived from Scripture." (WNY AOB 46.) Neither the evidence nor the law supports these arguments.

The evidence demonstrated without contradiction that the report of Kendrick's sexual abuse of Andrea was not received in confidence and was not intended to be confidential. The report of Andrea's abuse came from Andrea and Evelyn—not Jonathan Kendrick. Although defendants characterize it as a "confession," it was not a confession; in fact, Kendrick lied about the incident, saying he had "inadvertently" touched Andrea—implying that he had done nothing intentionally wrong. (3RT 156, 157, 216, 240, 241.)

Neither Andrea nor Evelyn testified that the report was made as part of "religious-based counseling" or as a "confidential communication." In fact, both denied requesting the elders to keep the report private. (4 RT 296, 344, 345.) They wanted the elders to do something to stop Kendrick and protect them. (4 RT 293, 294.) When the elders did nothing, Andrea and Evelyn went to the police. (4 RT 303; 6 RT 646-648.)

Furthermore, Elders Clarke and Abrahamson did not in fact keep this "confidential" information confidential. They reported it to both the Legal and Service Departments of Watchtower, a separate corporation, receiving from them "instructions" on how to proceed administratively in the case. (8 AA 1992; 3 RT 154, 230, 246.) They also shared it with other Congregation elders. (3 RT 243.) And, when Jonathan Kendrick changed to a different Jehovah's Witness congregation, if the elders followed Watchtower policy they would have shared the information with that new congregation. (See 8 AA 1995.)

Lastly, Elder Abrahamson admitted that the elders would have shared the information with parents had they observed Kendrick getting too close to a child. (3 RT 165.)

Watchtower cannot "put the genie back in the bottle" by claiming information neither received in confidence, kept in confidence, nor believed to be confidential can be made confidential now simply by labeling it "religious-based." A similar argument was rejected in Roman Catholic Archbishop of Los Angeles v. Superior Court (2005) 131 Cal.App.4th 417 ("RCALA"). There the Catholic Church sought to overturn a referee's findings and to quash subpoenas issued by the district attorney for records of priests who had sexually abused children. The Church argued that its religious beliefs required the records be kept secret (id. at pp. 427-428) and that disclosure would violate the Church's First Amendment right of free exercise of its religion (id. at p. 430.)

The Court of Appeal rejected the arguments, observing that the freedom to believe is absolute, but the freedom to act is not. "'Conduct remains subject to regulation to protect society.' [Citation.]" (RCALA, supra, 131 Cal.App.4th at p. 430.) The First Amendment, the court said, does not relieve an individual of the obligation to comply with a valid and neutral law of general applicability on the basis that to do so would violate a religious belief. (Ibid.) Reviewing United States Supreme Court cases, the Court stated that laws which burden a particular religious practice but are of neutral and general applicability do not require justification by a compelling state interest. (Id. at p. 431.) The law does not permit anyone to become "a law unto himself" by designating otherwise proscribed conduct as religious belief. (Id. at pp. 431-432.)

The RCALA court also rejected the argument that production of the priest's records violated the First Amendment's Establishment clause. (131 Cal.App.4th at pp. 434-436.) There is no religious doctrine aspect to the issue of child molestation. (Ibid.) Some entanglement between church and state is unavoidable, and as long as it is not excessive it does not violate the constitutional protections religions accept. (Id. at pp. 435-436.)

In Clergy Cases I, supra, the Court of Appeal held that psychiatric counseling records of individual perpetrator-priests of the Franciscan Order must be disclosed publicly over constitutional privacy and therapist privilege concerns. The Court observed that "members of the Catholic Church throughout California have a compelling interest in knowing what treatment the Individual Friars received for their predatory proclivities, and whether it was adequate to protect young parishioners whom they may have encountered in their ministries." (188 Cal.App.4th at p. 1236.) The "compelling social interests in the disclosure of information relating to sexual predators of children" outweighed any constitutional privacy interests. (Id. at p. 1235.)

First Amendment protection of religious belief does not protect the practice of polygamy (Reynolds v. U.S. (1878) 98 U.S. 145, 164-166) or child pornography (New York v. Ferber (1982) 458 U. S. 747, 774). Like child molestation, such practices were never expected by the Framers to be entitled to First Amendment religious protection, as they were never part of established religious practice. As stated in RCALA, supra, the issue whether children were molested by priests who worked for the Archdiocese "has no comparable religious doctrine aspect." (131 Cal.App.4th at p. 435.)

Legal commentators have agreed. (See Hamilton, "Licentiousness" in Religious Organizations (2010) William & Mary Bill of Rights Journal 953, 967-968.) (See RAB 55-56.)

A defendant's obligation to warn or protect children against molestation by a known child abuser involved in activities sanctioned or sponsored by the defendant is secular, neutral, and not based on religious doctrine. It applies equally and neutrally to both secular and religious defendants. It does not require a jury to interpret religious doctrine or evaluate religious beliefs. In the case at hand, the duty would be the same even if the defendant were the Girl Scouts sending adults and children out to sell cookies or a political group sending them into a neighborhood to solicit signatures on a petition. Imposition of the obligation does not violate the First Amendment.

The argument that the California Constitution, article I, section 4, is violated by a finding of duty in this case is also without merit. The same argument was rejected in RCALA, whether based on the compelling state interest test or a lesser standard. (131 Cal.App.4th at pp. 437-440.) Indeed, the language of Section 4 itself recognizes that its protections do not "excuse acts that are licentious or inconsistent with the peace or safety of the State." (Cal. Const., art. I, § 4.)

B. Imposing A Duty To Warn Of Kendrick's Admitted Prior Acts Would Not Violate His Constitutional Rights.

Watchtower argues that imposing "a duty upon defendants to warn members of the congregation that Kendrick had molested a minor" in the absence of their knowledge of his criminal conviction "would violate the fundamental constitutional rights of citizens to privacy, liberty, and due process, and deprive citizens of procedural safeguards…." (WNY AOB 48-52.) The argument is without merit.

As noted earlier, In re the Clergy Cases I, supra, 188 Cal.App.4th 1224, upheld the public release of psychological evaluations and progress reports concerning Franciscan friars alleged to have committed child abuse, rejecting a claim that the release violated constitutional privacy interests. (Id. at pp. 1234-1236.) The court held that compelling social interests in the disclosure of information relating to "sexual predators of children" outweighed the friars' constitutional privacy interests. (Id. at p. 1235.) It concluded that members of the Catholic Church had a compelling interest in knowing the treatment the friars had received and "whether it was adequate to protect young parishioners." (Id. at p. 1236.)

The cases cited by Watchtower are inapposite. They all deal with the governmental disclosure of child abuse by an individual who disputes the government's finding of child abuse. None stands for the blanket proposition that disclosure of such information violates the due process, privacy, or liberty rights of the individual. (See Humphries v. County of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 2009) 554 F.3d 1170, 1200-1201 [California statute violated due process rights of parents who continued to be listed as child abusers on central index even after being found factually innocent of child abuse]; Valmonte v. Bane (2nd Cir. 1994) 18 F.3d 992, 1003-1004 [county's procedure for identifying child abusers on central register violated due process because of demonstrated high risk of misidentification]; Bohn v. Dakota County (8th Cir. 1985) 772 F.2d 1433, 1439 [Minnesota statute requiring mandatory reporting of suspected child abuse to and maintenance of records by county authorities did not violate due process]; Doe v. Poritz (N.J. 1995) 662 A.2d 367, 372-373 [upholding New Jersey's "Megan's Law"].)

Here, Watchtower has made no showing, either factually or legally, that requiring it to warn parents that Kendrick had inappropriately touched a child would have violated any constitutional right of Kendrick.

III. THE INSTRUCTIONS ON DUTY TO WARN, THE MANDATORY REPORTING STATUTE, AND ALLOCATION OF FAULT TO OTHERS WERE NOT PREJUDICIALLY ERRONEOUS.

A. Standard Of Review.

The propriety of the giving of a jury instruction is a question of law that is reviewed de novo. (Cristler v .Express Messenger Systems, Inc. (2009) 171 Cal.App.4th 72, 82.) If an instruction is found to be erroneous, reversal is required only when "'it appears probable that the improper instruction misled the jury and affected its verdict. [Citation.]' [Citation.]" (SCC Acquisitions, Inc. v. Central Pacific Bank (2012) 207 Cal.App.4th 859, 863; Spriesterbach v. Holland (2013) 215 Cal.App.4th 255, 263.)

In determining whether a jury was likely misled the court must evaluate (1) the state of the evidence, (2) the effect of other instructions, (3) the effect of counsel's arguments, and (4) any indications by the jury itself that it was misled. (Soule v. General Motors Corp. (1994) 8 Cal.4th 548, 580-581; Spriesterbach, supra, 215 Cal.App.4th at p. 263.)

B. The Duty-To-Warn Instruction Was Not Erroneous And Even If It Was The Error Was Waived And Was Harmless.

Congregation contends the trial court erred in instructing the jury as follows:

> In determining whether or not Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc. and Fremont Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses, North Unit, took reasonable protective measures, you may consider the following:
> 1. The presence or absence of any warning;

> 2. Whether or not any educational programs were made available to plaintiff, her parents, or to other Jehovah's Witnesses from the Fremont Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses, North Unit, members for the purpose of sexual abuse education and prevention; and
> 3. Such other facts and circumstances contained in the evidentiary record here as to the presence or absence of protective measures.

(8 RT 987, 988; 9 RT 1054.)

Congregation argues that this instruction was "impermissibly vague regarding the scope of the duty" because it "did nothing to clarify" "what a reasonable and proper warning would or should look like." (NFC AOB 46-47, italics added.) The argument is without merit; in any event, any claimed error was (a) waived by a failure to request clarifying instructions and (b) plainly harmless.

1. The instruction was properly phrased.

Whether based on their special relationship with Candace, with Kendrick, or with both, or based instead upon general principles of duty arising from a Rowland v. Christian analysis, the language of the duty instruction is fairly and accurately phrased. Defendants had a duty to protect Candace from molestation by Kendrick that arose from or occurred during church-sponsored events that their joint agents supervised.

2. In any event, any defect in the instruction was waived by defendants' failure to request a clarifying instruction.

Assuming arguendo that the challenged instruction was defective for failing to clarify what a proper warning would be or to otherwise define the scope of the duty, defendants waived the right to assert that error on appeal. "It is settled that a party may not complain on appeal that an instruction correct in law is too general or incomplete unless he had requested an additional or qualifying instruction." (Agarwal v. Johnson (1979) 25 Cal.3d 932, 948, cits. omitted, overruled on other grounds in White v. Ultramar, Inc. (1999) 21 Cal.4th 563, 574, fn. 4.) Defendants do not contend that the instruction is incorrect, only that it fails to adequately clarify the contours of a required warning. Because they requested no additional or qualifying instructions to cure this alleged infirmity the claimed error has been waived.

3. Moreover, because it was undisputed that defendants gave no warning at all, any error in failing to instruct on the scope of an adequate warning was obviously harmless.

Assuming arguendo the instruction was erroneous as claimed the error was obviously harmless. First, it was undisputed that defendants never gave a warning of any sort. Consequently, the jury was never called upon to determine "what a reasonable and proper warning … should look like." A failure to instruct on this point therefore could not possibly have affected the verdict.

Second, there was substantial evidence that defendants committed both a misfeasance (by affirmatively assigning plaintiff to perform field service with Kendrick) and a nonfeasance (by failing to protect plaintiff). Nothing in the record, however, suggests that the jury's finding of negligence was based only on the latter theory. An instruction erroneous on a particular issue is considered harmless "where on another controlling issue or cause of action the verdict or judgment is sustained by the evidence." (9 Witkin, Cal. Procedure (5th ed. 2008) Appeal, § 433, pp. 487-488; see Gombiner v. Swartz, supra, 167 Cal.App.4th at p. 1376; [if verdict supported by lawful basis and unlawful basis, court will presume it rested on lawful basis unless record affirmatively shows otherwise].) Here, the jury was properly instructed on—and substantial evidence supports—defendants' negligence for misfeasance and. Consequently, any error in the duty-to-protect instruction was rendered harmless.

C. The "Mandated Reporter" Instructional Error Is Actually A Claim Of Evidentiary Error That Was Invited By Watchtower, Waived By The Congregation, And Was Harmless.

Defendants contend the trial court erred in refusing to instruct the jury that clergy members were not required by statute to report child sex abuse to the authorities in 1993. They claim such an instruction was necessary in order to "correct" testimony by plaintiff's expert, Dr. Anna Salter, which (so the argument runs) "confused the jury." (NFC AOB 48-49; WNY AOB 21.) Dr. Salter explained that although California's 1993 mandatory reporting statute did not specifically address the clergy it nonetheless mandated reporting by "people who were involved with children"—which could include the clergy; the clergy was not specifically included in the statute "until a later period of time." (6 RT 693.)

Defendants contend this testimony was improper because "it was not the expert's job to tell the jury what the relevant law required" but was instead "exclusively the province of the trial court to tell the jury what the relevant law required." (NFC AOB 49.)

In short, defendants' true complaint is not instructional error but evidentiary error—i.e., that Dr. Salter's testimony should not have been admitted. Defendants admit that the only purpose of the instruction they sought was to correct this error. (NFC AOB 48-49.)

Defendants, however, are precluded from asserting such error because (1) Watchtower—not plaintiff—elicited this testimony and thus invited the error and (2) the Congregation failed to object to it or move to strike it, thereby waiving its right to challenge it on appeal. (See 6 RT 693-694.)

Under the doctrine of invited error, a party who by its own conduct induces the commission of error may not claim on appeal that the judgment should be reversed because of that error. (Transport Ins. Co. v. TIG Ins. Co (2012) 202 Cal.App.4th 984, 1000) "[W]here a deliberate trial strategy results in an outcome disappointing to the advocate, the lawyer may not use that tactical decision as the basis to claim prejudicial error." (Mesecher v. County of San Diego (1992) 9 Cal.App.4th 1677, 1686.) Here, because Watchtower chose to ask the questions, it should not be heard to complain merely because it did not like the answers. Watchtower invited the alleged error by introducing the evidence it now claims should not have been admitted.

Furthermore, the Congregation waived the error. Failure to timely object to evidence bars a party from challenging its admissibility on appeal. (Evid. Code, § 353; Fry v. Pro-Line Boats, Inc. (2008) 163 Cal.App.4th 970, 974.) Indeed, during colloquy concerning the defendants' proffered instruction, the trial judge commented, "[I]f somebody had objected to the discussion about what the law was at that time, I would have granted it…." (9 RT 1022, italics added.) (See Ferris v. Gatke Corp. (2003) 107 Cal.App.4th 1211, 1225, fn. 7 [trial judge felt blindsided by party's failure to make timely objection on procedural issue].)

In any event, any error in admitting this testimony was rendered harmless by the instruction the judge ultimately gave. It charged that the mandatory reporting statute was irrelevant to the jurors' determination of the case and they were not to consider it:

> Whether there was a statutory duty to report to lawful authorities a purported incident of child abuse…is a matter of law for determination by the trial Court. Your deliberations are to be based solely upon the evidence presented and instructions given without any consideration whatsoever as to whether there was any statutory duty to report …."

(9 RT 1057, 1058.)

In effect, this instruction was a belated admonishment to the jury not to consider expert testimony (including Dr. Salter's) on the mandatory reporting statute—and it was belated only because defendants failed to request it sooner. It effectively placed defendants in the same position they would have been in had they requested an admonishment at the time the testimony was given. They were entitled to no more.

Moreover, in point of fact Dr. Salter's testimony was factually correct and hence did not need "correcting." Although defendants' record does not include it, plaintiff requested judicial notice of the 1993 version of Penal Code section 11165.7, subdivision (a), a request the trial court eventually denied. (RAB 102-103.) The plain language of the 1993 version specifically included obligations to report on the part of "administrators and employees" involved in "contact and supervision of children" or in "public or private" "youth programs." The law did not exclude ministers or members of the clergy who fell within these more general categories.

The Congregation also erroneously claims—without a supporting record cite—that its instruction was required because plaintiff's counsel argued in closing that the Congregation elders were mandatory reporters. (NFC AOB 49.) In fact, no such argument was ever made.

In any event, any conceivable instructional error on this point was harmless. The testimony devoted to mandatory reporting was minimal. The jury did not request a rereading of any instructions, no other instruction on duty or negligence referred to the mandatory reporting issue, plaintiff's counsel did not argue the issue, and the jury's 11-1 verdict on negligence

(11 RT 1216-1217) was not close. (See Mitchell v. Gonzales (1991) 54 Cal.3d 1041, 1055 [10-2 verdict "not particularly close"].) There is absolutely no indication that the jury was misled or that it found liability against either defendant based on its failure to report Kendrick's molestation of Andrea. None of the factors for assessing prejudice of instructional error is met. (See Soule v. General Motors Corp., supra, 8 Cal.4th at pp. 580-581.)

D. The Evidence Was Insufficient To Permit The Jury To Allocate Fault To Law Enforcement Agencies Or Plaintiff's Parents.

1. Defendants' burden of proof.

Defendants claim prejudicial error in the trial court's refusal to instruct on the allocation of fault to "other parties" and to include on the special verdict form Candace's parents (Neil and Kathleen Conti) and law enforcement agencies who were aware in 1994 of Kendrick's molestation of Andrea.

A nonparty may be included on a special verdict form as a person to whom fault may be allocated only if a prima facie case has been presented establishing that person's legal duty, breach of the duty, and causation of the injury. (Ford v. Polaris Industries, Inc. (1997) 139 Cal.App.4th 755, 778-780; Chakalis v. Elevator Solutions, Inc. (2012) 205 Cal.App.4th 1557, 1569-1570.) The burden is on defendants to present a prima facie case. (Wilson v. Ritto (2003) 105 Cal.App.4th 361, 369-70.)

2. There was no evidence plaintiff's parents had actual knowledge of Kendrick's propensity to abuse children, which is required for imposition of a duty.

Defendants claim that plaintiffs' parents owed plaintiff a legal duty to protect her from Kendrick's abuse. (WNY AOB 40; NFC AOB 51.) They point out that the parents had received Awake! and Watchtower articles on child abuse which informed them of steps they could have taken to protect plaintiff from child abusers. (WNY AOB 40; NFC AOB 51.) They contend actual knowledge by the parents of Kendrick's propensity to molest children was not required.

The contention is without merit. In fact, a prima facie case against parents for failing to protect their child against abuse by a third party requires proof of actual unambiguous knowledge of the perpetrator's assaultive propensities. (Romero v. Superior Court (2001) 89 Cal.App.4th 1068, 1080; Chaney v. Superior Court (1995) 39 Cal.App.4th 152, 157-158; see also Santillan v. Roman Catholic Bishop of Fresno (2012) 202 Cal.App.4th 708, 719-721, citing Federico v. Superior Court (1997) 59 Cal.App.4th 1207, 1216; Juarez, supra,. 81 Cal.App.4th at p. 396; Margaret W. v. Kelley R. (2006) 139 Cal.App.4th 141, 152, 159-160 [host of sleepover had no duty to prevent rape of teenager where host had no actual knowledge of assaultive propensity of boys teenager left with].)

The fact that Neil and Kathleen Conti allowed Kendrick to drive their daughter places at times when they were absorbed with Kathleen's mental health disability fails to establish their actual knowledge of Kendrick as a molester and hence fails to support imposition of a duty on them to protect Candace from Kendrick. It is in fact consistent with Elder Abrahamson's unsurprising testimony that parents would sometimes get other Congregation members to drive their children to an event the parents were unable to attend. (3 RT 145, 146.) This evidence supports the need for elders to warn parents of a child molester in the small congregation.

The authorities cited by defendants are inapposite. Although Watchtower contends plaintiff's parents violated a "statutory duty," it cites no authority in support. (See WNY AOB 40.) The Congregation cites only two criminal cases, People v. Swanson-Bierabent (2003) 114 Cal.App.4th 733 and People v. Rolon (2008) 160 Cal.App.4th 1206, neither of which applies. In both, a parent was convicted of aiding and abetting child abuse based upon evidence of the parent's contemporaneous actual knowledge of the abuse. In Swanson-Bierabent, the evidence showed that the victim's mother was watching when her boyfriend molested the victim. (114 Cal.App.4th at pp. 741-742.) Similarly, in Rolon, a mother not only watched the father throw their child against a wall and punch him in the chest, she actually helped cover up the child's death by helping to burning the body. (160 Cal.App.4th at pp. 1210-1211.)

Defendants also argue that Neil Conti was negligent because he "was present" when Kendrick abused Candace on an Amtrak train and did nothing to protect her from it. (NFC AOB 51; WNY AOB 11.) The Congregation, misquoting the record, claims this occurred "in plain view" of Mr. Conti. (NFC AOB 5, citing 6 RT 745-746.)

In fact, the evidence established only that plaintiff was "running from table to table or something" when Kendrick grabbed her and stuck his hand up her shirt while Mr. Conti was sitting "across the way from us" on the other side of the table. (6 RT 745-746.) Plaintiff did not say her father was watching them or even looking in their direction. Nor did the evidence show whether his view was clear or whether it may have been obstructed by the table or by Mr. Kendrick himself. Plaintiff testified only to where he was sitting.

Furthermore, even if Mr. Conti had seen Kendrick stick his hand up plaintiff's shirt, the evidence failed to establish that this could be perceived only as intentional, unambiguous sexual conduct as opposed to, for example, an inadvertent act.

In short, the evidence was insufficient to establish Mr. Conti's actual knowledge of unambiguous sexual conduct on the part of Kendrick. (See Santillan, supra, 202 Cal.App.4th at pp. 719-720.)

3. There was no evidence of a special relationship that would support imposition of a duty on the law enforcement agencies.

Watchtower and Congregation argue that the Fremont Police Department, Child Protective Services, and the Alameda County District

Attorney were at fault because each knew in 1994 that Jonathan Kendrick had abused his stepdaughter and did not warn plaintiff or her parents. (WNY AOB 37.) Both claim that the failure to include these agencies on the verdict form was a violation of the First Amendment, because it "singled out the Defendants for special treatment." (WNY AOB 41, original italics; NFC AOB 52.)

Absent a "special relationship," law enforcement or other public agencies have no duty to warn citizens of an individual who presents a danger to others. (Denton v. City of Fullerton (1991) 233 Cal.App.3d 1636, 1640-1641.) In Denton, the Court of Appeal held that police officers aware of a sexual assault in an apartment complex laundry room had no duty to warn residents of the risk of sexual assaults on the property. Denton relied on Thompson v. County of Alameda (1980) 27 Cal.3d 741, where it was held that, absent a threat "to a readily identifiable victim or group of victim," county employees had no duty to warn neighbors that a juvenile released from detention might constitute a danger to them. (Id. at p. 758.)

Here, there was no evidence that any public entity had any relationship at all with Candace or her parents or that they placed her in Kendrick's custody of Mr. Kendrick. The trial court properly observed that under these circumstances imposing a duty on law enforcement agencies would be "incredibly burdensome." (8 RT 966-967.)

Watchtower's argument that it is being treated differently than law enforcement agencies in violation of the First Amendment is without factual or legal support. First, unlike the law enforcement agencies, Watchtower's liability was based not only on its failure to protect plaintiff but also on its affirmative negligence in assigning plaintiff and Kendrick to perform field service together. Second, Watchtower's duty to protect Candace arose from its special relationships with her and with Kendrick; in contrast, as set forth earlier, the law enforcement agencies had no special relationship with either of these individuals. There was no disparate treatment.

Defendant's reliance upon Bly-Magee v. Budget Rent-A-Car Corp. (1994) 24 Cal.App.4th 318, is misplaced. There, law enforcement officers and agencies were properly included on the verdict form because the plaintiff claimed she was assaulted by another while incarcerated. (Id. at p. 321.) Obviously, the fact that the plaintiff was under the officers' and agencies' custody and control by virtue of her incarceration gave rise to a special relationship and hence to a duty. (See Giraldo v. Dept. of Corrections and Rehabilitation, supra, 168 Cal.App.4th 231, 250-251.)

IV. THERE IS NO EVIDENTIARY OR CONSTITUTIONAL BASIS TO VACATE OR FURTHER REDUCE THE PUNITIVE DAMAGE AWARD.

A. Substantial Evidence Established Watchtower Was Guilty Of Malice In Keeping Kendrick's Abuse Secret And In Assigning Plaintiff To Field Service With A Known Child Molester.

1. Standard of review.

A jury's finding of malice is reviewed for substantial evidence. (Egan v. Mutual of Omaha Ins. Co. (1979) 24 Cal.3d 809, 821.) Under that standard > the power of an appellate court begins and ends with a determination as to whether there is any substantial evidence, contradicted or uncontradicted, to support the findings below. We must therefore view the evidence in the light most favorable to the prevailing party, giving it the benefit of every reasonable inference and resolving all conflicts in its favor in accordance with the standard of review so long adhered to by this court.

(Bickel v. City of Piedmont (1997) 16 Cal.4th 1040, 1053, internal cits. & quotation marks omitted; see Whiteley v. Philip Morris, Inc. (2004) 117 Cal.App.4th 635, 678 [party claiming insufficiency of evidence assumes a "'daunting burden'"].)

2. Trial court proceedings.

The jury found by clear and convincing evidence that Watchtower was guilty of malice. (5 AA 1286.) Watchtower moved for a new trial and judgment notwithstanding the verdict, arguing that the evidence of malice was insufficient and that the $21,000,001 award of punitive damages was excessive. (5 AA 1357, 1366-1370.) The trial court upheld the jury's finding of malice but conditionally granted a new trial unless plaintiff accepted a reduction of the punitive damages to $8,610,000. (8 AA 1936-1939.)

3. Substantial evidence supported the finding of malice.

Watchtower's argument that no substantial evidence supports the jury's finding of malice essentially credits its theory of the evidence and ignores plaintiff's. In fact, the evidence easily supports the finding of malice.

"Malice," in the context of punitive damages, means "despicable conduct which is carried on by the defendant with a willful and conscious disregard of the rights or safety of others." (Civ. Code § 3294, subd. (c)(1); Johnson & Johnson v. Superior Court (2011) 192 Cal.App.4th 757, 765-766 [evidence of malice sufficient where it showed defendant had responsibility to warn of drug side-effect but failed to warn despite knowing such failure could cause harm].) It is well established that malice may be proved by circumstantial evidence. (Neal v. Farmers Ins. Exchange (1978) 21 Cal.3d 910, 923, fn. 6; Grimshaw v. Ford Motor Co. (1981) 119 Cal.App.3d 757, 787 [circumstantial evidence admissible to establish motive since direct evidence on such facts rarely available].)

Here, substantial evidence established that Watchtower knew that child abusers are difficult to identify, operate in secrecy, frequently reoffend, and can cause "overwhelming" injury. (Statement of Facts, § B, ante.) It also established that Watchtower, upon being informed that

Kendrick had abused his stepdaughter, directed the elders to keep this information secret from Congregation members pursuant to its national policy as embodied in Exhibit 1. (Statement of Facts, § D1, ante.) And it established that Watchtower's purpose in doing so was to evade liability for damages. (Statement of Facts, § F, ante.)

Based on this evidence, the jury could justifiably conclude that Watchtower, knowing there was a risk Kendrick might molest a child of the Congregation and thus cause overwhelming injury to the child if parents were not warned about Kendrick, nevertheless consciously chose not to warn in order to promote its own self-interest in keeping incidents of child abuse quiet. In short, there was substantial evidence that Watchtower willfully and consciously disregarded the rights and safety of the Congregation's children and engaged in despicable conduct.

Watchtower contends that the "primary thrust" of Exhibit 1 "was to remind elders of Scriptural direction concerning confidential communications." It argues that another purpose was "to protect victims of child abuse and comply with all applicable legal obligations." (WNY AOB 55.) The jury, however, was entitled to reject these contentions and conclude that the true purpose of Exhibit 1 was to insulate the Jehovah's Witnesses from adverse legal claims. (Louis & Diederich, Inc. v. Cambridge European Imports, Inc. (1987) 189 Cal.App.3d 1574, 1584-1585 [it is for jury to determine which of multiple inferences is to be accepted and reasonable inference from circumstantial evidence may be accepted over direct evidence to contrary].)

The evidence supported an inference that the "primary" if not sole purpose of Exhibit 1 was not to provide "Scriptural direction" but was instead to promote defendants' own monetary interest in avoiding legal liability for damages. (See Statement of Facts, § F.) Its opening sentence provides, "We are writing to help all of you as individual elders be aware of a growing concern regarding the handling of your duties that may involve legal issues or questions." (8 AA 1973, italics added.) It states, "Improper use of the tongue by an elder can result in serious legal problems for the individual, the congregation, and even the Society." (8 AA 1973.)

Furthermore, elders were directed to keep the contents of Exhibit 1 a secret. (See 8 AA 1973 ["CONFIDENTIAL"], 1978 [postscript].) Why would it be necessary to keep "Scriptural direction concerning confidential communications" secret from Congregation members? Wouldn't they also benefit spiritually from this information?

Substantial evidence established that, in deciding to keep secret the presence of a known child molester, Watchtower willfully and consciously disregarded the safety of its child members and subordinated that safety in favor of promoting its own interest in avoiding potential civil liability. Such evidence is no less a valid basis for punitive damage liability than evidence that a manufacturer willfully and consciously chose to keep secret an injury-causing defect in one of its products. (See Johnson & Johnson v. Superior Court, supra, 192 Cal.App.4th at p. 767.)

In asserting an absence of malice Watchtower points to its conduct in advising victims concerning reporting violations and in educating parents concerning the scourge of child molestation. (WNY AOB 55-56.) This evidence, however, was irrelevant to plaintiff's claim of malice. Plaintiff claimed malice based on the failure to warn about Kendrick—not on a failure to report him to authorities or to educate parents generally about child abuse. In any event, as the trial judge concluded, "The net effect of defendant's decision not to disclose was to imperil the safety of each child in a small congregation and thoroughly undermine defendant's teachings and understanding of child molesters and the methods of dealing with them as reflected in their writings distributed to the congregants on a national basis." (8 AA 1938.)

Finally, separate and apart from Exhibit 1, the evidence that defendants assigned Candace to perform field service even though they knew he had molested his stepdaughter also supports the finding of malice. The elders obviously knew that assigning a child to perform field service with Kendrick would pose a grave risk to the child. (3 RT 248 [such an assignment would be "suicidal"].) Although the Congregation elders testified that Kendrick was never assigned to perform field service with a child and indeed was not allowed to perform it without an elder (3 RT 186, 248), the jury necessarily rejected this testimony in favor of plaintiff's evidence that in fact she was assigned to field service with Kendrick. (6 RT 662-663, 666, 726-727, 728.)

The jury was also entitled to conclude that Elder Abrahamson, who oversaw field service assignments for the Congregation and was admittedly an agent of Watchtower, was a "managing agent" for the purpose of assigning field service partners. (See Major v. Western Home Insurance Co. (2009) 169 Cal.App.4th 1197, 1220-21.) Although Elder Shuster testified he "believed" Watchtower had a written policy against assigning molesters performing field service with children, the policy was never produced. (5 RT 526-527; 7 RT 933-935.) The jury was therefore entitled to conclude that Watchtower had no such policy (see Breland v. Taylor Engineering & Manufacturing Co. (1942) 52 Cal.App.2d 415, 425-426), and thus entitled to further conclude that the policy on this subject was left to the local congregation elders responsible for field service assignments. Finally, the fact that Candace was assigned to perform field service with Kendrick on multiple occasions supported an inference that defendants' policy permitted a child to be assigned to field service with a known child molester.

In short, substantial evidence supported a finding that assigning Candace to field service with Kendrick constituted malice.

B. The Remitted Punitive Damage Award Was Not Excessive And Did Not Violate Due Process Standards.

Watchtower argues that the reduced punitive damage amount of $8,610,000 is unconstitutionally excessive for two reasons. (WNY AOB 58, 59.) First, it asserts that the compensatory award "itself is so astronomically high" that it likely was punitive. (WNY AOB 58, 59, citing Simon v. San Paolo U.S. Holding Company, Inc. (2005) 35 Cal.4th 1159.) Second, it argues that punitive damages may not be based on a national policy, even where that policy has caused injury to the plaintiff before the court. (WNY AOB 59-61.) Neither argument has merit.

1. Standard of review.

Whether an award of punitive damages is constitutionally excessive is reviewed de novo. (Simon v. San Paolo U.S. Holding Co. Inc. (2005) 35 Cal.4th 1159, 1172.) However, the court's obligation to conduct a due process review of punitive damages does not create an opportunity for the defendant to make "an end run" around the jury's factual findings. (Bankhead v. ArvinMeritor, Inc. (2012) 205 Cal.App.4th 68, 86.) Thus, the reviewing court conducts its de novo review with deference to the jurors' role as the determiner of the facts. (Amerigraphics, Inc. v. Mercury Casualty Co. (2010) 182 Cal.App.4th 1538, 1560.)

2. The jury was properly permitted to consider that the harm to plaintiff resulted from a national policy; the punitive damage award was not based on harm to persons other than plaintiffs.

Watchtower argues that any and all reference to a national policy as a basis for punitive damages is an unconstitutional due process violation, because it awards damages for harm to persons other than the plaintiff. (WNY AOB 59-61.)

In Johnson v. Ford Motor Co. (2005) 35 Cal.4th 1191, 1202-1203, the California Supreme Court recognized that evidence "describing out of state transactions" may be relevant to the determination of the degree of reprehensibility. The court specifically recognized the distinction between punishing a defendant for harm to others, which is improper, and a consideration of the defendants' conduct in the context of "a business practice or policy," where the individual plaintiff can demonstrate that the conduct toward her warrants a stronger penalty to deter continued or repeated conduct of the same nature. (Id. at p. 1206, fn.6.)

Any fair reading of Johnson v. Ford Motor Co. must recognize a state's legitimate interest in punishing or deterring a defendant whose national policy or practice harms a state resident; accordingly, admission of evidence of national policies on the issue of reprehensibility is obviously proper. (Bullock v. Philip Morris USA, Inc. (2008) 159 Cal.App.4th 655, 693-694.)

Here, the trial court did not admit evidence of harm to persons other than plaintiff. It limited the admissibility of evidence of Kendrick's sexual "grooming" of another girl from the Congregation to Kendrick only. (9 RT 1049.) Furthermore, the trial court excluded both general and statistical evidence of the abuse of other Jehovah's Witnesses children. The court specifically instructed that "punitive damages may not be used to punish a defendant for the impact of its alleged misconduct on persons other than Candace Conti." (9 RT 1229, 1230.) Nothing in the record suggests that the jury failed to follow this instruction or that it awarded punitive damages to punish Watchtower for harm to others.

3. The reprehensibility of Watchtower's conduct amply justified the 3:1 punitive-to-compensatory damages ratio.

The U. S. Supreme Court set forth five factors to be considered in evaluating reprehensibility for punitive damage purposes. (State Farm Mutual Auto Insurance Co. v. Campbell (2003) 538 U.S. 408, 419.) Applied here, these factors show: (1) there was physical, not just economic, harm; (2) there was evidence of reckless disregard and indifference to children exposed to abusers, including Candace; (3) there was vulnerability (youth) of the victim, albeit not financial vulnerability; 4) the conduct was not repeated as to Kendrick but was part of a national policy; and 5) the decisions to keep secret Kendrick's risk to abuse and to assign him to field service with Candace were intentional, even though the molestation was not intended. As in Amerigraphics, supra, consideration of comparable civil penalties is inapplicable. (182 Cal.App.4th at pp. 1565-1566.)

Here, the trial court fully analyzed the factors of reprehensibility in its new trial order and concluded they justified a 3:1 ratio. (7 AA 1937, 1938.)[5] Three of the factors support a higher punitive damages ratio, and two are equally weighted. In Amerigraphics, the presence of only one factor of the five was held to support a punitive-to-compensatory damages ratio of 3.8:1. (Amerigraphics, supra, 182 Cal.App.4th at p. 1567.)

In some cases compensatory damage awards have been deemed punitive in nature, resulting in a reduction of the ratio of punitive-to-compensatory damages for due process purposes; none of those cases, however, remotely resembles the case at hand. For example, in State Farm, supra, there was no physical assault or trauma and the emotional distress claimed against the insurance company arose from the same conduct that supported the punitive damages—refusal to pay the claim. (538 U.S. at p. 426.) In Roby v. McKesson Corp. (2009) 47 Cal.4th 686, there was no physical harm and the compensatory damage awards overlapped each other.

[5] Because the jury expressly found an agency relationship between Watchtower and the Congregation, the trial court ruled that the "base level" for Watchtower's compensatory damages should be 40 percent (Watchtower's 27 percent plus the Congregation's 13 percent) of the total compensatory damages of $7,000,000, or $2,800,000. (7 AA 1938.) The defendants do not challenge this ruling on appeal. The remitted punitive damage amount is 3.07 times this base level.

Furthermore, in Bankhead v. ArvinMeritor, Inc. (2012) 205 Cal.App.4th 68, 90, the court upheld a 2.4:1 ratio despite acknowledging that the emotional distress award was "high enough that it appears to include a punitive component."

Here the reprehensibility of the conduct and the undisputed severity of the injury are far more compelling than in Bankhead. Plaintiff was subjected at a very young age to repetitive sexual abuse during which she was trapped inside the perpetrator's vehicle and forcibly taken to his home (6 RT 729-731.) She suffered chronic, permanent PTSD, substance abuse, and depression as a result. (5 RT 563, 578, 581, 585, 586, 588, 7 RT 794, 802-808, 810, 811.)

Defendants did not dispute these injuries. In view of them, the compensatory damages were reasonable and not inherently punitive in nature. The 3:1 ratio was within due process standards.

V. DEFENDANTS' FAILURE TO FOLLOW THE RULES OF COURT PREJUDICES THEIR APPEAL.

Rule 8.204(a)(1)(2)(C) of the California Rules of Court requires an appellant's opening brief to provide a summary of the significant facts limited to matters in the record. The opening briefs of both Watchtower and the Congregation violate this rule. Each omits critical facts, including the fact that the elders assigned Jonathan Kendrick and Candace Conti together in field service, the expert testimony of Dr. Salter and Carl Lewis, and the testimony of Carolyn Martinez and Evelyn Kendrick.

Furthermore, defendants fail to cite controlling authorities relied on by the trial court. (See, e.g., RAB 1-3, 6, 7, citing RCALA; 6 AA 1607, 1608; 7 AA 1810, citing Johnson v. Ford Motor Co.; RAB 105, citing Wilson v. Ritto, Denton v. City of Fullerton and Thompson v. County of Alameda; RAB 106, citing Romero v. Superior Court and Chaney v. Superior Court.)

Defendants' tactics are not unlike those in Kleveland v. Siegel & Wolensky LLP (2013) 215 Cal.App.4th 534, 539-540, where misrepresentation of the record and refusal to discuss established case law without explanation or justification justified sanctions. Here, defendants' omission of critical evidence and failure to discuss controlling law is a tacit acknowledgment that their appeal has no merit.

CONCLUSION

For the reasons stated above, the judgment should be affirmed in full.

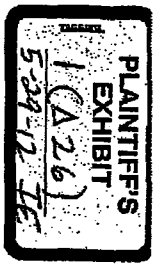
TO ALL BODIES OF ELDERS IN THE UNITED STATES

CONFIDENTIAL



Dear Brothers:

We are writing to help all of you as individual elders be aware of a growing concern regarding the handling of your duties that may involve legal issues or questions. Due to its importance, the presiding overseer should arrange for a special meeting of the body of elders to read and consider this letter carefully.

In spreading the Kingdom message, it is appropriate that we be bold and outspoken. Jesus commanded that "what you hear whispered, preach from the housetops." (Matthew 10:27) Even when worldly authorities demand that we keep silent, we reply as did the apostles: "We cannot stop speaking about the things we have seen and heard." (Acts 4:20) The Christian congregation will continue to declare the Kingdom message boldly until Jehovah says the work is done.

Elders share the obligation to shepherd the flock. However, they must be careful not to divulge information about personal matters to unauthorized persons. There is "a time to keep quiet," when "your words should prove to be few." (Ecclesiastes 3:7; 5:2) Proverbs 10:19 warns: "In the abundance of words there does not fail to be transgression, but the one keeping his lips in check is acting discreetly." Problems are created when elders unwisely reveal matters that should be kept confidential. Elders must give special heed to the counsel: "Do not reveal the confidential talk of another." (Proverbs 25:9) Often the peace, unity, and spiritual well-being of the congregation are at stake. Improper use of the tongue by an elder can result in serious legal problems for the individual, the congregation, and even the Society.

While we as Christians are ready to forgive others who may wrong us, those in the world are not so inclined. Worldly persons are quick to resort to lawsuits if they feel their "rights" have been violated. Some who oppose the Kingdom preaching work readily take advantage of any legal provisions to interfere with it or impede its progress. Thus, elders must especially guard the use of the tongue. Jesus faced opposers who tried to "catch him in speech, so as to turn him over to the government." (Luke 20:20) He instructed us to be "cautious as serpents and yet innocent as doves" in such situations. (Matthew 10:16) Where such a threat exists, our position as elders should be in line with David's words: "I will set a muzzle as a guard to my own mouth, as long as anyone wicked is in front of me."--Psalm 39:1.

In recent years, this matter has come to be a cause for increasing concern. The spirit of the world has sensitized people regarding their legal "rights" and the legal means by which they can exact punishment if such "rights" are violated. Hence, a growing number of vindictive or disgruntled ones, as well as opposers, have initiated lawsuits to inflict financial penalties on the individual, the congregation, or the Society. Many of these lawsuits are the result of the misuse of the tongue. As elders, remember that ill-advised statements or actions on your part can sometimes be interpreted legally as violating others' "rights."

The need for elders to maintain strict confidentiality has been repeatedly stressed. Please see The Watchtower of April 1, 1971, pages 222-4, and September 1, 1987, pages 12-15. The September 1977 Our Kingdom Service, page 6, paragraph 36, and the ks77 textbook, page 65, also provide helpful direction and counsel. That material strongly emphasized the elders' responsibility to avoid revealing confidential information to those not entitled to it.

The legal consequences of a breach of confidentiality by the elders can be substantial. If the elders fail to follow the Society's direction carefully in handling confidential matters, such mistakes could result in successful litigation by those offended. Substantial monetary damages could be assessed against the elders or congregation. In some cases where the authorities are involved, certain complications could lead to a fine or imprisonment. These possibilities underscore the need for elders to be discerning and to follow carefully directions provided by the Society.

I. WHAT TO DO IN SPECIFIC CASES

A. Judicial Committee Matters

Judicial committees must follow carefully the Society's instructions in carrying out their duties. (Note ks77, pages 66-70; ks81, pages 150-70.) Anything submitted in writing to the committee by the alleged wrongdoer or by witnesses should be kept in strict confidence. If it is necessary to continue at a later time a committee hearing, the members of the committee should submit to the chairman any personal notes they have taken. The chairman will keep these notes in a secure place to prevent breaches of confidentiality. The notes may be returned to the individual elders when the hearing resumes. Upon conclusion of the case, the chairman should place only necessary notes and documents, a summary of the case, and the S-77 forms in a sealed envelope for the congregation file. Nothing should be preserved outside of this sealed envelope (including unnecessary personal notes) by any elder on the committee. Obviously, no committee will ever allow judicial proceedings to be tape recorded or allow witnesses testifying before the committee to take notes.

B. Child Abuse

Many states have child abuse reporting laws. When elders receive reports of physical or sexual abuse of a child, they should contact the Society's Legal Department immediately. Victims of such abuse need to be protected from further danger. See "If the Worst Should Happen," Awake! January 22, 1985, page 8.

C. Search warrants and Subpoenas

1. A search warrant is a court order authorizing the police to search premises to locate evidence that may be used in a criminal prosecution. No elder should ever consent to the search of a Kingdom Hall or any other place where confidential records are stored. However, armed with a search warrant the police do not need consent and may even use force to accomplish their task. Likely before obtaining a search warrant, the police or other governmental officials will make inquiries regarding confidential records, make request to obtain the records, or indicate that they will seek a search warrant if the elder(s) involved does not cooperate. In any such situation, the Society's Legal Department should be called immediately.

At any time an elder is confronted with a search warrant (whether given advance notice or not), the elder should first ask to read the warrant. After reading it he should ask if he can call for legal guidance and then call the Society's Legal Department. If for some reason the Legal Department cannot be contacted, the elders involved should make every effort to obtain the assistance of a local attorney for the purpose of protecting the confidentiality of the records. It may be impossible to stop determined officers from conducting the search authorized by the warrant. Conscientious elders will want to do all they reasonably and peaceably can to preserve the confidentiality of the congregation in harmony with the principle set out in Acts 5:29.

2. Subpoenas are demands for records or for the appearance of an individual at a trial or deposition to give testimony. Subpoenas may be issued by a court or in some cases by a governmental agency or an attorney. If an elder receives a subpoena, he should contact the Society's Legal Department immediately. Never turn over records, notes, documents, or reveal any confidential matter sought by subpoena without receiving direction from the Legal Department.

D. Crimes and Criminal investigations

In some cases the elders will form judicial committees to handle alleged wrongdoing that also could constitute a violation of Caesar's criminal laws (e.g., theft, assault, etc.). Generally, a secular investigation into a matter that is a concern to the congregation should not delay conducting a judicial hearing. To avoid entanglement with the secular authorities who may be investigating the same matter, the strictest confidentiality (even of the fact that there is a committee) must be maintained.

If the alleged wrongdoer confesses to the sin (crime), no one else should be present besides the members of the committee. When evidence supports the accusation but genuine repentance is not displayed resulting in a decision to disfellowship, this should be handled in the normal course regarding advice of appeal rights and announcements to the congregation. In cases of serious criminal wrongdoing (e.g., murder, rape, etc.), or where the criminal conduct is widely known in the community, the body of elders should contact the Society before proceeding with the judicial committee process.

E. When Servants and Publishers Move

A considerable number of publishers, including elders and ministerial servants move from one congregation to another. Sometimes the circumstances surrounding their departure are unsettled. Some appointed brothers may be experiencing problems that have brought their qualifications into question. It is not uncommon for a body of elders to hold back in giving counsel, allowing a brother to move without discussing his problem. Thereafter, they decline to recommend his reappointment in his new congregation. Often such a brother protests, requiring extensive correspondence between the bodies of elders. Much personal, and sometimes embarrassing, information must then be passed on. Such mishandling of things greatly increases the potential for serious repercussions. Problems can be avoided by the body of elders assuming its responsibility to inform a brother that he will not be favorably recommended, fully explaining the reasons why. Every effort should be made to resolve any difference before he leaves, eliminating any need for controversy involving his new congregation. The body should assign two elders to meet with him before he moves, letting him know whether they are recommending him to the new congregation.

This would likewise apply to publishers who move at a time when their personal conduct requires investigation by the elders. If serious accusations of wrongdoing have been made against an individual and he moves to another congregation before matters are finalized, usually it is best for the elders in the original congregation to follow through in handling matters, if possible and if distance permits. They are acquainted with the individual and the circumstances surrounding the alleged wrongdoing; this ordinarily puts them in the best position to get the facts and to handle the case. Handling matters in this way will eliminate the need to reveal confidential information unnecessarily about the private lives of individuals.

F. When Lawsuits Are Threatened

If the congregation or the elders (in their capacity as elders) are threatened with a lawsuit, the Society's Legal Department should be contacted immediately. No statements should be made by any member of the body of elders about the merits or validity of an actual or threatened lawsuit without authorization from the Society.

G. Child Custody

Elders may learn that a publisher is facing a dispute over child custody in a divorce proceeding. If the parental rights of such is challenged on the basis of our Christian beliefs, or on the assertion that our beliefs are harmful to a child's best interests, the elders should immediately write to the Society's Legal Department. In a rare emergency, a telephone call may be necessary. The Legal Department will assess the facts and determine the degree of its involvement, if any. Elders have no authority to make any promises about the Society's paying legal fees or handling specific cases. There is no need to contact the Society if there is no indication that the beliefs and practices of Jehovah's Witnesses will be attacked in a child custody dispute.

When you write to the Society's Legal Department about a specific case, please provide the following information:

1. The names of the parents and their attorneys.

2. The number of children involved and their ages.

3. A brief description of the facts, including the presence of any apostates.

4. An assessment of the Christian parent's spiritual condition-Is he or she new in the truth? Active? Inactive? Balanced?

5. The status of the legal proceedings-Has the matter gone to trial? Has the trial date been set? If so, when?

II. POINTS TO REMEMBER

A. Appreciate the Importance of Maintaining Confidentiality

Elders must exercise extraordinary caution when it comes to handling confidential information about the private lives of others. Do not mistakenly minimize the gravity of a breach of confidentiality. Unauthorized disclosure of confidential information can result in costly lawsuits. Even if a lawsuit turns out favorably, valuable time and energy that could have been devoted to Kingdom interests will be lost.

B. Do Not Make Statements to Secular Authorities Until You Receive Legal Advice from the Society

You are not legally required to make immediate responses to secular authorities about matters that could involve the disclosure of confidential information. Voluntarily allowing the Kingdom Hall or confidential records to be searched, where no search warrant is produced, could infringe on the legal rights of the congregation or of others. No statements should be made until you have an understanding of your legal position from the Society's Legal Department.

C. Be Extremely Careful with Written Material

All material related to judicial matters should be kept in a safe place, accessible only to elders. Final reports on the handling of judicial matters should be placed in a sealed envelope in the congregation file. A judicial committee should avoid sending to an individual any kind of correspondence that accuses him of specific wrongdoing. (Note ks77, pages 68-9.) Nothing should be put in writing to any disfellowshipped person to advise him of his status or the reasons for it without specific direction from the Society. The rules and procedures of Jehovah's Witnesses do not require such written disclosures. Anything in writing submitted to a judicial committee should be kept in strict confidence. If a judicial committee disfellowships an individual, he should be informed orally of the action taken and of the right to appeal. If the wrongdoer refuses to attend the hearing, two members of the judicial committee should attempt to contact the individual at his home and inform him orally of the decision. If this is not possible, the two elders may be able to inform him by telephone.

D. Guard the Use of Your Tongue

Think before you speak. Do not discuss private and judicial matters with members of your family, including your wives, or with other members of the congregation. Be extremely careful not to inadvertently disclose private information when others are present, such as when speaking on the telephone with others listening in or nearby. (Note ks77, page 65.) At times, complicated judicial cases may necessitate consultation with an experienced, mature elder in another congregation or with the circuit overseer. Unless the circuit overseer is the elder consulted, only the pertinent details should be discussed and names should not be used.

Elders bear a heavy responsibility in ministering to the needs of the Christian congregation, and observing confidentiality as they do so. (1 Corinthians 16:13) We trust that the information in this letter will help you carry this burden. Please be assured of our love and prayers, and may Jehovah continue to bless you as you shepherd his flock.-1 Peter 5:1-3.

Your brothers,

Watchtower B. & T. Society
OF NEW YORK, INC.

P.S. Due to the importance of the information that is presented herein it is suggested that the body of elders jointly read and consider this letter as soon as possible after its receipt in the congregation. Please do not make any copies of this letter, nor should it be read by others. It should be kept in the congregation's confidential files for any future reference that may be required by the body of elders.

Defendant and Appellant FREEMONT CONGREGATION OF JEHOVAH'S WITNESSES ("Freemont Congregation" or "the Congregation") hereby files this Appellant's Opening Brief challenging: (a) the trial court's original Judgment following jury trial, entered on June 27, 2012; (b) the Amended Judgment entered on September 17, 2012; and (c) the trial court's related rulings of August 24, 2012, in favor of Plaintiff, JANE DOE ("Plaintiff"), on various post-trial motions.

I.

INTRODUCTION

Childhood sexual abuse is an abhorrent, wicked act that must not be tolerated. That does not mean, however, that trial courts can ignore law and reason to compensate abuse victims. Yet, that is what the trial court did to the Fremont Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses even though the congregation had neither custody of the minor victim in question, nor control over the perpetrator. Indeed, the congregation was unaware of the abuse when it occurred, did not condone that abuse, and did not cover it up.

California has long held to the principle that when allegations are founded upon nonfeasance, one has no duty to protect another from the criminal acts of a third party absent a special relationship. To establish a special relationship, there must be an element of "custody or control" between the parties. As this appeal demonstrates, the undisputed evidence in the case below shows that: (1) the Plaintiff's claims against Fremont Congregation are based on nonfeasance; (2) the Plaintiff's parents and her abuser were all rank-and-file members of Fremont Congregation; and (3) Fremont Congregation never had custody or control over the Plaintiff or her abuser, Jonathan Kendrick ("Kendrick"). Thus, Fremont Congregation owed no legal duty to Plaintiff as a matter of law.

The trial court, however, deliberately departed from those firmly entrenched principles and erroneously created a new duty for religious organizations – and by extension to all volunteer organizations – that requires them to protect a member 24 hours a day from another member's tortious or criminal acts, whether committed on or off church property. Such a result cannot stand.

II.

STATEMENT OF FACTS AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

A. Background of the Parties.

The Fremont Congregation is a not-for-profit religious corporation. Fremont Congregation is made up of men and women who attend religious services with their children at a place of worship called the "Kingdom Hall" ("Kingdom Hall" or "church"). (3 RT 142, 208-209; 5 RT 548.)[1] Most attendees actively engage in the public ministry for which Jehovah's Witnesses are known ("field service" or "field

[1] All facts in this brief are supported by reference to the companion Appellants' Joint Appendix, abbreviated as: ([volume] AA [page]); the Reporter's Transcript, abbreviated as: ([volume] RT [page]); and the exhibits identified on the record and/or admitted into evidence in the trial court, abbreviated as ([Offering Party] Exh. [number]).

ministry"), and all consider themselves "ministers." (5 RT 553; 7 RT 911, 913-14; 8 AA 2054 [Def. Exh. 131].) Fremont Congregation does not have paid clergy; activities are overseen by elders who are appointed by Co-Appellant Watchtower Bible & Tract Society of New York, Inc. ("Watchtower") to serve as congregation "elders." (3 RT 139; 7 RT 908-909.) Elders receive assistance handling mundane congregational duties from men who are appointed to serve as "ministerial servants." (3 RT 147; 4 RT 402; 7 RT 909.)

Like all other congregations of Jehovah's Witnesses, Fremont Congregation does not separate children from their parents; they do not arrange Sunday School classes, overnight trips, or any other activity that would place children in the "custody" of the elders. (3 RT 140; 4 RT 277, 321, 421; 5 RT 495, 547; 6 RT 705; 7 RT 873-874.) Rather, in all congregations of Jehovah's Witnesses, children attend meetings and participate in religious activities with their parents. (3 RT 143, 185-187; 4 RT 277, 421; 6 RT 705; 7 RT 874, 912.) Indeed, the Plaintiff informed the trial court that she never went to Fremont Congregation meetings or to field service without at least one of her parents. (6 RT 725-726, 737-738.)

As a child born in 1985, the Plaintiff attended religious meetings with her parents, Neal and Kathleen Conti, at Fremont Congregation. (4 RT 350, 352, 367-368; 6 RT 713.) Kendrick also attended Fremont Congregation's religious meetings and served as a ministerial servant. In November 1993, Kendrick confessed to two congregation elders, Michael L. Clarke and Gary Abrahamson, that four months earlier, in July 1993, he had touched the breast of his then 15-year-old stepdaughter, Andrea, in the privacy of his own home. (3 RT 138-139, 151-160, 177, 180-181, 183, 207, 210-211, 214-217, 219-222, 239-240, 250-251; 4 RT 302; 7 RT 879-880.) Because of that one act, Kendrick was stripped of his position as a ministerial servant in the Freemont Congregation, and the congregation was publicly informed that Kendrick was no longer a ministerial servant. (3 RT 163, 166, 192, 218, 241, 244, 247; 5 RT 484; 7 RT 880.) Freemont Congregation elders also spoke with Andrea and her mother, Evelyn (Kendrick's wife), and ensured that they knew of their absolute right to report the incident to civil authorities.[2] (3 RT 163-164, 180-181, 190-191, 239-242, 250-251; 4 RT 293, 297, 302; 6 RT 707; 7 RT 880.) In February 1994, Evelyn and Andrea reported Kendrick's July 1993 sexual abuse of Andrea to the Fremont Police Department ("Fremont Police") and to Child Protective Services ("CPS"). (4 RT 296-297, 300-301, 303-306; 6 RT 701, 711-712; 8 AA 1983-1991 ([Pl. Exh. 5]; [Def. Exh. 94].) During the investigation that ensued, Kendrick admitted the July 1993 incident to those authorities. (6 RT 647-649.) Unbeknownst to Fremont Congregation at that time, Kendrick was then prosecuted and convicted of misdemeanor sexual battery. (4 RT 307; 6 RT 654-656.)

Pursuant to Jehovah's Witnesses' religious beliefs and practices, and based upon their Biblical view of confidentiality, the announcement made to the congregation that Kendrick was removed from his position of ministerial servant did not include the reason for that action. (3 RT 222-223, 243-244.) But to this day, Kendrick has never again served in any appointed position in any congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses. (3 RT 243-244; 7 RT 916.) At the time of Plaintiff's alleged sexual abuse, Kendrick was simply a rank-and-file member of the Fremont Congregation. (3 RT 163, 166, 241; 4 RT 356; 5 RT 484; 6 RT 711; 7 RT 872-873, 880; 9 RT 1054.)

[2] Prior to 1997, ministers and clergy members were not mandated reporters of child abuse in California. (Stats. 1996, ch. 1081 (A.B. 3354), § 3.5, eff. Jan. 1, 1997 [amending Pen. Code § 11166.]). Thus, in keeping with church policy, the elders left it to the victim and her mother to choose whether or not to report.

B. Plaintiff's Allegations of Abuse.

Plaintiff contended at trial that Kendrick hugged her and made her sit on his lap during congregation meetings at the Kingdom Hall. (6 RT 723, 738-739, 742.) She testified that from 1994 to 1996, Kendrick committed hundreds of sexually abusive acts against her when she was at Kendrick's home (6 RT 742, 744), and one such act while they rode on a train. (6 RT 745-746.) On that latter occasion, Plaintiff stated the abuse occurred in plain view of her father, who occupied the seat facing her and Kendrick. (6 RT 745-746.)

C. No Evidence Corroborated Plaintiff's Testimony.

The Plaintiff made no allegation that Kendrick did anything more than hug her or have her sit on his lap when they were on church property or engaging in church-related activities. (6 RT 723, 738-739, 742.) But no witness – not her own parents, Fremont Congregation elders, nor fellow church members – corroborated Plaintiff's story in any way. To the contrary, Plaintiff's father, Neal Conti, denied that Kendrick ever hugged the Plaintiff at the Kingdom Hall, or that Kendrick ever had

Plaintiff sit on his lap during congregation meetings. Neal also denied that his daughter was taken to Kendrick's home alone, or that Kendrick ever abused Plaintiff in his presence. (5 RT 495-496, 499-501, 513.)

Similarly, the Plaintiff's mother, Kathleen Conti, also testified that she never saw her daughter sitting on Kendrick's lap, or saw Kendrick give her daughter "bear hugs" at the Kingdom Hall. (4 RT 368-369.) She also testified that she never allowed her daughter to go anywhere alone with Kendrick. (4 RT 357, 367-368.)

Fremont Congregation elders Gary Abrahamson, Michael Clarke, and Lawrence Lamerdin kept a watchful eye on Kendrick after the 1993 incident with his stepdaughter. (3 RT 162-163, 247-248, 250; 4 RT 406-409, 412-413, 417, 420; 7 RT 880-881.) Yet they, too, never saw Kendrick hug the Plaintiff or the Plaintiff sitting on Kendrick's lap at the Kingdom Hall (3 RT 195-196, 248-249, 253; 4 RT 420-421), nor did they ever see the Plaintiff leaving the Kingdom Hall alone with Kendrick after congregation meetings. (3 RT 196, 248, 253; 4 RT 420-421, 430.) Likewise, they never saw the Plaintiff alone with Kendrick in field ministry. (3 RT 196, 248, 253; 4 RT 420-421, 430.)

Fremont Congregation members Bernice Munoz, Sylvia Munoz, and Pamela Figuerido likewise never saw Plaintiff at the Kingdom Hall without one of her parents, never saw Kendrick hug Plaintiff or have her on his lap, never saw Kendrick alone with Plaintiff in field service, never saw Kendrick leave the Kingdom Hall in his vehicle alone with Plaintiff, and confirmed that had they seen such

"inappropriate" conduct, they would have reported it to the elders. (7 RT 828-829, 836-837, 852-853.)

In short, no trial testimony corroborated the Plaintiff's claims of sexual abuse. Nonetheless, the uncontroverted fact remains that any acts of sexual abuse that occurred on church property involved hugs and sitting on Kendrick's lap in the presence of other congregation members. (6 RT 723, 738-739, 742.) Any other acts of abuse alleged by Plaintiff occurred either at Kendrick's home or in the presence of the Plaintiff's father. (6 RT 742, 744, 745-746.)

D. Court Proceedings.

The Plaintiff originally commenced legal action on January 28, 2011, and subsequently filed her operative First Amended Complaint for Damages on May 3, 2012. In it she asserted various causes of action for negligence in Fremont Congregation's supervision of Kendrick and its failure to protect the Plaintiff from Kendrick's acts of child abuse on and off church property. Those claims later proceeded to a 10-day jury trial before the Hon. Robert McGuiness.

Notably, during the sixth day of trial, Judge McGuiness ruled that a special relationship existed between Fremont Congregation and the Plaintiff that resulted in a duty of care to protect her from Kendrick's criminal acts of sexual abuse. (8 RT 979-985; 9 RT 1011-1012, 1032-1033, 1054.) In doing so, the trial court acknowledged that its ruling was not based on case law (8 RT 982), and that "imposing a duty under the circumstances [of this case]" was "clearly an evolution of the doctrine." (9 RT 1012.)

1. Jury Instructions.

On June 11, 2012, following six days of testimony, the trial court made erroneous rulings on jury instructions, allowing special instructions related to Fremont Congregation's duty, and denying special instructions related to child abuse reporting requirements, the allocation of fault, and privileged communications. (9 RT 1010-1016, 1021-1024, 1034-1035, 1040-1041.)

The trial court incorrectly concluded that Fremont Congregation had a special relationship based upon its custody and control of the Plaintiff, and thus ruled that Fremont Congregation owed "a duty to take reasonable protective measures to protect Candace Conti from the risk of sexual abuse by Fremont Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses, North Unit, member Jonathan Kendrick." (8 RT 979-980, 981-985; 9 RT 1011-1012, 1032-1033, 1054.) That instruction did not include limiting language to indicate the scope of duty being imposed, e.g., the location and activities under which Fremont Congregation must protect the Plaintiff. Further, the court incorporated into that broad duty of protective care, a duty to warn and instructed the jury as follows:

> In determining whether or not Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc. and Fremont Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses, North Unit, took reasonable protective measures, you may consider the following:

1. The presence or absence of any warning (8 RT 987-988; 9 RT 1054);

2. Whether or not any educational programs were made available to plaintiff, her parents, or to other Jehovah's Witnesses from the Fremont Congregation Jehovah's Witnesses, North Unit, members for the purpose of sexual abuse education and prevention (9 RT 1054); and

3. Such other facts and circumstances contained in the evidentiary record here as to the presence or absence of protective measures. (9 RT 1054-1055.)

Notably, the language of that instruction failed to express, as a matter of law, the scope of the duty owed and the concomitant warning required to satisfy that duty of protective care.

The trial court also refused Fremont Congregation's request for a jury instruction stating that ministers were not mandated reporters in 1993. (8 RT 975-979, 991.) That instruction would have correctly explained the law, and would have offset the incorrect and misleading testimony from Plaintiff's expert, Anna Salter, Ph.D., as well as Plaintiff's counsel's misleading closing argument on this critical issue. Specifically, Dr. Salter incorrectly stated that in 1993 clergy in California were "legally obligated" to report child abuse, and that California's amended 1997 law simply clarified that obligation. (6 RT 693-694, 707.) Similarly, during closing argument Plaintiff's counsel asserted that one protective measure North Fremont

Congregation elders could have taken was to report Kendrick's sexual abuse of Andrea to the authorities in 1993. (9 RT 1085-1086.)

Further, the trial court denied Fremont Congregation's request to add unnamed parties to the special verdict form and to instruct the jury on allocation of fault, even though the Fremont Police, Child Protective Services, and the District Attorney's office all had greater knowledge about Kendrick's sexual abuse history than that possessed by Fremont Congregation elders. (8 RT 961-967; 9 RT 1012-1014, 1033-1035.) Despite their superior knowledge, none of these public entities warned the public of Kendrick's criminal conviction. Moreover, the Plaintiff's parents, who had a statutory and common law duty to supervise and protect their daughter, allegedly allowed Plaintiff to spend considerable time alone with an adult man – routinely allowing that man to take their child to his home, where he lived alone. (6 RT 742, 744.) Therefore, the court's ruling on allocation deprived the jury of an opportunity to allocate fault to nonparties and thus reduce North Fremont's liability, especially as to non-economic damages which made up most of the compensatory damages the jury ultimately awarded to the Plaintiff. (11 RT 1214-1215.)

Finally, the trial court denied Fremont Congregation's request to instruct the jury that Kendrick's 1993 confession to congregation elders – that he had touched his stepdaughter's breast – was a privileged communication that cannot provide the basis for finding a breach of duty to warn. That ruling confused the jury into believing that the Fremont Congregation's elders' failure to disclose Kendrick's confession can provide the basis for negligence. (8 RT 988-990; 9 RT 1016, 1019, 1021-1023, 1057-1058; 5 AA 1239.)

2. Verdict and Post-Verdict Proceedings.

On June 13, 2012, the jury returned its verdict in favor of the Plaintiff and awarded her $7 million in general and special damages. The jury apportioned liability 60% to Kendrick, 27% to Watchtower, and 13% to the Fremont Congregation. (11 RT 1214-1215; 5 AA 1285-1286.) The jury further awarded punitive damages against Watchtower in the amount of $21 million. (12 RT 1242; 5 AA 1299.)

On July 17, 2012, Fremont Congregation moved for a judgment notwithstanding the verdict ("JNOV") and for a new trial. (5 AA 1352-1387.) After a hearing on August 13, 2012 (13 RT 1251-1280), the trial court entered orders on August 24, 2012, denying that JNOV motion, conditionally granting the new trial motion, and amending the original Judgment. (7 AA 1936-1940.)

Fremont Congregation appeals from the trial court's original Judgment, the Amended Judgment, and all related post-judgment orders. Pursuant to Rule of Court 8.200, subdivision (a)(5), Fremont Congregation further joins in and incorporates here by reference all of the additional grounds for reversal asserted in the companion Appellant's Opening Brief filed concurrently by Watchtower.

III.

APPEALABILITY AND STANDARDS OF REVIEW

Freemont Congregation's appeal from the Judgment and Amended Judgment entered by the trial court was properly taken under Code of Civil Procedure section 904.1, subdivision (a)(1). Similarly, its appeal of the trial court's denial of its JNOV motion was also properly taken pursuant to Code of Civil Procedure section 904.1, subdivision (a)(4).

Additionally, to assist the Court in reviewing those challenges, Freemont Congregation discusses the applicable standards of review at the beginning of each sub-section of its brief that follows.

IV.

DISCUSSION

This case turns on the answer to one fundamental question: Did Fremont Congregation owe the Plaintiff a duty of care? The simple answer is "No" – because "[a] special relationship is a prerequisite" in a nonfeasance case such as this one (see Garcia v. Superior Court (1990) 50 Cal.3d 728, 734) and no special relationship exists under these facts.

A. The Trial Court Erred in Finding Fremont Congregation Liable for Kendrick's Abusive Acts Because the Congregation Did Not Owe the Plaintiff a Legal Duty of Protective Care.

1. Standard of Review: De Novo.

The tort of negligence "involves a violation of a legal duty, imposed by statute, contract or otherwise, owed by the defendant to the person injured. Without such a duty, any injury is an injury without wrong." (Roman Catholic Bishop of San Diego v. Superior Court (1996) 42 Cal.App.4th 1556, 1564.) Duty is thus "an essential element" of every negligence claim. (Melton v. Boustred (2010) 183 Cal.App.4th 521, 529, citing Potter v. Firestone Tire & Rubber Co. (1993) 6 Cal.4th 965, 984.) The existence of a duty is a question of law. (Delgado v. Trax Bar & Grill (2005) 36 Cal.4th 224, 237.) Legal questions are reviewed de novo. (Cabral v. Ralphs Grocery Co. (2011) 51 Cal.4th 764, 770-771.)

2. Application to This Case.

Our Supreme Court has consistently held that "as a general matter, there is no duty to act to protect others from the conduct of third parties." (Delgado, supra, 36 Cal.4th at 235; see Tarasoff v. Regents of University of California (1976) 17 Cal.3d 425, 434-435.) Further, "one owes no duty to control the conduct of another, or to warn those endangered by such conduct." (McGarry v. Sax (2008) 158 Cal.App.4th 983, 995.) One exception to that general "no duty to protect" rule is found in the "special relationship" doctrine. "A defendant may owe an affirmative duty to protect another from the conduct of third parties, or to assist another who has been attacked by third parties, if he or she has a 'special relationship' with the other person." (Morris v. De La Torre (2005) 36 Cal.4th 260, 269.) In nonfeasance cases like this one, "[a] special relationship is a prerequisite" essential to establish liability. (Garcia, supra, 50 Cal.3d at 734.)

Thus, the central question confronting this Court in this appeal is whether Fremont Congregation had a special relationship with the Plaintiff or with Kendrick which would give rise to a duty to protect the Plaintiff from Kendrick's criminal acts. Distilling that question even further requires this Court to examine whether a church has a special relationship with a church member or the child of a church member. Our Supreme Court, this Court, other Courts of Appeal, and the courts from other states have uniformly answered that question with a resounding "no."

Yet the trial court improperly ventured into uncharted legal territory when it determined that a special relationship existed in this case between Fremont Congregation and the Plaintiff, which gave rise to Fremont Congregation owing her a duty of care. (8 RT 987-988; 9 RT 1054-1058.) Tellingly, the trial court did not provide a basis in the law to support its ruling, but rather candidly acknowledged that there are no cases in California supporting that ruling. (8 RT 982.) Nor did the trial court detail any factual support for that ruling, as there simply is none. (Ibid.) This was prejudicial error.

a. A Special Relationship Is Not Created Merely by Church Membership, or By the Providing of Spiritual Counsel by a Minister.

No legal authority supports the trial court's ruling that a special relationship exists between a religious organization, church, or its clergy and a church member (or a church member's child) merely because of membership. Quite to the contrary, this Court, along with other California courts, has followed courts throughout the nation in consistently holding that there is no special relationship between a church or clergy and a church member. (See, e.g., Nally v. Grace Community Church (1988) 47 Cal.3d 278, 297 ["Mere foreseeability of the harm or knowledge of the danger, is insufficient to create a legally cognizable special relationship giving rise to a legal duty to prevent harm."]; Richelle L. v. Roman Catholic Archbishop (2003) 106 Cal.App.4th 257, 270 [a priest cannot be liable to a church member for breach of a duty arising out of a special relationship]; Roman Catholic Bishop of San Diego v. Superior Court, supra, 42 Cal.App.4th at 1568 ["there is no special relationship here creating a heightened duty of care based on a priest/parishioner relationship"].)[3]

[3] See Doe v. Corp. of the President of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints (Utah App. 2004) 98 P.3d 429, 432 [membership in church alone insufficient to establish special relationship]; Lambert v. Word of Faith Ministries (La.Ct.App. 1996) 673 So.2d 1150 [no special relationship existed between minister and minor children requiring minister to control conduct of third party who was a minor child]; Bryan R. v. Watchtower Bible and Tract Soc. of New York, Inc. (Me. 1999) 738 A.2d 839, 847 [a church has no duty to protect members of its congregation from other members]; Meyer v. Lindala (Minn.Ct.App. 2004) 675 N.W.2d 635, 640 ["Providing faith-based advice or instruction, without more, does not create a special relationship"]; Berry v. Watchtower Bible and Tract Soc. of New York, Inc. (N.H. 2005) 879 A.2d 1124, 1129 ["We decline to hold that the fact of church membership or adherence to church doctrine by the plaintiffs' parents creates Of note on that very issue is Justice Kline's analysis in Richelle L., where he reasoned that the accused priest "cannot be liable to [the victim] for breach of a duty arising out of a special relationship" because it would be equivalent to a prohibited "clergy malpractice" claim. (Richelle L., supra, 106 Cal.App.4th at 270.) Indeed, liability for the criminal acts of third parties has typically been limited to those cases involving the relationship between business proprietors, such as shopping centers, restaurants and bars, and their tenants, patrons, or invitees. (See, e.g., Ann M. v. Pacific Plaza Shopping Center (1993) 6 Cal.4th 666, 674 [finding that it is well established that a proprietor has a "general duty of maintenance which is owed to tenants and patrons"]; Kentucky Fried Chicken of Cal., Inc. v. Superior Court (1997) 14 Cal.4th 814, 819, 823-824 [a proprietor who has reason to believe, from observation or experience, that the conduct of another endangers an invitee has a duty to take reasonable steps to protect the invitee]; Peterson v. San Francisco Community College Dist. (1984) 36 Cal.3d 799, 806 [imposing on a possessor of land a duty to "members of the public who enter in response to the landowner's invitation"].) Additionally, special relationships "have been found in other contexts, including those of: (i) common carriers and passengers; (ii) innkeepers and their guests; and (iii) mental health professionals and their patients." (Delgado, supra, 36 Cal.4th at 236, fn. 14.) But as Justice Haerle aptly observed, "the special relationship doctrine is reserved for situations in which the authorities have created a relationship of a special relationship between the plaintiffs and Watchtower or [the local] Congregation."].

'dependency' with a 'vulnerable' individual[.]" (Adams v. City of Fremont (1998) 68 Cal.App.4th 243, 289 [conc. opn. of Haerle, J.].) In this case, however, the Plaintiff was not in the custody or control of Fremont Congregation when her alleged sexual abuse by Kendrick occurred.

b. An Expansion of the Special Relationship Doctrine Cannot Occur Absent Evidence of Custody or Control.

As our Supreme Court made clear in Nally, a person "is ordinarily not liable for the actions of another and is under no duty to protect another from harm, in the absence of a special relationship of custody or control." (Nally, supra, 47 Cal.3d at 293 [italics added].) Thus, courts have only hesitantly expanded the field of recognized special relationships to situations involving some kind of dependency, reliance, custody or control. (See, e.g., Melton, supra, 183 Cal.App.4th at 535-536; Olson v. Children's Home Society (1988) 204 Cal.App.3d 1362, 1366.) Furthermore, before a special relationship can give rise to a duty of care, the liable party must have had the ability to protect the victim or control the wrongdoer. (See, e.g., Wise v. Superior Court (1990) 222 Cal.App.3d 1008, 1013.)

Those immutable principles were explored by this Court in Giraldo v. Dept. of Corrections and Rehabilitation (2008) 168 Cal.App.4th 231. There, a transgender prisoner (with a feminine physical appearance) was placed in a cell block with male prisoners and subsequently brutally attacked and raped. This Court was therefore faced with the question of whether a prisoner had a special relationship with the prison system. In holding that such a relationship did exist, the Giraldo court recognized that "a typical setting for the recognition of a special relationship is where 'the plaintiff is particularly vulnerable and dependent upon the defendant who, correspondingly, has some control over the plaintiff's welfare.'" (Id. at 245-246 [citations omitted].)

In stark contrast, in this case no relationship of dependency existed between the Plaintiff and Fremont Congregation. By her own account, and the testimony of both her parents, the Plaintiff was accompanied by her parents at all congregation meetings and religious activities. (6 RT 725-726, 737-738; 4 RT 357, 367-369; 5 RT 495-496, 499-501, 513.) In other words, the Plaintiff was dependent on her parents and not Fremont Congregation, to look after her welfare, consistent with civil law and church practices and doctrine, which does not separate children from parents in any church activities. (3 RT 140; 4 RT 277, 321, 421; 5 RT 495, 547; 6 RT 705; 7 RT 873-876.) Similarly, Fremont Congregation was not aware of Kendrick's conduct towards the Plaintiff, and Fremont Congregation lacked the ability to control Kendrick, especially in his own home where most of the criminal acts were said to have occurred. (6 RT 742, 744.)

That absence of custody and the ability to control "is fatal to a claim of legal responsibility." (Megeff v. Doland (1981) 123 Cal.App.3d 251, 261, [citations omitted].) Where, as here, the natural relationship between any of the parties "creates no inference of an ability to control, the actual custodial ability must affirmatively appear." (Ibid.)

That legal principle is no different for religious entities, as made clear by the legislative history of California Code of Civil Procedure section 340.1, explained in Aaronoff v. Martinez-Senftner (2006) 136 Cal.App.4th 910. Aaronoff dealt with an adult abuse victim who sued her father under the revival provision of section 340.1. The court ultimately ruled that the revival provision did not apply to abuse by one's parent, but rather that section 340.1 was:

> [T]argeted at third party defendants who, by virtue of certain specified relationships to the perpetrator (i.e., employee, volunteer, representative, or agent), could have employed safeguards to prevent the sexual assault. It requires the sexual conduct to have arisen through an exploitation of a relationship over which the third party has some control. In other words, the perpetrator's access to the victim must arise out of the perpetrator's employment with, representation of, agency to, etc., the third party, and the third party must be in such a relationship with the perpetrator as to have some control over the perpetrator. (Aaronoff, supra, 126 Cal.App.4th at 921.)

The Aaronoff court then clarified that its "construction of the statute is confirmed by the legislative history of the 2002 amendment . . . [where] the Senate Judiciary Committee explained that the responsible third party entity to which the legislation is directed is an entity such as 'an employer, sponsoring organization or religious organization . . . .'" (Id. at 922, citing Sen. Com. On Judiciary, Analysis of Sen. Bill No. 1779 (2001-2002 Reg. Sess.) as amended May 2, 2002, pp. 4-5].) In identifying those third parties, the Judiciary Committee further clarified that "[g]eneral theories of negligence impose a duty of care where a third person or entity has assumed some responsibility, through a relationship or otherwise, for a person's conduct or a person's safety . . . . Similarly, a school district, church, or other organization engaging in the care and custody of a child owes a duty of care to that child to reasonably ensure its safety." (Ibid. [italics added].) Thus, the Legislature has similarly recognized that third party liability for the criminal acts of others necessarily turns on either custody or control over the victim or the perpetrator.

However, as discussed above, even without evidence of custody or control, the trial court deliberately trod new ground and created a new category of special relationships – one founded upon church membership alone. Indeed, in doing so the trial court readily acknowledged that "imposing a duty under the circumstances here" was "clearly an evolution of the [special relationship] doctrine." (8 RT 979-980, 981-985; 9 RT 1011-1012, 1032-1033, 1054.) But such an expansion is neither justified by the facts of this case nor consistent with well-settled law, as neither the Plaintiff nor Kendrick was in the care, custody, or control of Fremont Congregation.

c. Neither Tarasoff, Delgado, Nor Juarez Support the Trial Court's Expansion of the Special Relationship Doctrine Under These Facts.

Without factual support, the trial court apparently assumed that Fremont Congregation had some undefined caregiving role over the Plaintiff. (8 RT 979-982; 9 RT 1011-1012, 1054-1055.) The court, however, did not explain how Fremont Congregation was a caregiver when the Plaintiff was with her parents during church-related activities, or when Kendrick was alone with the Plaintiff during non-church activities and away from church property.

The trial court apparently extrapolated that unfounded misperception into its finding of a special relationship, citing the High Court's decisions in Tarasoff and Delgado, supra, and this Court's prior decision in Juarez v. Boy Scouts of America, Inc. (2000) 81 Cal.App.4th 377:

> As to duty, I wrote in the email of counsel quotes from Tarasoff, which of course was a quintessential duty case, actually arising in Alameda County. But the Court's analysis of Delgado, which followed in Juarez, I did, in effect, find a special relationship of a minor child contextually under the circumstances alleged here. . . . And I'm imposing a duty under the circumstances here for the reasons related in my email, but clearly an evolution of the doctrine, perhaps the best example not involving a church was Juarez, as to the duty inherent to adults and their organizations vis-a-vis the taking care of children. So the duty ruling is mine for the reasons I related. (9 RT 1011-1012.)

Yet in this case, the Plaintiff made no allegation that Fremont Congregation was a caregiver or had custody or control over her or Kendrick. (2 AA 501-508.) Nor was any such evidence presented at trial. In fact, the evidence was the opposite. The evidence demonstrated that Fremont Congregation did not conduct separate children's activities or Sunday School classes for children. (3 RT 140; 4 RT 277, 321, 421; 5 RT 495, 547; 6 RT 705; 7 RT 873-876.) Indeed, the Plaintiff herself admitted that she would not attend congregation meetings without one or both of her parents. (6 RT 725-726, 737-738.) Moreover, according to Gary Abrahamson (an elder in Fremont Congregation), a parent who dropped their child off at the Kingdom Hall for others to look after would be counseled "to help them to appreciate that the children are their responsibility. They come out with their children. They don't drop them off for someone else to care for." (3 RT 187.)

While the trial court's apparent concern for the welfare of children is noble, courts must be hesitant – even when children are involved – to impose new tort duties when doing so would involve complex policy decisions, especially when such decisions are more appropriately the subject of legislative deliberation and resolution. (See Quigley v. First Church of Christ Scientist (1998) 65 Cal.App.4th 1027, 1034 [rejecting the plaintiff's suggestion "to create a general duty of care owed by all persons toward children"].) The trial court erred in creating such a new duty of care under these facts.

Nothing in Tarasoff, Delgado, or Juarez compels a different result. For example, in Tarasoff, our Supreme Court held that mental health professionals have a duty to protect individuals who are threatened with bodily harm by a patient. That duty requires the professional to notify the police, warn the intended victim, or take other reasonable steps. (Tarasoff, supra, 17 Cal.3d at 431.) Tarasoff did not involve a church or child abuse, and church elders are not "mental health professionals." Moreover, Kendrick neither threatened to harm the Plaintiff nor confided in Fremont Congregation elders any intent to commit criminal acts of child abuse. In short, absolutely nothing in the record suggests that Fremont Congregation elders had any information indicating that Kendrick intended to sexually abuse the Plaintiff or any other child. Thus, other than providing general principles of the law surrounding a duty – which support the position of Fremont Congregation and not the Plaintiff – the facts of Tarasoff have no bearing on this case.

Similarly, in Delgado, the California Supreme Court again stated that one ordinarily has no duty to protect or warn another from the criminal acts of a third party absent a special relationship. Delgado involved a bar patron physically attacked by another patron in the bar's parking lot when bar employees knew of a specific threat against a specific person as well as specific circumstances indicating a current danger to their business invitee. (Delgado, supra, 36 Cal.4th at 245-246.) Delgado did not involve a minor. It did not involve a church or child abuse. Fremont Congregation was not aware of Kendrick's criminal conduct towards the Plaintiff or Kendrick's intent to commit sex crimes against the Plaintiff. Thus, like Tarasoff, other than providing general principles of the law surrounding a duty – which again support the position of Fremont Congregation and not the Plaintiff – the facts of Delgado have no bearing on this case.

Also factually distinguishable is Juarez, which concerned a child abused by a scoutmaster during scouting activities while he was in the scoutmaster's care, custody, and control. Under those unique circumstances, this Court in Juarez reasoned that "children engaged in organized group overnight activities are at risk of foreseeable sexual abuse." (Juarez, supra, 81 Cal.App.4th at 404.) In doing so, this Court acknowledged that "California courts have frequently recognized special relationships between children and their adult caregivers that give rise to a duty to prevent harms caused by the intentional or criminal conduct of third parties." (Id. at 410 [italics added].)

However, the facts here are dramatically different. First, Kendrick was not in any appointed position within the congregation when he allegedly abused the Plaintiff; he was simply a rank-and-file member of the congregation. Those circumstances would be akin to one Boy Scout sexually abusing a fellow Boy Scout at times and places unassociated with any scout property or activities, a factual scenario that Juarez clearly did not confront.

Additionally, it bears repeating that unlike the situation presented in Juarez, the Plaintiff, by her own reckoning, was not in the care, custody, or control of the Fremont Congregation at the time the abuse in question allegedly occurred. And any "abuse" at the Kingdom Hall (i.e., "bear hugs" and occasionally sitting on Kendrick's lap) occurred when the Plaintiff, again by her own account, was in the custody of at least one of her parents. (6 RT 725-726, 737-738.) Therefore, any analogy to Juarez is woefully mistaken. Instead the trial court should have heeded this Court's explicit warning in Juarez that "the reach of this opinion is only intended to extend as far as the record before us today. If we have not yet made it abundantly clear, deciding the question of duty mandates a case-by-case fact and policy analysis." (Juarez, supra, 81 Cal.App.4th. at 409.) The trial court's failure to do so constituted error as a matter of law which this Court should now reverse.

d. Once It Is Established that There Is No Special Relationship Between the Parties, the Duty Analysis Must Stop.

This Court has recognized the critical importance of finding a special relationship in any duty analysis. Specifically, in Margaret W. v. Kelley R. (2006) 139 Cal.App.4th 141 this Court observed:

> This division has debated the role of a "special relationship" in analyzing duty for purposes of imposing liability in tort. (See Juarez, supra, 81 Cal.App.4th at pp. 410-411, 97 Cal.Rptr.2d 12 & fn. 10.) In Delgado, supra, 36 Cal.4th 224, 30 Cal.Rptr.3d 145, 113 P.3d 1159 and its companion case, Morris v. De La Torre (2005) 36 Cal.4th 260, 30 Cal.Rptr.3d 173, 113 P.3d 1182, the Supreme Court has made it clear that the concept of "special relationship" remains a very important analytic tool in determining duty. (Margaret W., supra, 139 Cal.App.4th at 152, fn. 12.)

An important analytic tool must be used skillfully, but the trial court muddled its analysis. Indeed, the court apparently conflated elements of common law duty with special relationship principles and then considered the seven factors outlined in Rowland v. Christian (1968) 69 Cal.2d 108. (8 RT 979-980, 981-985; 9 RT 1011-1012, 1032-1033, 1054.) However, the various reviewing courts have clearly stated that once it has been established that a special relationship does not exist under the "no duty to aid" rule, it is unnecessary to consider the so-called Rowland factors.

For instance, in Eric J. v. Betty M. (1999) 76 Cal.App.4th 715, 727, the abuse victim's mother married a felon convicted for molesting children. She sued the molester and some of his family members who failed to warn her of her husband's past history. Justice Sills for the Fourth District wrote that "[a]bsent a 'special relationship,' one cannot be held liable for mere nonfeasance, such as not protecting another from a criminal attack by a third party[,]" and that "[t]he basic idea is often referred to as the 'no duty to aid rule,' which remains a fundamental and long-standing rule of tort law." (Id. at 727.) Thus, the Fourth District properly declined the invitation to consider the duty question using the traditional seven Rowland factors. To that end, Justice Sills further opined "[t]hat weighing process, however, has already been done by courts over the centuries in formulating the 'no duty to aid' rule." (Id. at 729-730.)

Similarly, in Suarez v. Pacific Northstar Mechanical, Inc. (2009) 180 Cal.App.4th 430, 438, the plaintiffs were injured by a non-obvious hazardous condition at a construction site. Although the defendant subcontractor was aware of the hazardous condition, it did not create it or cause it to occur. The plaintiffs nonetheless urged this court to extend the concept of a special relationship to that situation. This Court declined to do so or to apply the Rowland factors because the allegations in that case – like the Plaintiff's claims here – were based upon nonfeasance. (See also Seo v. All-Makes Overhead Doors (2002) 97 Cal.App.4th 1193, 1203 ["Because the traditional weighing process using the seven factors set forth in Rowland v. Christian . . . has already been done by courts over the centuries in formulating the no duty to aid rule in the context of liability for nonfeasance, it is not necessary to engage in the weighing process in a particular case"].)

The trial court should have followed that analytical framework by first performing a special relationship analysis, and then – only if a special relationship is found to exist – undertaken the Rowland analysis to determine the scope of any duty. (See, e.g., C.A. v. William S. Hart Union High School District (2012) 53 Cal.4th 861, 877 [recognizing that the Rowland analysis is properly used "to decide the scope of duty" only after first determining that a special relationship existed in the first place]; Castaneda v. Olsher (2007) 41 Cal.4th 1205, 1213-1218 [deciding scope of duty arising from a special relationship]; Morris, supra, 36 Cal.4th at 271 [considering Rowland factors only after a determination that a special relationship existed]; Delgado, supra, 36 Cal.4th at 236 [reviewing seven Rowland factors only after making a determination that a special relationship existed].) In short, when there is no legally cognizable special relationship between the parties – as was the case here – the duty analysis simply must end.

e. Fremont Congregation Does Not Owe a Duty to Protect Plaintiff Even Under Rowland.

Even if this Court decides to create new law and to determine for the first time in California that a special relationship exists between a church and its members absent any custody or control, Fremont Congregation still owed no duty to the Plaintiff under a "Rowland factors" analysis. Those factors include: (1) the foreseeability of harm to the one injured; (2) the degree of certainty that the plaintiff actually suffered a harm; (3) the closeness of connection between the defendant's conduct and the injury suffered; (4) the moral blame attached to the defendant's conduct; (5) the policy of preventing future harm; (6) the extent of the burden to the defendant; and (7) the consequences to the community of imposing a duty to exercise care, with any potential resultant liability. (Rowland, supra, 69 Cal.2d at 112-113.) As the following discussion shows, under the particular facts of this case, Fremont Congregation did not owe a duty of care to the Plaintiff even under Rowland.

i. No High Degree of Foreseeability.

"Foreseeability supports a duty only to the extent the foreseeability is reasonable." (Sturgeon v. Curnutt (1994) 29 Cal.App.4th 301, 306.) "[A] duty to take affirmative action to control the wrongful acts of a third party will be imposed only where such conduct can be reasonably anticipated." (Ann M., supra, 6 Cal.4th at 676.) When the harm results from criminal conduct by a third party, an extraordinarily "high degree of foreseeability" is required to impose a duty on a landowner, "in part because 'it is difficult if not impossible in today's society to predict when a criminal might strike.'" (Melton, supra, 183 Cal.App.4th at 532 [citations omitted].) Moreover, the "foreseeability" examination called for under a duty analysis pursuant to Rowland "is a very different and normative inquiry." (Parsons v. Crown Disposal Co. (1997) 15 Cal.4th 456, 476.) One test to apply to the facts in determining if the harm was foreseeable is "whether the category of negligent conduct at issue is sufficiently likely to result in the kind of harm experienced that liability may be appropriately imposed on the negligent party." (Martinez v. Bank of America (2000) 82 Cal.App.4th 883, 895; accord Ballard v. Uribe (1986) 41 Cal.3d 564, 572-573, fn. 6.)

The negligent act of which the Plaintiff complains is that Fremont Congregation failed to supervise, manage, and control Kendrick and failed to warn her that there was some amorphous "propensity and risk" that Kendrick would sexually molest her under circumstances unknown to anyone except for perhaps Kendrick. (2 AA 503.) Thus, the question becomes whether Kendrick's alleged abuse of the Plaintiff by giving her "bear hugs," having her sit on his lap, putting his hand up her shirt, engaging in oral sex, placing objects in her vagina (6 RT 723, 728-731, 738-739, 746-747, 742) is the direct result of Fremont Congregation's failure to supervise Kendrick, or to announce to the congregation that on one prior occasion, Kendrick inappropriately touched the breast of his stepdaughter in his own home.

As such, these facts are markedly very different from Doe 1 v. City of Murrieta (2002) 102 Cal.App.4th 899, where the court found a high degree of foreseeability that sexual exploitation of a minor might occur. There, the defendant knew the perpetrator and victim were spending an unusual amount of time together, going on frequent one-on-one ride-alongs late at night, and engaging in frequent telephone calls, in violation of the defendant-employer's written policies. Here, Fremont Congregation was not aware that Kendrick was spending time alone with Plaintiff, nor was it either Kendrick's or the Plaintiff's employer. Fremont Congregation knew of a one-time event (i.e., Kendrick momentarily touching his stepdaughter's breast), had no idea that Kendrick was subsequently prosecuted for any crime arising from that incident, and had no idea that the Plaintiff's parents were allowing Kendrick to spend time alone with their daughter, a fact both parents deny, thereby contradicting their own daughter's testimony.

Moreover, the foreseeability that Kendrick would molest a fellow congregation member or their children was also significantly diminished by the immediate and reasonable steps congregation elders took upon learning of Kendrick's inappropriate conduct towards his stepdaughter, as well as by the way congregation meetings and field ministry were conducted. Indeed, the elders reasonably believed that congregation children were protected during those meetings because: (1) children were under the care and supervision of their parents in the Kingdom Hall;[4] (2) children were under the care and supervision of their parents during field service activities;[5] (3) members worshipped as a family, with no separate activities for children;[6] (4) the elders announced to the congregation that Kendrick was no longer a ministerial servant, which let everyone know he had a spiritual problem (3 RT 163, 166; 4 RT 409; 5 RT 484; 7 RT 880); and (5) the elders took the

---

[4] Michael Clarke testified that at congregation meetings, "children are always sitting with their parents" (4 RT 277) and Claudia Francis testified that at congregation meetings "children sit with their parents." (4 RT 321.)

[5] Gary Abrahamson testified about the precautions taken to protect children during meetings and field service: (1) single males are not assigned to work alone with single females (3 RT 186); (2) a child is not assigned to work in field service with an adult of the opposite sex (3 RT 186); (3) parents do not drop off their children for field service, and if it happened, the elders "would talk to the parent to help them appreciate that children are their responsibility." (3 RT 186-187); (4) after Kendrick's November 1993 confession of molesting his stepdaughter, elders would assign him to work in field service with an elder or another adult and did not allow Kendrick to work with children in field service. (3 RT 248.)

[6] Kathleen Conti testified that the Plaintiff never went to the Kingdom Hall by herself (4 RT 357, 367-368) and Neal Conti similarly confirmed "she [the Plaintiff] would always be with me." (5 RT 482, 496, 513.)

precaution of keeping a watchful eye on Kendrick and instructed him that he was not allowed to be alone with, have contact with, or be overly familiar with children; indeed, they never saw Kendrick do any of those things.[7] Those facts do not come close to creating the extraordinarily "high degree of foreseeability" necessary to impose a duty to protect someone from Kendrick's unknown and subsequent criminal conduct. To be sure, the supervision necessary to prevent Kendrick's abusive acts would unreasonably require Fremont Congregation to supervise Kendrick 24 hours a day, every day, on and off church property, and to usurp the parental role of Neal and Kathleen Conti when they engaged in religious activities with their daughter.

Even if, arguendo, this Court determines that the foreseeability contemplated in Rowland is established here, "foreseeability alone is insufficient to create a legal duty to prevent harm." (Adam, supra, 68 Cal.App.4th at 269). Instead, our Supreme Court has steadfastly instructed that "'social policy must at some point intervene to delimit liability' even for foreseeable injury," and that "policy considerations may dictate a cause of action should not be sanctioned no matter how foreseeable the risk." (Parsons, supra, 15 Cal.4th at 476 [citations omitted].)

[7] Lawrence Lamerdin testified "we kept an eye on him [Kendrick] to make sure that everything was fine" and gave him specific instructions that he was not allowed to be around children, to work in the ministry with them, to have any contact with them, direct or indirect. (4 RT 417.) Also Gary Abrahamson testified that he was not aware of Kendrick engaging in any playful or affectionate conduct with children. (3 RT 162.)

ii. No Degree of Certainty of Harm to Plaintiff.

Fremont Congregation elders did not observe Kendrick acting inappropriately with the Plaintiff, nor did they learn of the Plaintiff's accusations until well after her abuse had ended. Thus, Fremont Congregation had no knowledge with respect to the second Rowland factor, "the degree of certainty that the plaintiff actually suffered harm[.]" (Rowland, supra, 69 Cal.2d at 113.) Indeed, the testimony adduced at trial never established whether anyone, including the Plaintiff's own parents, knew that Plaintiff was being harmed at any time. Specifically, Neal Conti denied that Kendrick ever hugged his daughter or that Kendrick ever had the Plaintiff sit on his lap at the Kingdom Hall. (5 RT 495-496, 513.) He also disputed his own daughter's testimony that she was taken to Kendrick's home alone after congregation meetings or after field service. (5 RT 496, 513.) He further testified he never would have allowed those things to happen, and he denied that Kendrick ever abused Plaintiff on a train in his presence. (5 RT 499-501.) The Plaintiff's mother, Kathleen Conti, testified similarly. (4 RT 368, 369.) If the Plaintiff's own parents did not know that their daughter was being harmed by Kendrick, how could the Freemont Congregation elders be expected to know that harm was occurring?

Although Fremont Congregation elders Gary Abrahamson, Michael Clarke, and Lawrence Lamerdin kept a watchful eye on Kendrick after the one-time incident with Kendrick's stepdaughter in 1993, they never saw Kendrick hug Plaintiff. (3 RT 196, 253; 4 RT 420, 421.) They also never witnessed the Plaintiff sitting on Kendrick's lap at the Kingdom Hall, or leaving the Kingdom Hall alone with Kendrick after congregation meetings or field service. (3 RT 162-163, 195-196, 248-249, 250, 253; 4 RT 412-413, 420-421, 430.)

Only the Plaintiff testified that Kendrick acted inappropriately; no one else saw it or knew about it. Fremont Congregation had no reason to believe that Plaintiff would be injured by Kendrick's conduct, and never had any indication that harm was occurring.

iii. No Close Connection Between Fremont Congregation's Conduct and the Plaintiff's Injury.

The Plaintiff has not alleged that she was harmed by any affirmative acts on the part of Fremont Congregation. Rather, she claimed damages resulting from abuse at the hands of congregation member Kendrick because Fremont Congregation failed to act. No evidence supports a finding that Fremont Congregation created a situation that posed an undue risk of harm to Plaintiff. As discussed above, when claims are based on the failure to act, "an actor is under no duty to control the conduct of third parties." (Weirum v. RKO General, Inc. (1975) 15 Cal.3d 40, 48.)

Moreover, as clarified previously in Melton, by simply inviting certain attendees to a party, the defendant did not create the peril the plaintiff ultimately suffered, being assaulted and seriously injured by other party-goers. (Melton, supra, 183 Cal.App.4th at 540-541.) Similarly, in Sakiyama v. AMF Bowling Centers, Inc. (2003) 110 Cal.App.4th 398, the plaintiff alleged that the roller skating rink that sponsored an all-night party contributed to her injuries. The court held, however,

"hosting a rave party does not equate with an unreasonable risk of harm." (Id. at 409.)

Here, Fremont Congregation elders held religious services in a protected environment where the Plaintiff attended with her parents. Any harm that she suffered was the result of Kendrick's unknown and unforeseeable criminal acts, not because of Fremont Congregation's actions. Like the situations in Melton and Sakiyama, Fremont Congregation's "hosting" of congregation meetings did not contribute to the Plaintiff's injuries, and Kendrick's criminal activity was certainly not a "necessary component" of those congregation meetings. Kendrick, again like the scenario in Melton and Sakiyama, was just one of many attendees who acted inappropriately towards the Plaintiff, primarily off church property and unrelated to any church activity.

This is especially true where Fremont Congregation did not sponsor activities for children or otherwise separate children from their parents. (3 RT 140; 4 RT 277, 321, 421; 5 RT 495, 547; 6 RT 705; 7 RT 873-876.) Nor did Fremont Congregation encourage Plaintiff's parents to leave her with Kendrick, or with any grown man. (7 RT 874-875.) In short, no close connection exists between Fremont Congregation's conduct and the Plaintiff's claimed injuries.

iv. No Moral Blame Attaches to Fremont Congregation's Conduct.

In the legal context, "[m]oral blame has been applied to describe a defendant's culpability in terms of the defendant's state of mind and the inherently harmful nature of the defendant's acts." (Adams, supra, 68 Cal.App.4th at 270.) "Moral blame" as a public policy factor is more than the answer to the question "was the defendant negligent?" (See Merenda v. Superior Court (1992) 3 Cal.App.4th 1, 10-11.) Instead, courts have required a higher degree of moral culpability such as where the defendant: (1) intended or planned the harmful result; (2) had actual or constructive knowledge of the harmful consequences of its behavior; (3) acted in bad faith or with a reckless indifference to the results of their conduct; or (4) engaged in inherently harmful acts. (Adams, supra, 68 Cal.App.4th at 270.)

None of those circumstances are present here. Nor did the evidence demonstrate that Fremont Congregation ignored the societal plague of child abuse. To the contrary, Fremont Congregation used materials from Watchtower's educational program, including written materials, to inform its members how to prevent such abuse. (3 RT 160-165, 188, 208, 235, 237-239; 5 RT 508-510, 547; 6 RT 702-704; 7 RT 876-878, 884-887.) As Dr. Applewhite testified, Jehovah's Witnesses did an exceptional job from the 1970's through the 1990's educating parents about child sexual abuse (7 RT 876-877, 896, 898), exceeding normal standards existing in the mid-1990's. (7 RT 884.) Further, Fremont Congregation elders implemented Watchtower's direction in the July 1, 1989 letter addressed to all bodies of elders that, upon learning of an allegation of child abuse, elders must protect the victim from further abuse and call Watchtower's Legal Department to ensure compliance with mandatory child abuse reporting laws for ministers in their state. (3 RT 154, 246; 7 RT 924.)

This is a far cry from those situations where a defendant takes affirmative actions, or makes affirmative misrepresentations, which place the victim in a "zone of danger." For instance, in Pamela L. v. Farmer (1980) 112 Cal.App.3d 206, the wife of a sex offender was held liable for telling the parents of three children that "it would be safe for them to play at her house." (Id. at 212.) The Pamela L. court distinguished that case from traditional "nonfeasance cases" because of the nature of the wife's affirmative misrepresentations which increased the likelihood of harm to the three plaintiffs. (Id. at 209-210.) In other words, the wife specifically invited the children to her home and thereby "assumed" a "special relationship" with them. (Id. at 211; see also Carpenter v. City of Los Angeles (1991) 230 Cal.App.3d 923, 931-932 [prosecutors who assured the appellant that the defendant posed no real danger owed a duty of care that required warning of subsequent threats to appellant's life].)

Here, the record is devoid of evidence that Fremont Congregation either took any affirmative action that put the Plaintiff in Kendrick's company or made affirmative misrepresentations to the Plaintiff or to her parents concerning the level of danger (or safety) that would result from association with Kendrick. As such, Fremont Congregation did not place the Plaintiff in a zone of danger by any affirmative acts.

v. Policy of Preventing Future Harm.

Fremont Congregation agrees that protecting children from sexual abuse is vitally important. But, the Plaintiff provided no evidence that requiring religious organizations to warn congregation members about other members who have committed child sexual abuse is an effective strategy for preventing future abuse.

The case of Baldwin v. Zoradi (1981) 123 Cal.App.3d 275 provides a close analogy. In that case, a student sued a university after two fellow students had been drinking and engaged in a speeding contest in which the plaintiff was injured. The Baldwin court held that the policy of preventing future harm was not a very strong one because the university officials had not "collaborated" to encourage the drinking, and there was no "direct involvement" by the university in furnishing alcoholic beverages. (Id. at 290.) Similarly, there was no collaboration here. Fremont Congregation did not encourage Kendrick to spend private time with the Plaintiff or to sexually abuse her; Fremont Congregation did nothing to facilitate the abuse.

Thus, while the policy of preventing future child abuse is strong, imposing the burden of that policy on defendants like the Freemont Congregation – who have no direct involvement with the conduct meant to be prevented – makes little sense, and in fact could prove to be counter-productive in the fight against child abuse. Indeed, logic dictates that child molesters will not confess to clergy members if they know that their conduct will be announced to the congregation. Without such confessions, elders would lose valuable insight allowing them to closely watch attendees who might pose a danger to other members. And child molesters who do not seek corrective spiritual assistance will continue their practices without being discovered. If religious organizations are required to issue warnings about congregation members with a history of sexually abusing a child, those members will simply conceal that history or move to a different congregation, to a different religious organization, or to a youth organization where the history remains unknown and where they will not be monitored. This certainly does nothing to promote the policy of preventing that harm in the first place.

vi. Significant Social and Financial Burden.

"Foreseeability and the extent of the burden to the defendant are ordinarily the crucial considerations" in the duty analysis. (Castaneda, supra, 41 Cal.4th at 1213.) Indeed, the imposition of a duty of care to protect against criminal activity requires "balancing the foreseeability of the harm against the burden of the duty to be imposed." (Wiener v. Southcoast Childcare Centers, Inc. (2004) 32 Cal.4th 1138, 1146-1147 [citations omitted].) To do so, a court must "identify the specific action or actions the plaintiff claims the defendant had a duty to undertake[,]" then "the court must analyze how financially and socially burdensome these proposed measures would be[.]" (Castaneda, supra, 41 Cal.4th at 1214.)

Although Plaintiff did not clearly state what action Fremont Congregation should have taken to protect her, her attorney suggested three options: (1) an announcement should have been made that Kendrick had momentarily fondled the breast of his stepdaughter (9 RT 1085-1086); or (2) the elders should have made that fact known to her and her parents personally (9 RT 1085-1086); or (3) Fremont Congregation should have barred Kendrick from attending church services (9 RT 1085-1086). However, making a public announcement or privately disclosing such confidential information violates the firmly held religious beliefs and practices of Jehovah's Witnesses and was not part of the procedures for disciplining within the church. This is especially true where at the time of that confession, Kendrick had not been convicted (or even charged) with a crime, and Freemont Congregation was unaware of any subsequent criminal prosecution until 1998. As such, neither a civil jury nor a trial judge is privileged to adjudicate whether or not the discipline process of the church was reasonable. (See Watchtower's Opening Brief, Section IV.C.) Even if the Plaintiff's suggestions could meet constitutional muster, the social and financial burdens are too great to justify the imposition of a broad duty to protect, including a duty to warn.

Practical realities similarly underscore the extremely burdensome nature of a duty to protect with its duty to warn. Here, an announcement was made to the congregation that Kendrick was no longer serving as a ministerial servant. (3RT 163, 166, 222-223, 241, 243-244; 5 RT 484; 7 RT 880.) To Jehovah's Witnesses, that announcement was sufficient to let congregation members know Kendrick had a spiritual problem and Fremont Congregation elders had serious concerns about Kendrick. (3 RT 166; 4 RT 409.) Nevertheless, Plaintiff's own father, who knew that Kendrick was no longer serving as a ministerial servant because Kendrick's congregational activities and his congregation duties were greatly curtailed, admitted that he did not know if he was at the congregation meeting when that announcement was made. (5 RT 484.) It follows that, had the elders made a detailed announcement as to Kendrick's wrongdoing instead, the Plaintiff and her family may never have heard it. Thus, the idea of even how that announcement could be required raises more vexing questions than it answers:

- To ensure every member is aware of important information contained in an announcement, would one announcement during a congregation meeting be sufficient?
- Would weekly, monthly, or annual announcements be required?
- Would elders be required to announce each week that Kendrick engaged in wrongdoing in 1993?
- Would an announcement be required every time a new member or family joins the congregation?
- Or would the congregation have to put a written announcement up on the information board in the back of the Kingdom Hall?
- Would families with minor children have to be notified in person or by a written notice?
- Would Fremont Congregation have a duty to protect or warn families with children in other congregations if it learns that Kendrick, or any confirmed child abuser, occasionally attends these other congregations' meetings for worship to visit relatives or for other reasons?
- Would Fremont Congregation have a duty to protect or warn families with children who attend other congregations but whom Kendrick, or another confirmed child abuser, might occasionally visit at their homes for reasons unrelated to the congregation?
- Would Fremont Congregation have a duty to protect or warn families with children even if they received an unconfirmed allegation of child abuse against a congregation member?
- Would Fremont Congregation have a duty to protect and warn families with children about a minor who is alleged to have engaged in sexual misconduct with a younger minor?

- How would Fremont Congregation be able to prove that they took reasonable protective measures or gave a warning when an alleged victim sues 20 years after abuse and alleges that Fremont Congregation breached its duty to protect with its duty to warn?
- When would the duty to protect or warn cease?

From a financial burden standpoint, the duty to protect imposed by the trial court required Fremont Congregation to protect children from the risk of abuse by a rank-and-file congregation member 24 hours a day, 7 days a week. Thus, even if Fremont Congregation issued warnings to congregation members about the risk of abuse by individuals who are alleged to have committed child abuse in the past, Fremont Congregation would still incur an enormous financial burden for lawsuits resulting from the unprecedented duty to protect children around-the-clock, even off church property and during activities unrelated to the church.

Such a broad duty also places an intolerable social burden on Fremont Congregation in violation of its constitutionally protected religious beliefs and practices regarding confidentiality and internal church discipline. Those beliefs and practices are based on Fremont Congregation's understanding of the Bible, which requires that congregation elders keep strictly confidential the sensitive and private matters they learn in confidence from congregation members. It also burdens and impacts directly the ability of congregation members to obtain spiritual advice and counsel without their most sensitive and private matters being made public. Indeed, confidentiality benefits the spiritual health of the congregation as a collective body. To that end, Freemont Congregation elder Clarke testified that "[the congregants] have to be comfortable coming to us to talk with us about their problems so we can offer them Scriptural help, spiritual guidance. If they feel that we are going to blab it to our wi[ves], or to announce it from the platform, we wouldn't get too many people coming to us. So confidentiality is important for a minister." (3 RT 254.) Accordingly, the duty imposed by the trial court would simply create unviable conflicts within religious organizations and would harm the minister-congregant relationship in practically every denomination. In the words of Elder Clarke: "Why would anybody come to us [elders] with their problems if they knew that as soon as they came to us we were going to announce it? Why would anybody confess to a Catholic priest if they knew that after they confessed it was going to be announced at [M]ass next week. It is ludicrous." (3 RT 230.)

vii. Significant Societal Consequences.

The significant societal consequences flowing from the trial court's decision also presents compelling reasons against imposing a duty to protect with a duty to warn. Such a duty would forever saddle all religious organizations with unbridled liability in all instances where they discover any activities by any congregation member which may or may not pose harm to other congregation members, or which may or may not be criminal in nature. Indeed, if a congregant has a drinking problem and seeks spiritual advice from church elders to combat that problem, but later drives drunk after leaving a social function (unrelated to the church) and injures another congregant, that church would be liable under the trial court's duty formulation.

Similarly, if a congregant has financial problems and seeks spiritual advice, but later steals from another congregant, that church would also be liable under the trial court's duty ruling. As those two examples aptly illustrate, the potential financial liability to the church is limitless, making it all but impossible for the Freemont Congregation, or any other church, to continue its operations in the face of such unbridled, yet undetermined, liability for the torts of any of its members. No organization, religious or otherwise, could be expected to operate from a sound financial position in the face of such limitless liability, especially where there would be no insurance available to cover those risks.

The consequence of such a duty would therefore be to force the Freemont Congregation – and any church for that matter – to immediately excommunicate any member who even potentially or allegedly engaged in any conduct which may or may not later result in criminal or tortious activity against another member at some undetermined point in the future. But as the law correctly recognizes, civil courts are ill-suited to tell any group (religious or otherwise) who it should or should not include, and the First Amendment specifically excludes such government intervention in the right every American has to associate with whomever they chose. Indeed, as recognized in the recent decision of Melton, supra, 183 Cal.App.4th at 540-541, limiting who a person can and cannot associate with in an effort to prevent harm from the criminal acts of others is too "socially burdensome" to justify tort liability for those criminal acts. Likewise, limiting a church's choices about who may or may not attend religious services creates a heavy social burden, not to mention an infringement of First Amendment protections. Civil courts cannot impose liability by case law, nor can legislators by statute prescribe who a religion may invite to attend meetings and participate in its religious activities. (See Paul v. Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc. (9th Cir. 1987) 819 F.2d 875, 880-881 [Free Exercise Clause protects religious organizations from civil tort liability related to the religious practice of "shunning"].)

In short, the trial court's creation of a duty to protect the Plaintiff – 24 hours a day, 7 days each week – from the tortious or criminal acts of other rank-and-file members unduly burdens the free exercise of religion to which the Fremont Congregation, and any other religious organization, are undoubtedly entitled. Adherence to that new duty would also impose unwarranted financial and social burdens on churches of all denominations, as well as similarly situated social and nonprofit organizations. Consequently, those organizations would ultimately have reduced resources for the vast array of charitable and social services they provide to society, or would have to cease those activities altogether in the face of unbridled liability, all of which would have a detrimental effect on society. This Court should not tolerate such a result.

In sum, even if this Court concluded it was appropriate to apply the traditional Rowland factors to determine whether Fremont Congregation owed the Plaintiff a duty of care, applying the facts of this case to those factors compels the very same result: no such duty of care can be justified. Accordingly, this Court should reverse the trial court's imposition of such a duty and the resulting Judgment and Amended Judgment against Freemont Congregation and Watchtower.

B. A New Trial is Required Because the Trial Court's Jury Instructions Prejudiced the Outcome.

1. Standards of Review: De Novo and Prejudice.

A new trial is required, even if this Court creates a new category of special relationship duty, because the trial court nevertheless erred in giving prejudicial jury instructions which prevented a fair trial. The propriety of jury instructions is a legal question subject to de novo review. (Mize-Kurzman v. Marin Community College Dist. (2012) 202 Cal.App.4th 832, 845-846.) As this Court is surely aware, "a [trial] court's duty to instruct the jury is discharged if its instructions embrace all points of law necessary to a decision." (Thompson Pacific Construction, Inc., v. City of Sunnyvale (2007) 155 Cal.App.4th 525, 553.) However, when those instructions are erroneous or incomplete, the reviewing court "must examine the evidence, the arguments, and other factors to determine whether it is reasonably probable that instructions allowing application of an erroneous theory actually misled the jury." (Soule v. General Motors Corp. (1994) 8 Cal.4th 548, 581, fn. 11.) A "reasonable probability" in this context "does not mean more likely than not, but merely a reasonable chance, more than an abstract possibility." (College Hospital Inc. v. Superior Court (1994) 8 Cal.4th 704, 715.) Furthermore, in conducting that examination, the reviewing court must view the evidence in the light most favorable to the appellant, assuming on appeal that the jury might have believed the evidence upon which the instruction favorable to the appellant were predicated. (See Henderson v. Harnischfeger Corp. (1974) 12 Cal.3d 663, 674.)

2. Application to This Case.

a. Scope of Any Duty to Warn Instruction.

Over Freemont Congregation's repeated objections, the trial court issued novel jury instructions regarding Fremont Congregation's legal duty to warn and to take protective actions for its members. Because those instructions were impermissibly vague regarding the scope of duty being imposed, they gave the jury improper guidance and created substantial prejudice.

In pertinent part, the trial issued the following instruction with regard to a duty to warn:

> In determining whether or not Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc. and Fremont Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses, North Unit, took reasonable protective measures, you may consider the following:
>
> 1. The presence or absence of any warning;
>
> 2. Whether or not any educational programs were made available to plaintiff, her parents, or to other Jehovah's Witnesses from the Fremont Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses, North Unit, members for the purpose of sexual abuse education and prevention; and
> 3. Such other facts and circumstances contained in the evidentiary record here as to the presence or absence of protective measures. (8 RT 987-988; 9 RT 1054.)

Yet that charge gave no direction to define what a reasonable and proper warning would or should look like.[8] The Plaintiff's attorney argued during closing that Fremont Congregation should have told her parents that Kendrick was removed as a ministerial servant because he molested a child. (9 RT 1085-1086.) Yet, as discussed above, numerous and complex questions arise concerning the scope, content, and frequency of the "warning" she claims she was owed, an issue the court's instruction did nothing to clarify.

California has required sex offenders to register with local law enforcement for over 50 years. But when Kendrick abused his stepdaughter, California did not require the criminal justice system or any other government agency to warn citizens of future harm from such criminals. Moreover, when that prior abuse took place, California neither provided public access to information about convicted child abusers nor required ministers to report incidents of child abuse to the police. And even knowing what they did about Kendrick's conduct toward his stepdaughter, there was no specific, credible threat made to any other particular individual which would have required an obligation to warn. (See, e.g., Thompson v. County of Alameda (1980) 27 Cal.3d 741; see also Duffy v. City of Oceanside (1986) 179 Cal.App.3d 666, 674.) Yet the jury was allowed to speculate what such a warning would look like, completely untethered to even the special relationship duty defined by the trial court. Consequently, the jury was given no relevant guidance on how to determine whether Fremont Congregation breached that duty, undermining their entire determination on that critical issue.

[8] As our Supreme Court made clear in Parsons, supra, 15 Cal.4th at 476-477 part of the court's responsibility in evaluating whether a duty was owed is defining what that duty would be.

b. Mandatory Reporter Instruction.

The trial court also erred when it refused to instruct the jury that ministers and clergy members were not mandated reporters of child sex abuse under California law until January 1, 1997, which was more than three years after Kendrick inappropriately touched his stepdaughter in 1993. (8 RT 975-979, 991; 9 RT 1021-1023; see Stats. 1996, ch. 1081 (A.B. 3354), § 3.5, eff. Jan. 1, 1997 [amending Pen: Code 11166].) As a result, the jury did not have the proper understanding that Fremont Congregation elders were not mandated reporters when they learned of Kendrick's 1993 sexual abuse of his stepdaughter. This was significant because the trial court's concomitant duty instruction directed the jury to consider the presence or absence of any warning about Kendrick in determining whether Fremont Congregation took reasonable precautions to protect the Plaintiff from the risk of sexual abuse by Kendrick.

By refusing to give Fremont Congregation's requested instruction that clergy were not mandated reporters until January 1, 1997, the court allowed the jury to be misled about the elders' legal reporting obligations. The failure also allowed the jury to give improper credence to misleading statements by Plaintiff's expert and counsel that led to the incorrect conclusion that Fremont Congregation breached a legal duty and was negligent for its failure to warn.

Specifically, incorrect statements about the elders' reporting duty were made by Plaintiff's expert, Anna Salter, Ph.D. She confused the jury by suggesting that in 1993, clergy were legally obligated to report under the California mandated child abuse reporting law, and that the 1997 amendments to that law (adding clergy as mandatory reporters) simply "clarified" clergy's already existing reporting obligations. (6 RT 693-694, 707.) Plaintiff's counsel's closing argument compounded the jury's confusion by stating that Fremont Congregation elders were mandated reporters in 1993, thus suggesting that the elders had a legislatively imposed duty to report Kendrick to the authorities. (6 RT 693-694, 707.)

The trial court had the opportunity to clarify the multiple misstatements regarding the issue of the elders' legal duties under the relevant law in 1993. However, the court simply gave a limiting instruction that alerted the jury to the fact that the parties' respective mental health experts had a "difference of opinion" on that important legal issue. (8 RT 975-979, 991; 9 RT 1021-1023, 1057, 1058.) But it was not the experts' job to tell the jury what the relevant law required, and it was not the jury's job to determine which expert was correct regarding what the law required. Rather, it was exclusively the province of the trial court to tell the jury what the relevant law required. Its failure to do so – and to instead abdicate that responsibility to the jury – caused Freemont Congregation certain prejudice, as it allowed the jury to impose a legal duty, and to make its determination based upon that legally imposed duty, contrary to what the relevant law actually required.

c. Allocation of Fault Instruction.

Civil Code section 1431.2(a) ("Proposition 51") provides that "the liability of each defendant for non-economic damages shall be several only and shall not be joint." The purpose of Proposition 51 was to eliminate the unfairness and cost of the so-called "deep pocket rule," which exploited relatively blameless defendants who are "perceived to have substantial financial resources[.]" (Civ. Code § 1431.1.) Our Supreme Court has held that a defendant's liability for non-economic damages "cannot exceed his or her proportionate share of fault as compared with all fault responsible for plaintiff's injury, not merely that of defendants present in the lawsuit." (DaFonte v. Up-Right, Inc. (1992) 2 Cal.4th 593, 603 [italics added, citations omitted].) Thus, the trial court, pursuant to Proposition 51, should have allowed a jury to allocate fault to all nonparties, but refused to do so.

Specifically, the trial court refused the jury instruction Fremont Congregation requested (and a corresponding special verdict form) to permit the jury an opportunity to allocate fault to "other persons," i.e., those whom the jury might have found to have contributed to the Plaintiff's claimed damages. (Bly-Magee v. Budget Rent-A-Car Corp. (1994) 24 Cal.App.4th 318, 325; see also Roslan v. Permea, Inc. (1993) 17 Cal.App.4th 110, 113.) For example, Fremont Congregation requested that the Plaintiff's parents be included on the Special Verdict form. (8 RT 961-967; 9 RT 1012-1014, 1033-1035.) But the trial court refused to do so because it did not believe that the Plaintiff's parents had any knowledge that Kendrick had in the past momentarily touched the breast of his stepdaughter. (Ibid.) But a parent's duty to protect their children does not hinge upon such knowledge. "In California, parents have a duty 'to exercise reasonable care, supervision, protection, and control over their minor children'" and even to prevent attacks. (See People v. Swanson-Birabent (2003) 114 Cal.App.4th 733, 746; People v. Rolon (2008) 160 Cal.App.4th 1206, 1219 ["aiding and abetting liability can be premised on a parent's failure to fulfill his or her common law duty to protect his or her child from attack."].)

The jury had ample evidence to conclude that both of the Plaintiff's parents contributed to her damages. For instance, Watchtower publications distributed to all congregation members provided instruction for parents to protect children from sexual abuse, including the key mandate to personally supervise children at all times. (3 RT 160-165, 260; 6 RT 702-704; 7RT 876-878, 884-887; 8 AA 2014-2023 (Pl. Exh. 59, Def. Exh. 17), 2024-2033 (Pl. Exh. 60, Def. Exh. 29), 2034-2046 (Pl. Exh. 64, Def. Exh. 37), 2047-2052 (Pl. Exh. 65, Def. Exh. 49).) Yet, the Plaintiff testified that her parents allowed her to go alone with Kendrick to his home numerous times, over a two to three year period, which, if true, provided an unreasonable opportunity for Kendrick to sexually abuse Plaintiff. Moreover, if the Plaintiff's testimony is to be credited – as apparently it was by the jury – she further testified that she was molested by Kendrick in the presence of her father on an Amtrak train, while her father did nothing to protect her. (6 RT 745-746.) A Special Verdict and corresponding instruction that included the Plaintiff's parents would have permitted the jury to express an opinion as to whether it was reasonable for Plaintiff's parents to allow their young daughter to go off alone with an adult male to his home where he lived by himself on literally hundreds of occasions. Failure to give that instruction and related Special Verdict constituted prejudicial error.

Additionally, as is detailed in Watchtower's companion Opening Brief, the North Fremont Police, Child Protective Services, and the District Attorney all had information superior to that possessed by Fremont Congregation elders, yet none warned the public or anyone at Fremont Congregation of Kendrick's subsequent confession and criminal conviction. To the extent that Fremont Congregation bears any responsibility for failing to disclose information about Kendrick's confessed offense even before criminal charges were filed, the jury should have been allowed to also consider whether those agencies also bear equal or greater responsibility for failing to disclose information about the incident which resulted in Kendrick's criminal conviction. The trial court should have allowed the jury to allocate liability accordingly.

Its failure to do so severely prejudiced Fremont Congregation. A miscarriage of justice resulted because the jury was forced to allocate more fault to Fremont Congregation than could otherwise be reasonably warranted. Additionally, the trial court's failure to allow allocation of fault to the parents, law enforcement, and other entities placed a greater burden on a small Christian congregation than the law imposes even on those other individuals and organizations--both of which already have established duties in the law to protect children. On this basis alone, this matter should be remanded for a new trial, even if this Court finds that Fremont Congregation owed a duty to Plaintiff, so that the jury can properly apportion liability among the "universe of tortfeasors." (Bly-Magee, supra, 24 Cal.App.4th at 325 [citations omitted].)

V.

CONCLUSION

Since Fremont Congregation did not have custody or care of Plaintiff, control over Kendrick, or knowledge of the abuse when it occurred, and it did not condone or cover up the abuse, this Court should reverse all aspects of the trial court's Judgment and Amended Judgment, and direct a new judgment be entered in Fremont Congregation's favor on all of the Plaintiff's claims. Alternatively, this Court should order that the lower court conduct a new trial and give complete and proper instructions on duty of care, duty of mandatory reporters, and allocation of fault.

Defendant and Appellant, WATCHTOWER BIBLE & TRACT SOCIETY OF NEW YORK, INC. ("Watchtower"), hereby files this Appellant's Opening Brief challenging: (a) the trial court's original Judgment following jury trial, entered on June 27, 2012; (b) the Amended Judgment entered on September 17, 2012; and (c) the trial court's related rulings of August 24, 2012, in favor of Plaintiff, JANE DOE ("Plaintiff"), on various post-trial motions.

INTRODUCTION

Unlike other sexual abuse cases which have generated salacious headlines and garnered broad media attention, this is not a case involving the sexual abuse of a child by a religious leader, a member of the clergy, or a youth leader. Rather, this case involves the sexual abuse of the child of one rank-and-file church member committed by another rank-and-file member of that same congregation. Consequently, in this case of first impression, this Court is faced with the following critical duty question: What legal responsibility should a religious organization have for the sexual abuse (or any other tort, for that matter) committed by one rank-and-file congregation member against another?

Without a doubt, the sexual abuse of a young child is a profound tragedy that naturally causes a civilized society to consider how to better protect its children. However, that a case involves child sexual abuse should not cause courts to quickly abandon long-standing and well-established principles of American tort law. Indeed, imposing upon religious organizations an unprecedented duty to protect the children of congregation members from sexual abuse by other congregation members is neither the proper response nor the solution to the disturbing pandemic of child abuse. Such a duty would be virtually impossible for any religious organization to fulfill, would expose religious organizations to endless tort liability, and would lead to intolerable internal religious conflicts. Yet the trial court imposed that duty here. It made Watchtower responsible for the acts of one of its congregation members, Jonathan Kendrick ("Kendrick"), simply on the basis that Kendrick and his family had sought religious counsel from elders of a local congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses years previously arising out of Kendrick's alleged inappropriate conduct with his stepdaughter. As a result, Watchtower and a local congregation are now saddled with a massive judgment of nearly $11.5 million. Incredibly, Plaintiff confirmed during cross examination that she entered into an agreement with Kendrick (who has not been prosecuted for his heinous crimes) not to execute on any judgment she obtained against him, which in this case turned out to be about $4.2 million.

Consequently, Watchtower raises four fundamental grounds for reversal of the trial court's Judgment and Amended Judgment. First, Watchtower explains how (A) since Watchtower did not have a special relationship with the Plaintiff (the child of a congregation member), Watchtower did not have a duty to protect Plaintiff from sexual abuse by Kendrick, nor did Watchtower have a duty to warn Plaintiff or her parents about Kendrick's alleged past sexual abuse of his stepdaughter. Second, Watchtower sets forth how (B) the trial court improperly excluded other parties from sharing any responsibility for the harm claimed by the Plaintiff, and as a consequence, targeted Watchtower's religious beliefs and practices on confidentiality in a way that violated Watchtower's First Amendment rights under the Free Exercise clauses of the United States and California Constitutions. Third, Watchtower describes how (C) the trial court's imposition upon Watchtower of a duty to protect with a duty to warn impermissibly entangled the jury in an examination and assessment of Watchtower's religious beliefs, further violating fundamental constitutional principles. Fourth, Watchtower demonstrates how (D) the trial court's imposition upon Watchtower of a duty to protect with a duty to warn improperly required Watchtower to label a person as a sex offender even though that person had not been convicted of a crime, in violation of well-established rights to privacy, liberty, and due process protected under both the United States and California Constitutions.

Watchtower next raises two additional grounds for reversal of the trial court's related post-trial orders concerning the Plaintiff's award of punitive damages. Specifically, Watchtower explains how (E) the trial court improperly allowed Plaintiff to proceed against Watchtower with a claim for punitive damages despite the lack of substantial evidence to support a predicate finding of malice. Finally, Watchtower describes how (F) the amount of punitive damages awarded against Watchtower was excessive as a matter of law, especially where the Plaintiff's stated purpose in seeking those damages was to "change Watchtower's national policy," violating Watchtower's due process rights.

Accordingly, Watchtower respectfully requests this Court to reverse the trial court's Judgment, Amended Judgment and related post-judgment orders, and to direct that judgment be entered in Watchtower's favor. Alternatively, Watchtower requests this Court to direct that a new trial be ordered.

STATEMENT OF FACTS AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

A. The Facts of This Case.

1. Background of the Appellants.

The Governing Body of Jehovah's Witnesses ("Governing Body"), which currently is based in Brooklyn, New York, is the body of experienced Christian men who have the overall spiritual supervision and oversight of the worldwide community of Jehovah's Witnesses. (7 RT 907; 8 AA 2054 [Def. Exh. 131].)[1] At the time of the trial, the Governing Body was composed of seven elders. (7 RT 907.)[2]

At all times relevant to this case, Watchtower was the primary legal entity used by the Governing Body to supervise the spiritual activities of Jehovah's Witnesses in the United States, and its primary office was located in New York. (7 RT 914.) Two of the departments at its offices were the Service Department and Legal Department. (5 RT 533-534; 7 RT 905-906, 932-933.) Elders in the Service Department provide spiritual assistance and direction to congregation elders (7 RT 906; 8 AA 2054), and the Legal Department provides legal advice to congregation and Service Department elders. (3 RT 154; 5 RT 534.)

There are approximately 1.2 million Jehovah's Witnesses associated with about 13,400 congregations in the United States. (7 RT 906, 909-910.) The North Fremont Congregation, located in Fremont, California, is one of those congregations. (3 RT 139.) At all times relevant to this case, congregations held religious meetings three times per week. (3 RT 235-237; 5 RT 548-551.) Most of those religious meetings were held in Kingdom Halls, which are houses of worship used by [number]).

[2] Elders are persons appointed according to the beliefs and practices of Jehovah's Witnesses to care for the spiritual needs of congregations. Their qualifications are set forth in the Bible. (3 RT 177-178, 233-234.)

Jehovah's Witnesses for their religious services. (3 RT 142, 208-209; 5 RT 548.) For one of those weekly meetings, congregations met in smaller groups in private homes and Kingdom Halls for in-depth Bible study. (3 RT 208, 236-237; 5 RT 548.)

Jehovah's Witnesses do not sponsor programs or activities that separate children from their parents, such as religion classes for children or overnight trips of any kind. (3 RT 140; 4 RT 277, 321, 421; 5 RT 495, 547; 6 RT 705; 7 RT 873-876.) Rather, children attend and participate along with their parents in congregation meetings and in the public ministry for which Jehovah's Witnesses are well known. (3 RT 143, 185-187; 4 RT 277, 367-368, 421; 5 RT 493, 495, 498, 549-551; 6 RT 705; 7 RT 874, 912.) As a result, neither Watchtower personnel nor the elders and ministerial servants of North Fremont Congregation have unique positions of access to children, or positions of trust with children, because families stay together during all religious programs. (7 RT 874-875.)

Congregation members are called "publishers," and all publishers are considered "ordained ministers." (5 RT 553; 7 RT 911; 8 AA 2054.) Thus, the terms "member," "publisher," and "ordained minister" all mean the same thing among Jehovah's Witnesses (5 RT 553; 7 RT 913-914); all of those terms refer to Jehovah's Witnesses, including children, who preach the good news. (3 RT 139-140, 183-184.) Before becoming a "publisher," a person first becomes an "unbaptized publisher." (7 RT 911-912; 8 AA 2054.) Unbaptized publishers generally include Bible students, including members' children, who are making spiritual progress toward becoming a baptized publisher. (7 RT 911-912.) Subsequently, a person becomes a full-fledged congregation member on the day of his or her baptism as one of Jehovah's Witnesses. (7 RT 911.)

The spiritual oversight of each congregation is the responsibility of a local body of elders. (3 RT 139; 7 RT 908-909; 8 AA 2054.) Those elders are the congregation's spiritual teachers and leaders, and provide spiritual assistance and encouragement to congregation members through their pastoral activities. (7 RT 908-909.) Congregation elders are assisted by ministerial servants who care for ministerial duties such as operating the microphones and sound equipment at meetings, assisting members in obtaining literature, handling accounts, and serving as attendants during meetings. (3 RT 147; 4 RT 402; 7 RT 909.) None of the elders and ministerial servants, however, are paid for their service to the congregation. (3 RT 139, 178; 7 RT 913.)

To become an elder or ministerial servant, a person who meets the Biblical qualifications must first be recommended by the local congregation body of elders, and then approved by Service Department elders. (3 RT 177-178, 233-234.)

Jehovah's Witnesses commonly refer to their public ministry, which involves preaching the good news of God's Kingdom to any who will listen, as "field service" or "field ministry." (3 RT 142-143, 185; 5 RT 548; 7 RT 910.) Field service or field ministry is carried out in many forms, including going from door-to-door, and by conducting Bible studies with interested persons. (5 RT 481, 550-551.) While most of Jehovah's Witnesses participate in some form of public ministry, participation is not required to maintain congregation membership. (5 RT 552.)

2. Perpetrator Kendrick's Relevant Background.

On November 11, 1993, Kendrick confessed to two North Fremont Congregation elders, Michael L. Clarke and Gary Abrahamson, that on one occasion in July 1993 at the Kendrick family home, he had inappropriately touched the breast of his then 15-year-old stepdaughter, Andrea. (3 RT 138-139, 151-160, 177, 180-181, 183, 207, 210-211, 214-217, 219-222, 239-240, 250-251; 4 RT 302; 7 RT 879-880.) Elders Clarke and Abrahamson provided Bible-based counseling to Kendrick, Andrea, and her mother, Evelyn Kendrick ("Evelyn"), and told Andrea and Evelyn that they had the absolute right to report Kendrick's conduct to law enforcement authorities. (3 RT 163-164, 180-181, 190-191, 239-242, 250-251; 4 RT 293, 297, 302; 6 RT 707; 7 RT 880.) Thereafter, the North Fremont Congregation elders contacted Watchtower's Legal Department for legal advice, and Watchtower's Service Department for spiritual advice. (3 RT 154, 246.) Notably, prior to 1997, ministers and clergy members were not mandated reporters of child abuse under California law. (See Stats. 1996, ch. 1081 (A.B. 3354), § 3.5 [amending Pen. Code § 11166, effective January 1, 1997].) Consequently, the elders followed church policy and left it to Andrea and Evelyn to report the matter to the police if they desired to do so. (3 RT 169, 241-242; 7 RT 880.) The Watchtower Service Department expressed agreement with the elders' recommendation to remove Kendrick as a ministerial servant. (3 RT 163, 166, 192, 218, 241, 244, 247; 7 RT 880.)

In December 1993, the North Fremont Congregation elders announced to the congregation that Kendrick was removed as a ministerial servant. (3 RT 163, 166, 241; 5RT 484; 7 RT 880.) Consistent with the religious beliefs and practices of Jehovah's Witnesses, and based upon their understanding of Bible scriptures on confidentiality, the reason for Kendrick's removal was not announced to the congregation. (3 RT 222-223, 243-244.) Since his removal as a ministerial servant in December 1993, Kendrick has never served in any appointed position in any congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses. (3 RT 243-244; 7 RT 916.)

Unbeknownst to the elders of the North Fremont Congregation, in February 1994, Evelyn and Andrea reported Kendrick's July 1993 sexual abuse of Andrea to the Fremont Police Department ("Fremont Police") and to Child Protective Services ("CPS"). (4 RT 296-297, 300-301, 303-306; 6 RT 701, 711-712; 8 AA 1983-1991 ([Pl. Exh. 5]; [Def. Exh. 94].) Thereafter, Andrea was interviewed by Officer Davila of the Fremont Police and a CPS caseworker. (4 RT 303-306, 348; 6 RT 646, 650-651.) Later, in early March 1994, Officer Davila interviewed Kendrick and Evelyn. (4 RT 303; 6 RT 646-648.) During his interview, Kendrick confessed that he had inappropriately touched Andrea in July 1993, and Officer Davila recommended to the Alameda County District Attorney ("District Attorney") that Kendrick be charged with a sex crime. (6 RT 647-649; 8 AA 1991.) The District Attorney then filed charges against Kendrick and he was charged and convicted of a misdemeanor. (4 RT 307; 6 RT 654-656.)

Based on Officer Davila's investigation, the authorities learned that Kendrick was a member of the North Fremont Congregation. (6 RT 652.) However, no one from the Fremont Police, CPS, or the District Attorney's office ever informed the members or elders of the North Fremont Congregation about their investigation or the conviction of Kendrick for molesting Andrea. (3 RT 193, 251-252; 4 RT 419; 6 RT 649, 652-653, 655, 711-712.) In fact, the North Fremont Congregation elders did not become aware of Kendrick's conviction until 1998. (3 RT 193, 251; 4 RT 307-308, 410.)

3. Perpetrator Kendrick's Subsequent Abuse of Plaintiff.

Plaintiff, who was born on November 25, 1985, attended the North Fremont Congregation religious meetings with her parents, Neal and Kathleen Conti. (4 RT 350, 352, 367-368; 6 RT 713.) Plaintiff never attended North Fremont Congregation religious meetings without at least one of her parents being present. (3 RT 189-190; 4 RT 321, 333, 442; 5 RT 482, 493, 498; 6 RT 725-726, 737-738.)

The Conti family became acquainted with Kendrick through their mutual association with the North Fremont Congregation. (4 RT 353-354; 5 RT 482-483.) Plaintiff testified that Kendrick hugged her and made her sit on his lap during congregation religious meetings. (6 RT 723, 738-739, 742.) She also testified that from about 1994 to 1996, Kendrick regularly took her to his home and sexually abused her after Sunday congregation religious meetings. (6 RT 742, 744.) Plaintiff further testified that Kendrick sexually abused her at his home after field service activity, although she made no mention of this sexual abuse at her deposition. (6 RT 728-731, 746-747, 762.) In addition, she testified that after watching a movie in Sacramento, Kendrick sexually abused her on an Amtrak train while her father, Neal Conti, was present. (6 RT 745-746.) During closing argument, Plaintiff's counsel incorrectly suggested to the jury that Plaintiff was abused by Kendrick during field service. (9 RT 1102, 1190.) The record demonstrates, however, that Plaintiff never testified to being molested by Kendrick during field service.

Further, Plaintiff's father denied that Kendrick ever hugged Plaintiff or had her sit on his lap during congregation religious meetings. (5 RT 495-496, 513.) He also disputed his own daughter's testimony that she was taken by Kendrick to Kendrick's home alone after congregation meetings or after field service. (5 RT 496, 513.) And Neal Conti also denied that Kendrick ever abused Plaintiff on an Amtrak train while he was present. (5 RT 499-501.)

Plaintiff's mother, Kathleen Conti, who lives with Plaintiff (4 RT 350; 6 RT 713), testified that she never saw Kendrick hug Plaintiff or put her on his lap during congregation religious meetings. (4 RT 368-369) She also testified that her daughter never went to meetings or field service without one of her parents. (4 RT 357, 367-368.)

North Fremont Congregation elders, Gary Abrahamson, Michael Clarke, and Lawrence Lamerdin, testified that they kept a watchful eye on Kendrick after the 1993 incident with his stepdaughter, even though they knew nothing of his subsequent criminal conviction. (3 RT 162-163, 247-248, 250; 4 RT 406-409, 412-413, 417, 420; 7 RT 880-881.) They, too, never saw Kendrick hug Plaintiff or have her, or any other child, sit on his lap during congregation meetings. (3 RT 195-196, 248-249, 253; 4 RT 420-421.) The elders also never saw Plaintiff leaving alone with Kendrick after congregation meetings or field service. (3 RT 196, 248, 253; 4 RT 420-421, 430.) And they never witnessed Plaintiff at meetings or in field service without at least one of her parents. (3 RT 187, 190, 248.)

North Fremont Congregation members Bernice Munoz, Sylvia Munoz, and Pamela Figuerido similarly testified that they never saw Plaintiff sit on Kendrick's lap during meetings (7 RT 828-829, 836, 852), never saw Kendrick give Plaintiff a bear hug (7 RT 829, 836, 851), never saw Kendrick leave the Kingdom Hall in vehicle with Plaintiff or drive together in same vehicle (7 RT 829, 836-837, 852), never saw Kendrick in field service alone with Plaintiff (7 RT 829, 837, 852-853), and never saw Plaintiff at Kingdom Hall without one of her parents. (7 RT 837, 852.)

4. Watchtower's Long-Standing Child Protection Policies.

Since the 1980's and throughout the 1990's, Watchtower published numerous articles in its religious journals, The Watchtower and Awake!, to educate Jehovah's

Witnesses and the public about the growing problem of child sexual abuse, the signs of such abuse, the methods of child molesters, and various protection measures parents can adopt to safeguard their children from sexual abuse. (3 RT 160-165; 6 RT 702-704; 7 RT 876-878, 884-887; 8 AA 2014-2023 (Pl. Exh. 59, Def. Exh. 17), 2024-2033 (Pl. Exh. 60, Def. Exh. 29), 2034-2046 (Pl. Exh. 64, Def. Exh. 37), 2047-2052 (Pl. Exh. 65, Def. Exh. 49).) For example, the January 22, 1985 issue of Awake! featured the cover series, "Child Molesting – You Can Protect Your Child," warning of the prevalence of child sexual abuse in society. (3 RT 258; 7 RT 884-885, 917.) It urged parents to be protectors of their children (3 RT 260; 7 RT 918), explained that child sexual abuse is more likely to be perpetrated by someone you know than by a stranger (3 RT 258; 7 RT 885, 918), taught parents how to keep their children out of dangerous situations (3 RT 259; 7 RT 919), and further informed parents how to detect and respond to possible sexual abuse. (7 RT 885; 918-919.)

Similarly, the teaching box "If Your Child Is Abused" on page 9 of the October 8, 1993 issue of the Awake! discussed how parents can train their children to protect themselves (7 RT 921-922), provided parents with suggestions on what to do if their child was abused (7 RT 922), and stated: "Some legal experts advise reporting the abuse to the authorities as soon as possible. In some lands the legal system may require this." (7 RT 922-923; 8 AA 2041.)

All Jehovah's Witnesses received those publications in their home by mail. (3 RT 179-180, 238, 260; 4 RT 331-332; 7 RT 830, 839, 848-849, 886-887.)

Additionally, congregation elders often used those publications to teach during congregation meetings and to provide spiritual counsel and advice to individual congregation members. (3 RT 188, 208, 235, 237-239; 5 RT 508-510, 547; 7 RT 887.) Jehovah's Witnesses also offered those publications to interested members of the public free of charge as part of their public ministry. (3 RT 239, 260; 4 RT 425-426; 5 RT 545-546; 7 RT 931, 939.)

Watchtower provided congregation elders with additional information on how to handle appropriately incidents of child sexual abuse. (3 RT 170; 4 RT 273.) This was done as part of the elders' ongoing spiritual training through Kingdom Ministry Schools held about every three years (3 RT 178-179, 234; 4 RT 273, 391), and through letters to bodies of elders. (3 RT 179.) For example, the Watchtower's July 1, 1989 letter to all bodies of elders addressed matters of legal and spiritual concern, including the misuse of the tongue and confidentiality. (3 RT 229, 255; 8 AA 1973-1978 (Pl. Exh. 1, Def. Exh. 26).) It reminded congregation elders of the long-standing policy, based upon Scripture, which requires elders to keep individuals' private information confidential. (3 RT 257; 4 RT 278.) At the same time, it informed congregation elders that "[m]any states have child abuse reporting laws" (3 RT 223-23, 254-257; 4 RT 272, 278; 7 RT 923; 8 AA 1975) and directed elders to immediately contact Watchtower's Legal Department if they receive reports of child abuse, emphasizing how "[v]ictims of such abuse need to be protected from further danger." (3 RT 255-256; 7 RT 924; 8 AA 1975.) That direction was in harmony with Watchtower's child abuse policy which required congregation elders to comply with child abuse reporting laws and to recognize that victims of child sexual abuse and their parents had the absolute right to report such crimes to the appropriate authorities. (7 RT 922-924.) Watchtower's March 23, 1992 and February 3, 1993 letters to all bodies of elders further highlighted that it is important for elders to be kind, sensitive, and compassionate listeners when providing spiritual help to victims of child abuse. (7 RT 881-882, 925-927; 8 AA 2002-2005 (Pl. Exh. 27, Def. Exh. 32).)

Watchtower's August 1, 1995 letter to all bodies of elders similarly directed elders to admonish individuals who committed child sexual abuse in the past to never be alone with children, and not to hug or be overly familiar with children. (7 RT 927-928; 8 AA 2006-2007 (Pl. Exh. 29, Def. Exh. 44).) Additionally, Watchtower's March 14, 1997 letter to all bodies of elders directed elders regarding what to do when an individual who has committed child sexual abuse in the past moves to a new congregation. Specifically, it required elders in the former congregation to inform the elders in the new congregation about the individual's history of child sexual abuse. (7 RT 929-930; 8 AA 1994-1996 (Pl. Exh. 12, Def. Exh. 50).) That letter also confirmed Watchtower's long-standing policy that a known child molester does not qualify to be appointed to a position of responsibility in any congregation. (7 RT 929; 8 AA 1994.) All of Watchtower's publications and letters to bodies of elders on the subject of child sexual abuse comprise Watchtower's policy on that subject. (4 RT 273; 7 RT 922-923, 929, 931.)

B. Court Proceedings.

Plaintiff filed a First Amended Complaint for Damages, dated May 3, 2012, against Watchtower and the North Fremont Congregation (collectively "Appellants") asserting claims including, but not limited to, negligence regarding child abuse allegedly committed against her by Kendrick. (2 AA 501-508.) Plaintiffs claims against Appellants proceeded on that operative pleading.

1. Trial.

During his opening statement and closing argument, the Plaintiff's attorney portrayed Watchtower's July 1, 1989 letter to all bodies of elders as a nefarious "policy of secrecy" that allowed child molesters to hide who they were from congregation parents so that Watchtower could avoid lawsuits. (3 RT 88-89, 98; 11 RT 1231-1233.) Further, Plaintiff and her attorney openly admitted before and during trial that their purpose of bringing Plaintiff's claims was to "effect a change" in Watchtower's national child abuse policy. (11 RT 1233-1234, 1239-1240.) That purpose was manifested in various ways, including:

- Plaintiff's Mandatory Settlement Conference Statement openly admitted that until Jehovah's Witnesses' alleged "policy of secrecy" regarding the identity of known child molesters in local congregations changes, "the case is not subject to settlement." (2 AA 312.)

- Plaintiff's motion for leave to amend her complaint to include facts supporting a claim for punitive damages states that "[a]ll of the disputed conduct involved following the policies of, and instructions of [Watchtower]," and that "[Watchtower's] implementation and maintenance of the secrecy policy epitomizes despicable conduct carried on with a willful and conscious disregard of the rights or safety of children." (1 AA 49-50.)

- At trial Plaintiff testified that she told the elders she wanted to change the alleged policy of secrecy, and that she would not have brought this lawsuit had they agreed to change that alleged policy. (6 RT 764-765.)

- During closing arguments, Plaintiff's attorney argued that punitive damages were necessary to effect a change in Watchtower's alleged policy of secrecy. (9 RT 1090-1091.)

Allen Shuster, an elder and assistant overseer of the Service Department in New York, testified that the July 1, 1989 letter was sent to all bodies of elders in the United States, and covered many issues, including confidentiality and child abuse. (7 RT 923.) He confirmed that the letter informed elders that many states have child abuse reporting laws and they should therefore call Watchtower's Legal Department immediately when they receive reports of child abuse. It also stressed that "[v]ictims of such abuse need to be protected from further danger." (7 RT 924; 8 AA 1975.) On the subject of confidentiality, that letter reminded elders that congregation members have an expectation of privacy and that it is important for elders to obey the Bible's mandate regarding confidentiality. (7 RT 906, 913; 937-938.) As North Fremont elders Clarke and Lamerdin testified, Watchtower's policy that requires elders to keep spiritual communications with congregation members confidential is long-standing and based on Scripture. (4 RT 278-279, 284, 289, 422-

423.) Commenting on why elders do not announce even reports of child abuse received in confidence, elder Clarke testified: "Why would anyone come to us with their problems if they knew that after they came to us we were going to announce it?" (3 RT 230.)

Watchtower's trial expert, Monica Applewhite, Ph.D., testified that the wording of Watchtower's policy on confidentiality closely mirrored the concerns expressed by other religious organizations and reflected in the codes of ethics for the National Association of Social Workers, the American Counseling Association, and Child Welfare League of America. (7 RT 881-884.) On the other hand, Plaintiff's expert, Anna Salter, Ph.D., misled the jury by testifying that in 1993 – the year the North Fremont elders learned that Kendrick sexually abused his stepdaughter, Andrea – clergy in California were legally obligated to report child abuse to the authorities, and that California's 1997 amendments to its child abuse reporting law simply "clarified" that previously existing reporting obligation. (6 RT 693-694, 707.) As explained above, however, church clergy and elders were not "mandatory reporters" in California until 1997.

Moreover, during closing argument, Plaintiff's attorney argued that in 1993, the North Fremont Congregation elders should have announced to the congregation that Kendrick was removed as a ministerial servant because he sexually abused a child. (9 RT 1085-1086.) In doing so, Plaintiff's attorney also misled the jury about Jehovah's Witnesses beliefs and practices on confidentiality. He argued that Kendrick's confession to the elders was not really a confession because he allegedly lied and it was not like a confession to a Catholic priest in a booth. (9 RT 1192.) The trial court further allowed Plaintiff's counsel to argue that Kendrick's confession did not have "the privilege attached to it," was not really confidential, and that "confidential" in this case was "an excuse to keep secret child sex abuse." (9 RT 1192-1193.)

2. Jury Instructions.

On June 11, 2012, the trial court made its final rulings on the instructions to be provided to the jury, including, over Watchtower's objections, instructions related to Watchtower's "duty to protect," allocation of fault, privilege, and child abuse reporting. (9 RT 1010-1016, 1021-1024, 1034-1035, 1040-1041; 5 AA 1239.) In doing so, the court denied Watchtower's requests to instruct the jury on several critical points:

- That Appellants had no duty to warn congregation members of Kendrick's abuse of Andrea (8 RT 974-975; 9 RT 1041; 5 AA 1239), and
- That ministers were not mandatory reporters in California in 1993. (8 RT 975-979, 991; 9 RT 1021-1023.)

The trial court also denied Watchtower's request to add the North Fremont Police, CPS, the District Attorney, and Plaintiff's parents to the special jury verdict for purposes of allocation of fault. (8 RT 961-967; 9 RT 1012-1014, 1033-1035.)

Over Watchtower's objection, the trial court further ruled that based on Juarez v. Boy Scouts of America, Inc. (2000) 81 Cal.App.4th 377 and Rowland v. Christian (1968) 69 Cal.2d 108, Watchtower had a "special relationship" with Plaintiff (8 RT 981-985; 9 RT 1032-1033) which gave rise to "a duty to take reasonable protective measures to protect Candace Conti from the risk of sexual abuse by . . . Kendrick." (8 RT 979-980; 9 RT 1011-1012, 1054.)

The trial court also ruled, over Watchtower's objection, that it would instruct the jury that in determining whether Watchtower took reasonable protective measures, it "may consider the following: (1) The presence or absence of any warning (8 RT 987-988; 9 RT 1054); (2) Whether or not any educational programs were made available to plaintiff, her parents, or to other Jehovah's Witnesses from the Fremont Congregation . . . for the purpose of sexual abuse education and prevention (9 RT 1054); and (3) Such other facts and circumstances contained in the evidentiary record here as to the presence or absence of protective measures." (9 RT 1054-1055; 5 AA 1239.)

Over Watchtower's objection, the trial court further instructed the jury that the issues of privileged communications and mandatory child abuse reporting were issues for the court to determine, not the jury. (8 RT 988-990; 9 RT 1016, 1019, 1021-1023, 1057-1058; 5 AA 1246.) Watchtower objected to the court's privileged communications instruction on grounds that it was not needed, it was incomplete, and it would confuse and mislead the jury respecting the reasonableness of Watchtower's claim of confidentiality based on church doctrine and policy regarding the reasons for not warning congregation members about Kendrick's prior abuse of his stepdaughter. (9 RT 1016-1020.) Watchtower similarly objected to the court's mandatory child abuse reporting instruction on the ground that it would confuse and mislead the jury into believing that perhaps the North Fremont Congregation did have a legal duty to report Kendrick's abuse of Andrea to the authorities in 1993, as Dr. Salter had testified, even though California had no such reporting duty for clergy in 1993. (9 RT 1021-1022, 1096-1097.)

3. Verdict and Post-Verdict Proceedings.

On June 13, 2012, an Alameda County Superior Court jury returned a compensatory damages verdict in favor of Plaintiff and against Appellants and Kendrick for $7.0 million in general and special damages, finding Kendrick 60% at fault, Watchtower 27% at fault, and North Fremont Congregation 13% at fault, and further finding that Watchtower alone acted with malice. (11 RT 1214-1215; 5 AA 1285-1286.) The next day, the jury further awarded Plaintiff $21,000,001 in punitive damages exclusively against Watchtower. (12 RT 1242.)

On July 17, 2012, Appellants jointly moved for judgment notwithstanding the verdict ("JNOV") and a new trial. (5 AA 1352-1387.) After a hearing on August 13, 2012 (13 RT 1251-1280), the trial court entered its post-trial orders on August 24, 2012, denying Watchtower's JNOV motion and conditionally granting a new trial on the punitive damages awarded against Watchtower unless the Plaintiff accepted judgment in her favor on punitive damages claim in the amount of $8,610,000. (7 AA 1936-1940.) Subsequently, the Plaintiff accepted the reduced punitive damage amount, and the court entered an Amended Judgment on September 17, 2012, in the total gross sum of $11,488,000 against Watchtower and the local congregation. (7 AA 1941-1942.)

III.

APPEALABILITY AND STANDARDS OF REVIEW

Watchtower's appeal from the Judgment and Amended Judgment entered by the trial court was properly taken under Code of Civil Procedure section 904.1, subd. (a)(1). Similarly, its appeal of the trial court's denial of Watchtower's JNOV motion was also properly taken pursuant to Code of Civil Procedure section 904.1, subd. (a)(4).

Additionally, to assist the Court in reviewing those challenges, Watchtower discusses the applicable standards of review at the beginning of each sub-section of its brief that follows.

IV.

DISCUSSION

A. As Watchtower Did Not Have a Special Relationship with the Plaintiff, It Did Not Have a Duty to Protect Plaintiff from Sexual Abuse by Kendrick, Nor to Warn the Plaintiff or Her Parents About Kendrick's Alleged Past Sexual Abuse of His Stepdaughter.

1. Standard of Review: De Novo.

In order to establish negligence, Plaintiff must demonstrate a duty on the part of the defendant, breach of that duty, causation and damages. (Catsouras v. Department of California Highway Patrol (2010) 181 Cal.App.4th 856, 876.) At issue here is the question of duty, which "is a question of law for the court, to be reviewed de novo on appeal." (Cabral v. Ralphs Grocery Co. (2011) 51 Cal.4th 764, 770-771; see also Owens v. Kings Supermarket (1988) 198 Cal.App.3d 379, 385 ["The issue whether a duty exists is a question of law to be determined by the court, and is reviewable de novo"].)

2. Application to This Case.

The trial court erroneously determined, as matter of law, that there is a special relationship between a national religious organization, Watchtower, and the child of a local congregation member. That improper determination prompted the trial court to instruct the jury that Watchtower had a duty to protect a congregation member's child, the Plaintiff, from sexual abuse by another congregation member, Kendrick. Based upon the trial court's unprecedented duty-to-protect instruction, the jury found Watchtower liable for not protecting Plaintiff from sexual abuse by a rank-and-file congregation member.

Notably, no reported California case has imposed a similar duty upon a religious organization to protect the child of a congregation member from the sexual abuse committed by another congregation member. Instead, California courts have consistently held that no special relationship exists between a religious organization and a congregation member. Because the trial court disregarded that authority, its Judgment and Amended Judgment against Watchtower should be reversed by this Court.

a. Absent a Special Relationship, Watchtower Cannot Be Liable for the Sexual Abuse of a Local Congregation Member's Child Committed by Another Congregation Member.

"[O]ne is ordinarily not liable for the actions of another and is under no duty to protect another from harm, in the absence of a special relationship of custody or control." (Nally v. Grace Community Church (1988) 47 Cal.3d 278, 293.) The Supreme Court has traditionally and faithfully followed this common law "no duty to protect" rule. As it explained in Tarasoff v. Regents of University of California (1976) 17 Cal.3d 425, 435, "when the avoidance of foreseeable harm requires a defendant to control the conduct of another person, or to warn of such conduct, the common law has traditionally imposed liability only if the defendant bears some special relationship to the dangerous person or the potential victim."

Recent California Supreme Court decisions have only affirmed that well-established rule. (See, e.g., Delgado v. Trax Bar and Grill (2005) 36 Cal.4th 224, 235 ["[A]s a general matter, there is no duty to act to protect others from the conduct of third parties"]; Morris v. De La Torre (2005) 36 Cal.4th 260, 269 [same]; Zelig v. County of Los Angeles (2002) 27 Cal.4th 1112, 1129, quoting Davidson v. City of Westminster (1982) 32 Cal.3d 197, 203 ["'As a general rule, one owes no duty to control the conduct of another, nor to warn those endangered by such conduct'"].)

The Court of Appeals has similarly applied the "no duty to protect" rule to child sexual abuse cases. For example, in Roman Catholic Bishop v. Superior Court (1996) 42 Cal.App.4th 1556, a 15-year-old girl brought a negligence action against a church because of sexual abuse by a parish priest. The Fourth District confirmed in that case:

> A person is ordinarily not liable for the actions of another and is under no duty to protect another from harm, in the absence of a special relationship of custody or control. Where, as here, a "complaint alleges injuries resulting from the criminal acts of third persons . . . 'the common law, reluctant to impose liability for nonfeasance, generally does not impose a duty upon a defendant to control the conduct of another, or to warn of such conduct, unless the defendant stands in some special relationship either to the person whose conduct needs to be controlled, or to the foreseeable victim of such conduct.'" (Roman Catholic Bishop, supra, 42 Cal.App.4th at 1564 [citations omitted; emph. in orig.].)

Similarly, in Eric J. v. Betty M. (1999) 76 Cal.App.4th 715, a minor was molested by his mother's boyfriend on premises owned by the boyfriend's family members. No one in the family warned the minor's mother about her boyfriend's prior convictions for child molestation. Writing for the court, Presiding Justice Sills affirmed that "[a]bsent a 'special relationship,' one cannot be held liable for mere nonfeasance, such as not protecting another from a criminal attack by a third party." (Eric J., supra, 76 Cal.App.4th at 727.)

As our High Court explained in Tarasoff, "[t]his rule derives from the common law's distinction between malfeasance and nonfeasance, and its reluctance to impose liability for the latter." (Tarasoff, supra, 17 Cal.3d at 435, fn. 5.) "Misfeasance exists when the defendant is responsible for making the plaintiff's position worse, i.e., defendant has created a risk. Conversely, nonfeasance is found when the defendant has failed to aid plaintiff through beneficial intervention." (Weirum v. RKO General, Inc. (1975) 15 Cal.3d 40, 49.) In Adams v. City of Fremont (1998) 68 Cal.App.4th 243, Justice Kline similarly explained why courts are reluctant to impose liability for nonfeasance, quoting Professor Francis S. Bohlen's classic 1908 essay on the duty to aid others:

> "In the case of active misfeasance the victim is positively worse off as a result the wrongful act. In cases of passive inaction plaintiff is in reality no worse off at all. His situation is unchanged; he is merely deprived of a protection which, had it been afforded him, would have benefited him. In the one case the defendant, by interfering with plaintiff or his affairs, has brought a new harm upon him, and created a > minus quantity, a positive loss. In the other, by failing to interfere in the plaintiff's affairs, the defendant has left him just as he was before; no better off, it is true, but still in no worse position; he has failed to benefit him, but he has not caused him any new injury nor created any new injurious situation. There is here a loss only in the sense of an absence of a plus quantity. It is this latter difference which in fact lies at the root of the marked difference in liability at common law for the consequences of misfeasance and non-feasance." (Adams, supra, 68 Cal.App.4th at 304 [dis. opn. of Kline, P. J.], quoting The Moral Duty to Aid Others as a Basis of Tort Liability (1908) 56 U. Pa. L.Rev. 217, 220-221.)

Similarly, in Garcia v. Superior Court (1990) 50 Cal.3d 728, the Supreme Court previously explained that the existence of a special relationship is an essential "prerequisite" in a nonfeasance case. There, although the Supreme Court found misfeasance (affirmative misrepresentations), it explained that in the case of a nonfeasance claim, "[a] special relationship is a prerequisite for liability based on a defendant's failure to act." (Id. at 734 [emph. in orig.].)

In the present case, the trial court did not instruct the jury that it must find Watchtower liable for misfeasance. Indeed, doing so would have been contrary to the entire record, since there is no evidence that Watchtower interfered in Plaintiff's affairs to bring a new harm to her. Rather, the trial court instructed the jury that it could find Watchtower liable for nonfeasance, a failure to protect or to warn. In so doing, the trial court misapplied California's long-standing "no duty to protect" law, which necessarily required the existence of a special relationship between Watchtower and the Plaintiff, or between Watchtower and Kendrick, in order to find liability for its alleged failure to act. But California does not recognize a special relationship between a national religious organization and local congregation members (or their children). For example, in Roman Catholic Bishop, supra, 42 Cal.App.4th 1556, no special relationship was found to exist between a parish priest and his 15-year-old parishioner, who was his victim. To that end, the Roman Catholic Bishop court reasoned:

> [T]here is no special relationship here creating a heightened duty of care based on a priest/parishioner relationship. In the context of a claim for negligent counseling, our Supreme Court explained in Nally v. Grace Community Church, supra, 47 Cal.3d 278, 298, that the Legislature has exempted clergy from licensing requirements applicable to other counselors. That exemption is in recognition "that access to the clergy for counseling should be free from state imposed counseling standards, and that 'the secular state is not equipped to ascertain the competence of counseling when performed by those affiliated with religious organizations.' [Citation.]" (Id. at 1568.)

Similarly, in Richelle L. v. Roman Catholic Archbishop (2003) 106 Cal.App.4th 257, this Court held that there was no special relationship between the church member and the priest or Archdiocese. There, an adult church member filed a tort action against a church priest and the Archdiocese because the priest improperly exploited a confidential counseling relationship to initiate a sexual relationship with her. Relying on Nally, supra, this Court in Richelle L. rejected the church member's argument that because a special relationship had been found in cases involving physicians and attorneys, she similarly stood in a special relationship with the priest.

As Presiding Justice Kline explained: "California cases involving physicians and attorneys [citations] are inapposite, because the malpractice claims that may be made against physicians, psychotherapists, and attorneys cannot be made against members of the clergy. There is no such thing in the law as clerical malpractice." (Richelle L., supra, 106 Cal.App.4th at 269.)

Similarly, with respect to the Archdiocese, this Court in Richelle L. further reasoned:

> Appellant does not attempt to hold respondent Archdiocese vicariously liable under the theory of respondeat superior, but directly liable for breach of a fiduciary duty and for negligence in hiring and supervision. In order to prevail against the Archdiocese, however, appellant must show, among other things, that she suffered an injury the law recognizes. For the reasons we have explained, appellant cannot make such a showing; accordingly, there is no need to inquire whether the Archdiocese can be subjected to any duty. (Id. at 282-283.)

Since a local priest does not stand in a special relationship with a parishioner, Richelle L. implicitly also ruled that the Archdiocese had no special relationship to a church member for the same reasons. (Ibid.)

Notably, the perpetrators in Roman Catholic Bishop and Richelle L. were both priests, in positions of church leadership. Kendrick, the perpetrator in this case, was simply a rank-and-file congregation member when he sexually abused Plaintiff. (3 RT 163, 166, 241; 4 RT 356; 5 RT 484; 6 RT 711; 7 RT 872-873, 880; 9 RT 1054.) He held no position of leadership or authority within the Freemont Congregation when he sexually abused the Plaintiff. Thus, the holdings of Roman Catholic Bishop and Richelle L. – that no special relationship exists between a church member and her priest – makes it eminently clear that there can be no special relationship between Watchtower (the national religious organization of Jehovah's Witnesses) and Plaintiff, who was the child of another local rank-and-file congregation member. In short, the trial court clearly erred when it incorrectly determined, as a matter of law, that a special relationship existed between Watchtower and Plaintiff.

b. The Trial Court's Misplaced Reliance on Juarez v. Boy Scouts of America Requires Reversal.

In finding a special relationship and imposing a duty on Watchtower, the trial court relied primarily on this Court's prior decision in Juarez v. Boy Scouts of America, Inc., supra, 81 Cal.App.4th 377. But the facts of Juarez are unique, and differ so fundamentally from the facts of this case that such reliance cannot be justified. Specifically, Juarez involved a perpetrator who was a scoutmaster, a person in a position of leadership or authority, into whose care, custody, and control a "youth organization" had placed the children for an overnight campout. (Id. at 385-386, 397, 404, 411.) Moreover, in Juarez, the victim "was repeatedly molested by his scoutmaster . . . and that numerous incidents took place during officially sanctioned scouting events, such as overnight campouts." (Id. at 397.)

In stark contrast, Kendrick was simply a congregation member, and was in no position of leadership or authority within the congregation at the time he abused the Plaintiff. (3 RT 163, 166, 241; 4 RT 356; 5RT 484; 6 RT 711; 7 RT 872-873, 880; 9 RT 1054.) Watchtower was not a "youth organization" and had not been entrusted with the care, custody, or control of the Plaintiff, and consequently, did not place the Plaintiff in the care, custody, or control of Kendrick for any overnight camping trip, or for any church sanctioned event. (3 RT 140, 185-187; 4 RT 277, 321, 421; 5 RT 495, 547; 6 RT 705; 7 RT 873-876, 878-880, 912.) Indeed, Plaintiff testified that Kendrick abused her at his home after Sunday congregation meetings (6 RT 742, 744), after field service activity (6 RT 728-731, 746-747), and on a train during a personal visit to Sacramento with Kendrick and her father. (6 RT 745-747.)

Given the fundamental factual differences between Juarez and this case, the trial court simply erred by relying on Juarez to find that there was a special relationship between Watchtower and Plaintiff. This is especially true where even in finding liability in Juarez, this Court cautioned against using its decision to impose duties of care upon other charitable organizations:

> We do not intend our decision to serve as a manifesto by which lower courts are to impose duties of care upon all forms of charitable organizations engaged in volunteer youth programs, requiring them to take steps to prevent or minimize the chance that group leaders will engage in intentional misconduct against the youths participating in their programs. (Juarez, supra, 81 Cal.App.4th at 409.)

To be sure, this Court in Juarez took great pains to emphasize how its finding of a special relationship and concomitant duty was limited to the specific facts of that case:

> [W]e wish to make special note that the reach of this opinion is only intended to extend as far as the record before us today. If we have not yet made it abundantly clear, deciding the question of duty mandates a case-by-case fact and policy analysis. (Id. at 409.)

And even in doing so, this Court showed understandable reluctance, but ultimately found a duty in light of the perpetrator's position of leadership within the Boy Scouts, the mission of that "youth organization" generally, and the relationship the victim had to the Scouts:

> [W]e are reluctant to rely on the special relationship doctrine per se as the analytical underpinning for our conclusion that a duty of care was owed by the Scouts to Juarez. However, we note that cases exploring this alternative theory of tort duty have found a special relationship, giving rise to a duty to protect children against a known risk that they might be sexually molested. One jurist has described the special relationship between the child participant and youth organization in terms particularly pertinent to this case: "The mission of youth organizations to educate children, the naïveté of children, and the insidious tactics employed by child molesters dictate that the law recognize a special relationship between youth organizations and the members such that the youth organizations are required to exercise reasonable care to protect their members from the foreseeable conduct of third persons." [Citation.] (Ibid.)

But the very facts which drove that imposition of a duty of care in Juarez are simply not present in this case: Watchtower is not a "youth organization," Kendrick was not in a position of authority or leadership, and the Plaintiff was not entrusted to either Watchtower's or Kendrick's custody and control. Thus, the trial court was simply putting the proverbial square peg in the wrong analytical hole when it relied on Juarez to impose upon Watchtower a seemingly boundless duty to protect congregation members' children – over whom it had no custody or control – from sexual abuse by another congregation member not in any position of leadership or authority, and who perpetrates his crimes off church property and unrelated to church activities. In so doing, the trial court clearly failed to heed this Court's explicit caution against extending its reasoning in Juarez well beyond its limited and unique facts. Instead, the trial court was bound to follow the reasoning of the Roman Catholic Bishop and Richelle L. decisions, and should have concluded that no special relationship existed between Watchtower and the Plaintiff. Its failure to do so compels this Court's reversal now.

c. The Trial Court's Imposition of a Duty Cannot Be Justifiably Based Upon Traditional Rowland Factors.

To the extent that the trial court also relied upon Rowland v. Christian, supra, 69 Cal.2d 108, to impose on Watchtower a broad duty to protect the Plaintiff from sexual abuse by Kendrick, it further erred. California Supreme Court cases decided after Rowland have uniformly confirmed that Rowland did not change the traditional common law "no duty to protect" rule. (See, e.g., Morris v. De La Torre (2005) 36 Cal.4th 260, 269; Delgado, supra, 36 Cal.4th at 235-236; Nally, supra, 47 Cal.3d at 293.) Indeed, Rowland did not change the long-standing common law rule in California that absent a special relationship, there is no duty to protect, warn, or aid another.

To that end, Presiding Justice Kline's dissenting opinion in Adams v. City of Fremont, supra, 68 Cal.App.4th 243 explains why Rowland is inapplicable when the "no duty to protect" rule applies:

> The imposition of tort liability on the basis of such a "special relationship," or because the duty was voluntarily assumed, has nothing to do with Rowland v. Christian (1968) 69 Cal.2d 108 [70 Cal.Rptr. 97, 443 P.2d 561, 32 A.L.R.3d 496], as the majority claims, because that case does not concern exceptions to a general rule of no duty. (See discussion, post, at p. 308 et seq.) [¶] . . . [¶] The chief reason I believe Rowland is irrelevant to the question of duty in this case, as I have said, is that the police, like everyone else, have no duty to rescue. The issue in this case is whether there is any applicable exception to a general no-duty rule, which is unrelated to the question presented in cases to which Rowland properly applies. (Id. at 292, 311 [emph. added] [dis. opn. of Kline, P. J.].)

Instead, the Rowland analysis is relevant only to define the scope of a duty which otherwise is found to exist. As recently as March 8, 2012, the California Supreme Court made the following instructive comment regarding the Rowland multi-element duty assessment: "We have previously used this analysis to decide the scope of duty arising from a special relationship. [Citation.]" (C.A. v. William S. Hart Union High School Dist. (2012) 53 Cal.4th 861, 877, fn. 8 [italics added].) Thus, if the case at hand involved facts to support a special relationship between Watchtower and the Plaintiff, then an exception to the "no duty to protect" rule would apply, and only then would the Rowland multi-element duty assessment be properly utilized to decide the scope of Watchtower's duty to protect. But, as discussed above, the facts of this case simply do not support a special relationship between Watchtower and the Plaintiff in the first place. Thus, the trial court's alternate reliance upon Rowland to create an exception to the "no duty to protect" rule was simply misplaced.

Nevertheless, assuming arguendo that the trial court properly considered the duty question in this nonfeasance case under the multi-element duty assessment outlined in Rowland, then Presiding Justice Sills' opinion in Eric J. v. Betty M., supra, 76 Cal.App.4th 715 (affirming that there is no duty to protect absent a special relationship) is further instructive:

> That weighing process, however, has already been done by courts over the centuries in formulating the 'no duty to aid' rule. We need only add that any result other than the one we reach today under the facts of this case would create intolerable conflicts of interest within families. (Id. at 729-730.)

Similarly, imposing a duty upon Watchtower – a national religious organization – to protect the child of one congregation member from sexual abuse by another congregation member would create even greater intolerable conflicts within a religious organization. To be sure, for all of the additional reasons articulated in North Freemont Congregation's Opening Brief (which Watchtower fully joins in here under Rule of Court 8.200, subd. (a)(5)), it would make Watchtower the virtual insurer for the acts of every one of Jehovah's Witnesses simply by virtue of their membership in that religious organization. Nothing in Rowland was meant to either impose or justify such wide-ranging liability.

In short, the sexual abuse of a young child is a despicable act. But the resulting heartbreak cannot be wiped away by assigning fault where it does not belong. Based upon established law and the compelling facts of this case, there was simply no legal basis for the trial court to find a special relationship between Watchtower and the Plaintiff, or for imposing upon Watchtower a duty to protect the Plaintiff from sexual abuse by Kendrick. Consequently, the trial court's Judgment and Amended Judgment against Watchtower must be reversed in full.

B. The Trial Court Improperly Excluded Other Parties from Sharing Any Responsibility for the Harm Claimed by the Plaintiff, and As a Consequence, Targeted Watchtower's Religious Beliefs and Practices on Confidentiality In a Way That Imperils Watchtower's First Amendment Rights Under the Free Exercise Clauses of the United States and California Constitutions.

1. Standard of Review: De Novo.

The construction and application of a statute by a trial court to a specific set of facts presents a pure issue of law subject to this Court's de novo standard of review. (Rothschild v. Tyco International (US), Inc. (2000) 83 Cal.App.4th 488, 493; see also Roslan v. Permea, Inc. (1993) 17 Cal.App.4th 110, 113 [finding that the trial court erred as a matter of law by not allowing the allocation of fault – as required by Civil Code section 1431, et seq. – as between potentially responsible, but unnamed parties].)

2. Application to This Case.

As this Court is well aware, in June 1986, the voters of California approved an initiative measure, the Fair Responsibility Act of 1986 (Civ. Code §§ 1431 to 1431.5) – popularly known as, and hereafter referred to as, "Proposition 51." Proposition 51 modified the traditional, common law "joint and several liability" doctrine, limiting an individual tortfeasor's liability for noneconomic damages to a proportion of such damages equal to the tortfeasor's own percentage of fault. (Evangelatos v. Superior Court (1988) 44 Cal.3d 1188, 1192.) Subsequently, in DaFonte v. Up-Right, Inc. (1992) 2 Cal.4th 593, our Supreme Court confirmed the rationale of Proposition 51 as follows:

> The express purpose of Proposition 51 was to eliminate the perceived unfairness of imposing all the damage on defendants who were found to share [only] a fraction of the fault. ([Civ. Code] § 1431.1, subd. (b).) In this context, the only reasonable construction of section 1431.2 is that a defendant[s]' liability for noneconomic damages cannot exceed his or her proportionate share of fault as compared with all fault responsible for the plaintiff's injuries, not merely that of defendant[s]' present in the lawsuit. (Id. at 603 [internal quotes omitted] [emph. in orig.].)

It is undisputed that by March 1994 members of the Fremont Police, CPS, and the District Attorney's office had been told that Kendrick had abused his minor stepdaughter. Yet none of those governmental entities, who are charged with protecting the public, including children, warned Plaintiff or her parents about Kendrick. Nevertheless, the trial court refused to allow the jury, either in the Special

Verdict form or in the instructions provided to the jury, to allocate any fault to those governmental entities for Plaintiff's later sexual abuse by Kendrick. Refusing to do so was clearly error. (See Roslan, supra, 17 Cal.App.4th at 113 [trial court erred by not including in the special verdict forms defendants who had settled before trial and by refusing to permit the trial defendant to present evidence of one settling defendant's culpability, requiring the matter be remanded so that the jury could apportion liability among the "universe of tortfeasors"].)

Indeed, a case similar to this one drives that point home. Bly-Magee v. Budget Rent-A-Car Corp. (1994) 24 Cal.App.4th 318 involved the issue of allocation of the alleged negligent conduct of not only the named defendants, but also of two public entities, the California Highway Patrol and the Los Angeles County Sheriffs Department. The Court of Appeal in Bly-Magee held it was appropriate for the trial court to include on the verdict form the phrase "other persons" so that the jury could "apportion damages among the defendants and the 'universe of tortfeasors.' [Citations.]" (Id. at 325.) The Bly-Magee court also discussed that counsel for the defendant Budget Rent-A-Car could have argued that the "other persons" to whom or to which the jury should allocate fault included the public entities of the California Highway Patrol and the Los Angeles County Sheriffs. (Id. at 326.)

Thus, at the very minimum, had the trial court in this case followed Bly-Magee's guidance, it should have instructed the jury about non-party liability and allowed Appellants' proffered use of a Special Verdict form that allowed the jury to allocate fault to the "other persons or entities" or "nonparties" referenced above. (Id. at 326.)

Including others in the verdict form was mandated by Proposition 51, which is intended in every case to shield a defendant from any share of noneconomic damages beyond that attributable to his or her own comparative fault, and instead to apportion such damages among the "universe" of tortfeasors. (Dafonte, supra, 2 Cal.4th at 602-603.) Moreover, the "Directions for Use" for CACI Verdict Form 402 (Negligence – Fault of Plaintiff and Others at Issue) states that it is for the jury to "specify the liability and causation of each nonparty actor." (See also CACI 406; Arena v. Owens-Corning Fiberglas Corp. (1998) 63 Cal.App.4th 1178, 1198-1199 [trial court erred in failing to consider Proposition 51 where multiple products caused plaintiff's injuries].)

Again, the testimony and evidence in this case was uniformly that the Fremont Police Department, CPS, and the District Attorney did not do those very same things that the Plaintiff alleges the elders from the North Fremont Congregation should have done, i.e., they did not inform the congregation or local community about Kendrick's July 1993 incident of inappropriately touching his minor stepdaughter. Those entities that Appellants requested to be added to the Special Verdict form are already recognized as owing a broad duty to protect the public. Thus, the jury should have been allowed to consider their respective breaches of those duties, and the role they may have played in causing the Plaintiff's damages.

Additionally, the Plaintiff's parents had a statutory duty to protect the Plaintiff from Kendrick's conduct, and there is ample and undisputed evidence that they also were informed by the Appellants about steps they could have taken to protect the Plaintiff from child abusers. (3 RT 238-239, 260; 5 RT 509-510; 6 RT 702-704; 7 RT 830, 839-841, 848-849, 876-878, 884-887, 918-919, 921-923.) The evidence of Kathleen Conti's drug and alcohol abuse and her emotional state do not relieve her from that parental duty. (4 RT 355-356, 364-365; 5 RT 478, 485-486, 488-489.) In any event, from those facts and evidence, the Appellants submit that the jury could have reasonably found that one or both of Plaintiff's parents was responsible to some degree for the very same damages the Plaintiff claims to have suffered as a result of the conduct of the Appellants. Thus, under well-settled California law, the jury should have been given the opportunity to allocate fault to those nonparties through jury instructions and the verdict form.

3. The Court's Targeting of Religiously Motivated Conduct.

In addition to ignoring the mandate of Proposition 51, by not allowing the jury to allocate fault to nonparties, the trial court also violated the Appellants' free exercise of religion protected by the First Amendment of the United States Constitution and its California counterpart. It is most certainly true that a church is not spared from complying with "a neutral, generally applicable law [which is] applied to religiously motivated action." (See Employment Dept. of Human Resources of Ore. v. Smith (1990) 494 U.S. 872, 881.) However, by holding that only the Appellants could potentially be held liable for a failure to inform, the trial court singled out the Appellants for special treatment and did not follow a standard that is generally applicable to all potential tortfeasors, both named and unnamed. Instead, it specifically excluded from the jury's consideration the comparative fault of government entities and other nonparties (including the Plaintiff's parents), thereby impermissibly targeting only "religious conduct for distinctive treatment." (Church of the Lukumi Babalu Aye, Inc. v. City of Hialeah (1993) 508 U.S. 520, 534.)

"The Free Exercise Clause 'protect[s] religious observers against unequal treatment,' . . . and inequality results when a legislature decides that the governmental interests it seeks to advance are worthy of being pursued only against conduct with a religious motivation." (Id. at 542-543 [citation omitted].) That holding has no less effect when a court targets the failure to inform based upon information gathered during a communication that Appellants' Bible-based belief required to be held confidential, but at the same time exempts government officials and other individuals from a similar duty to inform when they became aware of the identical information.

To be sure, the trial court's rulings and jury instructions on duty and allocation of fault clearly targeted and substantially burdened Appellants' religiously motivated decision not to violate their beliefs on confidentiality by revealing a confidence to congregation members. That the jury was allowed to allocate fault for failure to warn only to Appellants – the religious entities – and not to the governmental entities that knew of Kendrick's past sexual abuse, clearly demonstrates that those rulings and jury instructions were not neutral and generally applicable.

Protecting children from sexual abuse is certainly a compelling state interest. But where government restricts only conduct protected by the First Amendment and fails to enact feasible measures to restrict other conduct producing substantial harm or alleged harm of the same sort, the interest given in justification of the restriction is not compelling. It is established in our strict scrutiny jurisprudence that "a law cannot be regarded as protecting an interest 'of the highest order' . . . when it leaves appreciable damage to that supposedly vital interest unprohibited." (Babalu, supra, 508 U.S. at 546-547.)

The trial court's ruling imposed on Appellants a broad, virtually impossible duty to protect with a duty to warn. That duty was twofold. First, it essentially required Appellants to provide the children of all congregation members with 24-hours-per-day, seven-days-per-week protection from possible abuse by a rank-and-file congregation member, Kendrick. Second, it required Appellants to warn the congregation about Kendrick, when the elders did not even know whether he had been charged with, let alone convicted of, a crime. Yet disclosing information received in confidence from Kendrick, his wife, and stepdaughter would have violated Appellants' Bible-based religious beliefs, practices, and policies on confidentiality. (3 RT 222-223, 229-230, 243-244, 257; 4 RT 278-279, 284, 289, 422-423; 7 RT 906, 913; 937-938.) And even if it were possible for Appellants to warn, they would face the increased risk of lawsuits for breach of confidentiality, false light, invasion of privacy, and defamation.

Based upon the foregoing, the trial court's imposition upon Appellants of an unprecedented duty to protect with a duty to warn was an extraordinary burden on Appellants' religious beliefs, practices, and policies on confidentiality. It was not narrowly tailored and it was not the least restrictive means of achieving the state's interest. Revealingly, no law has been passed by the Legislature imposing upon religious organizations such a special duty to protect or warn, and the trial court similarly should not be allowed to impose that duty by judicial fiat.

In sum, the trial court violated Appellants' rights protected by the Free Exercise Clause of the First Amendment of the United States Constitution. Its rulings and jury instructions on duty and allocation of fault targeted religion, were underinclusive, were not neutral and generally applicable, were not narrowly tailored, and were not the least restrictive means to achieve the state's interest. As such, they cannot – and should not – be condoned by this Court.

The result is the same under the California Constitution, which states in relevant part: "Free exercise and enjoyment of religion without discrimination or preference are guaranteed." (Cal. Const., art. I, § 4.) When a law substantially burdens a religious belief or practice, California's free exercise clause also requires strict scrutiny review. (Catholic Charities of Sacramento, Inc. v. Superior Court (2004) 32 Cal.4th 527, 562.) Accordingly, for the same reasons discussed above, the Appellants' rights under the free exercise clause, Article I, section 4 of the California Constitution were similarly violated.

C. The Trial Court's Imposition Upon Watchtower of a Duty to Protect with a Duty to Warn Impermissibly Entangled the Jury in an Examination and Assessment of Watchtower's Religious Beliefs, Violating Fundamental Constitutional Principles.

1. Standard of Review: De Novo.

Whether Appellants' religious tenants should have been submitted as part of the jury instructions for negligence requires de novo review by this Court. (See Board of Administration v. Wilson (1997) 52 Cal.App.4th 1109, 1129.) This is especially true where those instructions impermissibly intrude upon constitutionally protected activities or interests. (Victor v. Nebraska (1994) 511 U.S. 1, 6 [reviewing court's task is to determine de novo whether there is a reasonable likelihood the jury applied the trial court's remarks or instructions in an unconstitutional manner].)

2. Application to This Case.

Both the United States and California Constitutions prohibit the making of any law respecting the establishment of religion. The Establishment Clause of the First Amendment states that "Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion." (U.S. Const., 1st amend.) Similarly, the California Constitution provides that "[t]he Legislature shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion." (Cal. Const., art. I, § 4.)

The California Supreme Court has recognized that significant Establishment Clause concerns arise when a court attempts to create a duty of care designed to govern religious practices and activities. For example, in Nally, supra, 47 Cal.3d 278, the High Court held that a duty should not be imposed on clergy when engaged in spiritual counseling, stating that "the secular state is not equipped to ascertain the competence of counseling when performed by those affiliated with religious organizations. [Citation.]" (Id. at 298.) To that end, the Nally court reasoned:

> Because of the differing theological views espoused by the myriad of religions in our state and practiced by church members, it would certainly be impractical, and quite possibly unconstitutional, to impose a duty of care on pastoral counselors. Such a duty would necessarily be intertwined with the religious philosophy of the particular denomination or ecclesiastical teachings of the religious entity. (Id. at 299.)

Thus, the California Supreme Court in Nally made clear that California courts must avoid becoming entangled in the religious beliefs and practices of clergy or religious organizations. Similarly the United States Supreme Court has long maintained that "civil courts exercise no jurisdiction" over disputes "which concern[] theological controversy, church discipline, ecclesiastical government, or the conformity of the members of the church to the standard of morals required of them . . . ." (Watson v. Jones (1871) 80 U.S. 679, 733.) To that end, the High Court has made abundantly clear that under the doctrine of "ecclesiastical abstention," it is beyond the purview of a secular court to evaluate matters concerning religious beliefs, practices, and internal government.

Despite those clear principles, the jury in this case was allowed to inquire into whether the Appellants properly adhered to their own religious tenets and beliefs in not warning the Plaintiff or other congregation members about Kendrick's prior sexual abuse of his stepdaughter. Thus, the trial court in this case impermissibly injected an examination of the beliefs, practices, and internal government of Jehovah's Witnesses. Maintaining the confidentiality of congregation members is a fundamental religious precept which Appellants believe is directly derived from Scripture. (3 RT 222-223, 230, 243-244, 257; 4 RT 278-279, 284, 289, 422-423; 7 RT 906, 913; 937-938.) But neither a court nor a jury may evaluate disputed evidence concerning adherence to the religious beliefs, practices, and internal government of Jehovah's Witnesses without becoming entangled in a religious controversy in violation of Appellants' First Amendment rights. (See Serbian Eastern Orthodox Diocese v. Milivojevich (1976) 426 U.S. 696, 709.)

In this case, the trial court instructed the jury that Appellants had a duty to take reasonable protective measures "to protect" Plaintiff from sexual abuse by Kendrick. (8 RT 979-980; 9 RT 1011-1012, 1054; 5 AA 1239.) It also specifically allowed the jury to consider the "presence or absence of any warning" when weighing whether Appellants breached this duty to protect Plaintiff. (8 RT 987-988;

9 RT 1054; 5 AA 1239.) Thus, by those instructions, the trial court invited and encouraged the jury to determine whether Appellants' alleged failure to warn – which was motivated by Appellants' practice of their religious beliefs concerning the confidentiality of their congregation members – was reasonable or breached that duty. By giving those instructions, the trial court impermissibly required the jury to consider and evaluate many religious-oriented factors: (1) the Appellants' reasons for not warning; (2) the Appellants' religious beliefs, practices, and policies on confidentiality; and (3) the validity of the Scriptural basis for such religious beliefs and practices on confidentiality. It then further required the jury to evaluate and determine, in view of Appellants' religious beliefs, practices, and policies on confidentiality and the Scriptural basis therefore, whether Appellants acted reasonably or breached the court-imposed duty to protect the Plaintiff from sexual abuse by Kendrick.

But what standard of care was the jury to use in deciding whether the Appellants' conduct was reasonable? A Catholic standard? A Methodist standard? A Jewish standard? An Atheist standard? Such an inquiry and evaluation by the jury clearly fostered the very entanglement with religion the ecclesiastic abstention doctrine was meant to avoid, and required the jury to "necessarily be intertwined with the religious philosophy of the particular denomination or ecclesiastical teachings of the religious entity" (Nally, 47 Cal.3d at 299) in violation of Appellants' rights under the Establishment Clauses of the United States and California Constitutions. This Court should conclude, as a matter of law, that the trial court's evaluation and examination of Appellants' religious tenets was an inquest that the trial court should have scrupulously avoided and that its failure to do so requires reversal of the trial court's judgment.

D. The Trial Court's Imposition Upon Watchtower of a Duty to Protect with a Duty to Warn Improperly Required Watchtower to Label a Person As a Sex Offender Even Though That Person Had Not Been Convicted of a Crime, in Violation of Constitutional Rights to Privacy, Liberty, and Due Process.

1. Standard of Review: De Novo.

As discussed above, whether a constitutional violation results from government action presents a question of law for this Court's de novo standard of review. (See Board of Administration, supra, 52 Cal.App.4th at 1127-1129.)

2. Application to This Case.

The trial court imposed a duty upon Appellants to warn members of the congregation that Kendrick had molested a minor once the North Fremont Congregation elders became aware of that molestation, even though at that time Kendrick had neither been charged or convicted of any crime arising from that conduct. That duty was imposed upon Appellants as a religious organization, yet even law enforcement authorities have not been authorized by the Legislature to disclose information about a person accused of child molestation in the absence of a criminal conviction.

The national standards for sex offender registration and notification were comprehensively revised when Congress enacted Title I of the Adam Walsh Child Protection and Safety Act of 2006 and the Sex Offender Registration and Notification Act (SORNA). (42 U.S.C. § 16901, et seq.) By definition, the federal government clearly limits the public dissemination of information about a sex offender to "an individual who was convicted of a sex offense." (42 U.S.C. § 16911, subd. (1).) Likewise, California's "Megan's Law" properly requires the systematic dissemination of information only upon conviction of specific Penal Code section offenses, and only then, after the defendant has had the procedural benefit of notice and an opportunity to be heard. (Pen. Code §§ 290, et seq.; see In re Rodden (2010) 186 Cal.App.4th 24, citing People v. Cajina (2005) 127 Cal.App.4th 929, 933.) To be sure, even a confession to the police does not authorize them to disseminate information regarding a child molester; a conviction is required. (Pen. Code § 290.46, subd. (a)(2).) Similarly, the California Legislature has delegated the duty of disseminating information and warnings to the public about sex offenders to law enforcement agencies, and not to religious organizations. (Pen. Code § 290.46, subd. (a)(1).)

North Fremont Congregation elders Abrahamson and Clark testified that in November 1993, congregation member Kendrick told them during religious counseling that he touched his 15-year-old stepdaughter's breast in about July 1993. (3 RT 138-139, 151-160, 177, 180-181, 183, 207, 210-211, 214-217, 219-222, 239-

240, 250-251; 4 RT 302; 7 RT 879-880.) However, at that time, Kendrick had not been convicted of any crime, as the police did not investigate Kendrick's sexual abuse of his stepdaughter until March of 1994. (4 RT 303, 307; 6 RT 646-649, 654-656; 8 AA 1983-1991.) Moreover, the congregation elders' undisputed testimony was that they were not told of Kendrick's conviction until 1998, which was at least two years after Kendrick had already abused the Plaintiff. (3 RT 193, 251; 4 RT 307-308, 410; 6 RT 742, 744.)

Thus, the trial court imposed a legal duty to warn, based upon the congregation elders' receipt of confidential information from Kendrick and his family about the incident with his stepdaughter, which clearly exceeded state warning or notification standards. Indeed, the California Legislature never contemplated imposing a duty on religious organizations that would violate the fundamental constitutional rights of citizens to privacy, liberty, and due process, and deprive citizens of procedural safeguards inherent in the judicial or adjudicatory process.

Moreover, a public notification scheme requiring religious organizations to label their congregants as child sex offenders based upon anything less than a criminal conviction would result in some citizens being stigmatized based on false or erroneous allegations of child sexual abuse. Such a notification scheme would violate citizens' fundamental constitutional liberty and due process protections, and would be directly contrary to the law. (See Humphries v. County of Los Angeles (2009) 554 F.3d 1170, 1186 ["being labeled a child abuser . . . is 'unquestionably stigmatizing' [and] there is [n]o doubt . . . that being falsely named as a suspected child abuser . . . is defamatory"]; Valmonte v. Bane (2nd Cir. 1994) 18 F.3d 992, 1000 [finding a protectable liberty interest where listing on an abuse registry potentially damages reputation by branding as a child abuser]; Bohn v. Dakota County (8th Cir. 1985) 772 F.2d 1433, 1436, fn. 4 [reputation of parents were protectable liberty interests when found by county to be child abusers, exposing them to public opprobrium]; Doe v. Poritz (N.J. 1995) 662 A.2d 367, 419 [holding that the public notice provisions of New Jersey's Megan's Law triggered procedural due process protection under both the federal and state constitutions].)

Here, it was the trial court, rather than the Legislature, that imposed upon Appellants a duty to warn based upon something less than a criminal conviction. However, the creation of such duty is not validated because California's judiciary, rather than its Legislature, creates it. Whether created by the Legislature or the judiciary, the constitutional infirmity is identical. (See BMW of North America, Inc. v. Gore (1996) 517 U.S. 559, 572 [equating "legislatively authorized fines" with "judicially imposed . . . damages"].)

In short, California's judiciary cannot require religious organizations (like Appellants) to do that which the State itself is constitutionally prevented from requiring. (See Lebron v. National R.R. Passenger Corp. (1995) 513 U.S. 374 [holding that it was impermissible for government to create a private corporation to evade its constitutional duty to abide by the First Amendment]; West v. Atkins (1988) 487 U.S. 42 [concluding that North Carolina could not contract with private physicians to attempt to avoid its constitutional duty to provide adequate medical treatment to prison inmates].) Yet by imposing upon Appellants a duty to warn congregation members that another congregation member had committed child sexual abuse in the past, even though the accused had not been convicted of any related crime, the trial court improperly exceeded legislative protocols that protect the fundamental constitutional rights of citizens to privacy, liberty, and due process protected by the United States and California Constitutions. Such a duty is not only impermissibly broad, it is also constitutionally infirm.

E. The Trial Court Improperly Allowed Plaintiff to Proceed Against Watchtower with a Claim for Punitive Damages Despite the Lack of Substantial Evidence to Support a Predicate Finding of Malice.

1. Standard of Review: Substantial Evidence.

Whether the Plaintiff proved the requisite malice by clear and convincing evidence to support an award of punitive damages is governed by the substantial evidence test. (Egan v. Mutual of Omaha Ins. Co. (1979) 24 Cal.3d 809, 821.) Yet while that resolution of fact is within the sole province of the trial court, the question of whether "substantial evidence" supports the judgment is one of law within the province of the appellate court. (Smith v. Selma Community Hospital (2008) 164 Cal.App.4th 1478, 1515-1516.) It is for this reason that in determining whether a judgment is supported by substantial evidence, reviewing courts may not defer to the trial court's decision entirely. "[I]f the word 'substantial' means anything at all, it clearly implies that such evidence must be of ponderable legal significance. Obviously the word cannot be deemed synonymous with 'any' evidence. It must be reasonable in nature, credible, and of solid value; it must actually be 'substantial' proof of the essentials which the law requires in a particular case." (DiMartino v. City of Orinda (2000) 80 Cal.App.4th 329, 336 [internal citations omitted].) Thus, the focus is on the quality, not the quantity of the evidence. Very little solid evidence may be "substantial," while a lot of extremely weak evidence might be "insubstantial." (Toyota Motor Sales U.S.A., Inc. v. Superior Court (1990) 220 Cal.App.3d 864, 871-872.)

Inferences may constitute substantial evidence, but they must be the product of logic and reason. Speculation or conjecture alone is not substantial evidence. (Louis & Diederich, Inc. v. Cambridge European Imports, Inc. (1987) 189 Cal.App.3d 1574, 1584-1585.) In short, substantial evidence is not merely an appellate incantation designed to conjure up an affirmance. To the contrary, it is essential to the integrity of the judicial process that a judgment be supported by evidence that is at least substantial. An appellate court need not blindly seize any evidence in order to affirm the judgment. Indeed, the Court of Appeal was not created merely to echo the determinations of the trial court. (Roddenberry v. Roddenberry (1996) 44 Cal.App.4th 634, 652.)

2. Application to This Case.

The Plaintiff's claim for punitive damages was based exclusively on her mischaracterization of Watchtower's July 1, 1989 letter to all bodies of elders, which Plaintiff's counsel repeatedly styled as a "policy of secrecy" with respect to child abuse. (3 RT 88-89, 98; 6 RT 764; 8 RT 956; 9 RT 1090-1091; 12 RT 1231-1234, 1239-1240.) The Plaintiff offered no other evidence to support her assertion of malice. Yet even affording that evidence the maximum weight to which it could be entitled, it is woefully insufficient to demonstrate malice, let alone by the requisite "clear and convincing" standard. (See College Hospital, Inc. v. Superior Court (1994) 8 Cal.4th 704, 725 [malice sufficient to sustain an award of punitive damages requires "despicable conduct" in addition to "willful and conscious disregard" of the plaintiff's interests]; Kendall Yacht Corp. v. United California Bank (1975) 50 Cal.App.3d 949, 958 [evil motive is a central element of malice]; see also, Civ. Code § 3294, subd. (a).)

Specifically, no witness testified that the July 1, 1989 letter was a "policy of secrecy." Watchtower's representative, Service Department elder Allen Shuster (7 RT 906), testified that this letter addressed "a variety of subjects . . . such as search warrants and subpoenas, crimes, criminal investigations, when serv[ants] and publishers move, lawsuits, the issue of confidentiality and also child abuse." (7 RT 923.) To enhance the protection of its worshippers' confidential communications, Watchtower wanted to emphasize to elders that they must follow the Bible's mandate regarding confidentiality. (4 RT 278-279, 283-284; 7 RT 906, 913, 937-938.) Consequently, the primary thrust of the July 1, 1989 letter was to remind elders of Scriptural direction concerning confidential communications. (3 RT 226, 229-230; 4 RT 278-279, 284, 289, 422-423; 5 RT 535.) But that letter served another purpose, as it was also intended to help the elders, who are untrained in secular law, to protect victims of child abuse and comply with all applicable legal obligations they might encounter in the performance of their spiritual and congregation duties. (3 RT 255-256; 4 RT 424; 7 RT 924.) In pertinent part, that letter stated:

> Many states have child abuse reporting laws. When elders receive reports of physical or sexual abuse of a child, they should contact the Society's Legal Department immediately. Victims of such abuse need to be protected from further danger. (8 AA 1975 [emph. added].)

Notably, the content of that letter also harmonizes with trial testimony that Watchtower was concerned about the worldwide problem of child abuse and instructed elders to follow the law and to protect victims. And the elders involved in this case only confirmed that they followed the letter's instruction by calling the Watchtower Legal Department for legal advice regarding reporting obligations. (3 RT 154, 169, 241-242, 246, 255; 7 RT 880, 924.) In addition, those same elders testified that, pursuant to that policy, they informed victims and their parents that they had the absolute right to report an allegation of abuse to the authorities if they so desired. (3 RT 239-242, 250-251; 4 RT 293, 297, 302-303; 6 RT 707; 7 RT 880, 937.) Such counsel also comported with the October 8, 1993 issue of Awake!, published by Watchtower, which similarly informed parents that some experts recommend reporting child abuse to the authorities to protect children. (3 RT 238, 242; 7 RT 922-923; 8 AA 2041.)

Watchtower's representative confirmed that Watchtower abhors child sexual abuse because it is an "egregious sin." (7 RT 915, 916.) Watchtower's expert, Monica Applewhite, Ph.D., testified that for an organization like Jehovah's Witnesses that does not separate children from their parents for religious instruction or other activities, the best method of protecting children is to give parents information about the prevalence of sexual abuse, the warning signs of abuse, the need for parents to protect their children, and how to meet that need. (7 RT 876-877.) Dr. Applewhite further opined that Jehovah's Witnesses have done an exceptional job in this regard from the 1970's through the 1990's. (7 RT 876-877, 896, 898.) In addition, Dr. Applewhite testified that, during the mid-1990's, Jehovah's Witnesses well exceeded the standard of care for educating parents about sexual abuse. (7 RT 879.) Moreover, she testified that the wording of Watchtower's policy on confidentiality in the July 1, 1989, letter to all bodies of elders closely mirrored the concerns expressed by other religious organizations and as reflected in the codes of ethics for the National Association of Social Workers, the American Counseling Association, and Child Welfare League of America. (7 RT 881-882.)

In short, all evidence adduced at trial regarding the July 1, 1989 letter demonstrated the absence of any malice, despicable conduct, evil motive, recklessness, or wickedness on the part of Watchtower. There was no evidence that Watchtower was deliberately indifferent to victims of abuse, whereas there was testimony that Watchtower was concerned for such victims, and balanced such concerns by countervailing, yet reasonable Scriptural direction about protecting confidentiality. On the other hand, to support her claim of malice, the Plaintiff relied exclusively on the July 1, 1989 letter, which through colorful and repeated arguments was characterized by her counsel as some nefarious plot to keep child sexual abuse secret. But as this Court is surely aware, argument of counsel is not evidence. (See CACI 5002 ["What the attorneys say during the trial is not evidence. . . . What the lawyers say may help you understand the law and the evidence, but their statements and arguments are not evidence."].) Counsel's characterization of the July 1, 1989 letter does not change its substance and is not sufficient to demonstrate malice, especially by a heightened clear and convincing standard. (Hoch v. Allied-Signal Inc. (1994) 24 Cal.App.4th 48, 60-61; see also Stewart v. Truck Ins. Exchange (1993) 17 Cal.App.4th 468, 482 [scrutinizing the substantiality of the evidence proffered on the issue of malice to determine it would not satisfy the higher "clear and convincing" evidentiary burden required for a finding of malice].)

F. The Amount of Punitive Damages Awarded Against Watchtower Was Excessive As a Matter of Law, Especially Where the Plaintiff's Stated Purpose in Seeking Those Damages Was to "Change Watchtower's National Policy," Violating Watchtower's Due Process Rights.

1. Standard of Review: De Novo.

As our Supreme Court has confirmed, appellate review of whether the amount of punitive damages is so excessive as to violate due process is de novo. (Simon v. San Paolo U.S. Holding Co., Inc. (2005) 35 Cal.4th 1159, 1172-1183 ["we are to review the award de novo, making an independent assessment of the reprehensibility of the defendant's conduct, the relationship between the award and the harm done to the plaintiff, and the relationship between the award and civil penalties authorized for comparable conduct. . . . This exacting appellate review is intended to ensure punitive damages are the product of the application of law, rather than a decisionmaker's caprice"] [citations and internal quotations omitted].)

2. Application to This Case.

As Watchtower has previously explained, there was an utter absence of malice demonstrated at trial. Therefore, its conduct was not reprehensible at all, let alone enough to support even the remitted punitive damages amount of $8,610,000 fashioned by the trial court as part of its ruling on Watchtower's new trial motion. (7 AA 1936-1940.) Moreover, although Watchtower maintains that both the Plaintiff's compensatory and punitive damages awards are each excessive in their own right, Watchtower does not simply claim that the ratio of compensatory damages to that award of punitive damages is beyond constitutional limits. (See State Farm Mut. Auto Insurance Co. v. Campbell (2003) 538 U.S. 409, 425; Simon, supra, 35 Cal.4th at 1182-1183.) Rather, Watchtower asserts that the compensatory award, comprised mainly of general damages, itself is so astronomically high that it likely already contained a punitive element. (Simon, supra, 35 Cal.4th at 1182-1183.)

But what is equally (and perhaps more) troubling about the excessive punitive damages awarded in this case is that they appear to include an award for harm to others, and not just the harm alleged in this case by the Plaintiff. Indeed, at all times, the Plaintiff's stated purpose for pursuing punitive damages was to effect "a change in Watchtower's national policy" purportedly expressed in its July 1, 1989, letter to all bodies of elders in the United States.[3] Yet the United States Supreme Court has repeatedly held that seeking punitive damages for that purpose is improper. (BMW of North America, supra, 517 U.S. at 585 ["While each State has ample power to

[3] For example, during his opening statement, Plaintiff's counsel referenced Watchtower's July 1, 1989 letter and stated: "The governing body, through this policy, had made a determination that its own needs would be placed above protection of children and an indifference to children like Candice who were placed at risk by the presence of known sexual abusers within the congregations and the secrecy that surrounded it. That is what this case is about." (3 RT 98.)

During the trial, the Plaintiff testified that she told the elders she wanted to change Watchtower's alleged "policy of secrecy" and that she would not have brought this lawsuit had Watchtower agreed to change its policy, referring to Watchtower's July 1, 1989 letter. (6 RT 764-765.)

And in closing arguments, the Plaintiff's counsel argued that punitive damages were necessary to effect a change in Watchtower's policy of secrecy, again referring to the July 1, 1989 letter. (9 RT 1090-1091; 12 RT 1231.)

protect its own [citizens], none may use the punitive damages deterrent as a means of imposing its regulatory policies on the entire Nation"]; State Farm, supra, 538 U.S. at 420-421 [award of punitive damages reversed where plaintiff used case as a platform to expose and punish defendant for perceived deficiencies in its national operations; "as a general rule . . . a State [does not] have a legitimate concern in imposing punitive damages to punish a defendant for unlawful acts committed outside of the State's jurisdiction"]; Philip Morris USA v. Williams (2007) 549 U.S. 346, 353-354 [clarifying that "the Constitution's Due Process Clause forbids a State to use a punitive damages award to punish a defendant for injury that it inflicts upon nonparties . . . i.e., injury that it inflicts upon those who are, essentially, strangers to the litigation"].)

By admittedly using punitive damages as a device to "change national policy," the Plaintiff asked the jury to do what the United States Supreme Court has emphatically declared cannot be done: to punish a defendant for injury or alleged harm that it may have inflicted upon "strangers to the litigation." (Philip Morris USA, supra, 549 U.S. at 353-354.) The trial court did so without allowing Watchtower any "opportunity to defend against the charge" by showing why one victim's case (the Plaintiff's) is different from another's (all others she asserted have been harmed, or might be harmed in the future, by Watchtower's alleged "conspiracy of silence"). (Ibid.) Even though the trial court ultimately reduced the jury's punitive damages award from its original amount of $21,000,001 (a breathtaking sum awarded exclusively against Watchtower), the fact remains that allowing any punitive damages to be awarded in this case for harm caused to any other alleged "victims" added "a near standardless dimension to the punitive damages equation." (Id. at 354.) How many such victims are there? How seriously were they injured? Under what circumstances did their injuries allegedly occur? "The trial will not likely answer such questions as to nonparty victims [and] [t]he jury will be left to speculate." (Ibid.) Nothing the trial court did in reducing that punitive damages award to $8,610,000 could answer those critical questions either.

It is clear from the record that Plaintiff used her punitive damages claim to punish Watchtower with the goal of changing Watchtower's purported national policy expressed in its July 1, 1989 letter to all bodies of elders in the United States. Based upon the reasoning and holding of the United States Supreme Court decisions in BMW, Campbell, and Philip Morris, doing so was clearly improper and violated Watchtower's due process rights. Thus, the punitive damages award of $8,610,000 must be reversed and vacated in its entirety.[4] [4] Pursuant to Rule of Court 8.200, subd. (a)(5), Watchtower further joins in and incorporates here by reference all of the additional grounds for reversal asserted in the companion Appellant's Opening Brief filed concurrently by the North Freemont Congregation.

V.

CONCLUSION

Based upon the foregoing, Watchtower respectfully requests this Court to reverse all aspects of the Judgment and Amended Judgment rendered in this matter by the trial court, and to direct that a new judgment be entered in Watchtower's favor on all of the Plaintiff's claims. Alternatively, Watchtower asks this Court to order that a new trial be held on those claims and that the trial court give complete and proper instructions on duty, allocation of fault, and mandatory reporting.

MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES

California Rule of Court 9.40(a) provides that "[a] person who is not a member of the State Bar of California but who is a member in good standing of and eligible to practice before the bar of any United States court or the highest court in any state, territory, or insular possession of the United States, and who has been retained to appear in a particular cause pending in a court of this state, may in the discretion of such court be permitted upon written application to appear as counsel pro hac vice, provided that an active member of the State Bar of California is associated as attorney of record."

Mario F. Moreno, Associate General Counsel for Watchtower, coordinates all of the defense litigation for Watchtower, including appeals, in the United States. Following entry of Judgment adverse to Watchtower in the underlying trial court matter before the Alameda Superior Court, it has become necessary for Watchtower to pursue its appellate remedies with this Court, and it desires to do so with Mr. Moreno's input and assistance. However, as Mr. Moreno is not yet admitted before the Court of Appeal and Mr. Moreno's participation and appearance will be required on behalf of Watchtower throughout the course of this appeal, Watchtower respectfully files this pro hac vice motion pursuant to California Rule of Court 9.40, subd. (c)(2). Proper and timely notice of this motion has been given to all parties in this case and to the State Bar of California at its San Francisco address.

As set forth in the attached declaration of Mario F. Moreno, all the requirements of Rule 9.40 have been met by the declarant. Accordingly, Watchtower respectfully moves this Court to permit Mario F. Moreno, Associate General Counsel for Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc., to appear as counsel pro hac vice in this appellate matter in association with Jon R. Williams, Esq., an active member of the State Bar of California and Certified Appellate Specialist who also serves as appellate counsel of record for Watchtower in this appeal.

DECLARATION OF MARIO F. MORENO

I, Mario F. Moreno, declare as follows:

1. I am an attorney duly licensed to practice in the State of New York. I serve as in-house counsel and Associate General Counsel for Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc. ("Watchtower"), the Appellant/Defendant in this appeal. I have been assigned by Watchtower's General Counsel, Philip Brumley, to represent Watchtower in this case.

2. I make this application for permission to appear as counsel pro hac vice on behalf of Watchtower pursuant to Rules 9.40 and 8.54 of the California Rules of Court.

3. I am not a resident of California nor am I regularly engaged in the practice of law in California. My office address is Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc., Legal Department, 100 Watchtower Drive, Patterson, NY 12563. My telephone number is (845) 306-1000.

4. I am a resident of New York. My residential address is 2721 Route 22, Patterson, NY 12563-2228.

5. I am admitted to practice law in the jurisdictions of Arizona, Connecticut, and New York. I was admitted to practice before the Supreme Court of the State of Arizona and all other courts in the State of Arizona on October 13, 1979. I was admitted to practice before the District Court for the District of Arizona on September 5, 1980. I was admitted to practice before the Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit on September 7, 1982. I was admitted to practice before the Supreme Court of the State of Connecticut and all other courts in the State of Connecticut on June 10, 1994. I was admitted to practice before the Court of Appeals of the State of New York and all other courts in the State of New York on December 7, 1994. I was admitted to practice before the District Court, Southern District of New York, on October 14, 2003.

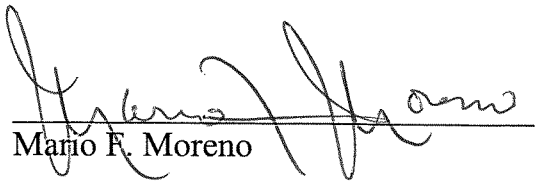
6. I am currently in good standing and eligible to practice in all courts to which I am admitted.

7. I am not currently suspended or disbarred in any court.



8. In the preceding two years, I have applied to appear as counsel pro hac vice in two cases in California. In the first case, Dorman v. La Jolla Church, San Diego Superior Court, Case Number 37-2010-00092450-CU-PO-CTL, my unopposed pro hac vice application was filed with the Superior Court on or about May 6, 2011. After the Superior Court granted my application, I was admitted pro hac vice on or about June 3, 2011. In the second case, Rivera, et al. v. Pacific Beach Church, et al., San Diego Superior Court, Case Number 37-2011-00096950-CU-PO-CTL, my unopposed pro hac vice application was filed with the Superior Court on or about November 4, 2011. After the Superior Court granted my application, I was admitted pro hac vice on or about December 16, 2011.

9. Watchtower has also employed as their appellate counsel in this matter the firm of Boudreau Williams LLP, by Jon R. Williams, Esq., a Certified Specialist in Appellate Law (State Board of Legal Specialization). Mr. Williams is an active member of the State Bar of California.

10. Concurrently with the filing of this Application, I submit the required fee of $50.00 along with a copy of this Application to the State Bar of California.

I declare under penalty of perjury under the laws of the State of California that the foregoing is true and correct.

Executed on this 21st day of March, 2013 at Patterson, New York.

APPLICATION

Pursuant to Rule of Court 8.204, subd. (c)(5), Defendant and Appellant, WATCHTOWER BIBLE & TRACT SOCIETY OF NEW YORK, INC. ("Watchtower"), hereby respectfully asks permission to file an Appellant's Opening Brief exceeding the length limit otherwise prescribed by Rule 8.204, subd. (c)(1).

As set forth in greater detail in the accompanying declaration of Jon R. Williams, this consolidated appeal presents a complicated factual and procedural history (arising from a multi-week trial before the lower court), and encompasses a substantial legal issue of first impression: whether a religious organization has a "special relationship" with its rank-and-file members sufficient to impose a duty to warn and to protect those members from the criminal acts of other rank-and-file members. That duty issue was consistently briefed at several critical stages of the underlying case, and permeated the lower court's jury instructions, Special Verdict, and ultimate Judgment at issue in this case.

Watchtower has made a concerted effort to coordinate its discussion of that duty issue in a way that avoids needless repetition with a similar duty challenge raised by Co-Appellant and Defendant, NORTH FREEMONT CONGREGATION OF JEHOVAH'S WITNESSES ("Freemont Congregation"), and in doing so has substantially reduced the length of its argument in its Opening Brief. Nevertheless, as that duty issue, as well as other substantive challenges Watchtower raises to the trial court's Special Verdict form, instructions to the jury, and award of punitive damages, required detailed treatment in that Opening Brief in order to accurately and fully advance those challenges and to assist the Court, Watchtower respectfully seeks to submit to this Court an Appellants' Opening Brief of 15,352 words, including footnotes.

Respectfully submitted,

DECLARATION

I, JON R. WILLIAMS, declare:

1. I am an attorney at law duly admitted to practice before this Court, and am a partner in the law firm of Boudreau Williams LLP. I am a Certified Appellate Specialist (California State Bar Board of Specialization), appellate counsel of record for Defendant and Appellant, WATCHTOWER BIBLE & TRACT SOCIETY OF NEW YORK, INC. ("Watchtower"), and the attorney primarily responsible for representing Watchtower before this Court.

2. Relevant Procedural History of These Consolidated Appeals: The underlying Judgment at issue in this case was rendered against both Watchtower (the national organization of Jehovah's Witnesses) and a local congregation, the NORTH FREEMONT CONGREGATION OF JEHOVAH'S WITNESSES ("Freemont Congregation"). While those two Defendants shared the same trial counsel in the lower court, they are separately represented on appeal by different counsel before this Court. Nevertheless, those two appeals have proceeded together before this Court, with both Watchtower and the Freemont Congregation filing their own respective Appellant's Opening Briefs, challenging various components of the trial court's Judgment.

3. Diligence and Good Cause: Notwithstanding that these appeals are consolidated, I diligently attempted to draft an Appellant's Opening Brief on Watchtower's behalf within the usual word court limits established by Rule 8.204, subd. (c)(1). This included over seven separate drafts of that brief, each of which I trimmed down substantially with input from Watchtower's General Counsel and legal staff. This also included substantial coordination with the Freemont Congregation's appellate counsel, including a concerted effort to avoid duplication whenever possible, and to reciprocally join (per Rule of Court 8.200, subd. (a)(5)) in the arguments made in those respective Opening Briefs. That level of coordination also led to both Watchtower and the Freemont Congregation submitting in support of those briefs and Joint Appellants' Appendix, all with an eye toward streamlining our presentation to the Court on behalf of our clients. Yet given the number of substantive challenges Watchtower raises from the trial court's pre-trial and post-judgment rulings, as well as from the trial court's Judgment, I was not able to reduce the word count below the 14,000 word threshold. This is due also, at least in part, to the relative size of the trial court record, with a Reporter's Transcript consisting of 13 volumes and spanning 1,281 pages, and an Appellants' Appendix consisting of 8 volumes and 2,071 pages. Further complicating this task was the critical and novel duty issue which permeates both appeals, but from slightly different perspectives, as well as Watchtower's challenge to the amount of the punitive damages awarded against it alone, requiring additional briefing and analysis to assist the Court in deciding that issue. In short, despite considerable efforts, I was unable to bring this brief down in length any more than 15,352 words, which is only 1,352 words over the word count limited provided by Rule 8.204, subd. (c)(1). Indeed, I make it my practice – even on complicated matters such as this one – to avoid filing overlength briefs with this or any other Court or Appeal, and rarely do so. However, this case justifies an exception, given the interrelated importance of the factual, procedural, and legal elements of the arguments Watchtower raises, all of which need to be thoroughly and accurately briefed to this Court in order to responsibly advance Watchtower's interests on appeal.

4. Good Faith and Lack of Prejudice: This Application is made in good faith for the reasons stated here and not for any other purpose. Furthermore, I know of no prejudice that will result to any party from grant of this Application, especially where the Plaintiff/Respondent, JANE DOE, will be able to seek similar relief, if needed, to respond to the two separate Opening Briefs filed in this appeal by Watchtower and the Freemont Congregation. However, significant prejudice will likely result to Watchtower if this Application is denied, in light of the complexity of the facts, procedure, and law which must be accurately summarized and briefed, and given the multiple core issues which have been squared for this Court's determination in this appeal.

I declare under penalty of perjury that the foregoing is true and correct and that this declaration was executed on March 26, 2013, at San Diego, California.

Jon R. Williams, Esq.

ORDER

Based on the application of Defendant and Appellant, WATCHTOWER BIBLE & TRACT SOCIETY OF NEW YORK, INC. ("Watchtower"), and good cause appearing;

IT IS ORDERED THAT:

Pursuant to Rule of Court 8.204, subd. (c)(5), Watchtower may file with this Court an Appellant's Opening Brief of 15,352 words, including footnotes.

Jehovah's Witnesses ordered to pay more than $20 million to woman who said she was sexually abused

By James Eng, msnbc.com

Updated at 3:20 p.m. ET: In what both sides described as a momentous ruling, a jury in Oakland, Calif., has found that Jehovah's Witnesses was partly responsible for the alleged sexual abuse of a girl by one of its members and must pay her more than $20 million.

The Alameda County Superior Court jury on Thursday awarded $21 million in punitive damages to the plaintiff, who is now 26 years old. That was on top of the $7 million in compensatory damages it awarded her on Wednesday.

The Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, the Jehovah's Witnesses' legal entity, is responsible for the entire punitive damages amount and 40 percent of the compensatory damages, said Rick Simons, attorney for the plaintiff. Sixty percent of the compensatory damages was assessed against Jonathan Kendrick, the man accused of abusing her.

Candace Conti sued Watchtower, the Fremont, Calif., congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses and Kendrick in 2011. It's msnbc.com's policy not to identify victims of sexual abuse, but Conti agreed to be identified so that any other victims would feel they could come forward too.

"The ultimate goal of the lawsuit was to have a change in policy, to be able to ID these people, child molesters, to the congregation to protect children," Conti told msnbc.com. "Secondarily, to have silent ones come forward and tell their stories and to bring to light that overall issue of violence and the hush-hush policy."

Both her parents were Watchtower congregation members at the time of the abuse, she said.

"I was trying to be the best Jehovah's Witness I could be at that time," she told msnbc.com.

Jim McCabe, attorney for the Fremont congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses, said that he was "stunned" by the verdict and would appeal.

"This is the first case I know of where a church has been hit with liability involving a rank-and-file member," he told msnbc.com.

"Mr. Simons has his twist on the facts and we will see how a court of appeals views the trial court rulings and the evidence," McCabe said.

The jury found that the elders who managed the Fremont congregation in the 1990s and who were under the supervision of Watchtower knew that Kendrick, a member, had recently been convicted of the sexual abuse of another child, but they kept his past record secret from the congregation, said Simons.

Kendrick went on to molest the plaintiff, who was a Jehovah's Witness member in Fremont, over a two-year period beginning when she was 9 years old, the lawsuit contended.

Kendrick was eventually convicted in 2004 of the sexual abuse of another girl, and is now a registered sex offender in California, Simons said. He has not been criminally charged with abusing the plaintiff, but Simons said the case is under investigation by law enforcement.

Kendrick was not in court for the trial and msnbc.com could not immediately find a contact number for him.

The California sex offender registry lists two convictions for him: lewd or lascivious acts with a child under 14 years of age and sexual battery involving a restrained person.

The lawsuit alleged that Watchtower had a policy that instructed elders in its Jehovah's Witnesses congregations to keep reports of child sex abusers within the religious group secret to avoid lawsuits.

"The verdict is significant because the policy of hiding sex abusers within the congregation was out in this case," Simons said.

He also said the judgment was "one of the largest in the country for a child sex abuse single victim in a religious institution molestation case."

Jehovah's Witnesses is a Christian denomination noted for its nontraditional interpretation of the Bible. Members are best known for their door-to-door preaching, distributing literature such as The Watchtower and Awake! magazines.

Conti filed the lawsuit after trying, without success, to get Jehovah's Witnesses in Southern California and in Fremont to change the secrecy policy, Simons said. There was no settlement demand from her because she felt the only way to expose this policy and make it change was to bring this case to trial and make it public," he said.

"The money is the only way left for her to force Jehovah's Witnesses to stop keep hiding known sex offenders within their congregation."

McCabe denied Jehovah's Witnesses has a secrecy policy concerning child sex abuse. He called the verdict "unprecedented."

"We're stunned by the verdict. We hate child abuse and everything to do with it."

McCabe said he was not aware of any other case in which a religious organization has been found liable for wrongdoing by a member who was not in an official position of responsibility.

“We’ve got a long ways to go yet before this one is resolved,” he said of the planned appeal.

Simons said Jehovah’s Witnesses has sufficient resources, including valuable real estate, to cover the judgment but an appeal could drag out for years.

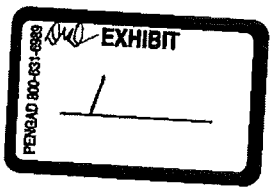
Dear Brothers



This is in regard to a matter involving Jonathan Kendrick In reviewing our files we noted that Jonathan Kendrick was reproved by the North Congregation and deleted as a ministerial servant on December 3 1993 for child molestation

In the letter to all bodies of elders March 14 1997 direction was given to provide a report of anyone who is currently serving or who formerly served in a Society appointed position in the congregation who is known to have been guilty of child molestation in the past Has this in formation been provided to the Society? If so perhaps it was lost in the mail Therefore please send us additional copies of your correspondence for our files If not please answer the questions in the first paragraph of page 3 of the March 14 1997 letter When responding you may make reference to this letter by the date and desk reference from above Please accept our warm Christian love and best wishes

Dear Brothers

Your letter dated November 15 1993 has been received As you will note from the enclosed S 52 form Brother Jonathan Kendrick has been deleted from serving as a ministerial servant on the grounds of 'uncleanness '

Your letter states 'He confessed to touching the breasts of his stepdaughter while she was sleeping She was awakened instantly and knew what had happened " Since this incident is known by outside members of the family it is appropriate that Brother Kendrick be deleted from serving as a ministerial servant with your congregation

On page 92 of the Kingdom Ministry School textbook the following is stated Uncleanness includes an intentional momentary touching of sexual parts or caressing of breasts Such minor uncleanness can be handled at the discretion of an elder or two it does not require a judicial hearing There is a need for strong counsel admonition and assistance to help the individual to maintain chaste conduct in the future

In harmony with the above it will not be necessary for a judicial committee to handle the 'uncleanness committed by Brother Kendrick However it would be appropriate for two elders to meet with him and provide him with strong Scriptural counsel so as to avoid a repetition of such a serious offense

We trust the above comments will be helpful to you With this letter we are pleased to send you an expression of our warm Christian love and best wishes

Dear Brothers

We are writing to you regarding a case of child abuse We telephoned 11/12/93 and it was suggested that we submit in writing our questions

We met on 11/11/93 with Jonathan Kendrick, a ministerial servant, who confessed to child abuse with his 15 yr old step daughter The abuse occurred approximately 4 months ago He confessed to touching the breast of his step daughter while she was sleeping She was awaken instantly and knew what had happened His wife was informed that evening and the 3 of them talked it out between them Brother Kendrick thought since he was sorry and his family was willing to forget the abuse, he would not have to report it to the congregation elders He said that his conscious continued to bother him

Evelyn his wife is baptized but inactive She occasionally attends meetings

Andrea the step daughter is not baptized and is no longer an unbaptized publisher The step daughter is now using this as a tool to threaten with when she wants something Because she has been promiscuous with 2 boys at school the parents have tried to enforce house rules covering her comings and goings

Andrea has recently mentioned the abuse to another young girl Toy Register whom she attends school with Coincidentally Toy attends our congregation meetings and is studying Her mother is disfellowshipped Toy mentioned the abuse to her mother and added that Brother Kendrick on another occasion had accidentally touched her chest but admitted that it was not intentional. Mrs Register is now threatening to call the police

Here are the facts as best as we can present them without interviewing each party. Our questions are as follows

1 Can 2 elders handle this matter with Brother Kendrick as mentioned on page 83 of "Pay attention to Yourselves, Flock", under the heading Uncleanness? Or do we have to form a Judicial hearing because of it being child abuse?

2 We assume that Brother Kendrick does not qualify any longer as a Ministerial Servant. We will announce to the congregation that he is no longer serving as such If this is incorrect, please inform us

3 The legal department has given us some direction as far as our legal requirements and we will follow that closely

We will wait to hear from you regarding the above questions If I have not been clear enough, you may reach me during the day at my work phone (510-462 7881 ext 105)

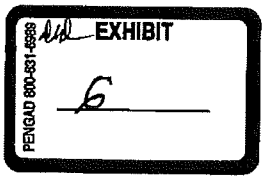
1 This letter updates the letters to all bodies of elders regarding child abuse dated March 23 1992 February 3 1993 August 1 1995 March 14 1997 July 20 1998 May 24 2002 April 1 2004 June 5 2006 and May 24 2010 Those letters should be removed from the congregation permanent file of policy letters and be destroyed No one should keep originals or copies of any of those letters



2 Additionally much fine direction has been included in the Shepherding textbook Thus elders should first consult the Shepherding textbook and review the Scriptural principles involved They should thereafter study the additional points outlined in this letter As you review this letter please note that paragraphs 3 7 set forth legal concerns regarding accusations of child abuse Paragraphs 8 20 set forth congregational concerns This letter should be carefully consulted anytime a matter involving child abuse arises

LEGAL CONCERNS REGARDING ACCUSATIONS OF CHILD ABUSE

3 What is child abuse from a legal standpoint? Child abuse includes the sexual or physical abuse of a minor (a person less than 18 years of age) It would also include the extreme neglect of a minor by his parent or guardian Child sexual abuse generally includes sexual intercourse with a minor oral or anal sex with a minor fondling the genitals breasts or buttocks of a minor voyeurism of a minor indecent exposure to a minor soliciting a minor for sexual conduct or any kind of involvement with child pornography Depending on the circumstances of the case it may also include sexting" with a minor Sexting' describes the sending of nude photos seminude photos or sexually explicit text messages electronically such as by phone

4 Most states have child abuse reporting laws that depending on the facts mandate elders to report an accusation to the authorities Thus when elders learn of an accusation of child abuse two elders from their congregation should immediately call the Legal Department for legal advice If the individuals involved are in different congregations each body of elders should arrange for two of their elders to call the Legal Department A call should be made even when both persons involved in sexual misconduct are minors The elders should not ask an alleged victim the accused person or relatives of the victim or accused to call the Legal Department The elders should call the Legal Department even in the following situations Re Child abuse
Page 2

☑ The alleged abuse occurred many years ago
☑ The alleged abuse is based on the testimony of only one witness
☑ The alleged abuse is believed to be a repressed memory
☑ The alleged abuse involved perpetrators or victims who are deceased
☑ The alleged abuse is believed to have already been reported to the authorities by someone
☑ The alleged perpetrator or victim is no longer a member of the congregation
☑ The alleged abuse occurred before the alleged perpetrator or victim was baptized
☐ The alleged victim is now an adult
☑ The alleged abuse occurred in the past and you are not certain whether the elders involved at the time called the Legal Department for direction

5 The Legal Department will provide you with legal advice based on the facts andthe applicable law If the individual who is accused of the child abuse is associated with a congregation please provide the Legal Department with his date of birth and if applicable his date of baptism After a report has been made to the Legal Department depending on the need the elders may be directed to contact the Service Department for assistance with questions regarding theocratic or judicial aspects of the case or regarding how to protect children

6 Two elders should also call the Legal Department regarding any prison inmate who has been accused of child abuse in the past and who is now associating with a congregation such as by attending congregation meetings held in the prison This would apply whether he is baptized or not In some cases elders may not be authorized to inquire of the offense that an inmate may have committed But if the elders learn that the alleged offense has to do with child abuse they should call the Legal Department immediately

7 If the elders become aware of minors associated with a congregation sexting" with other minors or of adults sexting' with minors the Legal Department should be called immediately The Legal Department does not need to be called when the elders receive reports of adults (that is cases in which all parties involved are at least 18 years old) sexting' one another

CONGREGATIONAL CONCERNS REGARDING ACCUSATIONS OF CHILD SEXUAL ABUSE

8 What is child molestation from a congregational standpoint? Webster's Ninth New Collegiate Dictionary defines pedophilia as sexual perversion in which children are the preferred sexual object (See Questions From Readers in The Watchtower of February 1 1997 page 29) Deuteronomy 23 17 18 condemns such practices as detestable (See the footnotes to verses 17 and 18 in the Reference Bible Also see the footnote on page 10 of the October 8 1993 issue of Awake!) In harmony with these references we are herein discussing sexual perversion in which children are the object of sexual abuse including fondling by an adult We are not discussing a situation wherein a minor who is a willing participant and who is approaching adulthood has sexual relations with an adult who is a few years older than the minor nor generally speaking are we discussing situations in which only minors are involved Rather we are referring to situations in which it is established that an adult brother or sister has been guilty of sexually abusing a young child or has been sexually involved with a minor who is approaching adulthood and who was not a willing participant Re Child abuse October 1 2012

9 As spiritual shepherds elders should continue to make every effort to protect all in the congregation especially children from the unwholesome practices of the world (Isa 32 1 2) One of these is child sexual abuse We abhor the sexual abuse of children and will not protect any perpetrator of such repugnant acts from the consequences of his gross sin (Rom 12:9) Elders should take seriously their responsibility in this matter so that the congregations will be safeguarded from any valid accusation of neglect in protecting children from sexual abuse

10 Regardless of whether the law requires the elders to report an accusation to the authorities steps need to be taken to protect children Elders should help the parents of the children involved to understand that they have the primary responsibility for protecting their children Obviously such parents will be keenly interested in taking precautions in this regard Our publications contain helpful information on how parents can protect their children —w10 11/1 p 13 w08 10/1 p 21 g 10/07 pp 3 11 lr pp 170 171 g03 2/8 p 9 g99 4/8 pp 9 11 g97 4/8 p 14 w96 12/1 pp 13 14 fy pp 61 62 g93 10/8 pp 5 13

11 In addition the elders should investigate every allegation of child sexual abuse When elders learn of an accusation in addition to this letter they should carefully review the direction outlined in the Shepherding textbook chapter 12 paragraphs 18 21 However in evaluating the evidence for internal congregational purposes they must bear in mind the Bible s clear direction No single witness should rise up against a man respecting any error or any sin At the mouth of two witnesses or at the mouth of three witnesses the matter should stand good (Deut 19 15) This requirement to consider testimony of two or three witnesses was confirmed by Jesus (Matt 18 16) Thus although they investigate every allegation the elders are not authorized by the Scriptures to take congregational action unless there is a confession or there are two credible witnesses However even though the elders are not authorized to take congregation action when there is only one witness the elders should remain vigilant with regard to the conduct and activity of the accused (See paragraph 12 of this letter) If two persons are witnesses to separate incidents of the same kind of wrongdoing their testimony can be deemed sufficient to take judicial action (1 Tim 5 19 24 25) If the person is not repentant over the gross sin disfellowshipping action would be warranted If the decision is to reprove the reproof should be announced (ks10 chap 7 par 20 second bullet) This will serve as a protection for the congregation Information concerning an individual accused of child molestation proved or otherwise should be placed in the congregation confidential file and marked Do Not Destroy" and kept indefinitely This includes Notification of Disfellowshipping or Disassociation (S 77) forms on individuals who have been disfellowshipped for child sexual abuse and then later reinstated Because of the delicate nature of handling a judicial case where an adult sexually abuses a child please contact your circuit overseer He will designate an experienced elder from your circuit to serve as chairman of the judicial committee

12 Loving elders should take steps to protect children especially when a judicial committee determines that the one who has sexually abused a child is repentant and will be allowed to remain a member of the Christian congregation The same concern would be shown when one who has sexually abused a child is disfellowshipped later cleans up his life and is reinstated The elders should be especially mindful of the activity of any who are known to have sexually abused a child in the past They should also ensure that newly appointed elders are made aware of this caution It would be appropriate for elders to talk kindly but very frankly to individuals who have manifested a weakness in this regard strongly cautioning them to refrain from displaying affection for children to avoid hugging or holding children on their lap never to be alone with a child (other than their Re Child abuse October 1 2012

own) not to allow children to spend the night in their home not to work alone in field service (hence they should always be accompanied by another adult) and not to cultivate friendships with children This not only serves to protect children but will help to prevent those who have sexually abused a child from putting themselves in the way of temptation being subjected to an unfounded accusation or doing things that may cause concern to others in the congregation (1 Cor 10 12 32) If the individual does not follow this direction from the elders the elders should immediately call the Service Department for assistance

13 If the individual does not follow the above direction from the elders or if the elders believe he may be a predator the elders should immediately call the Service Department for assistance A predator' is one who clearly lacks self-control and by his actions provides reason to believe he will continue to prey on children Not every individual who has sexually abused a child in the past is considered a predator The branch office not the local body of elders determines whether an individual who has sexually abused children in the past will be considered a predator If the branch office determines that an individual will be considered a predator parents with minor children will need to be warned of the danger that exists so that they can protect their children In such a case and only after receiving direction and instructions from the Service Department two elders should be assigned to meet with the parents of minor children in order to provide a warning At the same time that parents are warned about an individual it would be appropriate for the elders to inform the individual that parents in the congregation will be discreetly informed

14 What step should be taken when you learn of an adult who has been viewing child pornography? As stated in paragraph 4 of this letter two elders should call the Legal Department After receiving legal direction the elders will be directed to contact the Service Department for theocratic direction

15 Who is considered a known child molester? The January 1 1997 Watchtower article Let Us Abhor What Is Wicked mentions on page 29 that a man known to have been a child molester" does not qualify for privileges in the congregation The expression known to have been a child molester' has reference to how such a man is considered in the community and in the Christian congregation In the eyes of the congregation an adult known to be a former child molester is not free from accusation or irreprehensible nor does he have a fine testimony from people on the outside (1 Tim 3 1 7 10 5 22 Titus 1 7) In view of his past those in the community would not respect him and congregation members might be stumbled over his appointment Keep in mind that the branch office not the local body of elders determines whether one who has sexually abused a child is considered a known child molester

16 When a known child molester moves to another congregation the elders should follow the procedure set forth in the Shepherding textbook chapter 12 paragraph 20 If a known child molester is in prison and is transferred to another facility or is released it is important to inform the appropriate congregation of his situation in writing, if it is possible to do so This direction also applies when one considered a predator as outlined in paragraph 13 of this letter moves to another congregation

17 From time to time local authorities may inform you that a sex offender is living in your area The notice usually provides the address of the individual and may state the nature of his Re Child abuse criminal activity In such a case the elders should list that address on the appropriate territory card as a Do Not Call Thereafter two elders can periodically make calls on that address Following this direction will assist you in protecting the flock

18 Sexual misconduct involving only minors What steps should elders take when minors (persons less than 18 years of age) engage in sexual misconduct with one another? As stated in paragraph 4 of this letter two elders should call the Legal Department even when both persons are minors Minors who have sexual contact with one another are generally not considered as child molesters by the congregation However regardless of the ages of those involved such misconduct is serious Elders should be alert to render assistance and to protect children The body of elders should also arrange for the minor(s) to receive assistance in the presence of their believing parent(s) in harmony with the principles and guidelines found in the Scriptures and in our publications

19 When baptized minors become involved in sexting the elders must use good judgment in determining whether the wrongdoing has escalated to a point warranting judicial action Helpful information can be found in Questions From Readers in the July 15 2006 issue of The Watchtower Please review this material carefully before concluding that a baptized minor is guilty of gross uncleanness or brazen conduct loose conduct (ks10 chap 5 par 9) However if the baptized minor has been previously counseled and persists in the wrong course in most cases judicial action is taken Each case must be evaluated on its own merit If elders have questions regarding a specific case they should contact the Service Department Also keep in mind that Christian parents should be included in any discussions the elders have with a minor who may be involved in sexting

20 The potential serious consequences associated with sexting" underscore the importance of Christian parents supervising their children s use of cellular telephones and other means of electronic communication Excellent suggestions can be found on pages 6 7 of the November 2009 issue of Awake! (Matt 24 45) When a minor has been involved in sexting elders can use such excellent material to offer Scriptural counsel and encouragement to both the parents and the child —1 Pet 5 2 3

HELPING VICTIMS OF CHILD SEXUAL ABUSE

21 Some Christians may become troubled with memories and feelings associated with past child sexual abuse When an elder is approached by someone concerned or distraught about such memories he should speak consolingly (1 Thess 5 14) Elders should manifest an empathetic compassionate patient and supportive response to those approaching them about such memories An elder must never be alone with or become the sole confidant of a sister to whom he is not closely related Helpful suggestions and guidelines can be found in the Shepherding textbook chapter 4 paragraphs 21 28 The elders should carefully review this material when helping victims of child sexual abuse

RESTRICTIONS AND PRIVILEGES

22 It cannot be said in every case that one who has sexually abused a child could never qualify for privileges of service in the congregation However the elders will certainly want to be very cautious especially when dealing with one who had repeatedly engaged in this kind of wrongdoing or who had been disfellowshipped for such an offense Before privileges can be extended such a man must meet the Scriptural qualifications of being self-controlled and irreprehensible He must also have a fine testimony' from individuals inside and outside the congregation (Titus 1 6-8 Re Child abuse October 1 2012

1 Tim 3 2 7) Elders should keep in mind what is stated in the January 1 1997 Watchtower article Let Us Abhor What Is Wicked page 29 paragraph 2 Child sexual abuse reveals an unnatural fleshly weakness Experience has shown that such an adult may well molest other children True not every child molester repeats the sin but many do And the congregation cannot read hearts to tell who is and who is not liable to molest children again (Jeremiah 17 9) Hence Paul s counsel to Timothy applies with special force in the case of baptized adults who have molested children Never lay your hands hastily upon any man neither be a sharer in the sins of others (1 Timothy 5 22)

23 Hence privileges of service should never be extended hastily Considerable time should always pass before one who has sexually abused a child is recommended if ever it would be up to the local body of elders to determine whether such a recommendation should be made to the branch office taking into account all factors in each individual case Please note that unless specifically approved by the branch office one who has sexually abused a child should not be used to conduct any meetings held in the congregation or in a prison and he does not qualify to work on any Kingdom Hall project other than one involving the congregation where he serves as a publisher

24 If the elders as a body conclude that one who has sexually abused a child in the distant past may now qualify for privileges they should assign two elders to call the Service Department

25 In view of the foregoing each elder should make the following notation next to chapter 3 paragraph 20 chapter 5 paragraph 10 second bullet chapter 7 paragraph 20 second bullet and chapter 12 paragraph 18 of the Shepherding textbook See letter dated October 1 2012 to all bodies of elders

26 It is hoped that the direction provided in this letter will help you brothers in handling matters in the congregation so as to protect children from sexual abuse and at the same time balance Bible based justice and mercy We also hope this direction will assist you to lovingly help victims of child sexual abuse May Jehovah s rich blessing continue to be with you in carrying out your many responsibilities as shepherds of the flock With this letter we send our warm Christian love and best wishes

Dear Jon

Sorry but I felt better to have this dropped in the mail than to see you face to face

I wish you all the best I m sorry that I wasn t good 'wife material but I guess my upbringing doesn t allow me to be a good wife not just to you but to anyone That s why I ll probably remain single for the rest of my life I wanted to love you so very much but something inside me didn t let you ever get too close to me That was why I stayed so far away from you emotionally and sexually

I wanted you to know this I m sorry for all the bad years and the waste of your many good years I hope you don t hate me for it

You re a good and wonderful man Jon and you ll always be in my heart I wish you all the best on your new marriage

Love

Re: Jonathan Kendrick

Dear Brothers,

Enclosed are the Publisher Cards of Brother Jonathan Kendrick, and our comments in his regard that we hope will enable you to know him better.

Brother Kendrick is a fine Brother who can easily offer a 'positive spirit' to a Congregation. He has served the North Congregation as Literature Servant in the somewhat recent past, has done well in the TMS and presenting the "Good News" in the Field Ministry.

However, our Brother has had a 'stormy' marriage which ended in divorce, during which time a Judicial Committee saw the need to place restrictions on him for outbursts of anger His anger was not unprovoked however, in that, his former wife [now inactive], never allowed him to assume the scriptural role of "family head". She resisted him in allowing her teenage daughter [from a previous marriage], to date a 'worldly' individual with whom she was sexually active [even in their own residence when Jonathan was not present], resulting in a child out of wedlock So Brother Kendrick has had much frustration to deal with, but the Committee agreed that that didn't give him license to vent his anger in violent demonstration, which in at least one case, involved the Fremont Police Department.

Brother Kendrick has been away from good, regular spirtual association for some months now. As a result, I fear the worlds attitudes have creeped in on him a little more. Please help him put these aside. Jonathan may seem a little 'gruff' on the outside, but you will find with some attention he will respond well to your efforts. He wants and appreciates strong, pointed counsel on the TMS as well as personally to help him grow and progress.

The skills of Brother Kendrick vary from violin playing and topiary to wood-working and welding(trade). He is a very interesting individual who has taken the lead with some young ones in the congregation and helped them from 'vearying off course'.

Jonathan is no longer on restriction; you will find him to be a fine individual, kind, loving, and appreciates the peace and refreshment of the Christian Brotherhood. Please convey our well wishes and warm love to him, and all those loyally serving JAH in the Brentwood Congregation

Your Brother,

Larry Lamerdin
