*871 *106 Mr. Hayden C. Covington, of Brooklyn, N.Y., for petitioners.

Mr. Fred B. Trescher, of Greensburg, Pa., for respondent.

Opinion

Mr. Justice DOUGLAS delivered the opinion of the Court.

The City of Jeannette, Pennsylvania, has an ordinance, some forty years old, which provides in part:

'That all persons canvassing for or soliciting within said Borough, orders for goods, paintings, pictures, wares, or merchandise of any kind, or persons delivering such articles under orders so obtained or solicited, shall be required to procure from the Burgess a license to transact said business *872 and shall pay to the Treasurer of said Borough therefore the following sums according to the time for which said license shall be granted.

'For one day $1.50, for one week seven dollars ($7.00), for two weeks twelve dollars ($12.00), for three weeks twenty dollars ($20.00), provided that the provisions of this ordinance shall not apply to persons selling by sample to manufacturers or licensed merchants or dealers doing business in said Borough of Jeannette.'

Petitioners are 'Jehovah's Witnesses'. They went about from door to door in the City of Jeannette distributing literature and soliciting people to 'purchase' certain religious books and pamphlets, all published by the *107 Watch Tower Bible & Tract Society.1 The 'price' of the books was twenty-five cents each, the 'price' of the pamphlets five cents each.2 In connection with these activities petitioners used a phonograph3 on which they played a record expounding certain of their views on religion. None of them obtained a license under the ordinance. Before they were arrested each had made 'sales' of books. There was evidence that it was their practice in making these solicitations to request a 'contribution' of twenty-five cents each for the books and five cents each for the pamphlets but to accept lesser sums or even to donate the volumes in case an interested person was without funds. In the present case some donations of pamphlets were made when books were purchased. Petitioners were convicted and fined for violation of the ordinance. Their judgments of conviction were sustained by the Superior Court of Pennsylvania, 149 Pa.Super. 175, 27 A.2d 666, against their contention that the ordinance deprived them of the freedom of speech, press, and religion guaranteed by the First Amendment. Petitions for leave to appeal to the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania were denied. The cases are here on petitions for writs of certiorari which we granted along with the petitions for rehearing of Jones v. Opelika, 316 U.S. 584, 62 S.Ct. 1231, 86 L.Ed. 1691, 141 A.L.R. 514, and its companion cases.

*108 [1] The First Amendment, which the Fourteenth makes applicable to the states, declares that 'Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press * * *.' It could hardly be denied that a tax laid specifically on the exercise of those freedoms would be unconstitutional. Yet the license tax imposed by this ordinance is in substance just that.

Petitioners spread their interpretations of the Bible and their religious beliefs largely through the hand distribution of literature by full or part time workers.4 They claim to follow the example of Paul, teaching 'publickly, and from house to house.' Acts 20:20. They take literally the mandate of the Scriptures, 'Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature.' Mark 16:15. In doing so they believe that they are obeying a commandment of God.

The hand distribution of religious tracts is an age-old form of missionary evangelism-as old as the history of printing presses.5 It has been a potent force in various religious movements down through the years.6 This form of evangelism is utilized today on a large scale by various religious sects whose colporteurs carry the 873 Gospel to thousands *109 upon thousands of homes and seek through personal visitations to win adherents to their faith.7 It is more than preaching; it is more than distribution of religious literature. It is a combination of both. Its purpose is as evangelical as the revival meeting. This form of religious activity occupies the same high estate under the First Amendment as do worship in the churches and preaching from the pulpits. It has the same claim to protection as the more orthodox and conventional exercises of religion. It also has the same claim as the others to the guarantees of freedom of speech and freedom of the press.

[2] The integrity of this conduct or behavior as a religious practice has not been challenged. Nor do we have presented any question as to the sincerity of petitioners in their religious beliefs and practices, however misguided they may be thought to be Moreover, we do not intimate or suggest in respecting their sincerity that any conduct can be made a religious rite and by the zeal of the practitioners swept into the First Amendment. *110 Reynolds v. United States, 98 U.S. 145, 161, 167, 25 L.Ed. 244, and Davis v. Beason, 133 U.S. 333, 10 S.Ct. 299, 33 L.Ed. 637, denied any such claim to the practice of polygamy and bigamy. Other claims may well arise which deserve the same fate. We only hold that spreading one's religious beliefs or preaching the Gospel through distribution of religious literature and through personal visitations is an age-old type of evangelism with as high a claim to constitutional protection as the more orthodox types. The manner in which it is practiced at times gives rise to special problems with which the police power of the states is competent to deal. See for example Cox v. New Hampshire 312 U.S. 569, 61 S.Ct. 762, 85 L.Ed. 1049, 133 A.L.R. 1396, and Chaplinsky v. New Hampshire, 315 U.S. 568, 62 S.Ct. 766, 86 L.Ed. 1031. But that merely illustrates that the rights with which we are dealing are not absolutes. Schneider v. State, 308 U.S. 147, 160, 161, 60 S.Ct. 146, 150, 84 L.Ed. 155. We are concerned, however, in these cases merely with one narrow issue. There is presented for decision no question whatsoever concerning punishment for any alleged unlawful acts during the solicitation. Nor is there involved here any question as to the validity of a registration system for colporteurs and other solicitors. The cases present a single issue-the constitutionality of an ordinance which as construed and applied requires religious colporteurs to pay a license tax as a condition to the pursuit of their activities.

[3] [4] [5] [6] The alleged justification for the exaction of this license tax is the fact that the religious literature is distributed with a solicitation of funds. Thus it was stated 874 in Jones v. Opelika, supra, 316 U.S. at page 597, 62 S.Ct. at page 1239, 86 L.Ed. 1691, 141 A.L.R. 514, that when a religious sect uses 'ordinary commercial methods of sales of articles to raise propaganda funds', it is proper for the state to charge 'reasonable fees for the privilege of canvassing'. Situations will arise where it will be difficult to determine whether a particular activity is religious or purely commercial. The distinction at times is vital. As we stated only the other day in Jamison v. Texas, 318 U.S. 413, 63 S.Ct. 669, 672, 87 L.Ed. 869, 'The state can prohibit the use of the street for *111 the distribution of purely commercial leaflets, even though such leaflets may have 'a civil appeal, or a moral platitude' appended. Valentine v. Chrestensen, 316 U.S. 52, 55, 62 S.Ct. 920, 922, 86 L.Ed. 1262. They may not prohibit the distribution of handbills in the pursuit of a clearly religious activity merely because the handbills invite the purchase of books for the improved understanding of the religion or because the handbills seek in a lawful fashion to promote the raising of funds for religious purposes.' But the mere fact that the religious literature is 'sold' by itinerant preachers rather than 'donated' does not transform evangelism into a commercial enterprise. If it did, then the passing of the collection plate in church would make the church service a commercial project. The constitutional rights of those spreading their religious beliefs through the spoken and printed word are not to be gauged by standards governing retailers or wholesalers of books. The right to use the press for expressing one's views is not to be measured by the protection afforded commercial handbills. It should be remembered that the pamphlets of Thomas Paine were not distributed free of charge. It is plain that a religious organization needs funds to remain a going concern. But an itinerant evangelist however misguided or intolerant he may be, does not become a mere book agent by selling the Bible or religious tracts to help defray his expenses or to sustain him. Freedom of speech, freedom of the press, freedom of religion are available to all, not merely to those who can pay their own way. As we have said, the problem of drawing the line between a purely commercial activity and a religious one will at times be difficult. On this record it plainly cannot be said that petitioners were engaged in a commercial rather than a religious venture. It is a distortion of the facts of record to describe their activities as the occupation of selling books and pamphlets. And the Pennsylvania court did not rest the judgments of conviction on that basis, though it did find *112 that petitioners 'sold' the literature. The Supreme Court of Iowa in State v. Mead, 230 Iowa 1217, 300 N.W. 523, 524, described the selling activities of members of this same sect as 'merely incidental and collateral' to their 'main object which was to preach and publicize the doctrines of their order.' And see State v. Meredith, 197 S.C. 351, 15 S.E.2d 678; People v. Barber, 289 N.Y. 378, 385-386, 46 N.E.2d 329. That accurately summarizes the present record.

[7] We do not mean to say that religious groups and the press are free from all financial burdens of government. See Grosjean v. American Press Co., 297 U.S. 233, 250, 56 S.Ct. 444, 449, 80 L.Ed. 660. We have here something quite different, for example, from a tax on the income of one who engages in religious activities or a tax on property used or employed in connection with those activities. It is one thing to impose a tax on the income or property of a preacher. It is quite another thing to exact a tax from him for the privilege of delivering a sermon. The tax imposed by the City of Jeannette is a flat license tax, the payment of which is a condition of the exercise of these constitutional privileges. The power to tax the exercise of a privilege is the power to control or suppress its enjoyment. Magnano Co. v. Hamilton, 292 U.S. 40, 44, 45, 54 S.Ct. 599, 601, 78 L.Ed. 1109, and cases cited. Those who can tax the exercise of this religious practice can make its exercise so costly as to deprive it of the resources necessary for its maintenance. Those who can tax the privilege of engaging in this form of missionary evangelism can close its doors to all those who do not have a full purse. Spreading religious beliefs in this ancient and honorable manner would thus be denied the needy. Those who can deprive religious groups of their colporteurs can take from them a part of the vital power of the press which has survived from the Reformation.

875 [8] It is contended, however, that the fact that the license tax can suppress or control this activity is unimportant *113 if it does not do so. But that is to disregard the nature of this tax. It is a license tax-a flat tax imposed on the exercise of a privilege granted by the Bill of Rights. A state may not impose a charge for the enjoyment of a right granted by the federal constitution. Thus, it may not exact a license tax for the privilege of carrying on interstate commerce (McGoldrick v. Berwind-White Co., 309 U.S. 33, 56-58, 60 S.Ct. 388, 397, 398, 84 L.Ed. 565, 128 A.L.R. 876), although it may tax the property used in, or the income derived from, that commerce, so long as those taxes are not discriminatory. Id., 309 U.S. at page 47, 60 S.Ct. at page 392, 84 L.Ed. 565, 128 A.L.R. 876 and cases cited. A license tax applied to activities guaranteed by the First Amendment would have the same destructive effect. It is true that the First Amendment, like the commerce clause, draws no distinction between license taxes, fixed sum taxes, and other kinds of taxes. But that is no reason why we should shut our eyes to the nature of the tax and its destructive influence. The power to impose a license tax on the exercise of these freedoms is indeed as potent as the power of censorship which this Court has repeatedly struck down. Lovell v. Griffin, 303 U.S. 444, 58 S.Ct. 666, 82 L.Ed. 949; Schneider v. State, supra; Cantwell v. Connecticut, 310 U.S. 296, 306, 60 S.Ct. 900, 904, 84 L.Ed. 1213, 128 A.L.R. 1352; Largent v. Texas, 318 U.S. 418, 63 S.Ct. 667, 87 L.Ed. 873; Jamison v. Texas, supra. It was for that reason that the dissenting opinions in Jones v. Opelika, supra, stressed the nature of this type of tax. 316 U.S. at pages 607-609, 620, 623, 62 S.Ct. at pages 1243, 1244, 1250, 1251, 86 L.Ed. 1691, 141 A.L.R. 514. In that case, as in the present ones, we have something very different from a registration system under which those going from house to house are required to give their names, addresses and other marks of identification to the authorities. In all of these cases the issuance of the permit or license is dependent on the payment of a license tax. And the license tax is fixed in amount and unrelated to the scope of the activities of petitioners or to their realized revenues. It is not a nominal fee 114 imposed as a regulatory measure to defray the expenses of policing the activities in question.8 It is in no way apportioned. It is a flat license tax levied and collected as a condition to the pursuit of activities whose enjoyment is guaranteed by the First Amendment. Accordingly, it restrains in advance those constitutional liberties of press and religion and inevitably tends to suppress their exercise. That is almost uniformly recognized as the inherent vice and evil of this flat license tax. As stated by the Supreme Court of Illinois in a case involving this same sect and an ordinance similar to the present one, a person cannot be compelled 'to purchase, through a license fee or a license tax, the privilege freely granted by the constitution.'9 Blue Island v. Kozul, 379 Ill. 511, 519, 41 N.E.2d 515, 519. So it may not be said that proof is lacking that these license taxes either separately or cumulatively have restricted or are likely to restrict petitioners' religious activities. On their face they are a restriction of the free exercise of those freedoms which are protected by the First Amendment.

*876 The taxes imposed by this ordinance can hardly help but be as severe and telling in their impact on the freedom 115 of the press and religion as the 'taxes on knowledge' at which the First Amendment was partly aimed. Grosjean v. American Press Co., supra, 297 U.S. at pages 244-249, 56 S.Ct. at pages 446-449, 80 L.Ed. 660. They may indeed operate even more subtly. Itinerant evangelists moving throughout a state or from state to state would feel immediately the cumulative effect of such ordinances as they become fashionable. The way of the religious dissenter has long been hard. But if the formula of this type of ordinance is approved, a new device for the suppression of religious minorities will have been found. This method of disseminating religious beliefs can be crushed and closed out by the sheer weight of the toll or tribute which is exacted town by town, village by village. The spread of religious ideas through personal visitations by the literature ministry of numerous religious groups would be stopped.

[9] The fact that the ordinance is 'nondiscriminatory' is immaterial. The protection afforded by the First Amendment is not so restricted. A license tax certainly does not acquire constitutional validity because it classifies the privileges protected by the First Amendment along with the wares and merchandise of hucksters and peddlers and treats them all alike. Such equality in treatment does not save the ordinance. Freedom of press, freedom of speech, freedom of religion are in a preferred position.

It is claimed, however, that the ultimate question in determining the constitutionality of this license tax is whether the state has given something for which it can ask a return. That principle has wide applicability. State Tax Commission v. Aldrich, 316 U.S. 174, 62 S.Ct. 1008, 86 L.Ed. 1358, 139 A.L.R. 1436, and cases cited. But it is quite irrelevant here. This tax is not a charge for the enjoyment of a privilege or benefit bestowed by the state. The privilege in question exists apart from state authority. It is guaranteed the people by the federal constitution.

[10] Considerable emphasis is placed on the kind of literature which petitioners were distributing-its provocative, 116 abusive, and ill-mannered character and the assault which it makes on our established churches and the cherished faiths of many of us. See Douglas v. City of Jeannette, 319 U.S. 157, 63 S.Ct. 877, 87 L.Ed. 1324, concurring opinion, decided this day. But those considerations are no justification for the license tax which the ordinance imposes. Plainly a community may not suppress, or the state tax, the dissemination of views because they are unpopular, annoying or distasteful. If that device were ever sanctioned, there would have been forged a ready instrument for the suppression of the faith which any minority cherishes but which does not happen to be in favor. That would be a complete repudiation of the philosophy of the Bill of Rights.

Jehovah's Witnesses are not 'above the law'. But the present ordinance is not directed to the problems with which the police power of the state is free to deal. It does not cover, and petitioners are not charged with, breaches of the peace. They are pursuing their solicitations peacefully and quietly. Petitioners, moreover, are not charged with or prosecuted for the use of language which is obscene, abusive, or which incites retaliation. Cf. Chaplinsky v. New Hampshire, supra. Nor do we have here, as we did in Cox v. New Hampshire, supra, and Chaplinsky v. New Hampshire, supra, state regulation of the streets to protect and insure the safety, comfort, or convenience of the public. Furthermore, the present ordinance is not narrowly drawn to safeguard the people of the community in their homes against the evils of solicitations. See Cantwell v. Connecticut, supra, 310 U.S. at 306, 60 S.Ct. at page 904, 84 L.Ed. 1213, 128 A.L.R. 1352. As we have said, it is not merely a registration ordinance calling for an identification of the solicitors so as to give the authorities some basis for investigating strangers coming into the community. And the fee is not a nominal one, imposed as a regulatory measure and calculated to defray the expense of protecting those on the streets and at home against the abuses of solicitors. See 117 Cox v. New Hampshire, supra, 312 U.S. at pages 576, 577, 61 S.Ct. at pages 765, 766, 85 L.Ed. 1049, 133 A.L.R. 1396. Nor can the present ordinance strued to apply only to solicitation from survive if we assume that it has been con- *877 house to house.10 The ordinance is not narrowly drawn to prevent or control abuses or evils arising from that activity. Rather, it sets aside the residential areas as a prohibited zone, entry of which is denied petitioners unless the tax is paid. That restraint and one which is city wide in scope (Jones v. Opelika) are different only in degree. Each is an abridgment of freedom of press and a restraint on the free exercise of religion. They stand or fall together.

The judgment in Jones v. Opelika has this day been vacated. Freed from that controlling precedent, we can restore to their high, constitutional position the liberties of itinerant evangelists who disseminate their religious beliefs and the tenets of their faith through distribution of literature. The judgments are reversed and the causes are remanded to the Pennsylvania Superior Court for proceedings not inconsistent with this opinion.

Reversed.

1 Two religious books-Salvation and Creation-were sold. Others were offered in addition to the Bible. The Watch Tower Bible & Tract Society is alleged to be a non-profit charitable corporation.

2 Petitioners paid three cents each for the pamphlets and, if they devoted only their spare time to the work, twenty cents each for the books. Those devoting full time to the work acquired the books for five cents each. There was evidence that some of the petitioners paid the difference between the sales price and the cost of the books to their local congregations which distributed the literature.

7 The General Conference of Seventh-Day Adventists who filed a brief amicus curiae on the reargument of Jones v. Opelika has given us the following data concerning their literature ministry: This denomination has 83 publishing houses throughout the world issuing publications in over 200 languages. Some 9,256 separate publications were issued in 1941. By printed and spoken word the Gospel is carried into 412 countries in 824 languages. 1942 Year Book, p. 287. During December 1941 a total of 1018 colporteurs operated in North America. They delivered during that month $97,997.19 worth of gospel literature and for the whole year of 1941 a total of $790,610.36-an average per person of about $65 per month. Some of these were students and temporary workers. Colporteurs of this denomination receive half of their collections from which they must pay their traveling and living expenses. Colporteurs are specially trained and their qualifications equal those of preachers. In the field each worker is under the supervision of a field missionary secretary to whom a weekly report is made. After fifteen years of continuous service each colporteur is entitled to the same pension as retired ministers. And see Howell, The Great Advent Movement (1935), pp. 72-75.

8 The constitutional difference between such a regulatory measure and a tax on the exercise of a federal right has long been recognized. While a state may not exact a license tax for the privilege of carrying on interstate commerce (McGoldrick v. Berwind-White Co., supra, 309 U.S. at pages 56-58, 60 S.Ct. at pages 397, 398, 84 L.Ed. 565, 128 A.L.R. 876) it may, for example, exact a fee to defray the cost of purely local regulations in spite of the fact that those regulations incidentally affect commerce. 'So long as they do not impede the free flow of commerce and are not made the subject of regulation by Congress, they are not forbidden.' Clyde-Mallory Lines v. Alabama, 296 U.S. 261, 267, 56 S.Ct. 194, 196, 80 L.Ed. 215, and cases cited. And see Sough Carolina v. Barnwell Bros., Inc., 303 U.S. 177, 185-188, 625, 58 S.Ct. 510, 513-515, 82 L.Ed. 734.

9 That is the view of most state courts which have passed on the question. McConkey v. Fredericksburg, 179 Va. 556, 19 S.E.2d 682; State v. Greaves, 112 Vt. 222, 22 A.2d 497; People v. Banks, 168 Misc. 515, 6 N.Y.S.2d 41. Contra: Cook v. Harrison, 180 Ark. 546, 21 S.W.2d 966.

10 The Pennsylvania Superior Court stated that the ordinance has been 'enforced' only to prevent petitioners from canvassing 'from door to door and house to house' without a license and not to prevent them from distributing their literature on the streets. 149 Pa.Super. at page 184, 27 A.2d at page 670.

BY FAX

Plaintiff Jane Doe to Amend Complaint and for Order Permitting Financial Discovery and its supporting memorandum of law and lodgment of exhibits.

OBJECTION NO. 1

Material objected to: Plaintiff's Exhibit 27, Excerpt of deposition of Sergeant Jeffrey John Baldwin, page 33 (attached hereto as Exhibit A), wherein the officer testifies that he tried to call Manuel Iglesias and Jim Dominguez, and left messages for them – but did not verify the numbers he had called.

Ground(s) for Objection: Lack of relevance (Evid. Code §210 and §350), and lack of foundation (Evid. Code §403).

Court's ruling on Objection No. 1: Sustained: _____

Overruled: _____

OBJECTION NO. 2

Material objected to: Plaintiff's Exhibit 26, Excerpts of Deposition of Claudia Nancy Francis, page 34, lines 15 to 22 (attached hereto as Exhibit B), concerning Kendrick's alleged purchase of a black bra for a 10-year old girl.

Ground(s) for Objection: Hearsay (Evid. Code §1200, et seq.).

Court's ruling on Objection No. 2: Sustained: _____

Overruled: _____

OBJECTION NO. 3

OBJECTION NO. 4

Material objected to: Plaintiff's Exhibit 31, Declaration of William Bowen (Attached hereto as Exhibit D), in its entirety, concerning Bowen's opinion about the "true purpose" of Watchtower's policies and procedures.

Ground(s) for Objection: Lack of relevance (Evid. Code §210 and §350), and lack of foundation (Evid. Code §403; also, the First Amendment to the U.S. Constitution proscribes the Court's examination of any such alleged "true purpose" of church policies). Bowen's opinions add nothing beyond what the evidence about which he comments states on its face.

Overruled: _____

OBJECTION NO. 5

Material objected to: Plaintiff's Exhibit 32, Declaration of Anna Salter (Attached hereto as Exhibit E), in its entirety, concerning Salter's opinions about the "standard of care before and during 1993 to 1995 for the prevention of child molestation and sexual abuse in religious institutions where children are allowed to participate" and criticizing Watchtower's policies and procedures.

Ground(s) for Objection: Lack of foundation (Evid. Code §403). Lack of adequate qualifications to state such standard of care (Evid Code §720). Improper opinion. (Evid. Code §§801, 803). Salter's opinions seek to usurp the duties of the Court in determining what constitutes legal duty.

Q. Where in the Kingdom Hall?
A. Just in the Kingdom Hall.
Q. In the main auditorium?
A. Yeah.
Q. What took place in the Kingdom Hall? What did he do to you?
A. He would grab me and hold onto me.
Q. Where would he grab you?

A. Just like bear hug me. Hold me.
Q. Were other people present when this happened?
A. Yes.
Q. Who was present?
A. The attendees of the North Fremont Congregation.
Q. So like during a meeting?
A. Yes.
Q. During the time the meeting was going on or before or after?

A. My dad was.
Q. So the first time this took place was when you were about nine years old?
A. (Witness nods head affirmatively.)
Q. How many times did it take place; the bear hugs?
A. I couldn't give you a number.
Q. Frequently?
A. Very frequently.
Q. Every meeting?
A. I would -- I could safely say that.
Q. Did you ever complain about these bear hugs to anyone?
A. I would try to get away.
Q. What would you do to get away?
A. Squirm and try to get away.
Q. Were you able to get away?
A. (Witness shakes head in the negative.)
Q. Did you ever say anything to your father about it when you were nine years old?

age? Starting with nine years old how long did it continue?
A. Up until he moved away.
Q. Do you know when that was?
A. Shortly after my parents divorced.
Q. Did the abuse ever increase to be more than just bear hugs?
A. Yes.
Q. When did it increase to be more? How old were you?
A. Still nine.
Q. What happened?
A. He would take me to his house after meetings.
Q. Were these day meetings or night meetings?
A. Sunday meetings.
Q. Sunday meetings?
What happened when he would take you to his house after a Sunday meeting?
A. He would bear hug me. He wouldn't let me go.

He would touch me. Put his hands up my shirt.
Q. This started when you were age nine?
A. (Witness nods head affirmatively.)
Q. While you were age nine did he do anything else besides bear hug you and put his hands up your shirt?
A. I don't know at what age it was when it progressed into something different. I don't know exactly what age I was.

Q. What did it progress to?
A. It got more violent.
Q. What do you mean by "violent"? What would he do?
A. He would use pens, and he would make me touch him.
Q. What would he do with the pen?
Do you want to take a break?
A. I will finish your question.
He used to just put them inside me.
Q. In your vagina?
A. (Witness nods head affirmatively.)
MR. McCabe: Why don't we take a rest break. I'm sorry.
(RECESS TAKEN FROM 10:30 A.M. to 10:35 A.M.)
BY MR. McCABE:
Q. So you're not sure what age you were when it escalated to this point, using a pen and other touching; is that correct?
A. That's correct.
Q. But some time after you were nine?
A. Yes.
Q. Was it some time after you were 12?

0030

A. No.
Q. Before you were 12?
A. Yes.
Q. Can you tell me about how many times this incident took place where he would use pens?
A. Several times a month.
Q. Over what time period? Number of years? All within one year?
A. After it escalated?
Q. Yes.
A. Couple years.
Q. When did the abuse stop?
A. When he moved.
Q. He moved about the time your parents divorced?
A. (Witness nods head affirmatively.)
Q. That was in 1997?
A. That's correct.
Q. The abuse started when you were nine years old, so about 1994?
A. (Witness nods head affirmatively.)
Q. Were there occasions of abuse anywhere else other than what you have described at the Kingdom Hall and at his home?
A. No.
Q. Was there any other type of abuse other than what you have already described?

0031

A. Yes.
Q. Have you mentioned the abuse issues to that person?
A. No.
Q. The primary care physician would be at Kaiser in Downey?

A. Yes.
MR. MCCABE: I think that's all I have.
MR. SIMONS: All right.

(Deposition proceedings adjourned at 11:44 a.m.)

TO ALL BODIES OF ELDERS IN THE UNITED STATES

CONFIDENTIAL

Dear Brothers:

We are writing to help all of you as individual elders be aware of a growing concern regarding the handling of your duties that may involve legal issues or questions. Due to its importance, the presiding overseer should arrange for a special meeting of the body of elders to read and consider this letter carefully.

In spreading the Kingdom message, it is appropriate that we be bold and outspoken. Jesus commanded that "what you hear whispered, preach from the housetops." (Matthew 10:27) Even when worldly authorities demand that we keep silent, we reply as did the apostles: "We cannot stop speaking about the things we have seen and heard." (Acts 4:20) The Christian congregation will continue to declare the Kingdom message boldly until Jehovah says the work is done.

Elders share the obligation to shepherd the flock. However, they must be careful not to divulge information about personal matters to unauthorized persons. There is "a time to keep quiet," when "your words should prove to be few." (Ecclesiastes 3:7; 5:2) Proverbs 10:19 warns: "In the abundance of words there does not fail to be transgression, but the one keeping his lips in check is acting discreetly." Problems are created when elders unwisely reveal matters that should be kept confidential. Elders must give special heed to the counsel: "Do not reveal the confidential talk of another." (Proverbs 25:9) Often the peace, unity, and spiritual well-being of the congregation are at stake. Improper use of the tongue by an elder can result in serious legal problems for the individual, the congregation, and even the Society.

While we as Christians are ready to forgive others who may wrong us, those in the world are not so inclined. Worldly persons are quick to resort to lawsuits if they feel their "rights" have been violated. Some who oppose the Kingdom preaching work readily take advantage of any legal provisions to interfere with it or impede its progress. Thus, elders must especially guard the use of the tongue. Jesus faced opposers who tried to "catch him in speech, so as to turn him over to the government." (Luke 20:20) He instructed us to be "cautious as serpents and yet innocent as doves" in such situations. (Matthew 10:16) Where such a threat exists, our position as elders should be in line with David's words: "I will set a muzzle as a guard to my own mouth, as long as anyone wicked is in front of me."—Psalm 39:1.

In recent years, this matter has come to be a cause for increasing concern. The spirit of the world has sensitized people regarding their legal "rights" and the legal means by which they can exact punishment if such "rights" are violated. Hence, a growing number of vindictive or disgruntled ones, as well as opposers, have initiated lawsuits to inflict financial penalties on the individual, the congregation, or the Society. Many of these lawsuits are the result of the misuse of the tongue. As elders, remember that ill-advised statements or actions on your part can sometimes be interpreted legally as violating others' "rights."

The need for elders to maintain strict confidentiality has been repeatedly stressed. Please see The Watchtower of April 1, 1971, pages 222-4, and September 1, 1987, pages 12-15. The September 1977 Our Kingdom Service, page 6, paragraph 36, and the ks77 text- book, page 65, also provide helpful direction and counsel. That material strongly emphasized the elders' responsibility to avoid revealing confidential information to those not entitled to it.

The legal consequences of a breach of confidentiality by the elders can be substantial. If the elders fail to follow the Society's direction carefully in handling confidential matters, such mistakes could result in successful litigation by those offended. Substantial monetary damages could be assessed against the elders or congregation. In some cases where the authorities are involved, certain complications could lead to a fine or imprisonment. These possibilities underscore the need for elders to be discerning and to follow carefully directions provided by the Society.

I. WHAT TO DO IN SPECIFIC CASES

A. Judicial Committee Matters

Judicial committees must follow carefully the Society's instructions in carrying out their duties. (Note ks77, pages 66-70; ks81, pages 160-70.) Anything submitted in writing to the committee by the alleged wrongdoer or by witnesses should be kept in strict confidence. If it is necessary to continue at a later time a committee hearing, the members of the committee should submit to the chairman any personal notes they have taken. The chairman will keep these notes in a secure place to prevent breaches of confidentiality. The notes may be returned to the individual elders when the hearing resumes. Upon conclusion of the case, the chairman should place only necessary notes and documents, a summary of the case, and the S-77 forms in a sealed envelope for the congregation file. Nothing should be preserved outside of this sealed envelope (including unnecessary personal notes) by any elder on the committee. Obviously, no committee will ever allow judicial proceedings to be tape recorded or allow witnesses testifying before the committee to take notes.

B. Child Abuse

Many states have child abuse reporting laws. When elders receive reports of physical or sexual abuse of a child, they should contact the Society's Legal Department immediately. Victims of such abuse need to be protected from further danger.—See "If the Worst Should Happen," Awake! January 22, 1985, page 8.

C. Search Warrants and Subpoenas

1. A search warrant is a court order authorizing the police to search premises to locate evidence that may be used in a criminal prosecution. No elder should ever consent to the search of a Kingdom Hall or any other place where confidential records are stored. However, armed with a search warrant the police do not need consent and may even use force to accomplish their task. Likely before obtaining a search warrant, the police or other governmental officials will make inquiries regarding confidential records, make request to obtain the records, or indicate that they will seek a search warrant if the elder(s) involved does not cooperate. In any such situation, the Society's Legal Department should be called immediately.

At any time an elder is confronted with a search warrant (whether given advance notice or not), the elder should first ask to read the warrant. After reading it he should ask if he can call for legal guidance and then call the Society's Legal Department. If for some reason the Legal Department cannot be contacted, the elders involved should make every effort to obtain the assistance of a local attorney for the purpose of protecting the confidentiality of the records. It may be impossible to stop determined officers from conducting the search authorized by the warrant. Conscientious elders will want to do all they reasonably and peaceably can to preserve the confidentiality of the congregation in harmony with the principle set out in Acts 5:29.

2. Subpoenas are demands for records or for the appearance of an individual at a trial or deposition to give testimony. Subpoenas may be issued by a court or in some cases by a governmental agency or an attorney. If an elder receives a subpoena, he should contact the Society's Legal Department immediately. Never turn over records, notes, documents, or reveal any confidential matter sought by subpoena without receiving direction from the Legal Department.

D. Crimes and Criminal Investigations

In some cases the elders will form judicial committees to handle alleged wrongdoing that also could constitute a violation of Caesar's criminal laws (e.g., theft, assault, etc.). Generally, a secular investigation into a matter that is a concern to the congregation should not delay conducting a judicial hearing. To avoid entanglement with the secular authorities who may be investigating the same matter, the strictest confidentiality (even of the fact that there is a committee) must be maintained.

If the alleged wrongdoer confesses to the sin (crime), no one else should be present besides the members of the committee. When evidence supports the accusation but genuine repentance is not displayed resulting in a decision to disfellowship, this should be handled in the normal course regarding advice of appeal rights and announcements to the congregation. In cases of serious criminal wrongdoing (e.g., murder, rape, etc.), or where the criminal conduct is widely known in the community, the body of elders should contact the Society before proceeding with the judicial committee process.

B. When Servants and Publishers Move

A considerable number of publishers, including elders and ministerial servants move from one congregation to another. Sometimes the circumstances surrounding their departure are unsettled. Some appointed brothers may be experiencing problems that have brought their qualifications into question. It is not uncommon for a body of elders to hold back in giving counsel, allowing a brother to move without discussing his problem. Thereafter, they decline to recommend his reappointment in his new congregation. Often such a brother protests, requiring extensive correspondence between the bodies of elders. Much personal, and sometimes embarrassing, information must then be passed on. Such mishandling of things greatly increases the potential for serious repercussions. Problems can be avoided by the body of elders assuming its responsibility to inform a brother that he will not be favorably recommended, fully explaining the reasons why. Every effort should be made to resolve any difference before he leaves, eliminating any need for controversy involving his new congregation. The body should assign two elders to meet with him before he moves, letting him know whether they are recommending him to the new congregation.

This would likewise apply to publishers who move at a time when their personal conduct requires investigation by the elders. If serious accusations of wrongdoing have been made against an individual and he moves to another congregation before matters are finalized, usually it is best for the elders in the original congregation to follow through in handling matters, if possible and if distance permits. They are acquainted with the individual and the circumstances surrounding the alleged wrongdoing; this ordinarily puts them in the best position to get the facts and to handle the case. Handling matters in this way will eliminate the need to reveal confidential information unnecessarily about the private lives of individuals.

F. When Lawsuits Are Threatened

If the congregation or the elders (in their capacity as elders) are threatened with a lawsuit, the Society's Legal Department should be contacted immediately. No statements should be made by any member of the body of elders about the merits or validity of an actual or threatened lawsuit without authorization from the Society.

G. Child Custody

Elders may learn that a publisher is facing a dispute over child custody in a divorce proceeding. If the parental rights of such is challenged on the basis of our Christian beliefs, or on the assertion that our beliefs are harmful to a child's best interests, the elders should immediately write to the Society's Legal Department. In a rare emergency, a telephone call may be necessary. The Legal Department will assess the facts and determine the degree of its involvement, if any. Elders have no authority to make any promises about the Society's paying legal fees or handling specific cases. There is no need to contact the Society if there is no indication that the beliefs and practices of Jehovah's Witnesses will be attacked in a child custody dispute.

When you write to the Society's Legal Department about a specific case, please provide the following information:

1. The names of the parents and their attorneys.
2. The number of children involved and their ages.
3. A brief description of the facts, including the presence of any apostates.
4. An assessment of the Christian parent's spiritual condition—Is he or she new in the truth? Active? Inactive? Balanced?
5. The status of the legal proceedings—Has the matter gone to trial? Has the trial date been set? If so, when?

II. POINTS TO REMEMBER

A. Appreciate the Importance of Maintaining Confidentiality

Elders must exercise extraordinary caution when it comes to handling confidential information about the private lives of others. Do not mistakenly minimize the gravity of a breach of confidentiality. Unauthorized disclosure of confidential information can result in costly lawsuits. Even if a lawsuit turns out favorably, valuable time and energy that could have been devoted to Kingdom interests will be lost.

B. Do Not Make Statements to Secular Authorities Until You Receive Legal Advice from the Society

You are not legally required to make immediate responses to secular authorities about matters that could involve the disclosure of confidential information. Voluntarily allowing the Kingdom Hall or confidential records to be searched, where no search warrant is produced, could infringe on the legal rights of the congregation or of others. No statements should be made until you have an understanding of your legal position from the Society's Legal Department.

C. Be Extremely Careful with Written Material

All material related to judicial matters should be kept in a safe place, accessible only to elders. Final reports on the handling of judicial matters should be placed in a sealed envelope in the congregation file. A judicial committee should avoid sending to an individual any kind of correspondence that accuses him of specific wrongdoing. (Note ks77, pages 68-9.) Nothing should be put in writing to any disfellowshipped person to advise him of his status or the reasons for it without specific direction from the Society. The rules and procedures of Jehovah's Witnesses do not require such written disclosures. Anything in writing submitted to a judicial committee should be kept in strict confidence. If a judicial committee disfellowships an individual, he should be informed orally of the action taken and of the right to appeal. If the wrongdoer refuses to attend the hearing, two members of the judicial committee should attempt to contact the individual at his home and inform him orally of the decision. If this is not possible, the two elders may be able to inform him by telephone.

D. Guard the Use of Your Tongue

Think before you speak. Do not discuss private and judicial matters with members of your family, including your wives, or with other members of the congregation. Be extremely careful not to inadvertantly disclose private information when others are present, such as when speaking on the telephone with others listening in or nearby. (Note ks77, page 65.) At times, complicated judicial cases may necessitate consultation with an experienced, mature elder in another congregation or with the circuit overseer. Unless the circuit overseer is the elder consulted, only the pertinent details should be discussed and names should not be used.

Elders bear a heavy responsibility in ministering to the needs of the Christian congregation, and observing confidentiality as they do so. (1 Corinthians 16:13) We trust that the information in this letter will help you carry this burden. Please be assured of our love and prayers, and may Jehovah continue to bless you as you shepherd his flock.—1 Peter 5:1-3.

Your brothers,

Watchtower B.T.S. Society
OF NEW YORK, INC.

P.S. Due to the importance of the information that is presented herein it is suggested that the body of elders jointly read and consider this letter as soon as possible after its receipt in the congregation. Please do not make any copies of this letter, nor should it be read by others. It should be kept in the congregation's confidential files for any future reference that may be required by the body of elders.

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA - COUNTY OF ALAMEDA

JANE DOE, Plaintiff, v. THE WATCHTOWER BIBLE AND TRACT SOCIETY OF NEW YORK, Inc., a corporation, et al., Defendants.	No. HG11558324 ASSIGNED FOR ALL PURPOSES TO JUDGE ROBERT McGUINESS, DEPARTMENT 22 DECLARATION OF DR. ANNA SALTER IN SUPPORT OF MOTION OF PLAINTIFF JANE DOE TO AMEND COMPLAINT AND FOR ORDER PERMITTING FINANCIAL DISCOVERY Date: 5/3/12 Time: 3:00 p.m. Dept: 22 Reservation No: 1232647

I, ANNA SALTER, hereby declare:

1. That I have been retained by the plaintiff in the above-entitled action to testify on issues of standards of institutional policies and practices involving the prevention of child molestation and sexual abuse, and the scientific and professional knowledge available on the subjects of sexual predators of children and child victims of sexual abuse;

2. That I earned a Ph.D. in Clinical Psychology and Public Practice from Harvard University in 1977; served as the Director of Child Psychology Consulting Services at Mary Hitchcock Memorial Hospital in Hanover, New Hampshire from 1984 to 1988; served as a faculty member in the Psychiatry Dept. at Dartmouth Medical School from 1981 and 1988, with the title of Assistant Professor; and have engaged in private practice specializing in sexual abuse issues since 1988, working with and studying both offenders and victims;

3. That I have conducted workshops and trainings for nearly 30 years on the issue of childhood sexual abuse recognition and response, in 50 states and 10 countries; including workshops and trainings for many national, state, and local organizations, groups, and religious entities, and have served as a consultant to many such organizations as to the development and implementation of programs and policies on the same subject.

4. That I have authored 3 published books on the issue of child sexual abuse, including the book Predators: Pedophiles, Rapists, and Other Sex Offenders: Who They Are, How They Operate, and How We Can Protect Our Children (2003);

5. That I am a member of the American Psychological Association (APA), The Association for the Treatment of Sexual Abuse (ATSA), and the International Association for Correctional and Forensic Psychology (IACFP).

6. Based upon my training, clinical experience, research and work in the authoring of books, and experience as a trainer, I am familiar with the standards adopted by and followed by community, religious, and youth organizations nationally during the past three decades concerning childhood sexual abuse prevention, education, training, and procedures when abuse is suspected or reported.

7. I have reviewed the depositions of Elders Abrahamson, Clarke, and Lammerdin taken in this action, the depositions of Neal Conti and Kathleen Conti; and reviewed the documents produced by the Jehovah's Witnesses concerning the case of "Jane Doe" and her sexual abuse by Jonathan Kendrick, and Mr. Kendrick's past conduct, marked as exhibits to those depositions;

8. The standard of care before and during 1993 to 1995 for the prevention of child molestation and sexual abuse in religious institutions where children are allowed to participate, which is established by many sources including the adoption of training and educational programs by organizations such as The Boy Scouts of America, the passing of resolutions by national groups including The National Council of Churches, and many other public and private organizations, was that there exists an obligation to educate and train participants in such groups or activities, including volunteer adults, children, and administrative personnel, in the recognition, prevention, reporting, and possible signs of childhood sexual abuse; and a further obligation to address reports of childhood sexual abuse immediately to actively prevent further opportunities for abuse of any child within the organization by any adult confirmed to have committed an act of child molestation. Failure to notify those individuals in positions of leadership or authority within the local chapter, group, congregation, or club of a confirmed report violates this standard, and the failure to notify parents and other adults within the group or congregation violates this standard. These violations have been generally known to child care professionals, to Administrators, Directors, and Officers of national community, religious, or youth activity groups, and to law enforcement agencies to be significant, in that they expose children in the group or congregation to further abuse. It has been well known for decades to such professionals, and among persons in positions of leadership and authority in the national organizations which serve or include children, 1) That child sex abuse predators frequently commit additional acts of abuse; 2) That the "grooming" process, which is the identification and approach by a predator to a vulnerable child, is usually not noticed or recognized by lay persons who are unaware of a potential child molester's past conduct; 3) That children frequently do not complain or report acts of grooming or abuse by adults, for many reasons; 4) That child sexual abuse is usually committed outside the presence of witnesses; and 5) That non-familial pedophiles and child sexual abusers are most frequently possessed of personality traits that do not cause others to "suspect" them. It was generally well known to organizations including religious groups by the early 1990s that continuing to allow adults who have sexually molested even one child to participate in activities with youth without either warning other participants of the possible risk, or acting affirmatively to prevent any unsupervised contact between children and the confirmed abuser, exposes children to further acts of sexual abuse.

essary. For example, when both Ananias and his wife expired through divine action, it was "the younger men" who carried them off and buried them. (Acts 5: 5, 6, 10) The apostle Peter, after urging his fellow elders to serve as humble examples to the flock, said: "In like manner, you younger men, be in subjection to the older men." (1 Pet. 5:1-5) Timothy, who was quite young in comparison to the apostle Paul, is spoken of as among those serving Paul as his "assistants" or "helpers" or 'ministering' to him. (Acts 19:22, NE; AT; JB; NW) Onesimus, the runaway slave, whom the aged Paul called "my child," had 'looked after or waited on Paul,' "ministering" to him, as a son would for a father, while Paul was in prison. (Philem. 9, 10, 13, NE; AT; NW; compare 2 Timothy 1:16-18.) By working humbly along with these older, more experienced servants of God, the younger men gained rich benefits and training.

[23] Though their tasks may have appeared to be of little honor or prestige, their course is one that exemplifies the right attitude for all to have, of whatever age they may be. The apostle Peter, therefore, after counseling younger men to be subordinate to their elders, goes on to say: "But all of you gird yourselves with lowliness of mind toward one another, because God opposes the haughty ones [superior appearing ones, Int], but he gives undeserved kindness to the humble ones."—1 Pet. 5:5.

[24] How pleasant it is to serve together when a humble and modest spirit prevails in a congregation! What a force for persons effectively working together as a body the spirit of brotherhood proves to be when it is manifested by Christian elders, eliminating tendencies toward time-wasting contention or angry debates! (1 Tim. 2:8) Surely there is much here for all of us to meditate upon. Do we seek the genuine greatness that comes from such humble service motivated by brotherly love? Let us each show it by our being helpful, considerate, interested in all, including the lowly ones, granting to all their due measure of personal dignity and worth. (Rom. 12:10, 15, 16) We thereby prove ourselves true disciples of the One who excels in service, God's Son, Christ Jesus.

23. Are only younger ones to display such lowliness of mind?

24. What grand benefits result from this course, and how does it contribute markedly to Christian unity?

What Does It Mean to be A "MINISTER"?

WHEN you see or hear the word "minister" in some languages, of what do you think? In the language of some lands, the corresponding word refers only to a political official, such as a "Minister of Justice" or a "Prime Minister." But in lands with languages that are based on or strongly influenced by Latin (where the term originated), the word "minister" may also call to one's mind a religious official, generally a Protestant or Evangelical clergyman.

[2] Actually, the word "minister" as used

1, 2. (a) What ideas does the word "minister" bring to mind in different countries? (b) What do we need to note about the modern use of the word as compared with its earlier use?

today and as understood by most people has a meaning quite different from what it had in the early centuries of the Common Era. And in the same way it has a meaning that is quite different from the meaning of the Greek word di-a'ko-nos as used in the inspired Greek Scriptures of the Bible, though this Greek word is often translated in various languages as "minister." What is the difference, and how did it come about?

[3] Back in the early centuries of the Common Era the Greek word di-a'ko-nos and the Latin word mi-nis'ter meant basically the same thing: a servant, such as an attendant, a waiter, or other personal servant. And so, when the Bible began to be translated into Latin, mi-nis'ter was the word generally chosen for rendering di-a'ko-nos. But in course of time the idea of humble service began to disappear from the term as it was used. In considerable measure this was because of the apostasy from true Christianity that took place.

[4] Speaking to Ephesian elders, the apostle Paul forewarned them that, after his going away, "oppressive wolves will enter in among you and will not treat the flock with tenderness, and from among you yourselves men will rise and speak twisted things to draw away the disciples after themselves." Such selfish men would not operate on the principle that "there is more happiness in giving than there is in receiving." (Acts 20:29, 30, 35) Their course would betray that they were not God's servants but servants of his adversary.—2 Cor. 11:12-15, Int.

[5] This foretold apostasy is what eventually produced Christendom, with its many religions and its clergy and laity divisions. However, there were no such distinctions in the early congregation, as M'Clintock and Strong's Cyclopædia (Vol. VIII, pp. 355, 356) points out with regard to "elders":

> "As no specific account is given of the mode of their first appointment, we are left to infer that it may have occurred as a natural designation of respect for seniority . . . , somewhat after the analogy of eldership among the Jews."

The Cyclopædia goes on to say that later "the apostles recognized, possibly appointed," elders, and adds:

> "There would exist in every body of elders the necessity of a presidency or primacy for the purpose of general superintendence and direction. Thus one of the number would be designated, either by seniority or formal choice, as a primus inter pares [first among equals], who should serve as overseer (ἐπίσκοπος) of the body and the flock under them."

Further, the Cyclopædia states concerning the overseer's position:

> "Nothing in its original character would prevent its being held in rotation by several elders in the same church or diocese, yet a successful administration of it would tend to its perpetuation in the same individual. Hence it soon became an office for life."

So, one elder or overseer came to exercise permanent primacy over the others, excluding others from privileges enjoyed. In this way congregational direction by a body of elders was gradually eliminated.[*]

[6] Thus a "monarchical" arrangement developed, that is, a system where administrative authority and privilege were vested

3, 4. (a) What was the original sense of the Latin word mi-nis'ter, and so what use was made of it in translating the Bible? (b) What change took place in the use of the term, and due to what circumstances?

5. What did the Scripturally foretold apostasy result in, and what effect did it have on the superintendence and direction of the Christian congregations?

[*] Douglas' New Bible Dictionary (p. 158) also suggests that "monarchical episcopacy [overseership] appeared in the local congregations when some gifted individual acquired a permanent chairmanship of the board of presbyter-bishops [elder-overseers]."

Also, the Jerusalem Bible, in its footnote on Titus 1:5, says that "in the earliest days each Christian community was governed by a body of elders," and refers to "the transformation of a local assembly ruled by a body . . . into an assembly ruled by a single bishop [overseer]."

6. (a) What is meant by a "monarchical" arrangement as regards the congregations, and what contributed to the development of such an arrangement? (b) Do the Scriptures show that concentration of authority in one person is the Christian way to maintain genuine unity of faith and belief? If not, then what is the means by which to do so?

in one person to the exclusion of others. (Compare 1 Corinthians 4:8.) Jerome (of the fourth century C.E.) is quoted as saying that the supremacy of a single overseer (e·pi'sko·pos) came about 'by custom rather than by the Lord's actual appointment,' being a means used to prevent divisions. Hence, the view was that unity could best be maintained by placing great authority in one person who would, by his increased power, be able to 'keep in line' any who disagreed. (Compare 1 Samuel 8:4-7, 19, 20.) By contrast, the apostle Peter urged fellow elders to shepherd the flock in their mutual care, not "as lording it over those who are God's inheritance, but becoming examples to the flock," humbly submitting to one another. (1 Pet. 5: 1-6) The apostle Paul also shows that it would be by 'holding firmly to the faithful word in his teaching' that an overseer would be able to "exhort by the teaching that is healthful and to reprove those who contradict." They were to show faith in the power of the truth and of God's holy spirit.—Titus 1:7, 9-11, 13; compare 2 Timothy 2:24-26.

[7] Because of the apostasy, the Bible terms used for those serving their brothers in responsible positions in the congregation in time came to take on a different meaning. The Greek term e·pi'sko·pos, meaning "overseer," originally described each and all of the elders who had the duty of looking out for or overseeing the interests of the congregation, caring for their spiritual welfare like a shepherd. (Acts 20:28) But the English word "bishop" (drawn from e·pi'sko·pos through the Latin e·pi'sco·pus) came to stand for a religious official who exercised dominant authority over many congregations in a wide area. This culminated in the development of the papacy in which one overseer, the bishop of Rome, claimed primacy and the sole right to preside over and direct all Christian overseers and congregations everywhere.

[8] Similarly with the word "minister." In Latin this word was used to translate the Greek di·a'ko·nos and, hence, originally meant a "servant," and, in a religious sense, one of the body of congregational "servants" that worked along as assistants to the body of elders. Since then "minister" has come to refer to a religious official who generally has sole and complete administrative authority over a congregation or church (though larger groups might have 'assistant pastors'). He is thus viewed as God's special servant (minister) in that congregation. In many countries today the word "minister" is used almost exclusively of Protestant clergymen, as distinguished from Catholic priests (the term "priest" being drawn from the Greek pre·sby'te·ros [elder] through the Latin pres'by·ter). In Latin America, for example, if a person introduces himself as a "minister" he is often thought of as a Protestant preacher, one who teaches a congregation from a pulpit in a Protestant church building.

[9] Thus a term that initially expressed humility and lowliness has come to be one that implies a relatively high position in the community. In ancient times a Latin-speaking person who introduced himself as a minister might mean thereby that he worked as somebody's house servant, like a butler or maid. But today the title of "minister" is generally one of considerable worldly eminence and prestige, according the person a standing along with men such as doctors, lawyers and professional men in various fields. This is very different from the sense in which the word di·a'ko-

7. What effect did the apostasy have on the use of the Scriptural terms for those having congregational assignments of responsibility? And how was this true of the Greek term for "overseer"?

8. What similar change took place as regards the term "minister"?

9. Contrast the modern idea conveyed by the word "minister" with the meaning the term had in Latin back in the early centuries of the Common Era.

nos is used in quotations of Jesus' statements. As we have seen in preceding articles, in his statements a di·a'ko·nos (servant or minister) is placed along with a "slave" and as the opposite of those viewed as "great" or "first." (Matt. 20:26-28) So, just as with the word "bishop" (e·pi'sko·pos, overseer), ecclesiastical usage has obscured the original meaning of the Latin word mi·nis'ter in the minds of most persons.

[10] What does it mean for us if we are sincere students of God's Word? It means that whenever we read the term "minister" in a translation of the Bible we need to adjust our thinking and recall the original meaning of that term, otherwise we will fail to get the point of Jesus' counsel and of the inspired expressions of his apostles and disciples. Rather than our getting the mental picture of a person in fine or formal dress, having unusual speaking ability and administrative ability, we would get a more fitting mental picture of a di·a'ko·nos or minister (in the original Latin sense of the term) as being that of an unpretentious servant of God walking down a dusty road in the heat of the sun, or perhaps of someone wearing an apron as he served others at a table.—Compare 2 Corinthians 10:10; 1 Corinthians 2:1-5; Luke 17:8.

[11] It is also worthy of mention that many, in fact, most, languages have no term that corresponds to the English word "minister" in its religious sense. Latin-based languages, such as Italian, French, Spanish and Portuguese, do have such a term. But in languages such as German or Dutch or in the languages of Scandinavia (Norwegian, Swedish, Danish) and in the Slavic languages (Polish, Russian and others), as well as in languages of Asia and other parts of the world, there is no corresponding word for "minister." In Germany the ordained clergyman is called "religious servant."

[12] To illustrate, in the English edition of the book Jehovah's Witnesses in the Divine Purpose, page 223, reference is made to the claim that "all of Jehovah's witnesses who regularly and customarily teach and preach the gospel are ministers." In the German edition, the last portion of this statement says that they are "preachers, that is clergymen," and the English word "ministers" is inserted in brackets (Prediger bzw. Geistliche [ministers]). On the same page, in quoting from a communication of the Selective Service System of the United States, in which the term "ministers of religion" is used, the German edition of this book again uses the German word for "preachers" and follows it by the German word for "clergymen" in brackets ("Prediger" [Geistliche]").

[13] Similarly in other cases, when the New World Translation of the Bible was translated into such languages as Danish, German, Dutch and Japanese, in all instances where the English words "minister," "ministry," and the verb forms of "to minister" were used, it was necessary to translate these by terms meaning "servant," "service," or forms of "to serve" in those languages.

[14] In Japanese, for example, a composite word, ho·shi·sha ("humbly-serving person") is used to translate di·a'ko·nos. The expression "ministerial servants" found in the English edition of the New World Translation is rendered in Danish by a Danish word meaning "congregational servants"; in Swedish the expression "assisting servant" is used; while in German the term Dienstamtgehilfe appears, meaning, literally, "service office assistant."

10. (a) What do these ecclesiastical perversions make necessary for us as students of God's Word? (b) If a Bible translation uses the word "minister" to translate the Greek word di·a'ko·nos, what mental picture should the word then bring to our minds?

11, 12. (a) How extensive is the use of the term "minister" in a religious sense throughout the world? (b) How does the German translation of the book Jehovah's Witnesses in the Divine Purpose illustrate problems that can arise in translating this term?

13, 14. (a) Where the New World Translation has been translated into languages not based on or influenced by Latin, what terms are used in place of "minister" and "ministry"? (b) In place of "ministerial servant," what expressions do some of these translations use?

16 Words are simply vehicles used to convey ideas from one mind to another. The important thing is that the correct idea be transmitted. Among Christians in particular, unity of thought and harmony of viewpoint is vital. As the inspired apostle says at 1 Corinthians 1:10: "You should all speak in agreement, and . . . there should not be divisions among you, but [you should] be fitly united in the same mind and in the same line of thought."

16 This gives added reason for our keeping in mind the Bible thought of a humble servant, rather than the common thought of a religious preacher, if we read or make use of the term "minister" as standing for the Greek term di-a'ko-nos. As part of a worldwide congregation, we will try not to formulate our ideas of Christianity or of its standards on the basis of any one term, especially if that term is peculiar to certain languages, but is not found in others. We will always seek to use expressions that are understandable and that clearly express the correct thought. To the degree possible and to the extent that translation allows, these should be expressions that are easily grasped by people of all kinds, wherever they may live or whatever language they may speak. For, as the apostle Paul also said: "Unless you through the tongue utter speech easily understood, how will it be known what is being spoken? You will, in fact, be speaking into the air."—1 Cor. 14:9.

WHERE DOES "ORDINATION" FIT IN?

17 As used in English, the word "ordain" means "to invest with ministerial or sacerdotal [priestly] functions: introduce into the office of the Christian ministry by the laying on of hands or by other forms: set apart by the ceremony of ordination." —Webster's Third New International Dictionary.

18 All those becoming genuine disciples of Christ Jesus become "servants" of God. According to the old meaning of the Latin word, they could all be called "ministers," for the Latin word originally meant the same thing: "servants." As we have seen, however, the Bible does show that some are "servants" in an appointive sense, having a congregational 'appointment' to serve in a particular assignment of service, as in the instance of elders or assistant servants.—Titus 1:5; 1 Tim. 3:1-13.

19 These do not receive such appointment through baptism. The apostle Paul was not referring to baptism when he wrote Timothy, "Never lay your hands hastily upon any man," but was referring to the action of appointing a man to a congregational assignment of service and the responsibility that went with it. (1 Tim. 5:22; compare 1 Timothy 3:1-15.) Paul himself, along with Barnabas, had been 'set apart' for a certain work by holy spirit. The body of elders at Antioch, in recognition of this, then "laid their hands upon them."—Acts 13:1-5; compare the action of the apostles in 'appointing' the "seven certified men" to handle a certain assignment of service, as recorded at Acts 6:1-6.

20 So, while all true Christians (brothers and sisters alike) serve (or "minister"), only some of them are appointed to a particular service in a congregation. But this 15, 16. (a) While not quibbling about words, what proper concern should Christians have as to the use of Bible terms? (b) How will they manifest this in their presentation of the good news to people of all nations?

17. What does the word "ordain" mean?

18, 19. (a) In what sense might all true disciples of Christ Jesus be said to be "ministers"? (b) Do all those who become baptized servants of God receive an "appointment" to particular assignments of congregational service and responsibility?
20, 21. How do the examples of Paul, Timothy and Archippus illustrate that certain congregation members are "servants" or "ministers" in an appointive sense, by congregational assignment?

does not mean that the brothers and sisters who do not have such an appointment are a laity class. When the apostle Paul said: "I set no store by life; I only want to finish the race, and complete the task [di·a·ko·ni'a; the service, Int; the ministry, NW] which the Lord Jesus assigned to me, of bearing my testimony to the gospel," he was evidently referring to the special assignment of service he received to "bring [Jesus'] name before the nations" or Gentiles. (Acts 20:24; 9:15, NE; compare Acts 21:19; 1 Timothy 1:12; Colossians 1:25.) At Romans 11:13 he says: "Forasmuch as I am, in reality, an apostle to the nations, I glorify my ministry [di·a·ko·ni'a; service, Int]."—Compare also Acts 1:15-17, 20-25.

21 Similarly, when Paul wrote to Timothy, "do all the duties of your calling [fully accomplish your ministry (di·a·ko·ni'a), NW]," he was referring to the particular assignment of service entrusted to Timothy in Ephesus, where he was left to help correct certain congregational problems. (2 Tim. 4:5; NE; 1 Tim. 1:3, 4) At Colossians 4:17 (NE) Paul gave "this special word" to Archippus: "Attend to the duty [di·a·ko·ni'a; ministry, NW] entrusted to you in the Lord's service, and discharge it to the full." While all the other disciples there in Colossae were servants of God, Archippus had evidently received some kind of specific assignment of service, doubtless accompanied by the laying on of hands by a body of elders.

"ORDAINED" SERVANTS IN CONGREGATIONS

22 What do we see then? That, though Jesus had many disciples, he selected twelve, 'choosing' and 'appointing' them, as apostles. (Mark 3:14, 15; Luke 6:12, 13; John 15:16) We see that Paul and Barnabas were specially "appointed" from among the disciples in Antioch to carry the good news to the nations. (Acts 13:47) Also, that Paul told the Ephesian elders that they were "appointed" by holy spirit to serve the rest of the congregation. (Acts 20:17, 28) In all these cases such appointment came, not at the time of their baptism, but subsequent thereto. So today there are, in the congregations of God's people, men (usually baptized for some time) who are appointed to serve the congregation in certain assigned capacities. Those who have received such congregational appointments to particular services may be said to be "ordained," in the sense in which the word is used today.*

23 In view of all of this, what should one do if, as at times occurs, a governmental agency inquires into the profession or position of citizens? By them, the expression "ordained minister" is understood to mean one who is an appointed caretaker and server of spiritual things to a congregation, one who acts as a "pastor" or shepherd of a congregation. Dictionaries, for example, give the generally understood ecclesiastical definition of a "minister" as "one authorized to conduct religious services." By the term "minister" such governmental agencies do not describe or mean the service that every individual Christian may perform in his or her personal efforts to share the good news with others. In answering the inquiries, then, one would reasonably reply in harmony with what the official inquirers are seeking to know, rather than imposing one's own definition on such terms.

22. In the sense that the word "ordained" is used today, to whom would it apply, in harmony with Scriptural precedents set by Christ Jesus and his apostles?

* Acts 14:23 speaks of the work of Paul and Barnabas in cities of Asia Minor and says that they "appointed older men [elders] for them in [each] congregation." Here, for the word "appointed," the Authorized Version says "ordained."

23, 24. (a) How do governmental agencies generally understand the expression "ordained minister" as applying, and if this expression came up in an inquiry by them, how should one reply? (b) Would it be reasonable to refer to people in a territory where public witnessing is done as one's "congregation" and to their doorsteps as one's "pulpit"?

[24] People would not expect, for example, a house-to-house publisher to say that the "congregation" that he serves consists of the families in a territory where witnessing is done, inasmuch as the people living in that area may not themselves recognize or accept the one doing the witnessing as their "minister," and may, in fact, belong to a religion of their own. Similarly, would they properly understand the reply if we refer to the doorstep of the people there as the "pulpit" of the bearer of the good news, even if he gives what he calls a 3-minute or a 5-minute "sermon"? Such "pulpit" is generally understood to be the speaker's stand in the building to which the public in general are invited to come.

[25] Of course, if one actually has been appointed by the duly authorized men to a particular position of service, he can so reply and can give, as the time of his "ordination," the date—not of his baptism—but of the time when the Christian appointive body, in effect, 'laid hands upon him' by giving him such appointment.

[26] In the early Christian congregation all baptized believers were "anointed" with holy spirit, having a heavenly calling. Yet not all were apostles, prophets, teachers, elders or ministerial servants. So not all received an official appointment to some particular service after their baptism. Yet all served together, even as a body has many members that all cooperate together and have "the same care for one another," as the apostle points out at 1 Corinthians 12:12-30.

[27] So, then, whether we have qualified for and received such an official appointment to a particular service and responsibility or not, may all of us serve together shoulder to shoulder to accomplish God's will for our time. Let us all treasure and zealously use the privilege we hold in common of speaking the truth to others, sharing with others the good news that has brought light and hope into our lives.

25. If one does have a congregational appointment to service, what date could he give as his date of "ordination"?

26. Did all early Christians have a congregational appointment (or "ordination") to a particular assignment of service, and did this affect their unity?

27. What healthful attitude, then, should all of us gladly take today as regards our service to God and to our fellowman?

A Long Search Ended

JESUS CHRIST on one occasion said: "Keep on seeking, and you will find." (Matt. 7:7) Hence, the person who sincerely and diligently seeks to come into an approved relationship with the Creator will succeed in this. At times, however, this may call for much perseverance in not giving up the search for truth.

This is illustrated in the case of a woman living in a predominantly Moslem country of the Middle East. As a little girl, Melek (Angel) was taught that God provided four books to instruct mankind about his will. These books are the Tevrat (the Law or five books of Moses), Zebur (the Prophets and Hagiographa), Incil (the New Testament or Christian Greek Scriptures) and the Koran. Her curiosity in the Tevrat, Zebur and Incil having been aroused by the instructor, Melek asked him why only the Koran was used even though the other three books had also come from God. He encouraged her not to concern herself about them, pointing out that the Koran was given last and therefore superseded the Tevrat, Zebur and Incil. Melek, however, was not satisfied with this answer.

As she progressed through school, Melek asked other religious instructors about the Tevrat, Zebur and Incil. The answer was always the same, 'These three books are unnecessary.' Upon finishing school, Melek moved to a larger city. There she inquired at various bookstores about the Tevrat, Zebur and Incil, but all her searching was in vain.

Though many years passed, Melek's desire to find the three other holy books mentioned by her instructor did not diminish. Late one night she approached three young women waiting at a bus stop. "What are you three young girls doing out so late at night?" she asked. "We are coming from studying the holy books," they replied. Hopefully, Melek inquired, "Which holy books?" Although now sixty years of age, she was overjoyed when they replied, "Why, the Tevrat, Zebur and Incil." "Those are the books I have been looking for for almost fifty years!" she exclaimed.

But Melek's happiness quickly turned to dismay. Just then the bus pulled up and the girls had to leave. There was no time to exchange addresses or even names.

After having searched for so long, Melek, however, was not going to give up easily. For weeks thereafter she would go to the same bus stop on the same night, waiting and waiting in the hope that she would meet the girls again. But her efforts were fruitless.

Then, one day, Melek entered a tailor's shop. Who should be sitting right across from her? Why, it was one of the three girls! Melek rushed up to her, embraced her, kissed her and declared, "You are the one who has the three holy books. Would you please give them to me?" The young woman, one of Jehovah's witnesses, replied that she would both give them to her and study them with her. Her life's search ended, Melek herself is now helping others to benefit from the three holy books that make up the complete Bible.

● How can Acts 7:16, which ascribes to Abraham the purchase of a burial place in Shechem, be harmonized with Genesis 23:15-19?

It might seem that there is a conflict, with Acts 7:16 saying Abraham bought a burial place in Shechem but Genesis 23:15-19 reporting that he purchased such a plot in Machpelah near Hebron. There are a number of possible explanations. Let us note some of the details.

Soon after Abraham entered the Promised Land (1943 B.C.E.) he resided for a time in Shechem, which was in the northern area where Samaria was later built. (Gen. 12:6-8) When Abraham's wife Sarah later died (1881 B.C.E.), he purchased as a burial place the field and cave of Machpelah, which was near Hebron to the south of Jerusalem. "Abraham buried Sarah his wife in the cave of the field of Machpelah in front of Mamre, that is to say, Hebron, in the land of Canaan." (Gen. 23:15-19) In time Abraham, Isaac, Rebekah and Leah were also buried there.—Gen. 25:9; 49:29-32.

Abraham's grandson Jacob also dwelt for a while near Shechem, and he there purchased a tract of land and built an altar. (Gen. 33:18-20) When he was near death in Egypt, Jacob commanded his sons that he be buried, not in Shechem, but with his fathers in the plot that Abraham had purchased near Hebron. (Gen. 49:29-32; 50:12, 13) As to a burial in Shechem, Joshua 24:32 says that after the Israelites entered the Promised Land they buried Joseph's bones "in Shechem in the tract of the field that Jacob had acquired," which came to be in the territory of Joseph's son Manasseh.

With this history in mind, we can note Acts 7:15, 16. In his masterful defense the Christian disciple Stephen said: "Jacob went down into Egypt. And he deceased; and so did our forefathers, and they [the "forefathers"] were transferred to Shechem and were laid in the tomb that Abraham had bought for a price with silver money from the sons of Hamor in Shechem." So it might appear that Stephen was saying that Abraham, rather than Jacob, purchased land in Shechem. Yet Genesis 23:17, 18 tells us that Abraham bought a burial place in Machpelah near Hebron.

Certain scholars believe that in addition to the purchase of the plot of land in Hebron, Abraham could have also obtained the land in Shechem where Jehovah appeared to him and where he then built an altar. (Gen. 12:7) If so, then this may have been the same land that Genesis 33:18, 19 mentions Jacob as buying from those who controlled it at that time. This view would eliminate any seeming problem with Acts 7:16.

Another approach is that Stephen may simply have been condensing two accounts, combining Abraham's transaction at Genesis 23:15-19 and the purchase by Jacob mentioned at Genesis 33:18, 19. Giving some weight to this possibility is the fact that at Acts 7:7 Stephen evidently combined into one statement something God said to Abraham and something He said to Moses. (Gen. 15:14; Ex. 3:12) Thus Acts 7:16 may just be a condensed or elliptical statement that was sufficient for Stephen's purpose, as was Acts 7:7.

Another possible solution can be considered. Abraham was Jacob's grandfather. So, even though Genesis 33:18, 19 says that Jacob purchased land at Shechem, Stephen could have ascribed the purchase to Abraham the patriarchal head. Giving credence to this are other instances in the Bible where the names of forefathers were applied to and used for the descendants.—Hos. 11:1, 3, 12; Matt. 2:15-18.

Each one of these possibilities may be the solution to the seeming conflict between Acts 7:16 and Genesis 23:15-19. The fact that a number of plausible explanations are available emphasizes how unreasonable it would be for anyone today who does not have all the facts to conclude that Stephen was in error.

coverage of our territory in the preaching work, also be concerned about the different Bible studies that are being conducted in the congregation.

Q Are there other elders in the Fremont North Congregation at present?

A Yes.

Q Approximately how many?

A I would say 12.

Q And what is the approximate size of the congregation today?

A About 110.

Q If we were to go back in time to the mid-1990s, do you have an estimate then as to the number of elders, approximately?

A I would estimate eight, but it's just an estimation.

Q And the size of the congregation at that time, approximately 15 to 20 years ago.

A I'm sure those records might be available, but I would hesitate to guess.

Q Do you have a general impression as to whether the membership has grown larger in that specific congregation since the mid-1990s, smaller or is about the same?

A There have certainly been a lot of new ones that have come in but others have moved away, so it might be fair to say that it was around the same.

Q You mentioned the term "service overseer." What is a service overseer?

A A service overseer is a -- an appointment as an -- he must be an elder, and it's an appointment to oversee the departments that I mentioned to you, literature, and we call our -- preaching work is our service to God. So anything that involves the preaching work would be something that I would be quite interested in.

Q To become an elder, is there a process of, I'll call it like a ladder, steps in a ladder that one must go through in preparation for assuming that title and position?

A Well, what we use are the Bible requirements. All of Jehovah's Witnesses, before they're baptized, must take a knowledge, repent, act upon the knowledge, obey what they find from the Scriptures. But in addition to that, elders would be those that reach out for additional responsibilities, and these are outlined -- these qualifications for elders are outlined in First Timothy, Chapter 3.

Q Can you tell me what they are?

A Some of them are, sure.

Qualifications are that they would, first of all, be desirous of a fine work, so it is work-involved. We're not paid for the effort that we put forth, but we do it freely and willingly. And we would not be irreprehensible -- or we would need to be irreprehensible. We would need to be a husband and one wife. We would need to be orderly. We would need to be not given to a lot of wine, not -- and if I had the Bible I could do a little bit more justice to the -- but they're found there in First Timothy, Chapter 3, Verses 1 through, say, 10.

Q Who selects elders?
A The local Body of Elders observes individuals and then we will discuss them as a body, and ultimately we will send a recommendation into the branch office and the traveling brother that assists us at this time would be the circuit overseer, and so we would submit a request for this recommendation to be approved.
Q All right. You used the word "branch office," and I'm not sure what that refers to. Please tell me.
A Okay. Yes. It's -- the worldwide organization of Jehovah's Witnesses has a headquarters which is in New York, and there is where the United States branch happens to be, but also they oversee the entire work, the global work of Jehovah's Witnesses.
Q Is that organization The Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York?
Actually let me -- I see you are puzzled. Let me withdraw the question and ask you, back in the mid-1990s, was that organization The Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York?
A I -- it might be New York or it might be Pennsylvania. I think it was -- I'm not sure.
Q Fair enough.
A Yeah.
Q Do you as an elder -- strike that. Let me start over.
Have you as an elder recommended other persons to be nominated to the position of elder during your years of service?
A Yes. I have been on the body that has recommended others.
Q And to whom is such a recommendation directed?
A To the branch office.
Q And is the branch office located somewhere other than New York or is it in New York to your understanding?
A It's in New York.
Q Has that process changed during the many years that you have been an elder?
A No.
Q You mentioned the term "circuit overseer," and can you describe for me what a circuit overseer is?
A Yes. He is a traveling elder. He visits -- generally he has a circuit of 20 congregations, and so he would like to visit these twice a year, and we look forward to these visits, and during this time he gives counsel from the branch to the elders, to the ministerial servants, and this counsel is appreciated.
He -- he agrees to travel to the various congregations, and in some cases they house him in maybe a room that they have, and if he has a wife, he and his wife. And in some cases they may have an apartment attached to a Kingdom Hall that they could use, and he does not get any reimburse -- well, he does not get any salary for his work. He's a sponsible for their own children, others in the congregation may also wish to help young ones who are motivated from the heart to share in the Kingdom-preaching work. If you are a parent, your fine example in the field ministry will do much to encourage your children to be zealous in their service to God. When a child is exemplary in his conduct and is able to make a personal expression of his faith by speaking to others about the good news, being moved from the heart to do so, what further help can be given?

It would be in order for the parent to approach one of the elders on the service committee of the congregation and discuss whether the child is qualified to be counted as a publisher. If the child has a basic knowledge of Bible truth and gives evidence of wanting to share in Kingdom service, this would indicate good progress has been made. After that elder has considered these and other factors similar to those that apply to adults, he can determine whether the child's field service reports may be accepted, so that he may be recognized as a publisher with the congregation.—Luke 6:45; Rom. 10:10.

REPORTING ON THE PROGRESS OF THE MINISTRY

Progressive reports on the worldwide expansion of pure worship have been a source of genuine encouragement for Jehovah's people over the years. From the time Jesus first told his disciples that the good news would have to be preached throughout all the earth, true Christians have been vitally concerned with knowing how this would be accomplished.—Matt. 28:19, 20; Mark 13:10; Acts 1:8.

Early followers of Jesus Christ took interest in reports of progress in the preaching work. (Mark 6:30) As the work prospered, statistical reports were compiled along with accounts of outstanding experiences of those having a share in preaching the good news. The Bible book of Acts tells us that there were about 120 persons present when holy spirit was poured out on the disciples at Pentecost. Soon the number of disciples grew to 3,000 and then to 5,000. The encouraging report was made that "Jehovah continued to join to them daily those being saved," and that "a great crowd of priests began to be obedient to the faith." (Acts 2:5-11, 41, 47; 6:7; 1:15; 4:4) What fine encouragement the news of these increases must have brought to the disciples! How these exciting reports must have impelled them to move ahead further with their divinely commissioned work in spite of severe persecution spearheaded by the Jewish religious leaders!

About 60-61 C.E. Paul reported in his letter to the Colossians that the good news was "bearing fruit and increasing in all the world" and "was preached in all creation that is under heaven." (Col. 1:6, 23) The Christians had been obedient to the Word, and holy spirit had empowered them to accomplish a worldwide preaching work before the end of the Jewish system of things in 70 C.E. How encouraging it was for those faithful Christian workers to hear reports of what was being accomplished! A seemingly impossible task had been completed and no doubt those having a share in the work sensed an expression of 'Well done!' from the Master.—Matt. 25:21.

In like manner, Jehovah's modern-day organization endeavors to keep precise records of the work being done in fulfillment of Matthew 24:14, which says: "And this good news of the kingdom will be preached in all the inhabited earth for a witness to all the nations; and then the end will come." As dedicated servants of God we have an urgent work to do. Are you not personally interested in seeing to it that the ministry is accomplished thoroughly before the end comes? Of course, Jehovah will see to it that this work is completed, but will we have a share and will we receive Jehovah's smile of approval? Will we hear his pronouncement, "Well done"?

YOUR PERSONAL FIELD SERVICE REPORT

What, exactly, are we to report? The Field Service Report slip provided by the Society indicates what information is to be included, but perhaps the following general comments, along with additional clarifications that are set out from time to time in Our Kingdom Ministry, will prove to be helpful.

In the columns with the headings "Books," "Booklets" and "Individual Magazines," list the total number of any of these items that you placed with people who are not dedicated, baptized Witnesses. Brochures are counted as booklets.

Both new and renewal subscriptions obtained from unbaptized people are reported on your Field Service Report slip in the column under the heading "Subs." Please turn these in to the person handling subscriptions in the congregation at the very first opportunity. The congregation should promptly mail subscriptions to the Society each week to ensure the best service to subscribers.

In reporting "Return Visits" count the total number of return calls made for the purpose of further stimulating interest previously shown by people who are not dedicated, baptized Witnesses. (An exception would be where you conduct a home Bible study with an inactive brother or sister at the direction of one of the Congregation Service Committee. Also, you may report return visits for studies conducted with a newly baptized person who has not finished studying two of the Society's publications.) The return visit could be not only by a visit to someone's home but also in the form of a letter, a telephone call or the delivery of some literature, such as the latest issue of a magazine. Each time a home Bible study is conducted it should be counted as a return visit. In order to count a return visit, you would need to contact the particular individual who showed interest previously.

Although Bible studies are usually conducted regularly at least once each week, they are reported only once each month. At the end of each month, please make out a Study Report slip for each home Bible study you have conducted during the month with people who are not dedicated, baptized Witnesses. (See exceptions in the following paragraph.) After filling out each slip completely and accurately, write the total number of these Bible studies in the box at the lower right-hand corner of your Field Service Report slip. The number you indicate on the Field Service Report slip and the number of Study Report slips you turn in will be the same.

It is important to make an accurate report of "Hours of Field Service." Basically, this is the time you spend in the house-to-house ministry, engaging in street witnessing, making return visits, conducting Bible studies or otherwise witnessing informally or publicly to people who are not dedicated and baptized Witnesses. (An exception would be where you conduct a home Bible study with an inactive brother or sister at the direction of one of the Congregation Service Committee. Also, you may continue reporting a study being conducted with a newly baptized person who has not finished studying two of the Society's publications.) If a publisher works in areas or in situations where it is not wise to be alone and it is, therefore, necessary for another publisher to accompany him, both may count the time if both share in giving the witness. There are other essential activities for which time is not counted, such as getting ready for field service, attending the meeting for field service and traveling to and from the territory.

Your field service time should start when you begin your witness work and end when you finish your last call in each witnessing period. Time taken for refreshments or meals during a period of field service is not to be counted. Auxiliary, regular and special pioneers, as well as missionaries, have hour requirements to meet. Congregation publishers are encouraged likewise to put Kingdom interests first and exert themselves in the ministry to accomplish all that they can in the field according to their individual circumstances. All of Jehovah's dedicated servants endeavor to be whole-souled in the ministry. (Col. 3:23) Those giving public talks may count the time spent delivering these, and a parent may count up to one hour each week when studying with his or her undedicated children.

CONGREGATION'S PUBLISHER RECORD FILE

Your individual field service report for each month is compiled and recorded on a Congregation's Publisher Record card that is kept as a part of the congregation's files. These cards are not personal property. If you should move to another congregation, you may ask the secretary of the new congregation where you will be associating to write to the secretary of the congregation from which you moved and request the transfer of your record of activity. This will serve to introduce you to the elders of that congregation and they will then be in a better position to continue giving needed spiritual assistance. If you are to be away from the congregation for a short period of less than three months, please continue to send your field service reports regularly to your home congregation.

When a person who has been having a home Bible study wants to go in the field service for the first time, this makes us rejoice. However, before he does so, the elders will want to make sure that the individual qualifies to be a publisher and that he or she really appreciates what it means to be publicly identified as associated with Jehovah's Witnesses. So the presiding overseer will arrange to have two elders (one being a member of the service committee) discuss this matter with the individual and with the brother or sister who is studying with him. (See page 98.) This will enable them to get better acquainted with him and to commend him warmly for the progress he is making.

In this discussion the elders can mention that the secretary keeps the field service records of the congregation. He and the other elders take a keen interest in all field service reports that are turned in each month. It would be appropriate to explain to the individual that when a Bible student reports field service for the first time and qualifies as an unbaptized publisher, a Congregation's Publisher Record card is made out in his behalf and included in the congregation's file. The elders can then warmly welcome the individual as one who has a desire to become an active associate with Jehovah's Witnesses. (Rom. 15:7) Getting better acquainted with the new publisher in this way and taking a keen interest in what he has accomplished can have a fine influence on the individual. It may move him toward making even greater efforts to serve Jehovah and to turn in field service reports regularly each month.—Phil. 2:4; Heb. 13:2.

WHY WE REPORT OUR FIELD SERVICE

Do you sometimes forget to turn in your field service report? No doubt all of us need occasional reminders. But if we cultivate a proper attitude toward reporting our field ministry, and if we understand why it is important to do so, it may become easier for us to remember to make proper reports of our field service.

Someone has asked: "Since Jehovah knows what I am doing in his service, why do I need to make a report to the congregation?" True, Jehovah knows what each one is doing and he is able to judge whether our service is whole-souled or if it is just a token of what we are really able to do. Even so, the Bible reveals that Jehovah has always had a record kept of the activities of his servants. He recorded the number of days that Noah spent in the ark and the number of years the Israelites journeyed in the wilderness. God kept account of the number of those who were faithful as well as of those who disobeyed. He recorded the progressive conquest of the land of Canaan and the accomplishments of the faithful judges of Israel. Yes, he recorded many details regarding the deeds and accomplishments of his servants. He inspired this written record of what took place, making clear to us his view of making reports and keeping accurate records.*

There are a number of reasons why we report our field service today. Although these reports obviously do not include all that we do in serving Jehovah, what is reported serves a most practical purpose toward helping all within the organization and especially the local elders and the Society.

At times reports may indicate that particular attention needs to be given to certain aspects of our ministry. The figures may show that there has been progress in some activities but that publisher increase or growth in other areas has slowed down. Encouragement may be needed or it could be that there are problems to be resolved. Responsible overseers will take note of reports and endeavor to rectify any condition that may be hindering the progress of individuals or of the congregation as a whole.

Also, reports are beneficial organizationally in determining just where there is a greater need for workers in the field. What areas are more productive? Where is little progress being made? What publications are needed to help people to learn the truth? Reports enable the Society to project literature needs for different areas of the world and then keep ahead of the need so that there is not a shortage of Bibles or Bible literature for use in the preaching work.

For most of us reports mean encouragement.

* Many historical events recorded in the Bible demonstrate the exactness of reports and records kept by Jehovah's name people. In many cases the full impact of the Bible account could not be conveyed without the specific numbers being reported. Consider the following examples: Genesis 46:27 and Exodus 12:37; Judges 7:7; 2 Kings 19:35; 2 Chronicles 14:9-13; John 6:10; 21:11; Acts 2:41; 19:19.

Are we not thrilled when we hear about the work our brothers are doing in getting the good news preached worldwide? Reports of increases in numbers of publishers help us to get an overall view of the expansion of Jehovah's organization. Individual experiences warm our heart and fill us with zeal, moving us also to have a full share in the preaching work. (Acts 15:3) So our individual cooperation with the congregation in turning in field service reports is important. It shows our concern for the brothers everywhere and in this small way we demonstrate our submission to Jehovah's organizational arrangement. —Matt. 24:45-47.

SETTING PERSONAL GOALS

There is no reason for us to become competitive in making our reports, comparing our service with that of another individual. Individual circumstances vary greatly, making it unwise for us to make such comparisons. On the other hand, we can derive much benefit from setting realistic personal goals for ourselves. These can give us a valuable basis for measuring our own progress in the ministry. Also, if our personal goals are realistic and set according to our individual circumstances, attaining these goals can give us the satisfaction that comes with accomplishment.

SHARE IN A FINAL REPORT

Regarding a symbolic work that was in a way prophetic of the preaching work we are doing today, we are told that a report was made when the work was finished. In prophetic vision Ezekiel saw six men with smashing weapons in their hands coming forth to execute judgment upon apostate Jerusalem. But then he saw a seventh man come forth also. This one had a secretary's inkhorn with him and he was told: "Pass through the midst of the city, through the midst of Jerusalem, and you must put a mark on the foreheads of the men that are sighing and groaning over all the detestable things that are being done in the midst of it." After finishing his work of marking those who were to be saved from execution by the men with the smashing weapons, the man with the secretary's inkhorn returned to make a report, saying: "I have done just as you have commanded me."—Ezek. 9:1-11.

We do not know what final report Jehovah will request from his dedicated people when it comes to making a permanent record of the grand preaching work accomplished during the time of the end in fulfillment of Matthew 24:14. However, we can personally show our respect for his present organizational arrangement and demonstrate our appreciation for the small part we are allowed to have in the ministry by conscientiously reporting our field service regularly each month. It is recommended that all publishers of the good news promptly report their service activity at the end of each month. If this is done it will be greatly appreciated by the brothers who are assigned to compile the congregation field service report for mailing to the Society.

It is obvious that Jehovah is now, indeed, speeding up the ingathering of those people he will protect through "the great tribulation." We are living in the time of fulfillment of Isaiah's prophecy in this regard: "The little one himself will become a thousand, and the small one a mighty nation. I myself, Jehovah, shall speed it up in its own time." (Rev. 7:9, 14; Isa. 60:22)

As part of the worldwide association of brothers entrusted with the ministry, we want to be able to report as did the visionary man with the secretary's inkhorn: "I have done just as you have commanded me."—Ezek. 9:11.

WAYS TO EXPAND YOUR MINISTRY

WHEN the time came for Jesus to send his disciples out as Kingdom preachers, he said to them: "Yes, the harvest is great, but the workers are few." There was much work to be done, and so he added: "Beg the Master of the harvest to send out workers into his harvest." (Matt. 9: 37, 38) As Jesus instructed the disciples on how to go about their ministry there was a ring of urgency in his words. He said: "You will by no means complete the circuit of the cities of Israel until the Son of man arrives."—Matt. 10:23.

Today, also, there is a great need in the field of the Christian ministry. Time is running out and this good news of the Kingdom must be preached before the end comes. (Mark 13:10) Since the field is the world, it becomes clear that we are faced with a situation quite similar to that experienced by Jesus and his disciples, only on a much larger scale. We, too, are few in number in comparison with the world of mankind, but we can be sure that Jehovah's hand is not short with regard to his ability to have the Kingdom good news declared throughout the inhabited earth. The good news will be preached and the end will come on schedule according to Jehovah's own purpose. But will we be found faithful in having discharged our responsibility

Attorney for Defendant WATCHTOWER

SUPERIOR COURT OF THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA
COUNTY OF ALAMEDA

JANE DOE, Plaintiff, v. WATCHTOWER BIBLE AND TRACT SOCIETY OF NEW York, INC., FREMONT CONGREGATION OF JEHOVAH'S WITNESSES, NORTH UNIT, et al, Defendants.	Case No.: HG115558324 DECLARATION OF ALLEN SHUSTER

I, Allen Shuster, after being duly sworn, depose and state that if called to testify in this matter I would competently testify as follows:

1. I am over 21 years of age, of sound mind, and competent to make this Affidavit. I have personal knowledge of the matters contained herein, and they are all true and correct.

2. I reside in Patterson, New York, and have served as an elder in the faith of Jehovah's Witnesses since about 1979.

3. On April 23, 1976, I began serving at the U.S. branch offices of Jehovah's Witnesses in New York. I have served in the Service Department of the U.S. branch offices since February 5, 1981. I provide spiritual assistance to congregation elders who call or write the Service Department for help. Prior to March 2001, the spiritual assistance provided by the Service Department, along with the appointment of elders and ministerial servants, was communicated to congregations of Jehovah's Witnesses through the Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc. ("Watchtower"). Since March 2001, this has been communicated through the Christian Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses.

4. My duties in the Service Department include monitoring the organization, functioning, and staffing of congregations of Jehovah's Witnesses, including reviewing the qualifications for the appointment of elders and ministerial servants to congregations of Jehovah's Witnesses in the United States.

MEMBERS OF CONGREGATIONS

5. All congregations of Jehovah's Witnesses are composed of individuals and families who gather together to worship in buildings called "Kingdom Halls."

6. There is no age requirement for baptism, but Jehovah's Witnesses do not practice infant baptism. Their youth are not typically baptized until they are old and mature enough to make an independent determination about their religious beliefs, often not until their teenage years.

7. An ordinary member of the congregation is called a "publisher." Publishers are called that because they "publish" the good news of the Bible by engaging in public ministry.

8. Congregations may have both baptized and unbaptized publishers, but only baptized publishers are considered to be congregation members.

9. There is no predetermined number of hours a publisher is required to spend in public ministry.

10. Individuals spend as much time in the public ministry as their heart motivates them to spend.

11. There is no requirement for publishers to place any amount of literature.

12. Before an individual, man, woman, or child, is recognized as an unbaptized publisher, two congregation elders briefly meet with that person (and his or her parents in the case of a minor) to determine whether he or she believes the Bible is the inspired Word of God, knows basic Bible teachings, is living in harmony with the Bible's prohibitions against immorality, drunkenness, and drug abuse, and wants to be one of Jehovah's Witnesses. Thereafter, the two elders who meet with the individual determine whether he or she qualifies to be recognized as an unbaptized publisher in the congregation.

13. This procedure for becoming an unbaptized publisher came into existence when it was announced in the November 15, 1988, issue of The Watchtower. Prior to that time, the individual publisher who studied the Bible with an interested person decided when that interested person could be invited to accompany the congregation in the field ministry as an approved associate of Jehovah's Witnesses.

14. There is no application form to fill out to become an unbaptized publisher.

15. Neither Watchtower nor the U.S. branch offices of Jehovah's Witnesses review or approve whether an individual is qualified to be recognized as an unbaptized or baptized publisher, nor does Watchtower or the U.S. branch offices of Jehovah's Witnesses maintain a list of unbaptized or baptized publishers.

16. After a person turns in his or her first field service report to a congregation's elders, an announcement is made during one of the weekday congregation meetings that the person is a new unbaptized publisher in the congregation. The procedure to announce a new unbaptized publisher to the congregation came into existence when it was announced in the November 15, 1988, issue of The Watchtower. Prior to that date no announcement was made when an individual became an approved associate.

CONGREGATION ELDERS AND MINISTERIAL SERVANTS

17. There is no paid clergy class at Watchtower, the U.S. branch offices of Jehovah's Witnesses, or in congregations of Jehovah's Witnesses. Men who qualify are appointed to serve a congregation as ministerial servants and then as elders. The appointed men who provide spiritual direction to the congregation members are the elders. Ministerial servants help elders by providing administrative functions in the congregation.

18. Jehovah's Witnesses are not automatically appointed to serve as congregation elders. They must meet qualifications as follows: Before a male member of the congregation can be considered for appointment as a ministerial servant, he must be baptized as one of Jehovah's Witnesses. The individual must then gain further knowledge of the Holy Scriptures and show a willingness to be used to assist others in the congregation. If he shows such willingness and meets the Scriptural qualifications stated in 1Timothy 3:8-13, he may qualify to be appointed as a ministerial servant. Although a ministerial servant would not provide spiritual supervision to the congregation, he could be assigned tasks to assist congregation elders as they carry out their duties.

19. In time—perhaps after many years—a ministerial servant who has faithfully carried out his assignments and has gained experience may meet the qualifications of a congregation elders as outlined in the Bible. When this occurs, the congregation elders will recommend to the circuit overseer (a representative of the Branch office who is also an experienced elder) that the ministerial servant be appointed as an elder in the congregation. If the circuit overseer agrees with the recommendation, he will forward it to the Branch office's Service Department. Approved elders in the Service Department review the recommendation in accord with the guidelines outlined in the Holy Scriptures, adopted by the Governing Body of Jehovah's Witnesses. The Branch office then informs the local congregation's body of elders, in writing, of their determination about the recommendation.

20. The responsibilities of ministerial servants include handling the congregation literature, congregation accounts, and congregation territory for the public ministry, caring for microphone and sound equipment during meetings, serving as attendants during congregation meetings, and maintaining the physical appearance and cleanliness of the Kingdom Hall.

21. Those who serve as elders and ministerial servants are all volunteers and none of them are paid for their service nor do they receive any reimbursement for their transportation, living, or meal expenses.

22. Neither Watchtower, the U.S. branch offices of Jehovah's Witnesses, nor any congregations of Jehovah's Witnesses have any paid employees, and as previously noted, there is no paid clergy class (Matthew 10:8).

23. At least twice a year, the body of elders of a congregation meets together to review the qualifications of the men in the congregation who might qualify to serve as an elder or ministerial servant.

24. Elders are recommended from among the ministerial servants in the congregation who meet the spiritual qualifications found at 1 Timothy 3:1-7 and Titus 1:5-9.

25. Ministerial servants are recommended from male members of the congregation who are not serving as elders or ministerial servants and meet the spiritual qualifications found at 1 Timothy 3:8-10, 12, 13.

26. During all times relevant to this lawsuit local elders' recommendations for new elders and ministerial servants had to be approved by the Service Department at the U.S. branch offices of Jehovah's Witnesses in New York before they could be appointed.

27. During all times relevant to this lawsuit, all appointments of elders and ministerial servants in the United States were communicated by the Service Department to congregations through Watchtower.

28. If an individual is appointed to serve as a congregation elder, a letter of appointment from the Branch office is read to the congregation. At this time the newly appointed elder is officially vested with ministerial authority in the congregation.

29. Jehovah's Witnesses who serve as appointed elders are recognized as ordained congregation elders.

30. Elders are responsible for providing spiritual supervision to the congregations, which includes hearing confessions and other confidential spiritual communications made to them by members of the congregation who seek spiritual counsel, advice or comfort. Their authorization to do so comes from the Holy Scriptures and from the Governing Body of Jehovah's Witnesses.

31. According to the religious beliefs and practices of Jehovah's Witnesses, congregation elders, as ordained ministers, are expected to keep confession and other confidential spiritual communications confidential. An elder who reveals a confession or other confidential spiritual communication without the express permission of the one making the confession or confidential spiritual communication would usually be disqualified from continuing to serve as an elder.

32. At all times relevant to this case, the Fremont North Congregation elders occasionally communicated with elders serving in the Branch Office's Service Department, as well as with elders serving as circuit or district overseers, to receive spiritual counsel and advice on applying the religious doctrine and procedures of Jehovah's Witnesses to issues concerning the congregation and its members. The religious beliefs of these elders also require that any confidential spiritual communications between elders serving in the Branch Office's Service Department, elders serving as circuit or district overseers, and congregation elders must be kept strictly confidential. The spiritual counsel and advice given by the elders serving in the Branch Office's Service Department, elders serving as circuit or district overseers, and congregation elders is based on Jehovah's Witnesses' understanding of the Bible.

INVESTIGATIONS, JUDICIAL COMMITTEES, DISCIPLINE

33. The elders of congregations of Jehovah's Witnesses are also responsible for conducting what are referred to as "judicial investigations" when a member of a congregation is accused of serious Scriptural wrongdoing. Judicial investigations are carried out by two elders selected by the congregation body of elders, as occurred when Jonathan Kendrick was investigated in 1993 by elders in the Fremont North Congregation.

34. The goal of a judicial investigation is to make certain that the Christian congregation remains spiritually and morally clean. (James 1:26) In doing so, if the elders confirm that serious Scriptural wrongdoing has occurred, a judicial committee of at least three elders is selected by the congregation body of elders to endeavor to provide spiritual assistance to the congregant who may have sinned, with the hope of assisting them to regain their spirituality and relationship with God. (Galatians 6:1, 2) At times, a judicial committee will determine that an accused congregant should be spiritually disciplined internally, based on Jehovah's Witnesses' understanding of the Bible.

35. In the case of the investigation of Jonathan Kendrick in 1993, the elders did not form a judicial committee because the assertion of child sexual abuse was not confirmed. However, the assertion by Andrea, Kendrick's step-daughter, was sufficient to disqualify him from continuing to serve as a ministerial servant since he was no longer "free from accusation."

36. Spiritual discipline administered by elders of Jehovah's Witnesses serving on a judicial committee is based solely on Jehovah's Witnesses' understanding of the Bible as applied to the facts of the matter. Where a serious sin is involved and the accused person is repentant, the judicial committee may recommend private or public reproof. But if the person who committed a serious sin cannot be brought back to repentance, the individual will have to be disfellowshipped. When a member is subject to public reproof or disfellowshipping, an announcement is made during a congregation meeting simply to the effect that "[name] has been reproved" or "[name] is no longer one of Jehovah's Witnesses."

37. Spiritual discipline administered by elders serving on an investigative committee is likewise based solely on Jehovah's Witnesses' understanding of the Bible as applied to the facts. When an accusation disqualifies a servant from continuing to serve, he is removed as a servant and an announcement is made during a congregation meeting to the effect that "[name] is no longer serving as [ministerial servant/elder]."

CONFIDENTIAL COMMUNICATIONS

38. Jehovah's Witnesses recognize the Bible's admonition to confess ones sins to God. 1 John 1:8, 9 ("If we confess our sins, he is faithful and righteous so as to forgive us our sins and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness.").

39. In addition Jehovah's Witnesses also believe that there can be much benefit from speaking to the congregation elders ("older men") regarding confidential matters. James 5:13-16 ("Is there anyone suffering evil among YOU? Let him carry on prayer. Is there anyone in good spirits? Let him sing psalms. Is there anyone sick among YOU? Let him call the older men of the congregation to [him], and let them pray over him, greasing [him] with oil in the name of Jehovah. And the prayer of faith will make the indisposed one well, and Jehovah will raise him up. Also, if he has committed sins, it will be forgiven him. Therefore openly confess YOUR sins to one another and pray for one another, that YOU may get healed."). Jehovah's Witnesses view confessions and other confidential and private communications of a spiritual nature between congregants and elders as communications that elders must keep confidential. Proverbs 25:9.

40. Jehovah's Witnesses do not believe that the confidentiality of spiritual communications they may have with the congregation elders is limited to confessions. Rather, as outlined in James 5:13-16, Jehovah's Witnesses are encouraged to seek the spiritual counsel and advice of the elders in a variety of life situations. Congregation elders are also encouraged to seek spiritual counsel and advice from elders serving in the Branch Office's Service Department, or from elders serving as circuit or district overseers, in order to receive spiritual counsel and advice as to how to apply the religious doctrine and procedures of Jehovah's Witnesses to issues concerning the congregation and its members, and on occasion congregation elders seek such spiritual counsel and advice. Such confidential spiritual communications from congregation elders are only handled by elders in the Branch Office Service Department.

41. If a servant is recommended by the elder body to be removed, the body of elders forwards a notice containing their recommendation of removal to the Branch Office elders, who, if they agree, confirm the removal in writing to the elders.

42. If a congregation member is disfellowshipped, the judicial committee elders forward a notice of disfellowshipping to Branch Office elders for their review to ensure that their decision was spiritually based and well founded. The notice of disfellowshipping has the name of the disfellowshipped person, the date of disfellowshipping, and the Scriptural basis for disfellowshipping.

43. Jehovah's Witnesses view all such spiritual communications about removal and disfellowshipping as confidential communications that must be kept strictly confidential.

44. Elders do not allow unnecessary third parties to be a party to a confidential communication. At times more than one elder may be a party to the conversation. For instance, it is Jehovah's Witnesses religious belief and practice to have at least two elders present during a judicial investigation and at least three elders present during a judicial committee. (Deuteronomy 17:6; Deuteronomy 19:15; Matthew 18:15-17; 2 Corinthians 13:1; 1 Timothy 5:19) Jehovah's Witnesses believe that men are imperfect and, therefore, three elders serving on a judicial committee can provide more full and complete spiritual counsel and advice based on a broader range of experience and knowledge than can a single elder alone. Before one becomes one of Jehovah's Witnesses, he is made aware of this provision. Your Word Is a Lamp To My Foot, pages 176-79; Organization for Kingdom-Preaching and Disciple-Making, pages 159-65; Organized to Accomplish Our Ministry, pages 145-47; Organized To Do Jehovah's

Will, pages 151-2. In addition, there may be instances where a husband and wife, or a parent and child, may together seek or be provided with spiritual counsel, advice or comfort from the elders. The elders and participants to these confidential and private spiritual communications would view these communications as confidential and congregants expect the elders to keep such communications strictly confidential.

45. The religious doctrine of Jehovah's Witnesses requires that all elders keep confidential and private spiritual communication strictly confidential. The Watchtower, April 1, 1971, pages 222-224; Kingdom Ministry, July 1975; The Watchtower, December 15, 1975, pages 764-66; The Watchtower, September 1, 1983, pages 21-26; The Watchtower, September 15, 1989, pages 10-15; The Watchtower, September 1, 1991, pages 22-27; The Watchtower, November 15, 1991, pages 19-23. An elder who reveals the contents of such a confidential communication may be subject to removal.

46. In this case, the Letter to All Bodies of Elders dated July 1, 1989, PE 1 and WE R, provides a reminder to the elders of their duty to maintain the confidential nature of confidential communications.

Dear Brothers,

We are writing to you regarding a case of child abuse. We telephoned 11/12/93 and it was suggested that we submit in writing our questions.

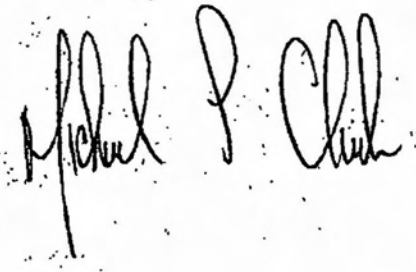
We met on 11/11/93 with Jonathan Kendrick, a ministerial servant, who confessed to child abuse with his 15 yr old step daughter. The abuse occurred approximately 4 months ago. He confessed to touching the breast of his step daughter while she was sleeping. She was awaken instantly and knew what had happened. His wife was informed that evening and the 3 of them talked it out between them. Brother Kendrick thought since he was sorry and his family was willing to forget the abuse, he would not have to report it to the congregation elders. He said that his conscious continued to bother him.

Evelyn, his wife, is baptized but inactive. She occasionally attends meetings.

Andrea, the step daughter, is not baptized and is no longer an unbaptized publisher. The step daughter is now using this as a tool to threaten with when she wants something. Because she has been promiscuous with 2 boys at school, the parents have tried to enforce house rules covering her comings and goings.

Andrea has recently mentioned the abuse to another young girl, Toy Register, whom she attends school with. Coincidentally, Toy attends our congregation meetings and is studying. Her mother is disfellowshipped. Toy mentioned the abuse to her mother and added that Brother Kendrick on another occasion had accidentally touched her chest but admitted that it was not intentional. Mrs Register is now threatening to call the police.

Here are the facts as best as we can present them without interviewing each party. Our questions are as follows:



1. Can 2 elders handle this matter with Brother Kendrick as mentioned on page 93 of "Pay attention to Yourselves....Flock", under the heading Uncleanness? Or do we have to form a Judicial hearing because of it being child abuse?

2. We assume that Brother Kendrick does not qualify any longer as a Ministerial Servant. We will announce to the congregation that he is no longer serving as such. If this is incorrect, please inform us.

3. The legal department has given us some direction as far as our legal requirements and we will follow that closely.

We will wait to hear from you regarding the above questions. If I have not been clear enough, you may reach me during the day at my work phone (510-462-7861 ext 105)

C/O MICHAEL J CLARKE

Dear Brothers:

Your letter dated November 15, 1993, has been received. As you will note from the enclosed S-52 form, Brother Jonathan Kendrick has been deleted from serving as a ministerial servant on the grounds of "uncleanness."

Your letter states: "He confessed to touching the breasts of his stepdaughter while she was sleeping. She was awakened instantly and knew what had happened." Since this incident is known by outside members of the family, it is appropriate that Brother Kendrick be deleted from serving as a ministerial servant with your congregation.

On page 92 of the Kingdom Ministry School textbook the following is stated: "Uncleanness includes an intentional momentary touching of sexual parts or caressing of breasts. Such minor uncleanness can be handled at the discretion of an elder or two; it does not require a judicial hearing. There is a need for strong counsel, admonition, and assistance to help the individual to maintain chaste conduct in the future."

In harmony with the above, it will not be necessary for a judicial committee to handle the "uncleanness" committed by Brother Kendrick. However, it would be appropriate for two elders to meet with him and provide him with strong Scriptural counsel so as to avoid a repetition of such a serious offense.

We trust the above comments will be helpful to you. With this letter we are pleased to send you an expression of our warm Christian love and best wishes.

Your brothers,

Watchtower B. & T. Society

(Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 11 marked for identification.) 09:13:38 09:13:38

MR. SIMONS: Q. Have you actually seen this Order before? 09:13:44 09:13:45

A. If I had it would only be through counsel. 09:13:52

Q. Okay. 09:13:54

Do you understand that those questions, that we had some disagreement about and that you were instructed not to answer, are going to come up again today; and that at least for some of those questions, there has been an Order by the Court that they would be answered? 09:13:57 09:13:58 09:14:01 09:14:07 09:14:09 09:14:11

A. Yes. 09:14:12

Q. Okay, fair enough. Thank you. 09:14:13

Let me start with the first question that we dealt with, and that was involving Jonathan Kendrick in his removal as a Ministerial Servant. 09:14:14 09:14:22 09:14:25

Why was Mr. Kendrick removed as a Ministerial Servant? 09:14:28 09:14:31

A. He was removed because of improper conduct. He was no longer irreprehensible or free from accusation. 09:14:32 09:14:34 09:14:38

Q. And what was the conduct that was involved in that removal? 09:14:41 09:14:44

A. It was the conduct of, he admitted to 09:14:47 touching briefly and inadvertently his stepdaughter's breast, which was over the clothing. 09:14:51 09:14:56

Q. Um-hum. 09:14:59

Did he make this admission to you? 09:15:01

A. He did make the admission to myself, myself and another brother. 09:15:04 09:15:08

Q. Okay. Where did that admission occur? 09:15:10

A. It occurred at their house. 09:15:15

Q. Not the conduct but the conversation in which he admitted it. 09:15:18 09:15:21

A. The conversation. Right. Right. 09:15:23

Q. Okay. And when you say "at their house," was that -- 09:15:24 09:15:26

A. The Kendricks' house. 09:15:26

Q. Okay. 09:15:28

At the time that that conversation occurred, was that the house that Evelyn Kendrick, Andrea Kendrick, and Jonathan Kendrick were all residing at? 09:15:30 09:15:33 09:15:36 09:15:40

A. Correct. 09:15:41

Q. Although Andrea, I guess, is not a Kendrick. 09:15:41 09:15:44

A. That would be true. 09:15:45

Q. Yes. Okay. 09:15:46

Who was present during this conversation? 09:15:47

A. The three of them, plus myself and another brother, Michael Clarke. 09:15:50 09:15:53

Q. And how was it that you came to the Kendrick home to have this conversation? 09:15:56 09:16:00

A. It was prearranged. 09:16:03

Q. Was there something that generated the conversation and the arrangements to go and meet with the Kendricks? 09:16:06 09:16:12 09:16:15

A. Yes. 09:16:18

Q. What was that? 09:16:19

A. Well, they, uh -- 09:16:27

I think Jonathan went to Brother Clarke and confessed it. So, as a body we met and decided to form an investigating committee. 09:16:29 09:16:31 09:16:35

Q. All right. And when you say "as a body we met," are you talking about the Elders of the North Congregation? 09:16:36 09:16:39 09:16:41

A. Yes, I am. 09:16:42

Q. Do you know who the original conversation, the very first conversation that occurred involving this touching, was with in terms of someone from the Kendrick family and someone from the Body of Elders? 09:16:46 09:16:49 09:16:52 09:16:56

A. I do not know. Cannot remember if I ever knew. 09:17:00 09:17:03

Q. Okay. How did you first hear about it? 09:17:04

VIDEO OPERATOR: Okay, this marks the end of Volume II and Videotape 1 in the Deposition of Gary Abrahamson on October 25th, 2011. The time is 9:57 and we're off record. (Deposition concluded at 9:57 a.m.) 09:57:31 09:57:33 09:57:37 09:57:42 09:57:48

There's information here concerning Toi Register having had her chest, quote, "accidentally touched," end quote, by Mr. Kendrick.

Was it Mr. Kendrick that told you that?

A. Boy. This was repeated to us by....

I don't know where that information -- how we gathered it. It might have been mentioned by the stepdaughter. We --

We did not talk with Toi Register.

Q. Okay.

Was there any reason that you did not talk to Toi Register to see if the touching of her chest by Brother Kendrick was actually accidental, as opposed to intentional?

A. I don't remember why we did not talk with her.

Q. Were you concerned on November 15th, 1993, that there might be other young girls who Brother Kendrick had been touching in their breasts?

A. Can you please repeat that?

Q. Yeah.

During this meeting of November 11th, you learned that there had been some touching of Toi Register and some touching of Andrea by Mr. Kendrick.

Q. Do you recall whether it was weeks or months or years before the meeting that happened in November 1993 at the Kendrick household? 01:07:13 01:07:15 01:07:18

A. Well, I can say it led to him being reproved. So, we have something, a letter, that states when he was reproved. That would give us an idea. 01:07:24 01:07:28 01:07:31

Q. Do you know whether or not Mr. Kendrick was a Ministerial Servant when he was reproved? 01:07:36 01:07:38

A. Yes. He was. 01:07:42

Q. And did he continue to serve as a Ministerial Servant after the reproval? 01:07:43 01:07:45

A. Yes. 01:07:49

Q. And he did so until being removed following the report of his molestation of Andrea. 01:07:50 01:07:54

A. Yes. 01:07:57

INTRODUCTION

The Opposition to Plaintiff's Motion to Amend her Complaint to add a claim against Watchtower New York for punitive damages raises two issues. First, Watchtower argues that the Motion is untimely, requiring either denial or continuance of the trial date. Plaintiff's Reply explains below that the motion is brought at the exact time the statutes intend, and neither continuance of the trial date nor denial are warranted. Watchtower next argues that Plaintiff fails to meet her burden of proof of presenting a prima facie case supporting punitive damages. While the Opposition creates some factual issues, it fails to negate as a matter of law the evidentiary showing offered by Plaintiff, and ignores the applicable case law, the express language of the two controlling statutes, and the prior Orders of this Court.

I. GRANTING THIS MOTION DOES NOT REQUIRE A CONTINUANCE AND IS NOT PREJUDICIAL TO DEFENDANT WATCHTOWER.

Watchtower's initial argument is that this Motion is untimely, requiring either denial or continuance of the trial. The timing of a motion to amend a pleading to allege punitive damages against a religious corporation is a creation of C.C.P. 425.14 and Civil Code 3295(a). Watchtower states Plaintiff was generally aware in 2011 of facts supporting her motion (Def. MPA 3:17-18.) That standard is applicable to general notice pleading amendments that add a party or new cause of action. However, punitive damage amendments pursuant to C.C.P. section 425.14 and discovery under Civil Code section 3295(a) require an evidentiary showing of a prima facie case. That evidence was still being gathered until completion of the Watchtower PMQ depositions in New York in mid-February, and her experts' review of that testimony and documents obtained during and in follow up. Had she brought her motion earlier, Plaintiff would have met with the objection that she offered only "suspicions" rather than evidence.

Watchtower claims a prejudice and a need to continue the trial if the motion is granted based on two points. First, Watchtower claims it is deprived of the right to file a Motion to Strike or Motion for Summary Adjudication. (Def. MPA 4:16-19) However, because 425.14 and 3295(a) both require an evidentiary showing of a prima facie case prior to permitting amendment or allowing discovery, it is the functional equivalent of both such motions. If there is sufficient evidence to support the amendment and discovery order, there is sufficient evidence to withstand a motion to strike or a motion for summary adjudication, both of which utilize the same standard of sufficiency.

Secondly, Watchtower claims that, had it known of the punitive damage allegation, it would have retained an expert to "address the punitive damage allegation." (Def. MPA 4:13.) It does not, and cannot, identify any specific expert by name or by subject matter. There are no "experts" in punitive damages in institutional child sex abuse cases, because the punitive damages flow from the conduct at issue, not the nature of the relief sought. The conduct was always part of the case, and Watchtower has identified and disclosed an expert on its conduct and policies - a security expert named Monica Applewhite (Simons Reply Dec., para. 2 and Ex. 1.) This is a "red herring" issue.

Watchtower also suggests it would retain an expert of corporate valuation. Since no financial discovery has even been allowed yet in the case, it can retain such an expert anyway, and the expert can be deposed if necessary in the time between verdict number one on liability and malice, and trial number two on the amount of punitive damages. (See bifurcation procedure, Civ. Code 3295(d).) Plaintiff is unclear what a "valuation expert" would testify to, since Watchtower is a corporation and presumably has an annual corporate balance sheet and financial statement prepared. In fact, Defendant's counsel has already supplied confidential information concerning Watchtower's financial status to Plaintiff's counsel in this case under an agreement not to reveal it publicly. (Reply Dec. of R. Simons, para. 3 and redacted Ex. 2.)

Both 425.14 and 3295 contemplate motions late in the case. Neither section has a pre-trial deadline for hearing, as does C.C.P. 437c for motions for summary judgment. Neither section contemplates new discovery and experts on issues other than financial worth, because the evidentiary motions are based on the evidence previously adduced in discovery. Civil Code 3295(c) creates a discovery process that may not even begin until after phase one of the trial.

II. WATCHTOWER'S FACTUAL AND EVIDENTIARY DISPUTES DO NOT REQUIRE DENIAL OF THE MOTION.

Watchtower's opposition produces evidence and arguments that create factual disputes, and plaintiff does not disagree that there are disputed facts in the case. However, this Motion is not the forum for resolution of factual disputes - that function is reserved for the jury. (Rowe v. Superior Court (1993) 15 Cal. App. 4th 1711, at 1723.) Watchtower's evidentiary showing does not negate the showing provided by Plaintiff as a matter of law.

For example, Watchtower emphatically states "Watchtower had No Notice of Child Abuse By Kendrick." (Def. MPA 7:20, emphasis in original.) Contrast that argument with the first sentence of Plaintiff's Exhibit 2, the 1993 letter from Elder Clark to Watchtower New York, where it is stated: "We are writing to you regarding a case of child abuse." Watchtower argues, based on the 2011-2012 depositions and declarations of its Elders, "Kendrick confessed only to having briefly and inadvertently touched his stepdaughter's breast over the clothing." (Def. MPA 8:4-5) Again, however, the actual letter from 1993 does NOT state that Kendrick's molestation of Andrea was "inadvertent" - that word is only used in relation to the touching of Toi Register. (Ex. 2, p. 1, paras. 2 & 5.) Watchtower makes the argument that expert Anna Salter's Declaration is "false" and does not apply to this case because it is based on the mistaken assumption that Kendrick's abuse of Andrea was "confirmed." (Def. MPA 8:20-24.) However, Watchtower's letter of December 3, 1993, responding to Elder Clarke, is a confirmation. (Plaintiff's Ex. 3 and Watchtower Ex. M in Oppo.)

Watchtower argues that Dr. Salter's opinion is without evidentiary value because it is vague as to the basis of her standard of care, "ignores" articles in Watchtower's magazines, "ignores" the absence of legal mandatory reporting requirements, and "ignores" the Clergy-Penitent privilege. (Def. MPA 8:25-9:8.) This Court has already determined that the communications offered into evidence by Plaintiff and relied upon by Dr. Salter are not subject to privilege. (Court's Discovery Orders of September 29, 2011, and October 17, 2011, Simons reply Dec. Exs. 3 & 4.) The duty of Watchtower and the Fremont Congregation to protect children from sexual abuse pre-dates mandatory reporting, and arises from the nature of its relationship to children involved in its activities. (Plaintiff's MPA In Support 6:16-7:18.) The various articles from Awake and Watchtower magazines do not as a matter of law overcome the confidential and specific written letters and instructions provided to Elders by Watchtower and the Governing Body, either generally or in this case. Dr. Salter's opinions concern the standard of care, not the existence of duty, and Watchtower's argument (Def. MPA 14:18-26) that she invades the province of the Legislature and Court is as inaccurate as stating a teaching or training expert cannot testify to the standard of care in a medical malpractice or police shooting case. These factual arguments can be raised on cross-examination of Dr. Salter, but do not require exclusion of her testimony.

Watchtower objects to Evelyn Kendrick's declaration as "hearsay" because it was Andrea, not Evelyn, who described the abuse to the Elders. (Watchtower Objection No. 3 and Def. MPA 7:25-8:3.) However, Evelyn's testimony is not hearsay any more than Elder Abrahamson's or Elder Clarke's statements of what they were told are hearsay. Evelyn was present at the meeting (Evelyn Dec., Ex. 30 in Support, para. 3), and personally heard the information the Elders received as to Kendrick. Her testimony both impeaches Elders Clarke and Abrahamson's testimony as to what information they received, and establishes notice to Watchtower of Kendrick's use of drugs to accomplish skin-to-skin breast and genital touching. It is not offered for proof of the allegations made by Andrea, but rather as to the issue of what notice was received by the Elders - who are admitted agents of Watchtower New York. (Admissions, Evid. In Support Ex. 7.)

Similarly, the denial by Toi Register Hayes in her 2012 Declaration (Def.'s Ex P) of any misconduct by Kendrick directed at her does not establish that the Elders were acting with due care in failing to investigate 20 years ago the reports of Kendrick's misconduct. We do not know that she would have said the same things then that she does now, as child abuse victims often do not.

Watchtower then argues that the Fremont Elders are not Managing Agents. (Def. MPA 12:4.) Plaintiff agrees. The undisputed evidence establishes that the Managing Agents of Watchtower is the Governing Body in New York (MPA in Support 2:1-5,11:27-12:4.)

III. WATCHTOWER'S LEGAL AUTHORITIES ARE NOT APPLICABLE.

Watchtower misstates the law applicable to this case. It argues that there is no evidence of a duty in California to prevent sexual abuse of a child by anyone other than employees or agents. (Def. MPA 14:27-15:4.) In fact, the duty has even extended for 50 years to preventing abuse by strangers. (Wallace v. Der-Ohanian (1962) 199 Cal. App. 2d 141.) "Volunteers" are specifically included in the language of C.C.P. 340.1, the section under which this case is brought. (340.1(b)(2))

Watchtower argues that proof of malice requires a "spirit of mischief or . . . criminal indifference . . . ," citing Gombos v. Ashe (1958) 158 Cal. App. 2d 517. (Def. MA 17:18.) If, as the California Supreme Court observed in specifically disapproving Gombos, that view no longer reflects twentieth century law, it has even less applicability in this century. (Taylor v. Superior Court (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 890, 896 and 900.)

I, RICHARD J. SIMONS, hereby declare:

1. That I am an attorney at law duly licensed to practice before all Courts of the State of California and am the attorney of record for plaintiff in the above-entitled action.

2. That defendant Watchtower has disclosed and declared an expert witness on the issues of conduct of its agents and the adequacy of its policies of sexual abuse prevention. The testimony of that expert witness, Monica Applewhite, is described by defendant's counsel Mr. Schnack in the Watchtower's Disclosure of Expert Witnesses, a true and correct copy of the applicable provisions of which are attached to this Declaration as Ex. 1.

3. That Watchtower NY does not require additional expert witnesses on the question of the valuation of the corporation, as it has informally provided such information to me through defendant's attorney Mr. McCabe many months ago. I have agreed to keep this information confidential. However, a redacted true and correct copy of Mr. McCabe's email of September 23, 2011, concerning this issue, is attached as Ex. 2 to this Declaration.

4. That the Court has determined previously in discovery issues in this matter that defendant Watchtower's claims of confidentiality and clergy-penitent privilege to not apply to the communications at issue in this matter. Courtesy copies of the Court's rulings of September 29, 2011, and October 17, 2011, are attached as Exs. 3 and 4, respectively, to this Declaration.

Doe Plaintiff/Petitioner(s) VS. The Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, I Defendant/Respondent(s) (Abbreviated Title)	No. HG11558324 Order Motion to Compel Further Answers at Deposition Granted

The Motion to Compel Further Answers at Deposition was set for hearing on 09/29/2011 at 03:00 PM in Department 22 before the Honorable Robert McGuiness. The Tentative Ruling was published and has not been contested.

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED THAT:

The tentative ruling is affirmed as follows: The Motion of Plaintiff Jane Doe to Compel Answers to Questions at Deposition of Gary Abrahamson and for Sanctions is GRANTED. Plaintiff has established that the information sought is not precluded from disclosure under the penitent-clergy privilege, Evidence Code §1031-1034 because the questions do not appear to call for communications that were presumed to be kept confidential with only the clergy member to whom they were communication. Instead, the questions appear to call for information and communications of a kind that would be expected to be communicated beyond that clergy member to others within the religious organization, i.e. a judicial investigating committee, for purposes of taking responding to the communication within the church. (Cf. Roman Catholic Archbishop of Los Angeles v. Superior Court (2005) 131 Cal.App.4th 417, 445-46.)

Defendant shall present Gary Abrahamson for further deposition and shall not instruct him not to answer the questions identified in the motion based upon clergy-penitent privilege.
The further deposition shall take place at a mutually-convenient time, but no later than 20 days after entry of this order.

The request for sanctions in connection with this motion is DENIED.

Doe Plaintiff/Petitioner(s) VS. The Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, I Defendant/Respondent(s) (Abbreviated Title)	No. HG11558324 Order Motion to Compel Production of Documents Granted

The Motion to Compel Production of Documents filed for Jane Doe was set for hearing on 10/03/2011 at 03:00 PM in Department 22 before the Honorable Robert McGuiness.

The matter was argued and submitted, and good cause appearing therefore,

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED THAT:

Pursuant to the court's prior order in this matter, it conducted an in camera review of two letters dated respectively, November 15, 1993 and December 3, 1993, to determine whether the same were (are) privileged communications within the application of Evidence Code section 1034 and related statutes. After review, the court determines that the letters are not privileged and plaintiff's motion to compel production is granted. However, the court will withhold production of the subject letters and they shall remain under seal until November 17, 2011 so as to allow defendants time to consider and seek appellate review here. The court has determined this matter largely within the context of the holding of Roman Catholic Diocese of Los Angeles v. Superior Court, 131 Cal. App. 4th 417. The record there and here demonstrate that the communications were likely to be shared with more than one person; persons other than elders would be likely to consider same and that the penitent (defendant Kendrick) did not expect the communications to be kept confidential (under the circumstances related and presented).

Doe Plaintiff/Petitioner(s) VS. The Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, I Defendant/Respondent(s) (Abbreviated Title)	No. HG11558324 Order Motion to Amend Complaint Granted

The Motion to Amend Complaint was set for hearing on 05/03/2012 at 03:00 PM in Department 22 before the Honorable Robert McGuiness. The Tentative Ruling was published and has not been contested.

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED THAT:

The tentative ruling is affirmed as follows: The motion of Jane Doe to file amended complaint adding punitive damage allegations against defendant Watchtower Bible and Tract Society ("Watchtower") under CCP 425.14 is GRANTED.

Plaintiff filed this motion on April 10, 2012, just six weeks before the trial date of May 21, 2012. Plaintiff did not delay unduly in filing this motion, and Watchtower has not identified any specific liability or fact discovery that it will need from Plaintiff as a result of the addition of the punitive damages allegations.

Under CCP 425.14, a plaintiff cannot assert a claim for punitive damages against a religious corporation until the court finds that the plaintiff has presented sufficient evidence of a prima facie showing of liability under the preponderance of evidence standard and a showing of recklessness, oppression or fraud under the clear and convincing standard. Little Co. of Mary Hosp. v. Superior Court (2008) 162 Cal.App.4th 261, 267, 271; Rowe v. Superior Court (1993) 15 Cal.App.4th 1711, 1723.

The proposed First Amended Complaint includes a third cause of action entitled "Acts of Malice." The court reads the cause action as a claim that defendant Watchtower is liable for negligence because it acted with a willful and conscious disregard of the rights or safety of others. (Civil Code 3294(c)(1).) To establish conscious disregard, plaintiff must show that the defendant was aware of the probable dangerous consequences of its conduct, and that he willfully and deliberately failed to avoid those consequences. (Hoch v. Allied Signal (1994) 24 Cal.App.4th 48, 61.)

Plaintiff has presented a prima facie showing that she could potentially prove a claim against Watchtower for negligence by a preponderance of the evidence. There is evidence that Watchtower's officers, directors, or managing agents knew or had reason to know in 1993 that Jonathan Kendrick had confessed to inappropriate touching of a child (PX 2; DX L and M), that Watchtower failed to notify the congregation or to take other measures to protect children in the church (PX 3 and 4; DX K), and that as a result plaintiff suffered injury from 1994 through 1996.

Plaintiff has presented a prima facie showing that she could potentially prove by clear and convincing evidence that Watchtower was aware of the probable dangerous consequences of its decision not to alert church members of Kendrick's dangerous tendencies, and that Watchtower willfully and deliberately failed to avoid those consequences. (PX 2, 3, 4.)

Watchtower raises the issue of the appropriate balance between the clergy-penitent privilege and appropriate disclosures to congregants that a member may be a threat to children. Watchtower also notes that most of the case law on the responsibility of entities for sexual abuse concerns abuse perpetrated by employees or agents rather than by member of the entity who were not in positions of authority at the time of the abuse. (But see Wallace v. Der-Ohanian (1962) 199 Cal.App.2d 141.) These concerns present fact specific issues that are beyond the scope of a motion where the plaintiff need only present sufficient evidence to establish a prima facie case of liability and punitive damages.

The court OVERRULES the objection to PX 27 (percipient witness), to PX 26 (percipient witness to statements by Kendrick), to PX 30 (offered as evidence that Watchtower was on notice, not for truth of matter asserted), PX 31 (admissible to extent based on personal knowledge, but court disregards testimony regarding the "true purpose" of Watchtower), and PX 32 (witness is arguably a qualified expert with pertinent information regarding the standard of care during the relevant time period).

The motion of Jane Doe for an order permitting financial discovery is DENIED. If the jury finds that Watchtower is liable for punitive damages, then the court will expect Watchtower to produce its pertinent financial information by 9:00 am the following morning and to have witnesses available to testify by the following day.

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA - COUNTY OF ALAMEDA

JANE DOE,

Plaintiff,

v.

THE WATCHTOWER BIBLE AND TRACT SOCIETY OF NEW YORK, Inc., a corporation; FREMONT CALIFORNIA CONGREGATION OF JEHOVAH'S WITNESSES, NORTH UNIT, a California corporation; JONATHAN KENDRICK, an individual; and ROES 1 to 10, Defendants.

No. HG11558324

ASSIGNED FOR ALL PURPOSES TO JUDGE ROBERT McGUINESS, DEPARTMENT 22

FIRST AMENDED COMPLAINT FOR DAMAGES FOR CHILDHOOD SEXUAL ABUSE

Plaintiff alleges,

1. Plaintiff JANE DOE is an adult, under the age of 26 at the time of the filing of this action, and residing in California. Plaintiff appears by the fictitious name JANE DOE to preserve her anonymity because of the sensitive and highly personal nature of the subject matter of this action. (Doe v. Lincoln Unified School District (2010) 187 Cal. App. 4th 1286). Plaintiff's true name and identity has been disclosed to defendants with service of the Complaint.

2. At all times herein, defendant THE WATCHTOWER BIBLE AND TRACT SOCIETY OF NEW YORK, Inc. (WATCHTOWER NY) was a corporation, licensed in the State of New York, with a principle place of business in the City of New York, State of New York.

3. Plaintiff is unaware of the true names and capacities of defendants sued herein as ROES 1 to 10 and therefore sue said defendants by such fictitious names. Said fictitiously named defendants were negligent in and about the matters alleged herein, and that such negligence was the proximate cause of the damages complained of by plaintiff. Plaintiff will seek leave to amend this Complaint when the true names and capacities of such fictitiously-named defendants have been ascertained.

4. At all times herein, defendant FREMONT CALIFORNIA CONGREGATION OF JEHOVAH'S WITNESSES, NORTH UNIT ("FREMONT CONGREGATION") was a corporation, organized and existing under the laws of the State of California, with a principle place of business located in Fremont, California. At all times herein defendant FREMONT CONGREGATION owned, managed, operated, supervised, and staffed a religious facility, organized and existing for the purpose of practicing and promoting the faith of Jehovah's Witnesses, and located within the City of Fremont, State of California. At all relevant times herein, defendant WATCHTOWER NY concurrently owned, managed, operated, supervised, and staffed that same religious facility located in the City of Fremont, County of Alameda, California.

5. At all times herein, defendant JONATHAN KENDRICK was an individual, residing in the State of California, with a date of birth of January 31, 1954, and is currently a registered sex offender within the State of California.

FIRST CAUSE OF ACTION
Negligence
(As to Defendants WATCHTOWER NY, and FREMONT CONGREGATION Only)

6. In the time period of 1994 to 1996, plaintiff JANE DOE was a minor. During that time period, plaintiff JANE DOE was a member of the religious group commonly known as the Jehovah's Witnesses, and attended, participated in, and was a member of the Jehovah's Witness religious facility located in the City of Fremont, and owned, managed, operated, supervised, and staffed by defendants WATCHTOWER NY and FREMONT CONGREGATION. During that same time period, defendant JONATHAN KENDRICK was a volunteer, active member, and participant in the congregation and congregation leadership of the religious facility in Fremont. During that time period, defendant KENDRICK sexually molested and abused plaintiff JANE DOE on multiple occasions within the County of Alameda. Defendant KENDRICK accomplished the sexual abuse and molestation of plaintiff by use of the trust, position, and authority he held as a fellow member, volunteer, and leader of the religious facility and congregation in Fremont.

7. At all times herein, defendants WATCHTOWER NY and FREMONT CONGREGATION, and each of them, negligently supervised, managed, and controlled defendant KENDRICK in his membership and participation in the Fremont religious facility, and negligently failed to warn plaintiff JANE DOE, her family, and other members of the congregation, of the propensity and risk that defendant KENDRICK would sexually molest or abuse minor girls, a propensity and history of which defendants, and each of them, acting through their employees, agents, and volunteers, had actual notice. During the same time period, defendants, and each of them, were negligent in failing to exercise reasonable care to protect plaintiff JANE DOE, and other minors, who were members of, or participants in, activities at the religious facility in Fremont, from the risk of sexual abuse or molestation by perpetrators, including defendant JONATHAN KENDRICK.

8. As a result of the negligence of defendants, and each them, as herein alleged, plaintiff JANE DOE was caused to suffer the physical, mental, and emotional injuries of childhood sexual abuse and molestation; was caused to incur medical and other expenses for care, treatment, and counseling; and has suffered loss of earnings and earning capacity. Plaintiff will further continue to incur all such damages in the future, in amounts of which plaintiff will advise defendants at least sixty days prior to trial.

SECOND CAUSE OF ACTION
Willful and Intentional Acts
(As to Defendant Jonathan Kendrick Only)

9. Plaintiff realleges each and every allegation contained in paragraphs 1 through 8 as though fully set forth herein.

10. During the time period stated herein, defendant JONATHAN KENDRICK intentionally, willfully, and maliciously sexually abused and molested plaintiff JANE DOE during the time that she was a minor.

11. As a result of the intentional, willful conduct of defendant JONATHAN KENDRICK, as set forth herein, plaintiff has incurred, and will continue to incur the damages as set forth in paragraph 8 of this Complaint.

THIRD CAUSE OF ACTION
Acts of Malice
(Against Watchtower New York only)

12. At all times herein, the Managing Agents directing and setting the corporate policies of the Defendants WATCHTOWER NEW YORK and FREMONT CONGREGATION was a group of individual members of the Jehovah's Witnesses religion known collectively as "The Governing Body". The Governing Body at all times acted through legal entities it caused to be established throughout the world, including the corporations WATCHTOWER NEW YORK and FREMONT CONGREGATION. The Governing Body established, approved, and disseminated all of the administrative policies, programs, and procedures followed by all Jehovah's Witnesses entities on the subject matter of prevention of and administrative response to acts of childhood sexual abuse committed by or upon its members, including childhood sexual abuse arising from or out of the activities of members of the FREMONT CONGREGATION. The Governing Body's administrative policies and procedures concerning childhood sexual abuse issues for all entities of the Jehovah's Witnesses, including WATCHTOWER NEW YORK and FREMONT CONGREGATION, were implemented and carried out by the responsible volunteer agents of each corporation selected to hold the administrative title of "Elders". The Elders of the FREMONT CONGREGATION in 1993-96 included individuals named Gary Abrahamson, Michael Clarke, and Larry Lammerdin, as well as other individuals holding the same title. These specific Elders were, at all relevant times herein, acting as agents of WATCHTOWER NEW YORK, within the course and scope of their agency, were acting at all times under the immediate supervision, instructions, directions, and control of WATCHTOWER NEW YORK and its Legal and Service Departments; and served as Elders only with the consent and approval of WATCHTOWER NEW YORK.

13. There exists within Jehovah's Witnesses an administrative position known as Ministerial Servant. Ministerial Servants have administrative responsibilities within each congregation, including FREMONT CONGREGATION, and were at all times relevant herein appointed to their positions only with the approval and consent of WATCHTOWER NEW YORK. JONATHAN KENDRICK was appointed to the position of Ministerial Servant at the FREMONT CONGREGATION by Order of WATCHTOWER NEW YORK in 1990.

14. In 1993, Elders Abrahamson and Clarke received a report that KENDRICK had sexually molested his step-daughter, a minor, with skin to skin contact of the breast and genital areas of the victim after administering a narcotic drug to her. Elders Abrahamson and Clarke also received a report that KENDRICK had inappropriately touched a second non family member minor girl active in the FREMONT CONGREGATION. Elders Abrahamson and Clarke confirmed the molestation of the step daughter, which was admitted in part to them in an open meeting attended by both Elders, KENDRICK, the minor step daughter, and her mother Evelyn Kendrick. Elders Abrahamson and Clarke failed to investigate the second report.

15. In November, 1993, Elders Abrahamson and Clarke provided a written report of the molestations to WATCHTOWER NEW YORK's corporate offices. In December, 1993, KENDRICK was removed from his position as Ministerial Servant by WATCHTOWER NEW YORK. No additional punishment was imposed, and KENDRICK remained a member in good standing within FREMONT CONGREGATION, and continued to participate daily with other Congregation members, including children and specifically including Plaintiff, in Jehovah's Witness activities including religious services and meetings, door to door religious solicitations, study groups, and Congregation social events. KENDRICK used his good standing within Jehovah's Witnesses, and his access to children during and arising out of FREMONT CONGREGATION activities, to select, groom, and sexually molest other minor girls, including Plaintiff.

16. Notwithstanding their receipt of the reports of 2 possible minor sexual abuse victims, and their confirmed actual knowledge of KENDRICK's recent molestation of at least one child, Elders Abrahamson and Clarke intentionally and purposely failed to notify or warn other FREMONT CONGREGATION members, including other administrative personnel such as Elders and Ministerial Servants, parents of children active in the Congregation, Congregation members, Fremont law enforcement, or any other persons of the possible risk of further childhood sexual abuse by KENDRICK, and failed to limit or supervise KENDRICK's access to children, including Plaintiff. Elders Abrahamson and Clarke intentionally kept secret their receipt of the reports of 2 possible minor sexual abuse victims, and their confirmed actual knowledge of KENDRICK's recent molestation of at least one child, from FREMONT CONGREGATION administrative personnel including other Elders and Ministerial Servants, parents of children active in the Congregation, Congregation members, Fremont law enforcement, or any other persons.

17. The conduct by Elders Abrahamson and Clarke of keeping their knowledge of KENDRICK's past sexual abuse of children secret, and in failing to warn others in the Congregation or community of the risk of further sexual abuse of children he posed, occurred at the specific direction, instruction, and under the authority of WATCHTOWER NEW YORK. The WATCHTOWER NEW YORK decision to maintain secrecy concerning KENDRICK, and the resulting failure to warn or otherwise protect minors, including Plaintiff, against the risk of further sexual abuse by KENDRICK, occurred as the implementation of a written policy requiring such secrecy issued by the Governing Body through WATCHTOWER NEW YORK, and as its Managerial Agents. The policy is set forth in a Body Of Elders letter, issued by the Governing Body through WATCHTOWER NEW YORK on July 1, 1989, and still in effect today, to keep all such information secret. The stated purpose of the secrecy policy is to avoid lawsuits and legal problems for the Elders and entities of Jehovah's Witnesses.

18. The secrecy policy of WATCHTOWER NEW YORK regarding sexual abuse of children within Jehovah's Witnesses was established and enforced by the Governing Body as the Managing Agents of WATCHTOWER NEW YORK, with actual knowledge of and deliberate disregard of the known risk that it would be likely to lead to further sexual abuse of children within Jehovah's Witnesses, as was known to the Governing Body specifically as stated in its authorized publications and articles on the subject of childhood sexual abuse, and circumstantially as it was known to all national community, youth, and religious groups in the United States by 1993. Notwithstanding such knowledge, the Governing Body as Managerial Agents, and WATCHTOWER NEW YORK through its agents, despicably placed children at risk of sexual abuse by child molesters known only to a few Elders within Jehovah's Witnesses and kept secret from all others, including placing Plaintiff at risk of molestation by Kendrick, to further its own business and financial interests in avoiding claims, lawsuits, and litigation by victims who might learn that their abuser was a risk known to WATCHTOWER NEW YORK.

19. As a result of the conduct of the Elders Abrahamson and Clarke, acting under the authority of WATCHTOWER NEW YORK and its managing Agents, and of their personal conscious disregard of the safety of children including Plaintiff, as set forth herein, Plaintiff suffered the injury and harm of childhood sexual abuse committed upon her by KENDRICK between 1995 and 1996.

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays for relief as follows:

1. For compensatory damages, including economic and non-economic, according to proof in amounts of which plaintiff will advise defendants at least 60 days prior to trial, pursuant to the First and Second Causes of Action;

2. For punitive damages against WATCHTOWER NEW YORK only pursuant to the Third Cause of action;

3. For costs of suit incurred herein; and

4. For such further relief as the Court deems just and proper.

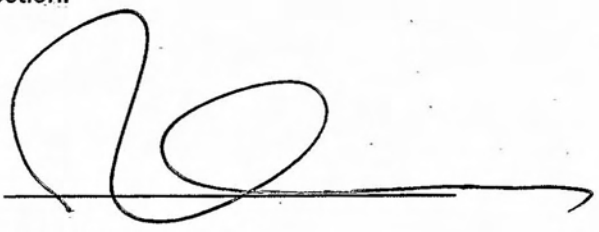
JOINT STATEMENT OF THE CASE



Trial Date: 5/21/2012

In this case, Plaintiff Candace Conti claims that she was sexually abused as a child by an adult named Jonathan Kendrick. Ms. Conti further claims that the negligence of Defendants The Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc., and The Fremont Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses, North Unit, were contributing causes of her molestation. Ms. Conti seeks an award of money damages to compensate her for the economic and non-economic harm she claims to have suffered as a result of her sexual abuse.

Jonathan Kendrick was named as a Defendant in this lawsuit, but he has failed to appear for this trial.

The Defendants The Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc., and the Fremont Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses North Unit, deny they were negligent in any way and deny that their conduct was a cause of any injury to the Plaintiff Candace Conti. Both Defendants also dispute the nature and extent of any harm suffered by Ms. Conti as a result of any sexual abuse she may have experienced as a child.

Should it proceed to trial, it is estimated that this case will take three to four weeks after the completion of jury selection.

JOINT MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES IN SUPPORT OF USE OF JURY QUESTIONNAIRE AND APPLICABILITY OF AMENDED C.C.P. §222.5

Trial Date: May 21, 2012

INTRODUCTION

The issues and evidence in this case involve several sensitive issues, including claimed sexual abuse of a child, the involvement of religious corporations as Defendants, mental health testimony, and the recoverability of damages for serious emotional distress. The case is complex, involving multiple parties and claims. All Counsel have met and conferred to produce a Proposed Jury Questionnaire. The questionnaire, a copy of which will be submitted at or before the May 18 Pre-Trial Conference, is being jointly drafted to achieve neutrality in both language and organization. All parties jointly request the questionnaire because it is the most effective approach to obtaining candid responses to inquiry on controversial or very personal subject matters on which many people hold strong views, because it is the most efficient way to obtain biographical information from many people in the shortest time, and because questionnaires provide a focus for the voir dire of each individual. Questionnaires also assist the court in giving advance warning of prospective jurors who, for any of several reasons, are likely to inject potentially prejudicial information that may contaminate the jury selection process. The Legislature has specifically provided the right to use jury questionnaires in civil cases, and the Judicial Council has provided instructions and an approved format for their use.

In addition, Counsel jointly request that the procedures specified in the newly amended C.C.P. section 222.5 on jury selection be incorporated into this case. The procedures include expanded questionnaire and voir dire rights, as well as allowing counsel to give "mini" abbreviated opening statements prior to jury selection.

THE LEGISLATURE HAS PROVIDED THE RIGHT TO USE JURY QUESTIONNAIRES TO ACQUIRE INFORMATION FOR PREEMPTORY AND CAUSE CHALLENGES.

Civil jury selection is controlled by CCP section 222.5. That section has multiple procedures, including providing that "counsel for each party shall have the right to examine, by oral and direct questioning, any of the prospective jurors in order to enable counsel to intelligently exercise both preemptory challenges and challenges for cause." Section 222.5 provides that "the trial judge should permit liberal and probing examination calculated to discover bias or prejudice with regard to the circumstances of the particular case." The statute prohibits unreasonable or arbitrary time limits for voir dire, and advises that the time allocations should reflect the unique or complex factual or legal elements of the case. No prior submission of voir dire questions is authorized by 222.5 in the absence of improper questioning. The "liberal and probing examination to discover bias and prejudice within the circumstances of each case" standard has also been judicially recognized. (Bly-Magee v. Budget Rent-a-Car Corp. (1994) 24 Cal. App. 4th 318, 324).

The use of questionnaires is sanctioned both by 222.5, and by the Judicial Council, who has authored a pre printed cover/instruction sheet incorporated into the proposed questionnaire in this case. The 2011 amendments to section 222.5 extend the protection against the imposition of "unreasonable or arbitrary time limits" to the use of those questionnaires. Section 222.5 provides: "If a questionnaire is utilized, the parties should be given reasonable time to evaluate the responses to the questionnaires before oral questioning commences. To help facilitate the jury selection process, the judge in civil trials should provide the parties with both the alphabetical list and the list of prospective jurors in the order in which they will be called."

In this action, because of the nature of the questions to be asked, it is jointly requested by Counsel for all parties that they be given a day to review and assess juror questionnaires, so that the voir dire process can be focused and more efficient.

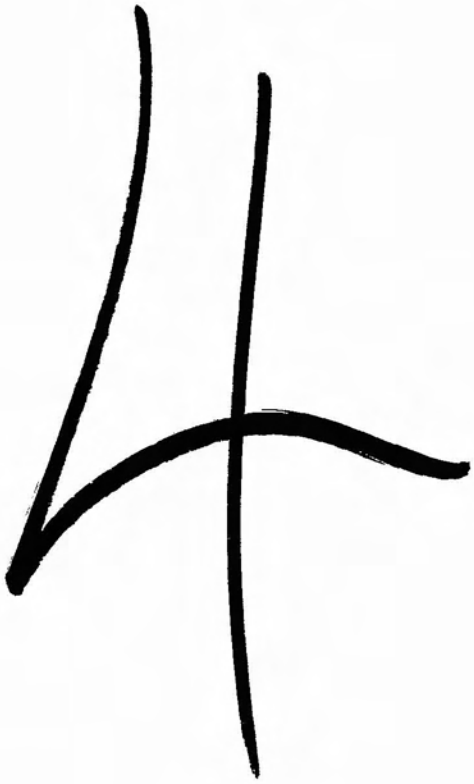
SHORT TITLE:	CASE NUMBER
INMAN, CAROLYN and PAUL R.

DECLARATION OF PETITIONER IN SUPPORT OF OSC



My name is CAROLYN INMAN. I currently reside at 37860 Mosswood Drive in Fremont, California 94536. I have two daughters who reside with me fulltime.

On August 26, 1994, my husband, Paul R. Inman, and I separated in anticipation of pursuing a divorce. Since that date I have received only $150 from Paul and he has refused to support the children and me.

Paul did pick up the children on Sept. 9, 1994 to spend one night with him at his mother's home at 6130 Corte Trancas in Pleasanton, Ca. On Sept. 10, 1994, Saturday, my youngest daughter, Jenna, who was going to take her shower, asked me "are you going to wash the lotion out of my butt?" I asked her what lotion and she said "the lotion daddy put up there with his fingers." Then she said that "it hurt real bad and she was crying and it was dark and her sissy (Rosanna) was asleep and that her daddy kept telling her to 'shut up' 'shut up', 'I hate you.'" After telling me this, Jenna was taken to Washington Hospital emergency and then transferred to Childrens Hospital in Oakland per Child Protection Services direction. The Pleasanton police became involved, and is currently and actively, investigating the matter. The case is #96445E and the detective's name is Paul Brock. He can be reached at (510) 484-8134.

Fill out this form if you wish to plead guilty or no contest to the charges against you. Initial the box for each applicable item only if you understand it. If you have any questions about your case, the possible sentence, or the information on this form, ask your lawyer or the judge.

INITIAL ONLY THE BOXES THAT APPLY TO YOU:

CHARGES

[If represented by counsel]

JK 1. I have read, discussed with my attorney and understand all allegations in the complaint/information/indictment filed against me.

[If pro per]

X 1a. I have read and understand all allegations in the complaint/information/indictment filed against me.

CONSTITUTIONAL RIGHTS

JK 2. I understand that I have the right to an attorney to represent me throughout the proceeding, and that if I am unable to afford to hire an attorney, the Court will appoint an attorney to represent me at public expense, subject to reimbursement based on my ability to pay. I give up my right to be represented by an attorney. [initial only if not represented by an attorney]

JK 3. I understand that on a felony complaint I have the right to a preliminary hearing before a judge at which the district attorney must prove that a crime has been committed by me. If the district attorney does not meet this burden of proof, the charges on the complaint against me would be dismissed. I give up my right to a preliminary hearing. [Initial only if plea before P.X.]

JK 4. I understand that I have the right to a speedy and public trial by a jury on the charges. I give up my right to a jury trial on the charges.

CONSEQUENCES OF GUILTY/NO CONTEST PLEA

8. A "no contest" plea will be treated by the Court for all purposes as a guilty plea.

9. I understand that the legal maximum state prison sentence for the charge(s) to which I am pleading guilty/no contest, including all sentence enhancements, is 8 years and 0 months, and that the maximum fine for the charge(s) is $10,000 per charge.

10. I understand that conviction of the charge(s) makes me ineligible for a grant of probation. (When probation ineligibility allegations are charged and admitted).

11. I understand that my sentence to state prison will be [redacted] years and [redacted] months.

12. I understand that any state prison sentence will be followed by my being on parole for up to five (5) years.

13. I understand that I will not be sentenced now to state prison on the charge(s), but that I will be placed on felony probation for 5 years.

14. I understand that the Court will impose conditions upon my probation. These conditions may include up to one year in the Contra Costa County jail, a fine of up to $10,000, and other conditions that are reasonably related to the charge(s) to which I am pleading guilty/no contest.

15. I understand that as a condition of probation I will serve 365 days in the Contra Costa County jail.

16. I have credit for 73 actual days served through today.

17. I understand that I will be permitted to apply for a Custody Alternative Bureau (C.A.B.) Program (EHD/SWAP/Sheriff's Parole) to serve the remainder of my sentence. (applies only to persons referred to the Sheriff's Custody Alternative Bureau).

18. I understand that because I have admitted a prior "strike" allegation, my conduct credits in State Prison will be limited to a maximum of 20%. (P.C. §667 (c)(5).)

19. I understand that because I am pleading guilty/no contest to a violent felony (as defined in §667.5(c), my conduct credits (both locally and at State Prison) are limited to a maximum of 15% P.C. §2933.1).

20. I understand that if I violate my probation conditions, the court could revoke my probation and sentence me to the maximum term in state prison and to the maximum fine.

21. I understand that conviction of the charge(s) will subject me to registration requirements.

22. I understand that conviction of the charge(s) will require me to pay appropriate restitution to the victim(s) of my crimes and/or to pay a restitution fine of not less than $200 and not more than $10,000 [for a felony conviction] or not less than $100 and not more than $1,000 [for a misdemeanor conviction].

24. Federal law provides for mandatory deportation for certain crimes. I understand that if I am not a citizen of the United States, I have the right to contact a diplomatic or consular representative of my country, and conviction of a crime could result in my deportation, denial of my re-entry to the United States and denial of my application for citizenship.

25. I understand that the charge to which I am pleading guilty/no contest constitutes a "STRIKE" under current law and may be charged as a "STRIKE" prior conviction in the future, if I am charged with a new felony offense. If found to be true, this strike prior would subject me to the enhanced penalties under the strike law. [for use when defendant pleading guilty to future strike].

26. I understand that the charge to which I am pleading guilty/no contest may be charged as a prior conviction in the future and subject me to increased penalties. [for use on other "priorable" offenses].

27. I understand that as a result of my conviction in this case, I will be prohibited from possessing any firearm or ammunition.

28. I understand that any plea entered in this case may be an admission of a violation of probation or parole which has been imposed on me in any other criminal case.

VOLUNTARINESS OF PLEA

30. No threat has been made against me or anyone close to me that causes me to enter a guilty/no contest plea.

THE WATCHTOWER BIBLE AND TRACT SOCIETY OF NEW YORK, Inc., a corporation, et al.,

No. HG11558324

ASSIGNED FOR ALL PURPOSES TO JUDGE ROBERT McGUINESS, DEPARTMENT 22

PLAINTIFF'S MOTION IN LIMINE NO. 8 TO EXCLUDE THE TESTIMONY OF TOI REGISTER HAYES [Evid. Code §§350; 352]

Trial Date: 5/21/2012

STATEMENT OF THE ISSUE

The November 1993 report by the Fremont Elders to Watchtower contained information about Jonathan Kendrick's sexual molestation of his stepdaughter Andrea, and also contained a report of possible grooming or fondling of a second girl, Toi Register. (Report, Ex. 1.) That report was never investigated by the Elders. (Clarke Depo., Ex. 2, 54:11-55:8.) Watchtower recently submitted a Declaration from Ms. Register, now Toi Register Hayes, in its Opposition to Plaintiff's Motion to Amend Complaint to add punitive damages. (Hayes Dec., Ex. 3.) Ms. Hayes states in 2012 that she has no present recollection of any "inadvertent" touching of her breast by Kendrick, as reported in 1993. Plaintiff moves to exclude her testimony on the grounds that her present recollection is irrelevant to any issue in this trial; that presenting evidence and experts explaining why the information received by the Elders in 1993 is consistent with Ms. Register's present recollection, or lack thereof, will waste significant court time, confuse the jury; and because Ms. Register's present recollection provides no probative value in this case.

I. MS. REGISTER'S CURRENT RECOLLECTION IS IRRELEVANT TO ANY ISSUE IN THIS CASE.

Only relevant evidence is inadmissible. (Evid. Code 350.) Relevant evidence is defined as "having any tendency in reason to prove or disprove any disputed fact that is of consequence to the determination of the action." (Evid. Code 210.) Neither Ms. Register nor her mother were ever contacted by anyone from Jehovah's Witnesses at any time between 1993, when the report of her being touched was received, and 2012. (Clarke Depo., Ex. 2, 34:21-35:16.) Watchtower's Elders admit they never investigated the report. (Id., 54:11-55:8.) Watchtower's written instructions to the Fremont Elders did not request or suggest investigating the report. (Watchtower Letter, Ex. 4.) Therefore, Ms. Hayes' testimony in 2012 does not have any relevance in whether or not the Elders and Watchtower were negligent in 1993-1996 – as they neither acted nor refrained from acting in response to anything she said.

Watchtower may argue that the evidence is relevant to show that, if they had investigated, nothing would have been found, and therefore, their negligence is not a cause of any harm to Plaintiff. Ms. Register's current recollection, or non-recollection, does not establish that she would have had the same response 19 years ago. This testimony is irrelevant in any event because the Elders acted at all times as if the Toi Register complaint did not exist, and it is their conduct that is at issue. There is absolutely no testimony or documentary evidence that can be offered by Watchtower or Fremont Congregation that will support an inference that the Toi Register report made formed the basis or non-basis, or was considered in any way, as to their supervision of Kendrick. Whether or not their negligence in how they handled Kendrick between 1993 and 1996 was a cause of injury to Plaintiff is an analysis based upon facts about the events and information available at that time period, not through a speculative retrospectoscope of "Ifs."

II. MS. HAYES' TESTIMONY WILL CONSUME SIGNIFICANT TIME WITHOUT PROBATIVE VALUE.

The leap of inference from Ms. Hayes' 2012 lack of recollection of what to her would have seemed like a non-event 19 years ago, to the conclusion "nothing" would have been found if a thorough investigation was done in 1993, is purely speculation. However, rebutting the suggestion will consume substantial court time. There is evidence that Kendrick was grooming at least one other girl in the Congregation, a 10-year-old named Brianna, for whom he bought a black bra. (Francis depo, Ex. 5, 33:13-34:25.) Had an investigation of Kendrick been done, the Elders may have learned something from Toi Register's 1993 recollection that she no longer remembers, or chooses not to speak about, in 2012. Plaintiff is able to produce expert evidence that the then 13-year-old Toi Register may not have had any reason to suspect anything improper by what likely appeared to her to be an "inadvertent" touch, giving her no reason whatever to remember it two decades later. She may now be embarrassed to mention it, even if she does recall. There will also be expert testimony produced by Plaintiff to show that the type of event reported was far more important to Kendrick, a predator with known multiple serial victims. Although insignificant to 13 year-old Toi, to Kendrick, an "inadvertent" touch would constitute an initial act of grooming approach behavior. Plaintiff's experts in predatory sex offenders like Kendrick can testify as to what individuals like he are known to learn from the "inadvertent" brush – that Toi did not respond in a way that encouraged him to further approach her. Kendrick may simply not have had another opportunity to try a second grooming act with her, so she would have been oblivious to his danger, and felt the safety she describes in her Declaration.

All of this testimony involves consumption of trial time and the risk of confusing the jury with a side issues of little probative value, the issues of Kendrick's grooming, and Toi's lack of perception as to the nature of what occurred. Consequently, Ms. Hayes' 2012 testimony should be excluded under Evidence Code §352.

Dear Brothers,

We are writing to you regarding a case of child abuse. We telephoned 11/12/93 and it was suggested that we submit in writing our questions.

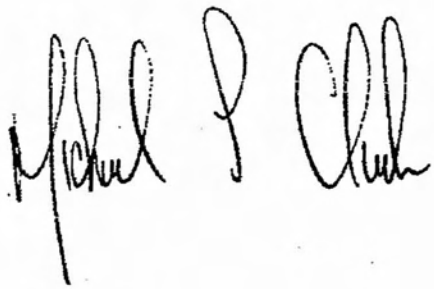
We met on 11/11/93 with Jonathan Kendrick, a ministerial servant, who confessed to child abuse with his 15 yr old step daughter. The abuse occurred approximately 4 months ago. He confessed to touching the breast of his step daughter while she was sleeping. She was awaken instantly and knew what had happened. His wife was informed that evening and the 3 of them talked it out between them. Brother Kendrick thought since he was sorry and his family was willing to forget the abuse, he would not have to report it to the congregation elders. He said that his conscious continued to bother him.

Evelyn, his wife, is baptized but inactive. She occasionally attends meetings.

Andrea, the step daughter, is not baptized and is no longer an unbaptized publisher. The step daughter is now using this as a tool to threaten with when she wants something. Because she has been promiscuous with 2 boys at school. the parents have tried to enforce house rules covering her comings and goings.

Andrea has recently mentioned the abuse to another young girl, Toy Register, whom she attends school with. Coincidentally, Toy attends our congregation meetings and is studying. Her mother is disfellowshipped. Toy mentioned the abuse to her mother and added that Brother Kendrick on another occasion had accidentally touched her chest but admitted that it was not intentional. Mrs Register is now threatening to call the police.

Here are the facts as best as we can present them without interviewing each party. Our questions are as follows:



1. Can 2 elders handle this matter with Brother Kendrick as mentioned on page 93 of "Pay attention to Yourselves....Flock", under the heading Uncleanness? Or do we have to form a Judicial hearing because of it being child abuse?

2. We assume that Brother Kendrick does not qualify any longer as a Ministerial Servant. We will announce to the congregation that he is no longer serving as such. If this is incorrect, please inform us.

3. The legal department has given us some direction as far as our legal requirements and we will follow that closely.

We will wait to hear from you regarding the above questions. If I have not been clear enough, you may reach me during the day at my work phone (510-462-7861 ext 105)

Q. Did Mr. Kendrick also tell you that his daughter Andrea was now using the abuse, that she had experienced, as a tool to threaten when she wanted something?

A. Yes.

Q. Mr. Kendrick told you that.

A. Both him and his wife, Evelyn.

Q. Okay. And was that also in the meeting with Andrea present in the Kendrick home?

A. Yes.

Q. And did Mr. Kendrick tell you anything else about why he had chosen November of 1993 to talk to you about this abuse of Andrea, other than "his conscious continued to bother him"?

A. Well, the letter mentions that it had become... it had become known to a friend of the stepdaughter's.

And I believe he indicated, in addition to his conscious, that this would be a reason for us to -- to come over and talk to him about it.

Q. Are you referring to Toi Register?

A. Um... is that her name? Yes.

Q. Okay. And you discuss that, in the bottom paragraph of the November 16th -- I'm sorry, November 15th letter.

There's information here concerning Toi Register having had her chest, quote, "accidentally touched," end quote, by Mr. Kendrick.

Was it Mr. Kendrick that told you that?

A. Boy. This was repeated to us by....

I don't know where that information -- how we gathered it. It might have been mentioned by the stepdaughter. We --

We did not talk with Toi Register.

Q. Okay.

Was there any reason that you did not talk to Toi Register to see if the touching of her chest by Brother Kendrick was actually accidental, as opposed to intentional?

A. I don't remember why we did not talk with her.

Q. Were you concerned on November 15th, 1993, that there might be other young girls who Brother Kendrick had been touching in their breasts?

A. Can you please repeat that?

Q. Yeah.

During this meeting of November 11th, you learned that there had been some touching of Toi Register and some touching of Andrea by Mr. Kendrick.

Q. All right. What's the other document that you're thinking of?

A. I just, I thought there was three pages. But it's a long time ago.

Q. Was your letter of November 15th, 1993, which we've looked at earlier...

A. Um-hum.

Q. ... was that letter sent to Oakley Congregation on September 8th, 1998?

A. I can't say for sure (shrugs shoulders).

Q. In the letter of August 31, 1998, that was sent to Oakley, Question No. 3 says: "Was it a one-time occurrence?" And the answer is "One time."

Are you the individual who answered these Questions 1 through 9? Including Question 3?

A. Yes.

Q. Is there any reason, in answering Question 3, that you did not make reference to the touching of Toi Register?

A. I had no way of proving it.

It was just something hearsay, I guess you'd call it, the stepdaughter making a statement that this Toi Register had made that statement.

But I think even the stepdaughter mentioned that it was unintentional.

Something in the original letter about that. It said:

"Toy mentioned the abuse to her mother and added that Brother Kendrick on another occasion had accidentally touched her chest but admitted that it was not intentional."

Anyway, it was just hearsay what the stepdaughter told us.

So....

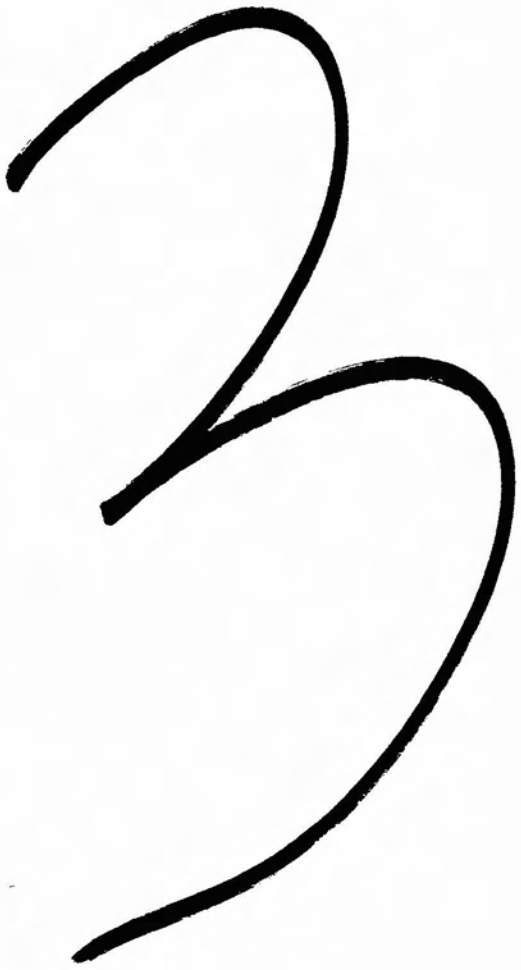
Q. Did Mr. Kendrick deny, in the meeting that you you had on November 12th, 19 -- I'm sorry, November 11th, 1993, that he had also touched the breast of Toi Register?

A. I don't recall if he denied it or not.

Q. Did he admit it?

A. I don't recall what he said about it.

MR. SIMONS: Let me show you two other letters that we're going to mark as exhibits next in order. One is of June 19th, 1998.



And that will be Exhibit 5?

THE REPORTER: Yes.

MR. SIMONS: And then September 2nd, 1998, will be Exhibit 6.

MR. SCHNACK: June 19 is Exhibit 5?

MR. SIMONS: Yeah.

JEHOVAH'S WITNESSES, FREMONT, CA
C/O MICHAEL J CLARKE

FREMONT CA 94555

Dear Brothers:

Your letter dated November 15, 1993, has been received. As you will note from the enclosed S-52 form, Brother Jonathan Kendrick has been deleted from serving as a ministerial servant on the grounds of "uncleanness."

Your letter states: "He confessed to touching the breasts of his stepdaughter while she was sleeping. She was awakened instantly and knew what had happened." Since this incident is known by outside members of the family, it is appropriate that Brother Kendrick be deleted from serving as a ministerial servant with your congregation.

On page 92 of the Kingdom Ministry School textbook the following is stated: "Uncleanness includes an intentional momentary touching of sexual parts or caressing of breasts. Such minor uncleanness can be handled at the discretion of an elder or two; it does not require a judicial hearing. There is a need for strong counsel, admonition, and assistance to help the individual to maintain chaste conduct in the future."

In harmony with the above, it will not be necessary for a judicial committee to handle the "uncleanness" committed by Brother Kendrick. However, it would be appropriate for two elders to meet with him and provide him with strong Scriptural counsel so as to avoid a repetition of such a serious offense.

We trust the above comments will be helpful to you. With this letter we are pleased to send you an expression of our warm Christian love and best wishes.

THE WATCHTOWER BIBLE AND TRACT SOCIETY OF NEW YORK, Inc., a corporation, et al.,

Defendants.

No. HG11558324

ASSIGNED FOR ALL PURPOSES TO JUDGE ROBERT McGUINESS, DEPARTMENT 22

PLAINTIFF'S MOTION IN LIMINE NO. 6 TO EXCLUDE EVIDENCE OF AND REFERENCE TO INAPPLICABLE PRIVILEGE ISSUES

Trial Date: 5/21/2012

STATEMENT OF THE ISSUE

Defendants Watchtower New York and Fremont Congregation have each argued that they could not warn of Jonathan Kendrick's propensity for sexual abuse, nor inform the Congregation of the reason for his removal as a Ministerial Servant, because to do so would violate the Clergy-Penitent and "Spiritual" Privileges. The Court has previously rejected the argument as to the specific evidence regarding Jonathan Kendrick in this case, both in two separate Motions to Compel Discovery and in Plaintiff's Punitive Damage Pleading Motion. Neither Defendants' agents, nor its Attorneys, should be permitted to testify or argue to the jury that Clergy-Penitent or Spiritual Privileges would have been violated if remedial action regarding Jonathan Kendrick was taken in 1993.

I. THE INFORMATION CONCERNING JONATHAN KENDRICK WAS NOT RECEIVED IN A CLERGY-PENITENT PRIVILEGE SETTING.

Information concerning Kendrick's molestation of his stepdaughter was received in a meeting held with Elders Abrahamson and Clarke, Jonathan Kendrick, Evelyn Kendrick, and the stepdaughter.

(Abrahamson Depo.. Ex. 1, 120:4-121:2; Clarke Depo., Ex. 2, 29:4-30:14; Evelyn Kendrick Dec., Ex. 3, para. 3.) Mr. Abrahamson conceded in his deposition that third party reports of sexual abuse committed by other perpetrators within the Congregation were not anticipated or expected to be kept confidential. (Abrahamson Depo., Ex. 1, 59:24-60:18).

In order to apply in California, the Clergy-Penitent Privilege, as codified in Evidence Code section 1032, there must be a "confidential communication." (Evid. Code § 1032; Roman Catholic Archbishop of Los Angeles v. Superior Court (2005) 131 Cal.App.4th 417, 441; John Doe 2 v. Superior Court (2005) 132 Cal. App. 4th 1504, 1517-18). Statements are not "confidential" if they are made in the presence of any third persons, even other victims of a sex offender. (John Doe 2, supra, at p. 1518.) In Doe 2, statements made in a "Healing Conference" where other victims were present were held not subject to Clergy privilege. The statements made by the stepdaughter, Evelyn, and Jonathan Kendrick at a family meeting with the Elders in 1993 were all made in the presence of third persons. The report containing the information upon which Watchtower New York instructed the Fremont Elders to act came from the Kendrick family meeting. (North Congregation Letter Nov. 15, 1993, Ex. 4; and Watchtower Letter Dec. 3, 1993, Ex 5.) No "confidential communications," within the definition of California law, were the basis of the information received by the Elders or their decision to Remove Kendrick from his post as Ministerial Servant. The Court has twice ruled on this issue in Plaintiff's prior Motions to Compel Discovery. (Orders of September, 2011 and October, 2011, Exs. 6 and 7.).

There is simply no factual or legal basis to claim or apply Clergy-Penitent Privilege as to the information received by the Elders in the Kendrick home meeting, or the subsequent actions of Defendants in disciplining him. Therefore any testimony, argument, or evidence that Clergy-Penitent Privilege prevented warning the Congregation or its adults and parents that Jonathan Kendrick was removed from his position as a Ministerial Servant because of an act of child sexual abuse is without legal or factual basis.

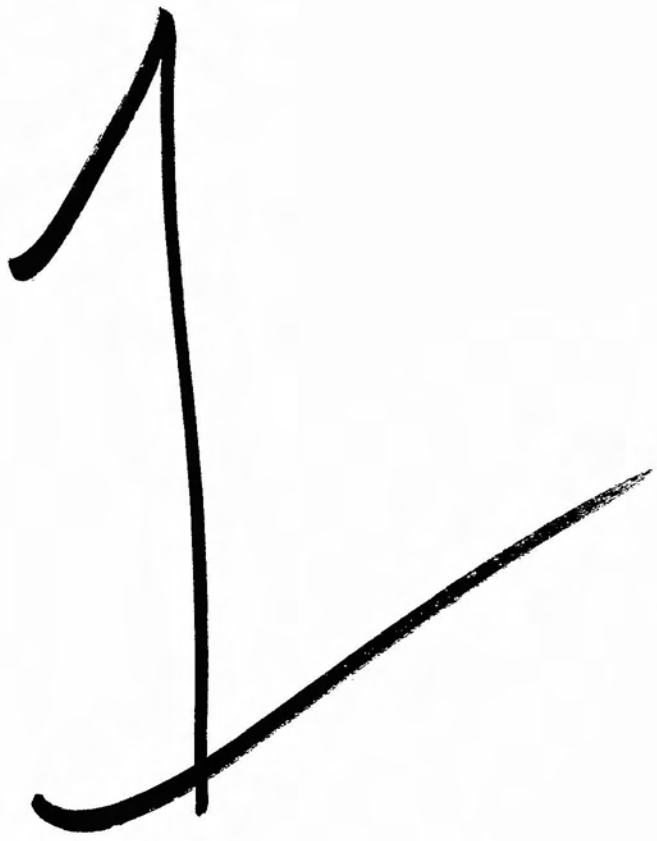
II. CALIFORNIA LAW DOES NOT RECOGNIZE A SEPARATE "SPIRITUAL PRIVILEGE."

In California, the law is and has always been that all privileges are statutory unless constitutionally compelled. (Evid. Code § 911; Roman Catholic Archbishop v. Superior Court (2005) 131 Cal.App.4th 417, 441.) California has not recognized a non-statutory "spiritual privilege," and Defendants have not yet cited any case so holding. Laws regarding protection from and liability for child sexual abusers have always been deemed to have a "secular purpose," if applied to all entities rather than just religious or a specific religion. Notwithstanding the lack of any support in the law, Defendants have argued, and presented testimony through the Affidavit of Elder Alan Shuster filed in opposition to Plaintiff's Motion to Amend, that they are prohibited from warning Congregation parents and members of the risk of child abuse posed by Kendrick because of "religious doctrine." (Shuster Dec. Apr. 26, 2011, Excerpt, Ex. 8, para. 45)



To the extent that this argument attempts to create a non-statutory "spiritual privilege," it must be based upon a First Amendment right. However, extensive case law over decades has rejected this argument, because sexual abuse of children is not deemed to be an exercise of religion. (See Hamilton, "The Licentiousness in Religious Organizations," William and Mary Bill of Rights Journal, Vol. 18, No. 4 (2010), copy attached as Ex. 9, pp. 967-68 and fn. 66). The U.S. Supreme Court has long so held, upholding laws against polygamy, child labor, and child pornography against religious First Amendment challenges. (Reynolds v. U.S. (1878) 98 U.S. 145, 164-66 [Prohibition on polygamy does not infringe on First Amendment because "to permit a man to excuse his practices to the contrary because of his religious belief . . . would be to make the professed doctrines of religious belief superior to the law of the land and in effect permit every citizen to become a law unto himself"]; Prince v. Massachusetts (1944) 321 U.S. 158 [Jehovah's Witness children could not distribute religious literature in violation of child labor laws regardless of the children's status as ministers in the faith]; New York v. Ferber (1982) 458 U.S. 747, 774 [a category of speech can constitutionally be excluded from First Amendment protection to further the protection of children].)

There is no legal basis to allow Defendants, even though they are religious corporations, to introduce testimony or argument that they were compelled by privilege or First Amendment protected rights to keep secret the existence of a known child sexual molester within their small congregation.

A Yes.

Q And during your years of service in Fremont, has such an investigation committee existed?

A The investigative committee is developed based on the circumstances. So maybe an individual felt comfortable coming to me and confessing a sin, or that they were party to a sin or that they heard of a sin. So it might be good for me to be on that investigating committee because they spoke to me. I would be a natural choice, but I wouldn't do it by myself. There would be another brother with me.

Q All right. Is the existence of such an investigation committee something that is communicated to all the members of the congregation?

A No.

Q And let me make my question clear. I don't think it was.

Without regard to a specific investigation, is generally the ability of the elders to have an investigation committee under certain circumstances something that is taught to all of the members or explained to the members?

A Could you rephrase that question, please?

Q Yes. Were members customarily told that the Body of Elders can under certain circumstances convene an investigation committee? In other words, was the process known to the members that a judicial committee could be or investigation committee could be convened if circumstances so required?

A I believe that's in our publications.

Q So would I be correct in saying that an individual member who brought to an elder's attention a specific situation that would be of such a serious nature that an investigation would follow would customarily be aware of the power of the elders to convene an investigation?

A I believe I understand your question, so to answer that question, the congregation would expect the elders to investigate an allegation of serious wrongdoing.

Q And certainly sexual abuse of a child would fall under that category of serious wrongdoing?

A Yes.

Q Hold on one second for the --

A Okay.

Q -- siren there. All right.

It's not meant to be a hint on any specific question or answer.

Dear Brothers,

We are writing to you regarding a case of child abuse. We telephoned 11/12/93 and it was suggested that we submit in writing our questions.

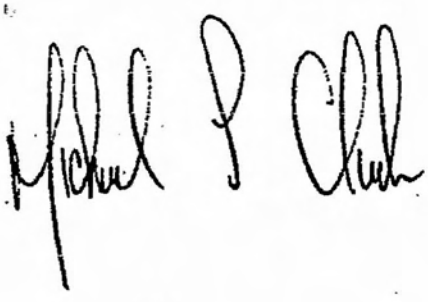
We met on 11/11/93 with Jonathan Kendrick, a ministerial servant, who confessed to child abuse with his 15 yr old step daughter. The abuse occurred approximately 4 months ago. He confessed to touching the breast of his step daughter while she was sleeping. She was awaken instantly and knew what had happened. His wife was informed that evening and the 3 of them talked it out between them. Brother Kendrick thought since he was sorry and his family was willing to forget the abuse, he would not have to report it to the congregation elders. He said that his conscious continued to bother him.

Evelyn, his wife, is baptized but inactive. She occasionally attends meetings.

Andrea, the step daughter, is not baptized and is no longer an unbaptized publisher. The step daughter is now using this as a tool to threaten with when she wants something. Because she has been promiscuous with 2 boys at school. the parents have tried to enforce house rules covering her comings and goings.

Andrea has recently mentioned the abuse to another young girl, Toy Register, whom she attends school with. Coincidentally, Toy attends our congregation meetings and is studying. Her mother is disfellowshipped. Toy mentioned the abuse to her mother and added that Brother Kendrick on another occasion had accidentally touched her chest but admitted that it was not intentional. Mrs Register is now threatening to call the police.

Here are the facts as best as we can present them without interviewing each party. Our questions are as follows:



1. Can 2 elders handle this matter with Brother Kendrick as mentioned on page 93 of "Pay attention to Yourselves....Flock", under the heading Uncleanness? Or do we have to form a Judicial hearing because of it being child abuse?

2. We assume that Brother Kendrick does not qualify any longer as a Ministerial Servant. We will announce to the congregation that he is no longer serving as such. If this is incorrect, please inform us.

3. The legal department has given us some direction as far as our legal requirements and we will follow that closely.

We will wait to hear from you regarding the above questions. If I have not been clear enough, you may reach me during the day at my work phone (510-462-7861 ext 105)

C/O MICHAEL J CLARKE

Dear Brothers:

Your letter dated November 15, 1993, has been received. As you will note from the enclosed S-52 form, Brother Jonathan Kendrick has been deleted from serving as a ministerial servant on the grounds of "uncleanness."

Your letter states: "He confessed to touching the breasts of his stepdaughter while she was sleeping. She was awakened instantly and knew what had happened." Since this incident is known by outside members of the family, it is appropriate that Brother Kendrick be deleted from serving as a ministerial servant with your congregation.

On page 92 of the Kingdom Ministry School textbook the following is stated: "Uncleanness includes an intentional momentary touching of sexual parts or caressing of breasts. Such minor uncleanness can be handled at the discretion of an elder or two; it does not require a judicial hearing. There is a need for strong counsel, admonition, and assistance to help the individual to maintain chaste conduct in the future."

In harmony with the above, it will not be necessary for a judicial committee to handle the "uncleanness" committed by Brother Kendrick. However, it would be appropriate for two elders to meet with him and provide him with strong Scriptural counsel so as to avoid a repetition of such a serious offense.

We trust the above comments will be helpful to you. With this letter we are pleased to send you an expression of our warm Christian love and best wishes.

Your brothers,

Doe Plaintiff/Petitioner(s) VS. The Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, I Defendant/Respondent(s) (Abbreviated Title)	No. HG11558324 Order Motion to Compel Further Answers at Deposition Granted

The Motion to Compel Further Answers at Deposition was set for hearing on 09/29/2011 at 03:00 PM in Department 22 before the Honorable Robert McGuiness. The Tentative Ruling was published and has not been contested.

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED THAT:

The tentative ruling is affirmed as follows: The Motion of Plaintiff Jane Doe to Compel Answers to Questions at Deposition of Gary Abrahamson and for Sanctions is GRANTED. Plaintiff has established that the information sought is not precluded from disclosure under the penitent-clergy privilege, Evidence Code §1031-1034 because the questions do not appear to call for communications that were presumed to be kept confidential with only the clergy member to whom they were communication. Instead, the questions appear to call for information and communications of a kind that would be expected to be communicated beyond that clergy member to others within the religious organization, i.e. a judicial investigating committee, for purposes of taking responding to the communication within the church. (Cf. Roman Catholic Archbishop of Los Angeles v. Superior Court (2005) 131 Cal.App.4th 417, 445-46.)

Defendant shall present Gary Abrahamson for further deposition and shall not instruct him not to answer the questions identified in the motion based upon clergy-penitent privilege.
The further deposition shall take place at a mutually-convenient time, but no later than 20 days after entry of this order.

The request for sanctions in connection with this motion is DENIED.

Doe Plaintiff/Petitioner(s) VS. The Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, I Defendant/Respondent(s) (Abbreviated Title)	No. HG11558324 Order Motion to Compel Production of Documents Granted

The Motion to Compel Production of Documents filed for Jane Doe was set for hearing on 10/03/2011 at 03:00 PM in Department 22 before the Honorable Robert McGuiness.

The matter was argued and submitted, and good cause appearing therefore,

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED THAT:

Pursuant to the court's prior order in this matter, it conducted an in camera review of two letters dated respectively, November 15, 1993 and December 3, 1993, to determine whether the same were (are) privileged communications within the application of Evidence Code section 1034 and related statutes. After review, the court determines that the letters are not privileged and plaintiff's motion to compel production is granted. However, the court will withhold production of the subject letters and they shall remain under seal until November 17, 2011 so as to allow defendants time to consider and seek appellate review here. The court has determined this matter largely within the context of the holding of Roman Catholic Diocese of Los Angeles v. Superior Court, 131 Cal. App. 4th 417. The record there and here demonstrate that the communications were likely to be shared with more than one person; persons other than elders would be likely to consider same and that the penitent (defendant Kendrick) did not expect the communications to be kept confidential (under the circumstances related and presented).

JANE DOE, Plaintiff, v. WATCHTOWER BIBLE AND TRACT SOCIETY OF NEW York, INC., FREMONT CONGREGATION OF JEHOVAH'S WITNESSES, NORTH UNIT, et al, Defendants.	Case No.: HG115558324 DECLARATION OF ALLEN SHUSTER

I, Allen Shuster, after being duly sworn, depose and state that if called to testify in this matter I would competently testify as follows:

1. I am over 21 years of age, of sound mind, and competent to make this Affidavit. I have personal knowledge of the matters contained herein, and they are all true and correct.

2. I reside in Patterson, New York, and have served as an elder in the faith of Jehovah's Witnesses since about 1979.

3. On April 23, 1976, I began serving at the U.S. branch offices of Jehovah's Witnesses in New York. I have served in the Service Department of the U.S. branch offices since February 5, 1981. I provide spiritual assistance to congregation elders who call or write the Service Department for help. Prior to March 2001, the spiritual assistance provided by the Service Department, along with the appointment of elders and ministerial servants, was communicated to congregations of Jehovah's Witnesses through the Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc. ("Watchtower"). Since March 2001, this has been

Will, pages 151-2. In addition, there may be instances where a husband and wife, or a parent and child, may together seek or be provided with spiritual counsel, advice or comfort from the elders. The elders and participants to these confidential and private spiritual communications would view these communications as confidential and congregants expect the elders to keep such communications strictly confidential.

45. The religious doctrine of Jehovah's Witnesses requires that all elders keep confidential and private spiritual communication strictly confidential. The Watchtower, April 1, 1971, pages 222-224; Kingdom Ministry, July 1975; The Watchtower, December 15, 1975, pages 764-66; The Watchtower, September 1, 1983, pages 21-26; The Watchtower, September 15, 1989, pages 10-15; The Watchtower, September 1, 1991, pages 22-27; The Watchtower, November 15, 1991, pages 19-23. An elder who reveals the contents of such a confidential communication may be subject to removal.

46. In this case, the Letter to All Bodies of Elders dated July 1, 1989, PE 1 and WE R, provides a reminder to the elders of their duty to maintain the confidential nature of confidential communications.

SIGNED the 26 day of April, 2012, at Patterson, New York.

I declare under penalty of perjury under the laws of the State of New York that the foregoing is true and correct to the best of my information, belief, and knowledge.

THE "LICENTIOUSNESS" IN RELIGIOUS ORGANIZATIONS AND WHY IT IS NOT PROTECTED UNDER RELIGIOUS LIBERTY CONSTITUTIONAL PROVISIONS

Marci A. Hamilton*

There is no doubt that the sexual abuse of children occurs within religious organizations and that these organizations too often operate to perpetuate cycles of abuse. There was a time when such a statement was counter-intuitive, but it is now merely a statement of fact. One difficult question to answer is how the law has failed to protect the vulnerable in religious organizations. Misguided reliance on the First Amendment is partly to blame.

There are many reasons why the law has been insufficient to protect children in religious organizations, some more obvious than others. First, children have not had the legal capacity until relatively recently to challenge their abusers.[1] Second, the statutes of limitations for child sex abuse have been constructed in a way to make it virtually impossible for the vast majority of victims to get to a prosecutor and/or civil courts before their claims have expired.[2] Third, as a society, we have tended to adopt a "romantic attitude" and trust most religious organizations, which gave them latitude to hide abuse.[3] That changed in 2002 when the Boston Globe revealed that the Boston Archdiocese of the Roman Catholic Church had covered up horrendous abuse by serial pedophiles, including Father Paul Shanley and Father John Geoghan.[4]

There have been two other hurdles to adequate legal protection for children at risk in religious organizations, both of which have originated from religious groups themselves. One important reason for the law's ineffectiveness has been the intentional opacity, or secrecy, of religious organizations on these issues.[8] For a number of religious organizations, there are built-in theological or religious rules that keep child abuse in particular secret.[9] When that dynamic is combined with the fact that most perpetrators against children abuse more than one child,[10] cycles of abuse become entrenched within the organization and far more children are abused than would have been had the organization not kept abuse internal. Sealing off abuse from the legal and social forces constructed to protect children disables legal efficacy in this field and creates a system within which more children are abused.

The second way in which religious organizations have impeded the capacity of the law to protect children is the perverse decision to defend their actions establishing the conditions for abuse by invoking federal and state religious liberty guarantees.[11]

Although pedophiles vary greatly, their sexual behavior is repetitive and highly predictable.").

[11] Mainstream religious organizations like the Roman Catholic Church and the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints have in recent years pushed for a "church autonomy" First Amendment doctrine, which would keep them unaccountable for their negligent acts

Typically, the sexual abuse practices are not supported by the religious beliefs of these organizations.[12] Fundamentalist polygamous groups, though, raise a slightly more interesting issue under religious liberty theory, because their sexual abuse of children and child bigamy are rooted in the religious edicts of powerful spiritual leaders. The purpose of this Article is to show that even when abuse is rooted in such religious sources, conduct involving illicit sex, including child sex abuse, was never meant to be constitutionally protected and should be categorically excluded from religious liberty protection.

It was widely understood by English and American society before and when the First Amendment and state constitutions were drafted that there can be too much liberty, which they called "licentiousness."[13] They tended to view certain actions as beyond any religious liberty guarantee. This means that certain actions were never intended to receive protection under religious liberty guarantees. Among the liberties that were never intended to be protected, clearly, were polygamy and sexual abuse. They were consciously excluded from free exercise protection.

that led to child sex abuse. Their most recent initiative was to file amicus briefs in the Nevada Supreme Court urging the Court to embrace expansive First Amendment immunity for religious organizations accused of permitting child sex abuse within their organizations. See Brief Amicus Curiae of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints, Ramani v. Hamilton, The Waterloo for the So-Called Church Autonomy Theory: Widespread Clergy Abuse and Institutional Cover-Up, 29 CARDOZO L. REV. 225 (2007). In this Article, I will first briefly examine the beliefs and practices of the fundamentalist polygamists, primarily but not exclusively the Fundamentalist Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints (FLDS), which have led to a cycle of severe and entrenched child sex abuse. The point of focusing upon the fundamentalist polygamists is that their sexual abuse of children is grounded in their religious scriptures and beliefs. Therefore, if there is any religious liberty defense to furthering child sex abuse, they arguably would have the most powerful arguments.

Second, I will survey the rich history that establishes that "licentious," or illicit, sexual behavior was never intended to be protected by free exercise protections in the history of the United States (or Canada), even if religiously motivated. It is beyond the reach of free exercise guarantees, whether in the state or federal constitutions. I will also look to First Amendment doctrine, which further supports categorical exclusions. Free speech cases already recognize this principle in the context of child pornography and exploitation, which are constitutionally unprotected activities. If the First Amendment was not designed to protect the act of creating images of children engaging in sex, it follows that neither should it protect the acts that lead to child sexual abuse itself. Third, I will extend this reasoning to contemporary cases and explain why carving out licentiousness from religious liberty's reach can keep these cases from negatively affecting other aspects of the doctrine.

I. THE FUNDAMENTALIST POLYGAMISTS AND THE BELIEFS AND CONDUCT THAT HAVE CONTRIBUTED TO CYCLES OF CHILD SEX ABUSE

The United States has struggled with religiously motivated polygamy for well over a century. Though there are exceptions, in the main, religiously motivated polygamy has elevated men to positions of nearly absolute power, demeaned and disabled women, and harmed children. Despite popular cultural propaganda like the television show Big Love, those women who have escaped from such marriages, which are often initiated when they are under-age, reveal lives of desperation and great sadness.[14] If there was ever a religiously motivated practice that should be outside the bounds of constitutional protection, this is it.

A. Historical Background

There are a number of fundamentalist polygamist groups whose history traces back to the early decades of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints (LDS Church or Mormon).[15] While the LDS Church practiced polygamy for some decades during the nineteenth century, its leaders issued two later manifestoes that, first, rejected the practice,[16] and, second, instituted excommunication for those who continued to engage in polygamy.[17] A small number of Mormons, though, rejected these new revelations and continued to practice polygamy in Mexico and the United States,[18] and later Canada.[19] "Every fundamentalist group has its own particular rules and mode of dress, and the members blindly follow their leader. Though some of their practices differ concerning the act of procuring wives, every group is convinced that they are a 'peculiar people.'"[20] Thus, they have broken into separate sects, but continue to practice polygamy.

Laws against polygamy were in place well before the United States was founded,[21] and existed in every state during the nineteenth century through today.[22] They blanketed the states before Congress took up the Morrill Anti-Bigamy Act of 1862 and the Edmunds-Tucker Act of 1887, which extended the ban on polygamy to the Utah

Territory (and all territories under the jurisdiction of the United States) before the states in those areas were established.[23] Thus, the extension of anti-polygamy laws to the territories followed the law in the states. None of the anti-polygamy laws were limited to Mormons, or any other religious group, but were applicable to all who engaged in polygamy, secular or religious.[24]

The Republican Platform of 1856 situated polygamy in the same moral universe as slavery:

> Resolved: That the Constitution confers upon Congress sovereign powers over the Territories of the United States for their government; and that in the exercise of this power, it is both the right and the imperative duty of Congress to prohibit in the Territories those twin relics of barbarism—Polygamy, and Slavery.[25]

The Republicans were committed to "humanitarian reform" in both arenas and to ending the "enslavement of women in Utah."[26]

When the United States Supreme Court was asked to rule on whether there is free exercise protection for polygamy, it reiterated the phraseology of the twin relics of "barbarism"[27] and described polygamy as a violation of historical practices and equality between women and men:

Congress later amended these acts into the Edmunds-Tucker Act of 1887, ch. 397, 24 Stat. 635. This was the act that precipitated the confrontation between the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints and the United States government that ultimately led to the issuance of the Woodruff Manifesto. See also RICHARD S. > In fact, according as monogamous or polygamous marriages are allowed, do we find the principles on which the government of the people, to a greater or less extent, rests. Professor Lieber says, polygamy leads to the patriarchal principle, and which, when applied to large communities, fetters the people in stationary despotism, while that principle cannot long exist in connection with monogamy. . . . An exceptional colony of polygamists under an exceptional leadership may sometimes exist for a time without appearing to disturb the social condition of the people who surround it; but there cannot be a doubt that, unless restricted by some form of constitution, it is within the legitimate scope of the power of every civil government to determine whether polygamy or monogamy shall be the law of social life under its dominion.[28]

The Court thus acknowledged that there might be instances of polygamy that do not result in oppression, but that in the main, the practice tended to generate severe harm to women and children. This acknowledgment has been borne out on the international stage with the United Nations identifying polygamy and plural marriage as violations of the human rights of women.[29] That oppression, in fact, has been visited repeatedly Church, or Church of Latter-Day Saints, one of the distinguishing features of which is the practice of polygamy—a crime against the laws, and abhorrent to the sentiments and feelings of the civilized world. Notwithstanding the stringent laws which have been passed by Congress—notwithstanding all the efforts made to suppress this barbarous practice—the sect or community composing the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints perseveres, in defiance of law, in preaching, upholding, promoting and defending it. . . . The organization of a community for the spread and practice of polygamy is, in a measure, a return to barbarism. . . . One pretense for this obstinate course is that their belief in the practice of polygamy, or in the right to indulge in it, is a religious belief, and therefore under the protection of the constitutional guarantee of religious freedom. This is altogether a sophistical plea. No doubt the Thugs of India imagined that their belief in the right of assassination was a religious belief; but their thinking so did not make it so. The practice of suttee by the Hindu widows may have sprung from a supposed religious conviction. The offering of human sacrifices by our own ancestors in Britain was no doubt sanctioned by an equally conscientious impulse. But no one, on that account, would hesitate to brand these practices, now, as crimes against society, and obnoxious to condemnation and punishment by the civil authority.").

upon the vulnerable in the Mormon-derived polygamous societies in the United States. In order for the men to have numerous brides, they have drawn from girls and adolescents,[30] and they have discarded rebellious boys.[31] While these practices have been widespread, there have been relatively few prosecutions,[32] in part because so much of the abuse occurs under mandatory layers of secrecy, but also because FLDS leaders claim that the enforcement of the laws against statutory rape and child bigamy and polygamy violate their free exercise rights.[33]

B. The Religious Beliefs and Conduct that Have Contributed to Child Sex Abuse in Fundamentalist Mormon Communities

The fundamentalist Mormons actually view the LDS Church as the true church, though its leaders abandoned the mandate of polygamy.[34] Thus, there are beliefs and practices within the LDS Church that cast light on FLDS practices. (They also cast light on the origins of the serious child sex abuse occurring within the LDS Church itself.)[35]

1. Principles from the Mainstream Mormon Church

LDS texts establish beliefs and practices that operate to keep child sex abuse secret. First, there is a commitment to keep the image of the LDS Church pure. There is a belief that "[i]t is our great mission . . . to be a standard to all the world."[36] This requires measures that "safeguard the purity, integrity, and good name . . . or moral influence of the Church."[37] The Church's image, therefore, is a driving force permeating the faith, and operates even with respect to instances of child sex abuse.

Leaders are discouraged from cooperating in cases involving abuse as detailed in the 1998 Church Handbook of Instructions:

> To avoid implicating the Church in legal matters to which it is not a party, leaders should avoid testifying in civil or criminal cases reviewing the conduct of members over whom they preside. A leader should confer with the Church's Office of Legal Services or the Area Presidency:
>
> 1. If he is subpoenaed or requested to testify in a case involving a member over whom he presides.
> 2. Before testifying in any cases involving abuse.
> 3. Before communicating with attorneys or civil authorities in connection with legal proceedings.
> 4. Before offering verbal or written testimony on behalf of a member in a sentencing hearing, parole board hearing, or probationary status hearing.
> Church leaders should not try to persuade alleged victims or other witnesses either to testify or not to testify in criminal or civil court proceedings.[38]

Second, while there is no hierarchy in the sense of a monarchy, there is leadership, and it is made up of "prophet[s]" who "speak[ ] for God."[39] These first two principles have situated the Church and its leaders as barriers between victims, perpetrators and legal authorities.

Third, believers are required to be obedient to the commands of the prophets, and if they are obedient, "[g]reat [b]lessings [f]ollow."[40] "When a prophet speaks for God, it is as if God were speaking."[41] Members are told to do that which the prophets tell them to do, because a "prophet will never be allowed to lead the Church astray."[42] Therefore, believers "should follow his inspired teachings completely."[43]

Although there is a general proposition that members should obey authorities and the law,[44] there are only two crimes that believers are required to report to the authorities: murder and theft.[45] Instances of adultery, in contrast, "shall be tried

INSTRUCTIONS: BOOK 1, at 151 (1998) ("Legal Matters"). The more recent 2006 Handbook made one substantive change by eliminating the specific reference to "abuse." It also eliminated the list format:

> To avoid implicating the Church in legal matters to which it is not a party, Church leaders should avoid testifying in civil or criminal cases reviewing the conduct of members over whom they preside. In the United States and Canada, a leader should confer with the Church's Office of General Counsel if he is subpoenaed, is considering testifying in a lawsuit, is asked to communicate with attorneys or civil authorities regarding legal proceedings, or is asked to offer verbal or written testimony. Outside the United States and Canada, leaders should contact the administration office to obtain local legal counsel in these situations.

> Church leaders should not try to persuade alleged victims or other witnesses either to testify or not to testify in criminal or civil court proceedings.

"Church leaders should be sensitive to such [abuse] victims,"[47] but the primary focus of the section on "Abuse and Cruelty" revolves around how to handle the perpetrator: he or she is required to be disciplined within the Church, but later may be "restored to full fellowship or readmitted by baptism and confirmation."[48] If either the victim or the perpetrator needs counseling, leaders and bishops are supposed to call LDS Social Services, so that counseling will be "in harmony with gospel principles."[49] The strongest suggestion regarding reporting abuse requires urging an abuser to turn him or herself in: if a bishop or stake president learns of a "member's abusive activities," they "should urge the member to report these activities to the appropriate government authorities."[50] There is an implicit acquiescence to reporting of abuse to the authorities by the leadership if there is mandatory reporting in the state, but no directive.[51] If reporting is legally mandated, the leader is required to "encourage the [abusing] member to secure qualified legal advice."[52] The same advice is not given to victims.

[51] In Utah, like some other states, clergy are required to report abuse unless it is obtained during a "confession." UTAH CODE ANN. § 62A-4a-403 (2009). The same is true in Arizona, ARIZ. REV. STAT. ANN. § 13-3620 (2009), Oregon, OR. REV. STAT. § 419B.010 (2007) (incorporating by reference the clergy-penitent privilege at OR. REV. STAT. § 40.260 (2007)), and California, CAL. PENAL CODE § 11166(d) (Deering 2009). Differences between the states, though, rest on how broadly or narrowly "confession" is interpreted. The LDS Church and other religious groups have argued with success that most clergy communications satisfy the "confession" exception to the requirement to report, successfully in Utah, Montana, and Washington, but not in California. See Scott v. Hammock, 870 P.2d 947, 949 (Utah 1994) (holding that "nonpenitential communications are privileged under Utah law if they are intended to be confidential and are made for the purpose of seeking spiritual counseling, guidance, or advice from a cleric acting in his or her professional role and pursuant to the discipline of his or her church"); State v. MacKinnon, 957 P.2d 23, 28 (Mont. 1998) (holding that "Utah's broader interpretation of the clergy-penitent privilege as set forth in Scott" applies); State v. Martin, 975 P.2d 1020, 1026 (Wash. 1999) (holding that "[o]ne element of the privilege requires the clergy member to act in a professional capacity"). But see Doe 2 v. Superior Court, 34 Cal. Rptr. 3d 458, 465–69 (Cal. Ct. App. 2005) (holding that "'[i]n order for a statement to be privileged, it must satisfy all of the conceptual requirements of a penitential communication: 1) it must be intended to be in confidence; 2) it must be made to a member of the clergy who in the course of his or her religious discipline or practice is authorized or accustomed to hear such communications; and 3) such member of the clergy has a duty under the discipline or tenets of the church, religious denomination or organization to keep such communications secret'" (quoting People v. Edwards, 248 Cal. Rptr. 53, 56 (Cal. Ct. App. 1988))).

The LDS Church thus has created an opaque system when it comes to child sex abuse. While polygamy, child brides, and sex abuse are not permitted or encouraged, the structure of the organization, its self-image as a leader of virtue in the world, and its patent intent to protect the Church from liability, have yielded a cycle of abuse not unlike that widely documented in the Roman Catholic Church.[53]

2. Practices Within the FLDS

The fundamentalist groups are less devoted to securing a pure public image, no doubt because they are engaging in a great deal of illegal conduct (from polygamy to statutory rape to child abandonment), but they observe with fervor the mainstream LDS principles of deference to leaders and the disinclination to involve legal authorities in cases of abuse.[54] The fundamentalist polygamous communities that split off from the LDS Church to sustain their beliefs in divinely-mandated polygamy have followed strict patriarchal principles. Their leaders have fought each other for control and have claimed that they are God or have the most direct relationship with God.[55] This has meant that their edicts have been treated as orders from God. Power is typically secured through the mandate of communal property controlled by the leadership.[56]

Warren Jeffs, who is now incarcerated for a series of charges involving statutory rape and child abuse, is the most notorious polygamous sect prophet in recent years.[57] He has directed which men would have which women and girls, and even has broken up marriages and families to rearrange them to his edicts.[58] Jeffs exercised exclusive power to choose who would live on the Yearning for Zion Ranch near Eldorado, Texas, and handpicked each of the men, women, and children from other enclaves, putting asunder pre-existing families to put together the most righteous among his flock, according to his lights.[59] Secrecy has been central to the FLDS's practices, and has been furthered by prohibitions on filing birth or death certificates,[60] on obtaining medical care outside their enclaves,[61] and on reporting child sex abuse or statutory rape

Along with the Catholic hierarchy, the LDS leaders, and other religious organizations,[64] the fundamentalist polygamists have invoked the First Amendment and state free exercise guarantees to defend against liability for under-age marriages and child sex abuse.[65] Intuitively, such claims seem meritless on their face, but courts have struggled with free exercise doctrine and apply it to institutions responsible for creating opportunities for and constructing cycles of child sex abuse. By now, most courts to address the issue have rejected such constitutional defenses using contemporary doctrines.[66] A few states, however, have reached the counter-intuitive conclusion that religious liberty guarantees apply as defenses to child sex abuse claims, most notably Missouri, Utah, and Wisconsin.[67] The next section argues that history confirms intuitions: licentious, or illicit sexual, behavior was never intended to be protected by religious liberty guarantees.

II. THE HISTORY AND DOCTRINE SUPPORT CATEGORICAL EXCLUSION OF LICENTIOUS BEHAVIOR (ESPECIALLY INVOLVING CHILDREN) FROM RELIGIOUS LIBERTY GUARANTEES

Contemporary discourse treats liberty as though it is impossible to have too much. Such reasoning, though is a perversion of the history behind religious liberty, which limited liberty by incorporating the concept of "licentiousness." The epitome of licentiousness was illicit sexual behavior. This history as well as the references to conduct involving "licentiousness" found in a number of state constitutions, Canadian law, and in United States cases, strongly argues for an exception from religious liberty guarantees for claims involving sex abuse. It was an activity not intended to be encompassed.

This historically grounded principle of excluding licentious behavior (particularly involving children) from religious liberty guarantees is also reflected in free speech doctrine, where child pornography is an unprotected category of speech because of its link to child sex abuse.[68]

A. "Licentiousness" Was Understood to Be Too Much Liberty

If one looks carefully into the history of religious liberty, contemporary presumptions that incorporate no internal limitation turn out to be unfounded and ahistorical. There was a widely shared view that too much liberty is as bad as no liberty. Nineteenth and early twentieth century writings[69] and cases equated "licentiousness" with the variety of illicit sex activities—adultery,[70] child sex abuse,[71] and polygamy or bigamy.[72] Dictionaries also defined "licentious" as "dissolution" or "sexual [72] Davis v. Beason, 133 U.S. 333, 348 (1890). The term "licentiousness" has been used by multiple courts in cases prosecuted under the White Slave Act of 1910, ch. 395, 36 Stat. 825 (current version at 18 U.S.C. §§ 2421–2428 (2006)). See Athanasaw v. Supp. 231, 232 (E.D. Ill. 1936) (convicting defendant for transporting two girls for the purpose of debauchery in violation of the White Slave Act).

The White Slave Act, officially the Mann Act, was also used for the prosecution of polygamists. See Cleveland v. United States, 329 U.S. 14, 20 (1946) (holding the interstate transportation of a plural wife, for or by a member of a polygamist sect constitutes an immoral purpose under the Mann Act, and that such conviction under the Mann Act did not violate defendant's free exercise rights).

immorality."[73] In the 1850s, Canada also enacted a law that protected religious liberty but explicitly excluded acts of licentiousness.[74]

> It is also urged that the requisite criminal intent was lacking since petitioners were motivated by a religious belief. That defense claims too much. If upheld, it would place beyond the law any act done under claim of religious sanction. But it has long been held that the fact that polygamy is supported by a religious creed affords no defense in a prosecution for bigamy (citing Reynolds v. United States, 98 U.S. 145 (1878)). Whether an act is immoral within the meaning of the statute is not to be determined by the accused's concepts of morality. Congress has provided the standard. The offense is complete if the accused intended to perform, and did in fact perform, the act which the statute condemns, viz., the transportation of a woman for the purpose of making her his plural wife or cohabiting with her as such.

According to historian John Philip Reid, those in the eighteenth century "had as great a duty to oppose licentiousness as to defend liberty."[75] Historian Bernard Bailyn explained that

> [t]he very idea of liberty was bound up with the preservation of this balance of forces. For political liberty, as opposed to the theoretical liberty that existed in a state of nature, was traditionally known to be "a natural power of doing or not doing whatever we have in mind" so long as that doing was "consistent with the rules of virtue and the established laws of the society to which we belong"; it was "a power of acting agreeable to the laws which are made and enacted by the consent of the PEOPLE, and in no ways inconsistent with the natural rights of a single person, or the good of the society." Liberty, that is, was the capacity to exercise "natural rights" within limits set not by the mere will or desire of men in power but by non-arbitrary law—law enacted by legislatures containing within them the proper balance of forces.[76]

A number of state constitutions exclude "licentiousness," or illicit sex, from religious liberty protections along the lines of the language in the California Constitution:

> Free exercise and enjoyment of religion without discrimination or preference are guaranteed. This liberty of conscience does not excuse acts that are licentious or inconsistent with the peace or safety of the State. The Legislature shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion.[77]

This exclusion from free exercise protection first appeared in the Charter of Rhode Island and Providence Plantations of 1663, which stated:

> That our royall will and pleasure is, that noe person within the sayd colonye, at any tyme hereafter, shall bee any wise molested, punished, disquieted, or called in question, for any differences in opinione in matters of religion, and doe not actually disturb the civill peace of our sayd colony; but that all and everye person and persons may, from tyme to tyme, and at all tymes hereafter, freelye and fullye have and enjoye his and theire owne judgments and consciences, in matters of religious concernments, throughout the tract of land hereafter mentioned; they behaving themselves peaceablie and quietlie, and not useing this libertie to lycentiousnesse and profanenesse, nor to the civill injurye or outward disturbeance of others.[78]

The exclusion of "licentiousness" was reflected in a few other early state constitutions besides Rhode Island's Charter,[79] but it became most prevalent during the nineteenth century.[80] Most early constitutions also included a provision that made laws protecting peace and safety an exception to free exercise.[81]

Laws prohibiting illicit sex were among those laws expected to be enforced throughout society.[82] As I have discussed previously, ministers and pastors themselves during the founding era preached the rule of law for religious believers from their pulpits.[83] Influential Baptist preacher John Leland removed "licentious indulgence of the carnal appetite" from the sphere of religion, placing it squarely under control of "human law":

> It is not designed to defend the religious opinions of any, but the persons and rights of all; so that Jews, Turks, Pagans and Christians, with all their subdivided opinions, may peaceably live together in the same domain—each one enjoying the free exercise of his religious opinions, and all impartially protected by the law. Should any one man, or one sect, attempt to force another to believe, act or support, what they themselves believe in, with this plea, that the others were licentious and heretical, the assailants would be the offenders, to be punished by the law; for when a > man's religion leads him to commit overt acts, he should be punished for his actions and pitied for his delusion.[84]

This exclusion of illicit sex from the universe of religious liberty protections is consistent with the leading philosopher to influence the founding and framing generations, John Locke, who distinguished licentiousness from protectable religious belief and conduct as follows:

> I will not here tax the pride and ambition of some, the passion and uncharitable zeal of others. These are faults from which human affairs can perhaps scarce ever be perfectly freed; but yet such as nobody will bear the plain imputation of, without covering them with some specious colour; and so pretend to commendation, whilst they are carried away by their own irregular passions. But, however, that some may not colour their spirit of persecution and unchristian cruelty with a pretence of care of the public weal, and observation of the laws, and that others, under pretence of religion, may not seek impunity for their libertinism and licentiousness; in a word, that none may impose either upon himself or others, by the pretences of loyalty and obedience to the prince, or of tenderness and sincerity in the worship of God; I esteem it above all things necessary to distinguish exactly the business of civil government from that of religion and to settle the just bounds that lie between the one and the other.[85]

This view of licentiousness as beyond free exercise guarantees was further confirmed in the United States Supreme Court's earliest application of the Free Exercise Clause, in the Mormon polygamy cases. In Davis v. Beason,[86] the Court clearly identified polygamy as licentious: "The constitutions of several States, in providing for religious freedom, have declared expressly that such freedom shall not be construed to excuse acts of licentiousness, or to justify practices inconsistent with the peace and safety of the State."[87] In Reynolds v. United States,[88] the Court did not use the term licentious itself, but its reasoning plainly fit polygamy and bigamy into the category of illicit sexual and family arrangements and, therefore, also the concept that they are unprotected by the First Amendment:

> From that day to this we think it may safely be said there never has been a time in any State of the Union when polygamy has not been an offence against society, cognizable by the civil courts and punishable with more or less severity. In the face of all this evidence, it is impossible to believe that the constitutional guaranty of religious freedom was intended to prohibit legislation in respect to this most important feature of social life.[89]

The descriptions of illicit sex in the context of religious organizations or by religious actors are consistent with these assumptions and world views.[90]

The history of freedom of the press also included a parallel debate about the mutual parameters of liberty and licentiousness.[91] Thus, the notion that free exercise

B. The Free Speech Cases Have Already Incorporated the Principle of Excluding a Category of Licentious Speech from Constitutional Protection

The principle that a category defined by illegal sexual behavior is unprotected by a liberty guarantee is not a new doctrinal element within First Amendment jurisprudence. First Amendment free speech doctrine supports the categorical exclusion from free exercise of licentious acts. Under the Free Speech Clause, several types of speech are not protected, or protected to a scant degree.[92] For example, obscenity is not protected,[93] and pornography receives low-level protection.[94] Defamation and incitement to illegal conduct are also beyond the reach of the Free Speech Clause.[95] the sense that Blackstonianism implied that seditious libel was a crime, the Sedition Act embraced Blackstonianism and the new libertarianism repudiated it. What was new about the new libertarianism was the outright rejection of the very concept of seditious libel. The new libertarianism asserted that free republican government and the crime of seditious libel were incompatible even at a state level. It repudiated the old distinction between licentiousness and liberty, abandoned the requirement of proving malice as being of little use to a defendant in a political trial, assaulted the claim of truth-as-self-defense on the ground that the truthfulness of political opinions could not be proved, and perhaps most significantly, discarded reliance on the jury as a defense against prosecutorial and judicial bias. Nor are fighting words protected[96] or advocacy to illegal action if violence is imminent.[97] Most important for purposes of this Article is the Supreme Court's persistent refusal to provide free speech protection for child pornography that involves actual children.[98] Child pornography, and not just child obscenity, is categorically unprotected speech. These free speech categories of excluded speech—which involve sex and/or violence—provide further support for the proposition that free exercise guarantees appropriately exclude illicit sexual behavior, especially child sex abuse.

The Supreme Court steadfastly has refused to extend constitutional guarantees to the category of child pornography, because of the overriding governmental interest in protecting children from sex abuse and exploitation.[99] In 1982, the Court explicitly recognized that "the exploitative use of children in the production of pornography has become a serious national problem."[100] The members of the Court have accepted "[t]he legislative judgment, as well as the judgment found in relevant literature . . . that the use of children as subjects of pornographic materials is harmful to the physiological, emotional, and mental health of the child,"[101] as well as the need to censor child pornography because it is used "to seduce other children into sexual activity."[102]

Child pornography involving actual children, therefore, has been afforded no protection under the Free Speech Clause, starting with New York v. Ferber, which contains the first and most detailed explication of the Court's reasoning:

> Like obscenity statutes, laws directed at the dissemination of child pornography run the risk of suppressing protected expression by allowing the hand of the censor to become unduly heavy. For the following reasons, however, we are persuaded that the States are entitled to greater leeway in the regulation of pornographic depictions of children.
>
> First. It is evident beyond the need for elaboration that a State's interest in "safeguarding the physical and psychological well-being of a minor" is "compelling." Globe Newspaper Co. v. Superior Court, 457 U.S. 596 (1982). "A democratic society rests, for its continuance, upon the health, well-rounded growth of young people into full maturity as citizens." Prince v. Massachusetts, 321 U.S. 158, 168 (1944).
>
> . . .
>
> The prevention of sexual exploitation and abuse of children constitutes a government objective of surpassing importance. The legislative findings accompanying passage of the New York laws reflect this concern:
>
> "[T]here has been a proliferation of exploitation of children as subjects in sexual performance. The care of children is a sacred trust and should not be abused by those who seek to profit through a commercial network based upon the exploitation of children. The public policy of the state demands the protection of children from exploitation through sexual performances." 1877 N.Y. Laws, ch. 910, § 1.
>
> . . .
> The legislative judgment, as well as the judgment found in the relevant literature, is that the use of children as subjects of pornographic materials is harmful to the physiological, emotional, and mental health of the child. That judgment, we think, easily passes muster under the First Amendment.

> Second. The distribution of photographs and films depicting sexual activity by juveniles is intrinsically related to the sexual abuse of children in at least two ways. First, the materials produced are a permanent record of the children's participation and the harm to the child is exacerbated by their circulation. Second, the distribution network for child pornography must be closed if the production of material which requires the sexual exploitation of children is to be effectively controlled.
> Respondent does not contend that the State is unjustified in pursuing those who distribute child pornography. Rather, he argues that it is enough for the State to prohibit the distribution of materials that are legally obscene under the Miller test. While some States may find that this approach properly accommodates its interests, it does not follow that the First Amendment prohibits a State from going further. The Miller standard, like all general definitions of what may be banned as obscene, does not reflect the State's particular and more compelling interest in prosecuting those who promote the sexual exploitation of children. Thus, the question under the Miller test of whether a work, taken as a whole, appeals to the prurient interest of the average person bears no connection to the issue of whether a child has been physically or psychologically harmed in the production of the work. Similarly, a sexual explicit depiction need not be "patently offensive" in order to have required the sexual exploitation of a child for its production. In addition, a work which, taken on the whole, contains serious literary, artistic, political, or scientific value may nevertheless embody the hardest core of child pornography. "It is irrelevant to the child [who has been abused] whether or not the material . . . has a literary, artistic, political or social value." Memorandum of Assemblyman Lasher in Support of § 263.15. We therefore cannot conclude that the Miller standard is a satisfactory solution to the child pornography problem."[103]

The rationale for excluding child pornography from free speech guarantees has been the compelling and actually extraordinary interest in protecting children from harm. As Justice O'Connor pointed out in concurrence in Ferber, the audience's assessment of the "social value" of child pornography is "simply irrelevant to New York's asserted interest in protecting children from psychological, emotional, and mental harm."[104] Thus, the state's "special and compelling interest, and the particular vulnerability of children, afford the State the leeway to regulate pornographic material, the promotion of which is harmful to children, even though the State does not have such leeway when it seeks only to protect consenting adults from exposure to such material."[105]

The child protection rationale for divorcing pornographic speech from free speech rights applies just as powerfully, if not more so, to excluding child sex abuse perpetrated by religious organizations and clergy from free exercise rights. Victims of child sex abuse also suffer lifelong debilities,[106] and those that would permit such abuse need to be strongly deterred in order to protect future children.[107] Affording religious organizations and clergy constitutional protection for their acts involving child sex abuse is as contrary to society's fundamental interest in the protection of children

[107] If the First Amendment is a barrier to criminal and tortious liability, such cases are suppressed and future children lack the knowledge needed to be protected from the abusers in the organizations and from the organizations that create the conditions for abuse. Most child predators seek far more than one victim over the course of their lives. See LANNING, supra note 10, at 40; Ray Blanchard & Howard E. as protecting child pornographers. Therefore, the exclusion of child sex abuse from free exercise doctrine is not novel and is both historically and doctrinally sound.

III. RELIGIOUS LIBERTY GUARANTEES TODAY OFFER NO PROTECTION FOR CONDUCT CONTRIBUTING TO LICENTIOUSNESS, ESPECIALLY CHILD SEX ABUSE

State decisions granting free exercise rights in cases where children have been sexually abused are the Dred Scott[108] decisions in the emerging movement of civil rights for children.[109] There is no element of contemporary religious liberty doctrine that contradicts the plain intent to exclude licentiousness from religious liberty guarantees and no element that argues in favor of bringing acts related to illicit sex under the umbrella of religious liberty guarantees. As the states have worked out these issues, the vast majority have interpreted modern-day doctrine to exclude First Amendment shields in these cases, without reference to this history.[110] Those few states that persist in protecting religious actors with respect to illicit sex[111] have unwittingly reversed the original intent of such guarantees.

The states that have concluded that the First Amendment bars liability for religious organizations dealing with licentiousness have treated the claims as ones that However, it is well settled that civil tort claims against clerics that require the courts to review and interpret church law, policies, or practices in the determination of the claims are barred by the First Amendment under the entanglement doctrine."). The court in Franco goes on to declare that > despite Franco's characterization of her negligence-based claims as gross negligence, negligent infliction of emotional distress, and breach of fiduciary duty, we must deal with the real issue here—clergy malpractice.

> . . . [A] determination of the claims . . . could not be made without first ascertaining whether the LDS Church Defendants performed within the level of expertise expected of a similar professional, i.e., a reasonably prudent bishop, priest, rabbi, minister, or other cleric in this state. Indeed, malpractice is a theory of tort that would involve the courts in a determination of whether the cleric in a particular case—here an LDS Church bishop—breached the duty to act with that degree of "skill and knowledge normally possessed by members of that profession." Restatement (Second) of Torts § 299A (1965). Defining such a duty would necessarily require a court to express the standard of care to be followed by other reasonable clerics in the performance of their ecclesiastical counseling duties, which, by its very nature, would embroil the courts in establishing the training, skill, and standards applicable for members of the clergy in this state in a diversity of religions professing widely varying beliefs. This is as impossible as it is unconstitutional; to do so would foster an excessive government entanglement with religion in violation of the Establishment Clause.

Brewer, 952 S.W.2d 239, 246–47 (Mo. 1997) ("Questions of hiring, ordaining, and retaining clergy, however, necessarily involve interpretation of religious doctrine, policy, and administration. The rationale for this rule was recently aptly summarized by a pair of commentators as follows: Examining the ministerial selection policy, which is infused with the religious tenets of the particular sect, entangles the court in qualitative evaluation of religious norms. Negligence requires the court to create a 'reasonable bishop' norm. Beliefs in penance, admonition and reconciliation as a sacramental response to sin may be the point of attack by a challenger who wants a court to probe the tort-law reasonableness of the church's mercy toward the offender. . . . The tort of negligent selection of unsuitable teachers has been recognized in civil courts. If negligent selection of a potential pedophile for the religious office of priest, minister or rabbi is a tort as to future child victims, will civil courts also hear Title VII challenges by the nonselected seminarian religious liberty guarantees in the states or at the federal level were ever intended to immunize religious organizations or individuals from their actions related to illicit sexual behavior. The states going down the wrong path and other religious organizations that have led them down that path have mischaracterized the issue, which is not whether there should be a standard for the reasonableness of clergy. The question is who has acted in a way that is reasonable and decent, with no constitutional carve-out for religious actors in the arena of illicit sex.

Those religious organizations arguing for free exercise immunity in child sex abuse cases would be well served to embrace the history and doctrine that support exclusion of such cases from free exercise doctrine. They have expressed concern that such cases will erode the doctrine that forbids courts from deciding intra-organizational disputes over doctrine, ecclesiology, or governance.[113] While their concerns have not been realized in the many states that have permitted such claims to go forward,[114] any concerns they do have would be mitigated if child sex abuse cases were not part of free exercise jurisprudence. By excising child sex abuse from the constitutional doctrine, the cases cannot create a slippery slope within the existing jurisprudence. When the issue is schism or property ownership between warring factions or who should be in leadership, the child sex cases simply will not apply.[115] In any event, the protection of children from child sex abuse is so compelling that any incidental burden on religious groups from receiving no free exercise protection is an acceptable price, just as publishers must organize their speech to avoid using children for child pornography or creating child obscenity. Moreover, religious groups have demonstrated no superiority to secular organizations in protecting children and have harmed their own reputations through these failures.[116] Courts do them no favors by creating constitutional barriers to being accountable to society for the protection of children.

It should be clear by now that as a historical and doctrinal matter, the appropriate default legal rule is that conduct involving licentiousness is unprotected religious conduct. The history of the intent behind the First Amendment and state constitution free exercise provisions, their interpretation in cases involving licentious acts in religious organizations, and First Amendment doctrine relating to child sex abuse strongly support the vast majority of state courts, which have concluded that the First Amendment is no barrier to criminal or civil liability for religious organizations in cases involving child sex abuse.[117]

The nineteenth century United States Supreme Court decisions and their reasoning upholding the laws against polygamy remain good law at the Court 132 years later,[118] making them powerful elements of the law today and deserving of stare decisis in child sex abuse cases. The Court's conclusions regarding the polygamy laws have been followed many times in the lower courts.[119] The reasoning of Reynolds and

> The mere possession of religious convictions which contradict the relevant concerns of a political society does not relieve the citizen from the discharge of political responsibilities." We first had occasion to assert that principle in Reynolds v. United States, 98 U.S. 145, (1879), where we rejected the claim that criminal laws against polygamy could not be constitutionally applied to those whose religion commanded the practice. "Laws," we said, "are made for the government of actions, and while they cannot interfere with mere religious belief and opinions, they may with practices. . . . Can a man excuse his practices to the contrary because of his religious belief? To permit this would be to make the professed doctrines of religious belief superior to the law of the land, and in effect to permit every citizen to become a law unto himself.

With man's relations to his Maker and the obligations he may think they impose, and the manner in which an expression shall be made by him of his belief on those subjects, no interference can be permitted, provided always the laws of society, designed to secure its peace and prosperity, and the morals of its people, are not interfered with. However free the exercise of religion may be, it must be subordinate to the criminal laws of the country, passed with reference to actions regarded by general consent as properly the subjects of punitive legislation." (emphasis omitted)); State v. Barlow, 153 P.2d 647, 653 (Utah 1944) ("'Moreover, we do not intimate or suggest in respecting their sincerity that any conduct can be made a religious rite and by zeal of the practitioners swept into the First Amendment. Reynolds v. United States and Davis v. Beason denied any such claim to the practice of polygamy and bigamy. Other claims may well arise which deserve the same fate.'" (citing Murdock v. Pennsylvania, 319 U.S. 105 (1943) (internal citations omitted))).

Davis v. Beason[120] was not intended to be limited solely to polygamy. In the Supreme Court's words, it "was never intended or supposed that the [First] amendment could be invoked as a protection against legislation for the punishment of acts inimical to the peace, good order and morals of society."[121] Nor has any Supreme Court decision since Reynolds and Beason ruled that the First Amendment is an appropriate vehicle for religious actors to overcome laws relating to illegal sexual conduct or involving the sexual abuse of children. In fact, the Supreme Court has never had an opportunity to address sexual abuse within religious organizations, though the reasoning of its free speech jurisprudence involving child pornography has laid groundwork that requires the rejection of claims to free exercise rights regarding the sexual abuse of children. It is nonsensical to refuse to extend free speech rights to individuals because they traffic in child pornography on the ground that pornography involves child sex abuse and then to erect free exercise rights for religious organizations and individuals who engage in and foster child sex abuse. It is imminently sensible to exclude cases involving child sex abuse from the reach of free exercise jurisprudence.

THE WATCHTOWER BIBLE AND TRACT SOCIETY OF NEW YORK, Inc., a corporation, et al.,

No. HG11558324

ASSIGNED FOR ALL PURPOSES TO JUDGE ROBERT McGUINESS, DEPARTMENT 22

PLAINTIFF'S MOTION IN LIMINE NO. 1 TO EXCLUDE REFERENCE TO OR EVIDENCE OF PLAINTIFF'S SEXUAL HISTORY OR ACTIVITY [Evidence Code §§780; 352; C.C.P. §2017.220]

Trial Date: 5/21/2012

STATEMENT OF THE ISSUE

This case is one involving allegations of sexual assault upon Plaintiff. A statutory scheme has been established to put in place the strong public policy against discovery of or admission into evidence of any sexual conduct or activity by the plaintiff with any person other than the perpetrator. That public policy is applicable to this case, as are the statutes. No evidence or argument of plaintiff's sexual history or conduct of Candace Conti with other persons can be admitted in this case on the record before the Court.

I. PUBLIC POLICY HAS ESTABLISHED STRONG STATUTORY PROTECTIONS FOR SEXUAL ASSAULT VICTIMS IN CIVIL CASES.

A network of statutes has been enacted to protect plaintiffs in sexual assault civil actions from embarrassment, harassment, or prejudice arising from discovery of or admission of evidence of sexual conduct or activity by a plaintiff with individuals other than the perpetrator. C.C.P. section 2017.220 prohibits discovery of any such sexual conduct information in the absence of a noticed Motion establishing specific facts showing good cause for that discovery, including that the information sought to be discovered is relevant to the subject matter of the action, and that it is reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence. (C.C.P. §2017.220(a).)

Evidence Code section 783 precludes admission, in any civil action alleging conduct which constitutes sexual assault, of any evidence of sexual conduct of Plaintiff to attack her credibility. A party seeking to offer such evidence must present a written Motion containing an offer of proof. The Court then conducts a preliminary hearing out of the presence of the jury, and if any such testimony is admitted, issues a Court Order strictly limiting both the evidence and the questioning. (Evid. Code § 783.) Even where such evidence may be deemed admissible, it is still subject to the evidentiary limitations of Evidence Code section 352. (Evid. Code §783(d).)

These statutes evidence a strong public policy against the harassment and embarrassment of a sexual assault victim at trial through use of sexual history or conduct evidence, as well as safeguarding the effort to introduce such evidence by the establishment of strong procedural safeguards.

II. THERE IS NO BASIS FOR ANY REFERENCE TO OR ADMISSION OF SEXUAL CONDUCT EVIDENCE CONCERNING PLAINTIFF.

None of the defendants in this action have pursued any of the procedural avenues to establish relevance or good cause for sexual conduct evidence. No Discovery Order was sought pursuant to C.C.P. section 2017.220. No written Motion has been filed containing an offer of proof of the relevancy of any such evidence in this case, where Plaintiff was sexually abused as a nine and ten-year-old.

Defendants' mental health examiner Dr. Martin Williams of San Jose conducted his exam of plaintiff in January, 2012, pursuant to Court Order upon the stipulation by the parties, as required by C.C.P. §2032.310. During the exam, he attempted to elicit sexual history information from Plaintiff. Even though defendants had failed to obtain any discovery Order under C.C.P. §2017.220, and failed to obtain any consent to inquire into sexual history in the Stip and Order, Dr. Williams pressured Plaintiff – who, pursuant to statute, attended the mental health examination without her attorney or any representative – to provide sexual history information to him. (See Dr. Williams' Report, page 5, attached as Ex. 1.) Dr. Williams' retaining counsel, Mr. McCabe, in an apparent misunderstanding of the applicable law, intervened in an effort to persuade Plaintiff's counsel to allow this inappropriate questioning as well. (Email of January 12, 2012, Ex. 2.) Obviously, Plaintiff's counsel refused to allow the improper questions, and no inquiry was conducted. However, Dr. Williams did insist to Plaintiff that she must answer his questions, including threatening her. Dr. Williams is a major player in the expert witness world, and his unethical conduct and inability to comply with the law in conducting his mental health examination leads Plaintiff to conclude that he will attempt to circumvent any Court Order by a "back door" approach, and therefore, a strong and specific Order should be issued on this subject.

Dr. Williams has also been provided with copies of plaintiff's medical records, which include various OB-GYN visits. These records, and their content, are independently the subject of Plaintiff's Motion in Limine No. 3, to exclude irrelevant medical history. However, plaintiff specifically submits to the Court that the defendants' mental health expert – who is a psychologist, not a physician – should be precluded from again utilizing "back door" approaches to introduce evidence through plaintiff's medical records, or reference to them, of such information as STD testing (all negative); OB-GYN prescriptions, including birth control, or statements by plaintiff as to her sexual history or conduct.

Mr. McCabe's emails of January 12, 2012 do not remotely offer any good cause for admission of sexual conduct evidence. Plaintiff has not claimed sexual dysfunction as an element of damages, but instead claims post traumatic stress disorder, depression, anxiety, and the emotional and mental health damages associated with having been sexually abused as a nine and ten-year-old. More telling is the email statement "whether she is a lesbian and so forth." Again, the purpose of this testimony is not to present a defense to damages, but to "dirty up" Plaintiff before the jury. The strong public policy evidenced by the statutory framework that has not been followed in this case supports a firm rejection of this approach in this childhood sexual abuse case.

Evaluation of Candace Conti
Date of birth: November 25, 1985 (current age 26)
Date of Assessment: January 12, 2012

Qualifications of Evaluator: My curriculum vita is attached. My qualifications to carry out this evaluation are as follows: I am a 1975 graduate of the University of California, Berkeley where I obtained my doctorate in psychology. I previously had graduated Phi Beta Kappa and Summa Cum Laude from UCLA, with Highest Honors in Psychology, in 1968. I have been a licensed psychologist in California since 1976 and have never been subject to any disciplinary proceeding. I practiced as a clinical psychologist and manager at The Kaiser Permanente Medical Center in Santa Clara, California for 27 years, beginning in 1980. At Kaiser, I treated a wide range of individuals, including those with "dual diagnoses"—individuals who suffered from a substance abuse diagnosis in addition to a primary psychiatric diagnosis. I was chair of the Psychiatry Department Peer Review Committee at that medical center for 11 years. For the final three years of my time at Kaiser, I managed the Intensive Outpatient Treatment Program (IOP), a day-treatment program for individuals with severe mental illness.

Since 1993, I have maintained an independent practice in forensic psychology, carrying out evaluations of emotional damages and malingering in civil suits and providing standard-of-care testimony in psychology malpractice matters. I have also carried out numerous evaluations of fitness for duty for license holders practicing under a variety of professional boards in California. I have served as a Billing Monitor for the Board of Psychology and am on the panel of experts for the Board of Registered Nursing and the Board of Pharmacy. I am currently a member of the Panel of Evaluators for the Superior Court of California, carrying out evaluations of competency to stand trial and insanity defense in criminal defendants. I was formerly a member of the Forensic Assessment Division, Board of Parole Hearings, California Department of Corrections and Rehabilitation, where my duties included the psychological evaluation of life-term inmates regarding suitability for parole in terms of potential violence. I am an approved forensic evaluator for Immigration and Customs Enforcement, Enforcement and Removal Operations, San Francisco Region. I am a published expert in the field of psychotherapy ethics, having published numerous articles in peer reviewed, professional journals.

Documents reviewed: Prior to completing the present report, the following documents were reviewed:

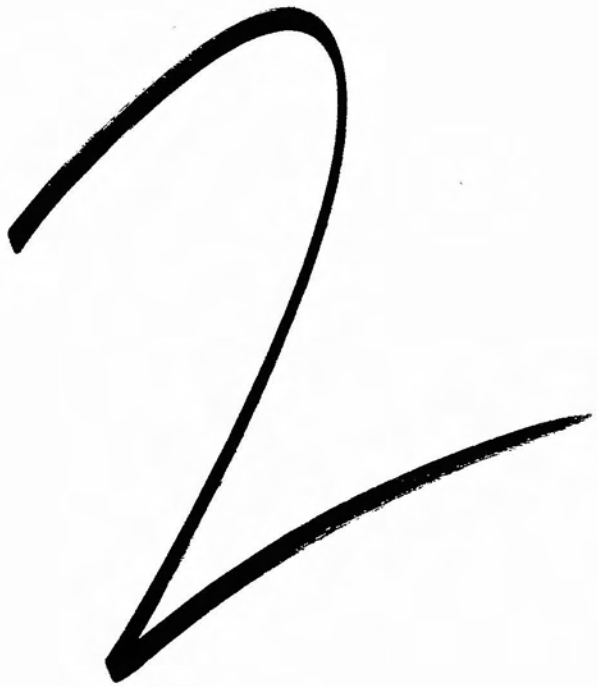
Harmatz, a psychiatrist, who she has thus far seen twice after having graduated from Addiction Medicine and moving on to Psychiatry. Ms. Conti states she wants to see Dr. Harmatz to "straighten things out in my life," and to deal with her nightmares. Ms. Conti states she wants a better understanding of "all the things that I feel and don't feel."

She states that now that she is sober, she is thinking about many life issues that she never dealt with, including the trauma of the reported events relevant to this case.

Medications: At the beginning of high school, Ms. Conti was given Adderall for reported ADHD and also Remeron for sleep and nightmares. Ms. Conti began using Wellbutrin about four months ago. Ms. Conti believes it was prescribed because it is a good medication for patients who are coming off of methamphetamine. Ms. Conti states she had been tried on many medications that caused dizziness, but she does not recall the names. She also was given Minipress that assisted with her nightmares and sleep.

She is currently taking Celexa, 10 or 15 mg, and Wellbutrin 200 b.i.d.

Medical history: Ms. Conti denies any significant medical history other than a kidney infection in high school and kidney stone last year.



Social and sexual history: She stated that she was specifically told by her attorney that I was not entitled to ask questions about that. Consequently, alternative causes of her reported reactions to the purported sexual assaults that are central to this case could not be explored or considered.

Mental Status Examination: Ms. Conti is a pleasant, open, relaxed individual who seems to be in no apparent distress. She answers in a cooperative manner, although she does not digress or provide any information beyond that which was asked. She appears to be open, but only if she is asked the specific question to which one seeks and answer.

It is noted that there were occasional "off-topic" discussions, for example about the coffee machine in the office or about my computer problems. During those discussions, Ms. Conti displayed normal sociability and the full range of affect, including positive affect. She appears to be largely unimpaired emotionally unless she is encouraged to talk about the details of this legal case.

She appears to be of above average intelligence, although this was not formally assessed. She was oriented to time, place and person and manifested no overt mood or thought disorder.

Issues and events regarding present lawsuit: According to Ms. Conti, Jonathan Kendrick was a member of our Kingdom Hall. Ms. Conti had attended that church in Fremont from the time of her birth until her parents divorce when she was age 12.

Subject: Dr. Williams Exam

Rick:

This is a follow up to my voice mail and a quick attempt to do a meet and confer over the issue of the mental exam now ongoing with Dr. Williams. Dr. Williams informed me that you have instructed Ms. Conti not to discuss any sexual history with him. Our stipulation agrees that :

"1. The examiner may conduct a face to face interview with Plaintiff to obtain a history and to evaluate plaintiff's mental status and history;"

It would certainly be important and relevant to the examiner to know if she has been the victim of other sexual assaults, whether she currently has a normal sexual life, whether she claims sexual dysfunction, her sexual and relationship history, whether she is a lesbian and so forth. Certainly, if she has had stable long term relationships that might be useful to mitigate damages and if she was unable to sustain a relationship beyond two days that might certainly enhance her claim for damages.

If Dr. Williams is unable to obtain a "history" we will be forced to file a motion to compel and have to ask that the expense of re-examination be paid by the Plaintiff. On the other hand, I do not think that you want us asking Dr. Williams his opinion on damages and having him testify that he could not completely assess your client's damages because her lawyer told her not to discuss her relevant history with him. Please reconsider your instructions to your client and let me know what your position is as soon as you receive this. Dr. Williams exam is continuing tomorrow morning.

Thank you for your courtesy and cooperation as always.

No. HG11558324

ASSIGNED FOR ALL PURPOSES TO JUDGE ROBERT McGUINESS, DEPARTMENT 22

PLAINTIFF'S MOTION IN LIMINE NO. 2 TO LIMIT DEFENSE PSYCHOLOGY EXPERT DR. MARTIN WILLIAMS' SPECULATIVE OPINION TESTIMONY RE: "MALINGERING" AND ALL MEDICAL OPINION TESTIMONY [Evid. Code §§801(b); 352]

Trial Date: 5/21/2012

STATEMENT OF THE ISSUE

Defendants jointly retained Psychologist Dr. Martin Williams to conduct and report on his mental evaluation of Plaintiff. Dr. Williams is not licensed as a Physician, and is not qualified as a medical expert. In his report of his opinions, Dr. Williams stated:

> Ms. Conti, as a civil litigant seeking financial remuneration for damages, is in a position such that malingering must be considered. No evidence for malingering was found. Nevertheless, this possibility must also be considered as one way to explain her current account of sexual abuse that she never revealed to her apparently trusted therapist. (Williams Report, page 13, excerpt attached as Ex. 1.)

In the first part of this Motion, Plaintiff moves to exclude this opinion as speculative, and without foundation in any evidence.

In the second part of this Motion, Plaintiff moves to exclude any and all medical opinions that Dr. Williams may seek to offer, including testimony on the appropriate use of prescriptive drugs for Plaintiff, the medical or organic causes of any conditions she presents with, and what medical treatment or care she requires in the future. Dr. Williams' licensure as a Psychologist does not permit him to practice medicine, to prescribe medications, or to form medical diagnoses or prognoses.

I. DR. WILLIAMS' OPINION THAT MALINGERING MUST BE CONSIDERED IS WITHOUT FOUNDATION IN THE EVIDENCE AND INADMISSIBLE.

Expert opinions are admissible if based upon matters "that reasonably may be relied upon by an expert . . . ." (Evid. Code 801(b).) Speculative expert opinions with no basis in evidence are not admissible. (In re Lockheed Litigation Cases (2004) 115 Cal.App.4th 558, 563.)

Defendants' expert admits that his opinion that Plaintiff's possible "malingering" must be considered in this case is not based on any evidence. His speculation that "malingering" must be considered as a reason Plaintiff did not disclose her abuse while a child during family therapy with her "trusted therapist" Laura Fraser finds no supporting evidence in Ms. Fraser's testimony, which was taken by video for use at trial as Ms. Fraser is now in San Diego. Her testimony flatly contradicts the inference, with no room for equivocation. (Fraser Depo., Ex. 2, 27:11-28:14, 63:4-20.) Additionally, Plaintiff disclosed her abuse to Dr. Janice Afruma, M.D., during a pediatric psychiatric examination in 2002, when Plaintiff was 16. (Bay Valley Medical Group Note attached as Exhibit 3.) That evidence again provides no support for Dr. Williams' speculation that Plaintiff has contrived "her current account of sexual abuse" for financial gain. In short, no evidence whatsoever supports the opinion of "malingering."

While the weight to be given expert opinion is generally best addressed through cross examination, purely speculative expert opinion testimony offered without any evidence to support it, offered only to prejudice the jury, is without adequate foundation under Section 801(b), and is properly excluded by Evidence Code section 352 as well. That is the case here.

I. DR. WILLIAMS DOES NOT QUALIFY AS A MEDICAL EXPERT AND CANNOT GIVE MEDICAL EXPERT TESTIMONY.

Dr. Williams is a Psychologist. He is licensed to perform professional services

> "involving the application of psychological principles, methods, and procedures of understanding predicting, and influencing, behavior, such as the principles pertaining to learning, perception, motivation, emotions, interpersonal relationships; and the methods and procedures of interviewing, counseling, psychotherapy, behavior modification, and hypnosis; and of constructing, administering, and interpreting tests of mental abilities, aptitudes, interests, attitudes, personality characteristics, emotions, and motivations." (Business and Professions Code §2903).

While §2903 permits Dr. Williams to diagnose and treat "psychological problems and emotional and mental disorders", it does not permit him to engage in, or perform professional services or evaluation in, physical and organic health matters. That is the province of a medical doctor under Business & Professions Code §2052. (People v. Cantor (1961) 198 Cal. App. 2d Supp. 843, 847 [determining nature of disease is diagnosis reserved for licensees]) Dr. Williams may not interpret, second guess, diagnose physical health issues, criticize Plaintiff's care or Physicians, or otherwise offer opinion testimony of plaintiff's medical history, care, diagnoses, or prognosis. He may not base his psychological opinions on his own medical interpretation of Candace Conti's health or diagnosis. Dr. Williams must be ordered to remain within the confines of his expertise and licensing, and, as an experienced testifying expert, admonished if he violates the rules.

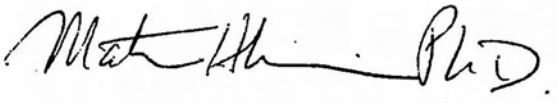
Documents reviewed: Prior to completing the present report, the following documents were reviewed:



This is a very important unresolved question because her years of methamphetamine abuse may be a key index of the emotional harm she suffered from the purported abuse. However, it is also likely that she would have become an addict regardless of the abuse, rendering the abuse—if it actually occurred—not a cause of the addiction.

The problem in drawing conclusions with regard to Ms. Conti is that many of her reported symptoms are commonplace in the children of alcoholics—or even in some children from families not known to be at risk. Thus, her self-cutting behavior, her discomfort with other children while in school, her sleep disturbance and her later drug addiction, may all have occurred even had Ms. Conti never known Mr. Kendrick. Thus, nothing in her known history can be said to demonstrate that she was a victim of sexual abuse and, in that regard, manifests symptoms one would not expect to find unless sexual abuse had occurred.

To further complicate matters, Ms. Conti, according to the session notes by L. Fraser, LCSW, describes a wide variety of traumatic and chaotic events in Ms. Conti's family of origin. These events include her mother's irrational and angry behavior towards Ms. Conti, her mother's substance abuse, various power struggles between Ms. Conti's mother and father, and issues regarding her mother's boyfriend, Steve. Many of these conflicts involved discussions of the Jehovah's Witnesses. These childhood issues could fully account for all of Ms. Conti's later suffering. Finally, one notes the unresolved question as to why Ms. Conti, who appeared to have good rapport with Ms. Fraser and appeared to be quite willing to share all her troubles with Ms. Fraser, never mentioned any instances of sexual abuse to Ms. Fraser.

As a final note, Richard Rogers, Ph.D., author of the authoritative text on malingering, The Clinical Assessment of Malingering and Deception (Third Edition, 2008) has stated that civil litigation is the forum in which one discovers more malingering than any other forum. Ms. Conti, as a civil litigant seeking financial remuneration for damages, is in a position such that malingering must be considered. No evidence for malingering was found. Nevertheless, this possibility must also be considered as one way to explain her current account of sexual abuse that she never revealed to her apparently trusted therapist.

Respectfully submitted,

Martin H. Williams, Ph.D.

Q. You have learned from me recently that Candace now reports that she was sexually abused --

A. Uh-huh.

Q. -- as a nine- and ten-year-old.

A. Yeah. 12:22

Q. And by an outside, non-family member.

A. Yes.

Q. Do you have any -- well, did she ever disclose that to you, first of all?

A. She did not disclose that to me. 12:23

Q. Do you have any opinion, based on your education and training and your experience with this patient and her family, as to why she would not disclose to you an important piece of history such as a history of sexual abuse? 12:23

A. Right. Well, first of all, she -- this is kind of therapisty terms, but she felt like a child who had been sexually abused, but I didn't gather any -- anything that allowed me to -- that led me to a reasonable suspicion except for she felt vulnerable, by the things I 12:23 stated, looking at other people's feelings, judging how the adults are doing, and that she was craving for adults to take care of her and care about her. So I felt that very strongly.

And in terms of her not disclosing it, there 12:24 was absolutely no safety for her and her family, which made her vulnerable to a predator in the beginning and at any point in her life; but also, it would mean that she would have to decide if she were to disclose that abuse. As I stated, I tell kids in the beginning what that means if I have to report it. 12:24

There was no safety. There was no one to keep her safe and stable going through a process like disclosing having been molested.

Q. And in your professional experience, is this, unfortunately, a common thread among many childhood -- 12:24

A. Yes.

Q. -- sexual abuse victims?

A. Yes. Yeah.

MR. SCHNACK: Yes.

Q. Correct. But you discussed that with Candace. Correct?

A. I asked her about that, yes.

Q. Okay. And -- and yet you still don't find it surprising that Candace would not have told you about her own sexual abuse? 01:48

A. I absolutely do not find it surprising. There was no safety for this child. Her parents -- we just discussed so many different things that occurred for this child. She -- she couldn't have longer than 20 minutes of safety with a parent. 01:48

There was no way she could disrupt. There wasn't -- I mean, there wasn't any safety for her. It would have been so disruptive to her. She was still rescuing both parents. What would they say if she disclosed that this had happened? How -- could she stay connected to her father? Would her mother say, "Well, you're" -- "my abuse is worse than yours"? I mean, there are just a myriad of possibilities. This kid had no safety. 01:48

Q. And by having no safety at home, then her home life was truly troubled probably from the start, then.

A. Yes.

Q. Is that a fair statement?

A. Yes. 01:49

No. HG11558324

ASSIGNED FOR ALL PURPOSES TO JUDGE ROBERT McGUINESS, DEPARTMENT 22

PLAINTIFF'S MOTION IN LIMINE NO. 3 TO EXCLUDE IRRELEVANT MEDICAL HISTORY [Evid. Code §§350, 352]

Trial Date: 5/21/2012

STATEMENT OF THE ISSUE

Virtually all of plaintiff's lifetime medical records have been obtained and disclosed in the course of discovery in this action. There are well over 1000 pages of medical records from multiple healthcare providers. Many of the records contain medical conditions, complaints, or care that has nothing to do with either plaintiff's sexual abuse by Jonathan Kendrick or her mental health – the two areas of physical and mental health that she has placed at issue in her claim for damages. The vast majority of plaintiff's remaining medical care and treatment over her lifetime is neither relevant to the subject action, nor probative of any factual inquiry. Addressing evidence of plaintiff's remote or unrelated care will unduly consume time, confuse the jury, and promote inquiry into collateral issues. For these reasons, plaintiff moves to specifically exclude any records, argument, or testimony from experts or lay persons concerning the medical, mental health, and socio-medical care and treatment not directly at issue in this case.

Plaintiff has prepared a Table, attached as Exhibit 1, setting for the specific medical conditions, and general time frames of their care and treatment, that are included under the umbrella of this Motion. There are various medical records which may contain relevant information, but also contain information concerning irrelevant matters, and it is requested that the records be redacted appropriately by any party seeking to offer those records into evidence.

I. MEDICAL HISTORY NOT PLACED IN ISSUE IS IRRELEVANT.

It has long been established that a plaintiff does not place his or her entire medical history at issue by bringing a personal injury claim. (Britt v. Superior Court (1978) 20 Cal.3d 844, 862-4) In Britt, the Supreme Court denied discovery of overbroad medical history in a case where the plaintiffs were claiming hearing loss due to jet airplane over flights. While plaintiff has placed her mental health history and relevant social history, at issue by claiming damages for childhood sexual abuse, she has not placed her physical health in issue. In addition, her history of sexual conduct or activity is irrelevant and excluded by public policy from a civil sexual assault case. (Plaintiff's Motion in Limine No. 1)

Only relevant evidence is admissible. (Evidence Code §350) There is no relevance to any of the information contained in plaintiff's unrelated medical history.

In addition, defendant does not have any physician designated as an expert witness, either retained or non-retained, to testify on issues of medical history. None of plaintiff's medical experts have, in their videotape for use at trial deposition testimony, or in depositions to date, expressed any opinion or belief that plaintiff's medical history as to the type of matters set forth in Exhibit 1 are relevant in any way to understanding her mental health and social issues. If any such evidence is to be offered, or raised on cross-examination, plaintiff's requests an offer of proof as to its relevancy prior to any disclosure to the jury.

Given the voluminous amount of medical records that plaintiff has, and which are in possession of all counsel, there is significant risk of an undue consumption of time reviewing her medical history, or arguing about the facts or significance of specific medical visits for unrelated physical history issues. Plaintiff moves to exclude all such evidence based upon the prejudice, lack of probative value, lack of relevance, and the undue consumption of time.

In the event that there are certain medical records to be offered into evidence which contain irrelevant information that is subject to this Motion, or otherwise included, plaintiff requests that all such exhibits be redacted.

ASSIGNED FOR ALL PURPOSES TO JUDGE ROBERT McGUINESS, DEPARTMENT 22

PLAINTIFF'S MOTION IN LIMINE NO. 4 TO EXCLUDE IMPROPER CHARACTER, SPECIFIC ACT, AND RELIGIOUS BELIEF EVIDENCE AS TO EXPERT WITNESS WILLIAM BOWEN [EVID. CODE §§786; 787;789;352]

Trial Date: 5/21/2012

STATEMENT OF THE ISSUE

Plaintiff will present the testimony of expert witness William Bowen. Mr. Bowen is a former Elder of Jehovah's Witnesses, and now administers a national organization named "Silent Lambs" that provides support for survivors of childhood sexual abuse occurring within JW. He is, to say the least, unpopular with the leadership of Jehovah's Witnesses. This Motion is made to confine the cross-examination of Mr. Bowen to proper and admissible areas of bias, qualifications, or factual disagreement, and to avoid some of the personal issues that have been raised in prior depositions taken of Mr. Bowen in other Jehovah's Witnesses actions.

Plaintiff's C.C.P. §2034 Declaration describes Mr. Bowen's expected testimony as follows:

> "Expert witness will testify in general substance as follows: as to the policies, procedures, and practices of defendants generally; the application of those policies on the subject of childhood sexual abuse within the Jehovah's Witnesses; the pattern and practices of Jehovah's Witnesses institutional management of disregarding sexual abuse of children and failing to protect minors within its membership and activities from sexual abuse; the business and financial reasons > behind the institutional defendants' policies on sexual abuse of children; the knowledge and data available to Jehovah's Witnesses management on the consequences of increased sexual abuse of children resulting from its administrative policies; and as to the administrative organization and structure of Jehovah's Witnesses as to its policies and practices on secular and administrative issues." (Expert Disclosures, filed concurrently at Trial).

Based on past depositions, it is anticipated that defense counsel will attempt to discredit Mr. Bowen by raising one or more personal issues pertaining to his past marriages and/or his relationships with his family members. Therefore, plaintiff moves to exclude in limine discussion of any such issues including, but not limited to, the following:

1. William Bowen having married a 16 year-old in November of 1982, albeit lawfully in the State of Missouri and with the permission of her parents;

2. That Mr. Bowen's second wife was disfellowshipped by the Jehovah's Witnesses for marrying Mr. Bowen;

3. That William Bowen was disfellowshipped by the Jehovah's Witnesses in August of 2002 for "causing divisions";

4. That Mr. Bowen's mother and father were members of Jehovah's Witnesses who shunned him as a result of his efforts to expose child sexual abuse within the Jehovah's Witnesses' organization;

5. William Bowen suspected one of the Elders of the Jehovah's Witnesses had sexually abused his own minor daughter in the fall of 2000, but later concluded that there was no proof of any wrongdoing;

6. That the Jehovah's Witnesses' organization has described William Bowen as "self-willed" and "contentious" at the time he was disfellowshipped;

7. While serving as an Elder in Kentucky, Mr. Bowen was not allowed to stand before the Congregation in a teaching position because he had advised a member of his Congregation who was going through a divorce that the member's wife was likely the product of incest.

I. LEGAL ARGUMENT.

A. Undue Time and Prejudice.

Evidence Code §352 states:

> "The Court in its discretion may exclude evidence if its probative value is substantially outweighed by the probability that its admission will (a) necessitate undue consumption of time or (b) create substantial danger of undue prejudice, of confusing the issues, or of misleading the jury."

The foregoing character evidence regarding William Bowen's private family life and discipline that he has been subjected to by Jehovah's Witnesses should be excluded for both of the reasons contained within Evidence Code §352. Clearly it would necessitate an undue consumption of time if the defense were permitted to bring up any of these matters as plaintiff's counsel would have to have each of them painstakingly explained both by Mr. Bowen and other witnesses. There is no doubt that undue prejudice would be created by the introduction of any of these matters. In fact, it would be the defendants' intention to prejudice the plaintiff's case by bringing these matters up in an effort to discredit Mr. Bowen.

B. Relevance.

Evidence Code §350 states that "No evidence is admissible except relevant evidence." Relevant evidence is defined by Evidence Code §210 as "having any tendency in reason to prove or disprove any disputed fact that is a consequence to the determination of the action."

Mr. Bowen's family relations and background as well as the Witnesses record of imposing their discipline upon him for expressing his views has no relevance whatsoever to the disputed issues in this case.

C. Character Evidence.

Evidence Code §787 provides:

> "Subject to §788 [use of felony convictions], evidence of specific instances of his conduct relevant only as tending to prove a trait of his character is inadmissible to attack or support the credibility of a witness."

See People v. Rodriguez (1999) 20 Cal.4th1, 9-10; People v. Matlock (1970) 11 Cal.App.3d 453, 461.

Consequently, it is improper to use character evidence of the kind described above to impeach the credibility of any witness, including an expert witness. Each of the seven matters listed constitutes character evidence and is therefore inadmissible.

Evidence Code §786 provides:

> "Evidence of traits of his character other than honesty or veracity, or their opposites, is inadmissible to attack or support the credibility of a witness."

CONCLUSION

It is respectfully requested that this Court issue an Order precluding defense counsel and any defense witnesses from mentioning or referring to the following or any related matters:

1. William Bowen having married a 16 year-old in November of 1982, albeit in the State of Missouri and with the permission of her parents;

2. That Mr. Bowen's second wife was disfellowshipped by the Jehovah's Witnesses for marrying Mr. Bowen;

3. That William Bowen was disfellowshipped by the Jehovah's Witnesses in August of 2002 for "causing divisions";

4. That Mr. Bowen's mother and father were members of Jehovah's Witnesses who have shunned him as a result of his efforts to expose child sexual abuse within the Jehovah's Witnesses' organization;

5. William Bowen suspected one of the Elders of the Jehovah's Witnesses had sexually abused his own minor daughter in the fall of 2000, but later concluded that there was no proof of any wrongdoing;

6. That the Jehovah's Witnesses' organization has described William Bowen as "self-willed" and "contentious" at the time he was disfellowshipped;

7. While serving as an Elder in Kentucky, Mr. Bowen was not allowed to stand before the Congregation in a teaching position because he had advised a member of his Congregation who was going through a divorce that the member's wife was likely the product of incest.

It is further respectfully requested that defense counsel be ordered to instruct each of their witnesses before called to testify that they are not to mention or refer to any of these or any related matters.

ASSIGNED FOR ALL PURPOSES TO JUDGE ROBERT McGUINESS, DEPARTMENT 22

PLAINTIFF'S MOTION IN LIMINE NO. 5 TO EXCLUDE UNDISCLOSED EXPERT WITNESSES AND OPINIONS [C.C.P. §2034.300]

Trial Date: May 21, 2012

STATEMENT OF THE ISSUE

Defendants have jointly disclosed two expert witnesses. They are both retained experts. Dr. Martin Williams, a Psychologist, will testify about Plaintiff's damages and issues of causation. Monica Applewhite, a Risk Management Consultant, will testify as to issues of standards of care. Plaintiff does not object to either being called as an expert, subject to possible objections as to specific testimony.

Defendants did not disclose any "in-house" experts, nor did they disclose any non-retained experts. This motion seeks to bar either Defendant from eliciting expert testimony on any issue of liability, causation, or damages from employees or agents of Defendants, and from any non-retained experts they may choose to call at trial. These specific issues include standard of care related testimony, the applicability of clergy privilege, requirements of mandatory reporting, and historic policies and practices in the non-profit or religious corporation spheres, and critiques or opinions as to how the events concerning Jonathan Kendrick was managed by defendants.

I. UNDISCLOSED EXPERT WITNESSES AND OPINIONS MUST BE EXCLUDED.

A party must disclose all witnesses it intends to use as experts, including experts retained or employed by the party. (C.C.P. § 2034.210(b).) Disclosure must be accompanied by a declaration of the party's counsel, containing the expert witnesses' qualifications and the general substance of the testimony they are expected to give. (C.C.P. §2034.260(c).) If a party attempts to offer expert testimony from a witness not previously disclosed:

> On objection of any party who has made a complete and timely compliance with Section 2034.260, the trial court shall exclude from evidence the expert opinion of any witness that is offered by any party who has unreasonably failed to do any of the following:
> (a) List that witness as an expert under Section 2034.260.
> (b) Submit an expert witness declaration.
> (c) Produce reports and writings of expert witnesses under Section 2034.270.
> (d) Make that expert available for a deposition under Article 3 (commencing with Section 2034.410)." (C.C.P. § 2034.300.)

Defendants Watchtower and Fremont Congregation each designated only Monica Applewhite and Dr. Martin Williams to testify as experts at trial. (Expert Witness Lists, lodged concurrently, attached as Ex. 1.) Defendants may not elicit any opinion testimony from any other witness, including their own employees or agents, for whom no disclosure or declarations were provided. (C.C.P. section 2034.300.) This includes Allen Shuster, a Watchtower employee, who submitted a Declaration after the exchange of expert information, in support of Watchtower's Opposition to Plaintiff's Motion to Amend Complaint, attached as Exhibit 2. In this Declaration, Mr. Shuster lodges several opinions within the province of expert testimony, including:

> In the case of the investigation of Jonathan Kendrick in 1993, the elders did not form a judicial committee because the assertion of child sexual abuse was not confirmed. (Shuster Dec. in Opp. to Plaintiff's Motion to Amend, Ex. 2, ¶ 35.)

> Spiritual discipline administered by the elders of Jehovah's Witnesses serving on an investigative committee is based solely on Jehovah's Witnesses understanding of the Bible as applied to the facts. (Id. at ¶ 37.)

> Jehovah's Witnesses do not believe that the confidentiality of spiritual communications they may have with the congregation elders is limited to confessions. (Id. at ¶ 40.)
>
> Elders do not allow unnecessary third parties to be a party to a confidential communication. . . there may be instances where a husband and a wife, or a parent and a child, may together seek or be provided with spiritual counsel, advice or comfort from the elders. The elders and participants to these confidential and private spiritual communications would view these communications as confidential and congregants expect the elders to keep such communications strictly confidential. (Id. at ¶ 44.)
> The religious doctrine of Jehovah's Witnesses requires that all elders keep confidential and private spiritual communication strictly confidential. (Id. at ¶ 45.)

Because Defendants have not designated Mr. Shuster as an expert, he may not offer these, or any other, opinions at trial. Additionally, Mr. Shuster cannot comment on whether Defendants handled Kendrick's 1993 molestation correctly, as opining about whether Defendants' investigation and other actions were appropriate requires expert testimony beyond the scope of an employee or agent. Neither he, nor any other witness not disclosed by Defendants as experts, may be allowed to testify to issues requiring expert opinion, including the scope and applicability of clergy privilege, standards of care in religious and youth groups, historic policies and procedures of religious institutions, and requirements of mandatory reporting.

II. NONE OF THE EXCEPTIONS TO THE PROHIBITION ON UNDISCLOSED EXPERT TESTIMONY APPLY IN THIS CASE.

Only two narrow exceptions apply to expert testimony that does not meet the requirements of section 2034.300. A party may call an expert it has not previously designated only if (1) that expert has been designated by another party as an expert and has been deposed; or (2) that expert is called solely to provide impeachment testimony as to "the falsity or nonexistence of any fact used as the foundation for any opinion by any party's expert witness, but may not include testimony that contradicts the opinion." (C.C.P. § 2034.310.) California trial courts have been compelled to recognize for many years that "calling an expert witness to testify to an opinion contrary to the opinion of another expert witness is not "impeachment . . . ." (Sprague v. Equifax, Inc. (1985) 166 Cal.App.3d 1012, at 1040 [emphasis in original].) Courts are to strictly construe the foundational fact requirement in section 2034.310 "so as to prevent a party from offering a contrary opinion of his expert under the guise of impeachment." (Tesoro Del Valle Master Homeowners Association v. Griffin (2011) 200 Cal.App.4th 619 at 641; accord: Mizel v. City of Santa Monica (2001) 93 Cal.App.4th 1059, 1068.)

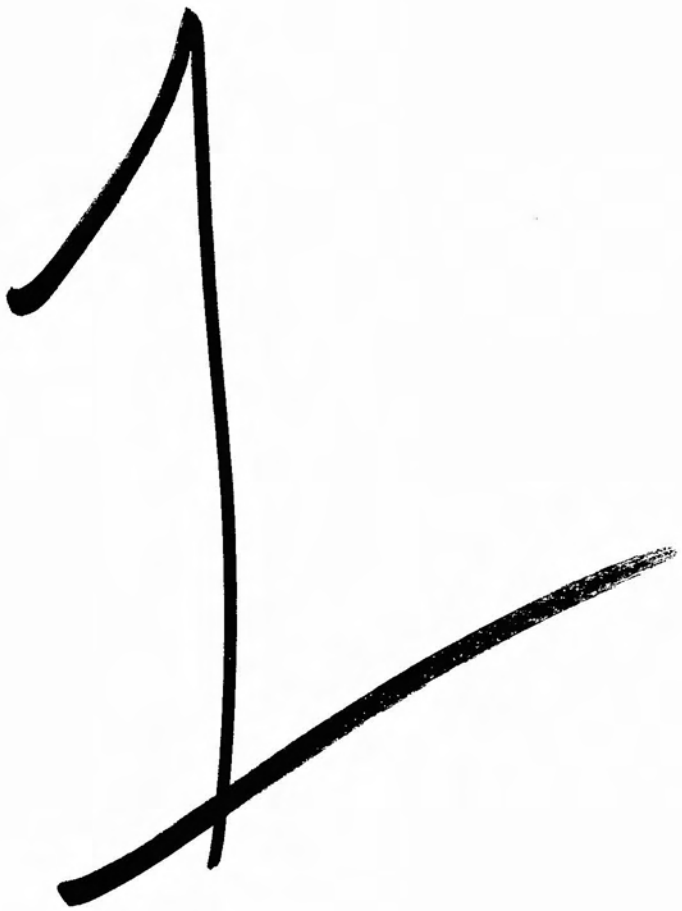
CONCLUSION



Defendants may not call any witness not designated as an expert, including their employees or agents, to offer opinion testimony for any purpose outside the extremely limited scope of impeachment. Any undisclosed experts and opinions must be excluded.

Attorney for Defendant WATCHTOWER

SUPERIOR COURT OF THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA
COUNTY OF ALAMEDA

JANE DOE, Plaintiff, v. WATCHTOWER BIBLE AND TRACT SOCIETY OF NEW York, INC., FREMONT CONGREGATION OF JEHOVAH'S WITNESSES, NORTH UNIT, et al, Defendants.	Case No.: HG115558324 DECLARATION OF ALLEN SHUSTER

I, Allen Shuster, after being duly sworn, depose and state that if called to testify in this matter I would competently testify as follows:

1. I am over 21 years of age, of sound mind, and competent to make this Affidavit. I have personal knowledge of the matters contained herein, and they are all true and correct.

2. I reside in Patterson, New York, and have served as an elder in the faith of Jehovah's Witnesses since about 1979.

3. On April 23, 1976, I began serving at the U.S. branch offices of Jehovah's Witnesses in New York. I have served in the Service Department of the U.S. branch offices since February 5, 1981. I provide spiritual assistance to congregation elders who call or write the Service Department for help. Prior to March 2001, the spiritual assistance provided by the Service Department, along with the appointment of elders and ministerial servants, was communicated to congregations of Jehovah's Witnesses through the Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc. ("Watchtower"). Since March 2001, this has been communicated through the Christian Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses.

4. My duties in the Service Department include monitoring the organization, functioning, and staffing of congregations of Jehovah's Witnesses, including reviewing the qualifications for the appointment of elders and ministerial servants to congregations of Jehovah's Witnesses in the United States.

MEMBERS OF CONGREGATIONS

5. All congregations of Jehovah's Witnesses are composed of individuals and families who gather together to worship in buildings called "Kingdom Halls."

6. There is no age requirement for baptism, but Jehovah's Witnesses do not practice infant baptism. Their youth are not typically baptized until they are old and mature enough to make an independent determination about their religious beliefs, often not until their teenage years.

7. An ordinary member of the congregation is called a "publisher." Publishers are called that because they "publish" the good news of the Bible by engaging in public ministry.

8. Congregations may have both baptized and unbaptized publishers, but only baptized publishers are considered to be congregation members.

9. There is no predetermined number of hours a publisher is required to spend in public ministry.

10. Individuals spend as much time in the public ministry as their heart motivates them to spend.

11. There is no requirement for publishers to place any amount of literature.

12. Before an individual, man, woman, or child, is recognized as an unbaptized publisher, two congregation elders briefly meet with that person (and his or her parents in the case of a minor) to determine whether he or she believes the Bible is the inspired Word of God, knows basic Bible teachings, is living in harmony with the Bible's prohibitions against immorality, drunkenness, and drug abuse, and wants to be one of Jehovah's Witnesses. Thereafter, the two elders who meet with the individual determine whether he or she qualifies to be recognized as an unbaptized publisher in the congregation.

13. This procedure for becoming an unbaptized publisher came into existence when it was announced in the November 15, 1988, issue of The Watchtower. Prior to that time, the individual publisher who studied the Bible with an interested person decided when that interested person could be invited to accompany the congregation in the field ministry as an approved associate of Jehovah's Witnesses.

14. There is no application form to fill out to become an unbaptized publisher.

15. Neither Watchtower nor the U.S. branch offices of Jehovah's Witnesses review or approve whether an individual is qualified to be recognized as an unbaptized or baptized publisher, nor does Watchtower or the U.S. branch offices of Jehovah's Witnesses maintain a list of unbaptized or baptized publishers.

16. After a person turns in his or her first field service report to a congregation's elders, an announcement is made during one of the weekday congregation meetings that the person is a new unbaptized publisher in the congregation. The procedure to announce a new unbaptized publisher to the congregation came into existence when it was announced in the November 15, 1988, issue of The Watchtower. Prior to that date no announcement was made when an individual became an approved associate.

CONGREGATION ELDERS AND MINISTERIAL SERVANTS

17. There is no paid clergy class at Watchtower, the U.S. branch offices of Jehovah's Witnesses, or in congregations of Jehovah's Witnesses. Men who qualify are appointed to serve a congregation as ministerial servants and then as elders. The appointed men who provide spiritual direction to the congregation members are the elders. Ministerial servants help elders by providing administrative functions in the congregation.

18. Jehovah's Witnesses are not automatically appointed to serve as congregation elders. They must meet qualifications as follows: Before a male member of the congregation can be considered for appointment as a ministerial servant, he must be baptized as one of Jehovah's Witnesses. The individual must then gain further knowledge of the Holy Scriptures and show a willingness to be used to assist others in the congregation. If he shows such willingness and meets the Scriptural qualifications stated in 1Timothy 3:8-13, he may qualify to be appointed as a ministerial servant. Although a ministerial servant would not provide spiritual supervision to the congregation, he could be assigned tasks to assist congregation elders as they carry out their duties.

19. In time—perhaps after many years—a ministerial servant who has faithfully carried out his assignments and has gained experience may meet the qualifications of a congregation elders as outlined in the Bible. When this occurs, the congregation elders will recommend to the circuit overseer (a representative of the Branch office who is also an experienced elder) that the ministerial servant be appointed as an elder in the congregation. If the circuit overseer agrees with the recommendation, he will forward it to the Branch office's Service Department. Approved elders in the Service Department review the recommendation in accord with the guidelines outlined in the Holy Scriptures, adopted by the Governing Body of Jehovah's Witnesses. The Branch office then informs the local congregation's body of elders, in writing, of their determination about the recommendation.

20. The responsibilities of ministerial servants include handling the congregation literature, congregation accounts, and congregation territory for the public ministry, caring for microphone and sound equipment during meetings, serving as attendants during congregation meetings, and maintaining the physical appearance and cleanliness of the Kingdom Hall.

21. Those who serve as elders and ministerial servants are all volunteers and none of them are paid for their service nor do they receive any reimbursement for their transportation, living, or meal expenses.

22. Neither Watchtower, the U.S. branch offices of Jehovah's Witnesses, nor any congregations of Jehovah's Witnesses have any paid employees, and as previously noted, there is no paid clergy class (Matthew 10:8).

23. At least twice a year, the body of elders of a congregation meets together to review the qualifications of the men in the congregation who might qualify to serve as an elder or ministerial servant.

24. Elders are recommended from among the ministerial servants in the congregation who meet the spiritual qualifications found at 1 Timothy 3:1-7 and Titus 1:5-9.

25. Ministerial servants are recommended from male members of the congregation who are not serving as elders or ministerial servants and meet the spiritual qualifications found at 1 Timothy 3:8-10, 12, 13.

26. During all times relevant to this lawsuit local elders' recommendations for new elders and ministerial servants had to be approved by the Service Department at the U.S. branch offices of Jehovah's Witnesses in New York before they could be appointed.

27. During all times relevant to this lawsuit, all appointments of elders and ministerial servants in the United States were communicated by the Service Department to congregations through Watchtower.

28. If an individual is appointed to serve as a congregation elder, a letter of appointment from the Branch office is read to the congregation. At this time the newly appointed elder is officially vested with ministerial authority in the congregation.

29. Jehovah's Witnesses who serve as appointed elders are recognized as ordained congregation elders.

30. Elders are responsible for providing spiritual supervision to the congregations, which includes hearing confessions and other confidential spiritual communications made to them by members of the congregation who seek spiritual counsel, advice or comfort. Their authorization to do so comes from the Holy Scriptures and from the Governing Body of Jehovah's Witnesses.

31. According to the religious beliefs and practices of Jehovah's Witnesses, congregation elders, as ordained ministers, are expected to keep confession and other confidential spiritual communications confidential. An elder who reveals a confession or other confidential spiritual communication without the express permission of the one making the confession or confidential spiritual communication would usually be disqualified from continuing to serve as an elder.

32. At all times relevant to this case, the Fremont North Congregation elders occasionally communicated with elders serving in the Branch Office's Service Department, as well as with elders serving as circuit or district overseers, to receive spiritual counsel and advice on applying the religious doctrine and procedures of Jehovah's Witnesses to issues concerning the congregation and its members. The religious beliefs of these elders also require that any confidential spiritual communications between elders serving in the Branch Office's Service Department, elders serving as circuit or district overseers, and congregation elders must be kept strictly confidential. The spiritual counsel and advice given by the elders serving in the Branch Office's Service Department, elders serving as circuit or district overseers, and congregation elders is based on Jehovah's Witnesses' understanding of the Bible.

INVESTIGATIONS, JUDICIAL COMMITTEES, DISCIPLINE

33. The elders of congregations of Jehovah's Witnesses are also responsible for conducting what are referred to as "judicial investigations" when a member of a congregation is accused of serious Scriptural wrongdoing. Judicial investigations are carried out by two elders selected by the congregation body of elders, as occurred when Jonathan Kendrick was investigated in 1993 by elders in the Fremont North Congregation.

34. The goal of a judicial investigation is to make certain that the Christian congregation remains spiritually and morally clean. (James 1:26) In doing so, if the elders confirm that serious Scriptural wrongdoing has occurred, a judicial committee of at least three elders is selected by the congregation body of elders to endeavor to provide spiritual assistance to the congregant who may have sinned, with the hope of assisting them to regain their spirituality and relationship with God. (Galatians 6:1, 2) At times, a judicial committee will determine that an accused congregant should be spiritually disciplined internally, based on Jehovah's Witnesses' understanding of the Bible.

35. In the case of the investigation of Jonathan Kendrick in 1993, the elders did not form a judicial committee because the assertion of child sexual abuse was not confirmed. However, the assertion by Andrea, Kendrick's step-daughter, was sufficient to disqualify him from continuing to serve as a ministerial servant since he was no longer "free from accusation."

36. Spiritual discipline administered by elders of Jehovah's Witnesses serving on a judicial committee is based solely on Jehovah's Witnesses' understanding of the Bible as applied to the facts of the matter. Where a serious sin is involved and the accused person is repentant, the judicial committee may recommend private or public reproof. But if the person who committed a serious sin cannot be brought back to repentance, the individual will have to be disfellowshipped. When a member is subject to public reproof or disfellowshipping, an announcement is made during a congregation meeting simply to the effect that "[name] has been reproved" or "[name] is no longer one of Jehovah's Witnesses."

37. Spiritual discipline administered by elders serving on an investigative committee is likewise based solely on Jehovah's Witnesses' understanding of the Bible as applied to the facts. When an accusation disqualifies a servant from continuing to serve, he is removed as a servant and an announcement is made during a congregation meeting to the effect that "[name] is no longer serving as [ministerial servant/elder]."

CONFIDENTIAL COMMUNICATIONS

38. Jehovah's Witnesses recognize the Bible's admonition to confess ones sins to God. 1 John 1:8, 9 ("If we confess our sins, he is faithful and righteous so as to forgive us our sins and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness.").

39. In addition Jehovah's Witnesses also believe that there can be much benefit from speaking to the congregation elders ("older men") regarding confidential matters. James 5:13-16 ("Is there anyone suffering evil among YOU? Let him carry on prayer. Is there anyone in good spirits? Let him sing psalms. Is there anyone sick among YOU? Let him call the older men of the congregation to [him], and let them pray over him, greasing [him] with oil in the name of Jehovah. And the prayer of faith will make the indisposed one well, and Jehovah will raise him up. Also, if he has committed sins, it will be forgiven him. Therefore openly confess YOUR sins to one another and pray for one another, that YOU may get healed."). Jehovah's Witnesses view confessions and other confidential and private communications of a spiritual nature between congregants and elders as communications that elders must keep confidential. Proverbs 25:9.

40. Jehovah's Witnesses do not believe that the confidentiality of spiritual communications they may have with the congregation elders is limited to confessions. Rather, as outlined in James 5:13-16, Jehovah's Witnesses are encouraged to seek the spiritual counsel and advice of the elders in a variety of life situations. Congregation elders are also encouraged to seek spiritual counsel and advice from elders serving in the Branch Office's Service Department, or from elders serving as circuit or district overseers, in order to receive spiritual counsel and advice as to how to apply the religious doctrine and procedures of Jehovah's Witnesses to issues concerning the congregation and its members, and on occasion congregation elders seek such spiritual counsel and advice. Such confidential spiritual communications from congregation elders are only handled by elders in the Branch Office Service Department.

41. If a servant is recommended by the elder body to be removed, the body of elders forwards a notice containing their recommendation of removal to the Branch Office elders, who, if they agree, confirm the removal in writing to the elders.

42. If a congregation member is disfellowshipped, the judicial committee elders forward a notice of disfellowshipping to Branch Office elders for their review to ensure that their decision was spiritually based and well founded. The notice of disfellowshipping has the name of the disfellowshipped person, the date of disfellowshipping, and the Scriptural basis for disfellowshipping.

43. Jehovah's Witnesses view all such spiritual communications about removal and disfellowshipping as confidential communications that must be kept strictly confidential.

44. Elders do not allow unnecessary third parties to be a party to a confidential communication. At times more than one elder may be a party to the conversation. For instance, it is Jehovah's Witnesses religious belief and practice to have at least two elders present during a judicial investigation and at least three elders present during a judicial committee. (Deuteronomy 17:6; Deuteronomy 19:15; Matthew 18:15-17; 2 Corinthians 13:1; 1 Timothy 5:19) Jehovah's Witnesses believe that men are imperfect and, therefore, three elders serving on a judicial committee can provide more full and complete spiritual counsel and advice based on a broader range of experience and knowledge than can a single elder alone. Before one becomes one of Jehovah's Witnesses, he is made aware of this provision. Your Word Is a Lamp To My Foot, pages 176-79; Organization for Kingdom-Preaching and Disciple-Making, pages 159-65; Organized to Accomplish Our Ministry, pages 145-47; Organized To Do Jehovah's

Will, pages 151-2. In addition, there may be instances where a husband and wife, or a parent and child, may together seek or be provided with spiritual counsel, advice or comfort from the elders. The elders and participants to these confidential and private spiritual communications would view these communications as confidential and congregants expect the elders to keep such communications strictly confidential.

45. The religious doctrine of Jehovah's Witnesses requires that all elders keep confidential and private spiritual communication strictly confidential. The Watchtower, April 1, 1971, pages 222-224; Kingdom Ministry, July 1975; The Watchtower, December 15, 1975, pages 764-66; The Watchtower, September 1, 1983, pages 21-26; The Watchtower, September 15, 1989, pages 10-15; The Watchtower, September 1, 1991, pages 22-27; The Watchtower, November 15, 1991, pages 19-23. An elder who reveals the contents of such a confidential communication may be subject to removal.

46. In this case, the Letter to All Bodies of Elders dated July 1, 1989, PE 1 and WE R, provides a reminder to the elders of their duty to maintain the confidential nature of confidential communications.

SIGNED the 26 day of April, 2012, at Patterson, New York.

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA - COUNTY OF ALAMEDA

JANE DOE,

Plaintiff,

v.

THE WATCHTOWER BIBLE AND TRACT SOCIETY OF NEW YORK, Inc., a corporation, et al.,

Defendants.

No. HG11558324

ASSIGNED FOR ALL PURPOSES TO JUDGE ROBERT McGUINESS, DEPARTMENT 22

PLAINTIFF'S MOTION IN LIMINE NO. 7 TO EXCLUDE EVIDENCE OF OR REFERENCE TO PLAINTIFF'S CRIMINAL ARRESTS OR CONVICTIONS [Evid. Code §§787, 352]

Trial Date: 5/21/2012

STATEMENT OF THE ISSUE

Plaintiff Candace Conti has suffered three criminal arrests and convictions, all in Alameda County Superior Court. The cases are as follows:

Case No. 1: Conviction – 7/19/07 - Docket #121079: Misdemeanor Penal Code §415 (Disturbing the Peace) and Misdemeanor Health & Safety Code §11377 (Possession of Controlled Substance) [Exhibit 1].

Case No. 2: Conviction – 4/27/09 - Dockets H-47823A & 233572A: Felony Health & Safety Code §11377(a) (Possession of Controlled Substance) [Exhibit 2].

Case No. 3: Conviction – 10/8/10 – Docket #H-49316B: Felony Penal Code §496(a) (Receiving Stolen Property) [Exhibit 3].

Based on Plaintiff's exemplary performance in her rehabilitation and sobriety, each of the felony convictions were reduced to misdemeanors pursuant to Penal Code 17(b) by Order of the Los Angeles County Superior Court, which acquired jurisdiction when Plaintiff's probation was transferred there in 2010. (Order, Exhibit 4)

Plaintiff moves to exclude evidence of or reference to all three criminal arrests and convictions. None constitute a Felony conviction at this time, and all are inadmissible as a matter of law.

I. MISDEMEANOR CONVICTIONS ARE INADMISSIBLE AS A MATTER OF LAW.

Evidence Code section 787 expressly precludes attacking a witness's credibility by showing prior arrests or convictions of misdemeanors. (Grudt v. Los Angeles (1970) 2 Cal.3d 575, 591). Although felony convictions may be admissible under certain circumstances under Evidence Code section 788, the section does not apply to misdemeanor convictions.

II. ALL OF THE CRIMINAL CASES ARE NOW MISDEAMENOR CONVICITONS ONLY.

A felony conviction that is declared to be a misdemeanor upon application of the defendant and/or probation officer subsequent to the conviction is a misdemeanor. (Cal. Pen. Code § 17(b)(3).) As a misdemeanor conviction, it is no longer admissible in evidence at trial. (Grudt v. Los Angeles (1970) 2 Cal.3d 575, 591.)

Plaintiff's probation supervision for her felony conviction in Case No. 3 was transferred to Los Angeles County, where she was attending a Kaiser inpatient and later outpatient substance abuse and psychological therapy programs. Her treating physicians and counselors from Kaiser Downey all documented her outstanding performance in both maintaining sobriety and fulfilling all of the conditions of her 2010 Probation Order. Her Los Angeles Probation Officer has concurred with their assessment. Based on this support, Plaintiff petitioned the Court to reduce her convictions to Misdemeanors, a remedy that was specifically authorized by her Alameda County Judge at the time of her sentencing in 2010. This Order establishes that Plaintiff has no felony convictions, and therefore any reference to or argument by counsel referencing her arrests, convictions, or criminal issues of any kind, should be excluded from this trial.

Proceedings

---oOo---

The Court: People of the State of California versus Candace Jeanine Conti. This would be case H-49316-B, also And H-47823-A and 121079. Counsel, could you please state your appearances for the record.

Mr. Hora: Afternoon, your Honor, Paul Hora for the People.

Mr. Wellenkamp: Paul Wellenkamp with Ms. Conti, She is present in custody.

The Court: Ma'am, is your true and correct legal name Candace Jeanine Conti?

The Defendant: Yes, sir, your Honor.

The Court: What's the proposed disposition of miss Conti's three cases?

Mr. Hora: Proposed disposition is as follows:

She's going to plead no contest to Count Two of the Information, a violation of Penal Code Section 496 subsection (a) of the Penal Code as a felony.

She will not be sent to state prison as a direct consequence of that plea.

Five years felony probation.

One day CTS.

Four-way search clause.

Restitution fund fine.

DNA samples pursuant to 296, and she will have to pay restitution, if any, to the victims on the counts she's pleading to and any dismissed counts. That will be joint and several with her co-defendant.

We have also, let's see, I think that takes care of that primary case. If in fact she enters that plea, I will move to dismiss the first count in the Information and also strike the prior on that Information for purposes of sentencing. That takes cares of that docket.

With respect to docket the probation docket H-47823, she's going to admit a violation, and she's also been promised by Judge Murphy, I can say just because we've talked about this, that she won't be sent to state prison as a direct consequence of that probation violation. He's contemplating some county jail time and a drug program, and so I expect that's what's going to happen.

And let me further say that with respect to the original docket which is H-49316-B, felony probation extends for a period of five years. I have told counsel that I will state on the record that I am not saying that the five years is mandatory, that she still has her right as any defendant would to petition the Court during the period of probation and if the Court that hears these matters to deem appropriate to take action such as terminate probation, reduce the offense under 17(b) motion, modified terms and conditions of probation, that would be at the Court's discretion. I'm not making any promises that it won't happen or that it will happen, just that she does have that opportunity like any other defendant would.

So, I'll let Mr. Wellenkamp fill in any blanks if there are any.

The Court: What about the third case, Mr. Hora?

Mr. Hora: That was on my mind and I forgot to mention it. Looks like that is a misdemeanor -- do you have that case in front of you?

The Court: Yes.

Mr. Hora: Does it, well, I was thinking about is it, does it have a TRNC date, do you know what I'm talking about Madam Clerk?

Mr. Hora: Termination date.

The Clerk: It will once it gets restored.

Mr. Hora: Oh, I see what you're saying. Let's just restore, same terms and conditions. That's fine.

The Court: Mr. Wellenkamp, is that your understanding of the proposed disposition?

Mr. Wellenkamp: It is your Honor, well put.

The Court: Did you want to add anything for the record?

Mr. Wellenkamp: No, sir.

The Court: Thank you. Ms. Conti, did you hear and understand the proposed disposition of your three cases?

The Defendant: Yes, I did, your Honor.

The Court: Is that what you are prepared to do?

The Defendant: Yes.

The Court: Do you have any questions?

The Defendant: No.

The Court: Mr. Wellenkamp, have you discussed the elements of the offense, the defendant's possible defenses, as well as her rights and consequences of the proposed plea?

Mr. Wellenkamp: We have.

The Court: Are you satisfied your client understands all the ramifications?

Mr. Wellenkamp: Yes, sir.

The Court: First of all, Ms. Conti, do you understand and agree to have Judge Murphy as your sentencing judge?

The Defendant: Yes, I do.

The Court: You further understand that you'll be liable for restitution in the main case for all the damages caused by the burglary; do you understand that?

The Defendant: Yes.

The Court: Meaning that you're pleading to receiving stolen property but you're going to get restitution along with the co-defendant, you're going to have to pay the person back for any monetary loss or the judge is going to have to order the damages; do you understand?

The Defendant: I understand.

The Court: You further understand that this plea is binding on you from this point forward, if you change your mind, think this isn't such a great deal, do you understand you're not going to be allowed to withdraw your plea?

The Defendant: I do.

The Court: You further understand that if you violate any term and condition of your felony probation, you could do up to three years in prison; do you understand that, ma'am?

The Defendant: Yes, I do.

The Court: You further understand that Judge Murphy is going to have to fine you, the minimum fine is $260, can range up to $10,000 plus penalty assessment; do you understand that?

The Defendant: Yes.

The Court: You further understand that Judge Murphy is going to suspend a felony probation violation fine subject and until you commit a probation violation; do you understand that, ma'am?

The Defendant: Yes, I do.

The Court: You further understand you're going to have to fill out a statement of assets or financial declaration for restitution; do you understand that, ma'am?

The Defendant: Yes.

The Court: Ms. Conti, you further understand there's going to be a search clause of your person, your vehicle, any property under your control, as well as your residence day or night, with or without probable cause by any law enforcement officer; do you understand that?

The Defendant: Yes.

The Court: You further understand that if you commit a petty theft in the future, the DA can make it a felony because of this plea, this conviction; do you understand that?

The Defendant: Yes.

The Court: You further understand you're going to have to submit biological samples for the state DNA felon DNA bank; do you understand that?

The Defendant: Yes.

The Court: You further understand that if you're not a citizen of the United States this plea could result in your deportation from the country, exclusion from the United States or denial of naturalization; do you understand that?

The Defendant: Yes.

The Court: You further understand that if you plead no contest, I'm going to find you guilty?

The Defendant: Yes.

The Court: And you understand that your probation or parole wherever it is can be revoked because of that no contest plea; do you understand that, ma'am?

The Defendant: Yes.

The Court: Ms. Conti, I have this felony waiver form before me, are these your initials on all the lines here and your signature here where my left index finger is pointing?

The Defendant: Yes, it is, your Honor.

The Court: Did you initial and sign this document because you understood your constitutional and statutory rights, ma'am?

The Defendant: Yes, I did.

The Court: And did you initial and sign this document because you're waiving and giving up your constitutional and statutory rights?

The Defendant: Yes.

The Court: Do you give up your right to a jury trial, ma'am?

The Defendant: Yes.

The Court: Do you give up your right of confrontation

The Defendant: Yes.

The Court: Do you give up your fifth amendment right to remain silent?

The Defendant: Yes.

The Court: Do you give up your right to present any defense available to you, to testify on your own behalf and to use the Court subpoena power to bring in witnesses and evidence?

The Defendant: Yes.

The Court: Do you give up all of your appeal rights in order to take advantage of this deal?

The Defendant: Yes.

The Court: Has anybody promised you anything other than what we stated here in open court?

The Defendant: No.

The Court: Has anybody threatened you or anyone near and dear to you to get you to enter into this disposition?

The Defendant: No.

The Court: Are you entering this disposition of your three cases because you feel it is in your best personal interest?

The Defendant: Yes.

The Court: Are you now under the influence of any medication, alcohol, drugs, a medical, mental or physical condition that's impairing your judgment?

The Defendant: No.

The Court: Do you have any questions at all, ma'am?

The Defendant: No.

The Court: Any further voir dire, Mr. Hora?

Mr. Hora: No, thank you.

The Court: Waive formal reading of the Information, Mr. Wellenkamp?

Mr. Wellenkamp: Yes, your Honor.

The Court: Ms. Conti, what is your plea that you did commit a felony, a violation of Section 496 of the Penal Code of California as a felony, in that on or about June 22nd, 2010 in the County of Alameda, State of California, you did unlawfully buy, receive, conceal, sell, withhold or aid in concealing, selling and withholding property ,to wit, GPS, bag with ,there's a little misspelling in here, Mr. Hora.

Mr. Hora: We're on the second count.

The Court: I assume it meant badminton gear, Fastrak Responder, sink repair parts and a computer which had been stolen and obtained in any matter constituting theft and extortion knowing that said property had been stolen and so obtained. What is your plea?

The Defendant: No contest.

The Court: Plea with your consent, Counsel?

Mr. Wellenkamp: It is, your Honor.

The Court: Factual basis as based on the police report, preliminary hearing transcript, any other discovery supplied to you?

Mr. Wellenkamp: Yes, sir.

Mr. Hora: So stipulated.

The Court: I find there's a factual basis for the plea.

I find that the plea and waivers were made knowingly, voluntarily and intelligently.

I accept and approve of the plea and conditions previously stated.

I specifically find the defendant guilty of Count Two, a felony violation of Section 496(a) of the Penal Code, based on your no contest plea, police reports, any discovery and consent of counsel.

Motion to dismiss Counts One and Three with restitution reserved and striking the prior for purposes of sentencing only.

Mr. Hora: The -- I think she's only charged in Count One and Two, so it will just be Count One.

The Court: First mistake of my life, Mr. Hora?

Mr. Hora: I believe it.

The Court: Strike that.

Mr. Hora: Just an oversight, not a mistake.

The Court: Count One is dismissed motion of the District Attorney with restitution reserved. Wasn't there a prior?

Mr. Hora: There was and I do move to strike that for purposes of sentencing only.

The Court: stricken for purposes of sentencing only. Case is referred to the probation department for presentence investigation and report.

Defendant is ordered to truthfully and accurately complete a statement of assets form, have it attached to the probation report. Case is continued to Department 513 on November 5th, 2010, that will be at 8:45 a.m. for sentencing.

Defendant would be remanded to the custody of the Sheriff of Alameda County in no bail status.

In docket 121079, probation would be revoked and restored, same terms and conditions pursuant to plea negotiation.

In docket H-47823, did you want me to take an admission or should I just take judicial notice of the previous no contest plea?

Mr. Hora: What is quicker?

The Court: Court would take judicial notice of docket H-49316-B.

Mr. Hora: I guess technically she's entitled to a hearing, so she --

Mr. Wellenkamp: She will waive the hearing and admit the violation, your Honor.

The Court: Ms. Conti, do you give up your right to have a probation violation hearing in front of a judge in this docket?

The Defendant: Yes, I do.

The Court: Do you give up your right to see, hear and confront and have your very excellent lawyer cross-examine all witnesses brought to court to testify against you?

The Defendant: Yes, I do, your Honor.

The Court: Do you give up your fifth amendment right to remain silent?

The Defendant: Yes, I do.

The Court: Has anybody promised you anything other than what Judge Murphy told you he would do?

The Defendant: No.

The Court: Has anybody threatened you or anyone near and dear to you to get you to enter into this disposition?

The Defendant: No.

The Court: Do you admit or deny you violated your probation by committing the acts alleged on or about June 22nd, 2010, as evidenced in Fremont Police Report 10-0622041, do you had admit or deny?

The Defendant: I admit.

The Court: Admission with your consent, Counsel?

Mr. Wellenkamp: It is, your Honor.

The Court: Factual basis as based on discovery supplied to you?

Mr. Wellenkamp: Yes, sir.

The Court: I find by a preponderance of the evidence that the defendant is in violation of her probation. The revocation is affirmed. Matter would be continued for sentencing to November 5th, 2010, that will be at 8:45 a.m. in Department 513 for sentencing. Defendant would be remanded to the custody of the Sheriff of Alameda County in no bail status.

Would there be anything further, Mr. Hora?

Mr. Hora: No, thank you, Judge, very much.

The Court: Mr. Wellenkamp?

Mr. Wellenkamp: No, sir.

The Court: That will be the Court's order. Good luck to you, Ms. Conti. Thank you

STATEMENT OF FACTS

Plaintiff Candace Conti was sexually abused by Jonathan Kendrick on multiple occasions over a period of more than a year. She was nine when the molestations began, around early 1995. The abuse continued and intensified until Plaintiff's parents separated during the summer of 1996 and she no longer was available to Kendrick. Kendrick's abuse started out as hugs and attention, which then deviated into oral copulation and penetration of Plaintiff with foreign objects. Kendrick gained access to Plaintiff during a time when she was particularly vulnerable due to her parents' dissolving, dysfunctional marriage. He used his trusted position as a fellow member of the North Fremont Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses to get close to Plaintiff, and then took advantage of the opportunities presented by their mutual involvement in the Witnesses' activities to use her for sexual gratification.

The Jehovah's Witnesses are a collection of various corporations and entities around the world organized for religious purposes. The "Governing Body" is a group of men who meet at the Jehovah's Witnesses' New York world headquarters and control all Jehovah's Witnesses activities worldwide. The Governing Body acts through the various corporations it has established, including Defendant Watchtower New York. It establishes in detail each and every significant policy and administrative practice for all the entities and all the Jehovah's Witnesses. The local and national congregational administrative officials and Clergy class, called "Elders," must follow these rules, without any discretion to depart from them.

In 1993, Elders in the North Fremont Congregation learned of possible sexual abuse of two girls by Jonathan Kendrick, a "Ministerial Servant" in the Congregation. They confirmed the first report of molestation of Kendrick's stepdaughter, Andrea, and did not investigate the second report involving a girl named Toi Register. The Elders, on a written instruction from Watchtower New York, "removed" Jonathan Kendrick from his minor administrative position as a Ministerial Servant, which involved handing out books and magazines to Congregation members. After the Elders received actual notice of Kendrick's sexual abuse of Andrea, they did not notify or warn anyone else in the small Congregation that Kendrick was a potential sexual predator of children. The Elders did not warn or notify other administrative persons in the Congregation, including fellow Elders, Ministerial Servants, Congregation members, or the parents of children active in the Congregation, including Plaintiff's parents. Kendrick continued to be allowed to engage in all Congregation activities without restriction, including "field service," where members, including children, go door-to-door through residential neighborhoods spreading the gospel. Kendrick performed unsupervised field service on many occasions with Plaintiff.

The abuse of Plaintiff was one of several identified occasions where Kendrick used the trust and confidence he enjoyed as a member of a small Jehovah's Witnesses Congregation to join an unsuspecting household or family and commit sexually deviant acts. He was criminally convicted in 1994 of his abuse of his stepdaughter from North Fremont Congregation. He was convicted in 2004 of felony Penal Code 288(a) sexual abuse of his 8-year-old step-granddaughter after he moved to a new Jehovah's Witnesses Congregation in 1998. In between, he molested Plaintiff and engaged in other inappropriate sexual conduct with Claudia, the spouse of Elder Rodney Francis, after moving into their house after his divorce from Andrea's mother.

The policy of secrecy as to sexual abuse of children by Congregation members that was followed by the Fremont Elders in 1993 and 1994 as to Kendrick was mandated upon it by Watchtower New York. The policy has as its rationale a very secular foundation: the effort of the Governing Body to avoid lawsuits by victims of sexual or other abusive conduct perpetrated by leaders or members of the Jehovah's Witnesses. The secrecy policy and its basis are stated repeatedly and explicitly in a binding policy commandment to All Bodies of Elders dated July 1, 1989, marked as Exhibit 1 for trial. It states:

> "Improper use of the tongue by an elder can result in serious legal problems for the individual, the congregation, and even the Society. " (Ex. 1, p. 1, ¶3.)
>
> "Worldly persons are quick to resort to lawsuits if they feel their "rights" have been violated. " (Ex. 1, p. 1, ¶4.)
> "The legal consequences of a breach of confidentiality by the elders can be substantial. If the elders fail to follow the Society's direction carefully in handling confidential matters, such mistakes could result in successful litigation by those offended. Substantial monetary damages could be assessed against the elders or the congregation. In some cases where the authorities are involved, certain complications could lead to a fine or imprisonment. These possibilities underscore the need for elders to be discerning and to follow carefully directions provided by the Society. (Ex. 1, p. 2, ¶3, emphasis added in part and in part in original.)

As devout Jehovah's Witnesses, Plaintiff's family centered virtually all of their social, recreational, and religious life around the Congregation. Meetings, study sessions, and field service, which involve children and adults together, occupied nearly all of their week. The Congregation was Plaintiff's extended family, as it is for most of the active members of the Church.

Plaintiff did not tell anyone about her abuse until 2002, when, as a 16-year-old, she disclosed it to a doctor at the Bay Valley Medical Group. Her "delayed reporting" is so common among abused children who have no safety net of family or institutional support that it is a recognized doctrine of professionals who address these issues. As Plaintiff grew older, she told her parents. Her mother, a sexual abuse victim herself as a child in Jehovah's Witnesses and a person with substantial mental and functional issues, was of little assistance. Her father, estranged from her by age 13 or 14, was on his fourth marriage when she told him in 2003, and his full-time commitment to Jehovah's Witnesses did not allow him to provide any support or assistance to Plaintiff on this or any other matter. Plaintiff reported the abuse to two Elders in a Southern California Congregation in early 2009, and requested that the Witnesses change their policies to do more to protect children from known child offenders within the membership. The subject of any policy change met with total rejection. Plaintiff then decided to retain an attorney and proceed with this lawsuit.

The health care providers who have treated and evaluated Plaintiff have diagnosed her with Post Traumatic Stress Syndrome and chronic depression from her abuse. She spent several years in her late teens and early twenties self-medicating with drug use, including methamphetamine – again, a common trait of abuse victims. Now 26, Plaintiff has been clean and sober for two years, and is on a path to a respectable and meaningful life. However, she will always carry the scars of the sustained sexual abuse she suffered as a child.

I. THE EVIDENCE WILL ESTABLISH A DUTY OF CARE ON THE PART OF BOTH INSTITUTIONAL DEFENDANTS TOWARD PLAINTIFF.

A. Common Law and C.C.P. Section 340.1

California Courts have long recognized a duty to protect children from the risk of sexual abuse at the hands of those known to present a specific risk. Third-party defendants have been exposed to liability for their negligent failure to prevent sexual molestations by employees, volunteers, and family members, where the non-perpetrator defendant possessed actual knowledge of the employee or volunteer's history of sexual abuse and failed to warn or protect children exposed to the abuser. (Evan F. v. Hughson United Methodist Church (1992) 8 Cal.App.4th 828, 842-43 [Church Youth Director]; Pamela L. v. Farmer (1980) 112 Cal.App.3d 206, 211 [Spouse of molester of girls in home swimming pool]; Juarez v. Boy Scouts of America (2000) 81 Cal.App.4th 377, 395-96 and fn. 5 [Boy Scout volunteer Scout Master]). The basis of the duty is found both in the "special relationship" between children and those who sponsor, organize, or supervise their activities, and in the general duty owed to persons of all ages to protect them from criminal conduct by third persons known to present a specific and preventable risk of criminal conduct or assault. (Rest. 2d Torts §302B.)

A separate specific duty to protect children from abuse also exists for organizations or persons who sponsor or supervise activities where youth participate. For example, Juarez v. Boy Scouts, supra, held that the evidence in that case established a duty to protect the child victim from the sexual abuse he experienced, even where there was no actual knowledge of prior molestation by the perpetrator Scout Master. The Court found that the general knowledge concerning child molesters' involvement in activities where youth are present and participate, and the knowledge of the risk of child molestation in or arising out of those activities, was sufficient to support "the imposition of a duty of care on the Scouts to take reasonable protective measures to protect Juarez from the risk of sexual abuse by adult volunteers involved in scouting programs, such as warning, training, or educating him (either directly or through his parent or adult volunteers) about how to avoid such an outcome." (Juarez, supra, 81 Cal.App.4th at p. 409-10). As Juarez noted, its holding was a continuation of a long line of cases recognizing such a duty even in the absence of specific knowledge of a specific child abuser. Juarez relied upon Wallace v. Der-Ohanian, (1962) 199 Cal.App.2d 141, where a youth camp operator was held liable for sexual abuse of an 11-year-old by an unknown third-party stranger who was not associated with the camp.

California Code of Civil Procedure section 340.1 is the statute of limitations for child sexual abuse cases. Extended limitations deadlines are applied to cases where an non-perpetrator entity

"knew, had reason to know, or was otherwise on notice, of any unlawful sexual conduct by an employee, volunteer, representative, or agent, and failed to take reasonable steps, and to implement reasonable safeguards, to avoid acts of unlawful sexual conduct in the future by that person . . . ." (C.C.P. 340.1(b)(2).)

In this action, it is admitted that the Congregation Elders acted as Defendant Watchtower New York's agents in their conduct concerning knowledge. The members of the Governing Body were the managing agents who set the policies the Elders followed. Plaintiff met Jonathan Kendrick through the Jehovah's Witnesses, she and her family trusted him because of the Jehovah's Witnesses community and church relationship, and Jonathan Kendrick had access to Plaintiff during, before, and after meetings, services, and door-to-door field service. The Elders had actual knowledge of Kendrick's reported prior sexual abuse of a minor. The elements of a common law duty as recognized by 340.1 are all present.

B. Rowland v. Christian

The analytical framework for analyzing duty in specific liability claims against institutional or entity defendants arising out of childhood sexual abuse by third-party perpetrators, like the analysis in virtually all tort duty cases, is based upon Rowland v. Christian, (1968) 69 Cal.2d 108, 113. (C.A. v. William S. Hart Unified School District (2012) 53 Cal.4th 861, at 877 and fn. 8.) The Court's determination of duty rests upon whether or not there is sufficient evidence that, if accepted, would give rise to a duty, but the liability itself can only be imposed if the jury decides the facts and evidence establish negligence. (Id. at p. 878-79.)

Applying the criteria of Rowland v. Christian supports the imposition of a duty against defendants in this case. The factors and their application are as follows:

1. Forseeability of Harm to the Plaintiff.

The evidence will show by the expert testimony of all of the professionals in the case, as well as Jehovah's Witnesses' own contemporaneously published articles, the knowledge that a perpetrator who has sexually abused one child was well known to pose a risk of future molestations to others. This factor strongly favors Plaintiff.

2. The Degree of Certainty that the Plaintiff Suffered Injury.

The evidence is 100% certain that Plaintiff suffered injury from her childhood sexual abuse. Although Defendants have not conceded the abuse occurred, for the purpose of the duty analysis, it must be assumed to be true. This factor favors Plaintiff.

3. Closeness of the Conduct to the Injury.

There is a direct line of continuity between the Defendants' conduct and the injury. The Elders' failure to warn Plaintiff, her parents, or other adults in the Congregation, of Kendrick's known risk of child sexual abuse, and their further failure to prevent his unsupervised access to Plaintiff during and arising out of Jehovah's Witnesses activities such as field service, provided Kendrick with the opportunity and the cloak of trust needed to accomplish his sexual abuse. There is a further closeness between the failure to educate or train leaders and members of the Congregation in sexual abuse prevention, and the failure on the part of the Elders and others to recognize the gravity of the risk posed by Kendrick and the necessary steps needed to protect children from him. This category also favors Plaintiff.

4. Moral Blame.

According to the repeated specific expressed reasons behind the July 1, 1989, written policy requiring the identity of child sexual abusers in the Congregations to be kept secret, the primary motive of Jehovah's Witnesses was to avoid lawsuits and financial loss. Putting the financial benefit of the organization ahead of the safety of children does involve moral blame, and this factor favors Plaintiff.

5. The Policy of Preventing Future Harm.

Perpetrator Kendrick continued to groom and later sexually abuse other children who he met through his relationships in Jehovah's Witnesses, resulting in his felony conviction in 2004. Had he been publicly identified as an offender against children in 1993, and the congregants warned instead of his record of sexual abuse of a child being kept secret, some or all of this harm would likely have been prevented. The professional experts who will testify in this case for Plaintiff will state that future harm is best prevented by identifying, warning of, and supervising known childhood sexual abusers so that these criminals are deprived of the opportunity and ability to molest further. The policy preventing future harm is supported by imposition of a duty, and this factor favors Plaintiff.

6. Burden to the Defendant and Consequences to Community.

Defendants, including Watchtower, which is a wealthy international organization with millions of members, would not have any more unreasonable burden in implementing child safety and protection policies, procedures, and training and education programs, than would other large national or international agencies and entities which involve youth, such as the Catholic Church, the Boy Scouts, or Little League Baseball. Virtually all of these entities now have such programs in place. On the other hand, the consequences to the community of failing to have such a program and failing to protect children against sexual abuse are significant, as it fosters criminal conduct not only by the perpetrator, but by the childhood victims who often turn to drugs, and often suffer significant psychological damage - all of which places a burden on the community at large. This factor strongly favors Plaintiff.

7. The Availability of Insurance.

There is no insurance issue applicable in this particular case, as Jehovah's Witnesses and its entities are self-insured. To the extent that it is relevant in this case, imposition of a duty in this case will not affect the insurance market in any fashion. The availability and cost of insurance for large entities that sponsor activities involving youth already includes these risks, because of the existence of many lawsuits and claims during the last decade. Additionally, Defendants in the position of Watchtower and Fremont Congregation in this case do not bear all the burden of the damages caused by childhood sexual abuse, as comparative negligence principles will cause the jury to allocate a significant percentage of fault to Kendrick as the perpetrator, reducing their total liability for non-economic damages. (C.A. v. William S. Hart USD, supra, 53 Cal.4th at p. 879). This factor is of little consequence.

An analysis of the Rowland v. Christian factors finds that all favor Plaintiff to varying degrees, with the possible exception of the insurance issue, which is of no consequence in the evaluation of this particular claim. Because CACI does not include specific instructions on child sex abuse duties and issues, Plaintiff has submitted two separate proposed special instructions on Duty that reflect the case and statutory law reviewed above. (See Attached Special Instructions 1 & 2.)

II. IMPOSITION OF DUTY AND LIABILITY IN THIS CASE DOES NOT CONTRAVENE ANY FIRST AMENDMENT PROTECTIONS.

No California court has ever held that the First Amendment shields a religious institution from liability for sexual abuse of a child. Throughout the proceedings in this case, Defendants have not cited any case that invokes the First Amendment to bar suits for sexual abuse of children. There is no exception applicable in this case that relieves Defendants from their secular duty to protect children from sexual abuse by known offenders in their organization.

A. The "Ministerial Exception" Has No Application To This Case.

California law has long applied an exception to the enforcement of employment laws against religious institutions, called the "Ministerial Exception." (Henry v. Red Hill Evangelical Lutheran Church of Tustin (2012) 201 Cal.App.4th 1041, 1053-54.) California has been one of many states to hold that the First Amendment religious clauses protect against interference in a religious institutions "right to decide matters affecting its Ministers' employment, free from the scrutiny and second-guessing of the civil courts." (Ibid. and fn. 6.)

The Ministerial Exception recognized by many states has recently been affirmed by the United States Supreme Court. (Hosanna-Tabor Evangelical Lutheran Church and School v. EEOC, 132 S.Ct. 694 (January 11, 2012).) Both the United States Supreme Court and California courts have limited the Ministerial Exception to employment law decisions as to the qualifications and selection of clergy: "the exception applies only to suits by or on behalf of ministers themselves." (Id. at p. 710.) In Hosanna-Tabor, the Supreme Court specifically refused to extend the doctrine to any other type of suit, including those for tortious conduct of religious employers. (Ibid.)

The Ministerial Exception has no applicability to this third-party liability case, both because it is not an employment case, and because perpetrator Jonathan Kendrick would not fit within the Ministerial Exception even in an employment context. A religious institution can only claim a Ministerial Exception for those individuals who have a "role distinct from that of most of its members." (Id. at p. 707.) In this case, that role is held by the Elders, not individual Congregation members like Kendrick. The Ministerial Exception is applied where the purported minister has a significant degree of religious training, such as the eight college-level courses, oral examinations, and repeated multiple approvals by both Congregation and institutional administration that the minister in Hosanna-Tabor took six years to complete. (Ibid.) Perpetrator Kendrick had none of this religious training or experience. The Ministerial Exception applies where the minister carries significant responsibilities to teach religious and lead, organize, and conduct religious services. (Id.) Jonathan Kendrick, as a Ministerial Servant and as a Congregation member, did not perform or have any of these religious responsibilities. Ministers entitled to the exception have special sanction from the institutions for which they serve. (Ibid.) Jonathan Kendrick had no such sanction.

The evidence will show that a Ministerial Servant is a helper who performs non-religious services for Jehovah's Witnesses, such as janitorial work, passing out magazines, or running the projector or microphone. None of these lay services require any special religious training or education, and none entitle defendants to claim the Ministerial Exception as to their conduct regarding Jonathan Kendrick.

B. The First Amendment Does Not Extend To Child Sex Abuse.

The U.S. Supreme Court has established that the First Amendment does not absolve individuals or institutions from complying with neutral laws of general applicability. (Employment Division v. Smith (1990) 494 U.S. 872.) The Court has specifically refused to recognize First Amendment challenges to laws enacted for the purpose of protecting children. It declared in Reynolds v. U.S. (1878) 98 U.S. 145, 164-66, in upholding an anti-polygamy statute, that "to permit a man to excuse his practices to the contrary because of his religious belief . . . would be to make the professed doctrines of religious belief superior to the law of the land and in effect permit every citizen to become a law unto himself." In New York v. Ferber, (1982) 458 U.S. 747, 774, it found that a category of speech may constitutionally be excluded from First Amendment protection to further the interests of children. And in Prince v. Massachusetts, (1944) 321 U.S. 158, the Court held that Jehovah's Witness children could not distribute religious literature in violation of child labor laws regardless of the children's status as ministers in the faith.

As a California court of appeal explained, "the free exercise of religion is not an absolute right and must be balanced against the rights of others, including one's children." (People v. Rippberger (1991) 231 Cal. App. 3d 1667, 1689.) Defendants' neutral and generally applicable duty to protect children in their organization from sexual abuse by a known pedophile in their congregation is not excused by their status as religious corporations.

III. THERE IS AMPLE EVIDENCE TO SUPPORT CAUSATION UNDER CALIFORNIA'S "SUBSTANTIAL FACTOR" TEST.

California follows the "substantial factor" test of causation in tort cases, as embodied in CACI 430. It is Plaintiff's position that the negligence of the institutional defendants, combined with the intentional conduct of Jonathan Kendrick, combined as concurring causes of Plaintiff's childhood sexual abuse. (CACI 431) Defendants Watchtower and Fremont Congregation, on the other hand, have previously argued that Kendrick's criminal conduct was a superseding cause of Plaintiff's harm, and that there is no evidence available to prove, even if the institutional defendants are negligent, that there is "a causal connection between the defendants' breach and the plaintiff's injury." (Saelzler v. Advanced Group (2001) 25 Cal.4th 763, 773.) Saelzler rejected the claim of a FedEx delivery driver who was attacked by unknown criminals while making a delivery to an apartment complex owned and managed by the defendants. The plaintiff predicated her claim on a negligent failure to provide adequate security. (Id. at p. 769.)

Saelzler is one of a series of cases against commercial property owners involving random criminal assaults by unknown criminals, with underlying claims of inadequate security precautions. (Ann M. v. Pacific Plaza Shopping Center (1993) 6 Cal.4th 666 [store employee raped by unknown assailant at shopping center]; Sharon P. v. Arman, Ltd. (1999) 21 Cal.4th 1181 [sexual assault by unknown attacker in commercial parking garage]; Nola M. v. University of Southern California (1993) 16 Cal.App.4th 421 [unknown rapist commits night attack on college campus]; Noble v. Los Angeles Dodgers, Inc. (1985) 168 Cal.App.3d 912 [assault in Dodger Stadium parking lot]; and Constance B.

v. State of California (1986) 178 Cal.App.3d 200 [sexual assault in state highway rest area bathroom].)

The "entirely random assault by an unknown assailant in a public place" line of cases has no applicability to the facts of this case. In this case, the criminal, Jonathan Kendrick, was a specific, identifiable individual with a known history of sexual abuse of a child, and the victim a child in the small Congregation in which the criminal was a member. In this case, the criminal's propensity for sexual assault of children was known to Defendants. In this case, most case law recognizes the existence of a "special relationship" between children involved in institutional activities that include youth, and the organizations that sponsor and supervise such activities. In this case, there are specific, identifiable acts that would have prevented Kendrick from having access to Plaintiff or other children for the purposes of sexual abuse – including warning the small Congregation and Plaintiff's parents, of his prior act of child sexual molestation; providing actual supervision over Kendrick in a manner that would have prohibited him from having access to Plaintiff during field service or other activities; or "Disfellowshipping" him so that Plaintiff and her family would avoid him and prevent him from accessing Plaintiff.

California case law has consistently determined, in a wide variety of circumstances, that there is a duty to protect third persons from criminal assaults by known or identifiable criminals when the relationship and knowledge of the parties supports imposition of a duty under Roland v. Christian, supra. (Delgado v. Trax Bar & Grill (2005) 36 Cal.4th 224 [bar owner had duty to provide security to customers who were assaulted by other patrons after "angry stares"]; Tarasoff v. Regents of the University of California (1976) 17 Cal.3d 425 [therapist duty to inform victim of mentally ill patient's stated intent to kill her]; Giraldo v. Department of Corrections (2008) 168 Cal.App.4th 231 [transgender inmate attacked by male prisoners].)

IV. NATURE OF EXPERT TESTIMONY.

The parties disclosed six retained expert witnesses, four called by Plaintiff and two jointly by Defendants. In addition, there are a number of non-retained experts. The retained experts for the plaintiff include Lynn Ponton, M.D., a professor of psychiatry from UCSF who is Board Certified in Child and Adolescent Psychiatry. She will testify primarily to issues of Plaintiff's damages. Anna Salter, Ph.D., is a psychologist from Harvard, who is a national author and leader in conducting trainings on sexual abuse prevention for youth organizations throughout the country. She is a former faculty member at Dartmouth Medical School in the Maternal and Child Health field, and has worked with groups all around the country for 30 years in issues of child sexual abuse prevention. Dr. Salter will testify as to applicable standards of care, and the delayed disclosure phenomena, among other issues. Carl Lewis is a licensed private investigator, and was for many years a Santa Clara District Attorney's office criminal investigator and police officer with specialized training and experience in sexual assault and child abuse cases. He will testify as to the Accommodation Syndrome and its effect on child victims of sexual abuse, on the failures of the investigation of Jonathan Kendrick performed by Defendants in 1993, and as to the common plan of Kendrick in utilizing multiple Jehovah's Witness families for sexual predator conduct. William Bowen, of Tennessee, is the Director of "Silent Lambs," an organization formed to support victims of childhood sexual abuse within the Jehovah's Witnesses. He is a former Elder, and will testify as to various policies and practices of Jehovah's Witnesses in issues of childhood sexual abuse.

Defendants have disclosed Monica Applewhite, a Park Dietz consultant, to testify about issues of standard of care. Defendants have also disclosed Martin Williams, Ph.D., a psychologist from San Jose, who has conducted the defense mental health exam of Plaintiff, and will testify as to issues of damages and causation.

There are a number of non-retained experts as well. Plaintiff's childhood family therapist, Laura Fraser, now lives in San Diego, and will appear by videotape deposition. So will Plaintiff's current healthcare providers from Kaiser, Downey: Lauren Walton, M.D., Helene Harmatz, LCSW, and Marcia Lee, MFT. Law enforcement officers Sgt. Jeffrey Baldwin, the Contra Costa County Sheriff who investigated Jonathan Kendrick in the 2003 felony conviction, and J.W. Davila, the retired Fremont Police Department Officer who conducted the investigation for Mr. Kendrick's 1994 conviction of the molestation of his stepdaughter, will testify as to the common plan and lack of inadvertence of Kendrick's molestation of the two girls which resulted in his criminal convictions.

One medical doctor, Janice Afruma, M.D., formerly of Bay Valley Medical Group, will be called by Plaintiff to read her chart entry of August, 2002, when she saw Plaintiff as a 16-year-old on one occasion only. Dr. Afruma did not form a diagnosis or prognosis at that time, but did record in her chart Plaintiff's reporting of her having been sexually abused some years earlier. She is called as a percipient witness as to her conversation with Plaintiff, for "testimony requiring only the reading of words and symbols contained in the relevant medical record," rather than for expert opinion. (C.C.P. §2034.430(a)(2).)

V. STATUTORY PROCEDURES GOVERN THE PROCESS FOR DETERMINATION OF PUNITIVE DAMAGES.

Civil Code section 3295(d) sets forth the process to be followed where punitive damages are claimed. That section provides that, on the application of any defendant, evidence of a defendant's profits or financial condition may not be admitted until the trier of fact returns a verdict for the plaintiff awarding actual damages, and a finding of malice in accordance with section 3294 and constitution of due process case law definitions. Such evidence then may be admissible only as to those defendants found to be liable and guilty of malice. However, the evidence of profit and financial condition, and the determination of punitive damages, must be presented to the same trier of fact or jury that found for the plaintiff and made the finding of malice.

Should Defendant Watchtower so apply, Plaintiff agrees that section 3295(d) sets forth the procedure to be followed. CACI provides, and Plaintiff has requested, the jury instructions for each phase of the bifurcated trial as to punitive damages: CACI 3944 and 3946.

VI. DEFAULT AS TO KENDRICK.

Jonathan Kendrick is a named defendant in this case. He has notified counsel and the Court that he will not appear for the trial, as he cannot afford the cost. However, Mr. Kendrick remains a party to the case even though he is absent from the courtroom, and he will be a party on the Special Verdict to whom fault may be assigned by the jury in the event of a verdict for Plaintiff. As a party, hearsay evidence such as extra-judicial admissions by Kendrick remain admissible. (Evid. Code §1220.)

Section 585 of the Code of Civil Procedure does not authorize the entry of a default in cases such as this where an answer is on file and the defendant does not appear at the time that the action is called for trial. (Wilson v. Goldman (1969) 274 Cal.App.2d 573; Heidary v. Yadollahi (2002) 99 Cal.App.4th 857, 863.) Where the defendant who has filed an answer fails to appear for trial "the plaintiff's sole remedy is to move the Court to proceed with the trial and introduce whatever testimony there may be to sustain the plaintiff's cause of action." (Warden v. Lamb (1929) 98 Cal.App. 738, 741.) In such a case, the plaintiff is entitled to proceed under the provisions of Code of Civil Procedure section 594(a) and he may do so in the absence of the defendant provided the defendant has been given at least 15 days notice of the trial:

> In Superior Courts, either party may bring an issue to trial or to a hearing, and, in the absence of the adverse party, unless the court, for good cause, otherwise directs, may proceed with the case and take . . . a verdict, or judgment, . . . provided, however, if the issue to be tried is an issue of fact, proof shall first be made to the satisfaction of the Court that the adverse party has had 15 days notice of such trial . . . .

C.C.P. section 594(b) provides that the notice to the adverse party required by subdivision (a) may be served by mail by the Clerk of the Court or by any party. There is no proof of service on defendant Kendrick of the Order Continuing the Trial Date from March 26, 2012, to May 21, 2012, because that Order was made before Mr. Kendrick entered the case through his Motion for Relief from Default. However, he was served on March 29, 2012, with the Stipulation to Continue Pre Trial Conference which document shows the trial date is May 21, 2012. Moreover, Mr. Kendrick filed an In Pro Per Settlement Conference Statement on April 4, 2012, stating he was aware of the trial date and would not attend: "I do not have any issue with the trial and related proceedings taking place without me being present."

Dear Brothers,

We are writing to you regarding a case of child abuse. We telephoned 11/12/93 and it was suggested that we submit in writing our questions.

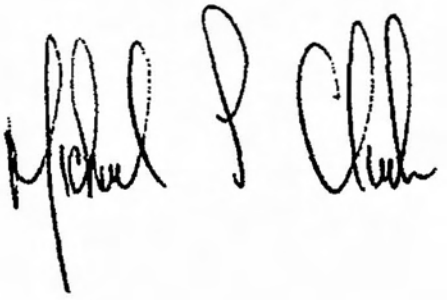
We met on 11/11/93 with Jonathan Kendrick, a ministerial servant, who confessed to child abuse with his 15 yr old step daughter. The abuse occurred approximately 4 months ago. He confessed to touching the breast of his step daughter while she was sleeping. She was awaken instantly and knew what had happened. His wife was informed that evening and the 3 of them talked it out between them. Brother Kendrick thought since he was sorry and his family was willing to forget the abuse, he would not have to report it to the congregation elders. He said that his conscious continued to bother him.

Evelyn, his wife, is baptized but inactive. She occasionally attends meetings.

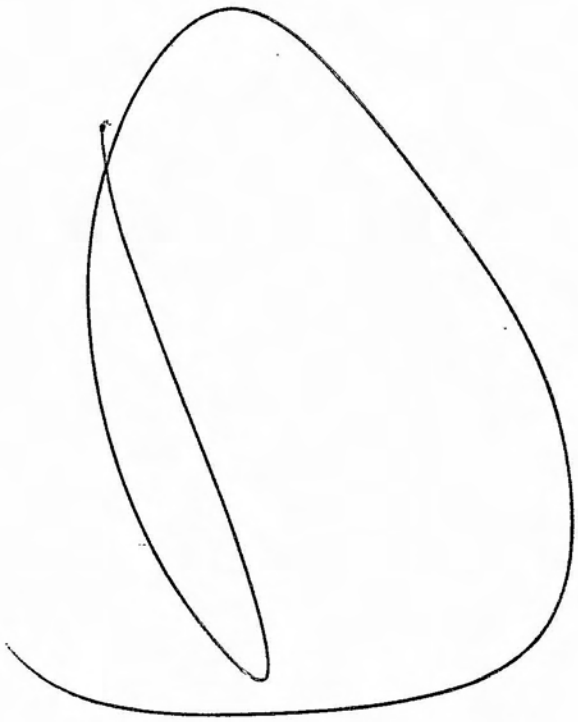
Andrea, the step daughter, is not baptized and is no longer an unbaptized publisher. The step daughter is now using this as a tool to threaten with when she wants something. Because she has been promiscuous with 2 boys at school. the parents have tried to enforce house rules covering her comings and goings.

Andrea has recently mentioned the abuse to another young girl, Toy Register, whom she attends school with. Coincidentally, Toy attends our congregation meetings and is studying. Her mother is disfellowshipped. Toy mentioned the abuse to her mother and added that Brother Kendrick on another occasion had accidentally touched her chest but admitted that it was not intentional. Mrs Register is now threatening to call the police.

Here are the facts as best as we can present them without interviewing each party. Our questions are as follows:



1. Can 2 elders handle this matter with Brother Kendrick as mentioned on page 93 of "Pay attention to Yourselves....Flock", under the heading Uncleanness? Or do we have to form a Judicial hearing because of it being child abuse?



2. We assume that Brother Kendrick does not qualify any longer as a Ministerial Servant. We will announce to the congregation that he is no longer serving as such. If this is incorrect, please inform us.

3. The legal department has given us some direction as far as our legal requirements and we will follow that closely.

We will wait to hear from you regarding the above questions. If I have not been clear enough, you may reach me during the day at my work phone (510-462-7861 ext 105)

C/O MICHAEL J CLARKE

FREMONT CA 94555

Dear Brothers:

Your letter dated November 15, 1993, has been received. As you will note from the enclosed S-52 form, Brother Jonathan Kendrick has been deleted from serving as a ministerial servant on the grounds of "uncleanness."

Your letter states: "He confessed to touching the breasts of his stepdaughter while she was sleeping. She was awakened instantly and knew what had happened." Since this incident is known by outside members of the family, it is appropriate that Brother Kendrick be deleted from serving as a ministerial servant with your congregation.

On page 92 of the Kingdom Ministry School textbook the following is stated: "Uncleanness includes an intentional momentary touching of sexual parts or caressing of breasts. Such minor uncleanness can be handled at the discretion of an elder or two; it does not require a judicial hearing. There is a need for strong counsel, admonition, and assistance to help the individual to maintain chaste conduct in the future."

In harmony with the above, it will not be necessary for a judicial committee to handle the "uncleanness" committed by Brother Kendrick. However, it would be appropriate for two elders to meet with him and provide him with strong Scriptural counsel so as to avoid a repetition of such a serious offense.

We trust the above comments will be helpful to you. With this letter we are pleased to send you an expression of our warm Christian love and best wishes.

Your brothers,

Watchtower B. & T. Society

JONATHAN TOLD ME THE INCIDENT LASTED ABOUT FIVE SECONDS. JONATHAN WAS ONLY ABLE TO NARROW DOWN THE TIME FRAME OF THIS INCIDENT TO THIS PAST SUMMER. JONATHAN LATER TOLD ME HE ALSO UNZIPPED THE FRONT OF THE VICTIM'S PANTS, BUT DID NOT TOUCH HER "THERE". HE STOPPED BECAUSE THE VICTIM STARTED MOVING. PAUL INMAN

after being placed under oath by the Certified Shorthand Reporter testified as follows:

EXAMINATION BY MR. SIMONS

BY MR. SIMONS:

Q. And please state your full name.

A. Paul Raymond Inman.

Q. Mr. Inman, you are currently a resident of Florida; correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And before living in Florida, you lived in the Bay Area in California; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And during that time you had some affiliation with the North Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses in Fremont; is that true?

0008

A. Yes.
Q. Between 1994 and 2004, did you serve as an elder in any congregation of the Jehovah's Witnesses?
A. No.
Q. Did you serve during that time period, '94 to '04, as a ministerial servant in any congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses?
A. No.
Q. Are you currently a member of a congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses?
A. Yes.
Q. And which congregation are you currently a member of?
A. South Congregation Cassleberry, Florida.
Q. During the time period from 1994 to 2004 did you remain a member of the North Fremont Congregation?
A. No.
Q. Were you a member of one or more other congregations in that time period of '94 to 2004?
A. I think the question is unclear.
Q. Thank you. Between 1994 and 2004 were you a member of any congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses?
A. Contiguously?
Q. Or in sequence, either?
A. Rephrase the question again.

Q. Yes. We mentioned that you were an elder at North Fremont Congregation up until 1994. After you stopped being an elder in '94, did you continue to be a member of the North Fremont Congregation?
A. No.
Q. Did you join another congregation?
A. No.
Q. Were you a member of any congregation between '94 and 2004 when you moved to Florida?
A. Yes.
Q. Which congregation?
MR. McCABE: Well, I'm going to object as to vagueness. And the reason is that -- let me just help you out here, Rick. Mr. Inman was disfellowshipped for a couple of years.
MR. SIMONS: Okay.
MR. McCABE: So you're going to have to ask him that question and find out when he was reinstated because then he would be able to tell you where he was a member of a congregation and what years.
MR. SIMONS: Okay. Very good. Thank you.
Q. Mr. Inman, you're familiar with the phrase disfellowshipped?
A. Yes.
Q. And have you ever been disfellowshipped from 0010

Jehovah's Witnesses?
A. Yes.
Q. During what time frame were you disfellowshipped?
A. I will be approximating. '94 to '97.
Q. What is your understanding of the reason that you were disfellowshipped?
A. Smoking.
Q. And after the disfellowship was rescinded, did you then become a member of a congregation in Fremont?

A. No.
Q. Did you become a member of any congregation in California after the lifting of your disfellowship?
A. No.
Q. During the time that you were at the North Fremont Congregation, were you acquainted with Jonathan Kendrick?
A. Yes.
Q. How did you come to meet Mr. Kendrick?
A. Mr. Kendrick and his wife were studying about that time, and so I would see them at the Kingdom Hall like I see all the other members.
Q. Okay. Did you attend various study groups in which Mr. Kendrick was present?
A. I don't recall.

Q. Do you recall doing field service with Mr. Kendrick on any occasions?
A. I do not recall, but I probably did because I worked with everybody.
Q. Did you know the Conti family during the time that you were at North Fremont?
A. Yes.
Q. Did you know Neal Conti?
A. Yes.
Q. How did you come to meet Neal Conti?
A. Same way.
Q. During the time that you knew Neal Conti, was he married?
A. Yes.
Q. During those years that you were in the North Fremont Congregation were you married to Carolyn?
A. Yes.
Q. And did that marriage result in a separation between the two of you in August of 1994?
A. Yes.
Q. Do you recall whether or not your disfellowshipping occurred before or after the separation of yourself and Carolyn?
A. Before.
Q. During the time that you were an elder at North

0012

Fremont did you learn of a sexual molestation of a minor girl by Jonathan Kendrick?
A. No.
Q. Up until I just raised this issue and excluding any conversations you may have had with Mr. McCabe -- well, actually let me stop for a moment.
Jim, in the beginning of the deposition you listed the parties you are representing. Are you also representing Mr. Inman for today's deposition?
MR. McCABE: That's correct.
MR. SIMONS: Okay.
Q. Mr. Inman, I'm going to ask you questions about some conversations, but I do not want you to include in any answer any conversation you had with Mr. McCabe in his role as your attorney for this deposition. Do you understand that?
A. Yes.
Q. Okay. In other words, any conversation you may have had with him, treat it as if it does not exist for purposes of my question.
A. I understand.

Case No.: HG11558324

DECLARATION OF MARIO F. MORENO IN SUPPORT OF DEFENDANT WATCHTOWER AND NORTH FREMONT CONGREGATION'S MOTION IN LIMINE TO EXCLUDE TESTIMONY OF WILLIAM H. BOWEN EXPECTED TO BE OFFERED AT TRIAL

DATE	May 18, 2012
TIME	8:30 A.M.
JUDGE	Robert McGuiness
DEPT.	22

TRIAL DATE: May 21, 2012

I, Mario F. Moreno, declare as follows:

1. I am an attorney licensed to practice law in the courts of the State of New York and Connecticut and I am Associate General Counsel of Defendant Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc. (hereinafter "Watchtower"), Legal Department. I also served as attorney of record for Watchtower in the case entitled Dorman, et al. v. DOE 1, Linda Vista Church, et al., San Diego County Superior Court Case No. 37-2010-00092450-CU-PO-CTL (hereinafter "the Dorman matter").

2. I have personal knowledge of the facts and circumstances contained in this Declaration except as those matters based on information and belief and as to those matters, I believe them to be true. If called and sworn as a witness, I could and would competently testify to the statements made herein.

3. In the Watchtower Legal Department, I supervise all defense litigation in the United States in which Watchtower, other corporations, or congregations of Jehovah's Witnesses are being sued in civil court, or in which the right of Jehovah's Witnesses as a whole are implicated.

Silentlambs, Inc. and William H. Bowen

4. In recent years, our office has received reports from attorneys, congregations of Jehovah's Witnesses and individual Witnesses whenever former Jehovah's Witnesses such as William Bowen are listed as expert witnesses by a party opposing the interests of Jehovah's Witnesses.

5. On February 23, 2012, I deposed Mr. Bowen in the Dorman matter. I have also read his deposition transcript in the only other case he admits to being deposed. Attached to and incorporated herein as Exhibit A are true and correct copies of certain excerpts from Mr. Bowen's deposition in the Dorman matter (hereinafter "Bowen Deposition").

6. William Bowen is on the short list of former Jehovah's Witnesses most often used as expert witnesses by parties opposing Jehovah's Witnesses. Mr. Bowen is the director of Silentlambs, Inc., and uses this organization as a platform to criticize and attack the organization of Jehovah's Witnesses. In September 2002, he organized and participated in a demonstration and march in front of the headquarters of Jehovah's Witnesses at 25 Columbia Heights, in Brooklyn, New York.

7. Mr. Bowen's deposition testimony, his website and the articles he has published on Silentlambs website (www.silentlambs.org) all attest to his animosity toward Jehovah's Witnesses and his desire to "force" Watchtower to change its position on reporting child sex abuse allegations, even though Watchtower's child abuse reporting policy is to ensure that it complies with all state and federal law.

8. In Mr. Bowen's Manifesto/Silentlambs pamphlet, Mr. Bowen explains his objective. Disappointed that he could not change policy within the organization of Jehovah's Witnesses, Mr. Bowen wrote: "The only way in my opinion is to go public and by doing so force Jehovah's Witnesses to do right by the children." (Ex. B, Bowen's Manifesto/Silentlambs pamphlet.) As he explained in his deposition testimony, he still expects the Governing Body of Jehovah's Witnesses to adopt a policy for all congregations worldwide to report each and every allegation of child sexual abuse regardless of the legal requirements of the jurisdiction's mandatory reporting laws. (Ex. A, Bowen Deposition, p. 134:3-25.)

9. Since the formation of Silentlambs, Inc. in 2001, Mr. Bowen's strategies have evolved. Earlier he and his supporter carried toy stuffed lambs symbolizing their alleged victimization. But in March 2004, Mr. Bowen sought a larger audience in seminars, forming a loose interfaith alliance with organizations such as The Linkup (Louisville, KY), and the Survivors Network of those Abused by Priests (SNAP). The publicity Mr. Bowen has gained for himself through his Silentlambs website has apparently been lucrative, in that Mr. Bowen has given up his business as a self-employed candle maker and salesman and now sells his services as a "consultant" for attorneys who file civil cases against Jehovah's Witnesses. His alleged field of expertise is not limited to child sexual abuse cases. He testified that he has also served as an expert in child custody cases and tax matters involving Jehovah's Witnesses. (Ex. A, Bowen Deposition, pp. 34:21-37:12, 41:2-16.)

10. Mr. Bowen also claims that he has published two books. (Ex. A, Bowen Deposition, p. 29:13-20.) These so-called "books" are all self-published, with no peer review. (Bowen Deposition, p. 30:1.) Further, there is no evidence of scholarly research and his comments are consistently conclusory and accusatory of the faith and beliefs of Jehovah's Witnesses.

QUESTIONS WITNESS INSTRUCTED NOT TO ANSWER:

(NONE)

INFORMATION TO BE SUPPLIED:

(NONE)

MR. MORENO: We can do it later.

MR. ZALKIN: Okay.

BY MR. MORENO:

Q So on your CV -- maybe you can look at the one Mr. Zalkin has there, No. 3. Item No. 3 mentions that you were two years at the Bethel home office. It says -- well, specifically it reads, "The two years at Bethel (home office) is viewed as an educational seminary type training by Jehova's Witnesses from 1977 - 1979." So are you saying that you served at Bethel?

A Yes.

Q And for how long did you serve at Bethel?

A In that time frame, from '77 to '79.

Q Okay. And you served for about 15 months, correct?

A Approximately 15 months. It included a leave of absence. So it's -- I haven't tabulated it, but somewhere between 15 to 18 months.

Q And what was your work assignment when you were at Bethel?

A I worked in the bindery.

Q And what did you do in the bindery?

A I worked in -- I guess you would call it bible production and the ink room.

Q And when you say "bible production," are you talking about the physical production of bibles?

A Sewing. That's what they called it there, but it was the sewing of the signatures to put the bibles together.

Q Okay. So you weren't involved in any research and writing assignment?

A No.

Q Okay. Item No. 3 also says, "I'm heavily endorsed by media academics in the field of comparative religion." You have expertise in the field of comparative religion?

A Yes. Comparing one religion to the other.

Q Yes. So what religions have you studied to become an expert in?

A Catholics. I've had a close association with the Catholics over the issues of child abuse, and I've also worked with other groups, including Mormons. And outside of that, I've had some experience with Baptists, as well as -- I'm just trying to recall from memory here. That's all that comes to my mind at the moment.

Q Okay. Now, with respect to Jehova's Witnesses, you consider yourself an expert on their beliefs?

A More so on their practices and how the administration works and the organization in my experience.

Q So policies and practices of Jehova's Witnesses, you consider yourself an expert?

A Yes, sir.

Q With respect to Mormons, what do you consider yourself on expert on?

A I think more so the issue involving the same dynamic of how child abuse occurs and how it's covered up within the religion, as well as how victims are treated when they bring forth allegations of abuse.

Q So do you consider yourself an expert on the policies and practices of the Mormon Church?

A Not a -- I wouldn't call myself a complete expert. I'm just knowledgeable about how their practices work.

Q Do you consider yourself an expert on the policies and practices of the Catholic Church?

A I think I can speak with -- I think I can speak with expert knowledge of how the Catholics work as far as their child-abuse policies.

Q Do you consider yourself an expert with respect to the policies and practices of any other religious organizations, other than the Mormons, Catholics, and Jehova's Witnesses?

A I would hold it to there.

Q Okay. So who is it that has endorsed you? When

A No. That pretty well covers it.

Q Okay. Item No. 4 says that you published two books and manuals. Did you bring those with you?

A Yes. They should be contained on that driver (indicating).

Q I'm sorry. They should be contained on what?

MR. ZALKIN: Flash drive.

THE WITNESS: I have it on a flash drive.

MR. ZALKIN: It's all here (indicating).

BY MR. MORENO:

Q So what are those books and manuals -- what's the subject matter?

A The first one is called -- I call it "The Beast Book." And it dealt with --

Q Just generally.

A -- the United Nations and how Jehovah's Witnesses were associated with that.

Q And what's the other book or manual?

A The second book involves child custody issues. The dynamic of child custody in Jehova's Witnesses.

Q Okay. Any books or manuals that you've -- when you say you published, who published them?

A They were published on the Internet. They've been circulated widely and available.

Q So is there a publisher? Are you the publisher?

A I'm the publisher.

Q Okay. Are they for sale?

A Yes.

Q Okay. So how much do you sell each of them for?

A Each of those are $20 a piece.

Q Have you published any books or manuals on the practices and policies of Jehovah's Witnesses with respect to child abuse?

A Yes.

Q And is that on your flash drive?

A Yes, sir. It should be included in this documentation that you have here.

Q And what's the name of that book or manual?

A There is a piece I wrote called "Is there a problem?" It's about -- it's a 15-page summation of the child abuse problem.

Q Okay. And just to be clear, is it in this stack of documents or is it on the flash drive?

A It should be on the flash drive.

Q Thank you.

A It's also on my Website. So --

Q The Silentlambs Website?

A That's correct.

Q Okay. Are there any other books or manuals that you've published, other than the ones we've discussed so

A I would have to ask her and see. She is a Ph.D.
Q Where in Colorado is she?
A I'm going to say outside of Denver. I'm not exactly -- I'm not good at geography.
Q Was she ever a Jehovah's Witness?
A Yes.
Q Is she now?
A She's never been disfellowshipped or disassociated.
Q She's not active?
A Not active, correct.
Q So aside from these four formerly active Jehovah's Witnesses, any other leading professors or scholars who have endorsed your work?
A That's all that come to mind.
Q Item 7 of your CV -- "D" -- 7D says, "I've been used as an expert witness on the beliefs and practices of Jehova's Witnesses and assisted in cases in the United States, specifically Oregon." Were you an expert witness in a case in Oregon?
A I was consulted with -- concerning a tax case in Oregon involving Jehovah's Witnesses. I consulted, and I helped them with regard to that case.
Q Did you give any testimony?
A Not actual testimony. It was more of a consultation.

Q Okay. Did you do any declarations or affidavits that were filed in court for that case?

A No.

Q Who was the attorney on that case that retained you?

A I don't recall. It was the County -- a County for city government for a county there in Oregon.

Q What city?

A It's been ten years ago. I don't remember.

Q Okay. And New Hampshire; that would be the Barry case?

A That's correct.

Q Any other cases in New Hampshire where you've been an expert witness?

A No. Not that I recall.

Q Any cases in New York where you've been an expert witness?

A New York, I assisted the Pandellos with their case.

Q I'm not familiar with -- you assisted who?

A Pinky Pandello. His father was the guy that was featured in "Dateline" going door to door. His daughter was molested, and I worked with his attorneys on some consultation and materials.

Q Was there a lawsuit involved?
A Yes.
Q Who was the lawsuit against?
A His father.
Q Okay. Not against the organization of Jehovah's Witnesses?
A You know, I don't remember to what extent it went. I know they prevailed, and they won a judgment against his estate.
Q Against his father's estate?
A Correct.
Q Okay. Did you prepare any affidavits or declarations that were used in court for that case?
A Not to my knowledge. It was a long time ago.
Q Did you give any testimony in that case?
A I primarily consulted with the law firm, and I may have provided some materials -- some substance concerning the practices. But, as I said, it's been a long time. That was about 12 years ago.
Q So you didn't testify?
A No.
Q In Indiana, what case were you an expert witness on the beliefs and practices --
A It was out of Evansville. It was a child custody case.

Q How long ago?

A That was in -- approximately in 2004.

Q And did you testify in that case either at a deposition or at trial?

A If my memory serves, I testified in trial.

Q And who was the law firm that retained you?

A I was working with one of the parties in the marriage, and I was working primarily with him. I don't remember the name of the attorneys.

Q Okay. What was the name of the party you were working -- that you testified for?

A I know his first name was Kevin, but I don't remember the last name. I'd have to -- I would have to try to look it up.

Q And what about in Kentucky? What case were you an expert witness on?

A I'm just drawing a complete blank at the moment. I can't recall.

Q Okay. And this is a copy of your CV?

A Yes.

MR. MORENO: Okay. We'll mark this as Exhibit No. 14.

(Defendant's Exhibit 14 was marked for identification by the court reporter.)

MR. ZALKIN: Did you mark that flash drive? I guess we're not marking it.

MR. MORENO: No. We didn't mark it.

Q Did you graduate from high school, Mr. Bowen?

A Yes.

Q What year?

A 1976.

Q Do you have any college education?

A I attended a course at Vanderbilt University in approximately 1975. I've also been to various classes, from marketing to public relations, to psychology, and things of that nature concerning various companies I've worked for.

Q Do you have any college degrees?

A No. I do not.

Q So no Bachelor's or Master's or Doctorate degree?

A No.

Q Okay. Have you ever completed any kind of course or study at a university?

A Other than what I did at Vanderbilt.

Q Oh, some subjects? You've taken some classes, in other words?

A Right.

Q But never completed a course of study to the point of getting a degree?

A No.

Q Okay. Have you ever gotten anything short of a degree at some school? A certification or something?

A I have certifications pertaining to the insurance business, securities and things of that nature -- completion of courses and certificates, along that line. But --

Q Nothing related --

A Nothing related to the university level. It's all been related to business.

Q Okay. No certifications related to child abuse?

A No.

Q No certifications related to the study of religion?

A No.

Q Any professional licenses that you hold?

A No.

Q Do you hold any kind of licenses, professional or not, other than a driver's license?

A Just a driver's license.

Q Do you belong to any professional organizations?

A Not currently.

Q Do you belong to any professional societies?

A Not currently.

Q Which ones have you belonged to in the past?

A I belonged to the Kiwanis Club. I've also been a member of the Rotary Chamber of Commerce.

Q Have you ever taught at any university?

A No.

Q Taught at any college?

A I've been asked to give discourse at -- one was at a Baptist seminary outside of San Francisco. And I've given lectures at several different seminars and things of that nature concerning Jehovah's Witnesses.

Q You mentioned a Baptist seminary?

A That's correct.

Q And what did you teach there?

A I discussed the practices of Jehovah's Witnesses when it came to the child abuse policy.

Q Was that a one-time thing?

A Yes.

Q How long?

A That was in 2004.

Q And how long was your class or lecture?

A It was approximately two hours.

Q And have you had similar lectures or taught similar classes at any other college or university?

A No.

Q Are you currently employed?

A Yes.

Q And what's the nature of your employment?

A I do this work here, consulting, and things concerning legal matters.

Q So you consult on cases involving Jehova's Witnesses?

A That's correct.

Q What other types of legal matters do you consult on besides Jehovah's Witnesses?

A That's pretty well it.

Q Do you have any other source of income or employment?

A No.

Q How long has it been since you had any other source of income or employment, other than consulting on cases involving Jehova's Witnesses?

A It's been approximately a year.

Q So what was your source of employment -- last source of employment, other than consulting on cases involving Jehova's Witnesses?

A I worked in Nashville. I managed a music studio.

Q How long did you do that?

A For approximately a year.

Q And what other employment have you had going back?

distributed them. It was a company I managed for about 12 years.

Q And prior to that?

A I guess at that point I worked in Seattle. I was -- I worked for Ken Investments.

Q Any other employment that you had that prepared you to become an expert in Jehova's Witnesses or any other work that you did?

A I can't think of anything in that regard other than functions that I had for the organization.

Q Okay. And we'll go through those in a moment.

Are you currently involved in any research studies?

A No.

Q Let's talk a little bit about your experience with the organization of Jehova's Witnesses. You were one of Jehova's Witnesses at one time?

A Yes.

Q So you came to be appointed as an elder at a certain point in time; correct?

A Correct.

Q And when was the first time you were appointed an elder?

A To my knowledge, it was 1985.

Q And were you deleted?

A Yes.

Q When?

A In 1992 -- June of '92.

Q And what was the reason for your deletion?

A It was over an administrative issue.

Q What do you mean "administrative issue"? I've never heard of anybody being deleted for an administrative issue.

A Well, the issue involved the -- an elder who moved to another congregation. And we disagreed with his reappointment as a body, and they called in a special committee. And the course of the special committee, they affirmed that that was the correct decision. But in the continuing -- ongoing investigation, it was determined by the special committee that I should be deleted for being self-willed.

Q Okay. And did you -- where was that, by the way?

A That was in Conway, Arkansas.

Q And do you know approximately what year that was?

A 1992.

Q And did you eventually get reappointed?

A Yes. In June of 1994.

Q Which congregation?

A That was in Redmond, Washington.

Q Okay. And how long did you serve as an elder after being appointed in 1992?

A Until approximately December of 2000 when I submitted my resignation.

Q Okay. Now, you submitted your resignation in Kentucky, correct?

A That's correct.

Q When you moved from Washington, where did you move to?

A A little congregation called Draffenville, Kentucky.

Q So there was a period of time there when you weren't an elder after being removed?

A Yes.

Q You had to be reappointed?

A Yes.

Q It took a couple of months, maybe?

A Yes. The need was great in Draffenville, so I was used immediately, but the reappointment probably occurred about a month later.

Q And then you resigned in 2000, you say?

A December 2000.

Q Okay. And the reason for your resignation was over --

A After I resigned, I did. Yes.

Q Okay. And were you told if you had no duty to report?

A Yes.

Q You weren't told not to report it. You were told you had no duty to report; isn't that correct?

A I was told as an elder, according to my understanding, not to report the matter.

Q So the direction was not that you had no duty to report it; the direction was that you should not report it?

A The direction was to follow the advice of the legal department, which was not to report it.

Q Okay. And who gave you the direction of following the advice of the legal department?

A It was one of the attorneys for the legal department.

Q Okay. Have you held any office in the Jehovah's Witness organization, other than -- you were a ministerial servant at one time, correct?

A Oh, yes.

Q -- other than administerial servant and an elder?

A I've been a pioneer.

Q So you were appointed as a pioneer?

A Yes.

Q As far as office of leadership, administerial servant, or elder, have you held any other position?

A Other than working in the departments and conventions, working in the Quick Build. And --

Q As an elder?

A Yes.

I've done temporary construction at Bethel. So I've also assisted with teaching at the elder school. I assisted with the pioneer school.

Q As an elder?

A As an elder, yes.

Q Okay. Have you ever been a circuit overseer?

A No.

Q And what is a circuit overseer?

A He's a gentleman that reviews the records and comes around every six months and makes sure that everybody is on track and submits a report to the home office with regard to the activities of the congregation.

Q And within the organization of Jehova's Witnesses, does the circuit overseer have a higher position than an elder?

A Elders are supposed to obey whatever the circuit overseer tells them to do because he is a direct representative for the Governing Body. So I would say based on that, he does hold a higher position as an authority figure.

Q In other words, Jehovah's Witnesses is a hierarchal organization, are they not?

A Yes.

Q So above the elders, you have the circuit overseer, correct?

A That's correct.

Q And you've never been a circuit overseer?

A No.

Q And above the circuit overseer, who do you have?

A District overseer.

Q Have you ever been a district overseer?

A No.

Q And above the district overseer, who do you have?

A At that point, I guess you would call it the branch overseer.

Q Okay. The U.S. Branch Committee?

A Yes.

Q So you have the members of the Branch Committee, correct?

A Yes.

Q Have you ever been a member the United States Branch Committee?

A No.

Q And above the United States Branch Committee, who would be at the next level?

A It might be the Governing Body.

Q Have you ever been a member the Governing Body?

A No.

Q So the highest position you ever had within the organization of the Jehovah's Witnesses was as an elder, correct?

A Yes.

Q And how many elders are there in the United States?

A Currently?

Q Yes.

A The last count I had was 29,000. That's the last notation I made. I may be off.

Q Would it surprise you to learn that there's more than 13,000 congregations in the United States?

A No.

Q Would it surprise you to learn that there's more than 80,000 elders in the United States?

A No. Not at all.

Q Okay. And do you feel that you're more qualified than other elders on the beliefs and practices and policies of Jehova's Witnesses?

Jehova's Witnesses. That's my question.

A Yes.

Q You profess to be an expert on the policies and practices of Jehova's Witnesses, correct?

A That's correct.

Q Okay. So your testimony is that by not being an elder since 2000, you have become more expert in the policies and practices than if you had continued to serve as an elder?

A Yes. Because I have looked at things on an international level. I have talked to Jehovah's Witnesses, as well as ex-Jehova's Witnesses around the world concerning various practices and how things work. So I feel I have a much broader perspective than a typical elder that serves in a little congregation and doesn't have the opportunity to do that.

Q And you are familiar with the term "traveling overseer"?

A Yes.

Q What's a traveling overseer?

A A circuit overseer.

Q Or a district overseer?

A That's correct.

Q Okay. So would it surprise you to learn that there's about 600 traveling overseers in the Governing Body. Do you believe that you're more knowledgeable in the policies and practices of Jehova's Witnesses than they are?

A Yes.

Q There's 12 members of the United States Branch Committee. Do you believe that you're more qualified than they are on the -- as you testified, about the policies and practices of Jehova's Witnesses?

A Yes. As it pertains to child abuse, yes.

Q Is there anyone who is as qualified as you are to testify on the practices and policies of Jehova's Witnesses as it pertains to child abuse?

A Not to my knowledge.

Q Is there other areas, other then child abuse, where you feel that you're the most qualified person to testify on the policies and practices of Jehova's Witnesses?

A I feel on the issues concerning child custody, I'm qualified. But there are other people out there that do work in that field as well.

Q Are they Jehova's Witnesses?

A More than likely they're former Jehova's Witnesses.

MR. MORENO: Okay. Let's take a short break.

MR. ZALKIN: Okay.

(Recess.)

BY MR. MORENO:

Q Mr. Bowen, were you disfellowshipped on August 15, 2002, in the organization of Jehova's Witnesses?

A Yes.

Q And what was the charge for which you were disfellowshipped?

A Causing divisions.

Q And is causing divisions a form of apostasy in the beliefs and practices of the Jehovah's Witnesses? Does it fall under the sin of apostasy?

A I do not think so. I think it's a separation. Causing divisions is one charge, and apostasy is another.

Q You are an expert on beliefs and practices of Jehovah's Witnesses, are you not?

A That's correct.

Q So is it your testimony as an expert that, according to the theology of the Jehovah's Witnesses, causing divisions does not fall under apostasy?

A As it was explained to me by the appeal committee. They said --

Q I'm not asking how it was explained to you by the --

MR. ZALKIN: Wait. Let him answer his question,

Q What areas are you an expert in other than the ones that you've testified to already today in your deposition? Are there any other areas that you consider yourself to be an expert in?

A I think that's pretty well it.

Q Do you consider yourself to be an expert on child abuse, generally?

A In my knowledge that I have gained over the last 12 years in child abuse, I think I have gained a certain expertise in understanding and empathizing with the plight of abuse survivors.

Q Are you an expert more specifically on the investigation of allegations of child sexual abuse?

A No.

Q Are you an expert on historical standards of care in the area of sexual abuse?

A No.

Q Are you an expert in the standards of care for the detection of sexual abuse?

MR. ZALKIN: For the --

MR. MORENO: The detection of sexual abuse.

THE WITNESS: No.

BY MR. MORENO:

Q Are you an expert on the standards of care for detection of a potential child molester?

A Can a what?

Q Can a 10-year-old boy be a regular pioneer within the Jehovah's Witness organization?

A Yes.

Q Is that a position of authority for him?

A It could be. Yes.

Q Besides reading the publications of Jehovah's Witnesses policies, practices, and having been an elder yourself within the organization of Jehovah's Witnesses, what else makes you an expert on the policies and practices? How else have you gained your expertise?

A I've consulted with numerous elders and former elders inside and outside the organization. I've talked to people that have held authority within the organization, from the Governing Body on down, as far as their practices and how things are handled. I've also on an international level talked to people who are members and former members of Jehovah's Witnesses to see on a worldwide basis how things are dealt with in the administration within the organization.

So I think it's allowed me to gain a deeper understanding and a broader perspective. And I've been provided materials. People have sent me things -- correspondence about their experiences, what happened to them. So it's allowed me to attain a broader perspective you talked to elders.

A Yes.

Q And were those elders part -- no.

Were those elders part of the Jehovah's Witness religion at the time you were talking to them?

A Yeah.

Q So were they active?

A Yes.

Q And would you say you -- of the elders you talked to, what percentage of the elders that you spoke with were no longer affiliated with the Jehovah's Witnesses?

A I'd say it probably runs about 70 percent not affiliated and 30 percent affiliated.

Q Okay. Now, Mr. Moreno showed you some documents that we marked as exhibits a few moments ago where there were some publications from, I guess, Watchtower. And they were talking about having the victim -- giving the victim the option to report child abuse if they so choose.

A Yes.

Q And I know you have mentioned that in your experience, notwithstanding those documents, that the religion really discourages the victims from reporting it. Am I understanding your testimony?

regard.

Q Okay. Do the policies and practices of the Jehovah's Witness religion emanate from the Governing Body?

A Yes.

Q Okay. So it starts from there, and then it goes down?

A Yes.

Q Okay. And are you aware as to when California adopted mandatory reporting for religious organizations of child abuse?

A No.

Q Okay. Are you aware as to --

A Each state has different standards for reporting. And you have to --

MR. ZALKIN: There is no question pending.

THE WITNESS: Okay.

BY MR. COPLEY:

Q Okay. That, I'm aware of.

Some states have started -- I'm going to back up. Some states adopted mandatory reporting on one particular year, and then other states followed. Am I right about that?

A Yes.

Q And then some states adopted it for one type of profession, such as teachers. And then later on they expanded it to include hospitals and doctors. And then they expanded it to include other types of people, correct?

A Yes.

Q And do you know whether or not California has -- or strike that.

Do you know when California adopted mandatory reporting for any kind of profession of suspected child abuse?

A I don't have a specific date.

Q Okay. And if a state does not have mandatory reporting obligations required by law, are you aware of any legal authority, a statute, a case, or anything in California that would have legally required an elder to report suspected child abuse to the police?

A No.

Q Okay. Let's talk a little bit about your opinions. I listened to a lot of questions here this morning, and I'm not a Jehovah's Witness. And while I've learned a lot about the religion during the course of this case, I'm just unclear as to what your opinions are. So I would like for you to articulate for me what opinions you intend to express at trial. And if you can break them down into categories, we can address them one by one.

A I guess I don't understand the question. Opinions about what things specifically?

Q Well, let me explain it, the process of this deposition. You've been designated as an expert in this case. And I understand from Mr. Zalkin this morning that you are going to be testifying about practices and procedures of the Jehovah's Witnesses and its structure. Am I right about that?

A That's correct.

Q Okay. And I'm sure you have spoken with Mr. Zalkin about what your opinions are; is that correct?

A Yes.

Q And you're going to testify at trial about those opinions that you told Mr. Zalkin about, correct?

A Yes.

Q So I'm asking you to tell me today, for the record, those opinions that you intend to express at the time of trial.

MR. ZALKIN: He is going to testify -- this is where -- he is going to testify as to the organizational structure of the Jehovah's Witnesses. He's going to talk about the governance of the Jehovah's Witnesses. He is going to talk about what a publisher is, what a baptized publisher is, what a pioneer is, what an administerial servant is, what a circuit overseer is, what a -- laterally and horizontally. That is what he is being asked to testify about, what they do, what they're instructed to do, and how they do it.

I mean, if you want him to testify to all of that right now, we'll be here for six hours. That's what he's -- he's not offering opinions in the sense of -- yes. Maybe it is his opinion that this is how they do it, and there will be disagreements probably as to how they do it or why they do it or what an instruction may be. But -- I mean, that's -- that's what he's going to be testifying to. There are two books in there with instructions on what -- these different positions. He will be addressing those.

MR. COPLEY: Well, here's my problem with that, Irwin: And that is -- I'm looking at this big -- giant stack of papers there in the middle of the table.

MR. ZALKIN: Right.

MR. MORENO: And I understand those documents contain some of his opinions. And then I got -- I downloaded on my hard drive these books and some other articles and that contains some of his opinions.

MR. ZALKIN: Right.

MR. COPLEY: But while he may have expressed opinions in publications for the last ten years -- people that are viewed in -- the last thing they would think of is a person in a trench coat. So the great guys that are great with kids oftentimes are viewed as child molesters.

Q So it's not like they wear a uniform that identifies them as a child molesters?

A Or a trench coat. Or --

Q Something like that?

A Right.

Q So over the years society has recognized that it's not always easy to recognize a child abuser. So if you -- so more and more states have adopted laws to make reporting of suspected child abuse mandatory, correct?

MR. ZALKIN: First of all, I'm going to object. The question lacks foundation, it assumes facts as to why these laws were made, and it calls for speculation on the part of this witness. It's beyond the scope of his expert testimony.

BY MR. COPLEY:

Q Okay. So you're not an expert in the area of mandatory reporting for child abuse?

A No.

Q Okay. When you were an elder, were you trained on how to investigate allegations of child abuse by anyone?

A No.

Q And --

A Can I add to that?

Q Sure.

A I was given directives on how to investigate wrongdoing, which would include child abuse.

Q Okay. So the investigation of wrong doing -- you use the word "wrongdoing," what does -- does it have a meaning within the religion?

A That's basically any rule that Jehovah's Witnesses make as far as a spiritual sin is concerned. That's the perception of wrongdoing.

Q Okay. And what were you taught as to what you were supposed to do when investigating a wrong-doing within the Jehovah's Witness religion?

A It's the same procedure as what I outlined earlier with regard to child abuse. You determine if there's substance to the allegation by two elders investigating. If there's substance to the allegation, such as a confession or two eyewitnesses, you convene a judicial committee, and you proceed from there.

Q Okay. Have we covered now your opinions that you intend to give with regards to child -- the child-reporting processes in the Jehovah's Witness religion in the 1980's?

Q And you don't have any degrees in psychology?

A No. No.

Q So it's just your own personal opinion as to what the psychologist may or may not believe?

A Well, I've talked to psychologists and shared this information with them, and that was the feedback that they gave me. So I'm just basing it on their opinions, not mine.

Q That's just your personal opinion. You're not an expert?

A Absolutely not.

Q Well, let me ask you this: You mentioned that you have done some work in the Mormon -- with child-abuse issues in the Mormon religion. Can you tell me a little bit more about that? What did you do with regards to that?

A I had a friend that contacted me in the early 2000's that had written an extensive book and put up a Website concerning abuse in the Mormon religion. And I consulted with her for a while on how to set up the Website and the dynamics that go on within the Mormon Church as far as how they administrate an allegation of abuse.

And in many cases it was very similar to how Jehovah's Witnesses look and investigate child abuse.

And routinely the church wanted to avoid publicity and negative allegations. So they -- that was just a conversations we had.

MR. ZALKIN: Okay. How about -- I don't know where you're going, but this is beyond the scope of what he's going to be testifying to. He's not an expert in how Mormons deal with --

MR. COPLEY: I understand that, but I'm looking at his CV, and he talked about being an expert in this area, comparative religion. And then there were some questions about that, and he mentioned this Mormon thing. And that is why I thought, well, I need to find out a little bit more about what he did for the Mormons.

Q So other than overseeing this Website and kind of seeing some of the things that this person had written in the book, did you do anything else with regard to the Mormon religion?

A No.

Q And have you ever been hired as a consultant with regards to that field in the Mormon religion?

A No.

Q How about the Catholic religion? Have you ever -- what has been your involvement in the Catholic religion in this field?

A David Chlohessy, who heads up the organization --

Q Could you spell that for the court reporter?

A C-h- --

MR. ZALKIN: C-h-l-o-h-e-s-s-y.

MR. COPLEY: Thanks.

Q David Chlohessy did what?

A He is the national director for SNAP, and that is Survivors Network of those Abused by Priests. And I've worked closely with him over the years, attending their conferences. I've lectured at their conferences and attended meetings that they had with the Catholic Church. I met a Catholic priest on several occasions. His name doesn't come to mind. But -- I consulted with him concerning their procedures on how abuse is handled and covered up within the Catholic Church.

I -- I've just had a lot of interaction -- there's another lady that heads up the organization. That -- prior to the SNAP organization -- I actually served on the board of directors of that organization in Louisville, and I assisted them with regard to policies they set up for assisting Catholic abuse survivors. They set up a farm there, and I was involved in helping make decisions on how to help and treat them and how to set up that facility.

Q Okay. What are your current criticisms of the handling of child-abuse investigations -- let me start again.

What are your current criticisms of the handling of child-abuse allegations by the Jehovah's Witnesses?

A I don't think child abuse should be handled as wrongdoing within the church. I think it should be handled as a crime, and elders should not be involved in any part of that investigation. I think that it should be -- any allegation should be automatically reported to the police, and the police should be allowed to investigate.

And after the investigation by the police if the church wants to make some type of directive on how that is approached -- I think they should not be bringing the victim and the molester together. It just needs to be approached in a much more delicate manner, which is the way that it is handled now.

Q So focussing on just the religious aspect of it, not the criminal prosecution of the perpetrator, just the religious aspect of it. Is it your testimony that Jehovah's Witnesses should delegate to the police and the district attorney's office for the State of California the investigation of a child-abuse allegation. And whatever they determine, they should accept that, and then either reprove the person or disfellowship the person within their own religion?

A No. What I'm saying is that the police investigators should be allowed to fully conduct their investigation before the elders become involved in trying to administrate wrongdoing. Once that -- let's just suppose a police investigation ensues, the guy goes to jail, and he's in jail. Now, at that point let the two elders interview the parents and the family and then go to jail and interview the molester.

And then if they want to make a ruling to disfellowship or reprove him, so be it. But don't get involved before authorities have conducted a proper investigation to determine this person's guilt. Because elders are not qualified to investigate crime, and oftentimes they taint a police investigation by telling the molester what the victim said and vice versa. Well, they prepared him for the police investigation now, and oftentimes they circumvent the police investigation as a result.

Q So you kind of follow the old adage -- or maybe putting it this way: You're basically saying, hey, the current process that is used, as well as the process that has been used since the '80s, is they put the cart before the horse by -- that you view this as a crime, and you should have the police investigate it first. And then -- then the religion gets involved with it afterwards?

A As I explained, the elders on --

Q Is that accurate?

A Yes. As I explained to the elders when they first confronted me about this, I said, "If we have a murder in the congregation, the elders wouldn't say, Oh, wait. We need to do an investigation to determine if a murder really happened. You have a dead body and you have only one eyewitness." They wouldn't get involved. They would immediately call the police and have them make the arrest and decide if he committed the crime.

Later on they may make a judicial meeting and decide to disfellowship. Why in a murder they make that decision, and with child abuse, which is a much more, in my opinion, horrendous crime -- but they say, "Oh, we've got to do all this preliminary stuff," which oftentimes screws up the investigation; and, secondly, with regard to child abuse, molesters can be used after a period of time. It's an organizational directive. They can be reused within the organization. I say they should never be used. That's my opinion; and, thirdly, molesters are required to witness, to go door to door. And, of course, the organization says, "Well, they will have somebody with them at all time."

But who's going to be with them? How is that guy trying to understand how a child molester operates? It's left to such conjuncture.

I'm saying if you're a confessed child molester, you should never be allowed to go door to door and try to start bible studies with the unknowing public unless you want to wear a sign on your chest saying, "I'm a child molester, just be aware." So I don't think that's a proper policy, but that's a procedure within the organization.

Q When they allow a molester to -- who's been disfellowshipped to come back into the religion, are they permitted to go -- what do they call going door to door?

A Field Service.

Q Field service.

Are they permitted to do that?

A They're required to. It states in the 1995 Watchtower, that's -- the way they prove their repentance is by participating in the field ministry, which I don't agree with. In my opinion -- I don't -- and I think that most of the public -- if they knew that, it would give them pause as to the Jehovah's Witnesses calling at their door.

Q Okay. Have we covered now all of your opinions that you intend to testify at trial concerning the child-reporting processes for the Jehovah's Witness organization?

A I would just like to say there are three things that I have stated from day one since I resigned as an elder that I think needs to change in the policy of Jehovah's Witnesses, and I have never deviated from that.

And those three things are -- is what we've covered here, but I'd just like to make sure we are clear on that. No. 1, any allegation of child abuse should be reported to the police first before elders get involved; No. 2, molesters should never have any position of authority or exemplary position within the church; and No. 3, molesters should never be allowed to go in the door-to-door witnessing work of Jehovah's Witnesses.

And those are the three things that I maintain are the problem with the policy of Jehovah's Witness on child abuse. And to this day they have never fully been enacted or changed, in my opinion.

Q And the basis of those three opinions is what?

A Well, based on the instructions that I had when I was an elder within the church and based on the testimony of literally thousands of people that have come to me during the course of the last 12 years saying this is the reason there has been a problem. And in each of those instances, those policies have allowed children to be molested and allowed them to be hurt. If those were

Declaration of Mario F. Moreno in Support of Defendant Watchtower and North Fremont Congregation's Motion in Limine to Exclude Testimony of William H. Bowen

Exhibit B

IT IS TIME TO PROTECT CHILDREN. IT IS TIME TO STOP BEING A SILENTLAMB!

The bottom line is after much effort to try and change Watchtower policy from within I found I could no longer "wait on the Lord", I do not believe the Lord wants or would allow one child to be hurt, much less the many that have suffered and been molested as a result of Watchtower policy. The only way in my opinion is to go public and by doing so with public outcry, force Jehovah's Witnesses to do right by the children. This effort is truly a gift to all children of Jehovah's Witnesses to be able to live their young fives with a fair chance of not being molested. I encourage one and all to write, call, e-mail and through the media, let the Watchtower Organization know this policy must change, children are being hurt, policy must be changed now.

This Brochure was not sent by Bill Bowen. It is being sent in order to persuade the Body of Elders to come forward in your congregation. Sex with a minor is wrong and is never consensual. This matter should be brought before the local law enforcement authorities. It doesn't matter if it is an Uncle. Our next step is to go to the local media with this information. Lives have been ruined. Fleming Granger, Jr. has HIV possibly because of this pedophile Uncle and Felicia now has children out of wedlock. Fleming and Felicia (young adults now) need help. Felicia's parents have been told by the local congregation to not assist her. Your Brother in the faith/Publisher is allowed to go from door to door with a slapped wrist possibly looking for prey. We will be watching this closely. We know which territory Steven & Gina farm in field service and will be monitoring and possibly video taping Stevens' actions.

Is The

Rivertown Congregation Protecting

Steven Granger?

I Believe They Are!!!

When Witness officials have chosen to respond to the media about this question, they offer misinformation and tell uninformed Jehovah's Witnesses that this is not a problem. An example of how the Watchtower responds when asked about this problem is in a statement made to news media on January 5, 2001, by JR Brown of Watchtower Public Relations Department, he released this written statement when asked about this problem:

"We do not condone the actions of those who exploit children by this terrible crime and such persons are disfellowshipped (excommunicated) from the congregation. A known child molester does not qualify for appointment as a church elder or for any other position of responsibility in any congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses."

Is this statement true? Notice a comment made in an internal letter to "All Body Of Elders" dated 6-1-01:

"There is one exception to the above direction: The elders may have written to the brunch office and given full details about a former child abuser who is currently serving as an elder or ministerial servant. In such a case, if the branch office has decided that he can be appointed or continue serving in a position of trust because the sin occurred many years ago and because he has lived an exemplary life since then, his name should not appear on the List, nor is it necessary to pass on information about the brother's past sin if he moves to another congregation unless contrary instructions have been given by the branch."

Not only is a child molester not disfellowshipped in many cases but some are used as leaders within the organization with complete anonymity, as this internal communique brings out. Why would misleading information be given to the public on this matter? The Watchtower has developed a position toward molested children that is harmful. This is done through a church policy that dictates that local elders involve themselves first when molestation issues arise. They use an ancient old law edict that requires two eyewitnesses before a matter can be established. The elders who investigate have no experience with pedophiles or child molestation as a rule. When the pedophile denies the charge the elders then bring pressure to bear on the victim to produce eyewitnesses to prove the allegation. In effect the victim is accused of lying unless he/she can prove they are telling the truth by producing an additional witness who watched it happen. As you can guess in 90% of the cases the victim cannot, and as a result is told since he/she cannot prove their case the victim is required to view the pedophile as an innocent man. Hence, the victim cannot warn others or speak about the matter to anyone, otherwise he/she will be guilty of slander and this could result in being "disfellowshipped" from the congregation. "Disfellowshipped" means complete cutting off from family and all friends who are in the faith until you agree to live by the above guidelines. In many cases victims are encouraged not to go the authorities as it will bring reproach on God and make the church look bad. When a victim presses charges anyway he/she is on their own with absolutely no help or support from the elders. The elders will claim ecclesiastical privilege to get out of offering any corroborating testimony and anyone in the church is discouraged from helping for the reasons offered above. The pedophile on the other hand is given great sympathy as a falsely accused person and often has the full support of the church. This result: in a pedophile refuge mentality in the Watchtower organization; pedophiles can freely move about, discreetly molest children and have the protection of church leadership to keep charges from being established.

I believe, rather than the church involving itself in determining whether an accused person is innocent or guilty of molestation, the first step the church should take is to notify the local authorities that will investigate whether the accusation has merit. Then if found guilty in a court of law, the pedophile will be publicly identified and punished. This protects the innocent and could help give closure to the victim. Until that day happens, the lambs have been silenced, the victimized little ones, who look to their Jehovah's Witness leadership for protection, but instead are crushed and ostracized by an organizational policy where they need help the most.

I have formed an organization to publicly expose Jehovah's Witnesses for hurting children. It is call silentlambs, please review our website at www.silentlarnbs.org. Therein. you will find the testimony of hundreds of victims of molestation whose experiences agree with my conclusions. Our organization is endeavoring to reach out to those who suffer as silentlambs, who are afraid to speak out because of the threats and sanctions their religion may place against them. Silentlambs is a (501,C,3) non-profit organization solely dedicated to victims of child molestation who so desperately need a voice. The first step to expose this great wrong that has been wrought on so many innocent children is to SPEAK OUT.

Q. And you've just sworn to tell the truth in these proceedings under oath, and you understand that your testimony here today, even though we're in a conference room at a hotel in Norwalk, California, has the same force and effect as if you were testifying in a court of law with the judge and jury 09:03:57 09:04:10

A. In the L.A. area.

Q. I guess we can move onto questions I don't want to ask you, but we need to get into.

This is a lawsuit involving allegations of your being sexually abused when you were a minor. Who were the perpetrator of your abuse?

A. Jonathan Kendrick.

Q. How did you know Jonathan Kendrick?

A. He was a member of the North Fremont Congregation.

Q. Was he a friend of your family?

A. Yes.

Q. Was he someone who would visit your parents' home?

A. Yes.

Q. Your parents visit his home?

A. No.

Q. When did the abuse first take place?

A. I don't know the exact date or exact time. Around the age of nine.

Q. You were nine years old?

A. (Witness nods head affirmatively.)

Q. This is while your parents were still married?

A. Yes.

Q. Where did this abuse take place?

A. The Kingdom Hall, North Fremont Kingdom Hall Congregation.

Q. Where in the Kingdom Hall?

A. Just in the Kingdom Hall.

Q. In the main auditorium?

A. Yeah.

Q. What took place in the Kingdom Hall? What did he do to you?

A. He would grab me and hold onto me.

Q. Where would he grab you?

A. Just like bear hug me. Hold me.

Q. Were other people present when this happened?

A. Yes.

Q. Who was present?

A. The attendees of the North Fremont Congregation.

Q. So like during a meeting?

A. Yes.

Q. During the time the meeting was going on or before or after?

A. Before, after.

Q. Other than the bear hug what did he do?

A. He used to make me sit on his lap during meeting.

Q. Were your parents at these meetings?

A. My dad was.

Q. So the first time this took place was when you were about nine years old?

A. (Witness nods head affirmatively.)

Q. How many times did it take place; the bear hugs?

A. I couldn't give you a number.

Q. Frequently?

A. Very frequently.

Q. Every meeting?

A. I would -- I could safely say that.

Q. Did you ever complain about these bear hugs to anyone?

A. I would try to get away.

Q. What would you do to get away?

A. Squirm and try to get away.

Q. Were you able to get away?

A. (Witness shakes head in the negative.)

Q. Did you ever say anything to your father about it when you were nine years old?

A. It seemed like it was acceptable conduct.

Q. So you didn't say anything?

A. Besides trying to get away, no.

Q. How long did the bear hugs and sitting on his lap last in terms of, if you can reference it, with your age? Starting with nine years old how long did it continue?

A. Up until he moved away.

Q. Do you know when that was?

A. Shortly after my parents divorced.

Q. Did the abuse ever increase to be more than just bear hugs?

A. Yes.

Q. When did it increase to be more? How old were you?

A. Still nine.

Q. What happened?

A. He would take me to his house after meetings.

Q. Were these day meetings or night meetings?

A. Sunday meetings.

Q. Sunday meetings?

What happened when he would take you to his house after a Sunday meeting?

A. He would bear hug me. He wouldn't let me go. He would touch me. Put his hands up my shirt.

Q. This started when you were age nine?

A. (Witness nods head affirmatively.)

Q. While you were age nine did he do anything else besides bear hug you and put his hands up your shirt?

A. I don't know at what age it was when it

A. No.
Q. Before you were 12?
A. Yes.
Q. Can you tell me about how many times this incident took place where he would use pens?
A. Several times a month.
Q. Over what time period? Number of years? All within one year?
A. After it escalated?
Q. Yes.
A. Couple years.
Q. When did the abuse stop?
A. When he moved.
Q. He moved about the time your parents divorced?
A. (Witness nods head affirmatively.)
Q. That was in 1997?
A. That's correct.
Q. The abuse started when you were nine years old, so about 1994?
A. (Witness nods head affirmatively.)
Q. Were there occasions of abuse anywhere else other than what you have described at the Kingdom Hall and at his home?
A. No.
Q. Was there any other type of abuse other than what you have already described?

A. Oral. He used to make me touch him and he used to lick me.

Q. Was he clothed or unclothed when you touched him?

A. Unclothed.

Q. What did he make you touch?

A. His genital area.

Q. Did he disrobe? How was he dressed?

A. He was unclothed.

Q. Completely?

A. Yes.

Q. What about you? Did he unclothe you?

A. Yes.

Q. How often did this happen?

A. Several times a month.

Q. Did you ever go to meetings at the Fremont Kingdom Hall by yourself?

A. No.

Q. Did you always go with your dad or your mom?

A. Yes.

Q. Or both of your parents while they were married?

A. Yes.

Q. Where did you usually sit? Did you sit with your parents?

A. Yeah. I sat with my parents.

Q. Did Jonathan Kendrick sit with your parents too?

A. Not all the time.

Q. But he would on occasion?

A. (Witness nods head affirmatively.)

Q. Did Jonathan Kendrick have children?

A. A step daughter. That's all I know of.

Q. What's her name?

A. Her name is Andrea.

Q. Are you a friend of hers?

A. No.

Q. Have you talked to her since you filed this case?

A. No.

Q. Did you ever talk to her about this abuse?

A. No.

Q. How old is she in relation to you? Is she older or younger?

A. I think she's around the age of my brother.

Q. How old is your brother?

A. Four years older than me. That's my guess, anyway. I didn't know her for that long. I didn't even -- she wasn't there for that long.

Q. Is there any other abuse with Jonathan Kendrick that you haven't told me about?

A. He took pictures.

Q. What would he take pictures of?

A. Me.

Q. Undressed?

A. Undressed.

Q. How old were you when he did that?

A. Nine.

Q. Was that a continuing part of his pattern?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, the incidents of taking photos, where did they take place?

A. At his house.

Q. And the incidents involving him being unclothed or you being unclothed, inappropriate touching, did that all take place at his house, too?

A. The inappropriate touching started at the Kingdom Hall.

Q. Okay. Well, I'm talking about other than the bear hugs.

A. Yes. It took place at his house.

Q. Was there any other inappropriate touching at the Kingdom Hall that you didn't tell me about other than the bear hugs and sitting on his lap?

A. And grabbing me.
Q. Where would he grab you?
A. Around my top section.
Q. Grab your breast or your arms or --
A. Yeah.
Q. -- shoulders?
A. Yes.
Q. All three?
A. Yes.
Q. But at all times that you were at the Kingdom Hall one or both of your parents were there; is that correct?
A. One. Yeah. One or both of my parents were there.
Q. Okay. Who was the first person you told that this was going on?
A. My dad asked me about it in 2003.
Q. What did he ask you?
A. He said -- well, he asked me if something had ever happened to me.
Q. What did you tell him?
A. I said, "Yes."
Q. Did you tell him the details that you have told me here today?
A. No.

talked to Cliff and Neff. It wasn't any more than six months.

Q. Did you have more than one meeting with Mike Clark and Larry Lamberton?

A. No.

Q. Did you talk to them on the telephone?

A. Yes.

Q. How many times?

A. I think we corresponded twice.

Q. By telephone?

A. By telephone.

Q. Did you tell Cliff Williams and Neff Beltran about being abused on a train trip?

A. Yes.

Q. Can you tell me about what that was about? What happened?

A. My -- we went to go se Gone With The Wind in Sacramento, my dad and my -- and Jonathan Kendrick. And they were drunk on the train ride back. And Jonathan Kendrick grabbed me and wouldn't let me go. Made me sit on his lap and I was trying to get away.

Q. What kind of train was it? Was it Amtrak?

A. Uh-huh.

Q. It was an Amtrak train from Sacramento to....

A. Sacramento to somewhere in the Bay Area.

Q. Did you ever go to the Rail Museum in Sacramento with your father?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you take that trip by train?

A. Yes.

Q. Was anyone else on that trip besides you and your father?

A. We've gone several times with family.

Q. What family?

A. My mom, my brother, my grandmother, grandparents. Train Museum was a family event that we would usually go to.

Q. How often have you been there?

A. At least six times.

Q. But none of those trips Jonathan Kendrick accompanied anybody in your family?

A. No.

MR. McCABE: It's been about an hour. Can we take a little breaK?

MR. SIMONS: Sure.

(RECESS TAKEN FROM 10:55 A.M. TO 11:03 A.M.)

BY MR. McCABE:

Q. Referring to the abuse that took place at Kendrick's home, was anyone else present during any of these instances?

A. No.
Q. Was he married at the time?
A. No.
Q. Did he live alone?
A. Yes.
MR. SIMONS: And while we were off the record I mentioned that there is one more thing that I'm afraid that Ms. Conti has to tell you about.
MR. McCABE: Okay.
Q. Is there something else that we haven't covered yet that you need to tell me?
A. He used to lick me, but he also used to make me -- he used to make me orally please him.
Q. How often did that happen?
A. After it started it was quite frequent.
Q. Do you know when it first started how old you were?
A. Probably 10.
Q. Did he orally copulate you?
A. (Witness nods head affirmatively.)
Q. Same amount of frequency?
A. (Witness nods head affirmatively.)
Q. What would happen after these incidents?
A. He would take me home.
Q. And....

A. And my dad would pick me up.
Q. Your dad would pick you up?
A. (Witness nods head affirmatively.)
Q. Where would your dad pick you up?
A. Back at the Kingdom Hall.
Q. Do you know, what was the purpose for you going to Jonathan Kendrick's home in your parent's eyes? Do you have any idea?
A. I think they saw him as a trusted person to babysit me.
Q. What would your parents do when you were with Jonathan Kendrick?
A. I don't know. I wasn't with them.
Q. And starting from about age nine he would take you to his house several times a month?
A. (Witness nods head affirmatively.)
Q. Every month?
A. (Witness nods head affirmatively.)
Q. Until 1997?
A. (Witness nods head affirmatively.)
Q. Was there ever a time when you didn't recall that these things took place? That you blocked it out of your memory?
A. Yeah. Claudia Francis had told me of a time that I don't remember.

after the abuse stopped?

A. I -- I never forgot the abuse.

Q. So they were always part of your memory banks?

A. Yes.

Q. Nothing happened to you in your late teenage years or anything after that all of a sudden jogged your memory that these things had taken place that you had forgotten?

A. I never forgot about the abuse.

Q. Okay. Did you ever look up Jonathan Kendrick on the sex abuse list?

A. After my dad -- or yes. I have. Yes.

Q. When did you do that?

A. After my dad had said something -- or asked me and told me that -- he asked me what had happened and I looked it up.

Q. Some time after 2003?

A. Yes.

Q. What did you find out?

A. I had found out that he had a conviction.

Q. Do you know when the conviction was?

A. No. I don't.

Q. Conviction for some type of sex abuse?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you remember what list it was you looked up, which web site?

A. I think it was familywatchdog.com.

Q. Familywatchdog.com?

We've talked about it, but you know what an elder is?

A. Yes.

Q. What is an elder?

A. Elder, in my mind, is somebody who protects the flock and overseas the school, overseas the structure of the Kingdom Hall.

Q. So kind of like the leaders of the congregation?

A. Yes.

Q. And did you ever know Jonathan Kendrick to be an elder?

A. No.

Q. Do you know what a ministerial servant is?

A. Yes.

Q. What's that?

A. Ministerial servant has different roles in the Kingdom Hall. Some -- some are in charge of emergency contact lists. Some are in charge of seating. Some are in charge of literature. Some are in charge of parts of the school.

If there's any other designations, I really

A. Yes.

MR. McCABE: I think that's all I have.

MR. SIMONS: All right.

EXAMINATION 09:03:10

BY MR. MCCABE:

Q. Ms. Conti, would you state your name for the record and spell your last name, please?

A. Kathleen Conti, C-o-n-t-i.

Q. My name is James McCabe. I just introduced myself to the record and to you earlier. I represent the North Congregation of Jehovah Witnesses in Fremont, California, and we're here to take your deposition in connection with the case that your daughter has filed against the Watchtower Bible and Tract Society and the congregation of Jehovah Witnesses of Fremont. 09:03:30 09:03:48

Do you understand that?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. And you've just sworn to tell the truth in these proceedings under oath, and you understand that your testimony here today, even though we're in a conference room at a hotel in Norwalk, California, has the same force and effect as if you were testifying in a court of law with the judge and jury 09:03:57 09:04:10 or a judge present.

Do you understand that?

A. Yes.

Q. Have you ever had your deposition taken before? 09:04:17

A. No.

Q. Let me give you a little ground rules that might be helpful to us and to the court reporter. Everything that's being said in this room is being taken down by the court reporter. At the end of the 09:04:27 deposition it will be put together in a book. It's kind of like a script for a play, and that will be provided to you, you'll be able to read and make any corrections that you think need to be made and eventually sign it. 09:04:42

I do have to caution you though that if you do make any corrections that are substantive in nature, different from what you testify here today, some lawyers at some future proceeding can comment on that, and it could affect your credibility as a 09:04:53 witness.

Do you understand that?

A. Yes.

Q. What I mean by that, if it was an automobile accident case and you said the light was green and 09:05:02 on that first occasion when you learned that she had been molested by Jonathan Kendrick, had she told you how many times she had been molested by him?

A. Many times.

Q. Did she tell you over what period of time, months or years? 09:42:03

A. Just that it was during the -- before we divorced and during it.

Q. Did she tell you what type of abuse she suffered on this first occasion? 09:42:33

A. No.

Q. Where were you when you had this discussion with your daughter?

A. On the balcony.

Q. Of your home? 09:42:48

A. Of my mother-in-law's home.

Q. And where was that?

A. Fremont.

Q. And what was your mother-in-law's name?

A. Dorothy Conti. 09:43:03

Q. What was your reaction to your daughter telling you the story?

A. I was very upset.

Q. What did you tell her?

A. That I couldn't believe that it happened to 09:43:43 her, and it happened to me also.

Q. When you say it happened to you also, were you a victim of child molestation?

A. Yes.

Q. At what age? 09:44:18

A. 13.

Q. Did you report that molestation?

A. It happened to three girls and myself, and the other two girls told the father.

Q. Was the perpetrator prosecuted criminally? 09:45:05

A. No, he was an elder.

Q. In what congregation?

A. I don't know what congregation that he went to.

Q. Was he disfellowshipped? 09:45:30

A. No.

Q. Did the elders ever talk to you about that?

A. No, it was kept quiet.

Q. This took place when you were age 13?

A. Uh-huh. 09:45:50

Q. What was the name of the perpetrator?

A. Dave Wood.

Q. Is he still alive?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you know the names of the other two 09:46:03 there a period of time where you knew he wasn't?

A. I believe that he may have not when he was getting a divorce. I think maybe he wasn't a ministerial servant. I can't say for sure, but I think maybe he wasn't at the end. 10:21:34

Q. Do you know when Mr. Kendrick got a divorce?

A. No, I don't remember.

Q. Was it before your divorce?

A. I don't remember that.

Q. Do you ever recall Mr. Kendrick inappropriately touching Candace at the kingdom hall at north Fremont congregation of Jehovah's witnesses? 10:21:58

A. I don't remember that. I just remember that he was very friendly with her.

Q. Do you remember seeing him give her bear hugs at the kingdom hall? 10:22:25

A. I don't remember.

Q. Do you ever remember seeing Candace sitting on his lap at the kingdom hall?

A. No, but there is a period of time that I wasn't there at the hall at the end. It was quite a few months I was not there. 10:22:53

Q. That would be '96 up to July 1997?

A. I believe that would be during '95 '96 and '97. 10:23:23

DEFENDANTS WATCHTOWER AND NORTH FREMONT CONGREGATION'S MOTION TO (1) BIFURCATE PLAINTIFF'S PUNITIVE DAMAGES CLAIM AND (2) BIFURCATE LIABILITY FROM DAMAGES; AND SUPPORTING MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES

TIME	8:30 A.M.
JUDGE	Robert McGuiness
DEPT.	22

TRIAL DATE: May 21, 2012

TO PLAINTIFF JANE DOE and HER ATTORNEYS OF RECORD:

Defendants Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc. (hereinafter "Watchtower"), and Fremont California Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses, North Unit (hereafter "North Fremont Congregation") (hereinafter collectively "the Church Defendants") move this Court for an order: (1) bifurcating the issue of punitive damages from the liability phase of trial; and (2) bifurcating liability from damages issues in this action.

This motion is based upon the following memorandum of points and authorities, the papers and pleadings on file, and any oral argument the court permits at the time of hearing.

POINTS AND AUTHORITIES

I. INTRODUCTION

Plaintiff, who was never baptized in the Jehovah's Witness faith, alleges that she was molested by a "fellow member, volunteer, and leader of the religious facility and congregation in Fremont." (See First Amended Complaint dated May 3, 2012, p. 2 ¶ 6.) Plaintiff contends that the Church Defendants negligently supervised, managed, and controlled Kendrick "in his membership and participation in the Fremont religious facility" and "failed to protect the plaintiff" or warn her "of the propensity and risk that Kendrick would sexually molest or abuse minor girls." (Id. at p. 3 ¶ 7.) Plaintiff specifically complains about an alleged policy established for administration "throughout the world" by the "Governing Body" of Jehovah's Witnesses and followed by the Church Defendants at the time this plaintiff was injured. (Id. at p. 4 ¶ 12.)

In the Third Cause of Action, Plaintiff alleges that Watchtower New York acted with malice by following church policy "to maintain secrecy concerning KENDRICK" that resulted in the failure to warn or otherwise protect minors against the risk of abuse. (Id. at ¶ 17.) Plaintiff's punitive damage claim relies on that alleged written policy, which Plaintiff alleges is "still in effect today, to keep all such information secret." (Id.) Plaintiff maintains that "the secrecy policy of WATCHTOWER NEW YORK," which is the same for "all entities of the Jehovah's Witnesses" worldwide, "despicably placed children at risk of sexual abuse by child molesters known only to a few Elders within Jehovah's Witnesses and kept secret from all others." (Id. at ¶¶ 12, 18.)

Plaintiff thus seeks not only to impose on the Church Defendants an unprecedented affirmative duty to warn congregation members about an alleged perpetrator but also to punish Watchtower for adhering to and "refusing to amend" a policy that Plaintiff alleges keeps secret "the identity of known child molesters active in their Congregations."

The Church Defendants contend that policies affecting congregation activities for the fifteen (15) years following Plaintiff's claimed injury are irrelevant to the negligence claim because the relevant time period is limited to the years 1994 to 1996 or 1997. The Church Defendants also anticipate that Plaintiff will attempt to introduce evidence of Kendrick's 2004 felony conviction and testimony from Plaintiff's mother Kathleen Conti that she (Kathleen Conti) was abused by a church elder in the past. The Church Defendants thus seek an order preventing Plaintiff from confusing the issues and misleading and/or inflaming the jury by mentioning, testifying about, or arguing facts concerning: (a) any church policy that existed after 1996 or 1997 when the Plaintiff's alleged abuse ended (including a prohibition to any reference to current church policies concerning the manner in which information about suspected sex offenders is handled, and any reference that the Church Defendants refused to amend any such policy); (b) Kendrick's 2004 felony conviction; and (c) witness Kathleen Conti's alleged past abuse by a church elder. Alternatively, if any of that evidence is ruled admissible, that this Court then bifurcate the liability phase of this trial from the damages phase.

II. LEGAL ARGUMENT

Plaintiff's negligence claim seeks to impose on the Church Defendants an unprecedented affirmative duty to warn members of a congregation about an alleged perpetrator. Plaintiff also seeks to punish Watchtower for adhering to and "refusing to amend" a religious policy that Plaintiff contends keeps secret "the identity of known child molesters active in their Congregations." Because an affirmative duty to warn has not been recognized by any court, anywhere, a breach of any such duty cannot justify an award of punitive damages. The two issues should not be tried together.

A. The Court should bifurcate the issue of whether Watchtower acted with malice from the negligence issues because of the heightened risk of undue prejudice from issues involving sexual abuse of children.

California Code of Civil Procedure section 598 provides that the court may bifurcate the issues presented at trial "when the convenience of witnesses, the ends of justice, or the economy and efficiency of handling the litigation would be promoted thereby."

The Church Defendants seek an order bifurcating the trial to address the negligence claim separately and completely independently from the punitive damages claim. The two issues should not be tried together because of the inflammatory nature of the subject matter. (See Williams v. Superior Court 36 Cal.3d 441 (1984) (explaining that there is a heightened danger of undue prejudice where there is evidence of sex acts involving children).) This is especially true because the claim for punitive damages is not constitutionally permissible.

The United States Supreme Court crafted the constitutional parameters governing state court awards of punitive damages. Those parameters encompass both when an award of punitive damages is constitutionally permissible and when a permissible award becomes excessive. (See Philip Morris USA v. Williams (2007) 549 U.S. 346; BMW of North America, Inc. v. Gore (1996) 517 U.S. 559.) To constitutionally award punitive damages, "[e]lementary notions of fairness enshrined in our constitutional jurisprudence dictate that a person receive fair notice not only of the conduct that will subject him to punishment, but also of the severity of the penalty that a State may impose." (BMW at p. 574.)

In this case, Plaintiff first asserts that the Church Defendants were negligent for their alleged failure to affirmatively warn the congregation members about an alleged perpetrator who was not an appointed Elder or Ministerial Servant at the time the alleged abuse of Plaintiff occurred. Plaintiff then contends that adherence to a policy that prevents the issuance of such a warning constitutes malice and subjects Watchtower to exposure for punitive damages. The Church Defendants have found no court decision in any jurisdiction that has imposed such a duty to warn congregation members about the danger that may exist from other congregation members. Importantly, during the relevant time period from the years 1994 through 1996 or 1997, no criminal or statutory rules existed in California that required the Church Defendants to provide notice about members who were suspected sex offenders.

Thus, whether the alleged failure to warn under these facts can support an award predicated on negligence is one thing; however, it is quite another thing altogether for a court to hold that a defendant's failure to adhere to a previously non-existent duty can also support an award for punitive damages. The Court should bifurcate the punitive damages claim to avoid confusing the issues and misleading and/or inflaming the jury.

B. The Court should preclude certain evidence that unfairly prejudices the Church Defendants, will mislead and/or inflame the jury, will confuse the issues, and will waste judicial resources. However, to the extent the Court rules such evidence admissible, the liability phase should be bifurcated from the damages phase.

1. The Court should excluded evidence that during the fifteen years since Plaintiff's alleged abuse ended the Church Defendants have maintained a "secrecy policy" because any such evidence is irrelevant to the negligence claim.

This case involves considerable debate as to whether the Church Defendants owed the Plaintiff a duty to warn about the danger presented by Kendrick's membership in the North Fremont Congregation. The Church Defendants contend that because no legal duty existed, Plaintiff's claim fails as a matter of law. Even if the Court should, arguendo, determine that such a legal duty existed during the relevant time period from 1994 to 1996 or 1997, the Church Defendants' policies since 1996 or 1997 are simply not relevant to the determination of this action. Thus, church policy concerning the handling of confidential private information about members suspected of sex crimes during the fifteen year period since Plaintiff's alleged abuse ended is inadmissible because it is irrelevant. Admitting the evidence would serve only to confuse the issues, mislead and/or inflame the jury and waste judicial resources required to clarify the issues, respond to evidence and attempt to "unring the bell."

2. The Court should excluded evidence of Kendrick's 2004 felony conviction because any such evidence is irrelevant, will mislead and/or inflame the jury, will confuse the issues, and will unfairly prejudice the Church Defendants.

The Church Defendants have filed a separate motion in limine specifically addressing the issue of Kendrick's 2004 felony conviction and seeking complete exclusion of any evidence of this conviction during trial. (See Motion in Limine No. 1.) Should the Court deny that motion, the Church Defendants hereby move to exclude evidence of Kendrick's 2004 felony conviction during the liability phase of trial for the same reasons articulated in the Church Defendants' Motion in Limine No. 1.

Evidence of Kendrick's 2004 conviction is curtailed by Evidence Code section 1107(a) and it is not relevant to prove any fact at issue in this case. The events leading up to the 2004 conviction occurred more than five years after the events of which Plaintiff complains.

Moreover, evidence the conviction is highly inflammatory and there is a heightened danger of undue prejudice where there is evidence of a sex act involving children. (See Williams v. Superior Court (1984) 36 Cal.3d 441.) Evidence of the conviction has absolutely no probative value and serves only to confuse the issues, mislead the jury and waste judicial resources. Thus, the Court should completely exclude evidence of Kendrick's 2004 conviction. However, should the Court allow the evidence to come in at trial, it should be limited to the damages phase only and not the liability phase due to the great risk of prejudice to the Church Defendants.

3. The Court should exclude evidence and testimony from Kathleen Conti of her alleged past abuse by a church elder because any such evidence is irrelevant, will mislead and/or inflame the jury, will confuse the issues, and will unfairly prejudice the Church Defendants.

Like Kendrick's 2004 conviction, testimony from Plaintiff's mother Kathleen Conti that she was allegedly abused in about 1975 by a church elder serves absolutely no purpose but to mislead and/or inflame the jury and confuse the issues. This issue is also a subject of another motion in limine. (See Motion in Limine No. 2.) Should the Court deny that motion, the Church Defendants hereby move to exclude evidence and testimony from the liability phase of trial that Kathleen Conti was abused by a church elder in the past for the same reasons articulated in the Church Defendants' Motion in Limine No. 2.

As an initial matter, the religious affiliation of Kathleen Conti's alleged abuser when she was 13 years old in about 1975 has absolutely no probative value to this case and will unfairly prejudice the Church Defendants. It is completely irrelevant to Plaintiff's claims. Should such evidence come in during the liability phase of trial, some jurors may erroneously conclude that Plaintiff's testimony about her alleged extended abuse is true merely because her mother claims to have also been sexually abused by an elder of the same faith. (Pellegrini v. Weiss (2008) 165 Cal.App.4th 515.) Moreover, it can only serve to evoke an emotional bias from jurors against the Church Defendants, motivating the jury to use the information improperly instead of logically evaluating the real issues in this case, and to improperly and unfairly reward Plaintiff or punish the Church Defendants because of the jurors' emotional reaction. Thus, the Court should completely exclude evidence and testimony that Kathleen Conti was also allegedly abused by a church elder. However, should the Court allow the evidence to come in at trial, it should be limited to the damages phase and not the liability phase due to the great risk of prejudice to the Church Defendants.

III. CONCLUSION

For each of the independent reasons stated herein, this Court should (a) bifurcate the trial to hear matters pertaining to Plaintiff's claim for negligence separately from matters pertaining to the punitive damages claim against Watchtower; and (b) bifurcate the liability phase from the damages phase to the extent the evidence discussed above is ruled admissible.

JURY INSTRUCTION NO. ____

CACI 100

You have now been sworn as jurors in this case. I want to impress on you the seriousness and importance of serving on a jury. Trial by jury is a fundamental right in California. The parties have a right to a jury that is selected fairly, that comes to the case without bias, and that will attempt to reach a verdict based on the evidence presented. Before we begin, I need to explain how you must conduct yourselves during the trial.

Do not allow anything that happens outside this courtroom to affect your decision. During the trial do not talk about this case or the people involved in it with anyone, including family and persons living in your household, friends and co-workers, spiritual leaders, advisors, or therapists.

This prohibition is not limited to face-to-face conversations. It also extends to all forms of electronic communications. Do not use any electronic device or media, such as a cell phone or smart phone, PDA, computer, the Internet, any Internet service, any text or instant-messaging service, any Internet chat room, blog, or Web site, including social networking websites or online diaries, to send or receive any information to or from anyone about this case or your experience as a juror until after you have been discharged from your jury duty.

You may say you are on a jury and how long the trial may take, but that is all. You must not even talk about the case with the other jurors until after I tell you that it is time for you to decide the case.

During the trial you must not listen to anyone else talk about the case or the people involved in the case. You must avoid any contact with the parties, the lawyers, the witnesses, and anyone else who may have a connection to the case. If anyone tries to talk to you about this case, tell that person that you cannot discuss it because you are a juror. If he or she keeps talking to you, simply walk away and report the incident to the court [attendant/bailiff] as soon as you can.

After the trial is over and I have released you from jury duty, you may discuss the case with anyone, but you are not required to do so. During the trial, do not read, listen to, or watch any news reports about this case. [I have no information that there will be news reports concerning this case.] This prohibition extends to the use of the Internet in any way, including reading any blog about the case or about anyone involved with it or using Internet maps or mapping programs or any other program or device to search for or to view any place discussed in the testimony.

Do not do any research on your own or as a group. Do not use dictionaries, the Internet, or other reference materials. Do not investigate the case or conduct any experiments. Do not contact anyone to assist you, such as a family accountant, doctor, or lawyer. Do not visit or view the scene of any event involved in this case. If you happen to pass by the scene, do not stop or investigate. If you do need to view the scene during the trial, you will be taken there as a group under proper supervision.

[If you violate any of these prohibitions on communications and research, including prohibitions on electronic communications and research, you may be held in contempt of court or face other sanctions. That means that you may have to serve time in jail, pay a fine, or face other punishment for that violation.]

You must decide this case based only on the evidence presented in this trial and the instructions of law that I will provide. Nothing that you see, hear, or learn outside this courtroom is evidence unless I specifically tell you it is. If you receive any information about this case from any source outside of the courtroom, promptly report it to the court [attendant/bailiff]. It is important that all jurors see and hear the same evidence at the same time.

It is important that you keep an open mind throughout this trial. Evidence can only be presented a piece at a time. Do not form or express an opinion about this case while the trial is going on. You must not decide on a verdict until after you have heard all the evidence and have discussed it thoroughly with your fellow jurors in your deliberations.

Do not concern yourselves with the reasons for the rulings I will make during the course of the trial. Do not guess what I may think your verdict should be from anything I might say or do.

When you begin your deliberations, you may discuss the case only in the jury room and only when all the jurors are present. You must decide what the facts are in this case. And, I repeat, your verdict must be based only on the evidence that you hear or see in this courtroom. Do not let bias, sympathy, prejudice, or public opinion influence your verdict.

At the end of the trial, I will explain the law that you must follow to reach your verdict. You must follow the law as I explain it to you, even if you do not agree with the law.

To assist you in your tasks as jurors, I will now explain how the trial will proceed. I will begin by identifying the parties to the case. Jane Doe filed this lawsuit. She is called a plaintiff. She seeks damages from The Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc. ("Watchtower"), the North Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses, Fremont, California ("Fremont Congregation"), and Jonathan Kendrick, who are called defendants.

Jane Doe claims negligence against Watchtower and the Fremont Congregation, intentional and willful acts of sexual abuse against Jonathan Kendrick, and acts of malice against Watchtower. Defendants deny those claims. Watchtower and the North Fremont Congregaiton also contend that Jonathan Kendrick was not their agent and that they have no responsibility for Jonathan Kendrick's alleged conduct away from church property.

First, each side may make an opening statement, but neither side is required to do so. An opening statement is not evidence. It is simply an outline to help you understand what that party expects the evidence will show. Also, because it is often difficult to give you the evidence in the order we would prefer, the opening statement allows you to keep an overview of the case in mind during the presentation of the evidence.

Next, the jury will hear the evidence. Jane Doe will present evidence first. When Jane Doe is finished, Watchtower, the Fremont Congregation, and Jonathan Kendrick will have an opportunity to present evidence.

Each witness will first be questioned by the side that asked the witness to testify. This is called direct examination. Then the other side is permitted to question the witness. This is called cross-examination.

Documents or objects referred to during the trial are called exhibits. Exhibits are given a [number/letter] so that they may be clearly identified. Exhibits are not evidence until I admit them into evidence. During your deliberations, you will be able to look at all exhibits admitted into evidence.

There are many rules that govern whether something will be admitted into evidence. As one side presents evidence, the other side has the right to object and to ask me to decide if the evidence is permitted by the rules. Usually, I will decide immediately, but sometimes I may have to hear arguments outside of your presence.

After the evidence has been presented, I will instruct you on the law that applies to the case and the attorneys will make closing arguments. What the parties say in closing argument is not evidence. The arguments are offered to help you understand the evidence and how the law applies to it.

You have been given notebooks and may take notes during the trial. Do not take the notebooks out of the courtroom or jury room at any time during the trial. You may take your notes into the jury room during deliberations.

You should use your notes only to remind yourself of what happened during the trial. Do not let your note-taking interfere with your ability to listen carefully to all the testimony and to watch the witnesses as they testify. Nor should you allow your impression of a witness or other evidence to be influenced by whether or not other jurors are taking notes. Your independent recollection of the evidence should govern your verdict, and you should not allow yourself to be influenced by the notes of other jurors if those notes differ from what you remember.

The court reporter is making a record of everything that is said. If during deliberations you have a question about what the witness said, you should ask that the court reporter's records be read to you. You must accept the court reporter's record as accurate.

At the end of the trial, your notes will be [collected and destroyed/collected and retained by the court but not as a part of the case record].

Sworn testimony, documents, or anything else may be admitted into evidence. You must decide what the facts are in this case from the evidence you see or hear during the trial. You may not consider as evidence anything that you see or hear when court is not in session, even something done or said by one of the parties, attorneys, or witnesses.

What the attorneys say during the trial is not evidence. In their opening statements and closing arguments, the attorneys will talk to you about the law and the evidence. What the lawyers say may help you understand the law and the evidence, but their statements and arguments are not evidence.

The attorneys' questions are not evidence. Only the witnesses' answers are evidence. You should not think that something is true just because an attorney's question suggests that it is true. However, the attorneys for both sides can agree that certain facts are true. This agreement is called a "stipulation." No other proof is needed and you must accept those facts as true in this trial.

Each side has the right to object to evidence offered by the other side. If I do not agree with the objection, I will say it is overruled. If I overrule an objection, the witness will answer and you may consider the evidence. If I agree with the objection, I will say it is sustained. If I sustain an objection, you must ignore the question. If the witness did not answer, you must not guess what he or she might have said or why I sustained the objection. If the witness has already answered, you must ignore the answer.

An attorney may make a motion to strike testimony that you have heard. If I grant the motion, you must totally disregard that testimony. You must treat it as though it did not exist.

A witness is a person who has knowledge related to this case. You will have to decide whether you believe each witness and how important each witness's testimony is to the case. You may believe all, part, or none of a witness's testimony.

In deciding whether to believe a witness's testimony, you may consider, among other factors, the following:

(a) How well did the witness see, hear, or otherwise sense what he or she described in court?

(b) How well did the witness remember and describe what happened?

(c) How did the witness look, act, and speak while testifying?

(d) Did the witness have any reason to say something that was not true? Did the witness show any bias or prejudice? Did the witness have a personal relationship with any of the parties involved in the case? Does the witness have a personal stake in how this case is decided?

(e) What was the witness's attitude toward this case or about giving testimony?

Sometimes a witness may say something that is not consistent with something else he or she said. Sometimes different witnesses will give different versions of what happened. People often forget things or make mistakes in what they remember. Also, two people may see the same event but remember it differently. You may consider these differences, but do not decide that testimony is untrue just because it differs from other testimony.

However, if you decide that a witness has deliberately testified untruthfully about something important, you may choose not to believe anything that witness said. On the other hand, if you think the witness testified untruthfully about some things but told the truth about others, you may accept the part you think is true and ignore the rest.

Do not make any decision simply because there were more witnesses on one side than on the other. If you believe it is true, the testimony of a single witness is enough to prove a fact.

You must not be biased in favor of or against any witness because of his or her disability, gender, race, religion, ethnicity, sexual orientation, age, national origin, or socioeconomic status.

If, during the trial, you have a question that you believe should be asked of a witness, you may write out the question and send it to me through my courtroom staff. I will share your question with the attorneys and decide whether it may be asked.

Do not feel disappointed if your question is not asked. Your question may not be asked for a variety of reasons. For example, the question may call for an answer that is not allowed for legal reasons. Also, you should not try to guess the reason why a question is not asked or speculate about what the answer might have been. Because the decision whether to allow the question is mine alone, do not hold it against any of the attorneys or their clients if your question is not asked.

Remember that you are not an advocate for one side or the other. Each of you is an impartial judge of the facts. Your questions should be posed in as neutral a fashion as possible. Do not discuss any question asked by any juror with any other juror until after deliberations begin.

Each one of us has biases about or certain perceptions or stereotypes of other people. We may be aware of some of our biases, though we may not share them with others. We may not be fully aware of some of our other biases.

Our biases often affect how we act, favorably or unfavorably, toward someone. Bias can affect our thoughts, how we remember, what we see and hear, whom we believe or disbelieve, and how we make important decisions.

As jurors you are being asked to make very important decisions in this case. You must not let bias, prejudice, or public opinion influence your decision.

Your verdict must be based solely on the evidence presented. You must carefully evaluate the evidence and resist any urge to reach a verdict that is influenced by bias for or against any party or witness.

I know that many of us are used to communicating and perhaps even learning by electronic communications and research. However, there are good reasons why you must not electronically communicate or do any research on anything having to do with this trial or the parties.

In court, jurors must make important decisions that have consequences for the parties. Those decisions must be based only on the evidence that you hear in this courtroom.

The evidence that is presented in court can be tested; it can be shown to be right or wrong by either side; it can be questioned; and it can be contradicted by other evidence. What you might read or hear on your own could easily be wrong, out of date, or inapplicable to this case.

The parties can receive a fair trial only if the facts and information on which you base your decisions are presented to you as a group, with each juror having the same opportunity to see, hear, and evaluate the evidence.

Also, a trial is a public process that depends on disclosure in the courtroom of facts and evidence. Using information gathered in secret by one or more jurors undermines the public process and violates the rights of the parties.

After weighing all of the evidence, if you cannot decide that something is more likely to be true than not true, you must conclude that the party did not prove it. You should consider all the evidence, no matter which party produced the evidence.

In criminal trials, the prosecution must prove that the defendant is guilty beyond a reasonable doubt. But in civil trials, such as this one, the party who is required to prove something need prove only that it is more likely to be true than not true.

Evidence can come in many forms. It can be testimony about what someone saw or heard or smelled. It can be an exhibit admitted into evidence. It can be someone's opinion.

Some evidence proves a fact directly, such as testimony of a witness who saw a jet plane flying across the sky. Some evidence proves a fact indirectly, such as testimony of a witness who saw only the white trail that jet planes often leave. This indirect evidence is sometimes referred to as "circumstantial evidence." In either instance, the witness's testimony is evidence that a jet plane flew across the sky.

As far as the law is concerned, it makes no difference whether evidence is direct or indirect. You may choose to believe or disbelieve either kind. Whether it is direct or indirect, you should give every piece of evidence whatever weight you think it deserves.

If you decide that Watchtower's conduct caused Jane Doe harm, you must decide whether that conduct justifies an award of punitive damages. The amount, if any, of punitive damages will be an issue decided later.

At this time, you must decide whether Jane Doe has proved that Watchtower engaged in that conduct with malice, oppression, or fraud. To do this, Jane Doe must prove the following by clear and convincing evidence: That the conduct constituting malice, oppression, or fraud was committed by one or more managing agents of Watchtower who acted on behalf of Watchtower.

"Malice" means that Watchtower acted with intent to cause injury or that Watchtower's conduct was despicable and was done with a willful and knowing disregard of the rights or safety of another. A person acts with knowing disregard when he or she is aware of the probable dangerous consequences of his or her conduct and deliberately fails to avoid those consequences.

"Oppression" means that Watchtower's conduct was despicable and subjected Jane Doe to cruel and unjust hardship in knowing disregard of her rights.

"Despicable conduct" is conduct that is so vile, base, or contemptible that it would be looked down on and despised by reasonable people.

"Fraud" means that Watchtower intentionally misrepresented or concealed a material fact and did so intending to harm Jane Doe.

An individual is a "managing agent" if he or she exercises substantial independent authority and judgment in his or her ministerial decision making such that his or her decisions ultimately determine Watchtower policy.

You must now decide the amount, if any, that you should award Jane Doe in punitive damages. The purposes of punitive damages are to punish a wrongdoer for the conduct that harmed the plaintiff and to discourage similar conduct in the future.

There is no fixed formula for determining the amount of punitive damages and you are not required to award any punitive damages. If you decide to award punitive damages, you should consider all of the following factors separately for each defendant in determining the amount:

(a) How reprehensible was that defendant's conduct? In deciding how reprehensible a defendant's conduct was, you may consider, among other factors:

1. Whether the conduct caused physical harm;
2. Whether the defendant disregarded the health or safety of others;
3. Whether Jane Doe was financially weak or vulnerable and the defendant knew Jane Doe was financially weak or vulnerable and took advantage of her;
4. Whether the defendant's conduct involved a pattern or practice; and
5. Whether the defendant acted with trickery or deceit.

(b) Is there a reasonable relationship between the amount of punitive damages and Jane Doe's harm or between the amount of punitive damages and potential harm to Jane Doe that the defendant knew was likely to occur because of its conduct?

(c) In view of that defendant's financial condition, what amount is necessary to punish it and discourage future wrongful conduct? You may not increase the punitive award above an amount that is otherwise appropriate merely because a defendant has substantial financial resources. Any award you impose may not exceed that defendant's ability to pay.

Punitive damages may not be used to punish a defendant for the impact of its alleged misconduct on persons other than Jane Doe.

If you decide that a nonparty's negligence combined with Watchtower's, the Fremont Congregation's, or Jonathan Kendrick's negligence or conduct in causing Jane Doe's harm, then you must decide the percentage of responsibility for the harm that you attribute to each of them.

First, decide the total amount of Jane Doe's damages.

Then decide the percentage of responsibility that the nonparty, Watchtower, the Fremont Congregation, and Jonathan Kendrick have for the damages. Then reduce the total damages by the percentage of responsibility that you attribute to the nonparty.

After you make these calculations, state the reduced damage award in your verdict.

Members of the jury, you have now heard all the evidence and the closing arguments of the attorneys. It is my duty to instruct you on the law that applies to this case. You must follow these instructions as well as those that I previously gave you. You will have a copy of my instructions with you when you go to the jury room to deliberate.

You must decide what the facts are. You must consider all the evidence and then decide what you think happened. You must decide the facts based on the evidence admitted in this trial. Do not allow anything that happens outside this courtroom to affect your decision. Do not talk about this case or the people involved in it with anyone, including family and persons living in your household, friends and coworkers, spiritual leaders, advisors, or therapists. Do not do any research on your own or as a group. Do not use dictionaries, the Internet, or other reference materials.

These prohibitions on communications and research extend to all forms of electronic communications. Do not use any electronic devices or media, such as a cell phone or smart phone, PDA, computer, tablet device, the Internet, any Internet service, any text or instant-messaging service, any Internet chat room, blog, or website, including social networking websites or online diaries, to send or receive any information to or from anyone about this case or your experience as a juror until after you have been discharged from your jury duty.

Do not investigate the case or conduct any experiments. Do not contact anyone to assist you, such as a family accountant, doctor, or lawyer. Do not visit or view the scene of any event involved in this case. If you happen to pass by the scene, do not stop or investigate. All jurors must see or hear the same evidence at the same time. Do not read, listen to, or watch any news accounts of this trial. You must not let bias, sympathy, prejudice, or public opinion influence your decision.

I will now tell you the law that you must follow to reach your verdict. You must follow the law exactly as I give it to you, even if you disagree with it. If the attorneys [have said/say] anything different about what the law means, you must follow what I say.

In reaching your verdict, do not guess what I think your verdict should be from something I may have said or done.

Pay careful attention to all the instructions that I give you. All the instructions are important because together they state the law that you will use in this case. You must consider all of the instructions together.

After you have decided what the facts are, you may find that some instructions do not apply. In that case, follow the instructions that do apply and use them together with the facts to reach your verdict.

If I repeat any ideas or rules of law during my instructions, that does not mean that these ideas or rules are more important than the others. In addition, the order in which the instructions are given does not make any difference.

Most of the instructions are typed. However, some handwritten or typewritten words may have been added, and some words may have been deleted. Do not discuss or consider why words may have been added or deleted. Please treat all the words the same, no matter what their format. Simply accept the instruction in its final form.

Sworn testimony, documents, or anything else may be admitted into evidence. You must decide what the facts are in this case from the evidence you have seen or heard during the trial, including any exhibits that I admit into evidence. You may not consider as evidence anything that you saw or heard when court was not in session, even something done or said by one of the parties, attorneys, or witnesses.

What the attorneys say during the trial is not evidence. In their opening statements and closing arguments, the attorneys talk to you about the law and the evidence. What the lawyers say may help you understand the law and the evidence, but their statements and arguments are not evidence.

The attorneys' questions are not evidence. Only the witnesses' answers are evidence. You should not think that something is true just because an attorney's question suggested that it was true.

However, the attorneys for both sides have agreed that certain facts are true. This agreement is called a stipulation. No other proof is needed and you must accept those facts as true in this trial.

Each side had the right to object to evidence offered by the other side. If I sustained an objection to a question, you must ignore the question. If the witness did not answer, you must not guess what he or she might have said or why I sustained the objection. If the witness already answered, you must ignore the answer.

During the trial I granted a motion to strike testimony that you heard. You must totally disregard that testimony. You must treat it as though it did not exist.

A witness is a person who has knowledge related to this case. You will have to decide whether you believe each witness and how important each witness's testimony is to the case. You may believe all, part, or none of a witness's testimony. In deciding whether to believe a witness's testimony, you may consider, among other factors, the following:

(a) How well did the witness see, hear, or otherwise sense what he or she described in court?

(b) How well did the witness remember and describe what happened?

(c) How did the witness look, act, and speak while testifying?

(d) Did the witness have any reason to say something that was not true? Did the witness show any bias or prejudice? Did the witness have a personal relationship with any of the parties involved in the case? Does the witness have a personal stake in how this case is decided?

(e) What was the witness's attitude toward this case or about giving testimony?

Sometimes a witness may say something that is not consistent with something else he or she said. Sometimes different witnesses will give different versions of what happened. People often forget things or make mistakes in what they remember. Also, two people may see the same event but remember it differently. You may consider these differences, but do not decide that testimony is untrue just because it differs from other testimony.

However, if you decide that a witness deliberately testified untruthfully about something important, you may choose not to believe anything that witness said. On the other hand, if you think the witness testified untruthfully about some things but told the truth about others, you may accept the part you think is true and ignore the rest.

Do not make any decision simply because there were more witnesses on one side than on the other. If you believe it is true, the testimony of a single witness is enough to prove a fact. You must not be biased in favor of or against any witness because of his or her disability, gender, race, religion, ethnicity, sexual orientation, age, national origin, or socioeconomic status.

When you go to the jury room, the first thing you should do is choose a presiding juror. The presiding juror should see to it that your discussions are orderly and that everyone has a fair chance to be heard.

It is your duty to talk with one another in the jury room and to consider the views of all the jurors. Each of you must decide the case for yourself, but only after you have considered the evidence with the other members of the jury. Feel free to change your mind if you are convinced that your position should be different. You should all try to agree. But do not give up your honest beliefs just because the others think differently.

Please do not state your opinions too strongly at the beginning of your deliberations or immediately announce how you plan to vote as it may interfere with an open discussion. Keep an open mind so that you and your fellow jurors can easily share ideas about the case.

You should use your common sense, but do not use or consider any special training or unique personal experience that any of you have in matters involved in this case. Your training or experience is not a part of the evidence received in this case.

Sometimes jurors disagree or have questions about the evidence or about what the witnesses said in their testimony. If that happens, you may ask to have testimony read back to you or ask to see any exhibits admitted into evidence that have not already been provided to you. Also, jurors may need further explanation about the laws that apply to the case. If this happens during your discussions, write down your questions and give them to the [clerk/bailiff/court attendant]. I will talk with the attorneys before I answer so it may take some time. You should continue your deliberations while you wait for my answer. I will do my best to answer them. When you write me a note, do not tell me how you voted on an issue until I ask for this information in open court.

At least nine jurors must agree on a verdict. When you have finished filling out the form, your presiding juror must write the date and sign it at the bottom and then notify the [bailiff/clerk/court attendant] that you are ready to present your verdict in the courtroom.

Your decision must be based on your personal evaluation of the evidence presented in the case. Each of you may be asked in open court how you voted on each question.

While I know you would not do this, I am required to advise you that you must not base your decision on chance, such as a flip of a coin. If you decide to award damages, you may not agree in advance to simply add up the amounts each juror thinks is right and then make the average your verdict.

You may take breaks, but do not discuss this case with anyone, including each other, until all of you are back in the jury room.

MOTION IN LIMINE No. 1

DEFENDANT WATCHTOWER AND NORTH FREMONT CONGREGATION'S MOTION IN LIMINE TO EXCLUDE EVIDENCE RELATING TO JONATHAN KENDRICK AND MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES IN SUPPORT

DATE	May 18, 2012
TIME	8:30 A.M.
JUDGE	Robert McGuiness
DEPT.	22

TRIAL DATE: May 21, 2012

TO PLAINTIFF JANE DOE and HER ATTORNEYS OF RECORD:

Defendant Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc. (hereinafter "Watchtower") and Defendant North Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses, Fremont, California (hereinafter "North Fremont Congregation") (collectively referred to as the "Church Defendants") move this Court in limine for an order excluding any and all evidence, references to evidence, testimony or argument relating to 1) Defendant Jonathan Kendrick's (hereinafter "Kendrick") activities after 1997, when the alleged abuse of Plaintiff by Kendrick ended; 2) Kendrick's criminal conviction for child abuse in or about 2004; and 3) any incident involving the Plaintiff and Kendrick on property other than that owned by the Church Defendants, or alternatively, an order instructing the jury that any such evidence in this number 3 is to be considered only against defendant Kendrick.

This motion is based upon the ground that the evidence is irrelevant, creates a substantial danger of undue prejudice, of confusing the issues, or of misleading the jury because the evidence is substantially more prejudicial than probative of any fact at issue, will necessitate undue consumption of time, and there is a substantial danger that the evidence will unfairly inflame the passions or emotions of the jurors. The Church Defendants further move this court to instruct Plaintiff and her counsel, and all witnesses called or examined by Plaintiff, as set forth below.

1. That Plaintiff be instructed not to introduce evidence on, make reference to, introduce testimony on, comment upon or make any argument relating to Kendrick's activities after 1997, when the alleged abuse of Plaintiff by Kendrick ended, as such evidence is irrelevant, creates a substantial danger of undue prejudice, of confusing the issues, or of misleading the jury because the evidence is substantially more prejudicial than probative, will necessitate undue consumption of time, and there is a substantial danger that the evidence will unfairly inflame the passions or emotions of the jurors. The introduction of such evidence or testimony or the attempt to introduce such evidence or testimony will be highly improper and unfairly and unduly prejudicial to the Church Defendants and in violation of the law. The Church Defendants request that the court order Plaintiff, her counsel, and any and all witnesses called by them, to abstain from any reference to, comment on, or attempt to introduce any of the evidence, either by way of documents or testimony, which the Church Defendants are requesting the court to preclude from being introduced at trial.

2. That Plaintiff be instructed not to introduce evidence on, make reference to, introduce testimony on, comment upon or make any argument relating to Kendrick's criminal conviction for child abuse in or about 2004, as such evidence is irrelevant, creates a substantial danger of undue prejudice, of confusing the issues, or of misleading the jury because the evidence is substantially more prejudicial than probative, will necessitate undue consumption of time, and there is a substantial danger that the evidence will unfairly inflame the passions or emotions of the jurors. The introduction of such evidence or testimony or the attempt to introduce such evidence or testimony will be highly improper and unfairly and unduly prejudicial to the Church Defendants and in violation of the law. The Church Defendants request that the court order Plaintiff, her counsel, and any witnesses called by them, to abstain from any reference to, comment on, or attempt to introduce any of the evidence, either by way of documents or testimony, which the Church Defendants are requesting the court to preclude from being introduced at trial.

3. That Plaintiff be instructed not to introduce evidence on, make reference to, introduce testimony on, comment upon or make any argument relating to any incident involving the Plaintiff and Kendrick on property other than that owned by the Church Defendants, as such evidence is irrelevant, creates a substantial danger of undue prejudice, of confusing the issues, or of misleading the jury because the evidence is substantially more prejudicial than probative, will necessitate undue consumption of time, is substantially more prejudicial than probative, and that there is a substantial danger that the evidence will unfairly inflame the passions or emotions of the jurors. The introduction of such evidence or testimony or the attempt to introduce such evidence or testimony will be highly improper and unfairly and unduly prejudicial to the Church Defendants and in violation of the law. The Church Defendants request that the court order Plaintiff, her counsel, and any witnesses called by them, to abstain from any reference to, comment on, or attempt to introduce any of the evidence, either by way of documents or testimony, which the Church Defendants are requesting the court to preclude from being introduced at trial. Alternatively, the Church Defendants request that the Court instruct the jury that any such evidence in this number 3 is to be considered only against Kendrick.

This motion is based upon the following Memorandum of Points and Authorities, the papers and pleadings on file, and any oral argument permitted by the Court.

STATEMENT OF FACTS

The Church Defendants anticipate that Plaintiff intends to introduce evidence consisting of testimony relating to: 1) Kendrick's activities after 1997, when the alleged abuse of Plaintiff by Kendrick ended; 2) Kendrick's criminal conviction for child abuse in or about 2004; and 3) incidents involving the Plaintiff and Kendrick on property other than that owned by the Church Defendants. Defendants believe that the statements will include a description of certain purported, improper contact allegedly committed on her by defendant Kendrick.

PROCEDURAL BACKGROUND

Plaintiff's First Amended Complaint for Damages for Childhood Sexual Abuse (hereinafter "Amended Complaint") contains causes of action against the Church Defendants (one cause of action against both Watchtower and the North Fremont Congregation and one against Watchtower only).[1] (Amended Complaint at ¶¶ 2, 4.)

Plaintiff, who was never baptized in the Jehovah's Witness faith, contends that she was molested by a "fellow member, volunteer, and leader of the religious facility and congregation in Fremont." (Amended Complaint at ¶ 6.) She testified in deposition that the abuse, which began when she was about 9 years old, first occurred "in the main auditorium" inside a house of worship used by Jehovah's Witnesses. (Ex. A, Plaintiff Deposition, pp. 25:18-26:6.)

Plaintiff seeks damages against the Church Defendants on the theory that the Church Defendants were negligent because they (1) failed to warn or protect Plaintiff from criminal acts allegedly committed by Kendrick, and (2) failed to reasonably supervise, manage, and control Kendrick "in his membership and participation in the Fremont religious facility." (Amended Complaint at ¶ 7.)

The Church Defendants ask the court to rule on this evidentiary issue to assist the parties in trial preparation, to avoid unfair and undue prejudice that would result if irrelevant and prejudicial information were presented at trial, and to promote judicial economy. California Rules of Court, Rule 3.1112 (f) permits the filing of motions in limine to obtain pretrial rulings on the admissibility of evidence. Rule 3.1112 leaves the timing of motion practice to the discretion of the trial judge. Alameda County Superior Court Local Rule 3.35(e) requires the parties to personally serve and file all motions in limine one court day before the pretrial conference. Therefore, the Church Defendants' motions in limine are timely.

[1] Plaintiff actually originally sued two corporations, Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc., and Watch Tower Bible and Tract Society of Pennsylvania, as well as three other entities described as the Governing Body of Jehovah's Witnesses, Jehovah's Witnesses on Peralta Blvd., Fremont, and Kingdom Hall of Jehovah's Witnesses.

MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES

ARGUMENT I.

Evidence of Kendrick's Activities after 1997 is Irrelevant and Substantially and Unfairly Prejudicial Pursuant to the Evidence Code

A party may attempt to preclude or limit the introduction of evidence by presenting a motion in limine to the trial court in chambers. (Evidence Code sections 350, 352; Helfend v. Southern California Rapid Transit Dist. (1970) 2 Cal.3d 1.) The purpose of a motion in limine is "to avoid the obviously futile attempt to 'unring the bell' in the event a motion to strike is granted in the proceedings before the jury." (Hyatt v. Sierra Boat Co. (1978) 79 Cal.App.3d 325, 337.) The court is entitled to hear and determine the question of the admissibility of evidence outside of the presence and hearing of the jury. (Evidence Code section 402.)

Evidence Code section 350 states that "(n)o evidence is admissible except relevant evidence." Evidence Code section 210 defines relevant evidence as "evidence, including evidence relevant to the credibility of a witness or hearsay declarant, having any tendency in reason to prove or disprove any disputed fact that is of consequence to the determination of the action." The Comment provides that relevant evidence "includes not only evidence of the ultimate facts actually in dispute but also evidence of other facts from which such ultimate facts may be presumed or inferred." To be relevant, therefore, evidence must have some probative value it must have a tendency in reason to prove or disprove a fact, and the fact proved or disproved must be in dispute and of consequence to the determination of the action. (See, People v. Kelly (1992) 1 Cal.4th 495, 523 (only relevant evidence is admissible); People v. Haston (1968) 69 Cal.2d 233, 245 (in every case the possibility of severing relevant from irrelevant portions of evidence should be considered to protect against undue prejudice).) It involves a determination of whether the evidence "logically, naturally and by reasonable inference tends to establish some [disputed] fact." (People v. Simms (1970) 10 Cal.App.3d 299.) An inference may not be drawn from facts that are too remote in time or too speculative. (Id. at p. 311.)

Moreover, Evidence Code section 352, provides: "The court in its discretion may exclude evidence if its probative value is substantially outweighed by the probability that its admission will (a) necessitate undue consumption of time or (b) create substantial danger of undue prejudice, of confusing the issues, or of misleading the jury."

Prejudicial evidence "uniquely tends to evoke an emotional bias against . . . [one party] as an individual and . . . has very little effect on the issues." (See, People v. Harlan (1990) 222 Cal.App.3d 439, 445, quoting People v. Wright (1985) 39 Cal. 3d 576, 585.) The court must strike a balance between the probative value of the evidence and the danger of prejudice. To strike that balance, the court considers "[1] the relationship between the evidence and the relevant inferences to be drawn from it, [2] whether the evidence is relevant to the main or only a collateral issue, and [3] the necessity of the evidence to the proponent's case as well as the reasons recited in section 352 for exclusion." (Id. at p. 445.)

During discovery, Plaintiff disclosed that Kendrick had abused her on a regular basis between the years 1994 (when she was nine years old) and 1997 (when she was eleven and one-half years of age). (Ex. A, Plaintiff Deposition, pp. 27:2-28:5, 30:12-20.) Plaintiff testified that the abuse stopped when Kendrick moved away, which occurred around the time of her parents' divorce in 1997. (Id. at 30:12-20.) Therefore, the relevant time period for this action is limited to 1997 at the very latest. There are no disputed issues of fact "of consequence to the determination of the action" connected with events that happened after 1997. (Evidence Code section 350.) Nothing that occurred after 1997 would support Plaintiff's claims that the Church Defendants had a legal duty or failed—between 1994 and 1997—to warn Plaintiff, to protect Plaintiff and/or to supervise Kendrick.

The admission of this evidence is curtailed by Evidence Code section 1100(a) which limits the use of any inferences that might be drawn from Kendrick's conduct after 1997. The evidence would have extremely limited, if any, probative value to establish Kendrick's character. Evidence Code section 1101(a) provides that character evidence is "inadmissible when offered to prove his or her conduct on a specified occasion" (emphasis added). (People v. Hovarter (2008) 44 Cal.4th 983, 1002.) The California Legislature and the courts reason that character evidence is of slight probative value and may be unfairly prejudicial. The evidence "tends to distract the trier of fact from the main question of what actually happened on the particular occasion and simply permits the [fact finder] to reward the good . . . and to punish the bad . . . because of their respective characters." The courts are cautious on the admission of character evidence because it "may result in confusion of issues and require extended collateral inquiry." (Bowen v. Ryan (2008) 163 Cal.App.4th 916, 923.)

Kendrick's post-1997 conduct has no bearing whatsoever on the issue whether the Church Defendants had notice that Kendrick posed a threat to Plaintiff. In Doe v. City of Los Angeles (2007) 42 Cal.4th 531, the California Supreme Court explained the notice requirement. First, the entity being sued for acts of molestation by its agent or employee must have had knowledge or notice of the perpetrator's unlawful sexual conduct. Second, the term "knew" means actual knowledge and the term "reason to know" refers to a type of constructive knowledge. Third, this does not mean "inquiry notice," i.e., notice of facts that would put the entity on notice of a duty to inquire and thereby learn that molestation had occurred. Fourth, reason to know means that the entity defendant has acquired actual knowledge of facts from which a reasonable person of ordinary intelligence, or one of the superior intelligence of the actor, would either infer, or consider highly probable, that the agent had previously committed an act of unlawful sexual conduct with the minor. (Id. at pp. 545-549.)

Similarly, in Santillan v. Roman Catholic Bishop of Fresno (2012) 202 Cal.App.4th 708, victims of molestation offered evidence of events that occurred after the abuse stopped to infer that someone might have put church defendants in that case on notice of the conduct of the perpetrator. The appellate court upheld the trial court's exclusion of that evidence, explaining that "knowledge of facts concerning an agent's unlawful sexual conduct after he has stopped abusing a plaintiff does not amount to notice under section 340.1." (Id. at p. 733.) The same is true here where Plaintiff must demonstrate that the Church Defendants owed and breached a duty to warn or protect her from Kendrick. Plaintiff cannot infer from events that occurred after 1997 that the Church Defendant's knew or had reason to know of Kendrick's misconduct prior to 1994-1997.

In any event, the facts themselves support the reason why the evidence is inadmissible. Soon after learning of the allegation that Kendrick had engaged in improper behavior in 1993, the elders of the North Fremont Congregation determined that his conduct was unclean and Kendrick was no longer allowed to serve as a "ministerial servant." His removal as a ministerial servant was announced to the entire congregation, which announcement alerts the congregation to a possible problem. Kendrick never served again in any position of responsibility in any congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses after that announcement.

Therefore, such evidence of specific events that happened after 1997 is nothing more than inadmissible character evidence that should be excluded from trial. It would be extremely and unfairly prejudicial to the Church Defendants to permit the jury to hear such evidence. No clarifying or limiting instruction to the jury would suffice so as to protect the Church Defendants from the resulting prejudicial effect of the evidence itself.

ARGUMENT II.

The Court Should Bar Evidence that Kendrick was Convicted of Child Abuse in or about 2004 because that Evidence is Irrelevant and Substantially Prejudicial, and it is Inadmissible Character Evidence.

Plaintiff testified in deposition that she consulted an online database at www.familywatchdog.com after her father had asked her whether she had been molested by Kendrick. (Ex. A, Plaintiff Deposition, pp. 49:10-50:3.) As a result of her investigation, Plaintiff learned that Kendrick had a felony conviction in 2004. Evidence of Kendrick's subsequent bad acts, including the conviction in or about 2004, should be precluded from trial.

The admission of this evidence is curtailed by Evidence Code section 1107(a) which limits the admission of character evidence. Plaintiff will likely argue Evidence Code section 1101(b) applies. Section 1101(b) states that nothing in section 1101 "prohibits the admission of evidence that a person committed a crime, civil wrong, or other act when relevant to prove some fact" (emphasis added). In this case, the admission of such subsequent character evidence completely unrelated to Kendrick's conduct with Plaintiff , including his 2004 conviction, has no probative value whatsoever and is not at all relevant to prove any fact at issue in this lawsuit.

The events leading up to the 2004 conviction occurred more than five years after the events of which Plaintiff complains, and that evidence is completely irrelevant to establish motive, opportunity, intent, preparation, plan, knowledge, identity, absence of mistake, or accident. Moreover, evidence of conduct that falls within the definition of lewd and lascivious acts prohibited by Penal Code section 288 is particularly volatile because it is "highly inflammatory." Thus, there is a heightened danger of undue prejudice where there is evidence of sex acts involving children. (See, Williams v. Superior Court (1984) 36 Cal. 3d 441.) Evidence of the 2004 conviction has no probative value in this case. It has no tendency to prove or disprove any fact of consequence to the determination of this action. The 2004 conviction has no bearing on any genuine issue in this case, nor does any substantial legal issue in this case require evidence of the 2004 conviction. Therefore, evidence of Kendrick's 2004 conviction should be excluded, including for impeachment purposes. It would be extremely and unfairly prejudicial to the Church Defendants to permit the jury to hear such evidence, and it also would confuse the issues and mislead the jury.

In addition, the 2004 conviction is not relevant and cannot be used to "prove some fact" in this lawsuit where the facts related to the conviction are completely dissimilar to the facts Plaintiff alleges regarding her alleged abuse by Kendrick. Evidence of prior misconduct is admissible to show a common design or plan only where, among other things, the prior conduct is similar to the claims at issue. (People v. Ewoldt (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 380, 397.) In Ewoldt, the California Supreme Court admitted evidence of other misconduct only because it was almost identical to the conduct at issue in that case. Specifically, the evidence showed that on three occasions, the defendant molested his stepdaughter at night while she was asleep in her bed. When discovered, the defendant claimed he was only straightening up the covers. Evidence of other misconduct was admissible because it too was against a stepdaughter that the defendant had molested in an almost identical manner and, when discovered, the defendant had offered a similar excuse. (Id. at 403.)

Here, Plaintiff's allegations and the facts leading to Kendrick's 2004 conviction are completely different. Plaintiff, who has no relation to Kendrick, testified that the abuse took place at a variety of locations, including in a house of worship, in her father's garage, on an Amtrak train, and in Kendrick's home. (Ex. A, Plaintiff Deposition, pp. 30:21-24, 40:12-23.) Plaintiff also testified that the abuse occurred on a monthly basis from 1994 to 1997. (Id. at 45:14-20.) In contrast, the 2004 conviction involved Kendrick's step-granddaughter and involved a one-time incident only. These events are so dissimilar that it would unfairly prejudice the Church Defendants to permit the jury to hear evidence concerning the 2004 conviction, as well as confuse the issues and mislead the jury.

ARGUMENT III.

Evidence of Jonathan Kendrick's 2004 Conviction is Not Admissible Impeachment Evidence because that Evidence is Unfairly Prejudicial to the Church Defendants; if Admitted, However, the Court Must Exclude the Details of the 2004 Conviction.

Evidence Code section 788 allows a party to submit evidence of a prior felony conviction to impeach a witness. However, this evidence is still subject to the constraints of Evidence Code section 352, which gives the court discretion to exclude such evidence if the probative value is outweighed by the risk of unfair prejudice. (See Clemmer v. Hartford Ins. Co. (1978) 22 Cal.3d 865, 879 (exclusion of criminal conviction for murder proper where court found danger of undue prejudice, misleading the jury, and confusing the issues); People v. Kent (1981) 125 Cal.App.3d 207, 215 (trial court erred in allowing evidence of prior felony conviction where cross-examiner's only and "obvious purpose" was to put before the jury highly prejudicial evidence).)

As explained in Argument II above, the 2004 conviction and the events leading up to the conviction occurred more than five years after the alleged events of which Plaintiff complains, and are completely irrelevant to establish any fact at issue in this case. The evidence is particularly volatile and highly prejudicial because it involves a sex act with a child. (See Williams, supra, 36 Cal. 3d 441.) The 2004 conviction has absolutely no probative value in this case. Therefore, Plaintiff should not be permitted to impeach Kendrick with his 2004 conviction. It would be extremely and unfairly prejudicial to the Church Defendants to permit the jury to hear such evidence, as well as confuse the issues and mislead the jury.

Should the Court be inclined, however, to admit the evidence of the 2004 conviction if Kendrick testifies, then the Church Defendants request: 1) the evidence be admitted for the limited purpose of the fact of the felony conviction, but without any evidence on the nature of the conviction, i.e., that the conviction involved child abuse, because the mention of the nature of the conviction would be severely and unfairly prejudicial to the Church Defendants, confuse the issues for the jury and mislead the jury; and 2) that a limiting instruction be issued to the jury directing them that they are permitted to consider the evidence as impeachment evidence against Kendrick only for purposes of his credibility as a witness.

ARGUMENT IV.

The Court Must Bar Evidence Involving Plaintiff and Kendrick that Occurred on Property Not Owned or Controlled by the Church Defendants Because that Evidence is Irrelevant and Extremely and Unfairly Prejudicial

Plaintiff testified that there were no occasions of abuse in places other than the house of worship, in her father's garage, on an Amtrak train, and in Kendrick's home. (Ex. A, Plaintiff Deposition, pp. 30:21-24, 40:12-23.) The Church Defendants cannot be held civilly liable for Kendrick's alleged criminal acts that were committed away from the property of the Church Defendants.

The Court of Appeal opinion in Eric J. v. Betty M. (1999) 76 Cal.App.4th 715, 727, provided an overview of the law of premises liability in the context of a convicted child molester allegedly molesting a child on property owned by the defendants. There, the appellate court affirmed a grant of nonsuit for the defendants because "there was no relationship between the harm and any premises owned by family members on which the harm occurred." (Id. at p. 717.) The court explained that, in the context of business or public property, "liability has been allowed only when there is something foreseeably dangerous about the nature of the activity conducted on the property or the property itself which fixes on the landowner the duty to take some sort of precaution or the owner has in some way undertaken, as part of the organized activity on the land, care for the safety of the plaintiff as against criminal acts of third parties." (Id. at p. 721.)

Here, Plaintiff testified in deposition that she never went to the house of worship by herself; she always went with one or both of her parents and she sat with them. (Ex. A, Plaintiff Deposition, pp. 31:17-32:7.) Plaintiff contends that the abuse occurred "in the main auditorium" of the house of worship where many people were present. (Id. at 25:18-26:6.) Plaintiff described what happened: Kendrick grabbed her "like a bear hug" and made her "sit on his lap" before and after the meetings. (Id. at 26:7-27:1.) He 'grabbed' her around the 'top section breast arms shoulders.' (Id. at 33:23-34:14.) Despite Plaintiff's contentions, her parents deny seeing any inappropriate contact between Kendrick and Plaintiff in the house of worship. (Ex. B, Kathleen Conti Deposition, p. 47:10-22.)

Eventually, according to Plaintiff, Kendrick started taking her away from the house of worship and to his residence following the Sunday meeting program. (Ex. A, Plaintiff Deposition, p. 28:6-22.) Kendrick returned Plaintiff to her parents' care. (Id. at 44:19-45:5.) Inside Kendrick's residence, Plaintiff contends she was subjected to repeated acts of child abuse. (Id. at 43:23-45:5.) None of the Church Defendants had any control over the person into whose custody the Plaintiff's parents entrusted their daughter's care. Nor did either of the Church Defendants have any interest in or control over Kendrick's personal residence. It is the parents, not the Church Defendants who have the responsibility to adequately supervise and protect their child from the conduct of the custodian with whom the child has been left. (Welfare and Institutions Code section 300; Williams v. Garcetti (1993) 5 Cal.4th 561, 570.)

Therefore, in her case against the Church Defendants, Plaintiff should be precluded from offering evidence of acts that occurred in any place other than the "main auditorium" of the house of worship. If any such evidence is admitted in connection with Plaintiff's case against Kendrick, the court should instruct the jury to disregard the evidence as it pertains to the Church Defendants.

CONCLUSION

For each of the independent reasons stated above, the Church Defendants respectfully request the Court to enter a pretrial ruling proscribing any person from mentioning Kendrick's actions after 1997, Kendrick's conviction in or about 2004, and events that occurred anywhere other than the "main auditorium" of the house of worship.

Case No.: HG11558324

MOTION IN LIMINE No. 10

DEFENDANT WATCHTOWER AND NORTH FREMONT CONGREGATION'S MOTION IN LIMINE TO EXCLUDE EVIDENCE OF OTHER LAWSUITS AGAINST OR SETTLEMENTS WITH CHURCH DEFENDANTS

DATE	May 18, 2012
TIME	8:30 A.M.
JUDGE	Robert McGuiness
DEPT.	22

TRIAL DATE: May 21, 2012

TO PLAINTIFF JANE DOE and HER ATTORNEYS OF RECORD:

Defendant Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc. (hereinafter "Watchtower") and Defendant North Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses, Fremont, California

(hereinafter "North Fremont Congregation") (collectively referred to as the "Church Defendants") move this Court in limine for an order excluding any and all evidence, references to evidence, testimony or argument relating to other lawsuits or claims against and/or settlements with the Church Defendants.

This motion is based upon the ground that the evidence is irrelevant, creates a substantial danger of undue prejudice, of confusing the issues, or of misleading the jury because the evidence is substantially more prejudicial than probative of any fact at issue, will necessitate undue consumption of time, and there is a substantial danger that the evidence will unfairly inflame the passions or emotions of the jurors.

STATEMENT OF FACTS

The Church Defendants anticipate that Plaintiff Jane Doe ("Plaintiff") may attempt to introduce evidence of other lawsuits or claims of alleged child abuse against and/or settlements with one or both of the Church Defendants. As a worldwide organization, Watchtower has, of course, been the subject of other lawsuits and has elected to settle many of those without any admission of liability or wrongdoing.

ARGUMENT I.

Evidence of Any Other Lawsuits or Claims Against and/or Settlements with the Church Defendants Must Be Excluded Because the Evidence is Irrelevant and Unfairly Prejudicial Pursuant to the Evidence Code

Evidence Code section 350 states that "(n)o evidence is admissible except relevant evidence." Evidence Code section 210 defines relevant evidence as "evidence, including evidence relevant to the credibility of a witness or hearsay declarant, having any tendency in reason to prove or disprove any disputed fact that is of consequence to the determination of the action." The Comment provides that relevant evidence "includes not only evidence of the ultimate facts actually in dispute but also evidence of other facts from which such ultimate facts may be presumed or inferred." To be relevant, therefore, evidence must have some probative value—it must have a tendency in reason to prove or disprove a fact, and the fact proved or disproved must be in dispute and of consequence to the determination of the action. (See People v. Kelly (1992) 1 Cal.4th 495, 523 (only relevant evidence is admissible); People v. Haston (1968) 69 Cal.2d 233, 245 (in every case the possibility of severing relevant from irrelevant portions of evidence should be considered to protect against undue prejudice).) It involves a determination of whether the evidence "logically, naturally and by reasonable inference tends to establish some [disputed] fact." (People v. Simms (1970) 10 Cal.App.3d 299, 311.) An inference may not be drawn from facts that are too remote in time or too speculative. (Id. at p. 311.)

Moreover, Evidence Code section 352 provides: "The court in its discretion may exclude evidence if its probative value is substantially outweighed by the probability that its admission will (a) necessitate undue consumption of time or (b) create substantial danger of undue prejudice, of confusing the issues, or of misleading the jury."

Prejudicial evidence "uniquely tends to evoke an emotional bias against . . . [one party] as an individual and . . . has very little effect on the issues." (See People v. Harlan (1990) 222 Cal.App.3d 439, 445, quoting People v. Wright (1985) 39 Cal.3d 576, 585.) The court must strike a balance between the probative value of the evidence and the danger of prejudice. To strike that balance, the court considers "[1] the relationship between the evidence and the relevant inferences to be drawn from it, [2] whether the evidence is relevant to the main or only a collateral issue, and [3] the necessity of the evidence to the proponent's case as well as the reasons recited in section 352 for exclusion." (Id. at p. 445.)

Whether or not any other individuals ever filed claims or reached settlements with one or both of the Church Defendants is wholly irrelevant to Plaintiff's claims. Plaintiff has not produced any evidence that would link these other claims to her own situation or to explain their purported relevance. The probative value of other potential claims and/or settlements is extremely low, and indeed, non-existent, because it does not prove that Plaintiff was the victim of Defendant Jonathan Kendrick's acts or that the Church Defendant's alleged negligence led to any of Plaintiff's purported damages claimed in this case.

Undue prejudice occurs where evidence "is of such nature as to inflame the emotions of the jury, motivating them to use the information . . . to reward or punish one side because of the jurors' emotional reaction." (People v. Doolin (2009) 45 Cal.4th 390, 439.) Evidence or argument relating to other claims and/or settlements would undoubtedly be unduly and unfairly prejudicial to the Church Defendants. Such evidence may inflame the jury, leading them to improperly infer that the Church Defendants were negligent merely because Plaintiff implies, without proof, that others have also filed claims and/or settled with the Church Defendants. Obviously, the fact that a claim may have been asserted does not necessarily establish that the claim is meritorious. However, jurors who are not familiar with the legal process are likely to improperly infer, independent of the actual evidence, that the mere assertion and/or settlement of claims means such claims had some sort of merit and, therefore, that Plaintiff's claim also has merit. This is precisely the type of evidence that section 352 is designed to exclude. (See Pellegrini v. Weiss (2008) 165 Cal.App.4th 515 (motion in limine granted in breach of fiduciary duty action to exclude evidence that brokerage firm previously had been suspended as a corporation because this evidence was irrelevant and prejudicial).) Indeed, if evidence of claims or settlements is admitted, the Court will be faced with multiple "trials within a trial" with respect to each and every purported former claim or settlement that Plaintiff might attempt to bring forward. Such evidence should consequently be excluded.

ARGUMENT II.

Evidence of Any Settlements with the Church Defendants Must Be Excluded Because the Evidence is Inadmissible Under the Evidence Code

Under Evidence Code section 1152, evidence that a person has, in compromise, offered money or any other thing, act, or service to another who has sustained or will sustain or claims that she has or will sustain damage or loss, as well as any conduct or statements made in negotiation thereof, is inadmissible to prove liability for the loss or damage or any part of it. (Evidence Code section 1152(a).) Therefore, evidence relating to settlements between other purported claimants and the Church Defendants is inadmissible.

CONCLUSION

For each of the reasons stated above, the Church Defendants respectfully request the Court to enter an order excluding any and all evidence, references to evidence, testimony, or argument relating to other lawsuits or claims against and/or settlements with the Church Defendants.

MOTION IN LIMINE No. 11

DEFENDANT WATCHTOWER AND NORTH FREMONT CONGREGATION'S MOTION IN LIMINE TO EXCLUDE WITNESSES FROM COURTROOM PRIOR TO TESTIFYING

DATE	May 18, 2012
TIME	8:30 A.M.
JUDGE	Robert McGuiness
DEPT.	22

TRIAL DATE: May 21, 2012

TO PLAINTIFF JANE DOE and HER ATTORNEYS OF RECORD:

Defendant Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc. (hereinafter "Watchtower") and Defendant North Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses, Fremont, California (hereinafter "North Fremont Congregation") (collectively referred to as the "Church Defendants") move this Court in limine for an order restricting witnesses from entering the courtroom until called to testify. This motion is based on the ground that the witnesses will be testifying on similar matters and allowing one to hear the questions and answers of another will undermine the Church Defendant's cross-examination of the witnesses (i.e., allowing a witness to hear the testimony of another witness will unfairly educate the witness on the forthcoming interrogation). The court has discretion to exclude witnesses from the courtroom pursuant to Evidence Code section 777(a).

Based on the foregoing, the Church Defendants respectfully request an order restricting witnesses from entering the courtroom until called to testify.

MOTION IN LIMINE No. 12

DEFENDANT WATCHTOWER AND NORTH FREMONT CONGREGATION'S MOTION IN LIMINE TO EXCLUDE EVIDENCE RELATING TO THE SILENTLAMBS ORGANIZATION

DATE	May 18, 2012
TIME	8:30 A.M.
JUDGE	Robert McGuiness
DEPT.	22

TRIAL DATE: May 21, 2012

TO PLAINTIFF JANE DOE and HER ATTORNEYS OF RECORD:

Defendant Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc. (hereinafter "Watchtower") and Defendant North Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses, Fremont, California (hereinafter "North Fremont Congregation") (collectively referred to as the "Church Defendants") move this Court in limine for an order excluding any and all evidence, references to evidence, testimony or argument relating to the Silentlambs organization and its website located at www.silentlambs.org (hereinafter "Silentlambs").

This motion is based upon the ground that the evidence is irrelevant, creates a substantial danger of undue prejudice, of confusing the issues, or of misleading the jury because the evidence is substantially more prejudicial than probative of any fact at issue, will necessitate undue consumption of time, and there is a substantial danger that the evidence will unfairly inflame the passions or emotions of the jurors.

The Church Defendants anticipate that Plaintiff Jane Doe ("Plaintiff") will attempt to introduce evidence relating to Silentlambs. William Bowen, one of Plaintiff's expert witnesses in this case, is the director of Silentlambs. He uses this organization as a platform to criticize and attack the organization of Jehovah's Witnesses. On his Silentlambs website, Mr. Bowen claims that he has used Silentlambs to assist in "the first series of major civil lawsuits against Watchtower over the mishandling of child abuse" and to expose the leaders of the Jehovah's Witnesses faith "for creating, covering up and defending the abuse policies of the organization including those past and present members of the Governing Body."

According to Mr. Bowen's Silentlambs website, Watchtower must do the following to "rectify what has happened": "(1) Apologize to all who have suffered as silentlambs due to [Watchtower] policy; (2) Open all congregation confidential files and have any record of pedophile behavior reported to the authorities; and (3) Amend [Watchtower] policy so that when any report of molestation is reported to elders it immediately is reported to the police for investigation." Clearly, Mr. Bowen uses the Silentlambs website as a forum to air his personal grievances against his former religious associates. Many of Mr. Bowen's opinions expressed on his website are based on unverified hearsay statements that he has received from other former Jehovah's Witnesses.

Evidence Code section 350 states that "(n)o evidence is admissible except relevant evidence." Evidence Code section 210 defines relevant evidence as "evidence, including evidence relevant to the credibility of a witness or hearsay declarant, having any tendency in reason to prove or disprove any disputed fact that is of consequence to the determination of the action." To be relevant, evidence must have some probative value, it must have a tendency in reason to prove or disprove a fact, and the fact proved or disproved must be in dispute and of consequence to the determination of the action. (See People v. Kelly (1992) 1 Cal.4th 495, 523 (only relevant evidence is admissible); People v. Haston (1968) 69 Cal.2d 233, 245 (in every case the possibility of severing relevant from irrelevant portions of evidence should be considered to protect against undue prejudice).)

Moreover, Evidence Code section 352, provides: "The court in its discretion may exclude evidence if its probative value is substantially outweighed by the probability that its admission will (a) necessitate undue consumption of time or (b) create substantial danger of undue prejudice, of confusing the issues, or of misleading the jury." Prejudicial evidence "uniquely tends to evoke an emotional bias against . . . [one party] as an individual and . . . has very little effect on the issues." (See People v. Harlan (1990) 222 Cal.App.3d 439, 445, quoting People v. Wright (1985) 39 Cal. 3d 576, 585.) For example, there is a heightened danger of undue prejudice where there is evidence of sex acts involving children. (See Williams v. Superior Court (1984) 36 Cal. 3d 441.)

Any evidence, testimony or argument relating to the Silentlambs website is highly prejudicial to the Church Defendants and must be excluded. The website includes, for example, numerous "personal experiences" alleging sexual abuse, molestation and rape by church elders and other Jehovah's Witnesses. Should such evidence be admitted, the Church Defendants will be severely and unfairly prejudiced. They will be forced to defend themselves against numerous unrelated "mini-trials" and face unsubstantiated allegation after unsubstantiated allegation. This will waste trial time, confuse the issues, mislead the jury, and, ultimately prejudice the Church Defendants. There is no probative value in introducing evidence concerning the Silentlambs website as the information contained therein, and especially the "personal experiences" have absolutely nothing to do with the determination of any fact at issue in this case. Further, the contents of the Silentlambs website is comprised of unverified hearsay and, therefore, must be excluded pursuant to Evidence Code section 1200.

For the reasons stated above, the Church Defendants respectfully request the Court to enter an order excluding any and all evidence, references to evidence, testimony or argument relating to Silentlambs.

TRIAL DATE: May 21, 2012

TO PLAINTIFF JANE DOE and HER ATTORNEYS OF RECORD:

Defendant Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc. (hereinafter

"Watchtower") and Defendant North Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses, Fremont, California (hereinafter "North Fremont Congregation") (collectively referred to as the "Church Defendants") move this Court in limine for an order excluding any and all evidence, references to evidence, testimony or argument relating to testimony from Kathleen Conti (who is Plaintiff's mother) of her claim that she was the victim of child abuse by a perpetrator who she claims was a member or an elder of the congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses that she attended as a minor. The Church Defendants do not object to Kathleen Conti testifying that she was a victim of childhood sexual abuse, but she should be precluded from stating that it was one of Jehovah's Witnesses that was the alleged perpetrator.

This motion is based upon the ground that the evidence constitutes hearsay, is irrelevant, creates a substantial danger of undue prejudice, of confusing the issues, or of misleading the jury because the evidence is substantially more prejudicial than probative of any fact at issue, will necessitate undue consumption of time, and there is a substantial danger that the evidence will unfairly inflame the passions or emotions of the jurors. The Church Defendants further move this court to so instruct Plaintiff and her counsel, and all witnesses called or examined by Plaintiff, as set forth below:

1. That Plaintiff and her counsel be instructed not to introduce evidence on, make reference to, introduce testimony on, comment upon or make any argument relating to the religious affiliation of the perpetrator of the alleged sexual abuse of Kathleen Conti as such evidence is irrelevant, substantially more prejudicial than probative, and that there is a substantial danger that the evidence will unfairly inflame the passions or emotions of the jurors. The introduction of such evidence or testimony or the attempt to introduce such evidence or testimony will be highly improper and prejudicial to the Church Defendants and in violation of the law. The Church Defendants request the Court to order Plaintiff, her counsel, and any witnesses called by them, to abstain from any reference, comment, or attempts to introduce any of the evidence, either by way of documents or testimony, which the Church Defendants are requesting the Court to preclude from being introduced at trial.

This motion is based upon the following Memorandum of Points and Authorities, the papers and pleadings on file, and any oral argument permitted by the Court.

STATEMENT OF FACTS

The Church Defendants anticipate that Plaintiff intends to introduce evidence consisting of testimony from Kathleen Conti, who as noted is Plaintiff's mother, that she had been the victim of child molestation at the age of 13 by "an elder" in the faith of Jehovah's Witnesses. During direct examination in her deposition, Kathleen Conti testified that she was "very upset" when she learned of her daughter's experiences. "I couldn't believe it happened to her, and it happened to me also." (Ex. B, Kathleen Conti Deposition, pp. 26:21-27:1.) Kathleen Conti volunteered information in her deposition that she had been the victim of child molestation at the age of 13 at the hands of "an elder." (Id., at 27:2-11.) The term "an elder" is a religious term associated with the Jehovah's Witnesses faith.

The fact that Plaintiff's mother alleges that in the past she had been a victim of childhood sexual abuse may be relevant to Plaintiff's case insofar as Kathleen Conti testified at her deposition that she was hyper-vigilant in protecting her daughter, Plaintiff here, from abuse and would never have allowed Plaintiff to be taken from the Kingdom Hall by individual Defendant Jonathan Kendrick (hereinafter "Kendrick"). However, the religious affiliation of the alleged perpetrator of that abuse of Kathleen Conti is clearly not relevant to any factual or legal issue in Plaintiff's case. The jury could be misled into believing that the Church Defendants should pay damages or be punished for acts involving the Plaintiff's mother instead of focusing attention on the real issue in dispute—the alleged acts involving Plaintiff and Kendrick.

PROCEDURAL BACKGROUND

Plaintiff's First Amended Complaint for Damages for Childhood Sexual Abuse (hereinafter "Amended Complaint") contains causes of action against the Church Defendants (one cause of action against both Watchtower and the North Fremont Congregation and one against Watchtower only).[1] (Amended Complaint at ¶¶ 2, 4.)

[1] Plaintiff actually originally sued two corporations, Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc., and Watch Tower Bible and Tract Society of Pennsylvania, as well as three other entities described as the Governing Body of Jehovah's Witnesses, Jehovah's Witnesses on Peralta Blvd., Fremont, and Kingdom Hall of Jehovah's Witnesses.

Plaintiff, who was never baptized in the Jehovah's Witness faith, contends that she was molested by a "fellow member, volunteer, and leader of the religious facility and congregation in Fremont." (Amended Complaint at ¶ 6.) She testified in deposition that the abuse, which began when she was about 9 years old, first occurred "in the main auditorium" inside a house of worship used by Jehovah's Witnesses. (Ex. A, Plaintiff Deposition, pp. 25:18-26:6.)

Plaintiff seeks damages against the Church Defendants on the theory that the Church Defendants were negligent because they (1) failed to warn or protect Plaintiff from criminal acts allegedly committed by Kendrick, and (2) failed to reasonably supervise, manage, and control Kendrick "in his membership and participation in the Fremont religious facility." (Amended Complaint at ¶ 7.)

The Church Defendants ask the court to rule on this evidentiary issue to assist the parties in trial preparation, to avoid unfair and undue prejudice that would result if irrelevant and prejudicial information were presented at trial, and to promote judicial economy. California Rules of Court, Rule 3.1112 (f) permits the filing of motions in limine to obtain pretrial rulings on the admissibility of evidence. Rule 3.1112 leaves the timing of motion practice to the discretion of the trial judge. Alameda County Superior Court Local Rule 3.35(e) requires the parties to personally serve and file all motions in limine one court day before the pretrial conference. Therefore, the Church Defendants' motions in limine are timely.

MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES

ARGUMENT I.

The Religious Affiliation of the Alleged Perpetrator of Kathleen Conti's Past History of Abuse is Irrelevant Pursuant to the Evidence Code

A party may attempt to preclude or limit the introduction of evidence by presenting a motion in limine to the trial court in chambers. (Evidence Code sections 350, 352; Helfend v. Southern California Rapid Transit Dist. (1970) 2 Cal.3d 1.) The purpose of a motion in limine is "to avoid the obviously futile attempt to 'unring the bell' in the event a motion to strike is granted in the proceedings before the jury." (Hyatt v. Sierra Boat Co. (1978) 79 Cal.App.3d 325, 337.) The court is entitled to hear and determine the question of the admissibility of evidence outside of the presence and hearing of the jury. (Evidence Code section 402.)

Evidence Code section 350 states that "(n)o evidence is admissible except relevant evidence." Evidence Code section 210 defines relevant evidence as "evidence, including evidence relevant to the credibility of a witness or hearsay declarant, having any tendency in reason to prove or disprove any disputed fact that is of consequence to the determination of the action." The Comment provides that relevant evidence "includes not only evidence of the ultimate facts actually in dispute but also evidence of other facts from which such ultimate facts may be presumed or inferred." To be relevant, therefore, evidence must have some probative value—it must have a tendency in reason to prove or disprove a fact, and the fact proved or disproved must be in dispute and of consequence to the determination of the action. (See, People v. Kelly (1992) 1 Cal.4th 495, 523 (only relevant evidence is admissible); People v. Haston (1968) 69 Cal.2d 233, 245 (in every case the possibility of severing relevant from irrelevant portions of evidence should be considered to protect against undue prejudice).) It involves a determination of whether the evidence "logically, naturally and by reasonable inference tends to establish some [disputed] fact." (People v. Simms (1970) 10 Cal.App.3d 299, 311.) An inference may not be drawn from facts that are too remote in time or too speculative. (Id. at p. 311.)

Evidence consisting of testimony from Kathleen Conti that she had been the victim of child molestation at the age of 13 is relevant only insofar as it relates to her heightened awareness and vigilance in protecting Plaintiff from abuse and that she would never have allowed Kendrick to take Plaintiff to his home from the house of worship (Kingdom Hall). However, the religious affiliation of the alleged perpetrator of the abuse of Kathleen Conti has no probative value in this case whatsoever. It has no tendency in reason to prove or disprove any fact of consequence to the determination of this action. Nor does any substantial legal issue in this case require evidence of the religious affiliation of Kathleen Conti's purported abuser. Therefore, Kathleen Conti's testimony and any related evidence that she had been the victim of child molestation by "an elder" or even someone else within the Jehovah's Witnesses faith has no relevance in this action and should be excluded.

ARGUMENT II.

The Religious Affiliation of Kathleen Conti's Alleged Abuser is Substantially More Prejudicial than Probative of Any Fact at Issue

Evidence Code Section 352, provides: "The court in its discretion may exclude evidence if its probative value is substantially outweighed by the probability that its admission will (a) necessitate undue consumption of time or (b) create substantial danger of undue prejudice, of confusing the issues, or of misleading the jury."

Prejudicial evidence "uniquely tends to evoke an emotional bias against . . . [one party] as an individual and . . . has very little effect on the issues." (See, People v. Harlan (1990) 222 Cal.App.3d 439, 445, quoting People v. Wright (1985) 39 Cal. 3d 576, 585.) The Court must strike a balance between the probative value of the evidence and the danger of prejudice. To strike that balance, the court considers "[1] the relationship between the evidence and the relevant inferences to be drawn from it, [2] whether the evidence is relevant to the main or only a collateral issue, and [3] the necessity of the evidence to the proponent's case as well as the reasons recited in section 352 for exclusion." (Id. at p. 445.)

Application of these principles to the anticipated testimony of Kathleen Conti warrants its exclusion. The testimony from Kathleen Conti that it was allegedly one of Jehovah's Witnesses who molested her at the age of 13 has no tendency to prove any fact of consequence in this case. The evidence has no probative value, but instead has the potential of great prejudice to the Church Defendants and could cause some jurors to erroneously conclude that Plaintiff's testimony about her alleged extended abuse is true because her mother claims to have been sexually abused by another member of the same faith. (Pellegrini v. Weiss (2008) 165 Cal.App.4th 515.) Moreover, it can only serve to evoke an emotional bias from jurors against the Church Defendants, motivating the jury to use the information improperly instead of logically evaluating the real issues in this case, and to improperly and unfairly reward Plaintiff or punish the Church Defendants because of the jurors' emotional reaction.

In fact, there is a heightened danger of undue prejudice where evidence pertains to sex acts involving children. (Williams v. Superior Court (1984) 36 Cal.3d 441.) Under these circumstances the court must exercise great caution and exclude the evidence.

CONCLUSION

For the reasons stated above, the Church Defendants respectfully request that Plaintiff and her counsel be instructed not to introduce evidence on, make reference to, introduce testimony on, comment upon, or make any argument relating to testimony from Kathleen Conti of the religious affiliation of the person who allegedly molested her as a child, as such evidence is irrelevant, substantially more prejudicial than probative, and that there is a substantial danger that the evidence will unfairly inflame the passions or emotions of the jurors. This exclusion should also apply to all medical and counseling records introduced in evidence at trial in this action that reference such alleged abuse of Kathleen Conti. The introduction of such evidence or testimony or the attempt to introduce such evidence or testimony will be highly improper and prejudicial to the Church Defendants and in violation of the law. The Church Defendants further request that the Court order Plaintiff, her counsel, and any witnesses called by them, to abstain from any reference, comment, or attempts to introduce any of the evidence, either by way of documents or testimony, which the Church Defendants are requesting the court to preclude from being introduced at trial.

DEPT.	22

TRIAL DATE: May 21, 2012

TO PLAINTIFF JANE DOE and HER ATTORNEYS OF RECORD:

Defendant Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc. (hereinafter "Watchtower") and Defendant North Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses, Fremont, California (hereinafter "North Fremont Congregation") (collectively referred to as the "Church Defendants") move this Court in limine for an order excluding any and all evidence, references to evidence, testimony, or argument relating to testimony from Evelyn Kendrick, or anyone else, relating to hearsay statements of Andrea Kendrick purportedly made on or about November 11, 1993.

This motion is based upon the ground that the evidence constitutes hearsay, creates a substantial danger of undue prejudice, of confusing the issues, or of misleading the jury because the evidence is substantially more prejudicial than probative of any fact at issue, would necessitate undue consumption of time, and there is a substantial danger that the evidence will unfairly inflame the passions or emotions of the jurors. The Church Defendants further move this court to instruct Plaintiff and her counsel, and all witnesses called or examined by Plaintiff, as set forth below:

1. That Plaintiff be instructed not to introduce evidence on, make reference to, introduce testimony on, comment upon, or make any argument relating to testimony from Evelyn Kendrick (individual Defendant Jonathan Kendrick's former wife) relating to statements that Andrea Kendrick (Evelyn Kendrick's daughter and this Defendant Kendrick's then step-daughter) purportedly made on or about November 11, 1993, as such evidence constitutes hearsay. The introduction of such evidence or testimony or the attempt to introduce such evidence or testimony will be highly improper and prejudicial to the Church Defendants and in violation of the law. The Church Defendants request the court to order Plaintiff, her counsel, and any witnesses called by them, to abstain from any reference, comment, or attempt to introduce any of the evidence, either by way of documents or testimony, which the Church Defendants are requesting the Court to preclude from being introduced at trial.

This motion is based upon the following Memorandum of Points and Authorities, the papers and pleadings on file, and any oral argument permitted by the Court.

STATEMENT OF FACTS

The Church Defendants anticipate that Plaintiff intends to introduce evidence consisting of testimony from Evelyn Kendrick relating to statements of Andrea Kendrick purportedly made on or about November 11, 1993, to elders of the North Fremont Congregation. The Church

Defendants believe that the statements will include a description of certain purported, improper sexual contact allegedly committed by defendant Jonathan Kendrick (hereafter "Kendrick") on Andrea when she was 15 years of age. The Church Defendants further anticipate that Plaintiff may alternatively seek admission of the evidence on the basis that the statements are non-hearsay in that the statements are not being introduced for the truth of the allegations, but for some other reason. The Church Defendants contend either manner in which the evidence is offered is a veiled attempt to get the uncorroborated and highly prejudicial hearsay statements allegedly made by Andrea Kendrick into evidence and before the jury.

During his deposition, North Fremont elder Michael Lee Clarke testified that Kendrick admitted coming into a darkened house and touching his 15-year-old step-daughter's breast over her clothes while she was sleeping on the living room couch. (Ex. F, Michael Clarke Deposition, p. 29-30.) This admission-against-interest statement by Kendrick is clear and it is undisputed by the Church Defendants. Therefore, there is no issue of notice in this case to the Church Defendants. In support of Mr. Clarke's testimony is the documentary evidence from both Defendant North Fremont Congregation and the reply back to the congregation by Defendant Watchtower. (Ex. C, North Fremont Congregation letter dated November 15, 1993, at p. 1 ¶2, p. 2 ¶"2.", which states that Kendrick "confessed to touching the breast of his step daughter [Andrea] while she was sleeping" and that the North Fremont Congregation elders had removed Kendrick from his position as a Ministerial Servant in the congregation; Ex. D, Watchtower's response dated December 3, 1993, at p. 1 ¶2, agreeing that it was proper to have removed Kendrick from serving as a Ministerial Servant.)

Evelyn Kendrick set forth in her declaration in support of Plaintiff's motion to amend the complaint a completely different version of what Andrea allegedly told the elders. According to Evelyn Kendrick's hearsay declaration, Andrea told the elders that Kendrick had drugged her with Vicodin, went into her bedroom, and fondled her breasts and genitals under her clothes. (Ex. B, Evelyn Kendrick Declaration at ¶ 3.) The reason Plaintiff wants to have Evelyn Kendrick give this hearsay testimony is to prove the truth of the matters asserted therein and thereby unfairly prejudice the jurors against the Church Defendants, not to prove notice to the Church Defendants, which notice is conceded from Kendrick's admission to the elders on November 11, 1993. Indisputably, the sole purpose of that testimony from Evelyn Kendrick would be to prove the truth of the matters asserted therein.

Interestingly, a report was made several months later that is a combination of alleged facts heard by the elders in the November 11, 1993, meeting with the family and the declaration of Evelyn Kendrick. (Ex. B, Evelyn Kendrick Declaration at ¶ 3.) But even in this report Defendant Kendrick continues to assert Andrea "was wearing a bra and he did not go underneath it. … [T]he incident lasted about five seconds." (Ex. E, Police Report [attached to Sergeant Baldwin Tr., as exhibit 3] at 5:70-73.)

PROCEDURAL BACKGROUND

Plaintiff's First Amended Complaint for Damages for Childhood Sexual Abuse (hereinafter "Amended Complaint") contains causes of action against the Church Defendants (one cause of action against both Watchtower and the North Fremont Congregation and one against Watchtower only).[1] (Amended Complaint at ¶¶ 2, 4.)

Plaintiff, who was never baptized in the Jehovah's Witness faith, contends that she was molested by a "fellow member, volunteer, and leader of the religious facility and congregation in Fremont." (Amended Complaint at ¶ 6.) She testified in deposition that the abuse, which began when she was about 9 years old, first occurred "in the main auditorium" inside a house of worship used by Jehovah's Witnesses. (Ex. A, Plaintiff Depostion, pp. 25:18-26:6.)

Plaintiff seeks damages against the Church Defendants on the theory that the Church Defendants were negligent because they (1) failed to warn or protect Plaintiff from criminal acts allegedly committed by Kendrick, and (2) failed to reasonably supervise, manage, and control Kendrick "in his membership and participation in the Fremont religious facility." (Amended Complaint at ¶ 7.)

The Church Defendants ask the court to rule on this evidentiary issue to assist the parties in trial preparation, to avoid unfair and undue prejudice that would result if irrelevant and prejudicial information were presented at trial, and to promote judicial economy. California Rules of Court, Rule 3.1112 (f) permits the filing of motions in limine to obtain pretrial rulings on the admissibility of evidence. Rule 3.1112 leaves the timing of motion practice to the discretion of the trial judge. Alameda County Superior Court Local Rule 3.35(e) requires the parties to personally serve and file all motions in limine one court day before the pretrial conference. Therefore, the Church Defendants' motions in limine are timely.

[1] Plaintiff actually originally sued two corporations, Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc., and Watch Tower Bible and Tract Society of Pennsylvania, as well as three other entities described as the Governing Body of Jehovah's Witnesses, Jehovah's Witnesses on Peralta Blvd., Fremont, and Kingdom Hall of Jehovah's Witnesses.

MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES

ARGUMENT I.

The Andrea Kendrick Statement is an Inadmissible Hearsay Statement Pursuant to the Evidence Code

The California Evidence Code defines hearsay as "evidence of a statement that was made other than by a witness while testifying at the hearing and that is offered to prove the truth of the matter stated." (Evidence Code section 1200(a)). Stated simply, hearsay is "an out-of-court statement offered to prove the truth of [an] assertion." (Plancarte v. Guardsmark, LLC (2004) 118 Cal.App.4th 640, 647.) Clearly, if Evelyn Kendrick attempts to testify about what Andrea Kendrick told the elders of the North Fremont Congregation on November 11, 1993, her testimony is indisputably hearsay and should be barred from admission.

On the other hand, Plaintiff will likely argue that they are not offering the Evelyn Kendrick statement about what Andrea Kendrick said for the truth of the content of her words, and therefore, her statement is non-hearsay and not in violation of the hearsay rule. An out-of-court statement is not hearsay if offered to show the effect on the hearer rather than to prove the truth of the content of the statement. For example, such evidence may be admissible when it is necessary to prove notice. However, such evidence is admissible only where it is relevant to an issue in the case. (Rufo v. Simpson (2001) 86 Cal.App.4th 573, 591–592.) As indicated both above and below, notice to the Church Defendants is not a disputed issue in this case, so the Evelyn Kendrick hearsay statement should be excluded.

ARGUMENT II.

Evelyn Kendrick's Testimony Would be Hearsay and Would be Inadmissible Pursuant to the Evidence Code

A party may attempt to preclude or limit the introduction of evidence by presenting a motion in limine to the trial court in chambers. (Evidence Code section 350, 352; Helfend v. Southern California Rapid Transit Dist. (1970) 2 Cal.3d 1) The purpose of a motion in limine is "to avoid the obviously futile attempt to 'unring the bell' in the event a motion to strike is granted in the proceedings before the jury." (Hyatt v. Sierra Boat Co. (1978) 79 Cal.App.3d 325, 337.) The court is entitled to hear and determine the question of the admissibility of evidence outside of the presence and hearing of the jury. (Evidence Code section 402.)

Evidence Code section 350 states that "(n)o evidence is admissible except relevant evidence." Evidence Code section 210 defines relevant evidence as "evidence, including evidence relevant to the credibility of a witness or hearsay declarant, having any tendency in reason to prove or disprove any disputed fact that is of consequence to the determination of the action." The Comment provides that relevant evidence "includes not only evidence of the ultimate facts actually in dispute but also evidence of other facts from which such ultimate facts may be presumed or inferred." To be relevant, therefore, evidence must have some probative value—it must have a tendency in reason to prove or disprove a fact, and the fact proved or disproved must be in dispute and of consequence to the determination of the action. (See, People v. Kelly (1992) 1 Cal.4th 495, 523 (only relevant evidence is admissible); People v. Haston (1968) 69 Cal.2d 233, 245 (in every case the possibility of severing relevant from irrelevant portions of evidence should be considered to protect against undue prejudice).) It involves a determination of whether the evidence "logically, naturally and by reasonable inference tends to establish some [disputed] fact." (People v. Simms (1970) 10 Cal.App.3d 299, 311.) An inference may not be drawn from facts that are too remote in time or too speculative. (Id. at p. 311.)

Evidence consisting of hearsay testimony from Evelyn Kendrick relating to alleged statements of Andrea Kendrick purportedly made on or about November 11, 1993, is clearly objectionable on that basis; plus, the hearsay testimony has no probative value. The hearsay testimony has no tendency in reason to prove or disprove any fact of consequence to the determination of this action. The Church Defendants acknowledge that they received notice of Kendrick's conduct on or about November 11, 1993. As a result, there is no genuine issue in this case concerning the date that the Church Defendants received notice of Kendrick's conduct. No substantial legal issue rests upon the issue of notice to the Church Defendants either. In fact, as the evidence will establish, it was upon receipt of this notice that the Church Defendants took immediate steps to remove Kendrick from any position of responsibility in the congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses. Therefore, the Evelyn Kendrick hearsay testimony relating to alleged statements of Andrea Kendrick have no relevance in this action. Moreover, the fact that Plaintiff may argue a non-hearsay use of the testimony does not save it from exclusion. Simply because hearsay is being offered for a purpose other than its truth does not make it admissible. The statement must still be relevant to some issue in the case. (People v. Lucero (1998) 64 Cal.App.4th 1107, 1109–1110.) Evelyn Kendirck's hearsay testimony should be excluded.

ARGUMENT III.

Andrea Kendrick's Hearsay Statement is Substantially and Unfairly Prejudicial

Evidence Code Section 352, provides: "The court in its discretion may exclude evidence if its probative value is substantially outweighed by the probability that its admission will (a) necessitate undue consumption of time or (b) create substantial danger of undue prejudice, of confusing the issues, or of misleading the jury."

Prejudicial evidence "uniquely tends to evoke an emotional bias against . . . [one party] as an individual and . . . has very little effect on the issues." (See, People v. Harlan (1990) 222 Cal.App.3d 439, 445, quoting People v. Wright (1985) 39 Cal. 3d 576, 585.) The court must strike a balance between the probative value of the evidence and the danger of prejudice. To strike that balance, the court considers "[1] the relationship between the evidence and the relevant inferences to be drawn from it, [2] whether the evidence is relevant to the main or only a collateral issue, and [3] the necessity of the evidence to the proponent's case as well as the reasons recited in section 352 for exclusion." (Id. at p. 445.)

Application of these principles to the Evelyn Kendrick hearsay statements offered by Plaintiff warrants their exclusion. Admission of hearsay evidence consisting of testimony from Evelyn Kendrick relating to hearsay statements of Andrea Kendrick purportedly made on November 11, 1993, has no tendency to prove any fact at issue in this case. Moreover, it can only serve to evoke an emotional bias from jurors as against the Church Defendants, motivating the jury to improperly use the information instead of logically evaluating the point upon which it might be relevant (if at all), and to improperly reward Plaintiff or punish the Church Defendants because of the jurors' emotional reaction. Plaintiff should be barred from using this hearsay evidence to inflame the jury against the Church Defendants by claiming the basis for notice to them was more egregious conduct than what was reported by the North Fremont Congregation to Watchtower. The North Fremont Congregation conceded in their correspondence to Watchtower that Kendrick "confessed to child abuse." (Ex. C, North Fremont Congregation letter dated November 15, 1993, at p. 1 ¶ 2.) The specific details of that abuse of Andrea by Kendrick are not relevant to any issue in this action and instead would tend to confuse the issues, mislead the jury, and unfairly and unduly prejudice the jury against the Watchtower Defendants.

CONCLUSION

For the reasons stated above, the Church Defendants respectfully request that Plaintiff be instructed not to introduce evidence on, make reference to, introduce testimony on, comment upon or make any argument relating to hearsay testimony from Evelyn Kendrick relating to hearsay statements of Andrea Kendrick purportedly made on November 11, 1993, because such evidence constitutes double hearsay and is extremely and unfairly prejudicial to the Church Defendants in that there is a substantial danger that the evidence will unfairly inflame the passions or emotions of the jurors. The introduction of such evidence or testimony, or the attempt to introduce such evidence or testimony, will be highly improper and prejudicial to the Church Defendants and in violation of the law. The Church Defendants further request the Court to order Plaintiff, her counsel, and any witnesses called by them, to abstain from any reference, comment, or attempts to introduce any of the evidence, either by way of documents or testimony, which the Church Defendants are requesting the Court to preclude from being introduced at trial.

DEFENDANT WATCHTOWER AND NORTH FREMONT CONGREGATION'S MOTION IN LIMINE TO EXCLUDE EVIDENCE RELATING TO PAUL INMAN AND MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES IN SUPPORT

TIME	8:30 A.M.
JUDGE	Robert McGuiness
DEPT.	22

TRIAL DATE: May 21, 2012

TO PLAINTIFF JANE DOE and HER ATTORNEYS OF RECORD:

Defendant Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc. (hereinafter "Watchtower") and Defendant North Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses, Fremont, California

(hereinafter "North Fremont Congregation") (collectively referred to as the "Church Defendants") move this Court in limine for an order excluding any and all evidence, references to evidence, testimony, or argument relating to testimony from anyone regarding allegations of child abuse committed by Paul Inman and which is not in any way connected to the issues in this case.

This motion is based upon the ground that the evidence constitutes hearsay, is irrelevant, substantially more prejudicial than probative, and that there is a substantial danger that the evidence will unfairly inflame the passions or emotions of the jurors. The Church Defendants further move this court to instruct Plaintiff and her counsel, and all witnesses called or examined by Plaintiff, as set forth below:

1. That Plaintiff and her counsel be instructed not to introduce evidence on, make reference to, introduce testimony on, comment upon, or make any argument relating to testimony from anyone regarding allegations of child abuse committed by Paul Inman, because such evidence is irrelevant, substantially more prejudicial than probative, will confuse the issues, mislead the jury, and there is a substantial danger that the evidence will unfairly inflame the passions or emotions of the jurors. The introduction of such evidence or testimony or the attempt to introduce such evidence or testimony will be highly improper and prejudicial to this moving party and in violation of the law. The Church Defendants request the Court to order Plaintiff, her counsel, and any witnesses called by them, to abstain from any reference, comment, or attempts to introduce any of the evidence, either by way of documents or testimony, which this moving party is requesting the court to preclude from being introduced at trial , as well as to exclude any such references from Plaintiff's medical and counseling records admitted in evidence in this action.

This motion is based upon the following Memorandum of Points and Authorities, the papers and pleadings on file, and any oral argument permitted by the Court.

STATEMENT OF FACTS

The Church Defendants anticipate that Plaintiff intends to introduce evidence consisting of the fact that Plaintiff's stepmother, Carolyn Conti, was once married to Mr. Paul Inman.

During the divorce proceedings from Paul Inman, Carolyn Conti accused Mr. Inman of some sort of sexual abuse of one of their children and that the elders in the North Fremont Congregation did not investigate the allegations. However, at his deposition, Mr. Inman testified that he was not a member of the North Fremont Congregation at the time that Carolyn Conti made her allegations. (Ex. B, Paul Inman Deposition, pp. 8:15-17; 9:25-10:5.) In fact, Mr. Inman testified in his deposition that he was disfellowshipped from the North Fremont Congregation prior to August 2004 and was not a member of another California congregation in the future. (Ex. B, Paul Inman Deposition, pp. 10:9-14, 11:21-24.) His evidence has no more bearing on the issues in this case than that of any other divorcing father in the state of California who may be the object of such allegations during an acrimonious divorce.

PROCEDURAL BACKGROUND

Plaintiff's First Amended Complaint for Damages for Childhood Sexual Abuse (hereinafter "Amended Complaint") contains causes of action against the Church Defendants (one cause of action against both Watchtower and the North Fremont Congregation and one against Watchtower only).[1] (Amended Complaint ¶¶ 2, 4.)

Plaintiff, who was never baptized in the Jehovah's Witnesses faith, contends that she was molested by a "fellow member, volunteer, and leader of the religious facility and congregation in Fremont." (Amended Complaint ¶ 6.) She testified in deposition that the abuse, which began when she was about 9 years old, first occurred "in the main auditorium" inside a house of worship used by Jehovah's Witnesses. (Ex. A, Plaintiff Deposition, pp. 25:18-26:6.)

Plaintiff seeks damages against the Church Defendants on the theory that the Church Defendants were negligent because they (1) failed to warn or protect Plaintiff from criminal acts allegedly committed by Kendrick, and (2) failed to reasonably supervise, manage, and control Kendrick "in his membership and participation in the Fremont religious facility." (Amended Complaint ¶ 7.)

[1] Plaintiff actually originally sued two corporations, Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc., and Watch Tower Bible and Tract Society of Pennsylvania, as well as three other entities described as the Governing Body of Jehovah's Witnesses, Jehovah's Witnesses on Peralta Blvd., Fremont, and Kingdom Hall of Jehovah's Witnesses.

The Church Defendants believe that the Plaintiff may attempt to bolster her claims by a subtle innuendo that the elders were generally negligent and did not investigate these other charges against a former member. The Church Defendants ask the court to rule on this evidentiary issue to assist the parties in trial preparation, to avoid unfair and undue prejudice that would result if irrelevant and prejudicial information were presented at trial, and to promote judicial economy. California Rules of Court, Rule 3.1112 (f) permits the filing of motions in limine to obtain pretrial rulings on the admissibility of evidence. Rule 3.1112 leaves the timing of motion practice to the discretion of the trial judge. Alameda County Superior Court Local Rule 3.35(e) requires the parties to personally serve and file all motions in limine one court day before the pretrial conference. Therefore, the Church Defendants' motions in limine are timely.

MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES

ARGUMENT I.

Evidence Relating to Sexual Misconduct with a Minor by Paul Inman is Irrelevant Pursuant to the Evidence Code

A party may attempt to preclude or limit the introduction of evidence by presenting a motion in limine to the trial court in chambers. (Evidence Code sections 350, 352; Helfend v. Southern California Rapid Transit Dist. (1970) 2 Cal.3d 1.) The purpose of a motion in limine is "to avoid the obviously futile attempt to 'unring the bell' in the event a motion to strike is granted in the proceedings before the jury." (Hyatt v. Sierra Boat Co. (1978) 79 Cal.App.3d 325, 337.) The court is entitled to hear and determine the question of the admissibility of evidence outside of the presence and hearing of the jury. (Evidence Code section 402.)

Evidence Code section 350 states that "(n)o evidence is admissible except relevant evidence." Evidence Code section 210 defines relevant evidence as "evidence, including evidence relevant to the credibility of a witness or hearsay declarant, having any tendency in reason to prove or disprove any disputed fact that is of consequence to the determination of the action." The Comment provides that relevant evidence "includes not only evidence of the ultimate facts actually in dispute but also evidence of other facts from which such ultimate facts may be presumed or inferred." To be relevant, therefore, evidence must have some probative value—it must have a tendency in reason to prove or disprove a fact, and the fact proved or disproved must be in dispute and of consequence to the determination of the action. (See, People v. Kelly (1992) 1 Cal.4th 495, 523 (only relevant evidence is admissible); People v. Haston (1968) 69 Cal.2d 233, 245 (in every case the possibility of severing relevant from irrelevant portions of evidence should be considered to protect against undue prejudice).) It involves a determination of whether the evidence "logically, naturally and by reasonable inference tends to establish some [disputed] fact." (People v. Simms (1970) 10 Cal.App.3d 299, 311.) An inference may not be drawn from facts that are too remote in time or too speculative. (Id at p. 311.)

Evidence consisting of testimony from anyone regarding allegations of child abuse committed by Paul Inman, or evidence of the same from Plaintiff's medical or counseling records, has no probative value in this case. It has no tendency in reason to prove or disprove any fact of consequence to the determination of this action. Nor does any substantial legal issue in this case require evidence of allegations of child abuse committed by Paul Inman. It could be used improperly by the jury to infer that the North Fremont Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses was a spawning ground for pedophiles or, since the elders of the North Fremont Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses did not investigate the allegations against a former member, they are more likely to be somehow negligent in the present case involving Plaintiff.

ARGUMENT II.

Allegations of Child Abuse Committed by Paul Inman are Substantially More Prejudicial than Probative

Evidence Code Section 352, provides: "The court in its discretion may exclude evidence if its probative value is substantially outweighed by the probability that its admission will (a) necessitate undue consumption of time or (b) create substantial danger of undue prejudice, of confusing the issues, or of misleading the jury."

Prejudicial evidence "uniquely tends to evoke an emotional bias against . . . [one party] as an individual and . . . has very little effect on the issues." (See People v. Harlan (1990) 222 Cal.App.3d 439, 445, quoting People v. Wright (1985) 39 Cal. 3d 576, 585.) The Court must strike a balance between the probative value of the evidence and the danger of prejudice. To strike that balance, the court considers "[1] the relationship between the evidence and the relevant inferences to be drawn from it, [2] whether the evidence is relevant to the main or only a collateral issue, and [3] the necessity of the evidence to the proponent's case as well as the reasons recited in section 352 for exclusion." (Id. at p. 445.)

Application of these principles to the anticipated testimony or other evidence that Paul Inman was accused of sexually abusing a child warrants its exclusion. Such evidence has no probative value in this action, and instead has the potential of great and unfair prejudice to the Church Defendants. (Pellegrini v. Weiss (2008) 165 Cal.App.4th 515.) Moreover, it can only serve to evoke an emotional bias from jurors as against the Church Defendants, motivating the jury to improperly use the information and not to logically evaluate the issues in this case, but to reward Plaintiff or punish the Church Defendants because of the jurors' emotional reaction.

In fact, there is a heightened danger of undue prejudice where evidence pertains to sex acts involving children. (Williams v. Superior Court (1984) 36 Cal.3d 441.) Under these circumstances the court must exercise great caution and exclude the evidence.

CONCLUSION

For the reasons stated above, the Church Defendants respectfully request that Plaintiff be instructed not to introduce evidence on, make reference to, introduce testimony on, comment upon, or make any argument relating to allegations of child abuse committed by Paul Inman, as such evidence is irrelevant, substantially more prejudicial than probative, will confuse the issues, mislead the jury, and there is a substantial danger that the evidence will unfairly inflame the passions or emotions of the jurors. The introduction of such evidence or testimony or the attempt to introduce such evidence or testimony will be highly improper and unfairly prejudicial to the Church Defendants and in violation of the law. The Church Defendants further request that the Court order Plaintiff, her counsel, and any witnesses called by them, to abstain from any reference, comment, or attempts to introduce any of the evidence, either by way of documents or testimony, which the Church Defendants are requesting the Court to preclude from being introduced at trial.

MOTION IN LIMINE No. 5

DEFENDANT WATCHTOWER AND NORTH FREMONT CONGREGATION'S MOTION IN LIMINE TO EXCLUDE EVIDENCE RELATING TO THE DISCIPLINING OF MEMBERS OF THE RELIGION AND MEMORADUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES IN SUPPORT

DATE	May 18, 2012

JUDGE	Robert McGuiness
DEPT.	22

TRIAL DATE: May 21, 2012

TO PLAINTIFF JANE DOE and HER ATTORNEYS OF RECORD:

Defendant Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc. (hereinafter "Watchtower") and Defendant North Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses, Fremont, California

(hereinafter "North Fremont Congregation") (collectively referred to as the "Church Defendants") move this Court for a pretrial order proscribing all attorneys, parties, and witnesses from referring to, relying on, or testifying about the following matters: Evidence relating to religious, ecclesiastical discipline within the beliefs of Jehovah's Witnesses, including, but not limited to, evidence relating to the fact of, and/or the act of, disciplining members of the Jehovah's Witnesses faith, including, but not limited to the fact of, and/or the act of, the formation of a judicial committee of elders, and the fact of and the act of disfellowshipping a member of the religion.

This motion is based upon the ground that the evidence is irrelevant, substantially more prejudicial than probative, will confuse the issues, mislead the jury, and there is a substantial danger that the evidence will unfairly inflame the passions or emotions of the jurors and the review of such purely religious internal church matters by a civil court or jury is beyond the subject matter jurisdiction of the civil court. The Church Defendants further move this court to instruct Plaintiff and her counsel, and all witnesses called or examined by Plaintiffs, as set forth below:

That Plaintiff and her counsel be instructed not to introduce evidence on, make reference to, introduce testimony on, comment upon, or make any argument relating to evidence relating to religious, ecclesiastical discipline within the beliefs of Jehovah's Witnesses, including, but not limited to, evidence relating to the fact of, and/or the act of, disciplining a member of the religion, including, but not limited to the fact of, and/or the act of, the formation of a judicial committee of elders, and the fact of, and/or the act of, disfellowshipping members of the religion, as such evidence is irrelevant, is a violation of the First Amendment of the United States Constitution and its California analog, is a violation of the Ecclesiastical Abstention doctrine, is severely and unfairly prejudicial, will confuse the issues and mislead the jury, and there is a substantial danger that the evidence will unfairly inflame the passions or emotions of the jurors. The introduction of such evidence or testimony, or the attempt to introduce such evidence or testimony, will be highly improper and unfairly prejudicial to the Church Defendants and in violation of the law. The Church Defendants request that the Court order

Plaintiff, her counsel, and any witnesses called by them, to abstain from any reference to, comment on, or attempt to introduce any of the evidence that deals with the spiritual counseling and discipline of members the Jehovah's Witness faith.

This motion is based upon the following Memorandum of Points and Authorities, the papers and pleadings on file, and any oral argument permitted by the Court.

STATEMENT OF FACTS

The Church Defendants anticipate that Plaintiff intends to introduce evidence consisting of testimony relating to the fact of and/or the act of disciplining members of the Jehovah's Witnesses faith, including, but not limited to, the fact of and the act of the formation of a judicial committee of elders, and the fact of and the act of giving public reproof, private reproof, and disfellowshipping (excommunicating and thereafter shunning) members of the religion as part of the church's ecclesiastical or religious discipline.

The Church Defendants anticipate that Plaintiff intends to introduce such evidence in order to create the basis for this Court, including the jury, to pass judgment on the religious tenants and beliefs of the Jehovah's Witnesses faith as it relates to the internal church discipline of its members.

PROCEDURAL BACKGROUND

Plaintiff's First Amended Complaint for Damages for Childhood Sexual Abuse (hereinafter "Amended Complaint") contains causes of action against the Church Defendants (one cause of action against both Watchtower and the North Fremont Congregation and one against Watchtower only).[1] (Amended Complaint ¶¶ 2, 4.)

Plaintiff, who was never baptized in the Jehovah's Witness faith, contends that she was molested by a "fellow member, volunteer, and leader of the religious facility and congregation in Fremont." (Amended Complaint ¶ 6.) She testified in deposition that the abuse, which began when she was about 9 years old, first occurred "in the main auditorium" inside a house of worship used by Jehovah's Witnesses. (Ex. A., Plaintiff Deposition, pp. 25:18-26:6.)

[1] Plaintiff actually originally sued two corporations, Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc., and Watch Tower Bible and Tract Society of Pennsylvania, as well as three other entities described as the Governing Body of Jehovah's Witnesses, Jehovah's Witnesses on Peralta Blvd., Fremont, and Kingdom Hall of Jehovah's Witnesses.

Plaintiff seeks damages against the Church Defendants on the theory that the Church Defendants were negligent because they (1) failed to warn or protect Plaintiff from criminal acts allegedly committed by Kendrick, and (2) failed to reasonably supervise, manage, and control Kendrick "in his membership and participation in the Fremont religious facility." (Amended Complaint ¶ 7.)

The Church Defendants ask the court to rule on this evidentiary issue to assist the parties in trial preparation, to avoid unfair and undue prejudice that would result if irrelevant and prejudicial information were presented at trial, and to promote judicial economy. California Rules of Court, Rule 3.1112 (f) permits the filing of motions in limine to obtain pretrial rulings on the admissibility of evidence. Rule 3.1112 leaves the timing of motion practice to the discretion of the trial judge. Alameda County Superior Court Local Rule 3.35(e) requires the parties to personally serve and file all motions in limine one court day before the pretrial conference. Therefore, the Church Defendants' motions in limine are timely.

MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES

ARGUMENT I.

This Court Must Bar Evidence Relating to the Ecclesiastical Discipline of Members of the Religion because it is Irrelevant and Severely Prejudicial

A party may attempt to preclude or limit the introduction of evidence by presenting a motion in limine to the trial court in chambers. (Evidence Code sections 350, 352; Helfend v. Southern California Rapid Transit Dist. (1970) 2 Cal.3d 1.) The purpose of a motion in limine is "to avoid the obviously futile attempt to 'unring the bell' in the event a motion to strike is granted in the proceedings before the jury." (Hyatt v. Sierra Boat Co. (1978) 79 Cal.App.3d 325, 337.) The court is entitled to hear and determine the question of the admissibility of evidence outside of the presence and hearing of the jury. (Evidence Code section 402.)

Evidence Code section 350 states that "(n)o evidence is admissible except relevant evidence." Evidence Code section 210 defines relevant evidence as "evidence, including evidence relevant to the credibility of a witness or hearsay declarant, having any tendency in reason to prove or disprove any disputed fact that is of consequence to the determination of the action." The Comment provides that relevant evidence "includes not only evidence of the ultimate facts actually in dispute but also evidence of other facts from which such ultimate facts may be presumed or inferred." To be relevant, therefore, evidence must have some probative value—it must have a tendency in reason to prove or disprove a fact, and the fact proved or disproved must be in dispute and of consequence to the determination of the action. (See, People v. Kelly (1992) 1 Cal.4th 495, 523 (only relevant evidence is admissible); People v. Haston (1968) 69 Cal.2d 233, 245 (in every case the possibility of severing relevant from irrelevant portions of evidence should be considered to protect against undue prejudice).) It involves a determination of whether the evidence "logically, naturally and by reasonable inference tends to establish some [disputed] fact." (People v. Simms (1970) 10 Cal.App.3d 299, 311.) An inference may not be drawn from facts that are too remote in time or too speculative. (Id. at p. 311.)

Moreover, Evidence Code section 352, provides: "The court in its discretion may exclude evidence if its probative value is substantially outweighed by the probability that its admission will (a) necessitate undue consumption of time or (b) create substantial danger of undue prejudice, of confusing the issues, or of misleading the jury."

Prejudicial evidence "uniquely tends to evoke an emotional bias against . . . [one party] as an individual and . . . has very little effect on the issues." (See, People v. Harlan (1990) 222 Cal.App.3d 439, 445, quoting People v. Wright (1985) 39 Cal. 3d 576, 585.) The court must strike a balance between the probative value of the evidence and the danger of prejudice. To strike that balance, the court considers "[1] the relationship between the evidence and the relevant inferences to be drawn from it, [2] whether the evidence is relevant to the main or only a collateral issue, and [3] the necessity of the evidence to the proponent's case as well as the reasons recited in section 352 for exclusion." (Id. at p. 445.)

A full evaluation of the constitutional prohibition and the prejudicial effect of the admission of any evidence relating to religious, ecclesiastical discipline of members within the beliefs of the Jehovah's Witnesses faith, including, but not limited to, evidence relating to the fact of and/or the act of disciplining members of the religion, including, but not limited to, the fact of and the act of forming a judicial committee of elders, and the fact of and the act of giving public reproof, private reproof, and disfellowshipping members of the religion as part of the church's ecclesiastical or religious discipline, can only lead to the conclusion that such evidence must not reach the jury.

ARGUMENT II.

The First Amendment Bars this Court's Consideration of, Reference to, or Comment on Religious, Ecclesiastical, and Doctrinal Decisions and Beliefs of the Jehovah's Witnesses Faith, Including the Religious Discipline of its Members

The law is well-settled that "civil courts exercise no jurisdiction" over disputes "which concern theological controversy, church discipline, ecclesiastical government, or the conformity of the members of the church to the standard of morals required of them." (Watson v. Jones (1871) 80 U.S. 679, 733.) The United States Supreme Court has recognized that secular tribunals must accept "as final, and as binding on them" the decisions of ecclesiastical institutions on such matters and observed that > it would be of a vain consent ... if any one aggrieved by one of [an ecclesiastical institution's] decisions could appeal to the secular courts and have them reversed. It is of the essence of these religious unions, and of their right to establish tribunals for the decision of questions arising among themselves, that those decisions should be binding in all cases of ecclesiastical cognizance.

(Id. at pp. 727, 729; see also Serbian Eastern Orthodox Diocese v. Milivojevich (1976) 426 U.S. 696, 713; Jones. v. Wolf (1979) 443 U.S. 595, 602-04.)

Plaintiff desires to use the position and authority of this Court to essentially comment on religious belief and religious discipline by introducing evidence relating to religious, ecclesiastical discipline within the beliefs of the Jehovah's Witnesses faith, including, but not limited to, evidence relating to the fact of and/or the act of disciplining members of the religion, including, but not limited to, the fact of and the act of the formation of a judicial committee of elders and the fact of and the act of disfellowshipping members of the religion. By seeking to introduce such evidence, Plaintiff is, in effect, attempting to obtain a civil court's involvement into the religious practices and religious beliefs of the Jehovah's Witnesses faith. Plaintiff seeks to have the jury take the place of the ecclesiastical authority of the church and essentially pass judgment on the religious practice of the Jehovah's Witnesses faith. This is the precise sort of inquiry that is forbidden by the First Amendment. The Watson Court noted:

> That in so far as the fundamental laws of the church confer powers on its tribunals, the civil courts will recognize them, and where civil rights are involved, will give effect to their exercise without inquiring into the motives or grounds of action of the ecclesiastical tribunal; and will enforce with the same respect the action of the inferior tribunal acting within its sphere, as they will that of the supreme court of the church.

(Watson, 80 U.S. at p. 710 (emphasis added).)

As noted above, the Ecclesiastical Abstention doctrine, based on the First Amendment, precludes civil courts from exercising jurisdiction over internal church disciplinary decisions about church membership and decisions of church polity. This constitutional bar precludes Plaintiff from introducing evidence relating to religious, ecclesiastical discipline within the beliefs of the Jehovah's Witnesses faith, including, but not limited to, evidence relating to the fact of and/or the act of disciplining members of the religion, including, but not limited to the fact of and the act of the formation of a judicial committee of elders and the fact of and the act of disfellowshipping members of the religion as part of the church's ecclesiastical or religious discipline.

Courts across this nation have consistently recognized that the First Amendment prohibits an inquiry into the reasons for a church's discipline of its members and for its polity decisions. (See, Abrams v. Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc. (Ill. App. Ct. 1999) 715 N.E.2d 798 (dismissing a claim that a polity decision had the "intent to destroy [plaintiffs] 'good name and reputation in the [religious] community.'"); Higgins v. Maher (1989) 210 Cal.App.3d 1168, 1173, 1176; Hiles v. Episcopal Diocese of Mass. (Mass. 2002) 773 N.E.2d 929, 938; Van Osdol v. Vogt (Colo. 1996) 908 P.2d 1122, 1127-28, 1134; O'Connor v. Diocese of Honolulu (Haw. 1994) 885 P.2d 361, 368, 370, 371; Korean Presbyterian Church of Seattle Normalization Com. v. Lee (Wash. App. 1994) 880 P.2d 565, 569-70; Schoenals v. Mains (Minn. App. 1993) 504 N.W.2d 233, 236; Thomas v. Fuerst (Ill. App. 2004) 803 N.E.2d 619; Anderson v. Watchtower Bible and Tract Soc'y of New York, Inc. (Tenn. App. 2007) No. M2004-01066-COA-R9-CV, 2007 WL 161035.)

The Supreme Court of California has also repeatedly held that ecclesiastical and theological controversies, including "matters of faith, discipline, and the general polity and tenets of the church," are issues beyond the jurisdiction of secular courts. (Horsman v. Allen (1900) 129 Cal. 131, 138-139; see also Comm. of Missions v. Pac. Synod (1909) 157 Cal. 105, 128; Catholic Charities of Sacramento, Inc. v. Superior Court (2004) 32 Cal.4th 527, 541-542; New v. Kroeger (2008) 167 Cal.App.4th 800, 816-817.)

"Within the context of ecclesiastical discipline, churches enjoy an absolute privilege from scrutiny by the secular authority." (Hadnot v. Shaw (Ok. 1992) 826 P.2d 978, 987.)

> Because religious judicature is immune from any civil court inquest, it is also protected from intrusion by discovery. The church's immunity from disclosure rests neither on a statute nor a code of evidence. Rather its shield is of a constitutional dimension. It is founded on the Free Exercise Clause's prohibition against secular re-examination of merits and procedure in ecclesiastical judicature.

(Id. at p. 989.) The United States Supreme Court agrees that it is the "process of inquiry" into the religious reasons for an ecclesiastical decision that "impinge[s] on the rights guaranteed by the Religion Clauses." (National Labor Relations Board v. Catholic Bishop of Chicago (1979) 440 U.S. 490, 502.)

When it comes to ecclesiastical decisions, "the state may no more require a minimum basis in doctrinal reasoning than it may supervise doctrinal content." (Rayburn v. General Conference of Seventh-Day Adventists (4th Cir. 1985) 772 F.2d 1164, 1169; Young v. Northern Illinois Conference of United Methodist Church (7th Cir. 1994) 21 F.3d 184, 186.)

The Fourth Circuit in Rayburn further explained why the reasons for ecclesiastical decisions regarding the selection and deletion of ministers are also not subject to civil court inquiry as follows:

> On a procedural level, entanglement might also result from a protracted legal process pitting church and state as adversaries ... '[P]ervasive monitoring by public authorities ... infringes precisely those Establishment Clause values at the root of the prohibition of excessive entanglement.' ... Church personnel and records would inevitably become subject to subpoena, discovery, cross-examination, the full panoply of legal process designed to probe the mind of the church in the selection of its ministers.... There is the danger that churches, wary of EEOC or judicial review of their decisions, might make them with an eye to avoiding litigation or bureaucratic entanglement rather than upon the basis of > their own personal and doctrinal assessments of who would best serve the pastoral needs of their members.

(Rayburn, 772 F.2d at p. 1171 (citations omitted); see also, Minker v. Baltimore Annual Conference of United Methodist Church (D.C. Cir. 1990) 894 F.2d 1354, 1357.) Thus, plaintiffs are precluded from introducing evidence relating to religious, ecclesiastical discipline within the beliefs of Jehovah's Witnesses, including, but not limited to, evidence relating to the fact of and/or the act of disciplining members of the religion, including, but not limited to, the fact of and the act of the formation of a judicial committee of elders and the fact of and the act of disfellowshipping members of the religion as part of the church's ecclesiastical or religious discipline.

CONCLUSION

In summary, religious doctrine and religious belief are beyond civil court jurisdiction because civil courts lack the constitutional authority or the legal competence to examine and evaluate such information. In this case, because the information sought is not even relevant to Plaintiff's claims, Plaintiff and her counsel should clearly be precluded from making any reference to evidence relating to religious, ecclesiastical discipline within the beliefs of the Jehovah's Witnesses faith, including, but not limited to, evidence relating to the fact of and/or the act of disciplining members of the religion, including, but not limited to, the fact of and the act of the formation of a judicial committee of elders and the fact of and the act of giving public reproof, private reproof, and disfellowshipping members of the religion. This Court cannot ignore the First Amendment bar which precludes civil court review or evaluation of matters involving church beliefs, doctrine, membership, discipline, or polity.

For the reasons stated above, the Church Defendants respectfully request the Court to enter a pretrial ruling proscribing any reference to evidence relating to religious, ecclesiastical discipline within the beliefs of the Jehovah's Witnesses faith, including, but not limited to, evidence relating to the fact of and/or the act of disciplining members of the religion, including, but not limited to the fact of and the act of the formation of a judicial committee, and the fact of and the act of giving public reproof, private reproof, and the act of disfellowshipping members of the religion. Such matters may only be determined by the "Church" following its own religious tenants, religious beliefs, and religious practices.

TRIAL DATE: May 21, 2012

TO PLAINTIFF JANE DOE and HER ATTORNEYS OF RECORD:

Defendant Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc. (hereinafter "Watchtower") and Defendant North Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses, Fremont, California

(hereinafter "North Fremont Congregation") (collectively referred to as the "Church Defendants") move the court for a pretrial order proscribing all attorneys, parties, and witnesses from referring to, relying on, or testifying about the following matters: Alleged clergy malpractice and any related standard of care under which ministers of Jehovah's Witnesses should have investigated or otherwise handled the November 1993 allegation of child abuse against individual defendant Jonathan Kendrick (hereinafter "Kendrick").

The Church Defendants further move this court to instruct Plaintiff and her counsel, and all witnesses called or examined by Plaintiff, as set forth below. This motion is based upon the ground that the evidence is barred by the First Amendment to the United States Constitution and by Article I, section 4, of the California constitution. Further, the California courts have specifically held that plaintiffs cannot sue clergymen and churches for clergy malpractice. The Church Defendants move as follows:

That Plaintiff and her counsel be instructed not to introduce evidence on, make reference to, introduce testimony on, comment upon, or make any argument relating to any alleged clergy malpractice and any related standard of care under which the elders of the North Fremont Congregation should have acted upon receiving an accusation in November 1993 that Kendrick had abused his stepdaughter Andrea. The introduction of such evidence or testimony or the attempt to introduce such evidence or testimony is forbidden by both the United States and California constitutions. The Church Defendants request that the Court order Plaintiff, her counsel, and any witnesses called by them, to abstain from any reference to, comment on or attempt to introduce any of the evidence, either by way of documents or testimony, which the Church Defendants are requesting the Court to preclude from being introduced at trial.

This motion is based upon the following Memorandum of Points and Authorities, the papers and pleadings on file, and any oral argument permitted by the Court.

STATEMENT OF FACTS

The Church Defendants anticipate that Plaintiff intends to introduce evidence consisting of testimony relating to the adequacy of the North Fremont Congregation's investigation of the allegations against Kendrick and whether the Church Defendants met a religious or secular standard of care in the way that the elders of the North Fremont Congregation followed up on the allegations made against Kendrick. (Ex. B, Plaintiff's Disclosure of Expert Witnesses.)

PROCEDURAL BACKGROUND

Plaintiff's First Amended Complaint for Damages for Childhood Sexual Abuse (hereinafter "Amended Complaint") contains causes of action against the Church Defendants (one cause of action against both Watchtower and the North Fremont Congregation and one against Watchtower only).[1] (Amended Complaint at ¶¶ 2, 4.)

Plaintiff, who was never baptized in the Jehovah's Witnesses faith, contends that she was molested by a "fellow member, volunteer, and leader of the religious facility and congregation in Fremont." (Amended Complaint at ¶ 6.) She testified in deposition that the abuse, which began when she was about 9 years old, first occurred "in the main auditorium" inside a house of worship used by Jehovah's Witnesses. (Ex. A, Plaintiff Deposition, pp. 25:18-26:6.)

Plaintiff seeks damages against the Church Defendants on the theory that the Church Defendants were negligent because they (1) failed to warn or protect Plaintiff from criminal acts allegedly committed by Kendrick, and (2) failed to reasonably supervise, manage, and control Kendrick "in his membership and participation in the Fremont religious facility." (Amended Complaint at ¶ 7.)

The Church Defendants ask the court to rule on this evidentiary issue to assist the parties in trial preparation, to avoid unfair and undue prejudice that would result if irrelevant and prejudicial information were presented at trial, and to promote judicial economy. California Rules of Court, Rule 3.1112 (f) permits the filing of motions in limine to obtain pretrial rulings on the admissibility of evidence. Rule 3.1112 leaves the timing of motion practice to the discretion of the trial judge. conference. Therefore, the Church Defendants' motions in limine are timely.

MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES

ARGUMENT I.

The First Amendment and its California Analog Prohibit Inquiries into Whether Clergymen Meet a Minimum Standard of Care

Plaintiff essentially asks this Court to evaluate whether the Church Defendants met a religious or secular standard of care in the way that the Church Defendants investigated and otherwise dealt with the November 1993 allegation that Kendrick abused his stepdaughter Andrea. In attempting to do so, Plaintiff would have her experts testify as to what the standard of care in such situations would have been in the fields of law enforcement and psychology and their respective communities, thereby alleging what amounts to a clergy malpractice claim. However, those standards cannot constitutionally be applied to religious organizations such as the Church Defendants. Ministers do not have the training, skills, or authority to act as doctors or law enforcement officers. Instead, when an accusation of wrongdoing comes to the elders, their role and obligations within the Jehovah's Witnesses faith are to provide spiritual counseling and admonition in an attempt to help the wrongdoer spiritually. (See, James 5:14, 15.)

Plaintiff also seeks to establish a standard of care of dealing with child abuse among religions. However, the First Amendment's Establishment Clause and its California analog forbid courts from establishing such standards of care among religions, because to do so would impermissibly allow a cause of action for clergy malpractice.

A bedrock principle of First Amendment law is that the state cannot entangle itself in religious affairs. (See Lemon v. Kurtzman (1971) 403 U.S. 602, 612-13.) Among religious matters in which government absolutely cannot become involved is the interpretation of religious doctrine, practices, and beliefs. Since Watson v. Jones (1871) 80 U.S. (13 Wall.) 679, the United States Supreme Court has repeatedly held that "'civil courts exercise no jurisdiction'" over "'a matter which concerns theological controversy.'" (Serbian Eastern Orthodox Diocese v. Milivojevich (1976) 426 U.S. 696, 713-14 (quoting Watson v. Jones).)

Thus, civil courts can never "engage in the forbidden process of interpreting and weighing church doctrine." (Presbyterian Church v. Mary Elizabeth Blue Hull Mem'l Presbyterian Church (1969) 393 U.S. 440, 451.) The First Amendment bars courts from undertaking "an analysis or examination of ecclesiastical polity or doctrine in settling [civil] disputes." (Jones v. Wolf (1979) 443 U.S. 595, 605.)

Given the absolute bar on civil courts entangling themselves in the interpretation or examination of religious doctrines, beliefs, or church polity, the unconstitutionality of clergy malpractice claims is self-evident. In Schmidt v. Bishop (S.D.N.Y. 1991) 779 F. Supp. 321, the court analyzed a claim for clergy malpractice against a Presbyterian pastor for engaging in sexual relations during a counseling relationship. The court rejected the clergy malpractice claim because it would necessarily entail the examination of religious doctrine, thus fostering excessive entanglement with religion:

> It would be impossible for a court or jury to adjudicate a typical case of clergy malpractice, without first ascertaining whether the cleric, in this case a Presbyterian pastor, performed within the level of expertise expected of a similar professional (the hypothetical "reasonably prudent Presbyterian pastor"), following his calling, or practicing his profession within the community.... Any effort by this Court to instruct the trial jury as to the duty of care which a clergyman should exercise, would of necessity require the Court or jury to define and express the standard of care to be followed by other reasonable Presbyterian clergy of the community. This in turn would require the Court and the jury to consider the fundamental perspective and approach to counseling inherent in the beliefs and practices of that denomination. This is as unconstitutional as it is impossible. It fosters excessive entanglement with religion.

(Id. at pp. 327-28 (citations omitted).)

Numerous other courts have reached the same result on the same grounds. (See, e.g., Dausch v. Rykse (7th Cir. 1994) 52 F.3d 1425, 1432 (noting that courts have unanimously rejected clergy malpractice claims "based on the difficulty that would be encountered in evaluating such a claim without entangling the civil courts in extensive investigation and evaluation of religious tenets") (citation omitted); Amato v. Greenquist (Ill. Ct. App. 1997) 679 N.E.2d 446, 450 ("To permit claims for clergy malpractice would require courts to establish a standard of reasonable care for religious practitioners practicing their respective faiths, which necessarily involves the interpretation of [religious] doctrine.").)

Clergy malpractice claims violate the First Amendment because they infringe upon the constitutionally-protected autonomy of churches. For well over a century, the United States Supreme Court's "church autonomy doctrine" has protected the right of churches to govern their ecclesiastical affairs free from government interference. The Supreme Court's church autonomy doctrine is rooted in the decision in Watson v. Jones, supra, where the Supreme Court first outlined the broad principles of judicial abstention in disputes over fundamentally ecclesiastical matters:

> The right to organize voluntary religious associations to assist in the expression and dissemination of any religious doctrine, and to create tribunals for the decision of controverted questions of faith within the association, and for the ecclesiastical government of all the individual members, congregations, and officers within the general association, is unquestioned. All who unite themselves to such a body do so with an implied consent to this government, and are bound to submit to it. But it would be a vain consent and would lead to the total subversion of such religious bodies, if any one aggrieved by one of their decisions could appeal to the secular courts and have them reversed. It is of the essence of these religious unions, and of their right to establish tribunals for the decision of questions arising among themselves, that those decisions should be binding in all cases of ecclesiastical cognizance, subject only to such appeals as the organism itself provides for.

(Id. at pp. 728-29.)

In Serbian Eastern Orthodox Diocese v. Milivojevich, supra, the Supreme Court held that the rule of judicial noninterference "applies with equal force to church disputes over church polity and church administration." (Id. at p. 710.) Again drawing from Watson, the Court reiterated that under the First Amendment civil courts cannot adjudicate "'a matter which concerns ... church discipline, ecclesiastical government, or the conformity of the members of the church to the standard of morals required of them.'" (Id. at p. 714.)

Clergy malpractice claims like that raised here by Plaintiff directly inject civil courts into ecclesiastical affairs and thus are an unconstitutional infringement upon the right of church autonomy. Adjudication of such claims requires civil courts to interpret church doctrine, displacing the role of authoritative church interpreters. Also, in cases where deficient ecclesiastical counseling is alleged, clergy malpractice claims interfere with the right of a church to determine its own standards for ecclesiastical counseling, replacing the church's norms with either the court's interpretation of those norms or an outright secular rule.

Further, as a practical matter, it would be impossible to create a standard of care to be followed by clergy, given the extremely diverse religious traditions in our society, each with its own unique conceptions of the role of clergy in an ecclesiastical polity. If a state or court were permitted to second-guess religious policy, procedure, or action by requiring a church or its ministers to meet secular standards of "care," the state would effectively control the religious organization and its operations by threat of tort litigation and liability. Such judicial review of church decision making would improperly > cause the State to intrude upon matters of church administration and government which have so many times before been proclaimed to be matters of a singular ecclesiastical concern. Control of strictly ecclesiastical matters could easily pass from the church to the State. The church would then be without the power to decide for itself, free from state interference, matters of church administration and government.

(McClure v. Salvation Army (5th Cir. 1972) 460 F.2d 553, 560.)

In sum, although churches do not have blanket immunity from civil liability, the First Amendment's church autonomy doctrine bars claims like clergy malpractice that, by their nature or as a practical matter, inject the state and the courts into important ecclesiastical concerns.

ARGUMENT II.

California Does Not Recognize Torts that are Premised in Clergy Malpractice

Plaintiff seeks to establish that the Church Defendants were negligent in their conduct toward Plaintiff because the Church Defendants did not meet some alleged standard of care for religious organizations in the way they investigated and then imposed ecclesiastical discipline on Kendrick, including their alleged failure to expressly warn others that Kendrick was a danger. It is axiomatic that a tort, whether intentional or negligent, involves the violation of a legal duty owed by the alleged wrongdoer to the person injured. (Nally v. Grace Cmty. Church of the Valley (1988) 47 Cal.3d 278, 292.) To support a finding of negligence, a plaintiff must show that the defendant had a duty of care, that the duty was breached, and that the breach was the proximate cause of the resulting injury. (United States Liab. Ins. Co. v. Haidinger-Hayes, Inc. (1970) 1 Cal.3d 586, 594.) However, "one is ordinarily not liable for the actions of another and is under no duty to protect another from harm, in the absence of a special relationship of custody or control." (Nally, 47 Cal.3d at p. 293 (emphasis added).) Furthermore, absent a special relationship, one has "no duty to warn those who may be endangered by such conduct." (Peterson v. San Francisco Cmty. College Dist. (1984) 36 Cal.3d 799, 806.)

The California Supreme Court in Nally firmly rejected the extension of a duty of care to personal or religious counseling relationships because it would be amount to a claim for clergy malpractice. (Nally, 47 Cal.3d at 294.) The California Supreme Court reasoned "that access to the clergy for counseling should be free from state imposed counseling standards, and that 'the secular state is not equipped to ascertain the competence of counseling when performed by those affiliated with religious organizations.'" (Id. at p. 298 (citation omitted).) Thus, Nally is widely recognized for the proposition that a negligence cause of action cannot be brought against a clergy member or church for alleged improper counseling. Furthermore, none of the Church Defendants, policies, procedures, or actions related to their pastoral care can be evaluated to see if they met a certain standard of care.

In Richelle L. v. Roman Catholic Archbishop (2003) 106 Cal.App.4th 257, the Court of Appeal reiterated that a clergy member cannot be held liable for "breach of a duty arising out of a special relationship" with a parishioner. The court stated:

> Even if a reasonable standard could be devised, which is questionable, it could not be uniformly applied without restricting the free exercise rights of religious organizations which could not comply without compromising the doctrines of their faith. The application of such a standard would also result in the establishment of judicially acceptable religions, because it would inevitably differentiate ecclesiastical counseling practices that are judicially acceptable from those that are not.

(Id. at p. 270.) Thus, the court concluded that the plaintiffs' cause of actions for negligence could not be sustained without running afoul of the clergy malpractice doctrine.

Therefore, a secular court is prohibited from evaluating alleged inadequacy of internal church policies and procedures. (Richelle L., 106 Cal.App.4th at p. 270.) As the California Supreme Court noted in Nally, it is unconstitutional to impose a duty of care on pastoral counselors. (Nally, 47 Cal.3d at p. 299.) Thus, Plaintiff's attempt here to introduce evidence that the Church Defendants' policies, procedures, and pastoral actions did not meet a standard of care is nothing more than an attempt to assert an impermissible "clergy malpractice claim," and such claims are barred by the U.S. Constitution. (Dausch v. Rykse, 52 F.3d 1425, 1429 (7th Cir. 1994).)

CONCLUSION

For the reasons stated above, the Church Defendants respectfully request that the Court enter a pretrial ruling proscribing any person from mentioning a clergy malpractice claim and any related standard of care that the Church Defendants should have followed after receiving the November 1993 allegations of Kendrick abusing a minor.

DEFENDANT WATCHTOWER AND NORTH FREMONT CONGREGATION'S MOTION IN LIMINE TO EXCLUDE TESTIMONY OF PLAINTIFF'S POLICE EXPERTS AND MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES IN SUPPORT

DATE	May 18, 2012
TIME	8:30 A.M.
JUDGE	Robert McGuiness
DEPT.	22

TRIAL DATE: May 21, 2012

TO PLAINTIFF JANE DOE and HER ATTORNEYS OF RECORD:

Defendant Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc. (hereinafter "Watchtower") and Defendant North Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses, Fremont, California (hereinafter "North Fremont Congregation") (collectively referred to as the "Church Defendants") move this Court in limine for an order excluding any and all testimony from Plaintiff's police experts because it falls outside of the scope of the triable issues in this case, in that 1) the Church Defendants are not part of the "law enforcement community"; 2) the law imposes no duty on Church Defendants to conduct a criminal investigation into the activity of either Jonathan Kendrick, or of any other suspected lawbreaker; and 3) the "duty" owed by the Church Defendants to the Plaintiff, if any, presents an issue of law that can only be addressed by the court, and not by the testimony of either a fact witness, or an expert witness.

STATEMENT OF FACTS

In the Declaration supporting "Plaintiff's Disclosure of Expert Witness Information," dated March 26, 2012, the Plaintiff disclosed that Carl Lewis would provide expert testimony on the following subjects: "the law enforcement community, and child abuse professional body of knowledge on the identification, detection, and prevention of childhood sexual abuse as of the time periods at issue in this case; the adequacy of the investigation of Jonathan Kendrick by defendants, and its cause and effect relationship to Plaintiff's molestation; the conduct of Plaintiff; and the identifiable pattern and practice of Kendrick's pedophile conduct." Plaintiff also disclosed Sergeant Jeffrey Baldwin and Officer J.W. Davila as "non-retained experts." The Church Defendants anticipate Plaintiff intends to solicit testimony from Sgt. Baldwin and Officer Davila consistent with Mr. Lewis' expected testimony described in the disclosure.

Plaintiff alleges in her Complaint and deposition that she was sexually molested as a child between the years 1994 to 1997 by Defendant Jonathan Kendrick (hereinafter "Kendrick"), a member of the North Fremont Congregation at that time. Plaintiff's claims against the Church Defendants sound in negligence and arise from allegations that her abuse resulted from her being hugged by Kendrick and forced to sit on Kendrick's lap during meetings at the house of worship for North Fremont Congregation (i.e., the Kingdom Hall) with her parents present. Plaintiff also contends that her parents allowed Kendrick to take her to his home after Sunday meetings at the Kingdom Hall several times a month. Once at his home, Kendrick allegedly abused Plaintiff by undressing her, touching her genitals, penetrating her vagina with a pen, licking her, making her touch his genitals, as well as having oral sex with her. Plaintiff further alleged that Kendrick then delivered her back to her parents at the Kingdom Hall or at her parents' home. She alleges that the North Fremont Congregation elders saw her being taken away from the Kingdom Hall by Kendrick.

In November 1993, Kendrick made a private penitential confession to North Fremont Congregation elders, claiming that he had "inadvertently touched" the breast of his 15-year-old stepdaughter, Andrea, over her clothing while she slept on a couch in the living room of the Kendrick home. As a result of the private confession about his stepdaughter, Church elders removed Kendrick from his non-supervisory[1] position with the North Fremont Congregation and a public announcement was made to the congregation that he was no longer serving in his former position. Kendrick never again held any position in any congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses.

PROCEDURAL BACKGROUND

Plaintiff's First Amended Complaint for Damages for Childhood Sexual Abuse (hereinafter "Amended Complaint") contains causes of action for negligence against the Church Defendants (one cause of action against both Watchtower and the North Fremont Congregation and one against Watchtower only).[2] (Amended Complaint ¶¶ 2, 4.)

Plaintiff, who was never baptized in the Jehovah's Witnesses faith, contends that she was molested by a "fellow member, volunteer, and leader of the religious facility and congregation in Fremont." (Amended Complaint ¶ 6.) She testified in deposition that the abuse, which began when she was about 9 years old, first occurred "in the main auditorium" inside a house of worship used by Jehovah's Witnesses. (Ex. A, Plaintiff Deposition, pp. 25:18-26:6.)

Plaintiff seeks damages against the Church Defendants on the theory that the Church Defendants were negligent because they (1) failed to warn or protect Plaintiff from criminal acts allegedly committed by Kendrick, and (2) failed to reasonably supervise, manage, and control

[1] Kendrick held the position of "ministerial servant."

[2] Plaintiff actually originally sued two corporations, Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc., and Watch Tower Bible and Tract Society of Pennsylvania, as well as three other entities described as the Governing Body of Jehovah's Witnesses, Jehovah's Witnesses on Peralta Blvd., Fremont, and Kingdom Hall of Jehovah's Witnesses.

Kendrick "in his membership and participation in the Fremont religious facility." (Amended Complaint ¶ 7.)

The Church Defendants ask the court to rule on this evidentiary issue to assist the parties in trial preparation, to avoid unfair and undue prejudice that would result if irrelevant and prejudicial information were presented at trial, and to promote judicial economy. California Rules of Court, Rule 3.1112 (f) permits the filing of motions in limine to obtain pretrial rulings on the admissibility of evidence. Rule 3.1112 leaves the timing of motion practice to the discretion of the trial judge. Alameda County Superior Court Local Rule 3.35(e) requires the parties to personally serve and file all motions in limine one court day before the pretrial conference. Therefore, the Church Defendants' motions in limine are timely.

MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES

ARGUMENT I.

Carl Lewis is Not a Qualified Expert in this Case

California courts have uniformly limited Carl Lewis' testimony to a general discussion of Child Sexual Abuse Accommodation Syndrome without any reference to the facts of the case or the results of his investigation of the particular victim of abuse. As noted in People v. Gruber (Cal. Ct. App. May 22, 2008) No. H031005, 2008 WL 2139546, at 14, the trial court expressly ruled as follows concerning Lewis testimony:

> "[T]aking into consideration the totality of the circumstances and the state of the evidence, the Court will permit Mr. Lewis to testify in the People's case in chief with respect to the Child Sexual Abuse Accommodation Syndrome [CSAAS]. [¶] He is limited to discussion in general terms and not to be applied to the specific facts of this case." The court denied defendant's request for a hearing under section 402. Before Lewis testified regarding CSAAS, the trial court instructed the jury pursuant to CALJIC No. 10.64 (see infra).

The California Court of Appeals in People v. Bowker (1988) 203 Cal.App.3d 385, provided guidelines for the admission of CSAAS evidence at trial to such cases as where the defendants attack the child's credibility by suggesting that the child's conduct after the incident, such as a delay in reporting, is inconsistent with the child's testimony claiming molestation. CSAAS evidence may not be used to determine whether a child's molestation claim is true. (Bowker, 203 Cal.App.3d at p. 393; see also Gruber, at p. *15, quoting People v. Gilbert (1992)

5 Cal.App.4th 1372, 1383, "Because the line between impermissible use of expert testimony to prove the child was abused, and permissible use of such testimony to 'explain the emotional antecedents of abused children's seemingly self-impeaching behavior,' . . . is by no means a bright one, the better practice is to limit the experts testimony to observations concerning the behavior of abused children as a class and to avoid testimony which recites either the facts of the case at trial or obviously similar facts.") The Bowker court was explicit that "the jury must be instructed simply and directly that the expert's [Carl Lewis] testimony is not intended and should not be used to determine whether the victim's molestation claim is true." (Bowker, 203 Cal.App.3d at p. 394.) The Church Defendants also expressly cite the similar testimony limits actually placed on Carl Lewis in each of the cases cited in this motion.

The Church Defendant's expect to bring out the fact that Plaintiff never reported this alleged abuse until in or about 2009 or 2010. This is the only area in which Carl Lewis' testimony might be relevant. However, on that issue, Mr. Lewis' testimony will be duplicative of the testimony of Plaintiff's expert Dr. Anna Salter and thus should not be allowed. (Douillard v. Woodd (1942) 20 Cal.2d 665, 669 (the court is not bound to allow cumulative testimony on the same point).)

ARGUMENT II.

Carl Lewis, Sgt. Baldwin, and Officer Davila Have No Expertise in the Area of Comparative Religions or Church Organization

Carl Lewis, Sgt. Baldwin, and Officer Davila are not qualified to testify in this case. Evidence Code section 720(a) provides in part that "[a] person is qualified to testify as an expert if he has special knowledge, skill, experience, training, or education sufficient to qualify him as an expert on the subject to which his testimony relates." The competency of an expert is relative to the specific topic and fields of knowledge about which the person is asked to make a statement. (People v. Watson (2008) 43 Cal.4th 652, 692.)

In some cases, an expert on the policy, organization, and procedures of a religious organization is both relevant and helpful to the trier of fact. (See Stevens v. Roman Catholic Bishop of Fresno (1975) 49 Cal.App.3d 877, 882.) However, using the analysis in Stevens as a standard, Mr. Lewis, Sgt. Baldwin, and Officer Davila have absolutely no expertise or experience in the areas of proposed testimony in this particular case. Contrary to the scope of expert evidence identified in "Plaintiff's Disclosure of Expert Witness Information":

1. The Church Defendants are not law enforcement entities and their elders are not law enforcement personnel, such that they are not a part of the "law enforcement community" nor do they know police investigation standards or techniques. Mr. Lewis, Sgt. Baldwin, and Officer Davila have no knowledge of comparative religious organizations and their respective religious policies or procedures such that they would be qualified to testify about a religious organization's duty to employ police investigatory standards and techniques, especially during a period of time when clergy were not legally obligated to report suspected child abuse.

2. Mr. Lewis, Sgt. Baldwin, and Officer Davila have no expertise with regard to the "adequacy" of any religious entity to investigate the criminal behavior of Jonathan Kendrick or investigate the criminal activity of any other person who might attend church services.

3. Mr. Lewis, Sgt. Baldwin, and Officer Davila have no expertise, or experience, in the area of organizational negligence, particularly where the sexual abuse of a minor is related to the supposedly failed policies and procedures of a religious organization, as compared to a law enforcement organization.

ARGUMENT III.

The Police Experts' Testimony is Not Relevant to the Material Issues in this Case

It is important to note that the agents and servants of the Church Defendants are not accused in this case of actually abusing the Plaintiff. The Church Defendants are accused of organizational negligence, or of contributing to the occurrence of Plaintiff's claimed injury through allegedly failed organizational religious policies and protocols. The alleged perpetrator of the abuse of Plaintiff is someone who attended worship services at the North Fremont Congregation's house of worship but had no position of authority or responsibility within the congregation or Watchtower.

California Evidence Code section 350 provides that "[n]o evidence is admissible except relevant evidence." Relevance means that the evidence has a "tendency in reason to prove or disprove any disputed fact that is of consequence to the determination of the action," including "the credibility of a witness or hearsay declarant." (California Evidence Code section 210.) Two elements are involved: 1) the evidence must relate to some matter at issue in the case; and 2) it must have probative worth (i.e., some logical tendency to prove the matter at issue).

For the most part, the evidence in chief to be offered by Carl Lewis, Sgt. Baldwin, and/or Officer Davila does not relate to a matter properly at issue in the case, i.e., some issue raised in the pleadings, pretrial orders, or applicable substantive law. For example, with the exception to testimony regarding Plaintiff's delay in reporting the alleged abuse, the proposed testimony of Carl Lewis has no logical tendency to prove the disputed matter of negligence, i.e., to create a reasonable inference as to the existence or nonexistence of the fact at issue. (See Ruiz v. Minnesota Mining & Mfg. Co. (1971) 15 Cal.App.3d 462, 467-468.) Mr. Lewis, Sgt, Baldwin, and Officer Davila have no knowledge of the organization, practices, and procedures of the Jehovah's Witnesses faith, or of apparently any other religion. The Church Defendants do not believe these experts have ever testified about the organizational activity of any organization, much less a religious organization—but for the activity of the police in gathering criminal evidence for the prosecution of child abusers. They have no sound or reliable opinions to offer to assist the Court or the jury to determine any relevant issues concerning the religious policies, procedures, or activity of the Church Defendants.

ARGUMENT IV.

A Duty of Care is a Question of Law to be Determined by the Court Alone

In order to prove facts sufficient to support any sort of finding of negligence, Plaintiff must show that the Church Defendants had a duty to use due care, that the agents of the Church Defendants breached that duty, and that the breach was the proximate or legal cause of the resulting injury to Plaintiff. (Adams v. City of Fremont (1998) 68 Cal.App.4th 243, 265.)

For Plaintiff's claims against these Church Defendants to be legitimate they must arise from the existence of a viable tort. They must arise from the violation of a legal duty imposed by statute, contract or otherwise, owed by the Church Defendants to this particular Plaintiff. (Id.)

The existence of a duty of care owed by these Church Defendants to Plaintiff is a question of law to be determined by the Court alone. (Ballard v. Uribe (1986) 41 Cal.3d 564, 572, fn. 6; Peter W. v. San Francisco Unified Sch. Dist. (1976) 60 Cal.App.3d 814, 822; Raymond v. Paradise Unified School Dist. (1963) 218 Cal.App.2d 1, 8.) This is because "legal duties are . . . merely conclusory expressions that, in cases of a particular type, liability should be imposed for damage done." (Tarasoff v. Regents of University of California (1976) 17 Cal.3d 425, 434.) 'Duty is simply a shorthand expression for the sum total of policy considerations favoring a conclusion that the plaintiff is entitled to legal protection.' (Dillon v. Legg (1968) 68 Cal.2d 728, 734.)

Carl Lewis, Sgt. Baldwin, and Officer Davila cannot supplant the role of the Court by resolving questions of law through expert testimony on the "duty" of these Church Defendants. "Opinion testimony is inadmissible and irrelevant to adjudging questions of law." (Adams v. City of Fremont (1998) 68 Cal.App.4th 243, 266, citing Sheldon Appel Co. v. Albert & Oliker (1989) 47 Cal.3d 863, 884; Evidence Code section 801, subd. (b).) The same rule of evidence would exclude these experts' opinions on "the adequacy of the investigation of Jonathan Kendrick by defendants, and cause and effect relationship to Plaintiff's molestation."

In Williams v. Coombs (1986) 179 Cal.App.3d 626, 638, disapproved on another point in Sheldon Appel Co. v. Albert & Oliker, supra, the court explained: "'[I]t is thoroughly established that experts may not give opinions on matters which are essentially within the province of the court to decide.' Consequently, the 'opinion of a witness on a question of law is obviously incompetent.'"

Thus, the fact-finding jury in this case, after being given instructions on the law by this Court, must determine whether the Church Defendants had a duty to prevent Plaintiff's alleged abuse and "whether a 'special relationship' was formed between the parties without relying on the expert testimony presented at trial." (Adams v. City of Fremont (1998) 68 Cal.App.4th 243, 266.)

CONCLUSION

Carl Lewis, Sgt. Baldwin, and Officer Davila's testimony is not likely to assist the Court or the trier of fact. Their opinions about the alleged "duty" of the Church Defendants to perform an "adequate investigation of Kendrick" and to reform their religious policies and practices are not relevant. Mr. Lewis' limited expertise in CSAAS matters pertain to issues that are not before this court. This is not a criminal investigation and, contrary to the position of Lewis, Sgt. Baldwin, or Officer Davila, the Church Defendants are not part of the law enforcement community. The Church Defendants have no duty to conduct "adequate" criminal investigations. Mr. Lewis, Sgt. Baldwin, and Officer Davila's testimony must be excluded because, in addition to being a waste of the court's time, the testimony is irrelevant, unreliable, prejudicial, likely to confuse the issues and mislead the jury, and not reasonably calculated to be of help to the finder of fact.

MOTION IN LIMINE No. 8

DEFENDANT WATCHTOWER AND NORTH FREMONT CONGREGATION'S MOTION IN LIMINE TO EXCLUDE TESTIMONY OF WILLIAM H. BOWEN EXPECTED TO BE OFFERED AT TRIAL AND MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES IN SUPPORT

DATE	May 18, 2012
TIME	8:30 A.M.
JUDGE	Robert McGuiness
DEPT.	22

TRIAL DATE: May 21, 2012

TO PLAINTIFF JANE DOE and HER ATTORNEYS OF RECORD:

Defendant Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc. (hereinafter "Watchtower") and Defendant North Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses, Fremont, California

(hereinafter "North Fremont Congregation") (collectively referred to as the "Church Defendants") move the court for a pretrial order to exclude the testimony of William H. Bowen, whom Plaintiff intends to offer at trial as an expert witness.

This motion is based upon the following Memorandum of Points and Authorities, the papers and pleadings on file, and any oral argument permitted by the Court.

STATEMENT OF FACTS

Plaintiff has disclosed William H. Bowen as an expert witness who purports to be qualified to render an opinion as follows:

> [William H. Bowen] will testify in general substance as follows: as to the policies, procedures, and practices of defendants generally; the application of those policies on the subject of childhood sexual abuse within the Jehovah's Witnesses; the pattern and practices of Jehovah's Witnesses institutional management of disregarding sexual abuse of children and failing to protect minors within its membership and activities from sexual abuse; the business and financial reasons behind the institutional defendants' policies on sexual abuse of children; the knowledge and data available to Jehovah's Witnesses management on the consequences of increased sexual abuse of children resulting from its administrative policies; and as to the administrative organization and structure of Jehovah's Witnesses as to its policies and practices on secular and administrative issues.

(Declaration Re Expert Witnesses signed by Richard J. Simons, Esq., on March 26, 2012.)

By his admission in prior deposition testimony,[1] Mr. Bowen, a disgruntled former member of Jehovah's Witnesses, earns his living as a "consultant" to attorneys who are suing any corporate entity used by Jehovah's Witnesses or any individual who is one of Jehovah's Witnesses. Although he is a self-described "expert in . . . comparative religion" (Ex. B, Moreno Declaration, Ex. A thereto, Bowen Deposition, p. 132:4-18), Plaintiff has offered him as an expert to explain, among other things, the policies and practices of Jehovah's Witnesses.

As the discussion below will show, Mr. Bowen's testimony is not relevant and also is a constitutionally impermissible attack on the religious policies of Jehovah's Witnesses.

[1] The references to Mr. Bowen deposition testimony are to his deposition in Dorman, et al., v. Doe, et al., San Diego County Superior Court Case No. 37-2010-00092450-CU-PO-CTL, taken on February 23, 2012. True and correct excerpts of Mr. Bowen's deposition are attached to and incorporated into the Declaration of Mario Moreno (hereinafter "Moreno Declaration") (the Moreno Declaration is attached to this memorandum as Ex. B) filed in support of this motion (hereinafter "Moreno Declaration, Ex. A, Bowen Deposition").

Mr. Bowen fails to qualify as an expert in this or any field of study. Mr. Bowen's testimony is not based on reliable methods or evidence. The use of his testimony would so taint the judicial process that the Church Defendants cannot have, and will not have, a fair trial if his testimony is admitted, even if it is later stricken. Notwithstanding the constitutional prohibition against Mr. Bowen's testimony, Evidence Code Section 789 additionally bars Mr. Bowen's testimony and requires its exclusion because he intends to use religious testimony to attack the credibility of witnesses at trial who are Jehovah's Witnesses.

PROCEDURAL BACKGROUND

Plaintiff's First Amended Complaint for Damages for Childhood Sexual Abuse (hereinafter "Amended Complaint") contains causes of action against the Church Defendants (one cause of action against both Watchtower and the North Fremont Congregation and one against Watchtower only).[2] (Amended Complaint at ¶¶ 2, 4.)

Plaintiff, who was never baptized in the Jehovah's Witnesses faith, contends that she was molested by a "fellow member, volunteer, and leader of the religious facility and congregation in Fremont." (Amended Complaint at ¶ 6.) She testified in deposition that the abuse, which began when she was about 9 years old, first occurred "in the main auditorium" inside a house of worship used by Jehovah's Witnesses. (Ex. A, Plaintiff Deposition, pp. 25:18-26:6.)

Plaintiff seeks damages against the Church Defendants on the theory that the Church Defendants were negligent because they (1) failed to warn or protect Plaintiff from criminal acts allegedly committed by Kendrick, and (2) failed to reasonably supervise, manage, and control Kendrick "in his membership and participation in the Fremont religious facility." (Amended Complaint at ¶ 7.)

The Church Defendants ask the court to rule on this evidentiary issue to assist the parties in trial preparation, to avoid unfair and undue prejudice that would result if irrelevant and prejudicial information were presented at trial, to avoid confusion of the issues, to avoid misleading the jury, and to promote judicial economy. California Rules of Court, Rule 3.1112(f) permits the filing of motions in limine to obtain pretrial rulings on the admissibility of evidence. Rule 3.1112 leaves the timing of motion practice to the discretion of the trial judge. Alameda County Superior Court Local Rule 3.35(e) requires the parties to personally serve and file all motions in limine one court day before the pretrial conference. Therefore, the Church Defendants' motions in limine are timely.

[2] Plaintiff actually originally sued two corporations, Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc., and Watch Tower Bible and Tract Society of Pennsylvania, as well as three other entities described as the Governing Body of Jehovah's Witnesses, Jehovah's Witnesses on Peralta Blvd., Fremont, and Kingdom Hall of Jehovah's Witnesses.

MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES

A party may attempt to preclude or limit the introduction of evidence by presenting a motion in limine to the trial court in chambers. (Evidence Code sections 350, 352; Helfend v. Southern California Rapid Transit Dist. (1970) 2 Cal.3d 1.) The purpose of a motion in limine is "to avoid the obviously futile attempt to 'unring the bell' in the event a motion to strike is granted in the proceedings before the jury." (Hyatt v. Sierra Boat Co. (1978) 79 Cal.App.3d 325, 337.) The court is entitled to hear and determine the question of the admissibility of evidence outside of the presence and hearing of the jury. (Evidence Code section 402.)

Evidence Code section 350 states that "(n)o evidence is admissible except relevant evidence." Evidence Code section 210 defines relevant evidence as "evidence, including evidence relevant to the credibility of a witness or hearsay declarant, having any tendency in reason to prove or disprove any disputed fact that is of consequence to the determination of the action." The Comment provides that relevant evidence "includes not only evidence of the ultimate facts actually in dispute but also evidence of other facts from which such ultimate facts may be presumed or inferred." To be relevant, therefore, evidence must have some probative value—it must have a tendency in reason to prove or disprove a fact, and the fact proved or disproved must be in dispute and of consequence to the determination of the action. (See, People v. Kelly (1992) 1 Cal.4th 495, 523 (only relevant evidence is admissible); People v. Haston (1968) 69 Cal.2d 233, 245 (in every case the possibility of severing relevant from irrelevant portions of evidence should be considered to protect against undue prejudice).) It involves a determination of whether the evidence "logically, naturally and by reasonable inference tends to establish some [disputed] fact." (People v. Simms (1970) 10 Cal.App.3d 299, 311.) An inference may not be drawn from facts that are too remote in time or too speculative. (Id. at p. 311.)

Moreover, Evidence Code section 352 provides: "The court in its discretion may exclude evidence if its probative value is substantially outweighed by the probability that its admission will (a) necessitate undue consumption of time or (b) create substantial danger of undue prejudice, of confusing the issues, or of misleading the jury."

Prejudicial evidence "uniquely tends to evoke an emotional bias against . . . [one party] as an individual and . . . has very little effect on the issues." (See People v. Harlan (1990) 222 Cal.App.3d 439, 445, quoting People v. Wright (1985) 39 Cal.3d 576, 585.) The court must strike a balance between the probative value of the evidence and the danger of prejudice. To strike that balance, the court considers "[1] the relationship between the evidence and the relevant inferences to be drawn from it, [2] whether the evidence is relevant to the main or only a collateral issue, and [3] the necessity of the evidence to the proponent's case as well as the reasons recited in section 352 for exclusion." (Harlan at p. 445.)

There must be a need for an expert's opinion in a case. The expert opinion itself must be more than speculation and conjecture; it must be accompanied by a reasoned explanation of the facts and their connection to the conclusion. Additionally, the opinions must be "sufficiently beyond the realm of common experience [so] that the expert's opinion will assist the trier of fact." (Jennings v. Palomar Pomerado Health Systems, Inc. (2003) 114 Cal.App.4th 1108, 1116.) In this case, no aspect of Mr. Bowen's expected testimony comes anywhere near these threshold requirements.

ARGUMENT I.

Mr. Bowen's Testimony is Not Relevant and Does Not Relate to Any Matter at Issue in this Case.

California Evidence Code section 350 provides that "[n]o evidence is admissible except relevant evidence." Relevance means that the evidence has a "tendency in reason to prove or disprove any disputed fact that is of consequence to the determination of the action," including "the credibility of a witness or hearsay declarant." (Evidence Code section 210.) Two elements are involved: 1) the evidence must relate to some matter at issue in the case; and 2) it must have probative worth (i.e., some logical tendency to prove the matter at issue).

The evidence must relate to a matter properly at issue in the case, i.e., some issue raised in the pleadings, pretrial orders, or applicable substantive law. Although Plaintiff has pled that the Church Defendants are liable for damages resulting from the sexual abuse of a minor, a serious matter does not become relevant simply because it appears in the pleadings. (See Decter v. Stevenson Properties, Inc. (1952) 39 Cal.2d 407, 420 (where the court stated that an "[i]rrelevant matter, though pleaded, is still irrelevant.").) Mr. Bowen claims to be an expert on the "policies and practices of Jehova[h]'s Witnesses." (Ex. B, Moreno Declaration, Ex. A thereto, Bowen Deposition, p. 27:1-3.) In fact, Plaintiff intends to offer Mr. Bowen's testimony specifically on the internal religious policies, procedures, and practices of the Jehovah's Witnesses faith. (Declaration Re Expert Witnesses signed by Richard J. Simons, Esq., on March 26, 2012, ¶1.B.) Regardless of the way Plaintiff and her attorneys attempt to portray Mr. Bowen's testimony, the fact of the matter is simple: Mr. Bowen necessarily intends to testify about and offer opinions concerning the religious policies, practices, and internal government of the Jehovah's Witnesses faith.

The Church Defendants are just that—religious entities related to the active religious practice of the Jehovah's Witnesses faith. These are not matters of a secular nature that need expert testimony from Mr. Bowen. Even if there were such a need, Mr. Bowen would fail to qualify to render such an opinion.

His testimony cannot assist the jury to determine relevant facts, such as whether the Church Defendants are liable in that they "negligently failed to warn plaintiff JANE DOE, her family, and other members of the congregation, of the propensity and risk that defendant KENDRICK would sexually molest or abuse minor girls" or, whether the Church Defendants are liable in that they "were negligent in failing to exercise reasonable care to protect plaintiff JANE DOE, and other minors, who were members of, or participants in, activities at the religious facility in Fremont, from the risk of sexual abuse or molestation by perpetrators, including defendant JONATHAN KENDRICK." (Amended Complaint at ¶7.) The Church Defendants anticipate that Mr. Bowen will be offered as a kind of glossary, or someone to define terms used in the congregations of Jehovah's Witnesses, such as "publisher" or "pioneer." (Ex. B, Moreno Declaration, Ex. A thereto, Bowen Deposition, p. 96:2-97:4.) However, anyone called to testify on behalf of the Church Defendants are all publishers and can easily define such terms as the need arises.

ARGUMENT II.

Mr. Bowen's Testimony is of No Probative Value to the Trier of Fact

The second part of the "relevance" test is that the evidence must have a logical tendency to prove the disputed matter, i.e., to create a reasonable inference as to the existence or nonexistence of the fact at issue. (See Ruiz v. Minnesota Mining & Mfg. Co. (1971) 15 Cal.App.3d 462, 467-468.)

Mr. Bowen's knowledge of the organization, practices, and procedures of the Jehovah's Witnesses faith is limited. Mr. Bowen has testified that Jehovah's Witnesses are a hierarchical religious organization. He testified that he has served at the branch office as a volunteer where he sewed Bibles from 1977 to 1979 (Ex. B, Moreno Declaration, Ex. A thereto, Bowen Deposition, pp. 25:12-26:7) and that he served as a congregation elder from 1985 until 1992 when he was removed as an elder by the congregation. He also served as an elder a second time from June 1994 until he resigned in December 2000. (Ex. B, Moreno Declaration, Ex. A thereto, Bowen Deposition, pp. 43:19-45:8.) Mr. Bowen admitted that he served as an elder, just as 80,000 other men in the United States do. (Ex. B, Moreno Declaration, Ex. A thereto, Bowen Deposition, p. 50:20-22.) Mr. Bowen admitted that the basis of his expertise is undocumented conversations with active and former Jehovah's Witnesses. (Ex. B, Moreno Declaration, Ex. A thereto, Bowen Deposition, p. 64:12-13.) Mr. Bowen has no more expertise in the religious practices and policies of the worldwide organization of the Jehovah's Witnesses faith than any other elder in any of the more than 110,000 congregations worldwide. Mr. Bowen never had any dealings with the members of the Jehovah's Witnesses faith who make religious policy and protocol decisions. So, even if this Court were, arguendo, to find that any of those issues are relevant to this case, Mr. Bowen is not qualified as an expert to opine on these matters and further, he has no sound or reliable opinions to offer to assist the Court or the jury to determine any relevant issues before the Court.

ARGUMENT III.

Mr. Bowen's Testimony and Involvement in this Case Constitute an Impermissible Attack on Watchtower's First Amendment Rights to Direct the Governance of its Religious Beliefs, Practices, and Organization

Watchtower is one of several corporations used by the Governing Body of Jehovah's Witnesses to manage legal matters associated with the work of preaching and teaching the good news of Jehovah God's established Kingdom. The United States Supreme Court has ruled that the legal rights of such a corporation are protected by the Equal Protection Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment. (Santa Clara County v. Southern Pacific Railroad (1886) 118 U.S. 394.)

The Church Defendants' position is analogous to the position of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP) and the African American community, for example. Addressing this relationship, the United States Supreme Court has recognized that a corporation can represent the voice of many and that the corporation itself had rights protected by the First Amendment. (See NAACP v. Button (1963) 371 U.S. 415, 428-429.) Similarly, the legal rights of Jehovah's Witnesses and their religious faith are infringed whenever Watchtower's rights are violated.

The Supreme Court of California has repeatedly held that ecclesiastical and theological controversies, including "matters of faith, discipline, and the general polity and tenets of the church," are issues beyond the jurisdiction of secular courts. (Horsman v. Allen (1900) 129 Cal. 131, 138-139; Comm. of Missions v. Pac. Synod (1909) 157 Cal. 105, 128; Catholic Charities of Sacramento, Inc. v. Superior Court (2004) 32 Cal.4th 527, 541-542; New v. Kroeger (2008) 167 Cal.App.4th 800, 816-817.) California courts have consistently ruled that internal church procedures are wholly ecclesiastical in nature and that the First Amendment bars judicial review of such matters by secular courts. In fact, the courts have held that "[t]he authorities are next to unanimous in concluding that civil courts may not involve themselves in reviewing the termination of clergy for theological or disciplinary reasons." (Higgins v. Maher (1989) 210 Cal.App.3d 1168, 1173.)

Watchtower's representative, Allen Shuster, is a long-time member of the Jehovah's Witnesses headquarters' staff who is competent to testify about Watchtower's religious policies and practices. The jury may not compare and evaluate Mr. Shuster's testimony with that of Mr. Bowen's to make a determination on what constitutes, or should constitute, Watchtower's religious policies, practices, and internal government. This is exactly the situation the First Amendment and its California analog are designed to avoid. The Governing Body of Jehovah's Witnesses, not the jury or this Court, must have the final word in defining its religious policies, procedures, practices and internal government for handling wrongdoing in the congregations of Jehovah's Witnesses. On this matter, the United States Supreme Court has specifically held: "In short, the First and Fourteenth Amendments permit hierarchical religious organizations to establish their own rules and regulations for internal discipline and government, and to create tribunals for adjudicating disputes over these matters." (Serbian Eastern Orthodox Diocese v. Milivojevich (1976) 426 U.S. 696, 724-25 (emphasis added); see also Horsman (1900), supra, 129 Cal. at p. 138-139; Committee of Missions (1909) supra, 157 Cal. at p. 128; Catholic Charities of Sacramento (2004) supra, 32 Cal.4th at pp. 541-542; New (2008) supra, 167 Cal.App.4th at pp. 816-817.)

Therefore, Mr. Bowen's criticism of the Governing Body's religious policies concerning the disciplining of alleged child molesters (Ex. B, Moreno Declaration, Ex. A thereto, Bowen Deposition, pp. 133:25-137:25) is nothing more than a back door attempt to bring a claim of clergy malpractice, which is barred by the U.S. and California Constitutions. (Nally v. Grace Cmty. Church (1988) 47 Cal.3d 278, 300; Richelle L., supra, 106 Cal.App.4th at p. 269 ("There is no such thing in the law as clerical malpractice.").) Mr. Bowen is prohibited, therefore, from interpreting religious policies, practices, and internal government of the Church Defendants.

As the proceedings progress, Mr. Bowen's mixed motive for offering testimony in this case becomes more obvious; he is using the courts as a forum to vindicate his own position with (or against) Watchtower and to advocate his theory that Watchtower's and the Jehovah's

Witnesses religious policies are heretical. As he explained in deposition, he is on a crusade to force the Governing Body of Jehovah's Witnesses to change its religious policies on handling allegations of child abuse. (Ex. B, Moreno Declaration, Ex. A thereto, Bowen Deposition, pp. 134:3-25, 138:19-25.)

As Mr. Bowen explained in his manifesto "Is There A Problem?", he wants to compel the Governing Body of Jehovah's Witnesses to reject its Bible-based system of internal congregation judicial proceedings, in which elders provide Bible-based counseling and Bible-based discipline, and instead adopt a system requiring all elders to report any allegation of sexual abuse, even though this standard is significantly more liberal than the current laws concerning mandatory reporting. (Ex. B, Moreno Declaration, Ex. A thereto, Bowen Deposition, p. 138:6-15.) Mr. Bowen should be excluded as an expert witness in this matter.

ARGUMENT IV.

Mr. Bowen is Not Qualified as an Expert in this Matter

Evidence Code section 720(a) provides in part that "[a] person is qualified to testify as an expert if he has special knowledge, skill, experience, training, or education sufficient to qualify him as an expert on the subject to which his testimony relates." The competency of an expert is relative to the topic and fields of knowledge about which the person is asked to make a statement. (People v. Watson (2008) 43 Cal.4th 652, 692.) In some cases, an expert on the policy, organization, and procedures of a religious organization may be both relevant and helpful to the trier of fact. (See Stevens v. Roman Catholic Bishop of Fresno (1975) 49 Cal.App.3d 877, 882.)

However, using the analysis in Stevens as a standard, by his own admissions, Mr. Bowen lacks each and every qualification the Court should expect from an expert on comparative religion or on the practices and procedures of a hierarchical religious organization. For example, Mr. Bowen testified that he had:

- No degree or certificate in comparative religion. (Ex. B, Moreno Declaration, Ex. A thereto, Bowen Deposition, p. 39:13-15.)

- No degree in psychology. (Ex. B, Moreno Declaration, Ex. A thereto, Bowen Deposition, p. 131:1-2.)
- No college education. (Ex. B, Moreno Declaration, Ex. A thereto, Bowen Deposition, p. 38:13, 14.)
- No post baccalaureate degree. (Ex. B, Moreno Declaration, Ex. A thereto, Bowen Deposition, p. 38:15-17.)
- Never taught at college or university. (Ex. B, Moreno Declaration, Ex. A thereto, Bowen Deposition, p. 40:5-18.)
- Never published a peer-reviewed work of research. (Ex. B, Moreno Declaration, Ex. A thereto, Bowen Deposition, p. 30:1.)
- No membership in any academically recognized societies or organizations. (Ex. B, Moreno Declaration, Ex. A thereto, Bowen Deposition, p. 39:21-24.)
- No licenses granted by any government or professional organization, except the state Department of Motor Vehicles. (Ex. B, Moreno Declaration, Ex. A thereto, Bowen Deposition, p. 39:18-21.)
- Been disciplined and removed as an elder in the Jehovah's Witnesses faith on two occasions and he has been disfellowshipped (expelled) from and is no longer active in the Jehovah's Witnesses faith, his target religion of study, since August 2002. (Ex. B, Moreno Declaration, Ex. A thereto, Bowen Deposition, p. 55:3-9.)

According to Mr. Bowen's Declaration, he has specialized knowledge because he "lived the lifestyle of a child of Jehovah's Witness parents from age one to 43 (1957-2001)." (Declaration Re Expert Witnesses signed by Richard J. Simons, Esq., on March 26, 2012, Bowen Vita attached as Exhibit 1, ¶2.) He has held positions of privilege including serving as a pioneer, ministerial servant, and elder.

While he did enjoy some privileges, Mr. Bowen admitted that he never held any responsibility or position that was even remotely connected with religious policy making for the congregations or the worldwide organization, and he never served in any supervisory capacity at the branch office of the Jehovah's Witnesses faith. (Ex. B, Moreno Declaration, Ex. A thereto, Bowen Deposition, pp. 47:24-50:5.) In spite of admitting to having no knowledge of California's mandatory reporting statutes for clergy (Ex. B, Moreno Declaration, Ex. A thereto A, Bowen Deposition, pp. 94:9-12, 95:8-11), and having no training on investigating allegations of child sex abuse (Ex. B, Moreno Declaration, Ex. A thereto, Bowen Deposition, pp. 122:23-123:1), Mr. Bowen testified that he was better qualified than any member of the Governing Body of Jehovah's Witnesses (the highest ecclesiastical authority of the Jehovah's Witnesses religion), any member of the Branch Committee for Jehovah's Witnesses in the United States, any elder in the U.S. Service Department, all of the elders serving as traveling overseers of the Jehovah's Witnesses faith, and all 80,000 elders now serving in congregations in the United States, to testify about how the Jehovah's Witnesses faith handles allegations of child sex abuse. (Ex. B, Moreno Declaration, Ex. A thereto, Bowen Deposition, p. 54:1-9.)

For these reasons and other issues raised in following sections, Mr. Bowen is not qualified to give expert testimony and should be excluded from this matter.

ARGUMENT V.

Mr. Bowen's Testimony is Inadmissible because it is Based in Whole or in Part on the Unreliable Opinions or Statements of Other Persons, and His Conclusions are Unsound

"An expert opinion has no value if its basis is unsound." (In re Lockheed Litigation Cases (2004) 115 Cal.App.4th 558, 564.) The basis of Mr. Bowen's expert opinions and testimony are inadmissible because it is based in whole or in part on the unreliable opinions or statements of other persons and his conclusions are unsound. (Evidence Code section 801(b).) During depositions, Mr. Bowen has testified that his expertise and his opinions were based on undocumented conversations with unnamed Jehovah's Witnesses, the majority of whom Mr. Bowen estimated some 70 percent were former Jehovah's Witnesses. (Ex. B, Moreno Declaration, Ex. A thereto, Bowen Deposition, pp. 52:10-16, 64:12-13, 91:13-14.) At deposition and in his Declaration, he offered no other basis for his expertise and presented no evidence of any "specialized knowledge." Thus, the Court may reason that Mr. Bowen's opinions at trial will be wholly based "upon factors which are speculative, remote or conjectural, [and rightly conclude that Mr. Bowen's testimony] has no evidentiary value." (In re Lockheed Litigation Cases (2004) 115 Cal.App.4th 558, 563, citing Pacific Gas & Electric Co. v. Zuckerman (1987) 189 Cal.App.3d 1113, 1135.)

"[W]hen an expert's opinion amounts to nothing more than an expression of his or her beliefs on how a case should be decided, it does not aid the jurors, it supplants them" and is inadmissible. (Summers v. A.L. Gilbert Co. (1999) 69 Cal.App.4th 1155, 1183 (italics in original).

Mr. Bowen has admitted that he has no degrees in psychology or any other academic discipline (Ex. B, Moreno Declaration, Ex. A thereto, Bowen Deposition, p. 131:1-2), and that he denies being an expert in "investigation of allegations of child sexual abuse" (Ex. B, Moreno Declaration, Ex. A thereto, Bowen Deposition, p. 57:12-14), and also denies being an expert "on the standards of care for the detection of child molesters." (Ex. B, Moreno Declaration, Ex. A thereto, Bowen Deposition, pp. 57:24-58:6.) This is but a glimmer of the unqualified and unsupported opinions that Mr. Bowen renders in cases in which he is hired to testify as an alleged expert against Watchtower. As indicated, it is reasonable to conclude that at best, his opinions are based on assumptions and speculation and, at worst, he is testifying from his prejudice against the Jehovah's Witnesses faith. Expert opinions based on assumptions of fact that are without evidentiary support or that are based upon factors that are speculative or conjectural have no evidentiary value and do not assist the trier of fact. (Lopez v. City of Los Angeles (2011) 196 Cal.App.4th 675, 689.) Mr. Bowen's proposed testimony clearly meets these criteria, 'assumptions of fact without evidentiary value' that do "not assist the trier of fact." Therefore, Mr. Bowen's testimony should be excluded.

ARGUMENT VI.

Mr. Bowen's Testimony Would Create Substantial Danger of Undue Prejudice, of Confusing the Issues and of Misleading the Jury

It is generous to say that Mr. Bowen's testimony has minimal probative value. However, such value, if any, is far outweighed by the substantial risk of undue prejudice, the confusion of the issues, misleading of the jury, and the substantial waste of the Court's time.

Mr. Bowen is the founder of Silentlambs, Inc. (Ex. B, Moreno Declaration, Ex. A thereto, Bowen Deposition, p. 30:21, 22.) Mr. Bowen's declaration explained: "Since 2001, I have been National Director of Silentlambs, Inc., a child abuse awareness organization that assists Jehovah's Witness victims of abuse." (Declaration Re Expert Witnesses signed by Richard J. Simons, Esq., on March 26, 2012, Bowen Vita attached as Exhibit 1, ¶1.) In furtherance of these goals, Mr. Bowen has given up all other means of income and now pursues a full-time occupation as a consultant in civil cases against legal entities or individuals who are associated with the Jehovah's Witnesses faith. (Ex. B, Moreno Declaration, Ex. A thereto, Bowen Deposition, p. 41:2-16.)

In evaluating undue prejudice, the court may consider whether the evidence poses an intolerable "risk to the fairness of the proceedings or the reliability of the outcome." (People v. Waidla (2000) 22 Cal.4th 690, 724.) Mr. Bowen's self-published essay on child sexual abuse describes Watchtower as a pedophile paradise and explains that his work is to require Watchtower to rethink this issue, to change its policy and realize that protecting children is the highest priority in an Organization that wants to lead people to worship God. Even if Mr. Bowen's testimony was limited to the religious policies and procedures of Jehovah's Witnesses, his presence and his effort to interject his personal opinions about the correctness or the proper interpretation of the Jehovah's Witnesses' internal management of their congregations and the handling of wrongdoing by judicial committees of elders would inevitably taint this proceeding and the integrity of the judicial process.

CONCLUSION

For each of the independent reasons discussed above, Mr. Bowen's purported expert testimony will not assist a trier of fact. His complaints about the need for Watchtower to reform the policies and practices of the Jehovah's Witnesses religious organization are not relevant and not reliable testimony in determining any legitimate issue in this case. In reality, his testimony is being offered to contradict the testimony of active Jehovah's Witnesses concerning the definition of the religious beliefs and practices of the Jehovah's Witnesses faith. His testimony is barred by the United States and California constitutions and is thus constitutionally impermissible. It is also unreliable, biased, will confuse the issues and mislead the jury, and is extremely and unfairly prejudicial. Therefore, it is respectfully submitted that Mr. Bowen's purported expert testimony must be excluded.

JUDGE	Robert McGuiness
DEPT.	22

TRIAL DATE: May 21, 2012

TO PLAINTIFF JANE DOE and HER ATTORNEYS OF RECORD:

Defendant Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc. (hereinafter "Watchtower") and Defendant North Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses, Fremont, California (hereinafter "North Fremont Congregation") (collectively referred to as the "Church Defendants") move this Court in limine for an order excluding any and all witness testimony regarding the credibility of another witness or party. This motion is based upon the ground that such testimony is not permissible pursuant to Evidence Code sections 786, 787, and 790, and merely introduces collateral material that is unnecessary to a proper determination of any legitimate issue in the action.

The Church Defendants anticipate that Plaintiff Jane Doe ("Plaintiff") intends to solicit from witnesses, including experts, testimony supporting or vouching for the credibility of Plaintiff. By way of example, among others, the Church Defendants anticipate Plaintiff will submit or elicit expert testimony that Plaintiff's "delayed report" of her alleged abuse by Defendant Kendrick is credible or believable. Evidence Code section 786 expressly states that such character evidence "is inadmissible to . . . support the credibility of a witness." Similarly, Evidence Code section 787 states that evidence of specific instances of conduct relevant only to prove a character trait "is inadmissible to . . . support the credibility of a witness." Evidence of good character is only admissible if an opposing party first "opened the door" by attacking the witness's credibility. (Evidence Code section 790; People v. Sweeney (1960) 55 Cal.2d 27, 38-39 (trial court properly omitted evidence of party's credibility where the opposing party had not offered any evidence challenging his credibility).) Any such evidence should also be excluded under Evidence Code section 352 because it is more prejudicial than probative, would confuse the issues, and mislead the jury.

Plaintiff, her witnesses, and her experts must all abide by the Evidence Code sections cited above and refrain from offering any testimony that in any way supports Plaintiff's credibility as a witness. To delve into a witness's credibility will create a side issue that unnecessarily distracts and misleads the jury, confuses the issues, and does not help in resolving the issues in the action. Therefore, the Church Defendants request an order excluding any and all witness testimony regarding the credibility of another witness or party. This order is necessary to prevent any such testimony from being solicited and to prevent a situation where the Court and parties will be unable to "unring the bell."

ASSIGNED FOR ALL PURPOSES TO JUDGE ROBERT McGUINESS, DEPARTMENT 22

PLAINTIFF'S MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES IN OPPOSITION TO DEFENDANTS' MOTION IN LIMINE NO. 1 IN RE JONATHAN KENDRICK

Trial Date: 5/21/2012

INTRODUCTION

Defendants' Motion in Limine No. 1 seeks to exclude conduct of Jonathan Kendrick after 1997; his felony conviction for sexual abuse of a child in 2004; and any sexual abuse of plaintiff by Kendrick other than on property owned by the Church defendants.

All of the evidence is relevant and admissible, and the Motion should be denied in its entirety.

I. KENDRICK'S PRIOR AND SUBSEQUENT SEXUAL CONDUCT WITH CHILDREN AND WITHIN JEHOVAH'S WITNESSES IS ADMISSIBLE EVIDENCE.

Defendant Jonathan Kendrick committed his sexual abuse of Plaintiff Jane Doe from 1994 to 1996 or 1997. In 1993, Defendant Kendrick molested his stepdaughter, for which he was convicted of sexual battery under Penal Code section 243.4(d), a misdemeanor. Afterwards, he carried on a sexual affair with Claudia Francis, wife of Elder Rodney Francis. He bought a black bra for a 10-year-old member of the Fremont Congregation named Brianna. In 2003, after transferring to the Oakley Congregation and marrying Congregation member Linda Hood, Kendrick molested her 8-year-old granddaughter, for which he was convicted of two felony counts of Penal Code section 288(a). During the investigation of that case, the Contra Costa Sheriff's Department received computer downloads from Kendrick's computer that contained pornographic videos of young looking girls. Evidence of these prior, contemporaneous, and subsequent acts is admissible is relevant and probative evidence on the issues of Kendrick's intent, absence of accident, and common plan.

An exception to the general prohibition on admissibility of character evidence exists when the evidence shows a person committed a crime, civil wrong, or other act relevant to prove any fact other than the person's disposition to commit the conduct at issue. (Cal. Evid. Code § 1101(b)) Evidence of these other acts may be properly admitted with a limiting instruction to show "motive, opportunity, intent, preparation, plan, knowledge, identity, absence of mistake or accident." (Ibid.) This rule applies to civil actions as well as criminal prosecutions, and to uncharged acts as well as convictions. (Ghadrdan v. Gorabi (2010) 182 Cal. App. 4th 416, 420.) It is equally applicable to prior and subsequent conduct. (People v. Garcia (2001) 89 Cal.App.4th 1321, 1335; also see People v. Balcom (1994) 7 Cal.4th 414, 425-26.)

Defendants have argued to this Court, and its Elders have testified in deposition and in Declarations filed in this case, that the 1993 incident consisted only of Kendrick "briefly and inadvertently touching his stepdaughter's breast over the clothing." Although this version is disputed, Elder Gary Abrahamson testified that Kendrick "mentioned that he had inadvertently or perhaps he used the word 'accidentally' touched the breast of Andrea while she was asleep. And that it was over the clothing." (Abrahamson Depo., Ex. 1, 124:17-21.) Defendants have argued to the Court they "had no notice of child abuse by Kendrick" because there no "confirmed allegation of child molestation." They claim the 1993 occurrence was unintentional, and an accident, and therefore did not provide the requisite notice to hold them liable for Plaintiff's molestation. Kendrick's 2003 molestation of his step-granddaughter, as proven by the testimony of Sgt. Baldwin and the Court record of his felony conviction, his adulterous conduct with Claudia Francis, and his identifiable "grooming" activity with Brianna, are all admissible to prove intent and absence of accident in groping his stepdaughter's breast. (Evid. Code § 1101(b).)

The admissibility of prior and subsequent acts of sexual abuse under section 1101(b) in child molestation cases to refute a claim of accidental touching is well-established. In People v. Branch (2001) 91 Cal.App.4th 274, 281, the defendant maintained "if he ever touched [the victim], it was unintentional." The Court of Appeal held that evidence of the defendant's inappropriate touching of another girl was properly admitted to prove intent under 1101(b), and that Evidence Code 352 did not prohibit introduction of that evidence. (91 Cal. App. 4th at 281-2) In People v. Escudero (2010) 183 Cal.App.4th 302, 305, the Court of Appeal found that evidence of the defendant's sex crimes against adult women was admissible as highly probative of his intent to touch the minor victim for sexual gratification, dispelling the defendant's contention that the touching was the result of accident or mistake, even though the victims were not close in age. (Id. at p. 306.) The court also ruled that admission of testimony about his molestation of teenage girls was also proper to prove intent and absence of mistake. (ibid.)

The California Supreme Court has recognized that evidence a defendant possessed sexual images is also admissible to show intent to commit molestation. (People v. Page (2008) 44 Cal. 4th 1, 40.) An example is People v. Memro (1995) 11 Cal.4th 786, 865, in which the court upheld the admission of magazines and photographs possessed by the defendant that "yielded evidence from which the jury could infer that he had a sexual attraction to young boys and intended to act on that attraction." That holding applies to the evidence in this case.

Expert Dr. Anna Salter, Ph.D., will testify as she did in deposition that Kendrick was able to groom his stepdaughter by becoming part of her family and moving into her home. He married Evelyn Kendrick, a Jehovah's Witness, and gained access to her young daughter. Kendrick repeated this conduct with Candace, Claudia Francis, and Amy in 2003.

Plaintiff's parents were devoted members of the Fremont Congregation and brought Plaintiff to meetings, where Kendrick began the abuse. He continued to ingratiate himself with Plaintiff's family by spending time at their home and going on excursions with them. He insinuated himself into the family to the point he was able to conduct field service with Plaintiff and take her to his home after meetings where he sexually assaulted her. Kendrick's abuse of Plaintiff fit squarely into his ongoing plan and design of finding, grooming, and exploiting victims through his position in the Jehovah's Witnesses community.

Kendrick continued to execute his plan by moving into the home of Fremont Congregation Elder Rodney Francis and forming an adulterous sexual relationship with Mr. Francis' wife, Claudia. As Claudia Francis testified, "he preyed on me . . . he was kind of like in the family." As the Court of Appeal in Escudero explained in upholding admission under 1101(b) of sexual conduct by the perpetrator with an adult woman, "Persons with deviant sexual urges do not always limit their sex crimes to victims of the same age group." (183 Cal. App. 4th at 311) Kendrick's ingratiation into the Francis family is consistent with his common plan, design, method, and scheme to prey on vulnerable victims within the intimate Jehovah's Witnesses congregation to accomplish sexual abuse.

It was also during the time he was taking advantage of Claudia Francis that Kendrick gained access to another young female member of the Fremont Congregation, a 10-year-old named Brianna, whom he took on a shopping trip with Claudia Francis' son and for whom he bought a black bra. By using his position as a "member in good standing" in the Fremont Congregation "as a way to get to know kids . . . and see kids outside church services," he was able to groom young Brianna as he groomed his stepdaughter, Claudia Francis, and Plaintiff.

When Kendrick left the Francis home, he joined the Oakley Congregation, and married into another devoted Jehovah's Witnesses family, gaining access to his new wife's young granddaughter, whom he molested in 2003 under circumstances similar to his molestation of his stepdaughter. As Dr. Salter testified, Kendrick's scheme of grooming included moving in with the families of his victims and doing activities with them. As with his stepdaughter and Claudia Francis, he became part of the household. And as with all his victims, Kendrick used his membership in good standing with the Jehovah's Witnesses Congregation to gain the trust and complacently of devout families to accomplish his sexual abuse. Evidence relating to Kendrick's 2003 molestation of his step-granddaughter is immensely probative to show the common plan, pattern, scheme, and method Kendrick used to accomplish his sexual abuse of Plaintiff. It is independently admissible in this case for that purpose under section 1101(b).

Defendant cites and relies upon Santillan v. Roman Catholic Bishop of Fresno (2012) 202 Cal.App.4th 708. However, in Santillan, "there is no dispute that Herdegen [the perpetrator] sexually abused the Santillans when they were boys attending the Wasco Parish School." (202 Cal.App.4th at 712) The issue in Santillan was notice, and no 1101b issue was before the Court. The same notice issue was the subject of Doe v. City of Los Angeles (2007) 42 Cal.4th 531, which again is not an Evidence Code §1101b case.

Defendants cite People v. Ewoldt (1994) 7 Cal.4th 380, but fail to mention that in that case uncharged sexual misconduct of the perpetrator was held to be admissible under §1101b. The Supreme Court in Ewoldt not only upheld the admissibility of uncharged criminal conduct involving the sexual abuse of another child under §1101, but also further held "that the trial court was not required to exclude this evidence on the ground that its prejudicial effect outweighed its probative value under Evidence Code §352." (7 Cal.4th at 386-7)

II. THE "PROPERTY RULE" IS INAPPLICABLE IN THIS CASE.

Defendants further argue that only conduct by Kendrick at the Kingdom Hall is admissible in this case. They rely solely on Eric J. v. Betty M. (1999) 76 Cal.App.4th 715. Eric J. held that family members have no liability under either negligence or premises liability for their adult son's molestation of his girlfriend's son. However, Eric J. has been distinguished as not applicable to institutional defendants who sponsor or supervise activities involving children. (Juarez v. Boy Scouts of America, Inc. (2000) 81 Cal.App.4th 377 at 410-11)

In addition, the nature and extent of plaintiff's abuse is relevant to her damages. Defendants' argument that, once having introduced a known sexual abuser into the plaintiff's family and life through their mutual association in the Congregation, that there is a bright line that stops responsibility for his sexual abuse of plaintiff at the Kingdom Hall door, is without legal authority and would improperly exclude relevant evidence.

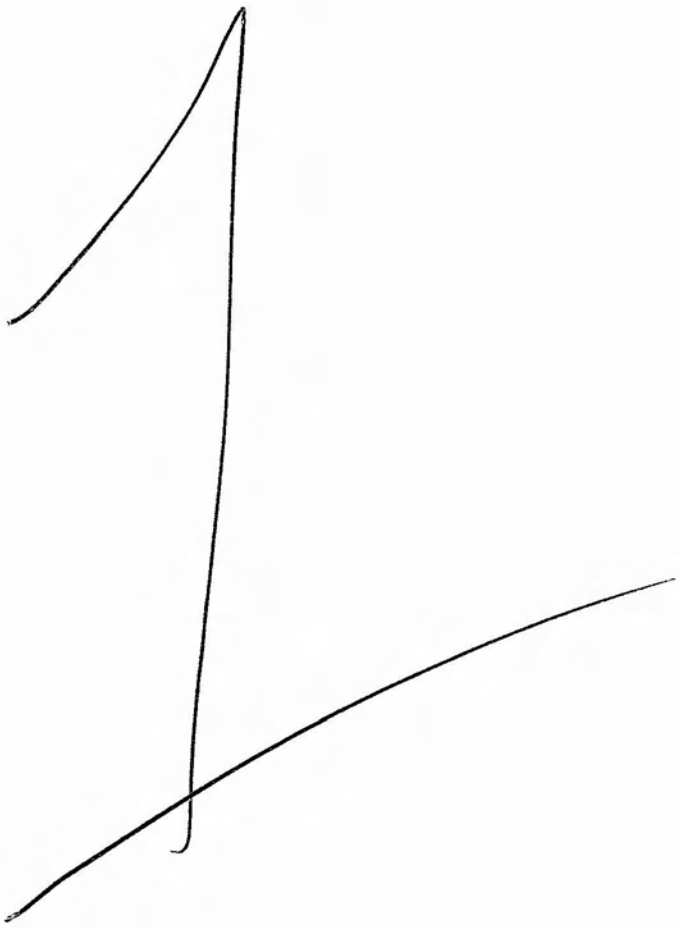
III. THE EVIDENCE CONCERNING KENDRICK MAY BE ADMISSIBLE FOR OTHER PURPOSES AS WELL.

The Watchtower's policies and procedures of preventing child sexual abuse within its Congregations are at issue in this case. The defendants deny that there is any problem with their policies. The policy has been the same from 1989 to the present time, as is admitted by all of the Watchtower agents in their depositions. Defendants' denial that there is any problem with their policies is impeached by the fact that Kendrick continued to abuse within the Jehovah's Witnesses Congregations and families for more than a decade after he was identified and confirmed as a child sex offender.

The question of duty in this case, and the reasonableness of defendants' conduct, also involves evidence of the foreseeability of future harm. There will be evidence that defendants not only knew that offenders were likely to offend again, but in this case, that actually occurred. The evidence of Kendrick's subsequent conduct is admissible to demonstrate "deliberate indifference", a requisite element of the malice equation for purposes of punitive damages.



CONCLUSION

There are multiple reasons why the evidence of Mr. Kendrick's sexual misconduct and abuse of other children is admissible, both prior to and subsequent to, his abuse of plaintiff. This Motion is properly denied.

ASSIGNED FOR ALL PURPOSES TO JUDGE ROBERT McGUINESS, DEPARTMENT 22

PLAINTIFF'S MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES IN OPPOSITION TO DEFENDANTS' MOTION IN LIMINE NO. 2 IN RE KATHLEEN CONTI

Trial Date: 5/21/2012

Kathleen Conti, plaintiff's mother, was sexually abused as a teenage girl in Jehovah's Witnesses. Her abuser was an Elder's son. Kathleen Conti believed and told her daughter that she was disfellowshipped for accusing the Elder's son of the molestation, although other victims also came forward.

Defendants' Motion in Limine No. 2 seeks to exclude any evidence that Ms. Conti's abuse was by a Jehovah's Witness Congregation member. However, the Motion should be denied, as the evidence is relevant to a number of factual issues in the case.

Defendants have questioned whether or not plaintiff Candace Conti is truthful in her allegation because she did not immediately report the sexual abuse to the Jehovah's Witnesses or to her parents. The evidence that Candace believed that, if she reported the abuse by Kendrick to Jehovah's Witnesses, she would be disfellowshipped like her mother, is relevant to explain part of her failure to disclose. Candace's parents' marriage had disintegrated, the Jehovah's Witnesses functioned much as her "family", and she was afraid that if she was disfellowshipped she would have no one to look after her. Her father, a very devout Jehovah's Witness to this day, would certainly have shunned her if she was disfellowshipped, and has in fact had no relationship with his daughter from the time that she was in high school because of her withdrawal from Jehovah's Witnesses. At the time, as plaintiff's counselor Laura Fraser testified in her videotaped deposition, plaintiff was trying to keep a relationship with her parents. The threat of being disfellowshipped for reporting childhood sexual abuse was a strong factor in why she did not come forward, and that fear was based on her understanding of her mother's experience.

In addition, the existence of Ms. Conti's prior reported childhood sexual abuse within a Congregation provides another piece of evidence that the risk of childhood sexual abuse within the Congregations was known to defendants, and that defendants' policies and procedures in 1995 were inadequate to address that known risk.

Lastly, defendants have questioned the motive of Candace Conti in bringing this lawsuit. Part of her motive, as stated to 2 Southern California Congregation Elders in 2009 when she first reported her abuse to Watchtower, and before any lawyers or lawsuit were involved, was to change the policy of protecting offenders while putting children at risk. Candace's motivation for this lawsuit arises as much from her mother's experience as well as her own, and is stronger by their common experience. Defendants cannot be allowed to attack the plaintiff for bringing this lawsuit, and then to exclude evidence of the reasons behind her case.

For all of these reasons, the testimony of Kathleen Conti is admissible and probative.

PLAINTIFF'S MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES IN OPPOSITION TO DEFENDANTS' MOTION IN LIMINE NO. 3 IN RE TESTIMONY OF EVELYN KENDRICK

Trial Date: 5/21/2012

Evelyn Kendrick is the former spouse of perpetrator Jonathan Kendrick, and the mother of Kendrick's first known victim, Andrea. Evelyn Kendrick was at a meeting with Andrea, Jonathan Kendrick, and Elders Abrahamson and Clarke, in which Andrea reported her sexual abuse by Jonathan Kendrick to the Elders.

This Motion in Limine seeks to preclude Evelyn Kendrick's testimony as to what was reported to the Elders by Andrea concerning her abuse by Kendrick. The objection is that the testimony of Evelyn Kendrick is hearsay. This same objection has previously been raised, and overruled, at the time of the hearing on plaintiff's Motion to Amend her Complaint to allege a claim for punitive damages. The Court's ruling correctly held that the testimony of Ms. Kendrick as to what was said by Andrea to the Elders, in her presence, was "offered as evidence that Watchtower was on notice, not for truth of the matter asserted". (Order, May 3rd)

The testimony also impeaches the testimony of Elders Abrahamson and Clarke, who deny they were told any skin to skin contact occurred, or that any drugs were involved.

For these reasons, the Motion in Limine should be denied.

PLAINTIFF'S MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES IN OPPOSITION TO DEFENDANTS' MOTION IN LIMINE NO. 5 RE DISFELLOWSHIPPING

Trial Date: 5/21/2012

Defendants argue that their decision not to "Disfellowship" Jonathan Kendrick, once he had been found to have sexually abused a child, is a decision protected by the First Amendment, and the decision itself cannot be litigated in a secular civil court setting. Plaintiff does not disagree with this premise.

However, defendants argue from that agreed premise that evidence that the sanction of Disfellowshipping Kendrick was available as a tool to prevent his further sexual abuse of children in the Congregation is inadmissible. This conclusion is not agreed to.

Plaintiff's experts have opined that, once the defendants were on notice of the molestation of a child by defendant Kendrick, they had an obligation to prevent future molestations of children within the Congregation. The evidence will show that there were a number of ways in which plaintiff could have been protected, including warning the Congregation that Mr. Kendrick had previously sexually molested a child, supervising him so that he would not have access to children or be allowed to participate in activities with them, or Disfellowshipping him so that all members of the Congregation, including children, would shun him. The evidence that the remedy of Disfellowshipping was available as a tool is not the same as reevaluating whether or not Mr. Kendrick should have been Disfellowshipped. It merely shows that there was a tool available if Watchtower instructed the Elders to use it. However, once Watchtower decided that Disfellowshipping was not appropriate, a decision which is defendants' and defendants' alone to make under the First Amendment, it is incumbent upon the defendants to take other steps to protect children from sexual abuse by an identified child molester.

The availability of Disfellowshipping as a tool to protect children from identified child sexual abusers is admissible into evidence. The defendants' decision not to use that tool is also admissible, but not subject to relitigation. However, having chosen to reject the tool of Disfellowshipping, the secular standard of care that requires defendants then take alternative actions to protect children from Kendrick is admissible.

Because defendants' Motion in Limine blurs the distinctions between all of these evidentiary points and arguments, and instead lumps all issues into one argument under which failure to protect children from sexual abuse by identified molesters within the Congregations is protected by the First Amendment; the Motion in Limine must be denied.

PLAINTIFF'S MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES IN OPPOSITION TO DEFENDANTS' MOTION IN LIMINE NO. 6 RE: CLERGY MALPRACTICE

Trial Date: 5/21/2012

Defendants' Motion in Limine No. 6 seeks to exclude all evidence as to the manner in which defendants and their agents, the Fremont Elders, "investigated or otherwise handled the November, 1993 allegation of child abuse against individual defendant Jonathan Kendrick." Defendants claim such evidence is inadmissible because of the well recognized prohibition on "clergy malpractice" cases.

Defendants' Motion is difficult to follow, as this is not a clergy malpractice case. Defendants correctly set forth that California does not recognize clergy malpractice. However, the two cases cited for that proposition do not involve issues of childhood sexual abuse. In Nally v. Grace Community Church of the Valley (1988) 47 Cal.3d 278, the parents of a deceased adult brought a wrongful death case, claiming the clergy member who counseled the decedent should have referred him to a psychiatrist for depression. In Richelle L. v. Roman Catholic Archbishop (2003) 106 Cal.App.4th 257, a clergy member entered into a consensual sexual affair with an adult congregation member who he was counseling. Neither case has any relationship to issues involving childhood sexual abuse by a previously identified offender.

Nor are the policies and procedures involving sexual abuse of children and the prevention of that outrage protected by the First Amendment. None of the many, many cases cited by defendants as "foreign authorities" discuss or refer to childhood sexual abuse arising from institutional activities. The subject of childhood sexual abuse prevention is not "a matter which concerns theological controversy". (Defs.' MIL 6, 4:27). Defendants have not yet argued, or presented any evidence in discovery or expert testimony, that sexual abuse of children is an approved religious practice under Jehovah's Witnesses theological viewpoint. The two cases most relied upon by defendants in their Motion are Watson v. Jones (1871) 80 U.S.679, a dispute between two groups within a church over the use of property, and Serbian Eastern Orthodox Diocese v. Milivojevich (1976) 426 U.S.696, involving a church reorganization and a Bishop's loss of title.

Given the voluminous amount of "foreign authorities" and California cases presented by defendants in their pre-trial Motions, and throughout the case, if there was a First Amendment case holding that childhood sexual abuse is protected by the First Amendment, the Court and counsel would long have been aware of it.

PLAINTIFF'S MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES IN OPPOSITION TO DEFENDANTS' MOTION IN LIMINE NO. 7 IN RE: LAW ENFORCEMENT WITNESSES

Trial Date: 5/21/2012

INTRODUCTION

Defendants move to exclude the testimony of Carl Lewis, a retained expert in child sexual abuse investigation; and non-retained experts Sgt. Jeffrey Baldwin, who investigated Kendrick in the 2003 Contra Costa County case that resulted in his conviction for felony P.C. 288, and Retired Officer Davila of the Fremont Police Dept., who investigated Kendrick for the 1994 Andrea charge that resulted in a conviction for P.C. 243.4(d), sexual battery.

Some of the arguments concerning these witnesses are moot, as Plaintiff will not be asking questions of these witnesses in many of the areas to which an anticipatory objection is made in limine. However, all three have relevant and admissible testimony that is properly elicited for the jury's consideration.

I. CARL LEWIS HAS ADMISSIBLE EXPERT TESTIMONY ON MULTIPLE MATTERS AT ISSUE.

Mr. Lewis is an experienced professional investigator who has specialized in child abuse cases for both a police department and the Santa Clara District Attorney's Office. He will offer opinions on Child Sexual Abuse Accommodation Syndrome; on the adequacy of the Elders' investigation of Kendrick in 1993; on the nature and pattern of grooming behavior exhibited by Kendrick; and on the comparative investigatory ability of law enforcement to investigate Kendrick. Contrary to the concerns of Defendants, Mr. Lewis will not testify as to his opinion of the Defendants' duty; will not testify as to whether or not Plaintiff's allegations against Kendrick are "true", and will not give an opinion as to whether Plaintiff herself suffers from CSAAS.

Mr. Lewis testified in deposition that he would offer opinions as to CSAAS and delayed disclosures. (Depo Lewis, Ex. 1 6:10-15) Defendants argue he is not qualified by experience and is precluded by case law from giving such opinions. (Def. MPA 4:13-5:10). The first case cited is called P. v. Gruber, an unpublished opinion that is cited in violation of C.R.C. 8.1115(a). Counsel should be admonished to refrain from such unethical conduct in the future. The second case cited is People v. Bowker (1988), 203 Cal. App. 3d 385. This 25 year old case is no longer up to date on the question of the use of CSAAS or other victim response expert testimony. (People v. Brown (2004) 33 Cal. 4th 892, 905-7) The Concurring opinion in Bowker is the current analysis. As stated in Brown, the testimony of victim accommodation is not admissible to show the testimony given is true, but is admissible where doubt has been cast on the victim's veracity to rehabilitate their credibility. This would include in Candace Conti's case the opinion that delayed reporting is not inconsistent with on who is abused, that recantations are also consistent with abuse victims (Bowker, supra., 203 Cal. App. 3d at 393-4), and that inconsistent recollections of the nature or timing of the abuse are not inconsistent with having been molested.

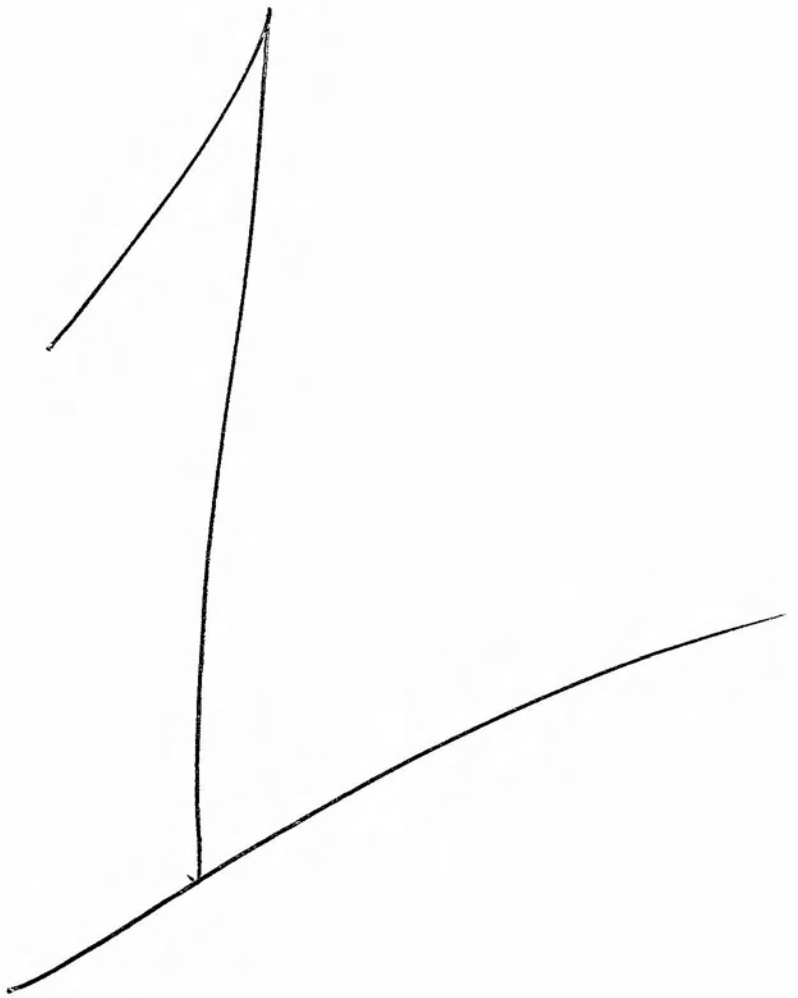
Mr. Lewis' testimony is not cumulative with Dr. Anna Salter, although both incorporate CSAAS into their opinions. Dr. Salter is a Psychologist who has trained youth and religious organizations for over 30 years in child sexual abuse prevention, and is testifying as to the standards of care for organizations like Defendants in 1993-5 with regard to child sexual abuse issues. Part of the basis for

Dr. Salter's opinion that Defendants violated standards of care in their response to Kendrick and in their lack of adequate training and education in child sexual abuse prevention rests on the knowledge from CSAAS that these events often go unreported and unrecognized. Mr. Lewis, on the other hand, is testifying as to CSAAS itself, and the features which are not inconsistent with actual molestation that are present in this case. Dr. Ponton, a UCSF Psychiatrist who has evaluated Plaintiff for damages, also mentions CSAAS in her testimony as part of the experience, training, and body of knowledge she applied in her opinions that Plaintiff suffers from Post-Traumatic Stress Syndrome and Depression secondary to having been sexually based as a child. None of these opinions are cumulative, as each is a separate analysis of a different aspect of the case.

A quick reading of his summary of opinions at deposition shows Mr. Lewis is neither trespassing on the Court's role nor ranging out of his field. Defendants chose to investigate Mr. Kendrick themselves, according to Watchtower policy. In undertaking to investigate, they chose not to involve law enforcement. The fact that local law enforcement was specially trained and experienced in such investigations is a relevant factor in considering whether or not the Elders and Watchtower acted in a reasonable manner in failing to involve the Police in looking into Kendrick. (Lewis Depo. Ex 1 7:7-9:6)

The Watchtower Elders also chose to protect the children of the Congregation from Kendrick by "supervising" him. They failed to discover or recognize numerous acts of "Grooming Behavior", which is relevant both to the sufficiency of the education and training programs of Watchtower and to the adequacy of their supervision of Kendrick. Lewis' testimony is relevant to these issues. (Depo. 49:20-53:18)

II. THE TESTIMONY OF BALDWIN AND DAVILLA IS RELEVANT AND ADMISSIBLE.



Sgt. Baldwin and Officer Davila will not be asked the type of opinion testimony that Defendants' speculate about in their Motion. These non-retained experts can, however, testify to the work they did and investigative information they developed and obtained in 1994 and 2003, which resulted in separate convictions of Kendrick for child sexual abuse crimes. They are not presented as experts in "Comparative Religions or Church Organization". (Def. MPA 5:18-19). Since Sgt. Baldwin was deposed, and Defendants do not present any of his actual deposition testimony as objectionable in this Motion, Plaintiff is uncertain why he is even included.

activities for protecting the public; the disclosure process of the various minor children involved in this case.

Q All right.

A The response of the elders, the defendants in this case, to allegations brought to their attention.

Q Okay. Anything else?

A The activities of Kendrick in relation to his grooming behavior and activities towards children.

Q Okay. You've given me four topics. Any others that you've been asked to render opinions on in this case?

A Just to be clear, included in the reactions or the disclosure process of the complaining witnesses would be the child sexual abuse accommodation syndrome.

Q And which of the four is that coming under, the disclosure process?

A Yes.

Q Any other topics or areas that you've been asked to render opinions on in this case?

A No. And those are general. What I just outlined are very general topics.

Q Okay. It's fair to say those four are the general topics you've been asked to opine on?

A Yes.

Q Okay. Let's start with the first topic, then.

As my notes reflect, it's the conduct of law enforcement in child sex abuse investigations and the effect on the public; is that correct?

A No. Their -- their actions to protect the public, based on child sexual abuse investigations.

Q And what opinions do you have on that topic?

A That law enforcement, particularly at the time these actions were reported, was in a very good position to conduct a thorough, objective criminal investigation into the reported sexual abusive activities of Kendrick and could have and likely would have sought a criminal complaint to be filed against him based on the initial allegations that we're aware of.

Q And by "law enforcement," what agencies specifically are you referring to in this case?

A The police department and the district attorney's office.

Q Which police department?

A Fremont.

Q And what time frame are we talking about that law enforcement was in a good position to conduct an investigation in this case?

A The late '80s through the present day.

Q So what information was available in the late '80s about Mr. Kendrick that you're aware of?

A Well, I'm describing the period of time that law enforcement was prepared to deal with that; had become better equipped to address the issue of child sexual abuse.

Q So you're not talking about Mr. Kendrick specifically, then; you're talking about law enforcement generically during that time frame.

A That's right.

Q So with respect to this first topic on the conduct of law enforcement being in a good position to conduct an investigation and actions it could take to protect the public, do you have any specifics with respect to Mr. Kendrick at all with respect to that opinion?

A No. As I said, this was a general topic and the fact that law enforcement, in my opinion, is in the best position to deal with allegations of the sexual abuse of children; not just for resolving a current criminal case, but also for providing protection to the public as a result of that investigation.

Q So, again, now -- and the reason I ask this, you made a specific point that these topics you identified were general.

A Yes.

Q But I want to then delve into the specifics with respect to this first topic of law enforcement being in a good position.

Again, you have nothing specific regarding Jonathan Kendrick or Candace Conti in that opinion; is that correct?

A Correct.

Q When was Jonathan Kendrick first reported to the police for any incident of child sexual abuse?

A I would have no way of knowing that.

Q So you have -- as you sit here today, you have no way of knowing that?

A I don't know whether he was reported prior to what brings us here today or not.

Q You haven't reviewed any police records in that regard; is that correct?

A Oh, I have. I've -- I've reviewed what has been provided to me, which goes back to '93, but if there was -- I don't know what Mr. Kendrick's activities were before then.

Q Okay. But you just told me you don't know when any report was made to the police concerning Mr. Kendrick.

Did I understand you correctly?

A No, I --

MR. SIMONS: The first report. Your question

A I would have -- I would have expected to see a swift, specific response with particular direction about what was to be done with Kendrick or ...

Q Anything else?

A No.

Q And who is it within the Watchtower New York organization that should have given that swift, specific response?

A Well, that's difficult to say because the communications are signed by the -- by the organization.

I don't know that there's an individual named.

Q Well, what about which department in the U.S. Branch should have handled that?

A Because I don't know the departments within the organization, I couldn't tell you.

Q Any other criticism you have or opinions you have about what Watchtower New York should have done in this situation with Jonathan Kendrick?

A No.

Q Do you have any other opinions that we haven't talked about with respect to this third topic dealing with the response of the elders or of the Jehovah's Witnesses hierarchy?

A No.

Q And the fourth topic, my notes reflect that it deals with the activities of Kendrick relative to grooming behavior.

Why don't you restate that topic for me, and then I'll ask some follow-up questions.

A Certainly.

Based on my reading of the materials provided to me, Kendrick took advantage of a number of situations involving young children allowing him to sexually molest them.

He would isolate them. He would groom them by giving them special treatment, spending lots of time with them, paying attention to them, giving gifts, including inappropriate gifts, such as purchasing bras for young girls. And that covers the number of children who were named as reported victims in this case.

Coupled with the fact that the additional information I've seen about reports that Kendrick had been seen in a photograph in his underwear accompanied by a couple of children not related to him in his underwear and the manner in which he responded when that picture was reportedly found.

I've also been made aware that there was pornography found on the computer of Kendrick. Pornography and the image files I've seen are consistent with people who have an unnatural and abnormal interest in children.

Q Anything else with respect to the additional information that you've learned about Kendrick?

A His conviction for molesting Amy Hood; the reported filing of a criminal complaint against him by Alameda County in 1994, although I haven't seen court records regarding that.

Q Any other additional information that you've learned about Kendrick before I go back over it?

A No.

Q Okay. With respect to the photo with children not related to him, what are you referring to there?

A I read of an incident in which such a photograph was found in some belongings of Kendrick's and that when it was found, he dismissed it. But it was something that -- that stuck in the mind of the person who found it and would stick in my mind as something significant.

Q Did you see that photo?

A No.

Q And when you mentioned Kendrick's response to it, you said "he dismissed it."

Anything else about his response?

A No.

Q And you mentioned pornography that was found on his computer.

A Yes.

Q When was that found on his computer?

A I believe it was 2003.

Q That was during the Amy Hood investigation?

A Yes.

Q What's your understanding as to when Candace Conti was abused by Kendrick?

A 1996 and '97.

Q Do you have any information that Kendrick viewed pornography prior to 2003?

A No.

Q And when you mentioned the "image files" that you've seen, are you referring to the pornography?

A Yes.

Q And where did you see those image files?

A At Mr. Simons' office, Simons' office.

Q He has pornography on his computer?

A No.

Q I'm just kidding. I'm just kidding.

A And counsel will tell you that I made sure that that was done in a proper way.

Q So they wouldn't end up on his computer, correct?

A Nor would I.

Q So the image files you saw, were they from the police records from the 2003 investigation?

A Yes.

Q And then you mentioned the conviction for Amy Hood; that Jonathan Kendrick was convicted for molesting Amy Hood in roughly 2003; is that correct?

A Yes.

Q And then you said there was a criminal complaint filed in '94.

Was that concerning the Andrea incident?

A Yes.

Q But you haven't seen any conviction papers or any court papers in that regard?

A Correct.

Q Any other opinions that you're going to testify to at trial regarding Kendrick taking advantage of the situation that you called the "grooming behavior"?

A No.

Q Okay. Why don't you take a look at Exhibit 3. And the only question I'm going to ask you: Is that a current C.V. of yours?

A Yes.

Q And you looked at it very quickly. How can you be sure?

A The date in the lower left-hand corner. I

PLAINTIFF'S MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES IN OPPOSITION TO DEFENDANTS' MOTION IN LIMINE NO. 8 IN RE WILLIAM BOWEN

Trial Date: 5/21/2012

Defendants have filed a Motion in Limine to exclude the testimony of one of plaintiff's expert witnesses, William Bowen, on the grounds that Mr. Bowen's testimony violates the First Amendment and Evidence Code §789.

Mr. Bowen previously submitted a Declaration in Support of Plaintiff's Motion to Amend her Complaint to add a claim for punitive damages. A copy of the Declaration is attached as Ex. 1 to this Opposition, as is the portion of Plaintiff's Expert Witness Declaration regarding Mr. Bowen (Ex. 2).

Mr. Bowen does not testify as to his religious belief or lack thereof, or anyone else's. His testimony is not offered to attack or support the credibility of a witness based upon the religious belief or lack thereof. Defendants' first argument as to Mr. Bowen, that his testimony violates Evidence Code §789, has no applicability to this case.

Mr. Bowen further does not testify as to any matter that violates the First Amendment. The substance of his Declaration is the organizational structure and policies with regard to sexual abuse of children for Jehovah's Witnesses. None of the Declaration intrudes upon the First Amendment, as none of it involves a theocratic or religious doctrine debate. Plaintiff acknowledges that Mr. Bowen and the Jehovah's Witnesses organizations have an extremely hostile relationship, and some of that mutual hostility may be permissible evidence on the issue of his bias. However, it does not disqualify him as a witness.

The Court previously, at the time of the submission of Mr. Bowen's Declaration, ruled upon his evidence, and held that, to the extent it was based on personal knowledge, it was admissible. (Order, May 3rd) The Court did rule that the portion of the Declaration at Page 5, Lines 7 through 9, (Para. 11), stating the underlying purpose of the policies and procedures on sexual abuse that are at issue in this case are "purely secular and financial", is inadmissible, and Plaintiff will follow that ruling. However, that does not render the balance of his testimony inadmissible.

I, WILLIAM H. BOWEN, hereby declare:

1. I was an active member of the Jehovah's Witnesses Organization until age 43. I served at the Organization's home office in Brooklyn, New York from 1977 to 1979. I served as a Pioneer (full time missionary) from 1974 to 1976 and 1979 to 1981. I was appointed with the approval of the Governing Body of Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc. to be a Ministerial Servant in 1979, and to be an Elder in 1985. These positions are of administrative responsibility within Jehovah's Witnesses. Jehovah's Witnesses are viewed as 'lay ministers' and do not have any formal clergy or pastors and have no paid full time employees in Congregations or administration. I served as an Elder from 1985 to 1992 and again from 1994 to 2001. I served as Presiding Overseer,(Coordinator) a position equivalent to administrative coordinator, for two congregations in early 1990's and late 1990's. I served as a Theocratic Ministry School Overseer from 1985 to 1989, Secretary from 1990-1991 and 1994-1998, Watchtower Overseer from 1995-1998, Book Study Overseer during the duration I was an elder, and many other managerial positions within the congregation. I have taught and participated in Elder training and instruction in the procedures and policies of Jehovah's Witnesses in the KINGDOM MINISTRY SCHOOLS and Pioneer Schools. I have worked as an overseer or assistant at the convention level and also worked in the Administration Office at District Conventions represented by Jehovah's Witnesses world headquarters in New York State, and in many branches of Circuit Assemblies and District Conventions including Food Service, Public Relations, Parking, Rooming, Volunteer Service, Accounting, and Security and Attendant Departments. I have presided or participated in over one hundred judicial, special and appeal committees relating to Judicial Matters, which is the internal administrative procedures for investigation and discipline of Jehovah's Witnesses accused of misconduct or other improprieties.

2. Since 2001, I have been the Executive Director of a non-profit organization called Silentlambs, with its office in Nashville, TN. The purpose of Silentlambs is to provide support for victims of sexual abuse suffered as a child in Jehovah's Witnesses activities and Congregations. I have researched extensively the policies and procedures of Jehovah's Witnesses from public and accessible private sources, I have been interviewed internationally for numerous published articles and documentaries on the polices and practices of Jehovah's Witnesses, including New York Times, Newsweek, VH1, Dateline, Fifth Estate, Panorama, Associated Press, Christianity Today, etc...

3. During the time I served in administrative positions for the Jehovah's Witnesses' Organization, I had access to internal confidential documents and communications, I attended Elder training on several occasions and received instructions on how to handle matters within the congregation involving abuse survivors including reports of child molestation within the Organization's congregations; and became personally familiar with the organizations policies and procedures on the subject matters of reporting, preventing, investigating and maintaining secrecy concerning child sexual abuse within the Jehovah's Witnesses membership and Congregations; on the relationships of Jehovah's Witnesses Elders to secular law enforcement; and on disciplinary policies and procedures for those accused of sexual abuse of children.

4. The Governing Body of Jehovah's Witnesses is the ruling council of the Jehovah's Witnesses Organization, and represents the Organization's leadership and administration. All Jehovah's Witnesses' policies and procedures for any corporation or entity of the religion are set by the Governing Body. The "Organized to Accomplish Our Ministry" manual states on Pages 26-27, "These and other legal corporations are used by the modern day Governing Body of Jehovah's Witnesses to facilitate the preaching of the good news world-wide and to care for the spiritual needs of the entire congregation of God in all parts of the earth." A true and correct copy of the cover and excerpts of the Manual are attached as Exhibit 1 to this Declaration.

5. All Elders or other Jehovah Witness members involved in the reporting, investigation or disciplinary phases of childhood sexual abuse accusations and conduct must follow the procedures and policies established and communicated by the Governing Body through its various corporate agencies. These corporate entities include the Legal Department of the Watchtower Bible and Tracts Society of New York, Inc.; the Service Department that was formerly a part of Watchtower New York until 2001; and a separate corporation established in 2001 known as The Christian Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses that has succeeded in administering the Service Dept. functions formerly held by the New York corporation. I have reviewed the deposition of Alan Schuster taken in this matter on February 15, 2012, who I know personally, and agree with his testimony on page 38 at lines 14 through 19 that the policies of the Jehovah's Witnesses as expressed in Body of Elder letters, including the letter of July 1, 1989, would have been approved by the Governing Body.

6. When an Elder or other member in a position of authority in a Jehovah's Witness congregation receives a report of child molestation or sexual assault, Jehovah's Witness policy as set forth in the July 1, 1989 Body of Elder letter requires Elders first call the Service and Legal Departments of the WBTSNY, Inc. Thereafter, all acts or omissions of the Elders are directed by and through the Service and Legal Department. The Service and Legal Departments direct the investigation by congregation Elders for all allegations of child abuse;

7. Jehovah's Witnesses practice and policy discourages members' associations with non-members. Members customarily associate only with other congregation or Jehovah's Witness members for all non-work, recreational, or social activity for their members. Children and adults participate together frequently in meetings held in members or Elders' homes, or at the Kingdom Halls which are the official property of the entities organized by the Governing Body. Children and adults go together in small groups into residential neighborhoods and other public places to perform the "service" work, or religious solicitations that are the largest time commitment and activity of the members. Because nearly all of these activities are conducted outside of the homes of members, it is common for members of a congregation to trust other adults to transport children to meetings, Kingdom Hall for services, and into neighborhoods for service work.

8. The Jehovah's Witnesses, through the Governing Body, have a punishment called "Disfellowshipping." When a member is disfellowshipped, no other member of the Congregation is allowed to talk to them or engage in activities with the disfellowshipped member. Disfellowshipping is an administrative procedure that would, if applied to a child molester, prevent that individual from having contact with or participating in activities with children of the Congregation and Jehovah's Witnesses community. Disfellowshipping Jonathan Kendrick in this case after his molestation of at least one minor girl would have prevented his association with Plaintiff Jane Doe and advised her parents and the entire Congregation that he was unfit to be associated with.

9. The written and practiced policy of Jehovah's Witnesses applicable to protecting children from known childhood sexual abusers within the membership is set forth by the Governing Body in the Body of Elders letter of July 1, 1989. I agree with the testimony of Mr. Shuster in his deposition at page 38, line 20, to page 39, line 24, stating this letter remains the policy today. That policy, as stated in the letter of July 1, 1989, is to keep information identifying a known specific child molester secret from Congregation members, law enforcement, and other possible victims.

10. As of the present time, Silentlambs has received reports from over 7,000 individuals that they were sexually abused as children in the organization of Jehovah's Witnesses. During my service as an Elder, I learned that there is a database kept by WBTSNY of childhood sexual abuse offenders and victims. I personally reported child molesters to this database by telephone to the Service and Legal Departments. In 2002 I was made aware by managerial level personnel that the database at that time contained over 23,720 reports of confessed/confirmed child molesters within the United States, Canada and parts of Europe. My own experience with Silentlambs is that sexual abuse of children is and has been for many decades a widespread problem within Jehovah's Witnesses, as in many other organizations and groups where adults and youth participate.

11. All of the policies and procedures concerning maintaining secrecy as to the identities of known childhood sexual abusers within the Jehovah's Witnesses Congregations are the policies set forth by the Governing Body to apply to all associated with the Jehovah's Witness organization. In my experience and opinion, the true purpose of these policies and procedures is not religious, but purely secular and financial. The secrecy policy has been applied to protect the organization and its leaders from exposure to legal liability for the harm caused to children abused within the activities of the Witnesses, as well as to protect the Jehovah's Witnesses religion and its corporate entities from adverse publicity that could negatively affect membership levels, and in turn reduce financial income. The Body of Elder letter of July 1, 1989 sets forth these purposes explicitly and repeatedly, and the same concerns were taught in the Elders training sessions I participated in. The policy of secrecy is set and enforced by the Governing Body with full knowledge that sexual abusers of children, if not identified and adequately protected against, will continue to abuse other children.

12. The evidence I have reviewed in this case includes the depositions of Elders Abrahamson, Clarke, Iglesias, Inman, and Lammerdin; the deposition of Mr. Shuster; the depositon of Claudia Francis; the documents produced by Defendants in response to written discovery requests or marked as exhibits to depositions; the deposition of Candace Conti and of her parents, Neal Conti and Kathleen Conti; the Declaration of Evelyn Kendrick; and the deposition of Contra Costa County Sheriff Baldwin. This evidence establishes for my analysis and opinions that Jonathan Kendrick continued to sexually approach and abuse children after the first report to the Elders in 1993 of his abuse of his step daughter. This is found in the criminal records and felony conviction of Kendrick for sexual abuse of a minor victim while he and his spouse Linda Kendrick were members of the Oakley Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses; the report of the Plaintiff in this case; and also the report of "grooming" activity of purchasing a bra for a 10 year old girl as set forth in the deposition testimony of Claudia Francis. This type of recurring conduct is facilitated and enabled because of the policy of the Jehovah's Witnesses to keep secret past sexual abuse of children by its members.

I declare under penalty of perjury under the laws of the State of California that the foregoing is true and correct, that I have personal knowledge of the facts set forth herein, and that I am competent to testify as to the facts set forth herein.

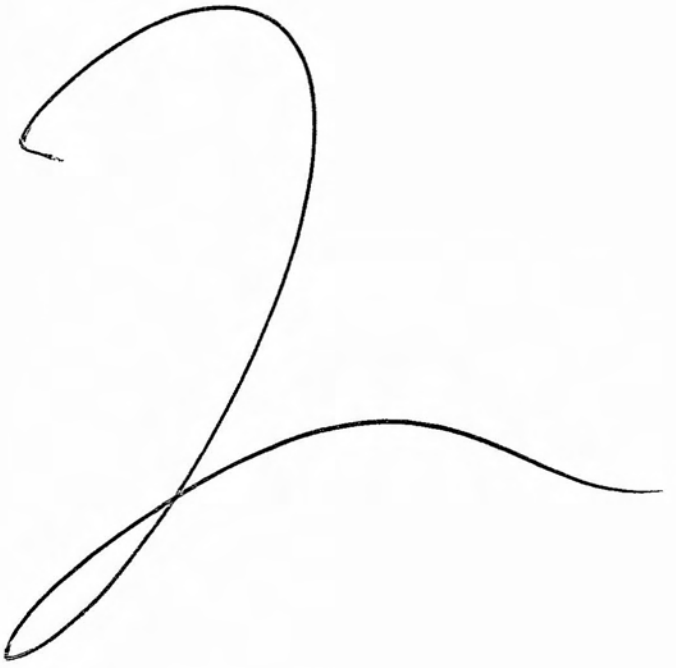
ORGANIZED TO ACCOMPLISH OUR MINISTRY

"You, though, keep your senses in all things, suffer evil, do the work of an evangelizer, fully accomplish your ministry."—2 Tim. 4:5.

and to care for all His "belongings," or Kingdom interests on earth. (Matt. 24:45-47; Luke 12:42-44) Rather than being an individual Christian, the 'faithful slave' today is the remnant, still living on earth, of the composite body of Christ's anointed footstep followers. Such remaining ones are a part of spiritual Israel, the anointed congregation of God. (Gal. 6:16; compare Isaiah 43:10.) This remnant is faithfully discharging the responsibilities of the "slave" during this time of the end by taking the lead in the preaching of "this good news of the kingdom" throughout all the earth and by providing spiritual food at the proper time for the household of faith.—Matt. 24:14.

USE OF RELIGIOUS CORPORATIONS

During these last days of the present wicked system of things, the "belongings" of the Master have increased abundantly throughout all the earth. This has placed a heavy responsibility on the 'faithful slave.' In discharging its responsibility to provide spiritual food at the proper time and in order to get the good news of the Kingdom preached before the end comes, the remnant on earth, as "the faithful and discreet slave" class, has formed certain agencies, or legal entities. It has proved to be the course of wisdom for the 'faithful slave' to organize certain corporations that are recognized by the laws of various countries. These religious corporations own and operate printing facilities that produce and distribute Bibles and Bible literature on a worldwide basis for use in the Kingdom ministry.



The first in time and the principal corporation used in this way is the Watch Tower Bible and Tract Society of Pennsylvania. This nonprofit religious society was incorporated in 1884, is made up of dedicated, baptized Christians and is exclusively devoted to advancing the interests of true worship in the earth. The Watch Tower Society has extended its works worldwide, establishing branch offices in various countries. Also, in compliance with local governmental regulations, a number of other religious societies have been legally formed, such as the Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc. (1909) and the International Bible Students Association in London, England (1914). All these legal instrumentalities cooperate with one another. These and other legal corporations are used by the modern-day Governing Body of Jehovah's Witnesses to facilitate the preaching of the good news worldwide and to care for the spiritual needs of the entire congregation of God in all parts of the earth.

STRUCTURE UNDER BRANCH ORGANIZATION

Whenever a branch office is established, a Branch Committee of three or more elders is appointed to care for the various responsibilities involved in looking after the work in the country or countries under the jurisdiction of that particular branch. One member of the committee serves as the coordinator of the Branch Committee.

Local congregations under each branch organization are arranged into circuits and a number of circuits make up a district. Circuits and districts may be of various sizes depending on geographical and language considerations, as well as the number of congregations within the area assigned to a branch. A circuit overseer is appointed to serve the congregations in each circuit. District overseers visit the different circuits, serve at circuit assemblies and spend some time serving

PLAINTIFF'S MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES IN OPPOSITION TO DEFENDANTS' MOTION IN LIMINE NO. 12 IN RE SILENT LAMBS

Trial Date: 5/21/2012

Although portions of Motion in Limine No. 12 are not disputed, the Motion to exclude any and all reference to the Silent Lambs organization in any respect is overbroad. Mr. Bowen is entitled to provide evidence as to what his occupation is, and in fact, defendants have made much of the issue to demonstrate his bias against them. Their proposed Exhibit List has several items from Silent Lambs, including web pages and pamphlets. Thus this Motion is somewhat confusing and inconsistent.

In addition, the defendants have taken the position during the course of this case that they do not keep any statistical information concerning the frequency or number of childhood sexual abuse reports or offenders from within Jehovah's Witnesses. The frequency and number of offenders is relevant testimony as to multiple issues on the effectiveness of the policies and procedures in place to prevent childhood sexual abuse within Jehovah's Witnesses, and impeaches the testimony of defendants' managerial employee Mr. Shuster, and expert witness Monica Applewhite, that their programs are successful in preventing childhood sexual abuse, and that childhood sexual abuse is not an issue within Jehovah's Witnesses.

Because this Motion is overbroad and does not identify any specific evidence, it should be denied. Specific inappropriate, impermissible, or inadmissible testimony, if plaintiff should attempt to elicit it, can be objected to at the time such questions, if any, may be asked.

PRELIMINARY STATEMENT

This Memorandum is respectfully submitted on behalf of defendants Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc. (hereinafter "Watchtower") and Fremont, California, Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses, North Unit (hereinafter "North Fremont Congregation") (hereinafter "the Church Defendants").

STATEMENT OF FACTS

The Parties

Plaintiff Candace Conti was born on November 25, 1985, and is presently 26 years old. Plaintiff alleges that she was sexually abused by defendant Jonathan Kendrick (hereinafter "Kendrick") during 1994 to 1996 or 1997, while she was 9 to 11 years of age.

Kendrick was baptized as one of Jehovah's Witnesses in 1988, at the age of 34. Thereafter, in 1990, he was appointed as a "ministerial servant" in the North Fremont Congregation. The duties of a ministerial servant in a congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses include making sure that the congregation members have sufficient literature for use in their door-to-door ministry, assisting with the cleaning and maintenance of the Kingdom Hall (i.e., church or house of worship), attending to the sound system at the Kingdom Hall used during meetings, assisting meeting late-comers to find seats, as well as helping to collect, count and deposit in the bank funds anonymously placed in boxes in the Kingdom Hall. These ministerial functions are designed to assist the congregation members and the congregation elders.

The North Fremont Congregation elders, as in each of the more than 110,000 congregations of Jehovah's Witnesses worldwide, oversee the spiritual welfare of the congregation. They convey Bible-based teachings to the congregation and maintain the moral and spiritual cleanliness of the congregation. In keeping with Bible tradition, the elders, or "older men," are the spiritual shepherds of the flock. They dispense guidance and direction to the members of the congregation based on the Bible. There is no such thing as a paid "clergy class" in the Jehovah's Witnesses faith. Jehovah's Witness elders are volunteers and self-supporting, either by secular employment or otherwise.

Watchtower is a New York, not-for-profit, religious corporation. It is used by the Governing Body of Jehovah's Witnesses to operate various religious schools used by the Jehovah's Witnesses faith and to hold title to and operate the administrative offices and other facilities in New York. In addition, Watchtower was the legal corporation through which the U.S. Branch Service Department communicated spiritual supervision and the appointment and deletion of elders and ministerial servants to congregations of Jehovah's Witnesses in the 48 contiguous states.

Background Information

In 1993, Kendrick asked the North Fremont Congregation elders to visit his home to discuss a matter on which he and his family needed spiritual guidance and direction. In response, elders Michael Lee Clarke and Gary Abrahamson visited the Kendrick home in November 1993. As is the normal procedure and protocol for Jehovah's Witness elders when giving confidential spiritual guidance to families, the meeting included Kendrick, his then-wife Evelyn, and Evelyn's 15-year-old daughter Andrea. In the presence of Evelyn and Andrea, Kendrick confessed to the elders that four months earlier he had come into the darkened home where Andrea was sleeping on the couch in the living room. Kendrick further confessed that on that occasion he had momentarily touched Andrea's breast over her clothing. Neither Evelyn nor Andrea contradicted Kendrick's version of events at that meeting. In fact, Evelyn agreed with Kendrick when he told the elders that 15-year-old Andrea was trying to use Kendrick's conduct as a weapon to force them to allow her (Andrea) to continue having her boyfriend stay in her bedroom with her. During that meeting, Andrea also alleged that another young girl whose mother was a member of the congregation, Toi Register (now Toi Register Hayes), had told her that Kendrick had accidentally touched her inappropriately. (However, Toi Register Hayes will testify she was never touched inappropriately by Kendrick and also will deny ever telling Andrea anything of that nature.)

In December 1993 an ecclesiastical determination was made based upon the scriptures that Kendrick's conduct was "uncleanness" and because he was no longer irreprehensible (or free from accusation), he was removed by the North Fremont Congregation elders from his position as a "ministerial servant." An announcement was made to the entire congregation that Kendrick was no longer serving as a ministerial servant, alerting the congregation to a problem with Kendrick. Never again did Kendrick serve in any position of responsibility in any congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses. Unknown to the elders and Church Defendants, a few months later Kendrick was investigated by the Fremont police and thereafter pleaded guilty to a misdemeanor arising out of Andrea's allegations against him.

In about 2010, shortly after she was released from jail, Plaintiff contacted elders in the North Congregation in Downey, California, and alleged that Kendrick had sexually abused her when she was a child. This was the first time that plaintiff ever notified any elder about her alleged abuse.

Plaintiff's Allegations

In January 2011 Plaintiff commenced this lawsuit. In her Complaint, Plaintiff alleged that Kendrick abused her during 1996 and 1997. During her deposition, she testified that the abuse began in 1994 and continued until her parents' divorce in July 1997. Plaintiff alleged Kendrick was frequently allowed to take her from the Kingdom Hall after Sunday services to his home, where he abused her, and he then returned Plaintiff to the Kingdom Hall or her parent's home.

The Evidence

There is no other witness who will corroborate plaintiff's allegations of abuse in this case. In fact, the evidence from other witnesses contradicts certain allegations of Plaintiff.

Her father, Neal Conti, will testify that he never allowed plaintiff to leave the Kingdom Hall with Kendrick. Because his wife, plaintiff's mother, Kathleen Conti, had been abused as a child, he was very careful and vigilant in protecting his daughter from such things. He also denies ever allowing plaintiff to sit on Kendrick's lap at the Kingdom Hall.

Plaintiff's mother, Kathleen Conti, denied ever allowing plaintiff to sit on Kendrick's lap at the Kingdom Hall. She also vehemently denied allowing Kendrick to take plaintiff to his home from the meetings at the Kingdom Hall.

The elders will testify that they kept a close watch on Kendrick after he was removed as a ministerial servant (the removal was in December 1993). They made sure that he did not pay inappropriate attention to children in the Kingdom Hall. They will confirm that they never saw plaintiff leave the Kingdom Hall with Kendrick. In fact, if they had seen such conduct, they would have put a stop to it. Similarly, they never saw Kendrick bear hugging plaintiff or having plaintiff sit on his lap at the Kingdom Hall.

Several persons who were members of the congregation at the time of the alleged abuse of plaintiff will testify that they never saw plaintiff, a 9, 10, or 11 year-old-girl, sitting on Kendrick's lap. They will add that they would have found such conduct to be inappropriate. Similarly, they will testify that they never saw plaintiff being taken from the Kingdom Hall by Kendrick, and that they would have considered such conduct even more inappropriate and upsetting. They will point out that they would have notified the elders of it if they had ever seen it happening.

Testimony will be adduced at trial that it would have been very unusual, even in the early 1990's, for a single male in his 40's in a congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses to take a girl between 9 and 11 years of age to his home by herself. The testimony of the elders and defendants' expert, Monica Applewhite, Ph.D., will bring out that a congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses is based on the family unit. Within the Jehovah's Witnesses faith, there is no "Sunday School," "church camp," or other children's activities in which children are separated from their parents. The parents of children in the congregation are expected to guide, direct and attend to the needs of their children. The elders are there to give spiritual guidance and direction and any other practical assistance possible, but the parents are there to monitor and discipline their children. Jehovah's Witness children are not separated from their parents for any spiritual programs or activities.

In addition, the evidence will show that Watchtower has for decades, through its publications, advised and warned parents about the dangers of child abuse. Using the latest expert research, studies and reports, Watchtower has for decades provided its members advice about how to avoid the scourge of child sexual abuse. It will be shown that these publications have been distributed worldwide to all Jehovah's Witnesses and the public in general.

THE LAW

I. Kendrick was not an agent of Watchtower or Fremont

It is undisputed that Kendrick was removed as a ministerial servant in December 1993 and never served in a position of authority or responsibility in any congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses at any time thereafter. Therefore, Kendrick was no more than a congregation member from that point in time forward. Kendrick was the equivalent of a parishioner sitting in a pew in a Catholic or other denomination's church attending church services.

If plaintiff was abused during 1994 to 1997 as she claims, then it occurred at a time when Kendrick was, as a matter of law, not an agent of Watchtower or the North Fremont Congregation. In Mallory v. Fong (1951) 37 Cal.2d 357, 370, the Court reiterated the well-settled law that "[t]he existence of the right of control and supervision establishes the existence of an agency relationship." At the time of the alleged abuse, Kendrick was not in any appointed position in the Jehovah's Witnesses faith, and he was not subject to the control and supervision of either Watchtower or the North Fremont Congregation.

To hold that Kendrick was an agent subject to the control and supervision of Watchtower or Fremont under these circumstances flies in the face of agency law and would mean every member of every religious organization or every associate of any not-for-profit organization can impose liability on the organization by tortious conduct committed away from the organization's property and wholly unconnected to the organizations activities.

Additionally, Plaintiff seems to contend that the elders of the North Fremont Congregation had a duty to warn members of the congregation that Kendrick was a serial pedophile based on the one known incident with his stepdaughter. This would create an entirely new duty and obligation for a religious organization. It would be the equivalent of creating a duty on the part of the religious leaders of any faith to announce to all in attendance at a church service that a person sitting in the church had recently confessed to molesting a minor. There was no such legal duty then and there is no such duty today. To create such a duty would be improper and unconstitutional, as discussed below.

II. Watchtower and the North Fremont Congregation cannot be held liable for the negligent or intentional conduct of a congregation member

There have been several cases across the nation that have held that neither Watchtower nor a local congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses can be held liable for the negligent or even intentional conduct of a congregation member. (See Berry v. Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc. (N.H. 2005) 879 A.2d 1124; Gillet v. Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of Pennsylvania, Inc.(Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 2005) 913 So.2d 618; Meyer v. Lindala (Minn. Ct. App. 2004) 675 N.W.2d 635; Bryan R. v. Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc. (Me. 1999) 738 A.2d 839.) These holdings are in recognition of the injustice of holding a party liable for the conduct of a person over whom they have no control or supervision.

In the instant action, Watchtower and the North Fremont Congregation will present indisputable evidence that, at the time of the alleged abuse of plaintiff by Kendrick, Kendrick was nothing more than a member of the congregation. Kendrick then held no position of authority or responsibility, and he was not then an agent of Watchtower or the North Fremont Congregation. Plaintiff has no evidence to contradict this fact. Therefore, plaintiff's cause of action for negligent supervision must fail.

III. Plaintiff's claim of negligent supervision is barred by the First Amendment of the U.S. Constitution and its California analog

The evidence is uncontradicted that Kendrick was not an agent of Watchtower or Fremont when he allegedly abused plaintiff. However, even if there were evidence that Kendrick then was an agent or subject to the control and supervision of Watchtower or the North Fremont Congregation, plaintiff's claim for negligent supervision would fail, because it is barred by the First Amendment of the U.S. Constitution and its California analog.

The Court in Schmidt v. Bishop (S.D.N.Y. 1991) 779 F. Supp. 321, 332, in dealing with this issue stated:

> [A]ny inquiry into the policies and practices of the Church Defendants in hiring or supervising their clergy raises the same kind of First Amendment problems of entanglement discussed above, which might involve the Court in making sensitive judgments about the propriety of the Church Defendants' supervision in light of their religious beliefs. Insofar as concerns retention or supervision, the pastor of a Presbyterian Church is not analogous to a common law employee. . . . The traditional denominations each have their own intricate principles of governance, as to which the state has no rights of visitation. …

> It would therefore also be inappropriate and unconstitutional for this Court to determine after the fact that the ecclesiastical authorities negligently supervised or retained the defendant Bishop. Any award of damages would have a chilling effect leading indirectly to state control over the future conduct of affairs of a religious denomination, a result violative of the text and history of the establishment clause.

(See also Ayon v. Gourley (D. Colo. 1998) 47 F. Supp.2d 1246, 1250-51 (inappropriate for court to examine whether church procedures for supervision were "reasonable and adequate").)

In this action, the alleged perpetrator of the abuse of plaintiff was not even a member of the "clergy" or religious leaders of the North Fremont Congregation. Kendrick then had no position within that congregation, nor was he subject to the Church Defendants' control or supervision. How much more unjust, improper and unconstitutional it would be, then, to subject the Church Defendants to liability for the conduct of Kendrick.

IV. Plaintiff's negligence claim against Watchtower and the North Fremont Congregation must fail because they had no "Special Relationship" with plaintiff and, therefore, owed no duty to Plaintiff

A tort involves the violation of a legal duty, imposed by statute, contract or otherwise, owed by the defendant to the person injured. (Romero v. Superior Court (2001) 89 Cal.App.4th 1068, 1078.) If a legal duty does not exist, "any injury is 'damnum absque injuria'—injury without wrong." (5 Witkin, Summary of Cal. Law (10th ed. 2005) Torts, § 6, p. 48; Romero, supra.) Because the existence of a duty is an essential element of a tort claim and thus a necessary precondition for liability, the first determination a court must make when examining a negligence claim is whether the defendant owed a legal duty to Plaintiff. (Hooks v. Southern Ca. Permanente MedicalGroup (1980) 107 Ca1.App.3d 435, 443.)

It is axiomatic that a person does not have a legal duty to come to the aid of another. RESTATEMENT (SECOND) OF TORTS (1965) section 314. This is true irrespective of the gravity of the danger to which the other is subjected and the insignificance of the trouble, effort or expense of giving aid or protection. (Id., section 314, comment c.) "A determination that as a matter of law no duty is owed to the Plaintiff is particularly common in situations in which the defendant's responsibility for the activities of third parties is involved." (Hooks, 107 Ca1.App.3d at p. 443.) However, this general "no duty" rule is subject to an exception in certain situations where a "special relationship" exists between the parties. (RESTATEMENT (SECOND) OF TORTS (1965) section 314A.)

California courts have long adhered to these "no duty to aid" principles. As the Court of Appeal noted, "'[a] person is ordinarily not liable for the actions of another and is under no duty to protect another from harm in the absence of a special relationship of custody or control.'" (Romero, 89 Cal.App.4th at p. 1078-79 (emphasis in original) (citations omitted); see also Garcia v. Superior Court (1990) 50 Cal.3d 728, 734 ("A special relationship is a prerequisite for liability based on a defendant's failure to act.") (emphasis in original).) Furthermore, "[a]bsent a 'special relationship,' one cannot be held liable for mere nonfeasance, such as not protecting another from a criminal attack by a third party." (Eric J. v. Betty M. (1999) 76 Cal.App.4th 715, 727.)

According to the Court of Appeal, "'the common law concept of special relationships covers: landowner or possessor and person coming on the land; manufacturer or supplier of goods and buyer or user; vendor, lessor, or contractor and purchaser, lessee or owner of 'real property.'" (Seo v. All-Makes Overhead Doors (2002) 97 Cal.App.4th 1193, 1203 (citations omitted).) Additionally, affirmative duties may arise in relationships such as those of a "common carrier and passenger," "innkeeper and guest," possessor of land and invitee, and a "person who is required by law to take, or who voluntarily takes, custody of another under circumstances that deprive the other of his normal opportunities for protection." (Id.; see also RESTATEMENT (SECOND) OF TORTS (1965) section 314A(1)-(4).)

Then, the question becomes whether a church has a "special relationship" with its parishioners by virtue of the priest/parishioner relationship. The Court of Appeal directly addressed this question in Richelle L. v. Roman Catholic Archbishop (2003) 106 Cal.App.4th 257. In Richelle L., the plaintiff sued a Catholic priest and the Archdiocese of San Francisco, seeking damages for injuries she allegedly sustained as a result of a sexual relationship initiated by the priest. (Id. at p. 264.) The complaint in Richelle L. contained seven causes of action, including one for "general negligence" made against both the priest and the Archdiocese. (Id. at p. 265.) The trial court sustained the defendants' demurrers without leave to amend; that ruling was affirmed by the Court of Appeal.

The Court of Appeal noted that "the thesis of all the demurrers, which rested on the First Amendment, was that respondents 'did not owe a civil duty, fiduciary or otherwise, to [appellant] in these or any other circumstances,' and '[t]his lack of duty is fatal to each cause of action.'" (Id. at p. 265 (emphasis in original).) The court considered whether a "special relationship"—a prerequisite for a negligence claim—existed between a priest and a sexual abuse victim. The court reasoned that the priest "cannot be liable to appellant [the victim] for breach arising out of a duty arising out of a special relationship" because it would be the equivalent to a prohibited clergy malpractice claim. (Id. at p. 270.)

At the end of its opinion, the Court of Appeal turned its attention to the duty of the Archdiocese. "Appellant does not attempt to hold respondent Archdiocese vicariously liable under the theory of respondeat superior, but directly liable for breach of a fiduciary duty and for negligence in hiring and supervision. In order to prevail against the Archdiocese, however, appellant must show, among other things, that she suffered an injury the law recognizes. For the reasons we have explained, appellant cannot make such a showing; accordingly, there is no need to inquire whether the Archdiocese can be subjected to any duty." (Id. at p. 282-83.) Thus, the Court of Appeal affirmed the demurrers granted to the Archdiocese as the supervisory organization over the defendant priest.

In order for Plaintiff's negligent supervision claim in this action to survive against the Church Defendants, she must establish that the Church Defendants owed her a duty. But there is no duty to aid, unless she can show a "special relationship" existed directly between herself and one or both of the Church Defendants.

To state this differently, in order for Plaintiff to prevail on her negligent supervision claim against the Church Defendants, she would have this Court hold that a "special relationship" between minor parishioners and a local church entity (i.e., the North Fremont Congregation), as well as between minor parishioners and a national church entity (i.e., Watchtower). No prior California decision has suggested that all minors who attend religious services have a "special relationship" with their churches, temples, or other places of worship (and by extension the corporate structures used by such churches, temples, or places of worship), simply by virtue of the minors' association with the church. Furthermore, Richelle L., supra, stands for the proposition that such a "special relationship" does not exist.

Plaintiff cannot establish that she had a "special relationship" with the Church Defendants, including the corporate entity used by the local congregation or the religious corporation used by Watchtower. In California, it has never been held that a corporate church entity had a "special relationship" with its members, unlike holdings regarding "common carrier and passenger" or "innkeeper and guest." (RESTATEMENT (SECOND) OF TORTS (1965) § 314A (1)-(4).)

Plaintiff here cannot show under these circumstances that she had a "special relationship" with either the North Fremont Congregation or Watchtower. Therefore, the negligence claim against them should be dismissed.

V. The Church Defendants had no legal duty to report child sexual abuse to authorities

It is expected that plaintiff will elicit testimony at trial that Watchtower and the North Fremont Congregation did not notify the authorities of the 1993 incident between Kendrick and his step-daughter. Of course, the purpose of this testimony will be to prejudice the jury against the Church Defendants. However, during that time period, the State of California did not require ministers or religious leaders to report allegations of child sexual abuse to the authorities.

It was not until January 1997 that the California legislature created a statutory duty on the part of ministers to report allegations of child abuse to the authorities. (See California Penal Code section 11166.) Even then, the California legislature preserved the clergy-penitent privilege. It did not require ministers to disclose penitential communications of any kind to the authorities. Penal Code section 11166(d) states that "[a] clergy member who acquires knowledge or a reasonable suspicion of child abuse or neglect during a penitential communication is not subject to subdivision (a)" (i.e., the reporting requirement).

In this case, the two elders received a confession in November 1993 from Jonathan Kendrick as stated above. The elders had no legal duty to report the incident to the authorities, because the law at that time did not require ministers to do so. In addition, this confession by Kendrick was received by the elders in the course of the discipline and practice of the Jehovah's Witness faith and was intended to be kept confidential. As such, it was also privileged and not subject to disclosure in any fashion beyond those dictated by the protocols and procedures of the Jehovah's Witness faith. The Church Defendants assert that, even if received today, that confession by Kendrick would be privileged.

Thus, plaintiff has no evidence or legal basis for arguing that Watchtower and/or the North Fremont Congregation had a duty to report the November 1993 allegation of abuse against Kendrick to the authorities.

Plaintiff is trying to create a duty in tort law that did not exist at the time of her alleged abuse and still does not exist. She will attempt to unfairly prejudice the jury by pointing out that Watchtower and the North Fremont Congregation did not notify the authorities of the 1993 allegations. (Ironically, when Plaintiff herself has never notified the authorities of her own allegations of abuse by Kendrick.) She wants to hold Watchtower and Fremont liable for not reporting the allegations by Andrea against Kendrick made in 1993, when they had no duty to do so. This Court should not allow such a claim to succeed.

VI. Watchtower and the North Fremont Congregation cannot be held liable for conduct by a member unrelated to congregation activity and away from the Kingdom Hall Plaintiff will offer evidence of abuse of her by Kendrick at his home. However, Watchtower and the North Fremont Congregation cannot be held liable to plaintiff for Kendrick's alleged conduct at his own home that was unrelated to congregation or church activity.

In Eric J. v. Betty M. (1999) 76 Cal.App.4th 715, the Court of Appeal examined how the law of premises liability inter-relates with a claim of child molestation. There, Court or Appeal upheld the dismissal of the claim against the landowner because "there was no relationship between the harm and any premises owned by family members on which the harm occurred." (Id. at p. 717.) The Court of Appeal further stated that liability was only allowed "when there is something foreseeably dangerous about the nature of the activity conducted on the property or the property itself which fixes on the landowner the duty to take some sort of precaution or the owner has in some way undertaken, as part of the organized activity on the land, care for the safety of the plaintiff as against criminal acts of third parties." (Id. at p. 721.)

In the case at bar, the North Fremont Congregation were conducting church services on its property. This activity is not something "foreseeably dangerous" and no liability can be allowed. Further, the Church Defendants did not undertake any responsibility for the care or safety of Plaintiff at any time and certainly not while she was away from the Kingdom Hall property and not engaged in any congregation activity. No such duty exists, and imposing such a duty would be to change the law as well as place an impossible burden on not only the Church Defendants but on all not-for-profit religious, civic, and political organizations.

CONCLUSION

Based upon the foregoing facts and the law applicable thereto, it is respectfully submitted that the plaintiff does not have and cannot make out a valid and legally cognizable claim against either Watchtower or the North Fremont Congregation.

PLAINTIFF'S REQUESTED SPECIAL INSTRUCTION NO. 1

DUTY TO PROTECT

The defendants Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc. and Fremont Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses, North Unit, had a duty to take reasonable protective measures to protect Candace Conti from the risk of sexual abuse by volunteers, including Jonathan Kendrick, involved in Jehovah's Witness activities. In determining whether or not Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc. and Fremont Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses, North Unit, took reasonable protective measures, you may consider the following:

1. The presence or absence of any warning;
2. The availability of training and whether or not such training was provided;
3. Whether or not any educational programs were made available to plaintiff, her parents, or to other Jehovah's Witnesses volunteers for the purpose of childhood sexual abuse prevention; and
4. Such other facts and circumstances contained in the evidence.

CACI 100. PRELIMINARY ADMONITIONS

You have now been sworn as jurors in this case. I want to impress on you the seriousness and importance of serving on a jury. Trial by jury is a fundamental right in California. The parties have a right to a jury that is selected fairly, that comes to the case without bias, and that will attempt to reach a verdict based on the evidence presented. Before we begin, I need to explain how you must conduct yourselves during the trial.

Do not allow anything that happens outside this courtroom to affect your decision. During the trial do not talk about this case or the people involved in it with anyone, including family and persons living in your household, friends and coworkers, spiritual leaders, advisors, or therapists.

This prohibition is not limited to face-to-face conversations. It also extends to all forms of electronic communications. Do not use any electronic device or media, such as a cell phone or smart phone, PDA, computer, the Internet, any Internet service, any text or instant-messaging service, any Internet chat room, blog, or Web site, including social networking websites or online diaries, to send or receive any information to or from anyone about this case or your experience as a juror until after you have been discharged from your jury duty.

You may say you are on a jury and how long the trial may take, but that is all. You must not even talk about the case with the other jurors until after I tell you that it is time for you to decide the case.

During the trial you must not listen to anyone else talk about the case or the people involved in the case. You must avoid any contact with the parties, the lawyers, the witnesses, and anyone else who may have a connection to the case. If anyone tries to talk to you about this case, tell that person that you cannot discuss it because you are a juror. If he or she keeps talking to you, simply walk away and report the incident to the court [attendant/bailiff] as soon as you can.

After the trial is over and I have released you from jury duty, you may discuss the case with anyone, but you are not required to do so.

During the trial, do not read, listen to, or watch any news reports about this case. [I have no information that there will be news reports concerning this case.] This prohibition extends to the use of the Internet in any way, including reading any blog about the case or about anyone involved with it or using Internet maps or mapping programs or any other program or device to search for or to view any place discussed in the testimony.

Do not do any research on your own or as a group. Do not use dictionaries, the Internet, or other reference materials. Do not investigate the case or conduct any experiments. Do not contact anyone to assist you, such as a family accountant, doctor, or lawyer. Do not visit or view the scene of any event involved in this case. If you happen to pass by the scene, do not stop or investigate. If you do need to view the scene during the trial, you will be taken there as a group under proper supervision.

[If you violate any of these prohibitions on communications and research, including prohibitions on electronic communications and research, you may be held in contempt of court or face other sanctions. That means that you may have to serve time in jail, pay a fine, or face other punishment for that violation.]

You must decide this case based only on the evidence presented in this trial and the instructions of law that I will provide. Nothing that you see, hear, or learn outside this courtroom is evidence unless I specifically tell you it is. If you receive any information about this case from any source outside of the courtroom, promptly report it to the court [attendant/bailiff]. It is important that all jurors see and hear the same evidence at the same time.

It is important that you keep an open mind throughout this trial. Evidence can only be presented a piece at a time. Do not form or express an opinion about this case while the trial is going on. You must not decide on a verdict until after you have heard all the evidence and have discussed it thoroughly with your fellow jurors in your deliberations.

Do not concern yourselves with the reasons for the rulings.I will make during the course of the trial. Do not guess what I may think your verdict should be from anything I might say or do.

When you begin your deliberations, you may discuss the case only in the jury room and only when all the jurors are present.

You must decide what the facts are in this case. And, I repeat, your verdict must be based only on the evidence that you hear or see in this courtroom. Do not let bias, sympathy, prejudice, or public opinion influence your verdict.

At the end of the trial, I will explain the law that you must follow to reach your verdict. You must follow the law as I explain it to you, even if you do not agree with the law.

CACI 101. OVERVIEW OF TRIAL

To assist you in your tasks as jurors, I will now explain how the trial will proceed. I will begin by identifying the parties to the case. Candace Conti filed this lawsuit. She is called a plaintiff. She seeks damages from Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc. and Fremont California Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses, North Unit, who are called defendants.

Candace Conti claims that she was sexually abused as a child by Jonathan Kendrick, and that the defendants Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc. and Fremont California Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses, North Unit were negligent in their conduct, and that negligence was a contributing cause of her sexual abuse. Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc. and Fremont California Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses, North Unit deny any negligence.

First, each side may make an opening statement, but neither side is required to do so. An opening statement is not evidence. It is simply an outline to help you understand what that party expects the evidence will show. Also, because it is often difficult to give you the evidence in the order we would prefer, the opening statement allows you to keep an overview of the case in mind during the presentation of the evidence.

Next, the jury will hear the evidence. Candace Conti will present evidence first. When Candace Conti is finished, Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc. and Fremont California Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses, North Unit will have an opportunity to present evidence.

Each witness will first be questioned by the side that asked the witness to testify. This is called direct examination. Then the other side is permitted to question the witness. This is called cross-examination.

Documents or objects referred to during the trial are called exhibits. Exhibits are given a [number/letter] so that they may be clearly identified. Exhibits are not evidence until I admit them into evidence. During your deliberations, you will be able to look at all exhibits admitted into evidence.

There are many rules that govern whether something will be admitted into evidence. As one side presents evidence, the other side has the right to object and to ask me to decide if the evidence is permitted by the rules. Usually, I will decide immediately, but sometimes I may have to hear arguments outside of your presence.

After the evidence has been presented, I will instruct you on the law that applies to the case and the attorneys will make closing arguments. What the parties say in closing argument is not evidence. The arguments are offered to help you understand the evidence and how the law applies to it.

CACI 102. TAKING NOTES DURING THE TRIAL

You have been given notebooks and may take notes during the trial. Do not take the notebooks out of the courtroom or jury room at any time during the trial. You may take your notes into the jury room during deliberations.

You should use your notes only to remind yourself of what happened during the trial. Do not let your note-taking interfere with your ability to listen carefully to all the testimony and to watch the witnesses as they testify. Nor should you allow your impression of a witness or other evidence to be influenced by whether or not other jurors are taking notes. Your independent recollection of the evidence should govern your verdict, and you should not allow yourself to be influenced by the notes of other jurors if those notes differ from what you remember.

[The court reporter is making a record of everything that is said. If during deliberations you have a question about what the witness said, you should ask that the court reporter's records be read to you. You must accept the court reporter's record as accurate.]

At the end of the trial, your notes will be [collected and destroyed/collected and retained by the court but not as a part of the case record/ [specify other disposition]].

Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc. and Fremont California Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses, North Unit are entitled to the same fair and impartial treatment that you would give to an individual. You must decide this case with the same fairness that you would use if you were deciding the case between individuals.

When I use words like "person" or "he" or "she" in these instructions to refer to a party, those instructions also apply to Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc. and Fremont California Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses, North Unit.

CACI 106. EVIDENCE

Sworn testimony, documents, or anything else may be admitted into evidence. You must decide what the facts are in this case from the evidence you see or hear during the trial. You may not consider as evidence anything that you see or hear when court is not in session, even something done or said by one of the parties, attorneys, or witnesses.

What the attorneys say during the trial is not evidence. In their opening statements and closing arguments, the attorneys will talk to you about the law and the evidence. What the lawyers say may help you understand the law and the evidence, but their statements and arguments are not evidence.

The attorneys' questions are not evidence. Only the witnesses' answers are evidence. You should not think that something is true just because an attorney's question suggests that it is true. However, the attorneys for both sides can agree that certain facts are true. This agreement is called a "stipulation." No other proof is needed and you must accept those facts as true in this trial.

Each side has the right to object to evidence offered by the other side. If I do not agree with the objection, I will say it is overruled. If I overrule an objection, the witness will answer and you may consider the evidence. If I agree with the objection, I will say it is sustained. If I sustain an objection, you must ignore the question. If the witness did not answer, you must not guess what he or she might have said or why I sustained the objection. If the witness has already answered, you must ignore the answer.

An attorney may make a motion to strike testimony that you have heard. If I grant the motion, you must totally disregard that testimony. You must treat it as though it did not exist.

CACI 107. WITNESSES

A witness is a person who has knowledge related to this case. You will have to decide whether you believe each witness and how important each witness's testimony is to the case. You may believe all, part, or none of a witness's testimony.

In deciding whether to believe a witness's testimony, you may consider, among other factors, the following:

(a) How well did the witness see, hear, or otherwise sense what he or she described in court?

(b) How well did the witness remember and describe what happened?

(c) How did the witness look, act, and speak while testifying?

(d) Did the witness have any reason to say something that was not true? Did the witness show any bias or prejudice? Did the witness have a personal relationship with any of the parties involved in the case? Does the witness have a personal stake in how this case is decided?

(e) What was the witness's attitude toward this case or about giving testimony?

Sometimes a witness may say something that is not consistent with something else he or she said. Sometimes different witnesses will give different versions of what happened. People often forget things or make mistakes in what they remember. Also, two people may see the same event but remember it differently. You may consider these differences, but do not decide that testimony is untrue just because it differs from other testimony.

However, if you decide that a witness has deliberately testified untruthfully about something important, you may choose not to believe anything that witness said. On the other hand, if you think the witness testified untruthfully about some things but told the truth about others, you may accept the part you think is true and ignore the rest.

Do not make any decision simply because there were more witnesses on one side than on the other. If you believe it is true, the testimony of a single witness is enough to prove a fact.

You must not be biased in favor of or against any witness because of his or her disability, gender, race, religion, ethnicity, sexual orientation, age, national origin, [or] socioeconomic status.

CACI 112. QUESTIONS FROM JURORS

If, during the trial, you have a question that you believe should be asked of a witness, you may write out the question and send it to me through my courtroom staff. I will share your question with the attorneys and decide whether it may be asked.

Do not feel disappointed if your question is not asked. Your question may not be asked for a variety of reasons. For example, the question may call for an answer that is not allowed for legal reasons. Also, you should not try to guess the reason why a question is not asked or speculate about what the answer might have been. Because the decision whether to allow the question is mine alone, do not hold it against any of the attorneys or their clients if your question is not asked.

Remember that you are not an advocate for one side or the other. Each of you is an impartial judge of the facts. Your questions should be posed in as neutral a fashion as possible. Do not discuss any question asked by any juror with any other juror until after deliberations begin.

CACI 113. BIAS

Each one of us has biases about or certain perceptions or stereotypes of other people. We may be aware of some of our biases, though we may not share them with others. We may not be fully aware of some of our other biases.

Our biases often affect how we act, favorably or unfavorably, toward someone. Bias can affect our thoughts, how we remember, what we see and hear, whom we believe or disbelieve, and how we make important decisions.

As jurors you are being asked to make very important decisions in this case. You must not let bias, prejudice, or public opinion influence your decision.

Your verdict must be based solely on the evidence presented. You must carefully evaluate the evidence and resist any urge to reach a verdict that is influenced by bias for or against any party or witness.

CACI 114. BENCH CONFERENCES AND CONFERENCES IN CHAMBERS

From time to time during the trial, it may become necessary for me to talk with the attorneys out of the hearing of the jury, either by having a conference at the bench when the jury is present in the courtroom, or by calling a recess to discuss matters outside of your presence. The purpose of these conferences is not to keep relevant information from you, but to decide how certain evidence is to be treated under the rules of evidence. Do not be concerned about our discussions or try to guess what is being said.

I may not always grant an attorney's request for a conference. Do not consider my granting or denying a request for a conference as any indication of my opinion of the case or of my view of the evidence.

CACI 116. WHY ELECTRONIC COMMUNICATIONS AND RESEARCH ARE PROHIBITED

I know that many of us are used to communicating and perhaps even learning by electronic communications and research. However, there are good reasons why you must not electronically communicate or do any research on anything having to do with this trial or the parties.

In court, jurors must make important decisions that have consequences for the parties. Those decisions must be based only on the evidence that you hear in this courtroom.

The evidence that is presented in court can be tested; it can be shown to be right or wrong by either side; it can be questioned; and it can be contradicted by other evidence. What you might read or hear on your own could easily be wrong, out of date, or inapplicable to this case.

The parties can receive a fair trial only if the facts and information on which you base your decisions are presented to you as a group, with each juror having the same opportunity to see, hear, and evaluate the evidence.

Also, a trial is a public process that depends on disclosure in the courtroom of facts and evidence. Using information gathered in secret by one or more jurors undermines the public process and violates the rights of the parties.

CACI 200. OBLIGATION TO PROVE--MORE LIKELY TRUE THAN NOT TRUE

A party must persuade you, by the evidence presented in court, that what he or she is required to prove is more likely to be true than not true. This is referred to as "the burden of proof."

After weighing all of the evidence, if you cannot decide that something is more likely to be true than not true, you must conclude that the party did not prove it. You should consider all the evidence, no matter which party produced the evidence.

In criminal trials, the prosecution must prove that the defendant is guilty beyond a reasonable doubt. But in civil trials, such as this one, the party who is required to prove something need prove only that it is more likely to be true than not true.

CACI 202. DIRECT AND INDIRECT EVIDENCE

Evidence can come in many forms. It can be testimony about what someone saw or heard or smelled. It can be an exhibit admitted into evidence. It can be someone's opinion.

Some evidence proves a fact directly, such as testimony of a witness who saw a jet plane flying across the sky. Some evidence proves a fact indirectly, such as testimony of a witness who saw only the white trail that jet planes often leave. This indirect evidence is sometimes referred to as "circumstantial evidence." In either instance, the witness's testimony is evidence that a jet plane flew across the sky.

As far as the law is concerned, it makes no difference whether evidence is direct or indirect. You may choose to believe or disbelieve either kind. Whether it is direct or indirect, you should give every piece of evidence whatever weight you think it deserves.

CACI 406. APPORTIONMENT OF RESPONSIBILITY

[Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc. and Fremont California Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses, North Unit claim that the fault of Jonathan Kendrick also contributed to Candace Conti's harm. To succeed on this claim, Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc. and Fremont California Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses, North Unit must prove both of the following:

1. That Jonathan Kendrick was at fault; and

2. That the fault of Jonathan Kendrick was a substantial factor in causing Candace Conti's harm.

If you find that the negligence or fault of more than one person including Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc. and Fremont California Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses, North Unit and Jonathan Kendrick was a substantial factor in causing Candace Conti's harm, you must then decide how much responsibility each has by assigning percentages of responsibility to each person listed on the verdict form. The percentages must total 100 percent.

You will make a separate finding of Candace Conti's total damages, if any. In determining an amount of damages, you should not consider any person's assigned percentage of responsibility.

"Person" can mean an individual or a corporation.

Candace Conti claims that she was harmed by the negligence of Elders Gary Abrahamson, Michael Clarke, and the legal and service departments of the Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc.

Candace Conti also claims that Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc. and Fremont California Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses, North Unit are responsible for the harm because Elders Gary Abrahamson and Michael Clark were acting as its agents when the conduct occurred. CACI 3900. INTRODUCTION TO TORT DAMAGES--LIABILITY CONTESTED

If you decide that Candace Conti has proved her claim against Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc. and Fremont California Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses, North Unit, you also must decide how much money will reasonably compensate Candace Conti for the harm. This compensation is called "damages."

The amount of damages must include an award for each item of harm that was caused by Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc. and Fremont California Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses, North Unit's wrongful conduct, even if the particular harm could not have been anticipated.

Candace Conti does not have to prove the exact amount of damages that will provide reasonable compensation for the harm. However, you must not speculate or guess in awarding damages.

2. Determine the number of years that this loss will continue. Enter this amount into Worksheet A, Step 2.

3. Select the interest rate that you decide represents the most likely rate of return on money invested today over that period of years. Enter this amount into Worksheet A, Step 3.

4. Select the appropriate Present Value Factor from Table A. To locate this factor, use the Number of Years from Step 2 on the worksheet and the Interest Rate from Step 3 on the worksheet and find the number that is the intersection of the Interest Rate column and Number of Years row. (For example, if the number of years is 15 and the interest rate is 10 percent, the corresponding Present Value Factor is 7.61.) Enter the factor into Worksheet A, Step 4.

5. Multiply the amount of Candace Conti's annual future loss from Step 1 by the factor from Step 4. This is the present value of Candace Conti's total future loss for [e.g., lost income]. Enter this amount into Worksheet A, Step 5.

CACI 5000. DUTIES OF THE JUDGE AND JURY

Members of the jury, you have now heard all the evidence [and the closing arguments of the attorneys]. [The attorneys will have one last chance to talk to you in closing argument. But before they do, it] [It] is my duty to instruct you on the law that applies to this case. You must follow these instructions [as well as those that I previously gave you]. You will have a copy of my instructions with you when you go to the jury room to deliberate. [I have provided each of you with your own copy of the instructions.] [I will display each instruction on the screen.]

You must decide what the facts are. You must consider all the evidence and then decide what you think happened. You must decide the facts based on the evidence admitted in this trial.

Do not allow anything that happens outside this courtroom to affect your decision. Do not talk about this case or the people involved in it with anyone, including family and persons living in your household, friends and coworkers, spiritual leaders, advisors, or therapists. Do not do any research on your own or as a group. Do not use dictionaries or other reference materials.

These prohibitions on communications and research extend to all forms of electronic communications. Do not use any electronic devices or media, such as a cell phone or smart phone, PDA, computer, tablet device, the Internet, any Internet service, any text or instant-messaging service, any Internet chat room, blog, or website, including social networking websites or online diaries, to send or receive any information to or from anyone about this case or your experience as a juror until after you have been discharged from your jury duty.

Do not investigate the case or conduct any experiments. Do not contact anyone to assist you, such as a family accountant, doctor, or lawyer. Do not visit or view the scene of any event involved in this case. If you happen to pass by the scene, do not stop or investigate. All jurors must see or hear the same evidence at the same time. [Do not read, listen to, or watch any news accounts of this trial.] You must not let bias, sympathy, prejudice, or public opinion influence your decision.

I will now tell you the law that you must follow to reach your verdict. You must follow the law exactly as I give it to you, even if you disagree with it. If the attorneys [have said/say] anything different about what the law means, you must follow what I say.

In reaching your verdict, do not guess what I think your verdict should be from something I may have said or done.

Pay careful attention to all the instructions that I give you. All the instructions are important because together they state the law that you will use in this case. You must consider all of the instructions together.

After you have decided what the facts are, you may find that some instructions do not apply. In that case, follow the instructions that do apply and use them together with the facts to reach your verdict.

If I repeat any ideas or rules of law during my instructions, that does not mean that these ideas or rules are more important than the others. In addition, the order in which the instructions are given does not make any difference.

[Most of the instructions are typed. However, some handwritten or typewritten words may have been added, and some words may have been deleted. Do not discuss or consider why words may have been added or deleted. Please treat all the words the same, no matter what their format. Simply accept the instruction in its final form.]

CACI 5002. EVIDENCE

Sworn testimony, documents, or anything else may be admitted into evidence. You must decide what the facts are in this case from the evidence you have seen or heard during the trial, including any exhibits that I admit into evidence. You may not consider as evidence anything that you saw or heard when court was not in session, even something done or said by one of the parties, attorneys, or witnesses.

What the attorneys say during the trial is not evidence. In their opening statements and closing arguments, the attorneys talk to you about the law and the evidence. What the lawyers say may help you understand the law and the evidence, but their statements and arguments are not evidence.

The attorneys' questions are not evidence. Only the witnesses' answers are evidence. You should not think that something is true just because an attorney's question suggested that it was true. [However, the attorneys for both sides have agreed that certain facts are true. This agreement is called a stipulation. No other proof is needed and you must accept those facts as true in this trial.]

Each side had the right to object to evidence offered by the other side. If I sustained an objection to a question, you must ignore the question. If the witness did not answer, you must not guess what he or she might have said or why I sustained the objection. If the witness already answered, you must ignore the answer.

[During the trial I granted a motion to strike testimony that you heard. You must totally disregard that testimony. You must treat it as though it did not exist.]

CACI 5003. WITNESSES

A witness is a person who has knowledge related to this case. You will have to decide whether you believe each witness and how important each witness's testimony is to the case. You may believe all, part, or none of a witness's testimony.

In deciding whether to believe a witness's testimony, you may consider, among other factors, the following:

(a) How well did the witness see, hear, or otherwise sense what he or she described in court?

(b) How well did the witness remember and describe what happened?

(c) How did the witness look, act, and speak while testifying?

(d) Did the witness have any reason to say something that was not true? Did the witness show any bias or prejudice? Did the witness have a personal relationship with any of the parties involved in the case? Does the witness have a personal stake in how this case is decided?

(e) What was the witness's attitude toward this case or about giving testimony?

Sometimes a witness may say something that is not consistent with something else he or she said. Sometimes different witnesses will give different versions of what happened. People often forget things or make mistakes in what they remember. Also, two people may see the same event but remember it differently. You may consider these differences, but do not decide that testimony is untrue just because it differs from other testimony.

However, if you decide that a witness deliberately testified untruthfully about something important, you may choose not to believe anything that witness said. On the other hand, if you think the witness testified untruthfully about some things but told the truth about others, you may accept the part you think is true and ignore the rest.

Do not make any decision simply because there were more witnesses on one side than on the other. If you believe it is true, the testimony of a single witness is enough to prove a fact.

You must not be biased in favor of or against any witness because of his or her disability, gender, race, religion, ethnicity, sexual orientation, age, national origin, [or] socioeconomic status[, or [insert any other impermissible form of bias]].

CACI 5009. PREDELIBERATION INSTRUCTIONS

When you go to the jury room, the first thing you should do is choose a presiding juror. The presiding juror should see to it that your discussions are orderly and that everyone has a fair chance to be heard.

It is your duty to talk with one another in the jury room and to consider the views of all the jurors. Each of you must decide the case for yourself, but only after you have considered the evidence with the other members of the jury. Feel free to change your mind if you are convinced that your position should be different. You should all try to agree. But do not give up your honest beliefs just because the others think differently.

Please do not state your opinions too strongly at the beginning of your deliberations or immediately announce how you plan to vote as it may interfere with an open discussion. Keep an open mind so that you and your fellow jurors can easily share ideas about the case.

You should use your common sense, but do not use or consider any special training or unique personal experience that any of you have in matters involved in this case. Your training or experience is not a part of the evidence received in this case.

Sometimes jurors disagree or have questions about the evidence or about what the witnesses said in their testimony. If that happens, you may ask to have testimony read back to you [or ask to see any exhibits admitted into evidence that have not already been provided to you]. Also, jurors may need further explanation about the laws that apply to the case. If this happens during your discussions, write down your questions and give them to the [clerk/bailiff/court attendant]. I will talk with the attorneys before I answer so it may take some time. You should continue your deliberations while you wait for my answer. I will do my best to answer them. When you write me a note, do not tell me how you voted on an issue until I ask for this information in open court.

[At least nine jurors must agree on a verdict. When you have finished filling out the form, your presiding juror must write the date and sign it at the bottom and then notify the

[bailiff/clerk/court attendant] that you are ready to present your verdict in the courtroom.]

Your decision must be based on your personal evaluation of the evidence presented in the case. Each of you may be asked in open court how you voted on each question.

While I know you would not do this, I am required to advise you that you must not base your decision on chance, such as a flip of a coin. If you decide to award damages, you may not agree in advance to simply add up the amounts each juror thinks is right and then, without further deliberations, make the average your verdict.

You may take breaks, but do not discuss this case with anyone, including each other, until all of you are back in the jury room.

Case No.: HG11558324

DEFENDANT WATCHTOWER AND NORTH FREMONT CONGREGATION'S LEGAL BRIEFING REGARDING THE EXCLUSION OF ANY EVIDENCE OR TESTIMONY RELATED TO THE CONSENSUAL ADULT SEXUAL ACTIVITY ENGAGED IN BY JONATHAN KENDRICK AND CLAUDIA FRANCIS

TRIAL DATE: May 21, 2012

Defendant Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc. (hereinafter "Watchtower") and Defendant North Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses, Fremont, California (hereinafter "North Fremont Congregation") (collectively referred to as the "Church Defendants") hereby submit this legal briefing requesting the exclusion of any evidence or testimony related to any consensual adult sexual activity engaged in between individual

Defendant Jonathan Kendrick (hereinafter "Kendrick") and non-party Claudia Francis. That evidence should be excluded because allowing such evidence to be presented would be an invasion of Ms. Francis own rights to privacy and, further, such evidence is not relevant to any of the issues presented in this lawsuit. It has no probative value whatsoever.

Last fall, this Court entered an Order compelling the Church Defendants to produce certain documents in discovery, including letters that contained confidential and private information regarding individuals who are not parties to this lawsuit. Specifically, one of the letters that was ordered to be disclosed involved penitential communications of Claudia Francis to elders. Those communications are protected by Evidence Code sections 1032-1034.

In weighing the privacy interests of third parties like Claudia Francis, courts will also consider "the nature of the information sought, its inherent intrusiveness, and any specific showing of a need for privacy, including any specific harm that disclosure of the information might cause." Schnabel v. Superior Court, (1993) 5 Cal. 4th 704, 21 Cal. Rptr. 2d 200. For example, the third party may demonstrate that public disclosure of confidential information would embarrass persons not involved in the litigation. (Id.)

Here, Plaintiff threatens to make public to the world that Claudia Francis (who at all times relevant to this case was an adult) had engaged in consensual sexual activity with Kendrick. Indeed, what is more "sensitive" than the activities an adult consents to do with another adult in the privacy of their own home. Due to the inherently sensitive and private information Plaintiff wishes to reveal regarding Claudia Francis, Plaintiff must make a substantial showing of the need for the disclosure of this information at trial. (See Tien v. Superior Court (2006) 139 Cal.App.4th 528. This Plaintiff cannot do, inasmuch as Ms. Francis' consensual sexual activity with Kendrick is not relevant to Plaintiff's claims, and allowing such evidence to be presented to the jury would be unfairly and unduly prejudicial.

Further, "'[r]elevant evidence' means evidence . . . having any tendency in reason to prove or disprove any disputed fact that is of consequence to the determination of the action." (Cal. Evid. Code § 210.) Plaintiff's lawsuit is based on her allegations that she was sexually abused by Kendrick when she was about 9-11 years old. Evidence that Kendrick engaged in consensual sexual activity with an adult woman will not help prove or disprove whether Kendrick did sexually abuse Plaintiff. Thus, testimony or evidence concerning Kendrick's consensual adult sexual activity with Claudia Francis is not relevant. See People v. Michael James Stanley (1992) 6 Cal.App.4th 700, 706 (evidence of prior consensual sexual conduct with a third party is relevant only to buttress other evidence of the defendant's state of mind).

This Court, in its discretion, "may exclude evidence if its probative value is substantially outweighed by the probability that its admission will (a) necessitate undue consumption of time or (b) create substantial danger of undue prejudice, of confusing the issues, or of misleading the jury." (Cal. Evid. Code § 352.) Again, evidence that Kendrick and Ms. Francis engaged in consensual adult sexual activity is not only more prejudicial then probative of any fact at issue, it would also confuse the issues and mislead the jury.

In addition, when determining whether private information about a third party should be revealed, the Court must take into consideration the purpose of the information sought and the effect that disclosure will have on the parties and on the trial. (Valley Bank of Nevada v. Superior Court (1975) 15 Cal.3d 652.) Plaintiff asserts that the evidence of Kendrick's sexual activity with the adult Claudia Francis is relevant to show Kendrick's so-called "grooming" activities. Typically, "grooming" evidence shows behaviors that an offender may engage in with a child to endear him to a child, such as giving the child compliments, extra time, attention, and gifts to lower the child's inhibitions, retain access to the child, and make the child feel comfortable with increasingly sexual overtures. Kendrick's consensual sexual relationship with an adult woman is not and cannot be deemed a "grooming" activity. Thus, evidence of Claudia Francis' consensual sexual activity with Kendrick cannot be admitted as "grooming" evidence.

Based on the foregoing, this Court should exclude any and all evidence, testimony, argument or reference to any consensual adult sexual activity engaged in between Jonathan Kendrick and Claudia Francis.

Case No.: HG11558324

DEFENDANT WATCHTOWER AND NORTH FREMONT CONGREGATION'S LEGAL BRIEFING REGARDING THE INADEQUACY OF LIMITING INSTRUCTIONS TO THE JURY

TRIAL DATE: May 21, 2012

Defendant Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc. (hereinafter "Watchtower") and Defendant North Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses, Fremont, California (hereinafter "North Fremont Congregation") (collectively referred to as the "Church Defendants") hereby submit this legal briefing regarding the inadequacy of limiting instructions to the jury. This briefing is submitted in support of the Church Defendants' argument that evidence, testimony, argument or any reference to individual defendant Jonathan Kendrick's 2004 felony conviction or Kathleen Conti's alleged prior abuse by an elder in a congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses should be excluded in their entirety because of the substantial and unfair prejudice to the Church Defendants.

Because of the inherently prejudicial nature of other crimes, courts have recognized that limiting instructions are frequently inadequate. People v. Gibson (1976) 56 Cal.App.3d 119, 130 (recognizing that a limiting instruction would have been insufficient, the court of appeal held that the trial court erred by allowing testimony concerning the defendant's prior criminal acts and should have excluded the testimony altogether). The Court of Appeal in Gibson stated:

> It is the essence of sophistry and lack of realism to think that an instruction or admonition to a jury to limit its consideration of highly prejudicial evidence to its limited relevant purpose can have any realistic effect. It is time that we face the realism of jury trials and recognize that jurors are mere mortals. Of what value are the declarations of legal principles with respect to the admissibility of other-crimes evidence . . . if we permit the violation of such principles in their practical application? We live in a dream world if we believe that jurors are capable of hearing such prejudicial evidence but not applying it in an improper manner.
> In the case at bench, the evidence with respect to the prior criminal acts of defendant, testified to by [two witnesses], had to lead inexorably and inevitably to defendant's prejudice. The jury could not be expected to undertake the Herculean task of not using this evidence to establish that defendant committed the murder . . . or that he should be found guilty anyway because he possessed character traits for violence and theft. The expectation that the jury could limit its use of such evidence as circumstantial evidence of defendant's intent and motive, after applying other evidence in the case to reject defendant's alibi defense in accordance with the court's limiting instructions and admonitions, is indeed an exercise in futility and illusory imagery.

Id; see also People v. Guerrero (1976) 16 Cal.3d 719, 730 (granting a new trial, holding that "[n]o limiting instruction, however thoughtfully phrased or often repeated, could erase from jurors' minds the picture of defendant's role in raping a 17-year-old girl and forcing her to commit oral copulation.")

Indeed, the Church Defendants' research has not uncovered any California cases in which a trial court's use of limiting instructions involving prior acts of child sex abuse were upheld.

Based on the foregoing, this Court should exclude any and all evidence, testimony, argument or reference to Kendrick's 2004 felony conviction and Kathleen Conti's alleged prior abuse by a church Elder. In addition, again based on the foregoing, any limiting instruction to the jury on these topics will be ineffective and should be avoided, as thoroughly explained by the Gibson court.

REPLY IN SUPPORT OF MOTION IN LIMINE No. 6

DEFENDANT WATCHTOWER AND NORTH FREMONT CONGREGATION'S MOTION IN LIMINE TO EXCLUDE EVIDENCE RELATING TO ALLEGED CLERGY MALPRACTICE AND MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES IN SUPPORT

DATE	May 18, 2012
TIME	8:30 A.M.
JUDGE	Robert McGuiness
DEPT.	22

TRIAL DATE: May 21, 2012

Plaintiff erroneously suggests that this is not a case of clergy malpractice because it involves child abuse. While child abuse is a reprehensible evil in our society, just because this case involves child abuse does not alter constitutional limitations and restictions applicable to

Defendant Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc. (hereinafter "Watchtower") and Defendant North Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses, Fremont, California (hereinafter "North Fremont Congregation") (collectively referred to as the "Church Defendants"). Furthermore, Plaintiff has not sued the Church Defendants for the intentional tort of child abuse, but instead for their alleged negligent way they performed their duties within the church after being informed that individual defendant Jonathan Kendrick (hereinafter "Kendrick") had abused his step-daughter.

Plaintiff seeks to introduce expert testimony to establish an applicable standard of care[1] regarding what reasonable ministers or elders should have done when they learned in November 1993 through penitential communications that Kendrick sexually abused his step-daughter one time in July 1993. Plaintiff also seeks to argue to the jury that the Church Defendants could have disfellowshipped Kendrick—which Plaintiff concedes is a decision protected under the First Amendment—but chose not to, thereby acting negligently. While Plaintiff would like to cast these claims in a different light, they are clearly being presented as claims for clergy malpractice.

To determine if the North Fremont Congregation's elders met some appropriate standard of care this Court would need to evaluate whether the "Church Defendants performed within the level of expertise expected of a similar professional, i.e., a reasonably prudent bishop, priest, rabbi, minister, or other cleric." (Franco v. The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints (Utah 2007) 21 P.3d 198, 205.) The Franco court continued:

> Defining such a duty would necessarily require a court to express the standard of care to be followed by other reasonable clerics in the performance of their ecclesiastical … duties, which, by its very nature, would embroil the courts in establishing the training, skill, and standards applicable for members of the clergy in this state in a diversity of religions professing widely varying beliefs. This is impossible as it is unconstitutional; to do so would foster an excessive government entanglement with religion in violation of the Establishment Clause.

(Id. at p. 206.) Not insignificantly, the Franco case involved the issue of child abuse.

[1] As argued previously, ministers cannot be held to a standard of care applicable to police officers or professional counselors or psychologists. Those professions require specialized training that gives rise to a heightened duty of care on their part. Such standards cannot be constitutionally imposed on religious ministers.

Plaintiff claims that the Church Defendants' negligence resulted in her being sexually abused by Kendrick. However, just because Plaintiff claims that the Church Defendants alleged negligence resulted in child abuse does not change the fact that the Church Defendants do not have a special or other relationship with Plaintiff or the fact that Plaintiff's standard of care arguments are nothing more than an impermissible clergy malpractice claim. (See Richelle L. v. Roman Catholic Archbishop (2003) 106 Cal.App.4th 257; Nally v. Grace Cmty. Church of the Valley (1988) 47 Cal.3d 278.)

Plaintiff has referenced Juarez v. Boy Scouts of America (2000) 81 Cal.App.4th 377 in this action to support her standard of care arguments and the related view that this is not a clergy malpractice claim. However, Juarez is inapposite here.

Juarez involved claims that an adult scoutmaster abused the plaintiff, a minor boy scout, during officially sanctioned scouting events. In this Jane Doe case, on the other hand, Plaintiff claims she was sexually abused by Kendrick at his home. There is no dispute that at the time of Plaintiff's alleged abuse, Kendrick was not a religious leader and did not hold any position of authority within the North Fremont Congregation. He was simply a member of the congregation. Thus, to analogize to Juarez is mistaken, because the circumstances here would be similar to one boy scout sexually abusing another boy scout a factual scenario that Juarez did not present.

If Plaintiff's negligence claims have any merit, they must be rooted in a generalized duty applicable to all persons.

The fact that Plaintiff's standard of care arguments here are unconstitutional does not mean that religious leaders are always immune from tort liability for their negligent acts. The Church Defendants do not argue that they are immune from religion-neutral laws that are applicable to all members of society. (See Employment Div., Dept. of Human Resources of the State of Or. v. Smith (1990) 110 S.Ct. 1595 (religions must comply with "valid and neutral law[s] of general applicability.") The Smith decision establishes the boundaries within which religions may be found liable for their negligence. If this Court were to find that all citizens had a valid legal duty to act in a certain manner upon learning of allegations of child abuse, then such a duty might also apply to the Church Defendants without running afoul of the Constitution.

Thus, the question is whether there is a generalized duty in society to act in a certain way upon learning of child abuse to protect the public at large from the Perpetrator of the abuse, because otherwise the constitutional protections accorded to religions will be violated. There can be no duty that requires elders to act as a "reasonable elder or religious leader" would or should, because that improperly converts this action to one for clergy malpractice. Whether such a legal duty exists is a matter of law that this Court needs to rule on prior to this case being tried, because this ruling will affect the manner in which both sides present their respective cases to the jury.

CONCLUSION

Plaintiff would like to recharacterize her standard of care arguments as something other than what they really are, namely an impermissible and constitutionally prohibited clergy malpractice claim. If Plaintiff's negligence claims have any merit, they must be rooted in a religion-neutral duty of general applicability to all of society.

REPLY IN SUPPORT OF MOTION IN LIMINE No. 3

DEFENDANT WATCHTOWER AND NORTH FREMONT CONGREGATION'S MOTION IN LIMINE TO EXCLUDE HEARSAY STATEMENTS OF EVELYN KENDRICK AND MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES IN SUPPORT

DATE May 18, 2012
TIME 8:30 A.M.
JUDGE Robert McGuiness
DEPT. 22

TRIAL DATE: May 21, 2012

In opposition to the Church Defendants' motion in limine to preclude the testimony of Evelyn Kendrick, Plaintiff contends that the testimony of Evelyn will not be offered for the truth of the matter asserted, but is offered instead on the issue of notice. Plaintiff adds that the testimony of Evelyn will be offered to impeach the credibility of Defendant North Fremont Congregation's elders Michael L. Clarke and Gary Abrahamson.

First, it is obvious that the testimony of Evelyn Kendrick will be offered for the truth of the matter asserted and not on the issue of notice. The jury would have to accept the truth of Evelyn's testimony (i.e., that Andrea said these things to the elders) before the issue of notice to the elders could even arise. The jury would have to accept Evelyn's version of what Andrea allegedly told the elders during that meeting. Thus, despite what Plaintiff's counsel states, there is no legitimate reason for Evelyn to testify except for the truth of what she states.

Secondly, notice is not even at issue in this case because it has already been admitted by Michael Clarke during his deposition. (Church Defendants' MIL 3, Ex. F.) The evidence is clear that the elders were given notice of Kendrick's conduct by his confession of an incident of abuse with his 15-year-old step-daughter during that meeting of November 11, 1993. That confession by Kendrick was the basis for the November 15, 1993, letter from the North Fremont Congregation elders to Watchtower. (Church Defendants' MIL 3, Ex. C.)

Plaintiff's counsel merely wants Evelyn to give her hearsay testimony in order to unfairly prejudice the Church Defendants by making the nature or quality of the notice seem more egregious. Plaintiff wants the jury to be prejudiced by the hearsay testimony that Andrea allegedly told the elders that Kendrick drugged her, came into her bedroom and placed his hands under her clothing. The danger of allowing this hearsay testimony is further illustrated by the fact that the records of the police interview of Andrea in February, 1994 do not even corroborate Evelyn's claim that Kendrick drugged Andrea. (Church Defendants' MIL 3, Ex. ___.) Andrea told the police that she had taken a Vicodin for her back problem not that Kendrick had given her Vicodin as Evelyn alleges.

Thirdly, plaintiff's counsel has named Andrea on his witness list for this trial. He can easily avoid presenting doubtful, questionable and unreliable hearsay testimony to this Court and the jury by presenting Andrea for direct and cross-examination. If Plaintiff is not able to obtain the cooperation of Andrea, this still does not justify allowing hearsay evidence to be offered.

Finally, Plaintiff's true purpose in trying to have Evelyn, the disgruntled ex-wife of Kendrick and an inactive Jehovah's Witness, testify is to have the jury hear uncorroborated information that will unfairly and unduly prejudice them against the Church Defendants. It would clearly be more prejudicial than probative of any fact at issue, confuse the issues, and mislead the jury. Therefore, Evidence Code section 352 mandates its exclusion.

The proposed testimony of Evelyn Kendrick is hearsay and would be offered for the truth of the matter asserted. The argument that it would be offered to establish notice to the elders is without merit, because notice has already been established and admitted. Any issue of impeachment of the elders goes only to the extent, quality, and nature of the admitted notice, which is not a legitimate issue. Again, notice has already been established. If Plaintiff wants to present a different version of the November 11, 1993 meeting, she should not be allowed to do so by using hearsay testimony. Plaintiff should be made to present Andrea to testify about what she said to the elders.

DEFENDANTS WATCHTOWER AND NORTH FREMONT CONGREGATION'S OPOSITION TO PLAINTIFF'S MOTION IN LIMINE 6

DATE	May 21, 2012
TIME	1:30 P.M.
JUDGE	Robert McGuiness
DEPT.	22

TRIAL DATE: May 21, 2012

Plaintiff has moved to preclude any evidence that the disclosure of Kendrick's confession to the elders and the reason for his removal as a ministerial servant would have violated the minister-communicant privilege.

Plaintiff argues that the confession by Kendrick in front of his wife and step-daughter does not qualify as a "penitential communication" under California law. However, this overlooks the fact that the California Evidence Code defines "penitential communication" as "a communication made in confidence, in the presence of no third person so far as the penitent is aware, to a member of the clergy who ... is authorized ... to hear those communications and ... has a duty to keep those communications secret." (Cal. Evid. Code § 1032.) The elders in this instance spoke with the Kendrick family at their home. That conversation was intended to be confidential and the elders were there as ministers or religious leaders of the local Jehovah's Witnesses congregation under circumstances requiring them to maintain confidentiality. This was clearly a penitential communication within the Jehovah's Witnesses faith. The members of Kendrick's family present were not "unnecessary third persons to the communications." It is necessary for the Court to view "no third person" to mean no unnecessary third person in order to avoid an unconstitutional establishment of religion.

This Court and society in general may be more familiar with confessions of those involving one priest (clergyman) and a penitent. However, this does not allow that to be the standard for "penitential communications" for all religions. The procedures and protocols of the Jehovah's Witnesses faith require at least two elders to speak to a penitent and that conversations with families of the penitent are still considered confidential and must be maintained as such by the elders. This was particularly true in this instance where the two elders were required by the Bible to counsel and reprove Kendrick before all onlookers to his sin (i.e., Evelyn and Andrea). (1 Timothy 5:20.) This Court cannot require one religion's standard to be the standard for all religions. This would result in the Court becoming overly involved in the purely ecclesiastical disciplinary matters of a religion or favoring one religious practice over another.

North Fremont Congregation elders Michael Clarke and Gary Abrahamson went to the Kendrick home at Kendrick's request and heard the confession of Kendrick. The elders viewed it as confidential within the requirements of their faith and in their capacities as congregation elders. The elders' religious beliefs precluded them from revealing that confession. California Evidence Code section 1034 gives them the privilege personally to refuse to disclose the penitential communication. Indeed, the Law Revision Commission Comments are helpful. "The extent to which a clergyman should keep secret or reveal penitential communication is not an appropriate subject for legislation; the matter is better left to the discretion of the individual clergymen involved and the discipline of the religious body of which he is a member." (7 Cal.Rev.Comm. Reports 1 (1965).)

Plaintiff next argues that the congregation should have been informed of the reason for Kendrick's removal from his position as a ministerial servant. Once again, this would have violated the ecclesiastical disciplinary rules of the Jehovah's Witnesses faith and violated the minister-communicant privilege. (Cal. Evid. Code §§ 1033, 1034.) In addition, it would have violated Kendrick's right of privacy and opened the Church Defendants up to a possible claim for defamation.

Plaintiff would have this Court and even the jury violates the First Amendment rights of the Church Defendants by requiring them to impose ecclesiastical discipline in a way that the Court or the jury might require, or deem reasonable rather than in accordance with the religious beliefs and tenets of their faith. This the Court and jury cannot do. The Church Defendants should therefore have unfettered discretion to claim before the jury that they Kendrick confession was considered confidential by them and under their religious beliefs not to be disclosed to the congregation.

REPLY IN SUPPORT OF MOTION IN LIMINE No. 1

DEFENDANTS WATCHTOWER AND NORTH FREMONT CONGREGATION'S REPLY TO PLAINTIFF'S OPPOSITION TO THEIR MOTION IN LIMINE TO EXCLUDE EVIDENCE RELATING TO JONATHAN KENDRICK

DATE May 21, 2012
TIME 1:30 P.M.
JUDGE Robert McGuiness
DEPT. 22

TRIAL DATE: May 21, 2012

Defendant Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc. (hereinafter "Watchtower") and Defendant North Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses, Fremont, California (hereinafter "North Fremont Congregation") (collectively referred to as the "Church Defendants") hereby submit this reply to Plaintiff Jane Doe's (hereinafter "Plaintiff") opposition to their motion in limine to exclude evidence relating to Defendant Jonathan Kendrick (hereinafter "Kendrick") (Motion in Limine No. 1).

Plaintiff seeks to introduce irrelevant and highly and unfairly prejudicial evidence of Kendrick's post 1996 or 1997 activities. The Court should exclude this evidence because the facts of Kendrick's alleged misconduct during this time period does not demonstrate any common plan, scheme, or design such that it proves any fact at issue in this case. The facts related to Kendrick's 2004 conviction and Plaintiff's allegations here are completely dissimilar, and thus Evidence Code section 1101(b) does not apply. Further, even if the Court were, arguendo, to find a common plan, scheme, or design, Kendrick's post 1996/97 activities are still inadmissible under Evidence Code section 352 because such evidence is more prejudicial then probative of any fact at issue, would confuse the issues, and mislead the jury.

As Chief Justice Benjamin Cardozo once said, "[i]n a very real sense a defendant starts his life afresh when he stands before a jury." (People v. Hovarter (2008) 44 Cal.4th 983, 1002, quoting People v. Zackowitz (1930) 254 N.Y. 192, 197 (rejecting prosecution's argument and reversing conviction where highly prejudicial evidence was improperly used to demonstrate defendant's unsavory disposition).) Similarly, Kendrick and the Church Defendants start their lives afresh before the jury in this trial, and evidence of Kendrick's post 1996/97 activities must be excluded.

Evidence of Kendrick's Post 1996/97 Activities is Inadmissible Because They Do Not Demonstrate Any Common Plan, Design, or Scheme.

Pursuant to Evidence Code section 1101(a), character evidence is inadmissible to prove conduct on a specified occasion. Thus, from a starting point, Kendrick's post 1996/97 activities are inadmissible to prove anything in this case, including that Kendrick had the disposition to commit the alleged acts against Plaintiff. Evidence Code section 1101(b) permits evidence of such conduct only where the evidence is offered to prove some fact, including a common plan, scheme, or design. Similarity between the prior acts and acts at issue "must be shown in terms of unique and distinctive features or techniques exhibited by the perpetrator . . . [i]t is not sufficient to show the [acts] were both of the same type, e.g., both were robberies or both were rapes." (People v. Weathers (1969) 274 Cal. App. 232, 238 (emphasis in original); see also People v. King (2010) 183 Cal. App. 4th 1281, 1300-1304 (trial court erred in admitting evidence of prior conduct where the conduct was dissimilar to the conduct at issue and highly prejudicial to defendant).)

Plaintiff claims in her opposition that Kendrick's post 1996/97 conduct is admissible to prove intent, absence of accident, and a common plan. However, the conduct Plaintiff would put in evidence, including Kendrick's 2004 conviction, are so dissimilar that the conduct cannot be admitted under Evidence Code 1101(b). It is telling that Plaintiff's discussion of the 2004 conviction in her opposition does NOT compare that conduct with his alleged conduct at issue in this case—rather, it compares the 2004 conduct to Kendrick's 1993 conduct against his step-daughter. (See Opposition, pg. 4, ln. 17-25.)

In fact, Plaintiff could not have made a comparison between the 2004 conviction and her own allegations, because the two are so dissimilar: The 2004 conviction involved a one-time incident with Kendrick's step-granddaughter. However, Plaintiff claims that Kendrick sexually abused her on hundreds of occasions over a two or three year period. Further, unlike either the 1993 one-time incident with Kendrick's step-daughter or the 2004 conviction for the one-time incident with his step-grandaughter, Plaintiff was not a family member of Kendrick.

Like the facts related to the 2004 conviction, the other conduct Plaintiff seeks to introduce is also completely dissimilar to the facts at issue in this case. For example, Kendrick's alleged adulterous conduct with Claudia Francis involved an alleged consensual affair with an adult woman and has no commonality whatsoever with Plaintiff's allegations regarding her alleged abuse. Kendrick allegedly buying a black bra for a girl also has no relationship to the facts at issue. Buying a black bra on a single shopping trip does not evidence intent, absence of mistake, or common plan or scheme where Plaintiff's allegations are of repeated instances of sexual abuse over a two or three year period.

The cases Plaintiff cites in her opposition to this motion in limine do not help her cause either , because they demonstrate the substantial similarity that must exist for a Court to allow evidence of prior conduct under Evidence Code section 1101(b). For example, in People v.

Branch (2001) 91 Cal.App.4th 274, the court allowed evidence of other allegedly similar conduct because both the other conduct and the conduct at issue involved the molestation of 12-year-old girls in the defendant's home and, in both instances, the defendant accused the victim of doing something wrong. (Id. at p. 277-279, 281.) Thus, that case involved victims of the same age of victims, at the same location, and the defendant making the same statement about both victims.

People v. Escudero (2010) 183 Cal.App.4th 302 is also of no help to Plaintiff. In that case, the court allowed evidence of other conduct under section 1101(b) because the other conduct showed repeated risky sexual pursuits of underage girls with adults nearby and repeated comments about the underage girls' developing bodies. (Id. at 314.) Thus, that case involved the same risky pursuit of victims and the same comments about the victims.[1]

Given the great dissimilarities described above between Kendrick's 2004 conviction and Kendrick's alleged abuse of Plaintiff, Kendrick's post 1996/97 conduct must be excluded from evidence at trial because the conduct simply does not tend to prove any fact in this case.

Finally, assuming, arguendo, that the Court should find the post 1996/97 evidence sufficiently similar to the conduct at issue here and admissible under Evidence Code 1101(b), the Court should still exclude the evidence pursuant to Evidence Code section 352 because it is unfairly prejudicial, will confuse the issues, will mislead and inflame the jury, and will waste trial time. There is also a heightened danger of undue prejudice where there is evidence of sex acts involving children.

Based on the foregoing, the Church Defendants respectfully request this Court exclude all evidence, testimony, or argument concerning Kendrick's actions after the 1996/97 time period, including his 2004 conviction.

---

[1] In citing Escudero, Plaintiff improperly makes the claim that the court found the defendant's sex crimes against adult women probative of defendant's intent to touch a minor victim (presumably to show that a court will admit dissimilar conduct into evidence). (See Opposition, p. 3, ln. 6-10.) What Plaintiff fails to mention, however, is that the court admitted the evidence under Evidence Code section 1108, which only applies to criminal cases. The prior conduct against adult women was not included in the section 1101(b) analysis. The only conduct admitted under section 1101(b) was the extremely similar and repeated conduct of risky pursuits against underage girls about whom the defendant had commented regarding their developing bodies.

The Church Defendants Cannot be Held Liable for Conduct Away from Church Property and Not Part of Church Sponsored Activities

The Church Defendants have argued that the jury should not consider against them any abuse of Plaintiff that may have occurred away from the Kingdom Hall property or that was unrelated to any church-sponsored activities. The underlying premise of this motion is as follows:

1) It is undisputed that Kendrick was not an agent of the Church Defendants at the time of the alleged abuse of Plaintiff.

2) The law is clear that the Church Defendants had no special relationship with Plaintiff that created a duty to protect Plaintiff.

3) The Church Defendants had no power of supervision and control over Kendrick, a congregation member, at the time of the alleged abuse of Plaintiff. Thus, they had no control over Kendrick, especially when he was away from the Kingdom Hall and not engaged in church-sponsored activities.

4) If the Church Defendants had any duty, it arguably would have been to make sure that Kendrick did not have unfettered access to children at the Kingdom Hall or during any church-sponsored activities.

In Eric J. v. Betty M. (1999) 76 Cal.App.4th 715, the Court held that, even in cases of child abuse, the property owner has no duty where the harm to the victim is unrelated to the property owned.

In opposition to this motion in limine, plaintiff argues that Eric J. is inapplicable to cases involving institutional defendants that sponsor or supervise activities involving children. What Plaintiff fails to understand is that these Church Defendants do not sponsor or supervise activities involving children. The Jehovah's Witnesses do not engage in any activities that separate children from their parents.

There is no evidence in this case that the sexual abuse alleged by Plaintiff took place during any church-sponsored activities. Thus, the Church Defendants cannot be held responsible for any abuse of plaintiff by Kendrick at his home, or on a train, or anywhere else away from the Kingdom Hall.

The case of Palsgraf v. Long Island Railroad Co. (N.Y. 1928) 248 N.Y. 339, raised by the Court is interesting, but in this instance, not instructive. In Palsgraf, a passenger running to catch a train that was pulling out of a station was assisted to get on a train by an employee of the railroad. As a result of that assistance, the passenger dropped a package containing fireworks onto the train tracks. The resulting explosion caused injury to the plaintiff, a bystander on the train station platform waiting for a different train. The Court of Appeals (the highest court in the State of New York) found that the duty owed by the defendant railroad if any, was to the passenger who had been assisted in getting on to the train, not to the plaintiff who was standing on the platform. The fact that the defendant railroad had no idea that the package contained fireworks also persuaded the Court of Appeals that the defendant owed no duty to the plaintiff. Although one might argue that Palsgraf might be decided differently today, the zone of danger analysis in that case has no application to this case.

Exhibit 6: Excerpts of Deposition of Laura Fraser, L.C.S.W., (video for use at trial) and exhibit thereto jointly submitted in evidence at trial, submitted in opposition to Defendants' MIL # 2.

Plaintiff also submits an offer of proof as to Defendants' MIL #2, that Plaintiff will testify that one of the reasons for her delayed disclosure was because she feared disfellowshipping in the belief that her mother had been disfellowshipped for her report of her own abuse within Jehovah's Witnesses.

of the meetings on the scheduled -- or I should say in addition to the quarterly meetings.

A And you're asking when the Body of Elders would meet together to discuss something?

Q Yes.

A Might be as frequent as once a month to once every two months.

Q Are there regular gatherings of the entire congregation?

A At our meetings, yes.

Q And how frequently in Fremont North would there be regular gatherings of the entire congregation?

A During that period?

Q Yes, mid-1990s.

A Yes. They would gather for five meetings a week, and generally these would take place on three different days.

Q Would the nature of each of the five meetings a week be the same or would there be a different purpose for some of the meetings than others?

A Yes, different purpose.

Q What would the various purposes be for the meetings?

A Well, we would have a public talk which is designed for new ones, and also the congregation benefits from that as well. Then we would have a discussion of the Watchtower article for the week, which we're encouraged to study beforehand, and we can freely comment; new ones can comment as well.

And then we have what is called the Theocratic Ministry School, where it gives us training in our ministry. And then we have a service meeting which helps us in our field service, to different aspects of that. And then we had a congregation book study and that was usually midweek.

Q In addition to the five meetings a week, are there regular services of some kind in what I will call a religious setting?

A Okay. The only other meetings that we have throughout the week would be meetings for field ministry, where we get together for a few minutes, discuss the presentation, get direction from the brother taking the lead, meaning what territory we would go in.

Q In some religions there is a regular service, if you will, administered or presided over by a pastor or minister or priest depending on the various religious organizations. Is there such a and we encourage them to attend with their parents.

Q And is it correct that many children or minors will attend these meetings and have throughout your years of service as an elder?

A Depending upon how many are in the area and your definition of "many."

Q Would it be accurate to say that children, some children, regularly attend each of the five meetings?

A Yes.

Q In your experience, do children sometimes attend the meetings without their parents being present?

A Yes, they do, but of course they would have to arrange transportation to get there, and so somebody would take oversight of that individual to get them to the meeting and to return them home.

Q When you say "somebody," can you tell me what kind of somebody you're thinking of?

A The parents would arrange for somebody.

Q A person, another member of the congregation?

A Could -- yeah, undoubtedly.

Q During the years that you have served as an elder, has it come to your attention that there is

MR. SIMONS: Q. Have you actually seen this Order before? 09:13:44 09:13:45

A. If I had it would only be through counsel. 09:13:52

Q. Okay. 09:13:54

Do you understand that those questions, that we had some disagreement about and that you were instructed not to answer, are going to come up again today; and that at least for some of those questions, there has been an Order by the Court that they would be answered? 09:13:57 09:13:58 09:14:01 09:14:07 09:14:09 09:14:11

A. Yes. 09:14:12

Q. Okay, fair enough. Thank you. 09:14:13

Let me start with the first question that we dealt with, and that was involving Jonathan Kendrick in his removal as a Ministerial Servant. 09:14:14 09:14:22 09:14:25

Why was Mr. Kendrick removed as a Ministerial Servant? 09:14:28 09:14:31

A. He was removed because of improper conduct. He was no longer irreprehensible or free from accusation. 09:14:32 09:14:34 09:14:38

Q. And what was the conduct that was involved in that removal? 09:14:41 09:14:44

A. It was the conduct of, he admitted to 09:14:47 touching briefly and inadvertently his stepdaughter's breast, which was over the clothing. 09:14:51 09:14:56

Q. Um-hum. 09:14:59

Did he make this admission to you? 09:15:01

A. He did make the admission to myself, myself and another brother. 09:15:04 09:15:08

Q. Okay. Where did that admission occur? 09:15:10

A. It occurred at their house. 09:15:15

Q. Not the conduct but the conversation in which he admitted it. 09:15:18 09:15:21

A. The conversation. Right. Right. 09:15:23

Q. Okay. And when you say "at their house," was that -- 09:15:24 09:15:26

A. The Kendricks' house. 09:15:26

Q. Okay. 09:15:28

At the time that that conversation occurred, was that the house that Evelyn Kendrick, Andrea Kendrick, and Jonathan Kendrick were all residing at? 09:15:30 09:15:33 09:15:36 09:15:40

A. Correct. 09:15:41

Q. Although Andrea, I guess, is not a Kendrick. 09:15:41 09:15:44

A. That would be true. 09:15:45

Q. Yes. Okay. 09:15:46

Who was present during this conversation? 09:15:47

A. The three of them, plus myself and another brother, Michael Clarke. 09:15:50 09:15:53

Q. And how was it that you came to the Kendrick home to have this conversation? 09:15:56 09:16:00

A. It was prearranged. 09:16:03

Q. Was there something that generated the conversation and the arrangements to go and meet with the Kendricks? 09:16:06 09:16:12 09:16:15

A. Yes. 09:16:18

Q. What was that? 09:16:19

A. Well, they, uh -- 09:16:27

I think Jonathan went to Brother Clarke and confessed it. So, as a body we met and decided to form an investigating committee. 09:16:29 09:16:31 09:16:35

Q. All right. And when you say "as a body we met," are you talking about the Elders of the North Congregation? 09:16:36 09:16:39 09:16:41

A. Yes, I am. 09:16:42

Q. Do you know who the original conversation, the very first conversation that occurred involving this touching, was with in terms of someone from the Kendrick family and someone from the Body of Elders? 09:16:46 09:16:49 09:16:52 09:16:56

A. Picking up children, hugging children, kissing children, things of that nature.

Q. Was Mr. Kendrick prohibited from going into territories to do preaching and spreading the word?

A. No.

Q. Was he prohibited from going into neighborhoods to spread the word when he was in the company of children?

A. We....

I don't recall how we limited that. I could just say that when he came out or met to go out into the ministry, we did our best to make sure he worked with an adult, and preferably one of us, you know, one of the Elders.

Q. Did you have any concern that Mr. Kendrick would be at risk to molest another girl in a setting outside of the direct activities of the congregation?

A. Please repeat?

I'm sorry.

MR. SCHNACK: I was going to say, I was going to object to it. I don't know what you mean by "direct activities" as opposed to "indirect activities."

Q. Did Mr. Kendrick also tell you that his daughter Andrea was now using the abuse, that she had experienced, as a tool to threaten when she wanted something? 12:10:41 12:10:44 12:10:53 12:10:59

A. Yes. 12:10:59

Q. Mr. Kendrick told you that. 12:11:00

A. Both him and his wife, Evelyn. 12:11:02

Q. Okay. And was that also in the meeting with Andrea present in the Kendrick home? 12:11:05 12:11:07

A. Yes. 12:11:10

And I believe he indicated, in addition to his conscious, that this would be a reason for us to -- to come over and talk to him about it. 12:11:29 12:11:33 12:11:37

A. Um... is that her name? Yes. 12:11:39

Q. Okay. 12:11:40

And you discuss that, in the bottom paragraph of the November 16th -- I'm sorry,

There's information here concerning Toi Register having had her chest, quote, "accidentally touched," end quote, by Mr. Kendrick. 12:11:42 12:11:47 12:11:50

Was it Mr. Kendrick that told you that? 12:11:51

A. Boy. This was repeated to us by.... 12:11:53

I don't know where that information -- how we gathered it. It might have been mentioned by the stepdaughter. We -- 12:11:53 12:11:56 12:12:01

We did not talk with Toi Register. 12:12:06

Q. Okay. 12:12:10

Was there any reason that you did not talk to Toi Register to see if the touching of her chest by Brother Kendrick was actually accidental, as opposed to intentional? 12:12:11 12:12:13 12:12:19 12:12:23

A. I don't remember why we did not talk with her. 12:12:24 12:12:26

Q. Were you concerned on November 15th, 1993, that there might be other young girls who Brother Kendrick had been touching in their breasts? 12:12:32 12:12:35 12:12:43

DECLERATION OF MICHAEL LEE CLARKE

I, Michael Lee Clarke, hereby declare:

1. I am an elder in the North Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses, Fremont, California, and have been an elder there since 1989.

2. Gary Abrahamson, also an elder at that time, and I visited the home of Jonathan, and Evelyn Kendrick and Evelyn's daughter, Andrea, to investigate an allegation that Jonathan had improperly touched Andrea.

3. During the conversation that day in my presence and the presence of Andrea, Evelyn, Jonathan and Gary Abrahamson, Jonathan Kendrick admitted touching Andrea's breast over her clothes when he entered the home in the dark and she was sleeping on the living room couch.

4. Andrea and Evelyn never contradicted Jonathan's version of this incident.

5. I have read the Declaration of Evelyn Kendrick dated March 26, 2012.

6. At no time did Andrea say that Jonathan had given her any drugs, that Jonathan watched television with her in her bedroom, that Jonathan had reached inside her bra and touched her breast, or that he had put his hand inside her pants and touched her genitals.

7. If Andrea, or anyone else, had said such things as described in the Declaration of Evelyn Kendrick, a judicial committee would have been formed.

I declare under the penalty of perjury under the laws of the State of California that the foregoing is true and correct, and that I am competent to testify as to the facts said forth herein.

Executed this 23, day of April, 2012, at Fremont, California.

Bible.
Q Are the mid week meetings that are held at Kingdom Halls attended customarily by children as well as adults?
A Yes.
Q What does the weekend meeting usually consist of.
A It consists of two meetings, a public talk addressed to the public, and then a consideration of the study edition of the Watchtower. There are articles that are taken each week from that Watchtower and considered during the course of that hour, on a variety of subjects.
Q And are the weekend meetings customarily held at the Kingdom Hall?
A Yes, in this country.
Q Are there other meetings routinely held, in your experience and knowledge, that would be smaller study groups held perhaps in homes of individuals who are congregation members?
A Not a study group. We do have places, homes, private homes, where we gather for a very, very brief period of time, ten to fifteen minutes, to meet prior to engaging in the public ministry.

Q Are the weekend meetings customarily attended by children?
A The public talk and Watchtower study at the congregation, at the Kingdom Hall?
Q Yes.
A Yes.
Q When you say public ministry, is service work and public ministry, are those concepts the same?
A Service work meaning?
Q Does service work as it's customarily used in your vocabulary include the public ministry that you were about to describe for me?
A We don't use the terminology "service work." We do use the word service, it's field service or field ministry, and yes, it's synonymous with the ministry.
Q So it's service, not service work?
A Right.
Q Thank you. My apologies. And how often are congregations involved, say, on a weekly basis in field service?
A Typically we have meetings all during the week in the homes, usually in the mornings, sometimes in the afternoons, in meeting for field service. So in some cases it's seven days a week, either in the homes or at our places of worship, our Kingdom Halls. In other areas where the congregations are much smaller, they may have arrangements to meet less than that.

Q And by field service or public ministry, does that mean going into the community to preach the gospel and spiritual teachings of Jehovah's Witnesses?
A Yes, the gospel, speaking about the Bible, and yes.
Q And are children allowed to engage in the field service work, I'm sorry, field service, I beg your pardon?
A Yes.
Q What does the term "publisher" mean?
A A publisher can refer to a baptised or unbaptized associate of the congregation.
Q Can a child be a publisher?
A Yes.
Q And can a child be an unbaptized publisher?
A Yes.

Q What is the role of an unbaptized publisher in field service?
A The same as an adult publisher.
Q And what is that?
A Reading the Bible, sharing with others one's faith, one's conviction, teaching them about what the Bible says is the hope for the future. It's all part of the ministry, whether one is an adult or a minor.
Q Does field service work include manning a table or a booth or some kind of a fixed place in a public location where persons can come by and approach and be given Awake or Watchtower or other information?
A That would be part of it. That is one form, one aspect of the public ministry.
Q Does it include going into communities, into residences or neighborhoods, and going door to door as well?
A That's part of it, yes.
Q And that is usually done in smaller groups of perhaps two or three individuals?
A Yes.
Q And children are allowed to do that?

A Yes. 11:57

Q What are the other ways in which field service is accomplished? 11:57

A Well, we have the public ministry which often involves calling on homes, the house to house ministry. I think that's probably what Jehovah's Witnesses are more known for than anything else, their public ministry, waking you up early in the morning is part of it. Another part of it is, as you mentioned, the street witnessing, talking to passer-bys, engaging them in conversation. Part of it is making visits on people who have expressed interest in calling back on them. There are many different types of ministry. 11:57 11:57 11:57 11:57 11:57 11:57 11:57 11:58 11:58 11:58

Q Are any of these types of ministry ones which children are precluded from participating in? 11:58 11:58

A Some of the work that's done in the public, like on the street, maybe in metropolitan areas, there's always concern about children, and we want to protect them and keep them from harm. So there may be some times where we would recommend that children not participate in that aspect of the ministry, such as in the business territories, or on the street. Generally that's up to the parent to 11:58 11:58 11:58 11:58 11:59 11:59 11:59 11:59 must accept her hearsay statement that Andrea said that Kendrick had touched her bare breasts. If that hearsay is not admitted, we are left with what Kendrick confessed to the two elders about the incident.

Kendrick confessed only to having briefly and inadvertently touched his stepdaughter's breast over her clothing. (Watchtower Ex. N, Deposition of Gary Abrahamson, Volume II, October 25, 2011, pp. 119:15-120:2; Watchtower Ex. O, Declaration of Michael Lee Clarke; Watchtower Ex. P, Declaration of Gary A. Abrahamson.) When Kendrick made that confession, his wife Evelyn and stepdaughter Andrea were present, along with elders Gary Abrahamson and Michael Clarke. (Watchtower Ex. N, deposition of Gary Abrahamson, Volume II, October 24, 2011, pp. 120:25-121:2; Watchtower Ex. O, Declaration of Michael Lee Clarke; Watchtower Ex. P, Declaration of Gary A. Abrahamson.) Thus, when the North Fremont Congregation elders spoke with Kendrick in the presence of Andrea and her mother, he did not admit to anything beyond that described above.

Under these circumstances, no so-called judicial committee of elders was formed. However, Kendrick was deleted or removed from his position as a ministerial servant due to the allegation of inadvertent touching of another person's private bodily part (breast). An announcement was made to the entire congregation that he was no longer serving in that capacity, and he never again held any position of responsibility or authority in any congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses.

Thus, Dr. Salter's statement that there was a "confirmed" allegation of child molestation preceding Kendrick's alleged abuse of Plaintiff is false. As a result, her assertion of the Church Defendants' violations of standards among religious and other institutions where there is a "confirmed report" of child abuse, and where the accused is a "confirmed abuser," do not apply in this case.

Dr. Salter refers to what she calls "standards of care" regarding the prevention of child abuse, but provides no sources of those supposed standards, nor does she show how they apply to the Church Defendants and the facts of this case. In her reference to the necessity for training and education in the prevention of child abuse, she completely ignores all of the literature and

S: Candace is a little bit brighter in affect today although at times she did become teary in discussions about her mother. She does not know how long her mother will be in LA with mother's current boyfriend but the issue makes Candace very sad. She talked about many different family events where Candace has felt in the middle or has felt responsible for discord in the family. She states that she recognizes now these things aren't her fault but she's easily triangulated and this elicits many feelings. Candace also talked about different events when her mother went "wacko" and became very enraged at Candace, demanding money from Candace, etc., when this was a completely unreasonable request due to Candace's age and lack of funds. Although Candace's mother has talked to her about much of the abuse she suffered, she has never shared with Candace what her diagnosis is. Candace doesn't have a name for her mother's illness but she recognizes that mother does have an emotional disturbance. Candace is trying very hard to be involved in different extracurricular activities but, as a result of strapped funds, Candace is not able to join things or feels that the cost of entering the soccer team and/or band is prohibitive. She was hopping that therapist would talk with her father about this. When Candace and therapist left session to discuss with father ways that the family might set as a goal for Candace to be involved in some structured activities, went into the waiting room to find father and mother sitting there which was of great surprise to therapist and Candace. Mother was very affectionate to Candace and Candace was somewhat standoffish although polite, she seems to be protecting herself and was not willing to pursue mother as wholeheartedly and affectionately as mother was approaching her.

S: Candace has not been here in several weeks and states that one thing that's confusing to her is frequently she remembers things she wants to tell me and then forgets them when she's actually here in session and we talked about how common that it, but also some ways she might address the problem and I suggested that she keep a journal and we spent quite a bit of time problem solving how she could keep a journal that her mother wouldn't invade and indeed as usual we spent quite a bit of time talking about ways that Candace's mom tends to invade Candace's boundaries and be inappropriate in ways that Candace continues to declare certain areas off limits and private. Candace talked a lot about her boyfriend Matt and how much she's enjoying that relationship and that she continues to keep having a boyfriend and celebrating peoples birthdays and giving gifts, etc. in a separate "compartment" because it is contrary to what she's taught in the Jehovah's Witnesses and her father would not approve. One of the things that Candace enjoys about her mother is that her mother is willing to allow Candace to celebrate these things and, in fact, mother thinks that they're important. Candace talked about how her mother and mother's boyfriend Steve took Candace and her friends and the boyfriends to Great America and let them have a party, but then Candace states that she was so angry with her mother because her mother went in to the girls' things and took Candace and two of her friends' bras and threw them on the ceiling fan and then called the boys in to see it and Candace was absolutely mortified and felt like it was totally inappropriate of her mother to do this. Candace then stated that one thing that really upsets her about her mother is "she always runs around naked." When therapist asked her to elaborate on this, she states that while they were camping in King's Canyon, Kathy would take off her top, she'd go skinny dipping. She rode a horse in public with her top off and Candace states that at home Kathy will frequently walk around naked. She'll walk around naked in front of Candace's friends and leave doors and windows open and this is very confusing to Candace as she states that she knows about her mother's past of being raped, but it seems so confusing to her that her mother would have such flamboyant behavior with regard to showing her body. We discussed a little bit about how sexual abuse sometimes presents itself in people and once again therapist couched this in the area of "mother has many emotional problems and an emotional illness that she's continuing to work on." Candace states that her mother has switched doctors and therapists and doesn't see Judy French anymore nor is she going to Dr. Waraich because Candace understands that the reason to be "they wouldn't give my mother her medication anymore." In a later conversation with Dr. Waraich, it turns out that Kathy came for a prescription of Xanax. She was prescribed 90 and she consumed them in one week's time. When Dr. Waraich denied her an additional prescription, Kathy showed up at Dr. Waraich's office and was very inappropriate and demanding and then called Dr. Waraich at home. Dr. Waraich was quite surprised that Kathy was able to get her home phone number and Kathy at that time stated that she would no longer be seeing Dr. Waraich; she would see somebody else. Candace also during this session described that her mother's "spacing out" has increased. Her mother used to do this when they were talking on the phone together and now it happens quite a lot when they're in person. At first, therapist assumed that this may be a dissociative process going on, but it sounds more likely that it's due to Kathy's intense abuse of Xanax. Candace states that things with her father are basically going okay, but at one time he got extremely angry and was screaming and yelling because Candace didn't want to go to

JANE DOE,

Plaintiff,

v.

THE WATCHTOWER BIBLE AND TRACT SOCIETY OF NEW YORK, INC., a corporation; FREMONT CALIFORNIA CONGREGATION OF JEHOVAH'S WITNESSES, NORTH UNIT, a California corporation; JONATHAN KENDRICK, an individual; and ROES 1 to 10, Defendants.

Case No.: HG11558324

REPLY IN SUPPORT OF MOTION IN LIMINE No. 5

DEFENDANT WATCHTOWER AND NORTH FREMONT CONGREGATION'S MOTION IN LIMINE TO EXCLUDE EVIDENCE RELATING TO THE DISCIPLINING OF MEMBERS OF THE RELIGION AND MEMORADUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES IN SUPPORT

DATE	May 18, 2012
TIME	8:30 A.M.
JUDGE	Robert McGuiness
DEPT.	22

TRIAL DATE: May 21, 2012

Plaintiff argues that the Church Defendants should have disfellowshipped Kendrick after he confessed to the abuse of his step-daughter. Plaintiff further contends that once the decision was made not to disfellowship Kendrick, the other ecclesiastical discipline options available to the Church Defendants should be admissible at trial.

Not insignificantly, Plaintiff concedes that the decision of whether to disfellowship Kendrick is protected by the First Amendment and cannot be litigated or passed upon or reviewed by the Court or the jury. However, the very same protections are afforded to the other available forms of ecclesiastical discipline such that the distinctions argued by Plaintiff are truly distinctions without a difference. Such hair-splitting by Plaintiff does not render the ecclesiastical discipline options admissible at trial or allow the Court or jury to decide which options should have been chosen by the Church Defendants.

Any evidence admitted at trial by Plaintiff of church disciplinary proceedings or options will necessitate a thorough airing by the Church Defendants of the reasons why they did not use them. For instance, at the time of Kendrick's self-disclosure in 1993, the intentional momentary touching of sexual parts or caressing of breasts was a sin of "uncleanness." (1 Thessalonians 4:7, 8; 1 Timothy 5:1, 2.) Whether or not to form a judicial committee of congregation elders to inquire into Kendrick's attitude and response to his sin is an ecclesiastical decision which cannot be reviewed by this Court or by the jury.

Then, whether or not Kendrick should have been disfellowshipped by such a judicial committee of elders is an ecclesiastical decision based on a number of other factor and decisions that also must be made by the religious authority. For example, the judicial committee's purpose is to help determine what is needed to assist the repentant wrongdoer and to preserve the spiritual health of all in the congregation. To determine repentance, the elders must consider factors such as the following:

(1) Is there evidence of the person's craving wrongful things or courting trouble? Or did the person momentarily succumb to weakness? (James 4:1.)

(2) Was he aware of the gravity of his sin? (Galatians 6:1.)

(3) Had he been admonished that his course was leading towards danger? (Thessalonians 5:14.)

(4) Was it a single offense or was it committed more than once?

(5) Was his confession voluntary or did he have to be accused by others? (James

5:14, 15.)

(6) Above all, does he show true repentance and manifest a heartfelt desire to avoid repetition of the wrong? (1 John 1:8.)

CONCLUSION

As can easily be seen, the discussion of the propriety of these purely religious activities could turn this tort litigation into a heresy trial. The jury would be forced to decide questions of fact based on their own religious or even non-religious views. Wisely, the founding fathers and the the United States Supreme Court and the California courts have consistently ruled that courts of law cannot entertain such controversies.

Plaintiff's experts should be precluded from commenting on church discipline, and Plaintiff's counsel should be precluded from arguing that it was negligence not to disfellowship Kendrick or use other available ecclesiastical options in this case.

REPLY IN SUPPORT OF MOTION IN LIMINE No. 4

DEFENDANT WATCHTOWER AND NORTH FREMONT CONGREGATION'S MOTION IN LIMINE TO EXCLUDE EVIDENCE RELATING TO PAUL INMAN AND MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES IN SUPPORT

DATE	May 18, 2012
TIME	8:30 A.M.
JUDGE	Robert McGuiness
DEPT.	22

TRIAL DATE: May 21, 2012

At the pre-trial conference Plaintiff argued that certain allegations concerning Paul Inman are relevant to this case to show that Defendant North Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses, Fremont California (hereinafter "North Fremont Congregation"), i.e., specifically that the North Fremont Congregation did not adequately investigate the accusations of child abuse made by his then wife during divorce proceedings against Paul Inman. Plaintiff apparently contends that this would support her theory that the North Fremont Congregation elders also did not adequately investigate the allegations of individual defendant Jonathan Kendrick's abuse of his 15-year-old step-daughter. However, this theory is not supported by the facts. In his deposition, Paul Inman said that he was not one of Jehovah's Witnesses when this accusation of child abuse was made against him. (Ex. A, Paul Inman Deposition pp. 23:25-24:3, 26:22-27:10.)

Because Paul Inman was not one of Jehovah's Witness when the accusation was made against him, the North Fremont Congregation elders could not legally have been expected to investigate any such allegations of child abuse against him. As such, the allegations of child abuse against Paul Inman should be excluded from evidence in this case.

think. I'm not sure.

Q. Where is Rosanna today?

A. I do not know.

Q. When did you last have contact with her?

A. Many years ago.

Q. What about Jenna? Do you know where she is today?

A. Roughly.

Q. What is your best information on that regard?

A. Southern California.

Q. Do you have any information as to where Carolyn is today?

A. No, I do not.

Q. When was the last time you had any contact with her?

A. She sent me a text message a few months ago asking me to reach out to Rosanna.

Q. Do you have the text message still available to you on any electronic device?

A. No, I do not.

Q. Do you have any cell phone or other contact information for Carolyn?

A. No, I do not. If she -- she apparently has my number. I don't keep her number.

Q. In 1994 Carolyn made an accusation against you that involved an allegation of sexual misconduct with Jenna. Do you recall that?

19c7cdf5-548f-4596-b448-f11c58239954

A. Yes.

Q. How were you first informed of this accusation?

A. Prior legal counsel advised me to not talk about this.

MR. McCABE: Can we go off the record for just a minute?

MR. SIMONS: Yes.

THE VIDEOGRAPHER: We're off the video record.

(Recess taken.)

THE VIDEOGRAPHER: We're back on the video record.

MR. McCABE: Mr. Simons, could you have the reporter either read back that question or re-ask the question?

MR. SIMONS: Yes. I'll just re-ask it.

Q. Mr. Inman --

MR. McCABE: Thank you.

BY MR. SIMONS:

Q. -- how did you learn of the accusation Carolyn made concerning the alleged sexual abuse of your daughter, Jenna?

MR. McCABE: I'm going to object under the grounds of relevancy in that it's not likely to lead to

19c7cdf5-548f-4598-b446-f11c58239954

Mr. Simons?

MR. SIMONS: Yes.

Q. The reason that you are -- strike that. Let me rephrase it.

Are you advising me that the reason that you have been told to refuse to answer questions concerning the allegation is because of your right against and privilege against self-incrimination under the 5th Amendment?

A. Those are not the thoughts going through my head. I'm merely saying what my attorney told me to do. While I was investigated -- I should say the allegation was investigated, nothing came of it. My attorney said in order to avoid potential civil action, not criminal action, that I should not say anything.

Q. Okay. If I understand your answer correctly, when you say nothing came of it, there were no criminal proceedings filed against you arising out of any accusation involving Jenna; is that correct?

A. That is correct. And I will not go into any more detail.

Q. Did the Jehovah's Witnesses perform any judicial investigation as to that accusation of which you are aware?

A. I was not a Jehovah's Witness.

Q. So your answer would be based on the information and knowledge that you have, there was never any Jehovah's Witnesses investigation of this accusation?

A. I was not a Jehovah's Witness.

Q. So your answer would be, yes, you're not aware of any Jehovah's Witness accusation? I'm sorry. Investigation?

A. I wasn't there. I can't answer to what I wasn't privileged to. I wasn't there.

Q. Let me just ask it perhaps a different way that will allow you to answer. Do you currently understand that there was ever any investigation by any Jehovah's Witnesses committee concerning the accusation Carolyn made of your alleged misconduct with Jenna?

A. I'm unaware of anything like that.

Q. Did you ever discuss the accusation that Carolyn made with Larry Lammerdin?

A. No.

Q. Did you ever discuss it with any of the elders who you had known at the North Fremont Congregation?

A. I do not recall.

Q. Did you ever discuss the allegation that Carolyn made with regard to the alleged misconduct with Jenna? Did you discuss that with Neal Conti?

me give an exact analysis of her personality on an opinion.

Q. No, I'm actually asking what you recall observing in those occasions when you saw her or spoke with her?

A. I recall no specifics.

Q. All right, sir. That's all the questions that I have for you today. Thank you for your time.

MR. McCABE: No questions from me.

THE VIDEOGRAPHER: We are off the record.

Plaintiff,

v.

THE WATCHTOWER BIBLE AND TRACT SOCIETY OF NEW YORK, INC., a corporation; FREMONT CALIFORNIA CONGREGATION OF JEHOVAH'S WITNESSES, NORTH UNIT, a California corporation; JONATHAN KENDRICK, an individual; and ROES 1 to 10, Defendants.

Case No.: HG11558324

DEFENDANT WATCHTOWER AND NORTH FREMONT CONGREGATION'S LEGAL BRIEFING REGARDING EVIDENCE OF REPORTS TO WATCHTOWER CONCERNING CHILD SEX ABUSE

TRIAL DATE: May 21, 2012

The Church Defendants submit pursuant to the Court's request this legal briefing regarding Plaintiff's efforts to admit at trial evidence of statistical data concerning reports to the Watchtower organization from across the United States concerning child sex abuse. Indeed, Plaintiff requests that any such statistical data relating statistics relating to every child sex abuse report made to Watchtower during the last twenty years be deemed admissible. The result of granting such a request would be a violation of the Church Defendants' due process rights, because they would be forced to defend themselves against claim after claim originating from the different corners of the nation during the past twenty years. Obviously, such a request would turn this case into a six-ring circus. Further, such a result is highly and unfairly prejudicial to the Church Defendants and would waste enormous amounts of trial time in what is already anticipated to be a lengthy trial. For those and each of the other reasons discussed below, the Church Defendants oppose and object to Plaintiff's request and ask the Court to rule that all evidence of reports to Watchtower over the past twenty years from any state in the nation be deemed inadmissible.[1]

A Compilation of Data and Statistical Evidence Concerning Child Sex Abuse Claims Made to Watchtower Does Not Exist and Any Reports Made to Watchtower are Protected by the Attorney-Client Privilege

As an initial matter, the evidence Plaintiff intends to use does not exist. Plaintiff contends Watchtower has a statistical compilation of data that can be used to evidence an increase in reports of child sex abuse throughout the nation over the past twenty years. Plaintiff apparently intends to rely on this alleged evidence in the punitive damages phase of this case in an attempt to demonstrate that Watchtower's sex abuse prevention policies and practices are ineffective and thus evidence deliberate indifference to child sex abuse.

Plaintiff deposed Allen Shuster in this case and questioned him on this issue. Mr. Shuster has served in the U.S. Branch Office of the Jehovah's Witnesses faith since 1976 and is familiar with Defendant Watchtower's policies and practices. During his deposition, and contrary to Plaintiff's contention that such statistical records exist, Mr. Shuster testified that Watchtower does not have a compilation of data or statistics relating to reports received of child sex abuse. (Ex. A, Shuster Deposition, 118:18-21.) Thus, there is no evidence that such data and statistics exist concerning reports of child sex abuse.

[1] While recognizing that the Court asked for a three-page brief, given the high risk of undue and unfair prejudice, the Church Defendants felt it necessary to a bit more fully brief the issues, which resulted in a brief exceeding the three pages requested by the Court. The Church Defendants ask for the Court's indulgence in submitting a longer brief.

Further, any reports made to Watchtower are protected by the attorney-client privilege. (Evid. Code §§ 950, et seq.) When elders of a congregation receive information concerning allegations of child sex abuse, they contact Watchtower's legal department to seek legal advice. This information is maintained within Watchtower's legal department. These communications and reports to Watchtower are unquestionably protected by the attorney-client privilege. (Roberts v. City of Palmdale (1993) 5 Cal. 4th 363, 371 ("[T]he privilege applies not only to communications made in the anticipation of litigation, but also to legal advice when no litigation is threatened").) Thus, any reports made to Watchtower concerning child sex abuse are privileged because they were communications to and with Watchtower's legal department made for the purpose of obtaining legal advice. As privileged communications, these reports are not only not subject to discovery, they are inadmissible at trial.

Even if the Compilation of Data and Statistical Evidence Plaintiff Seeks to Admit Existed, Such Evidence is Improper and Irrelevant Because it Cannot be Used to Accurately Measure the Effectiveness of a Child Sex Abuse Prevention Policy

Plaintiff contends that statistical evidence relating to reports of child sex abuse to Watchtower is admissible with respect to the claimed effectiveness or ineffectiveness of child sex abuse prevention policies and practices within the Watchtower organization nationally. Even assuming, arguendo, such data and statistical evidence existed, it would not be admissible in evidence because such data and statistics are both irrelevant and cannot otherwise be used to accurately measure the effectiveness or ineffectiveness of Watchtower's child sex abuse prevention policy and practices. (Exhibit B, Declaration of Monica Applewhite, filed concurrently herewith, at ¶¶ 1-3.)

There are many reasons why the data and statistical evidence Plaintiff seeks to admit would not accurately measure the effectiveness of Watchtower's policy and practices. First, statistical evidence does not accurately reflect the effectiveness of an organization's child sex abuse prevention policies because when members of the organization are educated about the warning signs of child sex abuse and provided avenues for reporting such warnings signs, there often is an increase in the number of reports of child sex abuse. (Id. at ¶ 3.) Second, there is no ethical way to conduct a scientific or empirical study of a group of human subjects within an organization to conclusively determine whether certain organizational policies or practices regarding child sex abuse prevention have efficacy. (Id. at ¶ 4.) It would not be ethical to have a control group of children and parents provided education and training with respect to child sex abuse prevention while at the same time having another control group that is not provided the benefits of such education and training. (Id.) Third, there are numerous intervening factors in situations involving child sex abuse that cannot be controlled by an organization, such as changes in overall public awareness and the increase in educational programs provided directly to children (Id. at ¶ 5.) Fourth, organizations do not exist separately from society at large and, therefore, societal trends can affect reporting within organizations irrespective of the organization's policies. (Id.)

For the reasons set forth above, the data and statistical evidence Plaintiff seeks to use, even if it did exist, cannot be used to accurately measure the effectiveness or ineffectiveness of Watchtower's child sex abuse prevention policy and practices. Thus, such evidence would unfairly prejudice defendants, is irrelevant, would confuse the issues, and mislead the jury. The Court should exclude all such evidence at trial.

Plaintiff Seeks to Use Reports to Watchtower to Support Her Claim for Punitive Damages to Effect Change in National Policy but Such Use is Improper per the U.S. Supreme Court and Because their Admission Will Violate the Church Defendants' Due Process Rights

During the hearing on May 21, 2012, Plaintiff's counsel stated that the statistical data concerning reports of child sexual abuse to Watchtower would demonstrate a "deliberate indifference" on the part of Watchtower regarding the effectiveness or ineffectiveness of its policies and practices relating to child sex abuse prevention. This specific reference to "deliberate indifference" indicates Plaintiff intends to use such statistical data to support her claim for punitive damages against Watchtower. (See Civil Code § 3294(b) ("With respect to a corporate employer, the advance knowledge and conscious disregard . . . of oppression, fraud, or malice must be on the part of an officer, director, or managing agent of the corporation" (emphasis added)); CACI 3946 ("A person acts with knowing disregard when he or she is aware of the probable dangerous consequences of his or her conduct and deliberately fails to avoid those consequences") (emphasis added).)

To the extent Plaintiff wishes to use such statistical data to effect a change in Watchtower's national policy by way of punitive damages, the U.S. Supreme Court has repeatedly held that using punitive damages for this purpose is improper. (BMW of North America, Inc. v. Gore (1996) 517 U.S. 559, 572, 585 ("While each State has ample power to protect its own [citizens], none may use the punitive damages deterrent as a means of imposing its regulatory policies on the entire Nation."); State Farm Mutual Auto. Ins. Co. v. Campbell (2003) 538 U.S. 408, 420-421 (award of punitive damages reversed where Plaintiff used case as a platform to expose and punish defendant for perceived deficiencies in its national operations; "as a general rule . . . a State [does not] have a legitimate concern in imposing punitive damages to punish a defendant for unlawful acts committed outside of the State's jurisdiction").)

Further, "the U.S. Constitution's Due Process Clause forbids a State to use a punitive damages award to punish a defendant for injury that it inflicts upon nonparties." Philip Morris USA v. Williams (2007) 549 U.S. 346, 353.) Punitive damages cannot be used to punish a defendant for injury that it inflicts upon those who are "strangers to the litigation." (Id.) This is because the defendant "has no opportunity to defend against the charge" by showing why one victim's case is different from another's. (Id.) Finally, to permit punishment for injuring a nonparty victim "would add a near standardless dimension to the punitive damages equation." (Id. at 354.) For example, how many such victims are there? How seriously were they injured? Under what circumstances did the injury occur? "The trial will not likely answer such questions as to nonparty victims [and] [t]he jury will be left to speculate." (Id.)

Here, Plaintiff's counsel has openly admitted that he (and Plaintiff) wish to effect a change in Watchtower's national policy. Plaintiff's counsel's comments at the May 21, 2012 hearing about "deliberate indifference" suggest Plaintiff intends to accomplish this change by seeking a large award of punitive damages against Watchtower (Plaintiff does not claim punitive damages against Defendant North Fremont Congregaiton). Pursuant to Gore and Campbell, the U.S. Supreme Court has expressly held that punitive damages cannot be used for this purpose.

Further, the admission of nationwide statistical data concerning reports to Watchtower from the past twenty years would result in the "standardless dimension to the punitive damages equation" about which the U.S. Supreme Court warned in Philip Morris. It is impossible to answer the questions posed above for all the nonparties who are "strangers to [this] litigation," and the Church Defendants' due process rights will be violated if the statistical evidence Plaintiff seeks is admitted.

For each of these same reasons, the statistical evidence of reports is inadmissible pursuant to Evidence Code section 352 because such evidence would unfairly prejudice the Church Defendants and waste an enormous amount of trial time, as well as confuse the issues and mislead jury. Thus, the Court must reject Plaintiff's request to admit in evidence all statistical evidence of reports to Watchtower of child sexual abuse over the past twenty years made throughout the nation.

Based on each of the independent and alternative reasons discussed above, the Church Defendants respectfully request the Court exclude any evidence, testimony, and argument concerning reports and statistics relating to every complaint of child sex abuse made to Watchtower originating from any state in the nation during the last twenty years.

JANE DOE, Plaintiff, v. THE WATCHTOWER BIBLE AND TRACT SOCIETY OF NEW YORK, INC., a corporation; FREMONT CALIFORNIA CONGREGATION OF JEHOVAH'S WITNESSES, NORTH UNIT, a California corporation; JONATHAN KENDRICK, an individual; and ROES 1 to 10, Defendants.	Case No.: HG115558324 DECLARATION OF MONICA APPLEWHITE TRIAL DATE: May 21, 2012

I, Monica Applewhite, declare as follows:

1. I have spent the past 18 years conducting research and root-cause analysis in the area of child sex abuse in organizations in order to assist organizations, including churches, in developing best practice standards. I have worked with more than 300 organizations that serve children and youth, including 28 Roman Catholic dioceses, the U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops, the Salvation Army Western Territory (Denver to Guam), The United States Episcopal House of Bishops, the United States Presbyterian Church, the Rabbitical Council of America and numerous independent churches and religious organizations.. I am also an expert in standards of care and the dynamics of abuse in educational and religious environments. A true copy of my curriculum vitae is attached hereto as Exhibit "A." I am legally competent in all respects and make the following statements based on my education, experience and training as described herein.

2. I am advised that Plaintiff Jane Doe in this case seeks to rely on statistical evidence relating to the number of reports of alleged child sex abuse to the Watchtower Society during the last twenty years. Plaintiff contends that such statistical evidence is admissible with respect to the claimed effectiveness or ineffectiveness of child sex abuse prevention policies and practices within the Watchtower organization nationally.

3. However, it is my opinion that any such statistical evidence cannot be used to measure the effectiveness or ineffectiveness of a child sex abuse prevention policy. First, it has been my experience in consulting with church organizations and other non-religious organizations that serve youth that there tends to be an increase in the number of reports of child sex abuse when the members of the organization are educated about what to look for regarding warning signs of possible child sex abuse and provided avenues within the organization to report such warning signs. As a result, it is my opinion that an increase within an organization of reports of child sex abuse does not necessarily correlate to an actual increase of child sex abuse within the organization. Thus, as noted above, any such statistical evidence is not an accurate measure of the effectiveness of a child sex abuse prevention policy.

4. Further, there is no ethical way to conduct a scientific or empirical study of a group of human subjects within a church or other organization to conclusively determine whether certain organizational policies or practices regarding child sex abuse prevention have efficacy. For example, it would not be ethical to have a control group of human subjects who are provided education and other training with respect to child sex abuse prevention while at the same time having another group of human subjects who are not provided such education or training.

5. In addition, there are a large number of intervening variables in situations involving child sex abuse that cannot be controlled by the organization and may reflect either positively or negatively, based on factors such as new criminal justice initiatives, changes in overall public awareness, and the increase in programs that are provided directly to children in public and private schools. Further, a particular church organization does not exist in a bubble, so to speak, because there are broad societal trends with respect to child sex abuse such that those public trends can also affect reporting within a particular church organization (for example, changes in mandatory reporting laws, highly publicized cases such as Penn State that prompt reporting, and increased accessibility of information due to the proliferation of internet sites describing the dynamics and effects of sexual abuse).

I declare under penalty of perjury under the laws of the State of California that the foregoing is true and correct.

116 S.Ct. 1589
Supreme Court of the United States

BMW OF NORTH AMERICA, INC., Petitioner,
v.
Ira GORE, Jr.

No. 94–896. | Argued Oct. 11, 1995. | Decided May 20, 1996.

Automobile purchaser brought action against foreign automobile manufacturer, American distributor, and dealer based on distributor's failure to disclose that automobile had been repainted after being damaged prior to delivery. The Alabama Circuit Court, Jefferson County, P. Wayne Thorn, J., entered judgment on jury verdict awarding buyer compensatory damages of $4,000 and punitive damages of $4,000,000. Distributor and manufacturer appealed. After determining that court lacked jurisdiction over manufacturer, the Alabama Supreme Court, 646 So.2d 619, conditionally affirmed punitive damage award after reducing award to $2,000,000. Certiorari was granted, and the Supreme Court, Justice Stevens, held that: (1) lawful conduct by distributor outside state of Alabama could not be considered by Alabama court in making award of punitive damages, and (2) award of $2,000,000 punitive damages was grossly excessive in light of low level of reprehensibility of conduct and 500 to 1 ratio between award and actual harm to purchaser.

Reversed and remanded.

Justice Breyer filed a concurring opinion in which Justices O'Connor and Souter joined.

Justice Scalia filed a dissenting opinion in which Justice Thomas joined.

Justice Ginsburg filed a dissenting opinion in which Chief Justice Rehnquist joined.

*1591 *559 Syllabus

After respondent Gore purchased a new BMW automobile from an authorized Alabama dealer, he discovered that the car had been repainted. He brought this suit for compensatory and punitive damages against petitioner, the American distributor of BMW's, alleging, inter alia, that the failure to disclose the repainting constituted fraud under Alabama law. At trial, BMW acknowledged that it followed a nationwide policy of not advising its dealers, and hence their customers, of predelivery damage to new cars when the cost of repair did not exceed 3 percent of the car's suggested retail price. Gore's vehicle fell into that category. The jury returned a verdict finding BMW liable for compensatory damages of $4,000, and assessing $4 million in punitive damages. The trial judge denied BMW's post-trial motion to set aside the punitive damages award, holding, among other things, that the award was not "grossly excessive" and thus did not violate the Due Process Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment. See, e.g., TXO Production Corp. v. Alliance Resources Corp., 509 U.S. 443, 454, 113 S.Ct. 2711, 2718, 125 L.Ed.2d 366. The Alabama Supreme Court agreed, but reduced the award to $2 million on the ground that, in computing the amount, the jury had improperly multiplied Gore's compensatory damages by the number of similar sales in all States, not just those in Alabama.

Held: The $2 million punitive damages award is grossly excessive and therefore exceeds the constitutional limit. Pp. 1595–1604.

(a) Because such an award violates due process only when it can fairly be categorized as "grossly excessive" in relation to the State's legitimate interests in punishing unlawful conduct and deterring its repetition, cf. TXO, 509 U.S., at 456, 113 S.Ct., at 2719–2720, the federal excessiveness inquiry appropriately begins with an identification of the state interests that such an award is designed to serve. Principles of state sovereignty and comity forbid a State to enact policies for the entire Nation, or to impose its own policy choice on neighboring States. See, e.g., Healy v. Beer Institute, 491 U.S. 324, 335–336, 109 S.Ct. 2491, 2498–2499, 105 L.Ed.2d 275. Accordingly, the economic penalties that a State inflicts on those who transgress its laws, whether the penalties are legislatively authorized fines or judicially imposed punitive damages, must be supported by the State's interest in protecting its own consumers and economy, rather than those of other States or the entire Nation. Gore's award must therefore be analyzed in the light of conduct that 560 occurred solely within Alabama, with consideration being given only to the interests of Alabama consumers. Pp. 1595–1598.

(b) Elementary notions of fairness enshrined in this Court's constitutional jurisprudence dictate that a person receive fair notice not only of the conduct that will subject him to punishment but also of the severity of the penalty that a State may impose. Three guideposts, each of which indicates that BMW did not receive adequate notice of the magnitude of the sanction that Alabama might impose, lead to the conclusion that the $2 million award is grossly excessive. Pp. 1598–1599.

(c) None of the aggravating factors associated with the first (and perhaps most important) indicium of a punitive damages award's excessiveness—the degree of reprehensibility of the defendant's conduct, see, *1592 e.g., Day v. Woodworth, 13 How. 363, 371, 14 L.Ed. 181—is present here. The harm BMW inflicted on Gore was purely economic; the presale repainting had no effect on the car's performance, safety features, or appearance; and BMW's conduct evinced no indifference to or reckless disregard for the health and safety of others. Gore's contention that BMW's nondisclosure was particularly reprehensible because it formed part of a nationwide pattern of tortious conduct is rejected, because a corporate executive could reasonably have interpreted the relevant state statutes as establishing safe harbors for nondisclosure of presumptively minor repairs, and because there is no evidence either that BMW acted in bad faith when it sought to establish the appropriate line between minor damage and damage requiring disclosure to purchasers, or that it persisted in its course of conduct after it had been adjudged unlawful. Finally, there is no evidence that BMW engaged in deliberate false statements, acts of affirmative misconduct, or concealment of evidence of improper motive. Pp. 1599–1601.

(d) The second (and perhaps most commonly cited) indicium of excessiveness—the ratio between the plaintiff's compensatory damages and the amount of the punitive damages, see, e.g., TXO, 509 U.S., at 459, 113 S.Ct., at 2721—also weighs against Gore, because his $2 million award is 500 times the amount of his actual harm as determined by the jury, and there is no suggestion that he or any other BMW purchaser was threatened with any additional potential harm by BMW's nondisclosure policy. Although it is not possible to draw a mathematical bright line between the constitutionally acceptable and the constitutionally unacceptable that would fit every case, see, e.g., id., at 458, 113 S.Ct., at 2720, the ratio here is clearly outside the acceptable range. Pp. 1601–1603.

(e) Gore's punitive damages award is not saved by the third relevant indicium of excessiveness—the difference between it and the civil or criminal sanctions that could be imposed for comparable misconduct, see, e.g., Pacific Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Haslip, 499 U.S. 1, 23, 111 S.Ct. 1032, 1046, 113 L.Ed.2d 1—because 561 $2million is substantially greater than Alabama's applicable $2,000 fine and the penalties imposed in other States for similar malfeasance, and because none of the pertinent statutes or interpretive decisions would have put an out-of-state distributor on notice that it might be subject to a multimillion dollar sanction. Moreover, in the absence of a BMW history of noncompliance with known statutory requirements, there is no basis for assuming that a more modest sanction would not have been sufficient. Pp. 1602–1603.

(f) Thus, BMW's conduct was not sufficiently egregious to justify the severe punitive sanction imposed against it. Whether the appropriate remedy requires a new trial or merely an independent determination by the Alabama Supreme Court of the award necessary to vindicate Alabama consumers' economic interests is a matter for that court to address in the first instance. Pp. 1603–1604.

Opinion

562 Justice STEVENS delivered the opinion of the Court.

[1] The Due Process Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment prohibits a State from imposing a " 'grossly excessive' " punishment on a tortfeasor. TXO Production Corp. v. Alliance Resources Corp., 509 U.S. 443, 454, 113 S.Ct. 2711, 2718, 125 L.Ed.2d 366 (1993) (and cases cited). The wrongdoing involved in this case was the decision by a national distributor of automobiles not to advise its dealers, and hence their customers, of predelivery *1593 damage to new cars when the cost of repair amounted to less than 3 percent of the car's suggested retail price. The question presented 563 is whether a $2 million punitive damages award to the purchaser of one of these cars exceeds the constitutional limit.

I

In January 1990, Dr. Ira Gore, Jr. (respondent), purchased a black BMW sports sedan for $40,750.88 from an authorized BMW dealer in Birmingham, Alabama. After driving the car for approximately nine months, and without noticing any flaws in its appearance, Dr. Gore took the car to "Slick Finish," an independent detailer, to make it look " 'snazzier than it normally would appear.' " 646 So.2d 619, 621 (Ala.1994). Mr. Slick, the proprietor, detected evidence that the car had been repainted.[1] Convinced that he had been cheated, Dr. Gore brought suit against petitioner BMW of North America (BMW), the American distributor of BMW automobiles.[2] Dr. Gore alleged, inter alia, that the failure to disclose that the car had been repainted constituted suppression of a material fact.[3] The complaint prayed for $500,000 in compensatory and punitive damages, and costs.

At trial, BMW acknowledged that it had adopted a nationwide policy in 1983 concerning cars that were damaged in the course of manufacture or transportation. If the cost of repairing the damage exceeded 3 percent of the car's suggested retail price, the car was placed in company service for a period of time and then sold as used. If the repair cost did not exceed 3 percent of the suggested 564 retail price, however, the car was sold as new without advising the dealer that any repairs had been made. Because the $601.37 cost of repainting Dr. Gore's car was only about 1.5 percent of its suggested retail price, BMW did not disclose the damage or repair to the Birmingham dealer.

Dr. Gore asserted that his repainted car was worth less than a car that had not been refinished. To prove his actual damages of $4,000, he relied on the testimony of a former BMW dealer, who estimated that the value of a repainted BMW was approximately 10 percent less than the value of a new car that had not been damaged and repaired.4 To support his claim for punitive damages, Dr. Gore introduced evidence that since 1983 BMW had sold 983 refinished cars as new, including 14 in Alabama, without disclosing that the cars had been repainted before sale at a cost of more than $300 per vehicle.5 Using the actual damage estimate of $4,000 per vehicle, Dr. Gore argued that a punitive award of $4 million would provide an appropriate penalty for selling approximately 1,000 cars for more than they were worth.

In defense of its disclosure policy, BMW argued that it was under no obligation to disclose repairs of minor damage to new cars and that Dr. Gore's car was as good as a car with the original factory finish. It disputed Dr. Gore's assertion that the value of the car was impaired by the repainting and argued that this good-faith belief made a punitive award inappropriate. BMW also maintained that transactions in jurisdictions other than Alabama had no relevance to Dr. Gore's claim.

565 The jury returned a verdict finding BMW liable for compensatory damages of *1594 $4,000. In addition, the jury assessed $4 million in punitive damages, based on a determination that the nondisclosure policy constituted "gross, oppressive or malicious" fraud.6 See Ala.Code §§ 6–11–20, 6–11–21 (1993).

BMW filed a post-trial motion to set aside the punitive damages award. The company introduced evidence to establish that its nondisclosure policy was consistent with the laws of roughly 25 States defining the disclosure obligations of automobile manufacturers, distributors, and dealers. The most stringent of these statutes required disclosure of repairs costing more than 3 percent of the suggested retail price; none mandated disclosure of less costly repairs.7 Relying on these statutes, BMW contended that its conduct was lawful in these States and therefore could not provide the basis for an award of punitive damages.

BMW also drew the court's attention to the fact that its nondisclosure policy had never been adjudged unlawful before this action was filed. Just months before Dr. Gore's case went to trial, the jury in a similar lawsuit filed by another Alabama BMW purchaser found that BMW's failure to disclose paint repair constituted fraud. Yates v. BMW of North America, Inc., 642 So.2d 937 (Ala.1993).8 Before the 566 judgment in this case, BMW changed its policy by taking steps to avoid the sale of any refinished vehicles in Alabama and two other States. When the $4 million verdict was returned in this case, BMW promptly instituted a nationwide policy of full disclosure of all repairs, no matter how minor.

In response to BMW's arguments, Dr. Gore asserted that the policy change demonstrated the efficacy of the punitive damages award. He noted that while no jury had held the policy unlawful, BMW had received a number of customer complaints relating to undisclosed repairs and had settled some lawsuits.9 Finally, he maintained that the disclosure statutes of other States were irrelevant because BMW had failed to offer any evidence that the disclosure statutes supplanted, rather than supplemented, existing causes of action for common-law fraud.

The trial judge denied BMW's post-trial motion, holding, inter alia, that the award was not excessive. On appeal, the Alabama Supreme Court also rejected BMW's claim that the award exceeded the constitutionally permissible amount. 646 So.2d 619 (1994). The court's excessiveness inquiry applied the factors articulated in Green Oil Co. v. Hornsby, 539 So.2d 218, 223–224 (Ala.1989), and approved in Pacific Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Haslip, 499 U.S. 1, 21–22, 111 S.Ct. 1032, 1045–1046, 113 L.Ed.2d 1 (1991). 646 So.2d, at 624–625. Based on its analysis, the court concluded that BMW's conduct was "reprehensible"; the nondisclosure was profitable for the company; the judgment "would not have a substantial impact upon [BMW's] financial position"; the litigation had been expensive; no criminal sanctions had been imposed on BMW for the same conduct; the award of no punitive 567 damages in Yates reflected "the inherent uncertainty of the trial process"; and the punitive award bore a "reasonable relationship" to "the harm that *1595 was likely to occur from [BMW's] conduct as well as ... the harm that actually occurred." 646 So.2d, at 625–627.

The Alabama Supreme Court did, however, rule in BMW's favor on one critical point: The court found that the jury improperly computed the amount of punitive damages by multiplying Dr. Gore's compensatory damages by the number of similar sales in other jurisdictions. Id., at 627. Having found the verdict tainted, the court held that "a constitutionally reasonable punitive damages award in this case is $2,000,000," id., at 629, and therefore ordered a remittitur in that amount.10 The court's discussion of the amount of its remitted award expressly disclaimed any reliance on "acts that occurred in other jurisdictions"; instead, the court explained that it had used a "comparative analysis" that considered Alabama cases, "along with cases from other jurisdictions, involving the sale of an automobile where the seller misrepresented the condition of the vehicle and the jury awarded punitive damages to the purchaser."11 Id., at 628.

*568 Because we believed that a review of this case would help to illuminate "the character of the standard that will identify unconstitutionally excessive awards" of punitive damages, see Honda Motor Co. v. Oberg, 512 U.S. 415, 420, 114 S.Ct. 2331, 2335, 129 L.Ed.2d 336 (1994), we granted certiorari, 513 U.S. 1125, 115 S.Ct. 932, 130 L.Ed.2d 879 (1995).

II

[2] [3] Punitive damages may properly be imposed to further a State's legitimate interests in punishing unlawful conduct and deterring its repetition. Gertz v. Robert Welch, Inc., 418 U.S. 323, 350, 94 S.Ct. 2997, 3012, 41 L.Ed.2d 789 (1974); Newport v. Fact Concerts, Inc., 453 U.S. 247, 266–267, 101 S.Ct. 2748, 2759–2760, 69 L.Ed.2d 616 (1981); Haslip, 499 U.S., at 22, 111 S.Ct., at 1045–1046. In our federal system, States necessarily have considerable flexibility in determining the level of punitive damages that they will allow in different classes of cases and in any particular case. Most States that authorize exemplary damages afford the jury similar latitude, requiring only that the damages awarded be reasonably necessary to vindicate the State's legitimate interests in punishment and deterrence. See TXO, 509 U.S., at 456, 113 S.Ct., at 2719; Haslip, 499 U.S., at 21, 22, 111 S.Ct., at 1045, 1045–1046. Only when an award can fairly be categorized as "grossly excessive" in relation to these interests does it enter the zone of arbitrariness that violates the Due Process Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment. Cf. TXO, 509 U.S., at 456, 113 S.Ct., at 2719. For that reason, the federal excessiveness inquiry appropriately begins with an identification of the state interests that a punitive award is designed to serve. We therefore focus our attention first on the scope of Alabama's legitimate interests in punishing BMW and deterring it from future misconduct.

No one doubts that a State may protect its citizens by prohibiting deceptive trade practices and by requiring automobile *569 distributors to disclose presale repairs that affect the 1596 value of a new car. But the States need not, and in fact do not, provide such protection in a uniform manner. Some States rely on the judicial process to formulate and enforce an appropriate disclosure requirement by applying principles of contract and tort law.12 Other States have enacted various forms of legislation that define the disclosure obligations of automobile manufacturers, distributors, and dealers.13 *570 The result is a patchwork of rules representing the diverse policy judgments of lawmakers in 50 States.
That diversity demonstrates that reasonable people may disagree about the value of a full disclosure requirement. Some legislatures may conclude that affirmative disclosure requirements are unnecessary because the self-interest of those involved in the automobile trade in developing and maintaining the goodwill of their customers will motivate them to make voluntary disclosures or to refrain from selling cars that do not comply with self-imposed standards. Those legislatures that do adopt affirmative disclosure obligations may take into account the cost of government regulation, choosing to draw a line exempting minor repairs from such a requirement. In formulating a disclosure standard, States may also consider other goals, such as providing a "safe harbor" for automobile manufacturers, distributors, and dealers against lawsuits over minor repairs.14

We may assume, arguendo, that it would be wise for every State to adopt Dr. Gore's preferred rule, requiring full disclosure of every presale repair to a car, no matter how trivial and regardless of its actual impact on the value of the car. *571 But while we do not doubt that Congress has ample authority to enact such a policy for the entire Nation,15 it 1597 is clear that no single State could do so, or even impose its own policy choice on neighboring States. See Bonaparte v. Tax Court, 104 U.S. 592, 594, 26 L.Ed. 845 (1881) ("No State can legislate except with reference to its own jurisdiction.... Each State is independent of all the others in this particular").16 Similarly, one State's power to impose burdens on the interstate market for automobiles is not only subordinate to the federal power over interstate commerce, Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 1, 194–196, 6 L.Ed. 23 (1824), but is also constrained by the need to respect the interests of other States, see, e.g., Healy v. Beer Institute, 491 U.S. 324, 335–336, 109 S.Ct. 2491, 2498–2499, 105 L.Ed.2d 275 (1989) (the Constitution has a "special concern both with the maintenance of a national economic union unfettered by state-imposed limitations on *572 interstate commerce and with the autonomy of the individual States within their respective spheres" (footnote omitted)); Edgar v. MITE Corp., 457 U.S. 624, 643, 102 S.Ct. 2629, 2641, 73 L.Ed.2d 269 (1982).

[4] [5] [6] We think it follows from these principles of state sovereignty and comity that a State may not impose economic sanctions on violators of its laws with the intent of changing the tortfeasors' lawful conduct in other States.17 Before this Court Dr. Gore argued that the large punitive damages award was necessary to induce BMW to change the nationwide policy that it adopted in 1983.18 But by attempting to alter BMW's nationwide policy, Alabama would be infringing on the policy choices of other States. To avoid such encroachment, the economic penalties that a State such as Alabama inflicts on those who transgress its laws, whether the penalties take the form of legislatively authorized fines or judicially imposed punitive damages, must be supported by the State's interest in protecting its own consumers and its own economy. Alabama may insist that BMW adhere to a particular disclosure policy in that State. Alabama does not 573 have the power, however, to punish BMW for conduct that was lawful where it occurred and that had no impact on Alabama or its residents.19 *1598 Nor may Alabama impose sanctions on BMW in order to deter conduct that is lawful in other jurisdictions.

[7] In this case, we accept the Alabama Supreme Court's interpretation of the jury verdict as reflecting a computation of the amount of punitive damages "based in large part on conduct that happened in other jurisdictions." 646 So.2d, at 627. As the Alabama Supreme Court noted, neither the jury nor the trial court was presented with evidence that any of BMW's out-of-state conduct was unlawful. "The only testimony touching the issue showed that approximately 60% of the vehicles that were refinished were sold in states where failure to disclose the repair was not an unfair trade practice." Id., at 627, n. 6.20 The Alabama Supreme Court therefore properly eschewed reliance on BMW's out-of-state conduct, id., at 628, and based its remitted award solely on 574 conduct that occurred within Alabama.21 The award must be analyzed in the light of the same conduct, with consideration given only to the interests of Alabama consumers, rather than those of the entire Nation. When the scope of the interest in punishment and deterrence that an Alabama court may appropriately consider is properly limited, it is apparent—for reasons that we shall now address—that this award is grossly excessive.

III

[8] [9] Elementary notions of fairness enshrined in our constitutional jurisprudence dictate that a person receive fair notice not only of the conduct that will subject him to punishment, but also of the severity of the penalty that a State may impose.22 Three guideposts, each of which indicates that BMW did not receive adequate notice of the magnitude of the sanction that Alabama might impose for adhering to the nondisclosure policy adopted in 1983, lead us to the conclusion that 575 the $2 million award against BMW is grossly excessive: the degree of reprehensibility of the nondisclosure; the disparity between the harm or potential harm suffered by Dr. Gore and his punitive damages award; and the difference between this remedy and the civil penalties authorized *1599 or imposed in comparable cases. We discuss these considerations in turn.

Degree of Reprehensibility

[10] Perhaps the most important indicium of the reasonableness of a punitive damages award is the degree of reprehensibility of the defendant's conduct.23 As the Court stated nearly 150 years ago, exemplary damages imposed on a defendant should reflect "the enormity of his offense." Day v. Woodworth, 13 How. 363, 371, 14 L.Ed. 181 (1852). See also St. Louis, I.M. & S.R. Co. v. Williams, 251 U.S. 63, 66–67, 40 S.Ct. 71, 73, 64 L.Ed. 139 (1919) (punitive award may not be "wholly disproportioned to the offense"); Browning–Ferris Industries of Vt., Inc. v. Kelco Disposal, Inc., 492 U.S. 257, 301, 109 S.Ct. 2909, 2934, 106 L.Ed.2d 219 (1989) (O'CONNOR, J., concurring in part and dissenting in part) (reviewing court "should examine the gravity of the defendant's conduct and the harshness of the award of punitive damages").24 This principle reflects the accepted view that some wrongs are more blameworthy than others. Thus, we have said that 576 "nonviolent crimes are less serious than crimes marked by violence or the threat of violence." Solem v. Helm, 463 U.S. 277, 292–293, 103 S.Ct. 3001, 3011, 77 L.Ed.2d 637 (1983). Similarly, "trickery and deceit," TXO, 509 U.S., at 462, 113 S.Ct., at 2722, are more reprehensible than negligence. In TXO, both the West Virginia Supreme Court and the Justices of this Court placed special emphasis on the principle that punitive damages may not be "grossly out of proportion to the severity of the offense."25 Id., at 453, 482, 113 S.Ct., at 2718, 2733. Indeed, for Justice KENNEDY, the defendant's intentional malice was the decisive element in a "close and difficult" case. Id., at 468, 113 S.Ct., at 2725.26

In this case, none of the aggravating factors associated with particularly reprehensible conduct is present. The harm BMW inflicted on Dr. Gore was purely economic in nature. The presale refinishing of the car had no effect on its performance or safety features, or even its appearance for at least nine months after his purchase. BMW's conduct evinced no indifference to or reckless disregard for the health and safety of others. To be sure, infliction of economic injury, especially when done intentionally through affirmative acts of misconduct, id., at 453, 113 S.Ct., at 2717–2718, or when the target is financially vulnerable, can warrant a substantial penalty. But this observation does not convert all acts that cause economic harm into torts that are sufficiently reprehensible to justify a significant sanction in addition to compensatory damages.

Dr. Gore contends that BMW's conduct was particularly reprehensible because nondisclosure of the repairs to his car formed part of a nationwide pattern of tortious conduct. Certainly, evidence that a defendant has repeatedly engaged in prohibited conduct while knowing or suspecting that it was unlawful would provide relevant support for an argument *577 that strong medicine is required to cure the defendant's disrespect for the law. See id., at 462, n. 28, 113 S.Ct., at 2722, n. 28. Our holdings that a recidivist may be punished more severely than a first offender recognize that repeated misconduct is more 1600 reprehensible than an individual instance of malfeasance. See Gryger v. Burke, 334 U.S. 728, 732, 68 S.Ct. 1256, 1258–1259, 92 L.Ed. 1683 (1948).

In support of his thesis, Dr. Gore advances two arguments. First, he asserts that the state disclosure statutes supplement, rather than supplant, existing remedies for breach of contract and common-law fraud. Thus, according to Dr. Gore, the statutes may not properly be viewed as immunizing from liability the nondisclosure of repairs costing less than the applicable statutory threshold. Brief for Respondent 18–19. Second, Dr. Gore maintains that BMW should have anticipated that its failure to disclose similar repair work could expose it to liability for fraud. Id., at 4–5.

[11] We recognize, of course, that only state courts may authoritatively construe state statutes. As far as we are aware, at the time this action was commenced no state court had explicitly addressed whether its State's disclosure statute provides a safe harbor for nondisclosure of presumptively minor repairs or should be construed instead as supplementing common-law duties.27 A review of the text of the statutes, *578 however, persuades us that in the absence of a state-court determination to the contrary, a corporate executive could reasonably interpret the disclosure requirements as establishing safe harbors. In California, for example, the disclosure statute defines "material" damage to a motor vehicle as damage requiring repairs costing in excess of 3 percent of the suggested retail price or $500, whichever is greater. Cal. Veh.Code Ann. § 9990 (West Supp.1996). The Illinois statute states that in cases in which disclosure is not required, "nondisclosure does not constitute a misrepresentation or omission of fact." Ill. Comp. Stat., ch. 815, § 710/5 (1994).28 Perhaps the statutes may also be interpreted in another way. We simply emphasize that the record contains no evidence that BMW's decision to follow a disclosure policy that coincided with the strictest extant state statute was sufficiently reprehensible to justify a $2 million award of punitive damages.

*579 Dr. Gore's second argument for treating BMW as a recidivist is that the company should have anticipated that its actions would be considered fraudulent in some, if not all, jurisdictions. This contention overlooks the fact that actionable fraud requires a material 1601 misrepresentation or omission.29 This qualifier invites line-drawing of just the sort engaged in by States with disclosure statutes and by BMW. We do not think it can be disputed that there may exist minor imperfections in the finish of a new car that can be repaired (or indeed, left unrepaired) without materially affecting the car's value.30 There is no evidence that BMW acted in bad faith when it sought to establish the appropriate line between presumptively minor damage and damage requiring disclosure to purchasers. For this purpose, BMW could reasonably rely on state disclosure statutes for guidance. In this regard, it is also significant that there is no evidence that BMW persisted in a course of conduct after it had been adjudged unlawful on even one occasion, let alone repeated occasions.31

Finally, the record in this case discloses no deliberate false statements, acts of affirmative misconduct, or concealment of evidence of improper motive, such as were present in Haslip and TXO. Haslip, 499 U.S., at 5, 111 S.Ct., at 1036; TXO, 509 U.S., at 453, 113 S.Ct., at 2717–2718. We accept, of course, the jury's finding that BMW suppressed *580 a material fact which Alabama law obligated it to communicate to prospective purchasers of repainted cars in that State. But the omission of a material fact may be less reprehensible than a deliberate false statement, particularly when there is a good-faith basis for believing that no duty to disclose exists.

[12] That conduct is sufficiently reprehensible to give rise to tort liability, and even a modest award of exemplary damages does not establish the high degree of culpability that warrants a substantial punitive damages award. Because this case exhibits none of the circumstances ordinarily associated with egregiously improper conduct, we are persuaded that BMW's conduct was not sufficiently reprehensible to warrant imposition of a $2 million exemplary damages award.

Ratio

The second and perhaps most commonly cited indicium of an unreasonable or excessive punitive damages award is its ratio to the actual harm inflicted on the plaintiff. See TXO, 509 U.S., at 459, 113 S.Ct., at 2721; Haslip, 499 U.S., at 23, 111 S.Ct., at 1046. The principle that exemplary damages must bear a "reasonable relationship" to compensatory damages has a long pedigree.32 Scholars have identified a number of early English statutes authorizing the *581 award of multiple damages for particular wrongs. Some 65 different enactments during the period between 1275 and 1753 provided for double, treble, or quadruple damages.33 Our 1602 decisions in both Haslip and TXO endorsed the proposition that a comparison between the compensatory award and the punitive award is significant.

In Haslip we concluded that even though a punitive damages award of "more than 4 times the amount of compensatory damages" might be "close to the line," it did not "cross the line into the area of constitutional impropriety." 499 U.S., at 23–24, 111 S.Ct., at 1046. TXO, following dicta in Haslip, refined this analysis by confirming that the proper inquiry is " 'whether there is a reasonable relationship between the punitive damages award and the harm likely to result from the defendant's conduct as well as the harm that actually has occurred.' " TXO, 509 U.S., at 460, 113 S.Ct., at 2721 (emphasis in original), quoting Haslip, 499 U.S., at 21, 111 S.Ct., at 1045. Thus, in upholding the $10 million award in TXO, we relied on the difference between that figure and the harm to the victim that would have ensued if the tortious plan had succeeded. That difference suggested that the relevant ratio was not more than 10 to 1.[34]

582 The $2 million in punitive damages awarded to Dr. Gore by the Alabama Supreme Court is 500 times the amount of his actual harm as determined by the jury.[35] Moreover, there is no suggestion that Dr. Gore or any other BMW purchaser was threatened with any additional potential harm by BMW's nondisclosure policy. The disparity in this case is thus dramatically greater than those considered in Haslip and TXO.[36]

[13] Of course, we have consistently rejected the notion that the constitutional line is marked by a simple mathematical formula, even one that compares actual and potential damages to the punitive award. TXO, 509 U.S., at 458, 113 S.Ct., at 2720.[37] Indeed, low awards of compensatory damages may properly support a higher ratio than high compensatory awards, if, for example, a particularly egregious act has resulted in only a small amount of economic damages. A higher ratio may also be justified in cases in which the injury is hard to detect or the monetary value of noneconomic harm might have been difficult to determine. It is appropriate, therefore, to reiterate our rejection of a categorical approach. Once again, "we return to what we said ... in Haslip: 'We need not, and 583 indeed we cannot, draw a mathematical bright line between the constitutionally acceptable and the constitutionally unacceptable that would fit every case. We can say, however, that [a] general concer[n] of reasonableness ... properly enter[s] into the constitutional calculus.' " Id., at 458, 113 S.Ct., at 2720 (quoting *1603 Haslip, 499 U.S., at 18, 111 S.Ct., at 1043). In most cases, the ratio will be within a constitutionally acceptable range, and remittitur will not be justified on this basis. When the ratio is a breathtaking 500 to 1, however, the award must surely "raise a suspicious judicial eyebrow." TXO, 509 U.S., at 481, 113 S.Ct., at 2732 (O'CONNOR, J., dissenting).

Sanctions for Comparable Misconduct

[14] Comparing the punitive damages award and the civil or criminal penalties that could be imposed for comparable misconduct provides a third indicium of excessiveness. As Justice O'CONNOR has correctly observed, a reviewing court engaged in determining whether an award of punitive damages is excessive should "accord 'substantial deference' to legislative judgments concerning appropriate sanctions for the conduct at issue." Browning–Ferris Industries of Vt., Inc. v. Kelco Disposal, Inc., 492 U.S., at 301, 109 S.Ct., at 2934 (opinion concurring in part and dissenting in part). In Haslip, 499 U.S., at 23, 111 S.Ct., at 1046, the Court noted that although the exemplary award was "much in excess of the fine that could be imposed," imprisonment was also authorized in the criminal context.[38] In this 584 case the $2 million economic sanction imposed on BMW is substantially greater than the statutory fines available in Alabama and elsewhere for similar malfeasance.

The maximum civil penalty authorized by the Alabama Legislature for a violation of its Deceptive Trade Practices Act is $2,000;[39] other States authorize more severe sanctions, with the maxima ranging from $5,000 to $10,000.[40] Significantly, some statutes draw a distinction between first offenders and recidivists; thus, in New York the penalty is $50 for a first offense and $250 for subsequent offenses. None of these statutes would provide an out-of-state distributor with fair notice that the first violation—or, indeed the first 14 violations—of its provisions might subject an offender to a multimillion dollar penalty. Moreover, at the time BMW's policy was first challenged, there does not appear to have been any judicial decision in Alabama or elsewhere indicating that application of that policy might give rise to such severe punishment.

The sanction imposed in this case cannot be justified on the ground that it was necessary to deter future misconduct without considering whether less drastic remedies could be expected to achieve that goal. The fact that a multimillion dollar penalty prompted a change in policy sheds no light on the question whether a lesser deterrent would have adequately protected the interests of Alabama consumers. In 585 the absence of a history of noncompliance with known statutory requirements, there is no basis for assuming that a more modest sanction would not have been sufficient to motivate full compliance with the disclosure requirement imposed *1604 by the Alabama Supreme Court in this case.

IV

We assume, as the juries in this case and in the Yates case found, that the undisclosed damage to the new BMW's affected their actual value. Notwithstanding the evidence adduced by BMW in an effort to prove that the repainted cars conformed to the same quality standards as its other cars, we also assume that it knew, or should have known, that as time passed the repainted cars would lose their attractive appearance more rapidly than other BMW's. Moreover, we of course accept the Alabama courts' view that the state interest in protecting its citizens from deceptive trade practices justifies a sanction in addition to the recovery of compensatory damages. We cannot, however, accept the conclusion of the Alabama Supreme Court that BMW's conduct was sufficiently egregious to justify a punitive sanction that is tantamount to a severe criminal penalty.

[15] [16] The fact that BMW is a large corporation rather than an impecunious individual does not diminish its entitlement to fair notice of the demands that the several States impose on the conduct of its business. Indeed, its status as an active participant in the national economy implicates the federal interest in preventing individual States from imposing undue burdens on interstate commerce. While each State has ample power to protect its own consumers, none may use the punitive damages deterrent as a means of imposing its regulatory policies on the entire Nation.

As in Haslip, we are not prepared to draw a bright line marking the limits of a constitutionally acceptable punitive damages award. Unlike that case, however, we are fully convinced that the grossly excessive award imposed in this 586 case transcends the constitutional limit.[41] Whether the appropriate remedy requires a new trial or merely an independent determination by the Alabama Supreme Court of the award necessary to vindicate the economic interests of Alabama consumers is a matter that should be addressed by the state court in the first instance.

The judgment is reversed, and the case is remanded for further proceedings not inconsistent with this opinion.

It is so ordered.

Justice BREYER, with whom Justice O'CONNOR and Justice SOUTER join, concurring.

The Alabama state courts have assessed the defendant $2 million in "punitive damages" for having knowingly failed to tell a BMW automobile buyer that, at a cost of $600, it had repainted portions of his new $40,000 car, thereby lowering its potential resale value by about 10%. The Court's opinion, which I join, explains why we have concluded that this award, in this case, was "grossly excessive" in relation to legitimate punitive damages objectives, and hence an arbitrary deprivation of life, liberty, or property in violation of the Due Process Clause. See TXO Production Corp. v. Alliance Resources Corp., 509 U.S. 443, 453, 454, 113 S.Ct. 2711, 2718, 125 L.Ed.2d 366 (1993) (A "grossly excessive" punitive award amounts to an "arbitrary deprivation of property without due process of law") (plurality opinion). Members of this Court have generally thought, however, that if "fair procedures were followed, a judgment that is a product of that process is entitled to a strong presumption 587 of validity." Id., at 457, 113 S.Ct., at 2720. See also Pacific Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Haslip, 499 U.S. 1, 40–42, 111 S.Ct. 1032, 1054–1056, 113 L.Ed.2d 1 (1991) (KENNEDY, J., concurring in judgment). And the Court also has found that punitive damages procedures very similar to those followed here were not, by themselves, fundamentally unfair. Id., at 15–24, 111 S.Ct., at 1041–1047. Thus, I believe it important to explain why this presumption of validity is overcome in this instance.

*1605 The reason flows from the Court's emphasis in Haslip upon the constitutional importance of legal standards that provide "reasonable constraints" within which "discretion is exercised," that assure "meaningful and adequate review by the trial court whenever a jury has fixed the punitive damages," and permit "appellate review [that] makes certain that the punitive damages are reasonable in their amount and rational in light of their purpose to punish what has occurred and to deter its repetition." Id., at 20–21, 111 S.Ct., at 1045. See also id., at 18, 111 S.Ct., at 1043 ("[U]nlimited jury discretion—or unlimited judicial discretion for that matter—in the fixing of punitive damages may invite extreme results that jar one's constitutional sensibilities").

This constitutional concern, itself harkening back to the Magna Carta, arises out of the basic unfairness of depriving citizens of life, liberty, or property, through the application, not of law and legal processes, but of arbitrary coercion. Daniels v. Williams, 474 U.S. 327, 331, 106 S.Ct. 662, 665, 88 L.Ed.2d 662 (1986); Dent v. West Virginia, 129 U.S. 114, 123, 9 S.Ct. 231, 233–234, 32 L.Ed. 623 (1889). Requiring the application of law, rather than a decisionmaker's caprice, does more than simply provide citizens notice of what actions may subject them to punishment; it also helps to assure the uniform general treatment of similarly situated persons that is the essence of law itself. See Railway Express Agency, Inc. v. New York, 336 U.S. 106, 112, 69 S.Ct.

463, 466–467, 93 L.Ed. 533 (1949) (Jackson, J., concurring) ("[T]here is no more effective practical guaranty against arbitrary and unreasonable government than to require that the principles of law which officials would impose upon a minority must be imposed generally").

588 Legal standards need not be precise in order to satisfy this constitutional concern. See Haslip, supra, at 20, 111 S.Ct., at 1044 (comparing punitive damages standards to such legal standards as "reasonable care," "due diligence," and "best interests of the child") (internal quotation marks omitted). But they must offer some kind of constraint upon a jury or court's discretion, and thus protection against purely arbitrary behavior. The standards the Alabama courts applied here are vague and open ended to the point where they risk arbitrary results. In my view, although the vagueness of those standards does not, by itself, violate due process, see Haslip, supra, it does invite the kind of scrutiny the Court has given the particular verdict before us. See id., at 18, 111 S.Ct., at 1043 ("[C]oncerns of ... adequate guidance from the court when the case is tried to a jury properly enter into the constitutional calculus"); TXO, supra, at 475, 113 S.Ct., at 2729 ("[I]t cannot be denied that the lack of clear guidance heightens the risk that arbitrariness, passion, or bias will replace dispassionate deliberation as the basis for the jury's verdict") (O'CONNOR, J., dissenting). This is because the standards, as the Alabama Supreme Court authoritatively interpreted them here, provided no significant constraints or protection against arbitrary results.

First, the Alabama statute that permits punitive damages does not itself contain a standard that readily distinguishes between conduct warranting very small, and conduct warranting very large, punitive damages awards. That statute permits punitive damages in cases of "oppression, fraud, wantonness, or malice." Ala.Code § 6–11–20(a) (1993). But the statute goes on to define those terms broadly, to encompass far more than the egregious conduct that those terms, at first reading, might seem to imply. An intentional misrepresentation, made through a statement or silence, can easily amount to "fraud" sufficient to warrant punitive damages. See § 6–11–20(b)(1) ("Fraud" includes "intentional ... concealment of a material fact the concealing party had a 589 duty to disclose, which was gross, oppressive, or malicious and committed with the intention ... of thereby depriving a person or entity of property") (emphasis added); § 6–11–20(b)(2) ("Malice" includes any "wrongful act without just cause or excuse ... [w]ith an intent to injure the ... property of another") (emphasis added); § 6–11–20(b)(5) ("Oppression" includes "[s]ubjecting a person to ... unjust hardship in conscious disregard of that person's rights"). The statute thereby authorizes punitive damages for the most *1606 serious kinds of misrepresentations, say, tricking the elderly out of their life savings, for much less serious conduct, such as the failure to disclose repainting a car, at issue here, and for a vast range of conduct in between.

Second, the Alabama courts, in this case, have applied the "factors" intended to constrain punitive damages awards in a way that belies that purpose. Green Oil Co. v. Hornsby, 539 So.2d 218 (Ala.1989), sets forth seven factors that appellate courts use to determine whether or not a jury award was "grossly excessive" and which, in principle, might make up for the lack of significant constraint in the statute. But, as the Alabama courts have authoritatively interpreted them, and as their application in this case illustrates, they impose little actual constraint.

(a) Green Oil requires that a punitive damages award "bear a reasonable relationship to the harm that is likely to occur from the defendant's conduct as well as to the harm that actually has occurred." Id., at 223. But this standard does little to guide a determination of what counts as a "reasonable" relationship, as this case illustrates. The record evidence of past, present, or likely future harm consists of (a) $4,000 of harm to Dr. Gore's BMW; (b) 13 other similar Alabama instances; and (c) references to about 1,000 similar instances in other States. The Alabama Supreme Court, disregarding BMW's failure to make relevant objection to the out-of-state instances at trial (as was the court's right), held that the last mentioned, out-of-state instances did not 590 count as relevant harm. It went on to find "a reasonable relationship" between the harm and the $2 million punitive damages award without "consider[ing] those acts that occurred in other jurisdictions. " 646 So.2d 619, 628 (1994) (emphasis added). For reasons explored by the majority in greater depth, see ante, at 1598–1604, the relationship between this award and the underlying conduct seems well beyond the bounds of the "reasonable." To find a "reasonable relationship" between purely economic harm totaling $56,000, without significant evidence of future repetition, and a punitive award of $2 million is to empty the "reasonable relationship" test of meaningful content. As thus construed, it does not set forth a legal standard that could have significantly constrained the discretion of Alabama factfinders.

(b) Green Oil 's second factor is the "degree of reprehensibility" of the defendant's conduct. Green Oil, supra, at 223. Like the "reasonable relationship" test, this factor provides little guidance on how to relate culpability to the size of an award. The Alabama court, in considering this factor, found "reprehensible" that BMW followed a conscious policy of not disclosing repairs to new cars when the cost of repairs amounted to less than 3% of the car's value. Of course, any conscious policy of not disclosing a repair—where one knows the nondisclosure might cost the customer resale value—is "reprehensible" to some degree. But, for the reasons discussed by the majority, ante, at 1599–1601, I do not see how the Alabama courts could find conduct that (they assumed) caused $56,000 of relevant economic harm especially or unusually reprehensible enough to warrant $2 million in punitive damages, or a significant portion of that award. To find to the contrary, as the Alabama courts did, is not simply unreasonable; it is to make "reprehensibility" a concept without constraining force, i.e., to deprive the concept of its constraining power to protect against serious and capricious deprivations.

591 c) Green Oil 's third factor requires "punitive damages" to "remove the profit" of the illegal activity and "be in excess of the profit, so that the defendant recognizes a loss." Green Oil, 539 So.2d, at 223. This factor has the ability to limit awards to a fixed, rational amount. But as applied, that concept's potential was not realized, for the court did not limit the award to anywhere near the $56,000 in profits evidenced in the record. Given the record's description of the conduct and its prevalence, this factor could not justify much of the $2 million award.

(d) Green Oil 's fourth factor is the "financial position" of the defendant. Ibid. Since a fixed dollar award will punish a poor person more than a wealthy one, one can understand the relevance of this factor to the State's *1607 interest in retribution (though not necessarily to its interest in deterrence, given the more distant relation between a defendant's wealth and its responses to economic incentives). See TXO, 509 U.S., at 462, and n. 28, 113 S.Ct., at 2722, and n. 28 (plurality opinion); id., at 469, 113 S.Ct., at 2726 (KENNEDY, J., concurring in part and concurring in judgment); Haslip, 499 U.S., at 21–22, 111 S.Ct., at 1045; Browning–Ferris Industries of Vt., Inc. v. Kelco Disposal, Inc., 492 U.S. 257, 300, 109 S.Ct. 2909, 2933, 106 L.Ed.2d 219 (1989) (O'CONNOR, J., concurring in part and dissenting in part). This factor, however, is not necessarily intended to act as a significant constraint on punitive awards. Rather, it provides an open-ended basis for inflating awards when the defendant is wealthy, as this case may illustrate. That does not make its use unlawful or inappropriate; it simply means that this factor cannot make up for the failure of other factors, such as "reprehensibility," to constrain significantly an award that purports to punish a defendant's conduct.

(e) Green Oil 's fifth factor is the "costs of litigation" and the State's desire "to encourage plaintiffs to bring wrongdoers to trial." 539 So.2d, at 223. This standard provides meaningful constraint to the extent that the enhancement it authorized is linked to a fixed, ascertainable amount approximating actual costs, even when defined generously to reflect 592 the contingent nature of plaintiffs' victories. But as this case shows, the factor cannot operate as a constraint when an award much in excess of costs is approved for other reasons. An additional aspect of the standard—the need to "encourage plaintiffs to bring wrongdoers to trial"—is a factor that does not constrain, but enhances, discretionary power—especially when unsupported by evidence of a special need to encourage litigation (which the Alabama courts here did not mention).

(f) Green Oil 's sixth factor is whether or not "criminal sanctions have been imposed on the defendant for his conduct." Ibid. This factor did not apply here.

(g) Green Oil 's seventh factor requires that "other civil actions" filed "against the same defendant, based on the same conduct," be considered in mitigation. Id., at 224. That factor did not apply here.

Thus, the first, second, and third Green Oil factors, in principle, might sometimes act as constraints on arbitrary behavior. But as the Alabama courts interpreted those standards in this case, even taking those three factors together, they could not have significantly constrained the court system's ability to impose "grossly excessive" awards.

Third, the state courts neither referred to, nor made any effort to find, nor enunciated any other standard that either directly, or indirectly as background, might have supplied the constraining legal force that the statute and Green Oil standards (as interpreted here) lack. Dr. Gore did argue to the jury an economic theory based on the need to offset the totality of the harm that the defendant's conduct caused. Some theory of that general kind might have provided a significant constraint on arbitrary awards (at least where confined to the relevant harm-causing conduct, see ante, at 1596–1598). Some economists, for example, have argued for a standard that would deter illegal activity causing solely economic harm through the use of punitive damages awards that, as a whole, would take from a wrongdoer the total cost of the 593 harm caused. See, e.g., S. Shavell, Economic Analysis of Accident Law 162 (1987) ("If liability equals losses caused multiplied by ... the inverse of the probability of suit, injurers will act optimally under liability rules despite the chance that they will escape suit"); Cooter, Punitive Damages for Deterrence: When and How Much, 40 Ala. L.Rev. 1143, 1146–1148 (1989). My understanding of the intuitive essence of some of those theories, which I put in crude form (leaving out various qualifications), is that they could permit juries to calculate punitive damages by making a rough estimate of global harm, dividing that estimate by a similarly rough estimate of the number of successful lawsuits that would likely be brought, and adding generous attorney's fees and other costs. Smaller damages would not sufficiently discourage firms from engaging in the harmful conduct, while larger damages would "over-deter" by leading potential defendants 1608 to spend more to prevent the activity that causes the economic harm, say, through employee training, than the cost of the harm itself. See Galligan, Augmented Awards: The Efficient Evolution of Punitive Damages, 51 La. L.Rev. 3, 17–20, 28–30 (1990). Larger damages might also "double count" by including in the punitive damages award some of the compensatory, or punitive, damages that subsequent plaintiffs would also recover.

The record before us, however, contains nothing suggesting that the Alabama Supreme Court, when determining the allowable award, applied any "economic" theory that might explain the $2 million recovery. Cf. Browning–Ferris, supra, at 300, 109 S.Ct., at 2933 (noting that the Constitution "does not incorporate the views of the Law and Economics School," nor does it " 'require the States to subscribe to any particular economic theory' ") (O'CONNOR, J., concurring in part and dissenting in part) (quoting CTS Corp. v. Dynamics Corp. of America, 481 U.S. 69, 92, 107 S.Ct. 1637, 1651, 95 L.Ed.2d 67 (1987)). And courts properly tend to judge the rationality of judicial actions in terms of the reasons that were given, and the facts that were before the court, cf. *594 TXO, 509 U.S., at 468, 113 S.Ct., at 2725 (KENNEDY, J., concurring in part and concurring in judgment), not those that might have been given on the basis of some conceivable set of facts (unlike the rationality of economic statutes enacted by legislatures subject to the public's control through the ballot box, see, e.g., FCC v. Beach Communications, Inc., 508 U.S. 307, 315, 113 S.Ct. 2096, 2102, 124 L.Ed.2d 211 (1993)). Therefore, reference to a constraining "economic" theory, which might have counseled more deferential review by this Court, is lacking in this case.

Fourth, I cannot find any community understanding or historic practice that this award might exemplify and which, therefore, would provide background standards constraining arbitrary behavior and excessive awards. A punitive damages award of $2 million for intentional misrepresentation causing $56,000 of harm is extraordinary by historical standards, and, as far as I am aware, finds no analogue until relatively recent times. Amici for Dr. Gore attempt to show that this is not true, pointing to various historical cases which, according to their calculations, represented roughly equivalent punitive awards for similarly culpable conduct. See Brief for James D.A. Boyle et al. as Amici Curiae 4–5 (hereinafter Legal Historians' Brief). Among others, they cite Wilkes v. Wood, Lofft 1, 98 Eng. Rep. 489 (C.P. 1763) (£ 1,000 said to be equivalent of $1.5 million, for warrantless search of papers); Huckle v. Money, 2 Wills. 205, 95 Eng. Rep. 768 (K.B.1763) (£>>> 300, said to be $450,000, for 6–hour false imprisonment); Hewlett v. Cruchley, 5 Taunt. 277, 128 Eng. Rep. 696 (C.P. 1813) (£2,000, said to be $680,000, for malicious prosecution); Merest v. Harvey, 5 Taunt. 442, 128 Eng. Rep. 761 (C.P. 1814) (£500, said to be $165,000, for poaching). But amici apparently base their conversions on a mathematical assumption, namely, that inflation has progressed at a constant 3% rate of inflation. See Legal Historians' Brief 4. In fact, consistent, cumulative inflation is a modern phenomenon. See McCusker, How Much Is That in Real Money? A Historical Price Index for Use as a Deflator *595 of Money Values in the Economy of the United States, 101 Proceedings of American Antiquarian Society 297, 310, 323–332 (1992). Estimates based on historical rates of valuation, while highly approximate, suggest that the ancient extraordinary awards are small compared to the $2 million here at issue, or other modern punitive damages figures. See Appendix to this opinion, infra, at 1609–1610, suggesting that the modern equivalent of the awards in the above cases is something like $150,000, $45,000, $100,000, and $25,000, respectively). And, as the majority opinion makes clear, the record contains nothing to suggest that the extraordinary size of the award in this case is explained by the extraordinary wrongfulness of the defendant's behavior, measured by historical or community standards, rather than arbitrariness or caprice.

Fifth, there are no other legislative enactments here that classify awards and impose quantitative limits that would significantly cabin the fairly unbounded discretion created by the absence of constraining legal standards. Cf., e.g., 1609 Tex. Civ. Prac. & Rem.Code Ann. § 41.008 (Supp.1996) (punitive damages generally limited to greater of double damages, or $200,000, except cap does not apply to suits arising from certain serious criminal acts enumerated in the statute); Conn. Gen.Stat. § 52–240b (1995) (punitive damages may not exceed double compensatory damages in product liability cases); Fla. Stat. § 768.73(1) (Supp.1993) (punitive damages in certain actions limited to treble compensatory damages); Ga.Code Ann. § 51–12–5.1(g) (Supp.1995) ($250,000 cap in certain actions).

The upshot is that the rules that purport to channel discretion in this kind of case, here did not do so in fact. That means that the award in this case was both (a) the product of a system of standards that did not significantly constrain a court's, and hence a jury's, discretion in making that award; and (b) grossly excessive in light of the State's legitimate punitive damages objectives.

596 The first of these reasons has special importance where courts review a jury-determined punitive damages award. That is because one cannot expect to direct jurors like legislators through the ballot box; nor can one expect those jurors to interpret law like judges, who work within a discipline and hierarchical organization that normally promotes roughly uniform interpretation and application of the law. Yet here Alabama expects jurors to act, at least a little, like legislators or judges, for it permits them, to a certain extent, to create public policy and to apply that policy, not to compensate a victim, but to achieve a policy-related objective outside the confines of the particular case.

To the extent that neither clear legal principles nor fairly obvious historical or community-based standards (defining, say, especially egregious behavior) significantly constrain punitive damages awards, is there not a substantial risk of outcomes so arbitrary that they become difficult to square with the Constitution's assurance, to every citizen, of the law's protection? The standards here, as authoritatively interpreted, in my view, make this threat real and not theoretical. And, in these unusual circumstances, where legal standards offer virtually no constraint, I believe that this lack of constraining standards warrants this Court's detailed examination of the award.

The second reason—the severe disproportionality between the award and the legitimate punitive damages objectives—reflects a judgment about a matter of degree. I recognize that it is often difficult to determine just when a punitive award exceeds an amount reasonably related to a State's legitimate interests, or when that excess is so great as to amount to a matter of constitutional concern. Yet whatever the difficulties of drawing a precise line, once we examine the award in this case, it is not difficult to say that this award lies on the line's far side. The severe lack of proportionality between the size of the award and the underlying punitive damages objectives shows that the award falls into the category 597 of "gross excessiveness" set forth in this Court's prior cases.

These two reasons taken together overcome what would otherwise amount to a "strong presumption of validity." TXO, 509 U.S., at 457, 113 S.Ct., at 2720. And, for those two reasons, I conclude that the award in this unusual case violates the basic guarantee of nonarbitrary governmental behavior that the Due Process Clause provides.

APPENDIX TO OPINION OF BREYER, J.

Although I recognize that all estimates of historic rates of inflation are subject to dispute, including, I assume, the sources below, those sources suggest that the value of the 18th and 19th century judgments cited by amici is much less than the figures amici arrived at under their presumption of a constant 3% rate of inflation.

In 1763, £1 (Eng.) was worth £1.73 Pennsylvania currency. See U.S. Bureau of the Census, Historical Statistics of the United States: Colonial Times to 1970, Series Z–585, p. 1198 (Bicentennial ed.1975). For the period 1766–1772, £1 (Penn.) was worth $45.99 (U.S.1991). See McCusker, How Much Is That in Real Money? A Historical Price Index for Use as a Deflator of Money Values in the Economy of the United States, 101 American Antiquarian Society 297, 333 *1610 (1992). Thus, £>1 (Eng.1763) is worth about $79.56 (U.S.1991). Accounting for the 12% inflation of the U.S. dollar between 1991 and 1995 (when amici filed their brief), see Economic Indicators, 104th Cong., 2d Sess., p. 23 (Feb.1996), £1 (Eng.1763) is worth about $89.11 (U.S.1995).

Calculated another way, £1 (Eng.1763) is worth about £>>>>72.84 (Eng.1991). See McCusker, supra, at 312, 342, 350. And £1 (Eng.1991) is worth $1.77 (U.S.1991). See 78 Fed. Reserve Bulletin A68 (Feb.1992). Thus, £1 (Eng.1763) amounts to about $128.93 (U.S.1991). Again, accounting for inflation between 1991 and 1995, this amounts to about $144.40 (U.S.1995).

Thus, the above sources suggest that the £1,000 award in Wilkes in 1763 roughly amounts to between $89,110 and $144,440 today, not $1.5 million. And the £300 award in Huckle that same year would seem to be worth between $26,733 and $43,320 today, not $450,000.

For the period of the Hewlett and Merest decisions, £1 (Eng.1813) is worth about £25.3 (Eng.1991). See McCusker, supra, at 344, 350. Using the 1991 exchange rate, £1 (Eng.1813) is worth about $44.78 (U.S.1991). Accounting for inflation between 1991 and 1995, this amounts to about $50.16 (U.S.1995).

598 Thus, the £2,000 and £500 awards in Hewlett and Merest would seem to be closer to $100,320 and $25,080, respectively, than to amici's estimates of $680,000 and $165,000.

Justice SCALIA, with whom Justice THOMAS joins, dissenting.

Today we see the latest manifestation of this Court's recent and increasingly insistent "concern about punitive damages that 'run wild.' " Pacific Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Haslip, 499 U.S. 1, 18, 111 S.Ct. 1032, 1043, 113 L.Ed.2d 1 (1991). Since the Constitution does not make that concern any of our business, the Court's activities in this area are an unjustified incursion into the province of state governments.

In earlier cases that were the prelude to this decision, I set forth my view that a state trial procedure that commits the decision whether to impose punitive damages, and the amount, to the discretion of the jury, subject to some judicial review for "reasonableness," furnishes a defendant with all the process that is "due." See TXO Production Corp. v. Alliance Resources Corp., 509 U.S. 443, 470, 113 S.Ct. 2711, 2726, 125 L.Ed.2d 366 (1993) (SCALIA, J., concurring in judgment); Haslip, supra, at 25–28, 111 S.Ct., at 1046–1049 (SCALIA, J., concurring in judgment); cf. Honda Motor Co. v. Oberg, 512 U.S. 415, 435–436, 114 S.Ct. 2331, 2342, 129 L.Ed.2d 336 (1994) (SCALIA, J., concurring). I do not regard the Fourteenth Amendment's Due Process Clause as a secret repository of substantive guarantees against 599 "unfairness"—neither the unfairness of an excessive civil compensatory award, nor the unfairness of an "unreasonable" punitive award. What the Fourteenth Amendment's procedural guarantee assures is an opportunity to contest the reasonableness of a damages judgment in state court; but there is no federal guarantee a damages award actually be reasonable. See TXO, supra, at 471, 113 S.Ct., at 2727 (SCALIA, J., concurring in judgment).

This view, which adheres to the text of the Due Process Clause, has not prevailed in our punitive damages cases. See TPXO, 509 U.S., at 453–462, 113 S.Ct., at 2718–2723 (plurality opinion); id., at 478–481, 113 S.Ct., at 2730–2732 (O'CONNOR, J., dissenting); Haslip, supra, at 18, 111 S.Ct., at 1043. When, however, a constitutional doctrine adopted by the Court is not only mistaken but also insusceptible of principled application, I do not feel bound to give it stare decisis effect—indeed, I do not feel justified in doing so. See, e.g., Witte v. United States, 515 U.S. 389, 406, 115 S.Ct. 2199, 2209, 132 L.Ed.2d 351 (1995) (SCALIA, J., concurring in judgment); Walton v. Arizona, 497 U.S. 639, 673, 110 S.Ct. 3047, 3067–3068, 111 L.Ed.2d 511 (1990) (SCALIA, J., concurring in judgment in part and dissenting in part). Our punitive damages jurisprudence compels such a response. The Constitution provides no warrant for federalizing yet another aspect of our Nation's legal culture (no matter *1611 how much in need of correction it may be), and the application of the Court's new rule of constitutional law is constrained by no principle other than the Justices' subjective assessment of the "reasonableness" of the award in relation to the conduct for which it was assessed.

Because today's judgment represents the first instance of this Court's invalidation of a state-court punitive assessment as simply unreasonably large, I think it a proper occasion to discuss these points at some length.

I

The most significant aspects of today's decision—the identification of a "substantive due process" right against a "grossly excessive" award, and the concomitant assumption 600 of ultimate authority to decide anew a matter of "reasonableness" resolved in lower court proceedings—are of course not new. Haslip and TXO revived the notion, moribund since its appearance in the first years of this century, that the measure of civil punishment poses a question of constitutional dimension to be answered by this Court. Neither of those cases, however, nor any of the precedents upon which they relied, actually took the step of declaring a punitive award unconstitutional simply because it was "too big."

At the time of adoption of the Fourteenth Amendment, it was well understood that punitive damages represent the assessment by the jury, as the voice of the community, of the measure of punishment the defendant deserved. See, e.g., Barry v. Edmunds, 116 U.S. 550, 565, 6 S.Ct. 501, 509, 29 L.Ed. 729 (1886); Missouri Pacific R. Co. v. Humes, 115 U.S. 512, 521, 6 S.Ct. 110, 113, 29 L.Ed. 463 (1885); Day v. Woodworth, 13 How. 363, 371, 14 L.Ed. 181 (1852). See generally Haslip, supra, at 25–27, 111 S.Ct., at 1047–1048 (SCALIA, J., concurring in judgment). Today's decision, though dressed up as a legal opinion, is really no more than a disagreement with the community's sense of indignation or outrage expressed in the punitive award of the Alabama jury, as reduced by the State Supreme Court. It reflects not merely, as the concurrence candidly acknowledges, "a judgment about a matter of degree," ante, at 1609; but a judgment about the appropriate degree of indignation or outrage, which is hardly an analytical determination.

There is no precedential warrant for giving our judgment priority over the judgment of state courts and juries on this matter. The only support for the Court's position is to be found in a handful of errant federal cases, bunched within a few years of one other, which invented the notion that an unfairly severe civil sanction amounts to a violation of constitutional liberties. These were the decisions upon which the TXO plurality relied in pronouncing that the Due Process Clause "imposes substantive limits 'beyond which penalties may not go,' " 509 U.S., at 454, 113 S.Ct., at 2718 (quoting Seaboard Air Line R. Co. v. Seegers, 207 U.S. 73, 78, 28 S.Ct. 28, 30, 52 L.Ed. 108 (1907)); see also 601 509 U.S., at 478–481, 113 S.Ct., at 2730–2732 (O'CONNOR, J., dissenting); Haslip, supra, 499 U.S., at 18, 111 S.Ct., at 1043. Although they are our precedents, they are themselves too shallowly rooted to justify the Court's recent undertaking. The only case relied upon in which the Court actually invalidated a civil sanction does not even support constitutional review for excessiveness, since it really concerned the validity, as a matter of procedural due process, of state legislation that imposed a significant penalty on a common carrier which lacked the means of determining the legality of its actions before the penalty was imposed. See Southwestern Telegraph & Telephone Co. v. Danaher, 238 U.S. 482, 489–491, 35 S.Ct. 886, 887–888, 59 L.Ed. 1419 (1915). The amount of the penalty was not a subject of independent scrutiny. As for the remaining cases, while the opinions do consider arguments that statutory penalties can, by reason of their excessiveness, violate due process, not a single one of these judgments invalidates a damages award. See Seaboard, supra, at 78–79, 28 S.Ct., at 30; Waters–Pierce Oil Co. v. Texas (No. 1), 212 U.S. 86, 111–112, 29 S.Ct. 220, 227, 53 L.Ed. 417 (1909); Standard Oil Co. of Ind. v. Missouri, 224 U.S. 270, 286, 290, 32 S.Ct. 406, 411, 412, 56 L.Ed. 760 (1912); *1612 St. Louis, I.M. & S.R. Co. v. Williams, 251 U.S. 63, 66–67, 40 S.Ct. 71, 73, 64 L.Ed. 139 (1919).

More importantly, this latter group of cases—which again are the sole precedential foundation put forward for the rule of constitutional law espoused by today's Court—simply fabricated the "substantive due process" right at issue. Seaboard assigned no precedent to its bald assertion that the Constitution imposes "limits beyond which penalties may not go," 207 U.S., at 78, 28 S.Ct., at 30. Waters–Pierce cited only Coffey v. County of Harlan, 204 U.S. 659, 27 S.Ct. 305, 51 L.Ed. 666 (1907), a case which inquired into the constitutionality of state procedure, id., at 662–663, 27 S.Ct., at 305–306. Standard Oil simply cited Waters–Pierce, and St. Louis, I.M. & S. R. Co. offered in addition to these cases only Collins v. Johnston, 237 U.S. 502, 35 S.Ct. 649, 59 L.Ed. 1071 (1915), which said nothing to support the notion of a "substantive due process" right against excessive civil penalties, but to the contrary asserted that the prescribing and imposing of criminal punishment were "functions peculiarly belonging to the several States," 602 id., at 509–510, 35 S.Ct., at 652–653. Thus, the only authority for the Court's position is simply not authoritative. These cases fall far short of what is needed to supplant this country's longstanding practice regarding exemplary awards, see, e.g., Haslip, 499 U.S., at 15–18, 111 S.Ct., at 1041–1043; id., at 25–28, 111 S.Ct., at 1047–1048 (SCALIA, J., concurring in judgment).

II

One might understand the Court's eagerness to enter this field, rather than leave it with the state legislatures, if it had something useful to say. In fact, however, its opinion provides virtually no guidance to legislatures, and to state and federal courts, as to what a "constitutionally proper" level of punitive damages might be.

We are instructed at the outset of Part II of the Court's opinion—the beginniwr of its substantive analysis—that "the federal excessiveness inquiry ... begins with an identification of the state interests that a punitive award is designed to serve." Ante, at 1595. On first reading this, one is faced with the prospect that federal punitive damages law (the new field created by today's decision) will be beset by the sort of "interest analysis" that has laid waste the formerly comprehensible field of conflict of laws. The thought that each assessment of punitive damages, as to each offense, must be examined to determine the precise "state interests" pursued, is most unsettling. Moreover, if those "interests" are the most fundamental determinant of an award, one would think that due process would require the assessing jury to be instructed about them.

It appears, however (and I certainly hope), that all this is a false alarm. As Part II of the Court's opinion unfolds,it turns out to be directed, not to the question "How much punishment is too much?" but rather to the question "Which acts can be punished?" "Alabama does not have the power," the Court says, "to punish BMW for conduct that was lawful where it occurred and that had no impact on Alabama or its residents." Ante, at 1597. That may be true, though 603 only in the narrow sense that a person cannot be held liable to be punished on the basis of a lawful act. But if a person has been held subject to punishment because he committed an *un*lawful act, the degree of his punishment assuredly can be increased on the basis of any other conduct of his that displays his wickedness, unlawful or not. Criminal sentences can be computed, we have said, on the basis of "information concerning every aspect of a defendant's life," Williams v. New York, 337 U.S. 241, 250–252, 69 S.Ct. 1079, 1085, 93 L.Ed. 1337 (1949). The Court at one point seems to acknowledge this, observing that, although a sentencing court "[cannot] properly punish lawful conduct," it may in assessing the penalty "consider ... lawful conduct that bears on the defendant's character." Ante, at 1598, n. 19. That concession is quite incompatible, however, with the later assertion that, since "neither the jury nor the trial court was presented with evidence that any of BMW's out-of-state conduct was unlawful," the Alabama Supreme Court "therefore properly eschewed reliance on BMW's out-of-state conduct, ... and based its remitted award solely on conduct that occurred within Alabama." Ante, at 1598. Why could the Supreme Court of Alabama not consider lawful (but disreputable) conduct, both inside *1613 and outside Alabama, for the purpose of assessing just how bad an actor BMW was?

The Court follows up its statement that "Alabama does not have the power ... to punish BMW for conduct that was lawful where it occurred" with the statement: "Nor may Alabama impose sanctions on BMW in order to deter conduct that is lawful in other jurisdictions." Ante, at 1597–1598. The Court provides us no citation of authority to support this proposition—other than the barely analogous cases cited earlier in the opinion, see ante, at 1596–1597——and I know of none.

These significant issues pronounced upon by the Court are not remotely presented for resolution in the present case. There is no basis for believing that Alabama has sought to control conduct elsewhere. The statutes at issue merely 604 permit civil juries to treat conduct such as petitioner's as fraud, and authorize an award of appropriate punitive damages in the event the fraud is found to be "gross, oppressive, or malicious," Ala.Code § 6–11–20(b)(1) (1993). To be sure, respondent did invite the jury to consider out-of-state conduct in its calculation of damages, but any increase in the jury's initial award based on that consideration is not a component of the remitted judgment before us. As the Court several times recognizes, in computing the amount of the remitted award the Alabama Supreme Court—whether it was constitutionally required to or not—"expressly disclaimed any reliance on acts that occurred in other jurisdictions." Ante, at 1595 (internal quotation marks omitted); see also ante, at 1598.* Thus, the only question presented by this case is whether that award, limited to petitioner's Alabama conduct and viewed in light of the factors identified as properly informing the inquiry, is excessive. The Court's sweeping (and largely unsupported) statements regarding the relationship of punitive awards to lawful or unlawful out-of-state conduct are the purest dicta.

III

In Part III of its opinion, the Court identifies "[t]hree guideposts" that lead it to the conclusion that the award in this case is excessive: degree of reprehensibility, ratio between punitive award and plaintiff's actual harm, and legislative 605 sanctions provided for comparable misconduct. Ante, at 1598–1604. The legal significance of these "guideposts" is nowhere explored, but their necessary effect is to establish federal standards governing the hitherto exclusively state law of damages. Apparently (though it is by no means clear) all three federal "guideposts" can be overridden if "necessary to deter future misconduct," ante, at 1603–1604—a loophole that will encourage state reviewing courts to uphold awards as necessary for the "adequat[e] protect[ion]" of state consumers, ibid. By effectively requiring state reviewing courts to concoct rationalizations—whether within the "guideposts" or through the loophole—to justify the intuitive punitive reactions of state juries, the Court accords neither category of institution the respect it deserves.

Of course it will not be easy for the States to comply with this new federal law of damages, no matter how willing they are to do so. In truth, the "guideposts" mark a road to nowhere; they provide no real guidance at all. As to "degree of reprehensibility" of the defendant's conduct, we learn that " 'nonviolent crimes are less serious than crimes marked by violence or the threat of violence,' " ante, at 1599 (quoting Solem v. Helm, 463 U.S. 277, 292–293, 103 S.Ct. 3001, 3011, 77 L.Ed.2d 637 (1983)), and that " 'trickery and deceit' " are "more reprehensible than negligence," ante, at 1599. As to the ratio of punitive to compensatory damages, we are told that a " 'general concer[n] of reasonableness ... enter[s] into the constitutional *1614 calculus,' " ante, at 1602 (quoting TXO, 509 U.S., at 458, 113 S.Ct., at 2720)—though even "a breathtaking 500 to 1" will not necessarily do anything more than " 'raise a suspicious judicial eyebrow,' " ante, at 1603 (quoting TXO, supra, at 481, 113 S.Ct., at 2732 (O'CONNOR, J., dissenting), an opinion which, when confronted with that "breathtaking" ratio, approved it). And as to legislative sanctions provided for comparable misconduct, they should be accorded " 'substantial deference,' " ante, at 1603 (quoting Browning–Ferris Industries of Vt., Inc. v. Kelco Disposal, Inc., 492 U.S. 257, 301, 109 S.Ct. 2909, 2934, 106 L.Ed.2d 219 (1989) (O'CONNOR, J., concurring in part and dissenting 606 in part)). One expects the Court to conclude: "To thine own self be true."

These crisscrossing platitudes yield no real answers in no real cases. And it must be noted that the Court nowhere says that these three "guideposts" are the only guideposts; indeed, it makes very clear that they are not—explaining away the earlier opinions that do not really follow these

"guideposts" on the basis of additional factors, thereby "reiterat[ing] our rejection of a categorical approach." Ante, at 1602. In other words, even these utter platitudes, if they should ever happen to produce an answer, may be overridden by other unnamed considerations. The Court has constructed a framework that does not genuinely constrain, that does not inform state legislatures and lower courts—that does nothing at all except confer an artificial air of doctrinal analysis upon its essentially ad hoc determination that this particular award of punitive damages was not "fair."

The Court distinguishes today's result from Haslip and TXO partly on the ground that "the record in this case discloses no deliberate false statements, acts of affirmative misconduct, or concealment of evidence of improper motive, such as were present in Haslip and TXO." Ante, at 1601. This seemingly rejects the findings necessarily made by the jury—that petitioner had committed a fraud that was "gross, oppressive, or malicious," Ala.Code § 6–11–20(b)(1) (1993). Perhaps that rejection is intentional; the Court does not say.

The relationship between judicial application of the new "guideposts" and jury findings poses a real problem for the Court, since as a matter of logic there is no more justification for ignoring the jury's determination as to how reprehensible petitioner's conduct was (i.e., how much it deserves to be punished), than there is for ignoring its determination that it was reprehensible at all (i.e., that the wrong was willful and punitive damages are therefore recoverable). That the issue has been framed in terms of a constitutional right against unreasonably excessive awards should not obscure 607 the fact that the logical and necessary consequence of the Court's approach is the recognition of a constitutional right against unreasonably imposed awards as well. The elevation of "fairness" in punishment to a principle of "substantive due process" means that every punitive award unreasonably imposed is unconstitutional; such an award is by definition excessive, since it attaches a penalty to conduct undeserving of punishment. Indeed, if the Court is correct, it must be that every claim that a state jury's award of compensatory damages is "unreasonable" (because not supported by the evidence) amounts to an assertion of constitutional injury. See TXO, supra, at 471, 113 S.Ct., at 2727 (SCALIA, J. concurring in judgment). And the same would be true for determinations of liability. By today's logic, every dispute as to evidentiary sufficiency in a state civil suit poses a question of constitutional moment, subject to review in this Court. That is a stupefying proposition.

For the foregoing reasons, I respectfully dissent.

Justice GINSBURG, with whom THE CHIEF JUSTICE joins, dissenting.

The Court, I am convinced, unnecessarily and unwisely ventures into territory traditionally within the States' domain, and does so in the face of reform measures recently adopted or currently under consideration in legislative arenas. The Alabama Supreme Court, in this case, endeavored to follow this Court's prior instructions; and, more recently, Alabama's highest court has installed further *1615 controls on awards of punitive damages (see infra, at 1617–1618, n. 6). I would therefore leave the state court's judgment undisturbed, and resist unnecessary intrusion into an area dominantly of state concern.

I

The respect due the Alabama Supreme Court requires that we strip from this case a false issue: No impermissible "extraterritoriality" infects the judgment before us; the excessiveness 608 of the award is the sole issue genuinely presented. The Court ultimately so recognizes, see ante, at 1597–1598, but further clarification is in order.

Dr. Gore's experience was not unprecedented among customers who bought BMW vehicles sold as flawless and brand-new. In addition to his own encounter, Gore showed, through paint repair orders introduced at trial, that on 983 other occasions since 1983, BMW had shipped new vehicles to dealers without disclosing paint repairs costing at least $300, Tr. 585–586; at least 14 of the repainted vehicles, the evidence also showed, were sold as new and undamaged to consumers in Alabama. 646 So.2d 619, 623 (Ala.1994). Sales nationwide, Alabama's Supreme Court said, were admissible "as to the issue of a 'pattern and practice' of such acts." Id., at 627. There was "no error," the court reiterated, "in the admission of the evidence that showed how pervasive the nondisclosure policy was and the intent behind BMW NA's adoption of it." Id., at 628. That determination comports with this Court's expositions. See TXO Production Corp. v. Alliance Resources Corp., 509 U.S. 443, 462, and n. 28, 113 S.Ct. 2711, 2722, and n. 28, 125 L.Ed.2d 366 (1993) (characterizing as "well-settled" the admissibility of "evidence of [defendant's] alleged wrongdoing in other parts of the country" and of defendant's "wealth"); see also Brief for Petitioner 22 (recognizing that similar acts, out-of-state, traditionally have been considered relevant "for the limited purpose of determining that the conduct before the [c]ourt was reprehensible because it was part of a pattern rather than an isolated incident").

Alabama's highest court next declared that the > "jury could not use the number of similar acts that a defendant has committed in other jurisdictions as a multiplier when determining the dollar amount of a punitive damages award. Such evidence may not be considered in setting the size of the civil penalty, because neither the jury nor the trial court had evidence before it showing in which states the conduct was wrongful." 609 646 So.2d, at 627 (emphasis in original) (footnote omitted).

Because the Alabama Supreme Court provided this clear statement of the State's law, the multiplier problem encountered in Gore's case is not likely to occur again. Now, as a matter of Alabama law, it is plainly impermissible to assess punitive damages by multiplication based on out-of-state events not shown to be unlawful. See, e.g., Independent Life and Accident Ins. Co. v. Harrington, 658 So.2d 892, 902–903 (Ala.1994) (under BMW v. Gore, trial court erred in relying on defendant insurance company's out-of-state insurance policies in determining harm caused by defendant's unlawful actions).

No Alabama authority, it bears emphasis—no statute, judicial decision, or trial judge instruction—ever countenanced the jury's multiplication of the $4,000 diminution in value estimated for each refinished car by the number of such cars (approximately 1,000) shown to have been sold nationwide. The sole prompt to the jury to use nationwide sales as a multiplier came from Gore's lawyer during summation. App. 31, Tr. 812–813. Notably, counsel for BMW failed to object to Gore's multiplication suggestion, even though BMW's counsel interrupted to make unrelated objections four other times during Gore's closing statement. Tr. 810–811, 854–855, 858, 870–871. Nor did BMW's counsel request a charge instructing the jury not to consider out-of-state sales in calculating the punitive damages award. See Record 513–529 (listing all charges requested by counsel).

Following the verdict, BMW's counsel challenged the admission of the paint repair orders, but not, alternately, the jury's apparent use of the orders in a multiplication exercise. Curiously, during postverdict argument, BMW's counsel urged that if the *1616 repair orders were indeed admissible, then Gore would have a "full right" to suggest a multiplier-based disgorgement. Tr. 932.

610 In brief, Gore's case is idiosyncratic. The jury's improper multiplication, tardily featured by petitioner, is unlikely to recur in Alabama and does not call for error correction by this Court.

Because the jury apparently (and erroneously) had used acts in other States as a multiplier to arrive at a $4 million sum for punitive damages, the Alabama Supreme Court itself determined " 'the maximum amount that a properly functioning jury could have awarded.' " 646 So.2d, at 630 (Houston, J., concurring specially) (quoting Big B, Inc. v. Cottingham, 634 So.2d 999, 1006 (Ala.1993)). The per curiam opinion emphasized that in arriving at $2 million as "the amount of punitive damages to be awarded in this case, [the court did] not consider those acts that occurred in other jurisdictions." 646 So.2d, at 628 (emphasis in original). As this Court recognizes, the Alabama high court "properly eschewed reliance on BMW's out-of-state conduct and based its remitted award solely on conduct that occurred within Alabama." Ante, at 1598 (citation omitted). In sum, the Alabama Supreme Court left standing the jury's decision that the facts warranted an award of punitive damages—a determination not contested in this Court—and the state court concluded that, considering only acts in Alabama, $2 million was "a constitutionally reasonable punitive damages award." 646 So.2d, at 629.

A

Alabama's Supreme Court reports that it "thoroughly and painstakingly" reviewed the jury's award, ibid., according to principles set out in its own pathmarking decisions and in this Court's opinions in TXO and Pacific Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Haslip, 499 U.S. 1, 21, 111 S.Ct. 1032, 1045, 113 L.Ed.2d 1 (1991). 646 So.2d, at 621. The Alabama court said it gave weight to several factors, including BMW's deliberate ("reprehensible") presentation of refinished cars as new and undamaged, without disclosing that the value of those cars had been reduced by an estimated 611 10%,[1] the financial position of the defendant, and the costs of litigation. Id., at 625–626. These standards, we previously held, "impos[e] a sufficiently definite and meaningful constraint on the discretion of Alabama factfinders in awarding punitive damages." Haslip, 499 U.S., at 22, 111 S.Ct., at 1045; see also TXO, 509 U.S., at 462, n. 28, 113 S.Ct., at 2722, n. 28. Alabama's highest court could have displayed its labor pains more visibly,[2] but its judgment is nonetheless entitled to a presumption of legitimacy. See Rowan v. Runnels, 5 How. 134, 139, 12 L.Ed. 85 (1847) ("[T]his court will always feel itself bound to respect the decisions of the State courts, and from the time they are made will regard them as conclusive in all cases upon the construction of their own constitution and laws.").

We accept, of course, that Alabama's Supreme Court applied the State's own law correctly. Under that law, the State's objectives—"punishment and deterrence"—guide punitive damages awards. See Birmingham v. Benson, 631 So.2d 902, 904 (Ala.1993). Nor should we be quick to find a constitutional infirmity when the highest state court endeavored a corrective for one counsel's slip and the other's oversight—counsel for plaintiff's excess in summation, unobjected to by counsel for defendant, see supra, at 1615—and when the state court did so intending to follow the process approved in our Haslip and TXO decisions.

B

The Court finds Alabama's $2 million award not simply excessive, but grossly so, and therefore unconstitutional. 612 The decision *1617 leads us further into territory traditionally within the States' domain,[3] and commits the Court, now and again, to correct "misapplication of a properly stated rule of law." But cf. this Court's Rule 10 ("A petition for a writ of certiorari is rarely granted when the asserted error consists of erroneous factual findings or the misapplication of a properly stated rule of law.").[4] The Court is not well equipped 613 for this mission. Tellingly, the Court repeats that it brings to the task no "mathematical formula," ante, at 1602, no "categorical approach," ibid., no "bright line," ante, at 1604. It has only a vague concept of substantive due process, a "raised eyebrow" test, see ante, at 1603, as its ultimate guide.[5]

In contrast to habeas corpus review under 28 U.S.C. § 2254, the Court will work at this business alone. It will not be aided by the federal district courts and courts of appeals. It will be the only federal court policing the area. The Court's readiness to superintend state-court punitive damages awards is all the more puzzling in view of the Court's longstanding reluctance to countenance review, even by courts of appeals, of the size of verdicts returned by juries in federal district court proceedings. See generally 11 C. Wright, A. Miller, & M. Kane, Federal Practice and Procedure § 2820 (2d ed.1995). And the reexamination prominent in state courts[6] and in legislative arenas, see Appendix, *1618 614 infra, this page serves to underscore why the Court's enterprise is undue.

For the reasons stated, I dissent from this Court's disturbance of the judgment the Alabama Supreme Court has made.

APPENDIX TO DISSENTING OPINION OF GINSBURG, J.

STATE LEGISLATIVE ACTIVITY REGARDING PUNITIVE DAMAGES

State legislatures have in the hopper or have enacted a variety of measures to curtail awards of punitive damages. At least one state legislature has prohibited punitive damages altogether, unless explicitly provided by statute. See N.H.Rev.Stat. Ann. § 507:16 (1994). We set out in this appendix some of the several controls enacted or under consideration in the States. The measures surveyed are: (1) caps on awards; (2) provisions for payment of sums to state agencies rather than to plaintiffs; and (3) mandatory bifurcated trials with separate proceedings for punitive damages determinations.

* The syllabus constitutes no part of the opinion of the Court but has been prepared by the Reporter of Decisions for the convenience of the reader. See United States v. Detroit Lumber Co., 200 U.S. 321, 337, 26 S.Ct. 282, 287, 50 L.Ed. 499.

1 The top, hood, trunk, and quarter panels of Dr. Gore's car were repainted at BMW's vehicle preparation center in Brunswick, Georgia. The parties presumed that the damage was caused by exposure to acid rain during transit between the manufacturing plant in Germany and the preparation center.

2 Dr. Gore also named the German manufacturer and the Birmingham dealership as defendants.

3 Alabama codified its common-law cause of action for fraud in a 1907 statute that is still in effect. Hackmeyer v. Hackmeyer, 268 Ala. 329, 333, 106 So.2d 245, 249 (1958). The statute provides: "Suppression of a material fact which the party is under an obligation to communicate constitutes fraud. The obligation to communicate may arise from the confidential relations of the parties or from the particular circumstances of the case." Ala.Code § 6–5–102 (1993); see Ala.Code § 4299 (1907).

4 The dealer who testified to the reduction in value is the former owner of the Birmingham dealership sued in this action. He sold the dealership approximately one year before the trial.

5 Dr. Gore did not explain the significance of the $300 cutoff.

6 The jury also found the Birmingham dealership liable for Dr. Gore's compensatory damages and the German manufacturer liable for both the compensatory and punitive damages. The dealership did not appeal the judgment against it. The Alabama Supreme Court held that the trial court did not have jurisdiction over the German manufacturer and therefore reversed the judgment against that defendant.

7 BMW acknowledged that a Georgia statute enacted after Dr. Gore purchased his car would require disclosure of similar repairs to a car before it was sold in Georgia. Ga.Code Ann. §§ 40–1–5(b)–(e) (1994).

8 While awarding a comparable amount of compensatory damages, the Yates jury awarded no punitive damages at all. In Yates, the plaintiff also relied on the 1983 nondisclosure policy, but instead of offering evidence of 983 repairs costing more than $300 each, he introduced a bulk exhibit containing 5,856 repair bills to show that petitioner had sold over 5,800 new BMW vehicles without disclosing that they had been repaired.

9 Prior to the lawsuits filed by Dr. Yates and Dr. Gore, BMW and various BMW dealers had been sued 14 times concerning presale paint or damage repair. According to the testimony of BMW's in-house counsel at the postjudgment hearing on damages, only one of the suits concerned a car repainted by BMW.

10 The Alabama Supreme Court did not indicate whether the $2 million figure represented the court's independent assessment of the appropriate level of punitive damages, or its determination of the maximum amount that the jury could have awarded consistent with the Due Process Clause.

11 Other than Yates v. BMW of North America, Inc., 642 So.2d 937 (Ala.1993), in which no punitive damages were awarded, the Alabama Supreme Court cited no such cases. In another portion of its opinion, 646 So.2d, at 629, the court did cite five Alabama cases, none of which involved either a dispute arising out of the purchase of an automobile or an award of punitive damages. G.M. Mosley Contractors, Inc. v. Phillips, 487 So.2d 876, 879 (1986); Hollis v. Wyrosdick, 508 So.2d 704 (1987); Campbell v. Burns, 512 So.2d 1341, 1343 (1987); Ashbee v. Brock, 510 So.2d 214 (1987); and Jawad v. Granade, 497 So.2d 471 (1986). All of these cases support the proposition that appellate courts in Alabama presume that jury verdicts are correct. In light of the Alabama Supreme Court's conclusion that (1) the jury had computed its award by multiplying $4,000 by the number of refinished vehicles sold in the United States and (2) that the award should have been based on Alabama conduct, respect for the error-free portion of the jury verdict would seem to produce an award of $56,000 ($4,000 multiplied by 14, the number of repainted vehicles sold in Alabama).

13 Four States require disclosure of vehicle repairs costing more than 3 percent of suggested retail price. Ariz.Rev.Stat. Ann. § 28–1304.03 (1989); N.C. Gen.Stat. § 20–305.1(d)(5a) (1995); S.C.Code § 56–32–20 (Supp.1995); Va.Code Ann. § 46.2–1571(D) (Supp.1995). An additional three States mandate disclosure when the cost of repairs exceeds 3 percent or $500, whichever is greater. Ala.Code § 8–19–5(22)(c) (1993); Cal. Veh.Code Ann. §§ 9990–9991 (West Supp.1996); Okla. Stat., Tit. 47, § 1112.1 (1991). Indiana imposes a 4 percent disclosure threshold. Ind.Code §§ 9–23–4–4, 9–23–4–5 (1993). Minnesota requires disclosure of repairs costing more than 4 percent of suggested retail price or $500, whichever is greater. Minn.Stat. § 325F.664 (1994). New York requires disclosure when the cost of repairs exceeds 5 percent of suggested retail price. N.Y. Gen. Bus. Law §§ 396–p(5)(a), (d) (McKinney Supp.1996). Vermont imposes a 5 percent disclosure threshold for the first $10,000 in repair costs and 2 percent thereafter. Vt. Stat. Ann., Tit. 9, § 4087(d) (1993). Eleven States mandate disclosure only of damage costing more than 6 percent of retail value to repair. Ark.Code Ann. § 23–112–705 (1992); Idaho Code § 49–1624 (1994); Ill. Comp. Stat., ch. 815, § 710/5 (1994); Ky.Rev.Stat. Ann. § 190.0491(5) (Baldwin 1988); La.Rev.Stat. Ann. § 32:1260 (West Supp.1995); Miss. Motor Vehicle Comm'n, Regulation No. 1 (1992); N.H.Rev.Stat. Ann. § 357–C:5(III)(d) (1995); Ohio Rev.Code Ann. § 4517.61 (1994); R.I. Gen. Laws §§ 31–5.1–18(d), (f) (1995); Wis. Stat. § 218.01(2d)(a) (1994); Wyo. Stat. § 31–16–115 (1994). Two States require disclosure of repairs costing $3,000 or more. See Iowa Code Ann. § 321.69 (Supp.1996); N.D. Admin. Code § 37–09–01–01 (1992). Georgia mandates disclosure of paint damage that costs more than $500 to repair. Ga.Code Ann. §§ 40–1–5(b)–(e) (1994) (enacted after respondent purchased his car). Florida requires dealers to disclose paint repair costing more than $100 of which they have actual knowledge. Fla. Stat. § 320.27(9)(n) (1992). Oregon requires manufacturers to disclose all "postmanufacturing" damage and repairs. It is unclear whether this mandate would apply to repairs such as those at issue here. Ore.Rev.Stat. § 650.155

(1991).

Many, but not all, of the statutes exclude from the computation of repair cost the value of certain components—typically items such as glass, tires, wheels and bumpers—when they are replaced with identical manufacturer's original equipment. E.g., Cal. Veh.Code Ann. §§ 9990–9991 (West Supp.1996); Ga.Code Ann. §§ 40–1–5(b)–(e) (1994); Ill. Comp. Stat., ch. 815, § 710/5 (1994); Ky.Rev.Stat. Ann. § 190.0491(5) (Baldwin 1988); Okla. Stat., Tit. 47, § 1112.1 (1991); Va.Code Ann. § 46.2–1571(D) (Supp.1995); Vt. Stat. Ann., Tit. 9, § 4087(d) (1993).

14 Also, a state legislature might plausibly conclude that the administrative costs associated with full disclosure would have the effect of raising car prices to the State's residents.

15 Federal disclosure requirements are, of course, a familiar part of our law. See, e.g., the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act, as added by the Nutrition Labeling and Education Act of 1990, 104 Stat. 2353, 21 U.S.C. § 343; the Truth In Lending Act, 82 Stat. 148, as amended, 15 U.S.C. § 1604; the Securities & Exchange Act of 1934, 48 Stat. 892, 894, as amended, 15 U.S.C. §§ 78l–78m; Federal Cigarette Labeling and Advertising Act, 79 Stat. 283, as amended, 15 U.S.C. § 1333; Alcoholic Beverage Labeling Act of 1988, 102 Stat. 4519, 27 U.S.C. § 215.

Co. v. Head,* 234 U.S. 149, 161, 34 S.Ct. 879, 882, 58 L.Ed. 1259 (1914) ("[I]t would be impossible to permit the statutes of Missouri to operate beyond the jurisdiction of that State ... without throwing down the constitutional barriers by which all the States are restricted within the orbits of their lawful authority and upon the preservation of which the Government under the Constitution depends. This is so obviously the necessary result of the Constitution that it has rarely been called in question and hence authorities directly dealing with it do not abound"); Huntington v. Attrill, 146 U.S. 657, 669, 13 S.Ct. 224, 228, 36 L.Ed. 1123 (1892) ("Laws have no force of themselves beyond the jurisdiction of the State which enacts them, and can have extra-territorial effect only by the comity of other States").

17 State power may be exercised as much by a jury's application of a state rule of law in a civil lawsuit as by a statute. See New York Times Co. v. Sullivan, 376 U.S. 254, 265, 84 S.Ct. 710, 718, 11 L.Ed.2d 686 (1964) ("The test is not the form in which state power has been applied but, whatever the form, whether such power has in fact been exercised"); *San Diego Building Trades Council v. 18 Brief for Respondent 11–12, 23, 27–28; Tr. of Oral Arg. 50–54. Dr. Gore's interest in altering the nationwide policy stems from his concern that BMW would not (or could not) discontinue the policy in Alabama alone. Brief for Respondent at 11. "If Alabama were limited to imposing punitive damages based only on BMW's gain from fraudulent sales in Alabama, the resulting award would have no prospect of protecting Alabama consumers from fraud, as it would provide no incentive for BMW to alter the unitary, national policy of nondisclosure which yielded BMW millions of dollars in profits." Id., at 23. The record discloses no basis for Dr. Gore's contention that BMW could not comply with Alabama's law without changing its nationwide policy.

19 See Bordenkircher v. Hayes, 434 U.S. 357, 363, 98 S.Ct. 663, 668, 54 L.Ed.2d 604 (1978) ("To punish a person because he has done what the law plainly allows him to do is a due process violation of the most basic sort"). Our cases concerning recidivist statutes are not to the contrary. Habitual offender statutes permit the sentencing court to enhance a defendant's punishment for a crime in light of prior convictions, including convictions in foreign jurisdictions. See e.g., Ala.Code § 13A–5–9 (1994); Cal.Penal Code Ann. §§ 667.5(f), 668 (West Supp.1996); Ill. Comp. Stat., ch. 720, § 5/33B–1 (1994); N.Y. Penal Law §§ 70.04, 70.06, 70.08, 70.10 (McKinney 1987 and Supp.1996); Tex. Penal Code Ann. § 12.42 (1994 and Supp.1995–1996). A sentencing judge may even consider past criminal behavior which did not result in a conviction and lawful conduct that bears on the defendant's character and prospects for rehabilitation. Williams v. New York, 337 U.S. 241, 69 S.Ct. 1079, 93 L.Ed. 1337 (1949). But we have never held that a sentencing court could properly punish lawful conduct. This distinction is precisely the one we draw here. See n. 21, infra.

20 Given that the verdict was based in part on out-of-state conduct that was lawful where it occurred, we need not consider whether one State may properly attempt to change a tortfeasor's unlawful conduct in another State.

21 Of course, the fact that the Alabama Supreme Court correctly concluded that it was error for the jury to use the number of sales in other States as a multiplier in computing the amount of its punitive sanction does not mean that evidence describing out-of-state transactions is irrelevant in a case of this kind. To the contrary, as we stated in TXO Production Corp. v. Alliance Resources Corp., 509 U.S. 443, 462, n. 28, 113 S.Ct. 2711, 2722, n. 28, 125 L.Ed.2d 366 (1993), such evidence may be relevant to the determination of the degree of reprehensibility of the defendant's conduct.

22 See Miller v. Florida, 482 U.S. 423, 107 S.Ct. 2446, 96 L.Ed.2d 351 (1987) (Ex Post Facto Clause violated by retroactive imposition of revised sentencing guidelines that provided longer sentence for defendant's crime); Bouie v. City of Columbia, 378

U.S. 347, 84 S.Ct. 1697, 12 L.Ed.2d 894 (1964) (retroactive application of new construction of statute violated due process); id., at 350–355, 84 S.Ct., at 1701–1703 (citing cases); Lankford v. Idaho, 500 U.S. 110, 111 S.Ct. 1723, 114 L.Ed.2d 173 (1991) (due process violated because defendant and his counsel did not have adequate notice that judge might impose death sentence). The strict constitutional safeguards afforded to criminal defendants are not applicable to civil cases, but the basic protection against "judgments without notice" afforded by the Due Process Clause, Shaffer v. Heitner, 433 U.S. 186, 217, 97 S.Ct. 2569, 2587, 53 L.Ed.2d 683 (1977) (STEVENS, J., concurring in judgment), is implicated by civil penalties.

24 The principle that punishment should fit the crime "is deeply rooted and frequently repeated in common-law jurisprudence." Solem v. Helm, 463 U.S. 277, 284, 103 S.Ct. 3001, 3006, 77 L.Ed.2d 637 (1983). See Burkett v. Lanata, 15 La. Co. v. Brown,* 127 Ky. 732, 749, 106 S.W. 795, 799 (1908) ("We are not aware of any case in which the court has sustained a verdict as large as this one unless the injuries were permanent").

26 The dissenters also recognized that "TXO's conduct was clearly wrongful, calculated, and improper...." TXO, 509 U.S., at 482, 113 S.Ct., at 2733 (opinion of O'CONNOR, J.).

27 In Jeter v. M & M Dodge, Inc., 634 So.2d 1383 (La.App.1994), a Louisiana Court of Appeals suggested that the Louisiana disclosure statute functions as a safe harbor. Finding that the cost of repairing presale damage to the plaintiff's car exceeded the statutory disclosure threshold, the court held that the disclosure statute did not provide a defense to the action. Id., at 1384.

During the pendency of this litigation, Alabama enacted a disclosure statute which defines "material" damage to a new car as damage requiring repairs costing in excess of 3 percent of suggested retail price or $500, whichever is greater. Ala.Code § 8–19–5(22) (1993). After its decision in this case, the Alabama Supreme Court stated in dicta that the remedies available under this section of its Deceptive Trade Practices Act did not displace or alter pre-existing remedies available under either the common law or other statutes. Hines v. Riverside Chevrolet–Olds, Inc., 655 So.2d 909, 917, n. 2 (1994). It refused, however, to "recognize, or impose on automobile manufacturers, a general duty to disclose every repair of damage, however slight, incurred during the manufacturing process." Id., at 921. Instead, it held that whether a defendant has a duty to disclose is a question of fact "for the jury to determine." Id., at 918. In reaching that conclusion it overruled two earlier decisions that seemed to indicate that as a matter of law there was no disclosure obligation in cases comparable to this one. Id., at 920 (overruling Century 21–Reeves Realty, Inc. v. McConnell Cadillac, Inc., 626 So.2d 1273 (1993), and Cobb v. Southeast Toyota Distributors, Inc., 569 So.2d 395 (1990)).

28 See also Ariz.Rev.Stat. Ann. § 28–1304.03 (1989) ("[I]f disclosure is not required under this section, a purchaser may not revoke or rescind a sales contract due solely to the fact that the new motor vehicle was damaged and repaired prior to completion of the sale"); Ind.Code § 9–23–4–5 (1993) (providing that "[r]epaired damage to a customer-ordered new motor vehicle not exceeding four percent (4%) of the manufacturer's suggested retail price does not need to be disclosed at the time of sale"); N.C. Gen.Stat. § 20–305.1(e) (1993) (requiring disclosure of repairs costing more than 5 percent of suggested retail price and prohibiting revocation or rescission of sales contract on the basis of less costly repairs); Okla. Stat., Tit. 47, § 1112.1 (1991) (defining "material" damage to a car as damage requiring repairs costing in excess of 3 percent of suggested retail price or $500, whichever is greater).

29 Restatement (Second) of Torts § 538 (1977); W. Keeton, D. Dobbs, R. Keeton, & D. Owen, Prosser and Keeton on Law of Torts § 108 (5th ed.1984).

30 The Alabama Supreme Court has held that a car may be considered "new" as a matter of law even if its finish contains minor cosmetic flaws. Wilburn v. Larry Savage Chevrolet, Inc., 477 So.2d 384 (1985). We note also that at trial respondent only introduced evidence of undisclosed paint damage to new cars repaired at a cost of $300 or more. This decision suggests that respondent believed that the jury might consider some repairs too de minimis to warrant disclosure.

31 Before the verdict in this case, BMW had changed its policy with respect to Alabama and two other States. Five days after the jury award, BMW altered its nationwide policy to one of full disclosure.

32 See, e.g., Grant v. McDonogh, 7 La. Ann. 447, 448 (1852) ("[E]xemplary damages allowed should bear some proportion to the real damage sustained"); Saunders v. Mullen, 66 Iowa 728, 729, 24 N.W. 529 (1885) ("When the actual damages are so small, the amount allowed as exemplary damages should not be so large"); Flannery v. Baltimore & Ohio R. Co., 15 D.C. 111, 125 (1885) (when punitive damages award "is out of all proportion to the injuries received, we feel it our duty to interfere"); Houston & Texas

Niskern,* 22 Minn. 90, 91–92 (1875) (punitive damages "enormously in excess of what may justly be regarded as compensation" for the injury must be set aside "to prevent injustice").

33 Owen, supra n. 23, at 368, and n. 23. One English statute, for example, provides that officers arresting persons out of their jurisdiction shall pay double damages. 3 Edw., I., ch. 35. Another directs that in an action for forcible entry or detainer, the plaintiff shall recover treble damages. 8 Hen. VI, ch. 9, § 6.

Present-day federal law allows or mandates imposition of multiple damages for a wide assortment of offenses, including violations of the antitrust laws, see § 4 of the Clayton Act, 38 Stat. 731, as amended, 15 U.S.C. § 15, and the Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act, see 18 U.S.C. § 1964, and certain breaches of the trademark laws, see § 35 of the Trademark Act of 1946, 60 Stat. 439, as amended, 15 U.S.C. § 1117, and the patent laws, see 66 Stat. 813, 35 U.S.C. § 284.

34 "While petitioner stresses the shocking disparity between the punitive award and the compensatory award, that shock dissipates when one considers the potential loss to respondents, in terms of reduced or eliminated royalties payments, had petitioner succeeded in its illicit scheme. Thus, even if the actual value of the 'potential harm' to respondents is not between $5 million and $8.3 million, but is closer to $4 million, or $2 million, or even $1 million, the disparity between the punitive award and the potential harm does not, in our view, 'jar one's constitutional sensibilities.' " TXO, 509 U.S., at 462, 113 S.Ct., at 2722, quoting Haslip, 499 U.S., at 18, 111 S.Ct., at 1043.

35 Even assuming each repainted BMW suffers a diminution in value of approximately $4,000, the award is 35 times greater than the total damages of all 14 Alabama consumers who purchased repainted BMW's.

36 The ratio here is also dramatically greater than any award that would be permissible under the statutes and proposed statutes summarized in the appendix to Justice GINSBURG's dissenting opinion. Post, at 1618–1620.

37 Conceivably the Alabama Supreme Court's selection of a 500-to-1 ratio was an application of Justice SCALIA's identification of one possible reading of the plurality opinion in TXO: Any future due process challenge to a punitive damages award could be disposed of with the simple observation that "this is no worse than TXO." 509 U.S., at 472, 113 S.Ct., at 2727 (SCALIA, J., concurring in judgment). As we explain in the text, this award is significantly worse than the award in TXO.

38 Although the Court did not address the size of the punitive damages award in Silkwood v. Kerr–McGee Corp., 464 U.S. 238, 104 S.Ct. 615, 78 L.Ed.2d 443 (1984), the dissenters commented on its excessive character, noting that the "$10 million [punitive damages award] that the jury imposed is 100 times greater than the maximum fine that may be imposed ... for a single violation of federal standards" and "more than 10 times greater than the largest single fine that the Commission has ever imposed." Id., at 263, 104 S.Ct., at 629 (BLACKMUN, J., dissenting). In *New York Times Co. v. 41 Justice GINSBURG expresses concern that we are "the only federal court policing" this limit. Post, at 1617. The small number of punitive damages questions that we have reviewed in recent years, together with the fact that this is the first case in decades in which we have found that a punitive damages award exceeds the constitutional limit, indicates that this concern is at best premature. In any event, this consideration surely does not justify an abdication of our responsibility to enforce constitutional protections in an extraordinary case such as this one.

* The Alabama Supreme Court said:

"[W]e must conclude that the award of punitive damages was based in large part on conduct that happened in other jurisdictions.... Although evidence of similar acts in other jurisdictions is admissible as to the issue of 'pattern and practice' of such acts, ... this jury could not use the number of similar acts that a defendant has committed in other jurisdictions as a multiplier when determining the dollar amount of a punitive damages award. Such evidence may not be considered in setting the size of the civil penalty, because neither the jury nor the trial court had evidence before it showing in which states the conduct was wrongful." 646 So.2d 619, 627 (1994).

1 According to trial testimony, in late May 1992, BMW began redirecting refinished cars out of Alabama and two other States. Tr. 964. The jury returned its verdict in favor of Gore on June 12, 1992. Five days later, BMW changed its national policy to one of full disclosure. Id., at 1026.

2 See, e.g., Brief for Law and Economics Scholars et al. as Amici Curiae 6–28 (economic analysis demonstrates that Alabama Supreme Court's judgment was not unreasonable); W. Landes & R. Posner, Economic Structure of Tort Law 160–163 (1987) (economic model for assessing propriety of punitive damages in certain tort cases).

3 See ante, at 1595 ("In our federal system, States necessarily have considerable flexibility in determining the level of punitive damages that they will allow in different classes of cases and in any particular case."); Browning–Ferris Industries of Vt., Inc. v. Kelco Disposal, Inc., 492 U.S. 257, 278, 109 S.Ct. 2909, 2921–2922, 106 L.Ed.2d 219 (1989) (In any "lawsuit where state law provides the basis of decision, the propriety of an award of punitive damages for the conduct in question, and the factors the jury may consider in determining their amount, are questions of state law."); Silkwood v. Kerr–McGee Corp., 464 U.S. 238, 255, 104 S.Ct. 615, 625, 78 L.Ed.2d 443 (1984) ("Punitive damages have long been a part of traditional state tort law.").

4 Petitioner invites the Court to address the question of multiple punitive damages awards stemming from the same alleged misconduct. The Court does not take up the invitation, and rightly so, in my judgment, for this case does not present the issue. For three reasons, the question of multiple awards is hypothetical, not real, in Gore's case. First, the punitive damages award in favor of Gore is the only such award yet entered against BMW on account of its nondisclosure policy.

Second, BMW did not raise the issue of multiple punitives below. Indeed, in its reply brief before the Alabama Supreme Court, BMW stated: "Gore confuses our point about fairness among plaintiffs. He treats this point as a premature 'multiple punitive damages' argument. But, contrary to Gore's contention, we are not asking this Court to hold, as a matter of law, that a 'constitutional violation occurs when a defendant is subjected to punitive damages in two separate cases.' " Reply Brief for Appellant in Nos. 1920324, 1920325 (Ala.Sup.Ct.), p. 48 (internal citations omitted).

Third, if BMW had already suffered a punitive damages judgment in connection with its nondisclosure policy, Alabama's highest court presumably would have taken that fact into consideration. In reviewing punitive damages awards attacked as excessive, the Alabama Supreme Court considers whether "there have been other civil actions against the same defendant, based on the same conduct." 646 So.2d 619, 624 (1994) (quoting Green Oil Co. v. Hornsby, 539 So.2d 218, 224 (Ala.1989)). If so, "this should be taken into account in mitigation of the punitive damages award." 646 So.2d, at 624. The Alabama court accordingly observed that Gore's counsel had filed 24 other actions against BMW in Alabama and Georgia, but that no other punitive damages award had so far resulted. Id., at 626.

5 Justice BREYER's concurring opinion offers nothing more solid. Under Pacific Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Haslip, 499 U.S. 1, 111 S.Ct. 1032, 113 L.Ed.2d 1 (1991), he acknowledges, Alabama's standards for punitive damages, standing alone, do not violate due process. Ante, at 1605. But they "invit[e] the kind of scrutiny the Court has given the particular verdict before us." Ibid. Pursuing that invitation, Justice BREYER concludes that, matching the particular facts of this case to Alabama's "legitimate punitive damages objectives," ante, at 1609, the award was " 'gross[ly] excessiv[e],' " ibid. The exercise is engaging, but ultimately tells us only this: too big will be judged unfair. What is the Court's measure of too big? Not a cap of the kind a legislature could order, or a mathematical test this Court can divine and impose. Too big is, in the end, the amount at which five Members of the Court bridle.

6 See, e.g., Distinctive Printing and Packaging Co. v. Cox, 232 Neb. 846, 857, 443 N.W.2d 566, 574 (1989) (per curiam) ("[P]unitive, vindictive, or exemplary damages contravene Neb. Const. art. VII, § 5, and thus are not allowed in this jurisdiction."); Santana v. Registrars of Voters of Worcester, 398 Mass. 862, 502 N.E.2d 132 (1986) (punitive damages are not permitted, unless expressly authorized by statute); Fisher Properties, Inc. v. Arden–Mayfair, Inc., 106 Wash.2d 826, 852, 726 P.2d 8, 23 (1986) (en banc) (same).

In Life Ins. Co. of Georgia v. Johnson, No. 1940357 (Nov. 17, 1995), the Alabama Supreme Court revised the State's regime for assessments of punitive damages. Henceforth, trials will be bifurcated. Initially, juries will be instructed to determine liability and the amount of compensatory damages, if any; also, the jury is to return a special verdict on the question whether a punitive damages award is warranted. If the jury answers yes to the punitive damages question, the trial will be resumed for the presentation of evidence and instructions relevant to the amount appropriate to award as punitive damages.

After postverdict trial court review and subsequent appellate review, the amount of the final punitive damages judgment will be paid into the trial court. The trial court will then order payment of litigation expenses, including the plaintiff's attorney's fees, and instruct the clerk to divide the remainder equally between the plaintiff and the State General Fund. The provision for payment to the State General Fund is applicable to all judgments not yet satisfied, and therefore would apply to the judgment in Gore's case.

Supreme Court of the United States

PHILIP MORRIS USA, Petitioner,
v.
Mayola WILLIAMS, Personal Representative of Estate of Jesse D. Williams, Deceased.

No. 05–1256. | Argued Oct. 31, 2006. | Decided Feb. 20, 2007.

Synopsis

Background: Heavy cigarette smoker's widow brought state lawsuit against cigarette manufacturer for negligence and deceit and seeking compensatory and punitive damages for smoking-related lung cancer death of her husband. After jury found in widow's favor, the Circuit Court, Multnomah County, Anna J. Brown, J., reduced punitive damages award from $79.5 million to $32 million, and award of noneconomic damages from $800,000 to $500,000. Widow appealed, and manufacturer cross-appealed. The Court of Appeals of Oregon reinstated jury's verdict and affirmed on cross-appeal, 182 Or.App. 44, 48 P.3d 824, and adhered to its ruling on reconsideration, 183 Or.App. 192, 51 P.3d 670, but the United States Supreme Court granted certiorari, vacated Court of Appeals decision, and remanded for reconsideration in light of intervening opinion, 540 U.S. 801, 124 S.Ct. 56, 157 L.Ed.2d 12. On remand, the Court of Appeals reversed and remanded and affirmed on cross-appeal, 193 Or.App. 527, 92 P.3d 126, and after allowing review the Supreme Court of Oregon, W. Michael Gillette, J., 340 Or. 35, 127 P.3d 1165, affirmed. Certiorari was granted in part.

Holdings: The Supreme Court, Justice Breyer, held that:
[1] punitive damages award based in part on jury's desire to punish defendant for harming nonparties amounted to a taking of property from defendant without due process, and
[2] because Oregon Supreme Court's application of the correct legal standard might lead to new trial or change in level of punitive damages award, United States Supreme Court would not consider question of whether the existing award was constitutionally "grossly excessive."

Vacated and remanded.

Justice Stevens filed dissenting opinion.

Justice Thomas filed dissenting opinion.

Justice Ginsburg filed dissenting opinion in which Justices Scalia and Thomas joined.

*1058 *346 *Syllabus

In this state negligence and deceit lawsuit, a jury found that Jesse Williams' death was caused by smoking and that petitioner Philip Morris, which manufactured the cigarettes he favored, knowingly and falsely led him to believe that smoking was safe. In respect to deceit, it awarded $821,000 in compensatory damages and $79.5 million in punitive damages to respondent, the personal representative of Williams' estate. The trial court reduced the latter award, but it was restored by the Oregon Court of Appeals. The State Supreme Court rejected Philip Morris' arguments that the trial court should have instructed the jury that it could not punish Philip Morris for injury to persons not before the court, and that the roughly 100–to–1 ratio the $79.5 million award bore to *1059 the compensatory damages amount indicated a "grossly excessive" punitive award.

Held:

1. A punitive damages award based in part on a jury's desire to punish a defendant for harming nonparties amounts to a taking of property from the defendant without due process. Pp. 1060–1065.

(a) While "[p]unitive damages may properly be imposed to further a State's legitimate interests in punishing unlawful conduct and deterring its repetition," BMW of North America, Inc. v. Gore, 517 U.S. 559, 568, 116 S.Ct. 1589, 134 L.Ed.2d 809, unless a State insists upon proper standards to cabin the jury's discretionary authority, its punitive damages system may deprive a defendant of "fair notice ... of the severity of the penalty that a State may impose," id., at 574, 116 S.Ct. 1589; may threaten "arbitrary punishments," State Farm Mut. Automobile Ins. Co. v. Campbell, 538 U.S. 408, 416, 123 S.Ct. 1513, 155 L.Ed.2d 585; and, where the amounts are sufficiently large, may impose one State's (or one jury's) "policy choice" upon "neighboring States" with different public policies, BMW, supra, at 571–572, 116 S.Ct. 1589. Thus, the Constitution imposes limits on both the procedures for awarding punitive damages and amounts forbidden as "grossly excessive." See Honda Motor Co. v. Oberg, 512 U.S. 415, 432, 114 S.Ct. 2331, 129 L.Ed.2d 336. The Constitution's procedural limitations are considered here. Pp. 1062–1063.

(b) The Due Process Clause forbids a State to use a punitive damages award to punish a defendant for injury inflicted on strangers to the litigation. For one thing, a defendant threatened with punishment for 347 such injury has no opportunity to defend against the charge. See Lindsey v. Normet, 405 U.S. 56, 66, 92 S.Ct. 862, 31 L.Ed.2d 36. For another, permitting such punishment would add a near standardless dimension to the punitive damages equation and magnify the fundamental due process concerns of this Court's pertinent cases—arbitrariness, uncertainty, and lack of notice. Finally, the Court finds no authority to support using punitive damages awards to punish a defendant for harming others. BMW, supra, at 568, n. 11, 116 S.Ct. 1589, distinguished. Respondent argues that showing harm to others is relevant to a different part of the punitive damages constitutional equation, namely, reprehensibility. While evidence of actual harm to nonparties can help to show that the conduct that harmed the plaintiff also posed a substantial risk to the general public, and so was particularly reprehensible, a jury may not go further and use a punitive damages verdict to punish a defendant directly for harms to those nonparties. Given the risks of unfairness, it is constitutionally important for a court to provide assurance that a jury is asking the right question; and given the risks of arbitrariness, inadequate notice, and imposing one State's policies on other States, it is particularly important that States avoid procedure that unnecessarily deprives juries of proper legal guidance. Pp. 1062–1064.

(c) The Oregon Supreme Court's opinion focused on more than reprehensibility. In rejecting Philip Morris' claim that the Constitution prohibits using punitive damages to punish a defendant for harm to nonparties, it made three statements. The first—that this Court held in State Farm only that a jury could not base an award on dissimilar acts of a defendant—was correct, but this Court now explicitly holds that a jury may not punish for harm to others. This Court disagrees with the second statement—that if a jury cannot punish for the conduct, there is no reason to consider it—since the Due Process Clause prohibits a State's inflicting *1060 punishment for harm to nonparties, but permits a jury to consider such harm in determining reprehensibility. The third statement—that it is unclear how a jury could consider harm to nonparties and then withhold that consideration from the punishment calculus—raises the practical problem of how to know whether a jury punished the defendant for causing injury to others rather than just took such injury into account under the rubric of reprehensibility. The answer is that state courts cannot authorize procedures that create an unreasonable and unnecessary risk of any such confusion occurring. Although States have some flexibility in determining what kind of procedures to implement to protect against that risk, federal constitutional law obligates them to provide some form of protection where the risk of misunderstanding is a significant one. Pp. 1064–1065.

348 2. Because the Oregon Supreme Court's application of the correct standard may lead to a new trial, or a change in the level of the punitive damages award, this Court will not consider the question whether the award is constitutionally "grossly excessive." P. 1065.

Opinion

Justice BREYER delivered the opinion of the Court.

[1] 349 The question we address today concerns a large state-court punitive damages award. We are asked whether the Constitution's Due Process Clause permits a jury to base that award in part upon its desire to punish the defendant for harming persons who are not before the court (e.g., victims whom the parties do not represent). We hold that such an award would amount to a taking of "property" from the defendant without due process.

I

This lawsuit arises out of the death of Jesse Williams, a heavy cigarette smoker. Respondent, Williams' widow, represents his estate in this state lawsuit for negligence and deceit against Philip Morris, the manufacturer of Marlboro, the brand that Williams favored. A jury found that *1061 Williams' death was caused by smoking; that Williams smoked in significant part because he thought it was safe to do so; 350 and that Philip Morris knowingly and falsely led him to believe that this was so. The jury ultimately found that Philip Morris was negligent (as was Williams) and that Philip Morris had engaged in deceit. In respect to deceit, the claim at issue here, it awarded compensatory damages of about $821,000 (about $21,000 economic and $800,000 noneconomic) along with $79.5 million in punitive damages.

The trial judge subsequently found the $79.5 million punitive damages award "excessive," see, e.g., BMW of North America, Inc. v. Gore, 517 U.S. 559, 116 S.Ct. 1589, 134 L.Ed.2d 809 (1996), and reduced it to $32 million. Both sides appealed. The Oregon Court of Appeals rejected Philip Morris' arguments and restored the $79.5 million jury award. Subsequently, Philip Morris sought review in the Oregon Supreme Court (which denied review) and then here. We remanded the case in light of State Farm Mut. Automobile Ins. Co. v. Campbell, 538 U.S. 408, 123 S.Ct. 1513, 155 L.Ed.2d 585 (2003). 540 U.S. 801, 124 S.Ct. 56, 157 L.Ed.2d 12 (2003). The Oregon Court of Appeals adhered to its original views. And Philip Morris sought, and this time obtained, review in the Oregon Supreme Court.

Philip Morris then made two arguments relevant here. First, it said that the trial court should have accepted, but did not accept, a proposed "punitive damages" instruction that specified the jury could not seek to punish Philip Morris for injury to other persons not before the court. In particular, Philip Morris pointed out that the plaintiff's attorney had told the jury to "think about how many other Jesse Williams in the last 40 years in the State of Oregon there have been. ... In Oregon, how many people do we see outside, driving home ... smoking cigarettes? ... [C]igarettes ... are going to kill ten [of every hundred]. [And] the market share of Marlboros [i.e., Philip Morris] is one-third [i.e., one of every three killed]." App. 197a, 199a. In light of this argument, Philip Morris asked the trial court to tell the jury that "you may consider the extent of harm suffered by others in determining what [the] reasonable relationship is" between 351 any punitive award and "the harm caused to Jesse Williams" by Philip Morris' misconduct, "[but] you are not to punish the defendant for the impact of its alleged misconduct on other persons, who may bring lawsuits of their own in which other juries can resolve their claims ...." Id., at 280a. The judge rejected this proposal and instead told the jury that "[p]unitive damages are awarded against a defendant to punish misconduct and to deter misconduct," and "are not intended to compensate the plaintiff or anyone else for damages caused by the defendant's conduct." Id., at 283a. In Philip Morris' view, the result was a significant likelihood that a portion of the $79.5 million award represented punishment for its having harmed others, a punishment that the Due Process Clause would here forbid.

Second, Philip Morris pointed to the roughly 100–to–1 ratio the $79.5 million punitive damages award bears to $821,000 in compensatory damages. Philip Morris noted that this Court in BMW emphasized the constitutional need for punitive damages awards to reflect (1) the "reprehensibility" of the defendant's conduct, (2) a "reasonable relationship" to the harm the plaintiff (or related victim) suffered, and (3) the presence (or absence) of "sanctions," e.g., criminal penalties, that state law provided for comparable conduct, 517 U.S., at 575–585, 116 S.Ct. 1589. And in State Farm, this Court said that the longstanding historical practice of setting punitive damages at two, three, or four times *1062 the size of compensatory damages, while "not binding," is "instructive," and that "[s]ingle-digit multipliers are more likely to comport with due process." 538 U.S., at 425, 123 S.Ct. 1513. Philip Morris claimed that, in light of this case law, the punitive award was "grossly excessive." See TXO Production Corp. v. Alliance Resources Corp., 509 U.S. 443, 458, 113 S.Ct. 2711, 125 L.Ed.2d 366 (1993) (plurality opinion); BMW, supra, at 574–575, 116 S.Ct. 1589; State Farm, supra, at 416–417, 123 S.Ct. 1513.

The Oregon Supreme Court rejected these and other Philip Morris arguments. In particular, it rejected Philip Morris' claim that the Constitution prohibits a state jury 352 "from using punitive damages to punish a defendant for harm to nonparties." 340 Or. 35, 51–52, 127 P.3d 1165, 1175 (2006). And in light of Philip Morris' reprehensible conduct, it found that the $79.5 million award was not "grossly excessive." Id., at 63–64, 127 P.3d, at 1181–1182.

Philip Morris then sought certiorari. It asked us to consider, among other things, (1) its claim that Oregon had unconstitutionally permitted it to be punished for harming nonparty victims; and (2) whether Oregon had in effect disregarded "the constitutional requirement that punitive damages be reasonably related to the plaintiff's harm." Pet. for Cert. (I). We granted certiorari limited to these two questions.

For reasons we shall set forth, we consider only the first of these questions. We vacate the Oregon Supreme Court's judgment, and we remand the case for further proceedings.

II

[2] [3] This Court has long made clear that "[p]unitive damages may properly be imposed to further a State's legitimate interests in punishing unlawful conduct and deterring its repetition." BMW, supra, at 568, 116 S.Ct. 1589. See also Gertz v. Robert Welch, Inc., 418 U.S. 323, 350, 94 S.Ct. 2997, 41 L.Ed.2d 789 (1974); Newport v. Fact Concerts, Inc., 453 U.S. 247, 266–267, 101 S.Ct. 2748, 69 L.Ed.2d 616 (1981); Pacific Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Haslip, 499 U.S. 1, 22, 111 S.Ct. 1032, 113 L.Ed.2d 1 (1991). At the same time, we have emphasized the need to avoid an arbitrary determination of an award's amount. Unless a State insists upon proper standards that will cabin the jury's discretionary authority, its punitive damages system may deprive a defendant of "fair notice ... of the severity of the penalty that a State may impose," BMW, supra, at 574, 116 S.Ct. 1589; it may threaten "arbitrary punishments," i.e., punishments that reflect not an "application of law" but "a decisionmaker's caprice," State Farm, supra, at 416, 418, 123 S.Ct. 1513 (internal quotation marks omitted); and, where the amounts are sufficiently large, it may impose one State's (or one jury's) "policy choice," say, as to the conditions 353 under which (or even whether) certain products can be sold, upon "neighboring States" with different public policies, BMW, supra, at 571–572, 116 S.Ct. 1589.

[4] For these and similar reasons, this Court has found that the Constitution imposes certain limits, in respect both to procedures for awarding punitive damages and to amounts forbidden as "grossly excessive." See Honda Motor Co. v. Oberg, 512 U.S. 415, 432, 114 S.Ct. 2331, 129 L.Ed.2d 336 (1994) (requiring judicial review of the size of punitive awards); Cooper Industries, Inc. v. Leatherman Tool Group, Inc., 532 U.S. 424, 443, 121

S.Ct. 1678, 149 L.Ed.2d 674 (2001) (review must be de novo); BMW, supra, at 574–585, 116 S.Ct. 1589 (excessiveness decision depends upon the reprehensibility of the defendant's 1063 conduct, whether the award bears a reasonable relationship to the actual and potential harm caused by the defendant to the plaintiff, and the difference between the award and sanctions "authorized or imposed in comparable cases"); State Farm, supra, at 425, 123 S.Ct. 1513 (excessiveness more likely where ratio exceeds single digits). Because we shall not decide whether the award here at issue is "grossly excessive," we need now only consider the Constitution's procedural limitations.

III

[5] In our view, the Constitution's Due Process Clause forbids a State to use a punitive damages award to punish a defendant for injury that it inflicts upon nonparties or those whom they directly represent, i.e., injury that it inflicts upon those who are, essentially, strangers to the litigation. For one thing, the Due Process Clause prohibits a State from punishing an individual without first providing that individual with "an opportunity to present every available defense." Lindsey v. Normet, 405 U.S. 56, 66, 92 S.Ct. 862, 31 L.Ed.2d 36 (1972) (internal quotation marks omitted). Yet a defendant threatened with punishment for injuring a nonparty victim has no opportunity to defend against the charge, by showing, for example in a case such as this, that the other victim was not entitled to damages *354 because he or she knew that smoking was dangerous or did not rely upon the defendant's statements to the contrary.

For another, to permit punishment for injuring a nonparty victim would add a near standardless dimension to the punitive damages equation. How many such victims are there? How seriously were they injured? Under what circumstances did injury occur? The trial will not likely answer such questions as to nonparty victims. The jury will be left to speculate. And the fundamental due process concerns to which our punitive damages cases refer—risks of arbitrariness, uncertainty, and lack of notice—will be magnified. State Farm, 538 U.S., at 416, 418, 123 S.Ct. 1513; BMW, 517 U.S., at 574, 116 S.Ct. 1589.

[6] Finally, we can find no authority supporting the use of punitive damages awards for the purpose of punishing a defendant for harming others. We have said that it may be appropriate to consider the reasonableness of a punitive damages award in light of the potential harm the defendant's conduct could have caused. But we have made clear that the potential harm at issue was harm potentially caused the plaintiff. See State Farm, supra, at 424, 123 S.Ct. 1513 ("[W]e have been reluctant to identify concrete constitutional limits on the ratio between harm, or potential harm, to the plaintiff and the punitive damages award" (emphasis added)). See also TXO, 509 U.S., at 460–462, 113 S.Ct. 2711 (plurality opinion) (using same kind of comparison as basis for finding a punitive award not unconstitutionally excessive). We did use the term "error-free" (in BMW) to describe a lower court punitive damages calculation that likely included harm to others in the equation. 517 U.S., at 568, n. 11, 116 S.Ct. 1589. But context makes clear that the term "error-free" in the BMW footnote referred to errors relevant to the case at hand. Although elsewhere in BMW we noted that there was no suggestion that the plaintiff "or any other BMW purchaser was threatened with any additional potential harm" by the defendant's conduct, we did not purport to decide the question of harm to others. Id., at 582, 116 S.Ct. 1589. Rather, the opinion appears to have left the question open.

[7] *355 Respondent argues that she is free to show harm to other victims because it is relevant to a different part of the 1064 punitive damages constitutional equation, namely, reprehensibility. That is to say, harm to others shows more reprehensible conduct. Philip Morris, in turn, does not deny that a plaintiff may show harm to others in order to demonstrate reprehensibility. Nor do we. Evidence of actual harm to nonparties can help to show that the conduct that harmed the plaintiff also posed a substantial risk of harm to the general public, and so was particularly reprehensible—although counsel may argue in a particular case that conduct resulting in no harm to others nonetheless posed a grave risk to the public, or the converse. Yet for the reasons given above, a jury may not go further than this and use a punitive damages verdict to punish a defendant directly on account of harms it is alleged to have visited on nonparties.

[8] Given the risks of unfairness that we have mentioned, it is constitutionally important for a court to provide assurance that the jury will ask the right question, not the wrong one. And given the risks of arbitrariness, the concern for adequate notice, and the risk that punitive damages awards can, in practice, impose one State's (or one jury's) policies (e.g., banning cigarettes) upon other States—all of which accompany awards that, today, may be many times the size of such awards in the 18th and 19th centuries, see id., at 594–595, 116 S.Ct. 1589 (BREYER, J., concurring)—it is particularly important that States avoid procedure that unnecessarily deprives juries of proper legal guidance. We therefore conclude that the Due Process Clause requires States to provide assurance that juries are not asking the wrong question, i.e., seeking, not simply to determine reprehensibility, but also to punish for harm caused strangers.

IV

Respondent suggests as well that the Oregon Supreme Court, in essence, agreed with us, that it did not authorize punitive damages awards based upon punishment for harm caused to nonparties. We concede that one might read some 356 portions of the Oregon Supreme Court's opinion as focusing only upon reprehensibility. See, e.g., 340 Ore., at 51, 127 P.3d, at 1175 ("[T]he jury could consider whether Williams and his misfortune were merely exemplars of the harm that Philip Morris was prepared to inflict on the smoking public at large"). But the Oregon court's opinion elsewhere makes clear that that court held more than these few phrases might suggest.

The instruction that Philip Morris said the trial court should have given distinguishes between using harm to others as part of the "reasonable relationship" equation (which it would allow) and using it directly as a basis for punishment. The instruction asked the trial court to tell the jury that "you may consider the extent of harm suffered by others in determining what [the] reasonable relationship is" between Philip Morris' punishable misconduct and harm caused to Jesse Williams, "[but] you are not to punish the defendant for the impact of its alleged misconduct on other persons, who may bring lawsuits of their own in which other juries can resolve their claims ...." App. 280a (emphasis added). And as the Oregon Supreme Court explicitly recognized, Philip Morris argued that the Constitution "prohibits the state, acting through a civil jury, from using punitive damages to punish a defendant for harm to nonparties." 340 Ore., at 51–52, 127 P.3d, at 1175.

The court rejected that claim. In doing so, it pointed out (1) that this Court in State Farm had held only that a jury could not base its award upon "dissimilar" acts of a defendant. 340 Ore., at 52–53, 127 P.3d, at 1175–1176. It added (2) that "[i]f *1065 a jury cannot punish for the conduct, then it is difficult to see why it may consider it at all." Id., at 52, n. 3, 127 P.3d, at 1175, n. 3. And it stated (3) that "[i]t is unclear to us how a jury could 'consider' harm to others, yet withhold that consideration from the punishment calculus." Ibid.

The Oregon court's first statement is correct. We did not previously hold explicitly that a jury may not punish for the 357 harm caused others. But we do so hold now. We do not agree with the Oregon court's second statement. We have explained why we believe the Due Process Clause prohibits a State's inflicting punishment for harm caused strangers to the litigation. At the same time we recognize that conduct that risks harm to many is likely more reprehensible than conduct that risks harm to only a few. And a jury consequently may take this fact into account in determining reprehensibility. Cf., e.g., Witte v. United States, 515 U.S. 389, 400, 115 S.Ct. 2199, 132 L.Ed.2d 351 (1995) (recidivism statutes taking into account a criminal defendant's other misconduct do not impose an " 'additional penalty for the earlier crimes,' but instead ... 'a stiffened penalty for the latest crime, which is considered to be an aggravated offense because a repetitive one' " (quoting Gryger v. Burke, 334 U.S. 728, 732, 68 S.Ct. 1256, 92 L.Ed. 1683 (1948))).

[9] The Oregon court's third statement raises a practical problem. How can we know whether a jury, in taking account of harm caused others under the rubric of reprehensibility, also seeks to punish the defendant for having caused injury to others? Our answer is that state courts cannot authorize procedures that create an unreasonable and unnecessary risk of any such confusion occurring. In particular, we believe that where the risk of that misunderstanding is a significant one—because, for instance, of the sort of evidence that was introduced at trial or the kinds of argument the plaintiff made to the jury—a court, upon request, must protect against that risk. Although the States have some flexibility to determine what kind of procedures they will implement, federal constitutional law obligates them to provide some form of protection in appropriate cases.

V

[10] As the preceding discussion makes clear, we believe that the Oregon Supreme Court applied the wrong constitutional standard when considering Philip Morris' appeal. We remand this case so that the Oregon Supreme Court can apply 358 the standard we have set forth. Because the application of this standard may lead to the need for a new trial, or a change in the level of the punitive damages award, we shall not consider whether the award is constitutionally "grossly excessive." We vacate the Oregon Supreme Court's judgment and remand the case for further proceedings not inconsistent with this opinion.

It is so ordered.

Justice STEVENS, dissenting.

The Due Process Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment imposes both substantive and procedural constraints on the power of the States to impose punitive damages on tortfeasors. See State Farm Mut. Automobile Ins. Co. v. Campbell, 538 U.S. 408, 123 S.Ct. 1513, 155 L.Ed.2d 585 (2003); Cooper Industries, Inc. v. Leatherman Tool Group, Inc., 532 U.S. 424, 121 S.Ct. 1678, 149 L.Ed.2d 674 (2001); BMW of North America, Inc. v. Gore, 517 U.S. 559, 116 S.Ct. 1589, 134 L.Ed.2d 809 (1996); Honda Motor Co. v. Oberg, 512 U.S. 415, 114 S.Ct. 2331, 129 L.Ed.2d 336 (1994); *1066 TXO Production Corp. v. Alliance Resources Corp., 509 U.S. 443, 113 S.Ct. 2711, 125 L.Ed.2d 366 (1993). I remain firmly convinced that the cases announcing those constraints were correctly decided. In my view the Oregon Supreme Court faithfully applied the reasoning in those opinions to the egregious facts disclosed by this record. I agree with Justice GINSBURG's explanation of why no procedural error even arguably justifying reversal occurred at the trial in this case. See post, p. 1068–1069 (dissenting opinion).

Of greater importance to me, however, is the Court's imposition of a novel limit on the State's power to impose punishment in civil litigation. Unlike the Court, I see no reason why an interest in punishing a wrongdoer "for harming persons who are not before the court," ante, at 1060, should not be taken into consideration when assessing the appropriate sanction for reprehensible conduct.

Whereas compensatory damages are measured by the harm the defendant has caused the plaintiff, punitive damages are a sanction for the public harm the defendant's conduct 359 has caused or threatened. There is little difference between the justification for a criminal sanction, such as a fine or a term of imprisonment, and an award of punitive damages. See Cooper Industries, 532 U.S., at 432, 121 S.Ct. 1678. In our early history either type of sanction might have been imposed in litigation prosecuted by a private citizen. See Steel Co. v. Citizens for Better Environment, 523 U.S. 83, 127–128, 118 S.Ct. 1003, 140 L.Ed.2d 210 (1998) (STEVENS, J., concurring in judgment). And while in neither context would the sanction typically include a pecuniary award measured by the harm that the conduct had caused to any third parties, in both contexts the harm to third parties would surely be a relevant factor to consider in evaluating the reprehensibility of the defendant's wrongdoing. We have never held otherwise.

In the case before us, evidence attesting to the possible harm the defendant's extensive deceitful conduct caused other Oregonians was properly presented to the jury. No evidence was offered to establish an appropriate measure of damages to compensate such third parties for their injuries, and no one argued that the punitive damages award would serve any such purpose. To award compensatory damages to remedy such third-party harm might well constitute a taking of property from the defendant without due process, cf. ante, at 1060. But a punitive damages award, instead of serving a compensatory purpose, serves the entirely different purposes of retribution and deterrence that underlie every criminal sanction. State Farm, 538 U.S., at 416, 123 S.Ct. 1513. This justification for punitive damages has even greater salience when, as in this case, see Ore.Rev.Stat. § 31.735(1) (2003), the award is payable in whole or in part to the State rather than to the private litigant.1

360 While apparently recognizing the novelty of its holding, ante, at 1065, the majority relies on a distinction between taking *1067 third-party harm into account in order to assess the reprehensibility of the defendant's conduct—which is permitted—and doing so in order to punish the defendant "directly"—which is forbidden. Ante, at 1064. This nuance eludes me. When a jury increases a punitive damages award because injuries to third parties enhanced the reprehensibility of the defendant's conduct, the jury is by definition punishing the defendant—directly—for third-party harm.2 A murderer who kills his victim by throwing a bomb that injures dozens of bystanders should be punished more severely than one who harms no one other than his intended victim. Similarly, there is no reason why the measure of the appropriate punishment for engaging in a campaign of deceit in distributing a poisonous and addictive substance to thousands of cigarette smokers statewide should not include consideration of the harm to those "bystanders" as well as the harm to the individual plaintiff. The Court endorses a contrary conclusion without providing us with any reasoned justification.

It is far too late in the day to argue that the Due Process Clause merely guarantees fair procedure and imposes no 361 substantive limits on a State's lawmaking power. See, e.g., Moore v. East Cleveland, 431 U.S. 494, 544, 97 S.Ct. 1932, 52 L.Ed.2d 531 (1977) (White, J., dissenting); Poe v. Ullman, 367 U.S. 497, 540–541, 81 S.Ct. 1752, 6 L.Ed.2d 989 (1961) (Harlan, J., dissenting); Whitney v. California, 274 U.S. 357, 373, 47 S.Ct. 641, 71 L.Ed. 1095 (1927) (Brandeis, J., concurring). It remains true, however, that the Court should be "reluctant to expand the concept of substantive due process because guideposts for responsible decisionmaking in this unchartered area are scarce and open-ended." Collins v. Harker Heights, 503 U.S. 115, 125, 112 S.Ct. 1061, 117 L.Ed.2d 261 (1992). Judicial restraint counsels us to "exercise the utmost care whenever we are asked to break new ground in this field." Ibid. Today the majority ignores that sound advice when it announces its new rule of substantive law.

Essentially for the reasons stated in the opinion of the Supreme Court of Oregon, I would affirm its judgment.

Justice THOMAS, dissenting.

I join Justice GINSBURG's dissent in full. I write separately to reiterate my view that " 'the Constitution does not constrain the size of punitive damages awards.' " State Farm Mut. Automobile Ins. Co. v. Campbell, 538 U.S. 408, 429–430, 123 S.Ct. 1513, 155 L.Ed.2d 585 (2003) (THOMAS, J., dissenting) (quoting Cooper Industries, Inc. v. Leatherman Tool Group, Inc., 532 U.S. 424, 443, 121 S.Ct. 1678, 149 L.Ed.2d 674 (2001) (THOMAS, J., concurring)). It matters not that the Court styles today's holding as "procedural" because the "procedural" rule is simply a confusing implementation of the substantive due process regime this Court has created for punitive damages. See Pacific Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Haslip, 499 U.S. 1, 26–27, 111 S.Ct. 1032, 113 L.Ed.2d 1 (1991) (SCALIA, J., concurring in judgment) ("In 1868 ... punitive damages were undoubtedly an established part of the American common law of torts. It is ... clear that *1068 no particular procedures were deemed necessary to circumscribe a jury's discretion regarding the award of such damages, or their amount"). Today's opinion proves once again that this Court's punitive damages jurisprudence is "insusceptible of principled application." BMW of North 362 America, Inc. v. Gore, 517 U.S. 559, 599, 116 S.Ct. 1589, 134 L.Ed.2d 809 (1996) (SCALIA, J., joined by THOMAS, J., dissenting).

Justice GINSBURG, with whom Justice SCALIA and Justice THOMAS join, dissenting.

The purpose of punitive damages, it can hardly be denied, is not to compensate, but to punish. Punish for what? Not for harm actually caused "strangers to the litigation," ante, at 1063, the Court states, but for the reprehensibility of defendant's conduct, ante, at 1063–1064. "[C]onduct that risks harm to many," the Court observes, "is likely more reprehensible than conduct that risks harm to only a few." Ante, at 1065. The Court thus conveys that, when punitive damages are at issue, a jury is properly instructed to consider the extent of harm suffered by others as a measure of reprehensibility, but not to mete out punishment for injuries in fact sustained by nonparties. Ante, at 1063–1065. The Oregon courts did not rule otherwise. They have endeavored to follow our decisions, most recently in BMW of North America, Inc. v. Gore, 517 U.S. 559, 116 S.Ct. 1589, 134 L.Ed.2d 809 (1996), and State Farm Mut. Automobile Ins. Co. v. Campbell, 538 U.S. 408, 123 S.Ct. 1513, 155 L.Ed.2d 585 (2003), and have "deprive[d] [no jury] of proper legal guidance," ante, at 1064. Vacation of the Oregon Supreme Court's judgment, I am convinced, is unwarranted.

The right question regarding reprehensibility, the Court acknowledges, ante, at 1064, would train on "the harm that Philip Morris was prepared to inflict on the smoking public at large." Ibid. (quoting 340 Or. 35, 51, 127 P.3d 1165, 1175 (2006)). See also id., at 55, 127 P.3d, at 1177 ("[T]he jury, in assessing the reprehensibility of Philip Morris's actions, could consider evidence of similar harm to other Oregonians caused (or threatened) by the same conduct." (emphasis added)). The Court identifies no evidence introduced and no charge delivered inconsistent with that inquiry.

The Court's order vacating the Oregon Supreme Court's judgment is all the more inexplicable considering that Philip 363 Morris did not preserve any objection to the charges in fact delivered to the jury, to the evidence introduced at trial, or to opposing counsel's argument. The sole objection Philip Morris preserved was to the trial court's refusal to give defendant's requested charge number 34. See id., at 54, 127 P.3d, at 1176. The proposed instruction read in pertinent part:

> "If you determine that some amount of punitive damages should be imposed on the defendant, it will then be your task to set an amount that is appropriate. This should be such amount as you believe is necessary to achieve the objectives of deterrence and punishment. While there is no set formula to be applied in reaching an appropriate amount, I will now advise you of some of the factors that you may wish to consider in this connection.
>
> "(1) The size of any punishment should bear a reasonable relationship to the harm caused to Jesse Williams by the defendant's punishable misconduct. Although you may consider the extent of harm suffered by others in determining what that reasonable relationship is, you are not to punish the defendant for the impact of its alleged misconduct on other *1069 persons, who may bring lawsuits of their own in which other juries can resolve their claims and award punitive damages for those harms, as such other juries see fit.
>
> .....
>
> "(2) The size of the punishment may appropriately reflect the degree of reprehensibility of the defendant's conduct—that is, how far the defendant has departed from accepted societal norms of conduct." App. 280a.

Under that charge, just what use could the jury properly make of "the extent of harm suffered by others"? The answer slips from my grasp. A judge seeking to enlighten rather than confuse surely would resist delivering the requested charge.

364 The Court ventures no opinion on the propriety of the charge proposed by Philip Morris, though Philip Morris preserved no other objection to the trial proceedings. Rather than addressing the one objection Philip Morris properly preserved, the Court reaches outside the bounds of the case as postured when the trial court entered its judgment. I would accord more respectful treatment to the proceedings and dispositions of state courts that sought diligently to adhere to our changing, less than crystalline precedent.

For the reasons stated, and in light of the abundant evidence of "the potential harm [Philip Morris'] conduct could have caused," ante, at 1063 (emphasis deleted), I would affirm the decision of the Oregon Supreme Court.

The fact that part of the award in this case is payable to the State lends further support to my conclusion that it should be treated as the functional equivalent of a criminal sanction. See id., at 263–264, 109 S.Ct. 2909. In that context, we have distinguished between taking prior crimes into account as an aggravating factor in penalizing the conduct before the court versus doing so to punish for the earlier crimes. Ibid. But if enhancing a penalty for a present crime because of prior conduct that has already been punished is permissible, it is certainly proper to enhance a penalty because the conduct before the court, which has never been punished, injured multiple victims.

123 S.Ct. 1513
Supreme Court of the United States

STATE FARM MUTUAL AUTOMOBILE INSURANCE COMPANY, Petitioner,
v.
Inez Preece CAMPBELL and Matthew C. Barneck, special administrator and personal representative of the Estate of Curtis B. Campbell.

No. 01-1289. | Argued Dec. 11, 2002. | Decided April 7, 2003.

Insureds brought action against automobile liability insurer to recover for bad-faith failure to settle within the policy limits, fraud, and intentional infliction of emotional distress. Following remand from the Court of Appeals of Utah, 840 P.2d 130, the Third District Court, Salt Lake County, William B. Bohling, J., entered judgment on jury verdict in favor of insureds, but remitted punitive and compensatory damages. Appeal and cross-appeal were taken. The Supreme Court of Utah, 65 P.3d 1134, Durham, J., reinstated jury's punitive damage award. Certiorari was granted. The United States Supreme Court, Justice Kennedy, held that award of $145 million in punitive damages on $1 million compensatory judgment violated due process.

Reversed and remanded.

Justice Scalia, Justice Thomas, and Justice Ginsburg filed dissenting opinions.

1514 *Syllabus

Although investigators and witnesses concluded that Curtis Campbell caused an 1515 accident in which one person was killed and another permanently disabled, his insurer, petitioner State Farm Mutual Automobile Insurance Company (State Farm), contested liability, declined to settle the ensuing claims for the $50,000 policy limit, ignored its own investigators' advice, and took the case to trial, assuring Campbell and his wife that they had no liability for the accident, that State Farm would represent their interests, and that they did not need separate counsel. In fact, a Utah jury returned a judgment for over three times the policy limit, and State Farm refused to appeal. The Utah Supreme Court denied Campbell's own appeal, and State Farm paid the entire judgment. The Campbells then sued State Farm for bad faith, fraud, and intentional infliction of emotional distress. The trial court's initial ruling granting State Farm summary judgment was reversed on appeal. On remand, the court denied State Farm's motion to exclude evidence of dissimilar out-of-state conduct. In the first phase of a bifurcated trial, the jury found unreasonable State Farm's decision not to settle. Before the second phase, this Court refused, in BMW of North America, Inc. v. Gore, 517 U.S. 559, 116 S.Ct. 1589, 134 L.Ed.2d 809, to sustain a $2 million punitive damages award which accompanied a $4,000 compensatory damages award. The trial court denied State Farm's renewed motion to exclude dissimilar out-of-state conduct evidence. In the second phase, which addressed, inter alia, compensatory and punitive damages, evidence was introduced that pertained to State Farm's business practices in numerous States but bore no relation to the type of claims underlying the Campbells' complaint. The jury awarded the Campbells $2.6 million in compensatory damages and $145 million in punitive damages, which the trial court reduced to $1 million and $25 million respectively. Applying Gore, the Utah Supreme Court reinstated the $145 million punitive damages award.

Held: A punitive damages award of $145 million, where full compensatory damages are $1 million, is excessive and violates the Due Process Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment. Pp. 1519-1526.

(a) Compensatory damages are intended to redress a plaintiff's concrete loss, while punitive damages are aimed at the different purposes *409 of deterrence and retribution. The Due Process Clause prohibits the imposition of grossly excessive or arbitrary punishments on a tortfeasor. E.g., Cooper Industries, Inc. v. Leatherman Tool Group, Inc., 532 U.S. 424, 433, 121 S.Ct. 1678, 149 L.Ed.2d 674. Punitive damages awards serve the same purpose as criminal penalties. However, because civil defendants are not accorded the protections afforded criminal defendants, punitive damages pose an acute danger of arbitrary deprivation of property, which is heightened when the decisionmaker is presented with evidence having little bearing on the amount that should be awarded. Thus, this Court has instructed courts reviewing punitive damages to consider (1) the degree of reprehensibility of the defendant's misconduct, (2) the disparity between the actual or potential harm suffered by the plaintiff and the punitive damages award, and (3) the difference between the punitive damages awarded by the jury and the civil penalties authorized or imposed in comparable cases. Gore, supra, at 575, 116 S.Ct. 1589. A trial court's application of these guideposts is subject to de novo review. Cooper Industries, supra, at 424, 121 S.Ct. 1678. Pp. 1519-1521.

(b) Under Gore's guideposts, this case is neither close nor difficult. Pp. 1521-1526.

(1) To determine a defendant's reprehensibility-the most important indicium of a punitive damages award's reasonableness-a court must consider whether: the harm was physical rather than economic; 1516 the tortious conduct evinced an indifference to or a reckless disregard of the health or safety of others; the conduct involved repeated actions or was an isolated incident; and the harm resulted from intentional malice, trickery, or deceit, or mere accident. Gore, 517 U.S., at 576-577, 116 S.Ct. 1589. It should be presumed that a plaintiff has been made whole by compensatory damages, so punitive damages should be awarded only if the defendant's culpability is so reprehensible to warrant the imposition of further sanctions to achieve punishment or deterrence. Id., at 575, 116 S.Ct. 1589. In this case, State Farm's handling of the claims against the Campbells merits no praise, but a more modest punishment could have satisfied the State's legitimate objectives. Instead, this case was used as a platform to expose, and punish, the perceived deficiencies of State Farm's operations throughout the country. However, a State cannot punish a defendant for conduct that may have been lawful where it occurred, id., at 572, 116 S.Ct. 1589. Nor does the State have a legitimate concern in imposing punitive damages to punish a defendant for unlawful acts committed outside of its jurisdiction. The Campbells argue that such evidence was used merely to demonstrate, generally, State Farm's motives against its insured. Lawful out-of-state conduct may be probative when it demonstrates the deliberateness and culpability of the defendant's action in the State where it is tortious, but that conduct must have a nexus to 410 the specific harm suffered by the plaintiff. More fundamentally, in relying on such evidence, the Utah courts awarded punitive damages to punish and deter conduct that bore no relation to the Campbells' harm. Due process does not permit courts to adjudicate the merits of other parties' hypothetical claims under the guise of the reprehensibility analysis. Punishment on these bases creates the possibility of multiple punitive damages awards for the same conduct, for nonparties are not normally bound by another plaintiff's judgment. For the same reasons, the Utah Supreme Court's decision cannot be justified on the grounds that State Farm was a recidivist. To justify punishment based upon recidivism, courts must ensure the conduct in question replicates the prior transgressions. There is scant evidence of repeated misconduct of the sort that injured the Campbells, and a review of the decisions below does not convince this Court that State Farm was only punished for its actions toward the Campbells. Because the Campbells have shown no conduct similar to that which harmed them, the only relevant conduct to the reprehensibility analysis is that which harmed them. Pp. 1521-1524.

(2) With regard to the second Gore guidepost, the Court has been reluctant to identify concrete constitutional limits on the ratio between harm, or potential harm, to the plaintiff and the punitive damages award; but, in practice, few awards exceeding a single-digit ratio between punitive and compensatory damages will satisfy due process. See, e.g., 517 U.S., at 581, 116 S.Ct. 1589. Single-digit multipliers are more likely to comport with due process, while still achieving the State's deterrence and retribution goals, than are awards with 145-to-1 ratios, as in this case. Because there are no rigid benchmarks, ratios greater than those that this Court has previously upheld may comport with due process where a particularly egregious act has resulted in only a small amount of economic damages, id., at 582, 116 S.Ct. 1589, but when compensatory damages are substantial, then an even lesser ratio can reach the outermost limit of the due process guarantee. Here, there is a presumption against an award with a 145-to-1 ratio; the $1 million compensatory award for a year and a half of emotional distress was substantial; and the distress caused by outrage and humiliation the Campbells suffered is likely a component of both the compensatory and punitive damages awards. The Utah Supreme Court sought to justify the massive award based on premises bearing no relation to *1517 the award's reasonableness or proportionality to the harm. Pp. 1524-1526.

(3) The Court need not dwell on the third guidepost. The most relevant civil sanction under Utah state law for the wrong done to the Campbells appears to be a $10,000 fine for an act of grand fraud, which 411 is dwarfed by the $145 million punitive damages award. The Utah Supreme Court's references to a broad fraudulent scheme drawn from out-of-state and dissimilar conduct evidence were insufficient to justify this amount. P. 1526.

(c) Applying Gore's guideposts to the facts here, especially in light of the substantial compensatory damages award, likely would justify a punitive damages award at or near the compensatory damages amount. The Utah courts should resolve in the first instance the proper punitive damages calculation under the principles discussed here. P. 1526.

Opinion

412 Justice KENNEDY delivered the opinion of the Court.

We address once again the measure of punishment, by means of punitive damages, a State may impose upon a defendant in a civil case. The question is whether, in the circumstances we shall recount, an award of $145 million in punitive damages, where full compensatory damages are $1 million, is excessive and in violation of the Due Process Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

I

In 1981, Curtis Campbell (Campbell) was driving with his wife, Inez Preece Campbell, in Cache County, Utah. He decided to pass six vans traveling ahead of them on a two-lane highway. Todd Ospital was driving a small car approaching from the opposite direction. To avoid a head-on collision with Campbell, who by then was driving on the wrong side of the highway and toward oncoming traffic, Ospital swerved onto the shoulder, lost control of his automobile, and collided *413 with a vehicle driven by Robert G. Slusher. Ospital was killed, and Slusher was rendered permanently disabled. The Campbells escaped unscathed.

In the ensuing wrongful death and tort action, Campbell insisted he was not at fault. Early investigations did support differing conclusions as to who caused the accident, but "a consensus was reached early on by the investigators and witnesses that Mr. Campbell's unsafe pass had indeed caused the crash." 1518 65 P.3d 1134, 1141 (Utah 2001). Campbell's insurance company, petitioner State Farm Mutual Automobile Insurance Company (State Farm), nonetheless decided to contest liability and declined offers by Slusher and Ospital's estate (Ospital) to settle the claims for the policy limit of $50,000 ($25,000 per claimant). State Farm also ignored the advice of one of its own investigators and took the case to trial, assuring the Campbells that "their assets were safe, that they had no liability for the accident, that [State Farm] would represent their interests, and that they did not need to procure separate counsel." Id., at 1142. To the contrary, a jury determined that Campbell was 100 percent at fault, and a judgment was returned for $185,849, far more than the amount offered in settlement.

At first State Farm refused to cover the $135,849 in excess liability. Its counsel made this clear to the Campbells: " 'You may want to put for sale signs on your property to get things moving.' " Ibid. Nor was State Farm willing to post a supersedeas bond to allow Campbell to appeal the judgment against him. Campbell obtained his own counsel to appeal the verdict. During the pendency of the appeal, in late 1984, Slusher, Ospital, and the Campbells reached an agreement whereby Slusher and Ospital agreed not to seek satisfaction of their claims against the Campbells. In exchange the Campbells agreed to pursue a bad faith action against State Farm and to be represented by Slusher's and Ospital's attorneys. The Campbells also agreed that Slusher and Ospital would have a right to play a part in all major decisions concerning *414 the bad-faith action. No settlement could be concluded without Slusher's and Ospital's approval, and Slusher and Ospital would receive 90 percent of any verdict against State Farm.

In 1989, the Utah Supreme Court denied Campbell's appeal in the wrongful-death and tort actions. Slusher v. Ospital, 777 P.2d 437 (Utah 1989). State Farm then paid the entire judgment, including the amounts in excess of the policy limits. The Campbells nonetheless filed a complaint against State Farm alleging bad faith, fraud, and intentional infliction of emotional distress. The trial court initially granted State Farm's motion for summary judgment because State Farm had paid the excess verdict, but that ruling was reversed on appeal. 840 P.2d 130 (Utah App.1992). On remand State Farm moved in limine to exclude evidence of alleged conduct that occurred in unrelated cases outside of Utah, but the trial court denied the motion. At State Farm's request the trial court bifurcated the trial into two phases conducted before different juries. In the first phase the jury determined that State Farm's decision not to settle was unreasonable because there was a substantial likelihood of an excess verdict.

Before the second phase of the action against State Farm we decided BMW of North America, Inc. v. Gore, 517 U.S. 559, 116 S.Ct. 1589, 134 L.Ed.2d 809 (1996), and refused to sustain a $2 million punitive damages award which accompanied a verdict of only $4,000 in compensatory damages. Based on that decision, State Farm again moved for the exclusion of evidence of dissimilar out-of-state conduct. App. to Pet. for Cert. 168a-172a. The trial court denied State Farm's motion. Id., at 189a.

The second phase addressed State Farm's liability for fraud and intentional infliction of emotional distress, as well as compensatory and punitive damages. The Utah Supreme Court aptly characterized this phase of the trial:

> "State Farm argued during phase II that its decision to take the case to trial was an 'honest mistake' that did *415 not warrant punitive damages. In contrast, the Campbells introduced evidence that State Farm's decision to take the case to trial was a result of a national scheme to meet corporate fiscal goals by capping payouts on claims company wide. This 1519 scheme was referred to as State Farm's 'Performance, Planning and Review,' or PP & R, policy. To prove the existence of this scheme, the trial court allowed the Campbells to introduce extensive expert testimony regarding fraudulent practices by State Farm in its nation-wide operations. Although State Farm moved prior to phase II of the trial for the exclusion of such evidence and continued to object to it at trial, the trial court ruled that such evidence was admissible to determine whether State Farm's conduct in the Campbell case was indeed intentional and sufficiently egregious to warrant punitive damages." 65 P.3d, at 1143.

Evidence pertaining to the PP & R policy concerned State Farm's business practices for over 20 years in numerous States. Most of these practices bore no relation to third-party automobile insurance claims, the type of claim underlying the Campbells' complaint against the company. The jury awarded the Campbells $2.6 million in compensatory damages and $145 million in punitive damages, which the trial court reduced to $1 million and $25 million respectively. Both parties appealed.

The Utah Supreme Court sought to apply the three guideposts we identified in Gore, supra, at 574-575, 116 S.Ct. 1589, and it reinstated the $145 million punitive damages award. Relying in large part on the extensive evidence concerning the PP & R policy, the court concluded State Farm's conduct was reprehensible. The court also relied upon State Farm's "massive wealth" and on testimony indicating that "State Farm's actions, because of their clandestine nature, will be punished at most in one out of every 50,000 cases as a matter of statistical probability," 65 P.3d, at 1153, and concluded that the ratio 416 between punitive and compensatory damages was not unwarranted. Finally, the court noted that the punitive damages award was not excessive when compared to various civil and criminal penalties State Farm could have faced, including $10,000 for each act of fraud, the suspension of its license to conduct business in Utah, the disgorgement of profits, and imprisonment. Id., at 1154-1155. We granted certiorari. 535 U.S. 1111, 122 S.Ct. 2326, 153 L.Ed.2d 158 (2002).

Leatherman Tool Group, Inc.,* 532 U.S. 424, 121 S.Ct. 1678, 149 L.Ed.2d 674 (2001), that in our judicial system compensatory and punitive damages, although usually awarded at the same time by the same decisionmaker, serve different purposes. Id., at 432, 121 S.Ct. 1678. Compensatory damages "are intended to redress the concrete loss that the plaintiff has suffered by reason of the defendant's wrongful conduct." Ibid. (citing Restatement (Second) of Torts § 903, pp. 453-454 (1979)). By contrast, punitive damages serve a broader function; they are aimed at deterrence and retribution. Cooper Industries, supra, at 432, 121 S.Ct. 1678; see also Gore, supra, at 568, 116 S.Ct. 1589 ("Punitive damages may properly be imposed to further a State's legitimate interests in punishing unlawful conduct and deterring its repetition"); *Pacific Mut. [3] [4] [5] While States possess discretion over the imposition of punitive damages, it is well established that there are procedural and substantive constitutional limitations on these awards. Cooper Industries, supra; Gore, supra, at 559, 116 S.Ct. 1589; Honda Motor Co. v. Oberg, 512 U.S. 415, 114 S.Ct. 2331, 129 L.Ed.2d 336 (1994); *TXO Production Corp. v. The reason is that "[e]lementary notions of fairness enshrined in our constitutional jurisprudence dictate that a person receive fair notice not only of the conduct that will subject him to punishment, but also of the severity of the penalty that a State may impose." Id., at 574, 116 S.Ct. 1589; Cooper Industries, supra, at 433, 121 S.Ct. 1678 ("Despite the broad discretion that States possess with respect to the imposition of criminal penalties and punitive damages, the Due Process Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment to the Federal Constitution imposes substantive limits on that discretion"). To the extent an award is grossly excessive, it furthers no legitimate purpose and constitutes an arbitrary deprivation of property. Haslip, supra, at 42, 111 S.Ct. 1032 (O'CONNOR, J., dissenting) ("Punitive damages are a powerful weapon. Imposed wisely and with restraint, they have the potential to advance legitimate state interests. Imposed indiscriminately, however, they have a devastating potential for harm. Regrettably, common-law procedures for awarding punitive damages fall into the latter category").

Although these awards serve the same purposes as criminal penalties, defendants subjected to punitive damages in civil cases have not been accorded the protections applicable in a criminal proceeding. This increases our concerns over the imprecise manner in which punitive damages systems are administered. We have admonished that "[p]unitive damages pose an acute danger of arbitrary deprivation of property. Jury instructions typically leave the jury with wide discretion in choosing amounts, and the presentation of evidence of a defendant's net worth creates the potential that juries will use their verdicts to express biases against big businesses, particularly those without strong local presences." Honda Motor, supra, at 432, 114 S.Ct. 2331; see also Haslip, supra, at 59, 111 S.Ct. 1032 (O'CONNOR, J., dissenting) ("[T]he Due Process Clause 418 does not permit a State to classify arbitrariness as a virtue. Indeed, the point of due process-of the law in general-is to allow citizens to order their behavior. A State can have no legitimate interest in deliberately making the law so arbitrary that citizens will be unable to avoid punishment based solely upon bias or whim"). Our concerns are heightened when the decisionmaker is presented, as we shall discuss, with evidence that has little bearing as to the amount of punitive damages that should be awarded. Vague instructions, or those that merely inform the jury to avoid "passion or prejudice," App. to Pet. for Cert. 108a-109a, do little to aid the decisionmaker in its task of assigning appropriate weight to evidence that is relevant and evidence that is tangential or only inflammatory.

[6] In light of these concerns, in Gore, supra, we instructed courts reviewing punitive damages to consider three guideposts: (1) the degree of reprehensibility of the defendant's misconduct; (2) the disparity between the actual or potential harm suffered by the plaintiff and the punitive damages award; and (3) the difference between the punitive damages awarded by the jury and the civil penalties authorized or imposed in comparable cases. Id., at 575, 116 S.Ct. 1589. We reiterated the importance of these three guideposts in Cooper Industries and mandated appellate courts to conduct de novo review of a trial court's application of them to the jury's award. 532 U.S. 424, 121 S.Ct. 1678. Exacting appellate review ensures that an award of punitive damages is based upon an " 'application of law, rather than a decisionmaker's *1521 caprice.' " Id., at 436, 121 S.Ct. 1678 (quoting Gore, supra, at 587, 116 S.Ct. 1589 (BREYER, J., concurring)).

III

[7] Under the principles outlined in BMW of North America, Inc. v. Gore, this case is neither close nor difficult. It was error to reinstate the jury's $145 million punitive damages award. We address each guidepost of Gore in some detail.

419 A

[8] [9] "[T]he most important indicium of the reasonableness of a punitive damages award is the degree of reprehensibility of the defendant's conduct." Gore, 517 U.S., at 575, 116 S.Ct. 1589. We have instructed courts to determine the reprehensibility of a defendant by considering whether: the harm caused was physical as opposed to economic; the tortious conduct evinced an indifference to or a reckless disregard of the health or safety of others; the target of the conduct had financial vulnerability; the conduct involved repeated actions or was an isolated incident; and the harm was the result of intentional malice, trickery, or deceit, or mere accident. Id., at 576-577, 116 S.Ct. 1589. The existence of any one of these factors weighing in favor of a plaintiff may not be sufficient to sustain a punitive damages award; and the absence of all of them renders any award suspect. It should be presumed a plaintiff has been made whole for his injuries by compensatory damages, so punitive damages should only be awarded if the defendant's culpability, after having paid compensatory damages, is so reprehensible as to warrant the imposition of further sanctions to achieve punishment or deterrence. Id., at 575, 116 S.Ct. 1589.

Applying these factors in the instant case, we must acknowledge that State Farm's handling of the claims against the Campbells merits no praise. The trial court found that State Farm's employees altered the company's records to make Campbell appear less culpable. State Farm disregarded the overwhelming likelihood of liability and the near-certain probability that, by taking the case to trial, a judgment in excess of the policy limits would be awarded. State Farm amplified the harm by at first assuring the Campbells their assets would be safe from any verdict and by later telling them, postjudgment, to put a for-sale sign on their house. While we do not suggest there was error in awarding punitive damages based upon State Farm's conduct toward the Campbells, a more modest punishment for this 420 reprehensible conduct could have satisfied the State's legitimate objectives, and the Utah courts should have gone no further.

This case, instead, was used as a platform to expose, and punish, the perceived deficiencies of State Farm's operations throughout the country. The Utah Supreme Court's opinion makes explicit that State Farm was being condemned for its nationwide policies rather than for the conduct directed toward the Campbells. 65 P.3d, at 1143 ("[T]he Campbells introduced evidence that State Farm's decision to take the case to trial was a result of a national scheme to meet corporate fiscal goals by capping payouts on claims company wide"). This was, as well, an explicit rationale of the trial court's decision in approving the award, though reduced from $145 million to $25 million. App. to Pet. for Cert. 120a ("[T]he Campbells demonstrated, through the testimony of State Farm employees who had worked outside of Utah, and through expert testimony, that this pattern of claims adjustment under the PP & R program was not a local anomaly, but was a consistent, nationwide feature of State Farm's business operations, orchestrated from the highest levels of corporate management").

The Campbells contend that State Farm has only itself to blame for the reliance upon dissimilar and out-of-state conduct evidence. The record does not support 1522 this contention. From their opening statements onward the Campbells framed this case as a chance to rebuke State Farm for its nationwide activities. App. 208 ("You're going to hear evidence that even the insurance commission in Utah and around the country are unwilling or inept at protecting people against abuses"); id., at 242 ("[T]his is a very important case.... [I]t transcends the Campbell file. It involves a nationwide practice. And you, here, are going to be evaluating and assessing, and hopefully requiring State Farm to stand accountable for what it's doing across the country, which is the purpose of punitive damages"). This was a position *421 maintained throughout the litigation. In opposing State Farm's motion to exclude such evidence under Gore, the Campbells' counsel convinced the trial court that there was no limitation on the scope of evidence that could be considered under our precedents. App. to Pet. for Cert. 172a ("As I read the case [Gore], I was struck with the fact that a clear message in the case ... seems to be that courts in punitive damages cases should receive more evidence, not less. And that the court seems to be inviting an even broader area of evidence than the current rulings of the court would indicate"); id., at 189a (trial court ruling).

[10] [11] A State cannot punish a defendant for conduct that may have been lawful where it occurred. Gore, supra, at 572, 116 S.Ct. 1589; Bigelow v. Virginia, 421 U.S. 809, 824, 95 S.Ct. 2222, 44 L.Ed.2d 600 (1975) ("A State does not acquire power or supervision over the internal affairs of another State merely because the welfare and health of its own citizens may be affected when they travel to that State"); New York Life Ins. Co. v. Head, 234 U.S. 149, 161, 34 S.Ct. 879, 58 L.Ed. 1259 (1914) ("[I]t would be impossible to permit the statutes of Missouri to operate beyond the jurisdiction of that State ... without throwing down the constitutional barriers by which all the States are restricted within the orbits of their lawful authority and upon the preservation of which the Government under the Constitution depends. This is so obviously the necessary result of the Constitution that it has rarely been called in question and hence authorities directly dealing with it do not abound"); Huntington v. Attrill, 146 U.S. 657, 669, 13 S.Ct. 224, 36 L.Ed. 1123 (1892) ("Laws have no force of themselves beyond the jurisdiction of the State which enacts them, and can have extra-territorial effect only by the comity of other States"). Nor, as a general rule, does a State have a legitimate concern in imposing punitive damages to punish a defendant for unlawful acts committed outside of the State's jurisdiction. Any proper adjudication of conduct that occurred outside Utah to other persons would require their inclusion, and, to those parties, the Utah courts, in the usual case, would need *422 to apply the laws of their relevant jurisdiction. Phillips Petroleum Co. v. Shutts, 472 U.S. 797, 821-822, 105 S.Ct. 2965, 86 L.Ed.2d 628 (1985).

[12] [13] [14] Here, the Campbells do not dispute that much of the out-of-state conduct was lawful where it occurred. They argue, however, that such evidence was not the primary basis for the punitive damages award and was relevant to the extent it demonstrated, in a general sense, State Farm's motive against its insured. Brief for Respondents 46-47 ("[E]ven if the practices described by State Farm were not malum in se or malum prohibitum, they became relevant to punitive damages to the extent they were used as tools to implement State Farm's wrongful PP & R policy"). This argument misses the mark. Lawful out-of-state conduct may be probative when it demonstrates the deliberateness and culpability of the defendant's action in the State where it is tortious, but that conduct must have a nexus to the specific harm suffered by the plaintiff. A jury must be instructed, furthermore, that it may not use evidence of out-of-state conduct to punish a defendant for action that was lawful in the jurisdiction 1523 where it occurred. Gore, 517 U.S., at 572-573, 116 S.Ct. 1589 (noting that a State "does not have the power ... to punish [a defendant] for conduct that was lawful where it occurred and that had no impact on [the State] or its residents"). A basic principle of federalism is that each State may make its own reasoned judgment about what conduct is permitted or proscribed within its borders, and each State alone can determine what measure of punishment, if any, to impose on a defendant who acts within its jurisdiction. Id., at 569, 116 S.Ct. 1589 ("[T]he States need not, and in fact do not, provide such protection in a uniform manner").

[15] For a more fundamental reason, however, the Utah courts erred in relying upon this and other evidence: The courts awarded punitive damages to punish and deter conduct that bore no relation to the Campbells' harm. A defendant's dissimilar acts, independent from the acts upon which liability was premised, may not serve as the basis for punitive damages. *423 A defendant should be punished for the conduct that harmed the plaintiff, not for being an unsavory individual or business. Due process does not permit courts, in the calculation of punitive damages, to adjudicate the merits of other parties' hypothetical claims against a defendant under the guise of the reprehensibility analysis, but we have no doubt the Utah Supreme Court did that here. 65 P.3d, at 1149 ("Even if the harm to the Campbells can be appropriately characterized as minimal, the trial court's assessment of the situation is on target: 'The harm is minor to the individual but massive in the aggregate' "). Punishment on these bases creates the possibility of multiple punitive damages awards for the same conduct; for in the usual case nonparties are not bound by the judgment some other plaintiff obtains. Gore, supra, at 593, 116 S.Ct. 1589 (BREYER, J., concurring) ("Larger damages might also 'double count' by including in the punitive damages award some of the compensatory, or punitive, damages that subsequent plaintiffs would also recover").

[16] The same reasons lead us to conclude the Utah Supreme Court's decision cannot be justified on the grounds that State Farm was a recidivist. Although "[o]ur holdings that a recidivist may be punished more severely than a first offender recognize that repeated misconduct is more reprehensible than an individual instance of malfeasance," Gore, supra, at 577, 116 S.Ct. 1589, in the context of civil actions courts must ensure the conduct in question replicates the prior transgressions. TXO, 509 U.S., at 462, n. 28, 113 S.Ct. 2711 (noting that courts should look to " 'the existence and frequency of similar past conduct' " (quoting Haslip, 499 U.S., at 21-22, 111 S.Ct. 1032)).

The Campbells have identified scant evidence of repeated misconduct of the sort that injured them. Nor does our review of the Utah courts' decisions convince us that State Farm was only punished for its actions toward the Campbells. Although evidence of other acts need not be identical to have relevance in the calculation of punitive damages, the Utah court erred here because evidence pertaining to claims 424 that had nothing to do with a third-party lawsuit was introduced at length. Other evidence concerning reprehensibility was even more tangential. For example, the Utah Supreme Court criticized State Farm's investigation into the personal life of one of its employees and, in a broader approach, the manner in which State Farm's policies corrupted its employees. 65 P.3d, at 1148, 1150 The Campbells attempt to justify the courts' reliance upon this unrelated testimony on the theory that each dollar of profit made by underpaying a third-party claimant is the same as a dollar made by underpaying a first-party one. Brief for Respondents 45; see also 65 P.3d at 1150 ("State Farm's continuing illicit practice created market disadvantages for other honest insurance companies *1524 because these practices increased profits. As plaintiffs' expert witnesses established, such wrongfully obtained competitive advantages have the potential to pressure other companies to adopt similar fraudulent tactics, or to force them out of business. Thus, such actions cause distortions throughout the insurance market and ultimately hurt all consumers"). For the reasons already stated, this argument is unconvincing. The reprehensibility guidepost does not permit courts to expand the scope of the case so that a defendant may be punished for any malfeasance, which in this case extended for a 20-year period. In this case, because the Campbells have shown no conduct by State Farm similar to that which harmed them, the conduct that harmed them is the only conduct relevant to the reprehensibility analysis.

Turning to the second Gore guidepost, we have been reluctant to identify concrete constitutional limits on the ratio between harm, or potential harm, to the plaintiff and the punitive damages award. 517 U.S., at 582, 116 S.Ct. 1589 ("[W]e have consistently rejected the notion that the constitutional line is marked by a simple mathematical formula, even one that compares actual and potential damages to the punitive 425 award"); TXO, supra, at 458, 113 S.Ct. 2711. We decline again to impose a bright-line ratio which a punitive damages award cannot exceed. Our jurisprudence and the principles it has now established demonstrate, however, that, in practice, few awards exceeding a single-digit ratio between punitive and compensatory damages, to a significant degree, will satisfy due process. In Haslip, in upholding a punitive damages award, we concluded that an award of more than four times the amount of compensatory damages might be close to the line of constitutional impropriety. 499 U.S., at 23-24, 111 S.Ct. 1032. We cited that 4-to-1 ratio again in Gore. 517 U.S., at 581, 116 S.Ct. 1589. The Court further referenced a long legislative history, dating back over 700 years and going forward to today, providing for sanctions of double, treble, or quadruple damages to deter and punish. Id., at 581, and n. 33, 116 S.Ct. 1589. While these ratios are not binding, they are instructive. They demonstrate what should be obvious: Single-digit multipliers are more likely to comport with due process, while still achieving the State's goals of deterrence and retribution, than awards with ratios in range of 500 to 1, id., at 582, 116 S.Ct. 1589, or, in this case, of 145 to 1.

[17] Nonetheless, because there are no rigid benchmarks that a punitive damages award may not surpass, ratios greater than those we have previously upheld may comport with due process where "a particularly egregious act has resulted in only a small amount of economic damages." Ibid.; see also ibid. (positing that a higher ratio might be necessary where "the injury is hard to detect or the monetary value of noneconomic harm might have been difficult to determine"). The converse is also true, however. When compensatory damages are substantial, then a lesser ratio, perhaps only equal to compensatory damages, can reach the outermost limit of the due process guarantee. The precise award in any case, of course, must be based upon the facts and circumstances of the defendant's conduct and the harm to the plaintiff.

[18] 426 In sum, courts must ensure that the measure of punishment is both reasonable and proportionate to the amount of harm to the plaintiff and to the general damages recovered. In the context of this case, we have no doubt that there is a presumption against an award that has a 145-to-1 ratio. The compensatory award in this case was substantial; the Campbells were awarded $1 million for a year and a half of emotional distress. This was complete compensation. The harm arose from a transaction in the economic *1525 realm, not from some physical assault or trauma; there were no physical injuries; and State Farm paid the excess verdict before the complaint was filed, so the Campbells suffered only minor economic injuries for the 18-month period in which State Farm refused to resolve the claim against them. The compensatory damages for the injury suffered here, moreover, likely were based on a component which was duplicated in the punitive award. Much of the distress was caused by the outrage and humiliation the Campbells suffered at the actions of their insurer; and it is a major role of punitive damages to condemn such conduct. Compensatory damages, however, already contain this punitive element. See Restatement (Second) of Torts § 908, Comment c, p. 466 (1977) ("In many cases in which compensatory damages include an amount for emotional distress, such as humiliation or indignation aroused by the defendant's act, there is no clear line of demarcation between punishment and compensation and a verdict for a specified amount frequently includes elements of both").

The Utah Supreme Court sought to justify the massive award by pointing to State Farm's purported failure to report a prior $100 million punitive damages award in Texas to its corporate headquarters; the fact that State Farm's policies have affected numerous Utah consumers; the fact that State Farm will only be punished in one out of every 50,000 cases as a matter of statistical probability; and State Farm's enormous wealth. 65 P.3d, at 1153. Since the Supreme 427 Court of Utah discussed the Texas award when applying the ratio guidepost, we discuss it here. The Texas award, however, should have been analyzed in the context of the reprehensibility guidepost only. The failure of the company to report the Texas award is out-of-state conduct that, if the conduct were similar, might have had some bearing on the degree of reprehensibility, subject to the limitations we have described. Here, it was dissimilar, and of such marginal relevance that it should have been accorded little or no weight. The award was rendered in a first-party lawsuit; no judgment was entered in the case; and it was later settled for a fraction of the verdict. With respect to the Utah Supreme Court's second justification, the Campbells' inability to direct us to testimony demonstrating harm to the people of Utah (other than those directly involved in this case) indicates that the adverse effect on the State's general population was in fact minor.

[19] The remaining premises for the Utah Supreme Court's decision bear no relation to the award's reasonableness or proportionality to the harm. They are, rather, arguments that seek to defend a departure from well-established constraints on punitive damages. While States enjoy considerable discretion in deducing when punitive damages are warranted, each award must comport with the principles set forth in Gore. Here the argument that State Farm will be punished in only the rare case, coupled with reference to its assets (which, of course, are what other insured parties in Utah and other States must rely upon for payment of claims) had little to do with the actual harm sustained by the Campbells. The wealth of a defendant cannot justify an otherwise unconstitutional punitive damages award. Gore, 517 U.S., at 585, 116 S.Ct. 1589 ("The fact that BMW is a large corporation rather than an impecunious individual does not diminish its entitlement to fair notice of the demands that the several States impose on the conduct of its business"); see also id., at 591, 116 S.Ct. 1589 (BREYER, J., concurring) ("[Wealth] provides an open-ended basis for 428 inflating awards when the defendant is wealthy .... That does not make its use unlawful or inappropriate; it simply means that this factor cannot make up for the failure of other factors, such as 'reprehensibility,' to constrain significantly an award that purports to punish a defendant's conduct"). The principles set forth in Gore *1526 must be implemented with care, to ensure both reasonableness and proportionality.

C

[20] The third guidepost in Gore is the disparity between the punitive damages award and the "civil penalties authorized or imposed in comparable cases." Id., at 575, 116 S.Ct. 1589. We note that, in the past, we have also looked to criminal penalties that could be imposed. Id., at 583, 116 S.Ct. 1589; Haslip, 499 U.S., at 23, 111 S.Ct. 1032. The existence of a criminal penalty does have bearing on the seriousness with which a State views the wrongful action. When used to determine the dollar amount of the award, however, the criminal penalty has less utility. Great care must be taken to avoid use of the civil process to assess criminal penalties that can be imposed only after the heightened protections of a criminal trial have been observed, including, of course, its higher standards of proof. Punitive damages are not a substitute for the criminal process, and the remote possibility of a criminal sanction does not automatically sustain a punitive damages award.

Here, we need not dwell long on this guidepost. The most relevant civil sanction under Utah state law for the wrong done to the Campbells appears to be a $10,000 fine for an act of fraud, 65 P.3d, at 1154, an amount dwarfed by the $145 million punitive damages award. The Supreme Court of Utah speculated about the loss of State Farm's business license, the disgorgement of profits, and possible imprisonment, but here again its references were to the broad fraudulent scheme drawn from evidence of out-of-state and dissimilar conduct. This analysis was insufficient to justify the award.

429 IV

An application of the Gore guideposts to the facts of this case, especially in light of the substantial compensatory damages awarded (a portion of which contained a punitive element), likely would justify a punitive damages award at or near the amount of compensatory damages. The punitive award of $145 million, therefore, was neither reasonable nor proportionate to the wrong committed, and it was an irrational and arbitrary deprivation of the property of the defendant. The proper calculation of punitive damages under the principles we have discussed should be resolved, in the first instance, by the Utah courts.

The judgment of the Utah Supreme Court is reversed, and the case is remanded for further proceedings not inconsistent with this opinion.

It is so ordered.

Justice SCALIA, dissenting.

I adhere to the view expressed in my dissenting opinion in BMW of North America, Inc. v. Gore, 517 U.S. 559, 598-99, 116 S.Ct. 1589, 134 L.Ed.2d 809 (1996), that the Due Process Clause provides no substantive protections against "excessive" or " 'unreasonable' " awards of punitive damages. I am also of the view that the punitive damages jurisprudence which has sprung forth from BMW v. Gore is insusceptible of principled application; accordingly, I do not feel justified in giving the case stare decisis effect. See id., at 599, 116 S.Ct. 1589. I would affirm the judgment of the Utah Supreme Court.

Justice THOMAS, dissenting.

I would affirm the judgment below because "I continue to believe that the Constitution does not constrain the size of punitive damages awards." Cooper Industries, Inc. v. Leatherman Tool Group, Inc., 532 U.S. 424, 443, 121 S.Ct. 1678, 149 L.Ed.2d 674 (2001) (THOMAS, J., concurring) (citing BMW of North America, 430 Inc. v. Gore, 517 U.S. 559, 599, 116 S.Ct. 1589, 134 L.Ed.2d 809 (1996) (SCALIA, J., joined by THOMAS, J., dissenting)). Accordingly, I respectfully dissent.

*1527 Justice GINSBURG, dissenting.

Not long ago, this Court was hesitant to impose a federal check on state-court judgments awarding punitive damages. In Browning-Ferris Industries of Vt., Inc. v. Kelco Disposal, Inc., 492 U.S. 257, 109 S.Ct. 2909, 106 L.Ed.2d 219 (1989), the Court held that neither the Excessive Fines Clause of the Eighth Amendment nor federal common law circumscribed awards of punitive damages in civil cases between private parties. Id., at 262-276, 277-280, 109 S.Ct. 2909. Two years later, in Pacific Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Haslip, 499 U.S. 1, 111 S.Ct. 1032, 113 L.Ed.2d 1 (1991), the Court observed that "unlimited jury [or judicial] discretion ... in the fixing of punitive damages may invite extreme results that jar one's constitutional sensibilities," id., at 18, 111 S.Ct. 1032; the Due Process Clause, the Court suggested, would attend to those sensibilities and guard against unreasonable awards, id., at 17-24, 111 S.Ct. 1032. Nevertheless, the Court upheld a punitive damages award in Haslip "more than 4 times the amount of compensatory damages, ... more than 200 times [the plaintiff's] out-of-pocket expenses," and "much in excess of the fine that could be imposed." Id., at 23, 111 S.Ct. 1032. And in TXO Production Corp. v. Alliance Resources Corp., 509 U.S. 443, 113 S.Ct. 2711, 125 L.Ed.2d 366 (1993), the Court affirmed a state-court award "526 times greater than the actual damages awarded by the jury." Id., at 453, 113 S.Ct. 2711;1 cf.

Browning-Ferris, 492 U.S., at 262, 109 S.Ct. 2909 (ratio of punitive to compensatory damages over 100 to 1).

It was not until 1996, in BMW of North America, Inc. v. Gore, 517 U.S. 559, 116 S.Ct. 1589, 134 L.Ed.2d 809, that the Court, for the first time, invalidated a state-court punitive damages assessment as unreasonablylarge. 431 See id., at 599, 116 S.Ct. 1589 (SCALIA, J., dissenting). If our activity in this domain is now "well established," see ante, at 1519, 1525, it takes place on ground not long held.

In Gore, I stated why I resisted the Court's foray into punitive damages "territory traditionally within the States' domain." 517 U.S., at 612, 116 S.Ct. 1589 (dissenting opinion). I adhere to those views, and note again that, unlike federal habeas corpus review of state-court convictions under 28 U.S.C. § 2254, the Court "work[s] at this business [of checking state courts] alone," unaided by the participation of federal district courts and courts of appeals. 517 U.S., at 613, 116 S.Ct. 1589. It was once recognized that "the laws of the particular State must suffice [to superintend punitive damages awards] until judges or legislators authorized to do so initiate system-wide change." Haslip, 499 U.S., at 42, 111 S.Ct. 1032 (KENNEDY, J., concurring in judgment). I would adhere to that traditional view.

I

The large size of the award upheld by the Utah Supreme Court in this case indicates why damages-capping legislation may be altogether fitting and proper. Neither the amount of the award nor the trial record, however, justifies this Court's substitution of its judgment for that of Utah's competent decisionmakers. In this regard, I count it significant that, on the key criterion "reprehensibility," there is a good deal more to the story than the Court's abbreviated account tells.

Ample evidence allowed the jury to find that State Farm's treatment of the Campbells typified its "Performance, Planning and Review" (PP & R) program; implemented by top management in 1979, the program had "the explicit objective of using the claims-adjustment process as a *1528 profit center." App. to Pet. for Cert. 116a. "[T]he Campbells presented considerable evidence," the trial court noted, documenting "that the PP & R program ... has functioned, and continues to function, as an unlawful scheme ... to deny benefits owed consumers by paying out less than fair value in order to meet 432 preset, arbitrary payout targets designed to enhance corporate profits." Id., at 118a-119a. That policy, the trial court observed, was encompassing in scope; it "applied equally to the handling of both third-party and first-party claims." Id., at 119a. But cf. ante, at 1523-1524, 1525 (suggesting that State Farm's handling of first-party claims has "nothing to do with a third-party lawsuit").

Evidence the jury could credit demonstrated that the PP & R program regularly and adversely affected Utah residents. Ray Summers, "the adjuster who handled the Campbell case and who was a State Farm employee in Utah for almost twenty years," described several methods used by State Farm to deny claimants fair benefits, for example, "falsifying or withholding of evidence in claim files." App. to Pet. for Cert. 121a. A common tactic, Summers recounted, was to "unjustly attac[k] the character, reputation and credibility of a claimant and mak[e] notations to that effect in the claim file to create prejudice in the event the claim ever came before a jury." Id., at 130a (internal quotation marks omitted). State Farm manager Bob Noxon, Summers testified, resorted to a tactic of this order in the Campbell case when he "instruct[ed] Summers to write in the file that Todd Ospital (who was killed in the accident) was speeding because he was on his way to see a pregnant girlfriend." Ibid. In truth, "[t]here was no pregnant girlfriend." Ibid. Expert testimony noted by the trial court described these tactics as "completely improper." Ibid.

The trial court also noted the testimony of two Utah State Farm employees, Felix Jensen and Samantha Bird, both of whom recalled "intolerable" and "recurrent" pressure to reduce payouts below fair value. Id., at 119a (internal quotation marks omitted). When Jensen complained to top managers, he was told to "get out of the kitchen" if he could not take the heat; Bird was told she should be "more of a team player." Ibid. (internal quotation marks omitted). At times, Bird said, she "was forced to commit dishonest acts 433 and to knowingly underpay claims." Id., at 120a. Eventually, Bird quit. Ibid. Utah managers superior to Bird, the evidence indicated, were improperly influenced by the PP & R program to encourage insurance underpayments. For example, several documents evaluating the performance of managers Noxon and Brown "contained explicit preset average payout goals." Ibid.

Regarding liability for verdicts in excess of policy limits, the trial court referred to a State Farm document titled the "Excess Liability Handbook"; written before the Campbell accident, the handbook instructed adjusters to pad files with "self-serving" documents, and to leave critical items out of files, for example, evaluations of the insured's exposure. Id., at 127a-128a (internal quotation marks omitted). Divisional superintendent Bill Brown used the handbook to train Utah employees. Id., at 134a. While overseeing the Campbell case, Brown ordered adjuster Summers to change the portions of his report indicating that Mr. Campbell was likely at fault and that the settlement cost was correspondingly high. Id., at 3a. The Campbells' case, according to expert testimony the trial court recited, "was a classic example of State Farm's application of the improper practices taught in the Excess Liability Handbook." Id., at 128a.

The trial court further determined that the jury could find State Farm's policy "deliberately crafted" to prey on consumers who would be unlikely to defend themselves. Id., at 122a. In this regard, the trial court noted the testimony of several former State Farm employees affirming that they were trained to target "the 1529 weakest of the herd"-"the elderly, the poor, and other consumers who are least knowledgeable about their rights and thus most vulnerable to trickery or deceit, or who have little money and hence have no real alternative but to accept an inadequate offer to settle a claim at much less than fair value." Ibid. (internal quotation marks omitted).

*434 The Campbells themselves could be placed within the "weakest of the herd" category. The couple appeared economically vulnerable and emotionally fragile. App. 3360a-3361a (Order Denying State Farm's Motion for Judgment NOV and New Trial Regarding Intentional Infliction of Emotional Distress). At the time of State Farm's wrongful conduct, "Mr. Campbell had residuary effects from a stroke and Parkinson's disease." Id., at 3360a.

To further insulate itself from liability, trial evidence indicated, State Farm made "systematic" efforts to destroy internal company documents that might reveal its scheme, App. to Pet. for Cert. 123a, efforts that directly affected the Campbells, id., at 124a. For example, State Farm had "a special historical department that contained a copy of all past manuals on claim-handling practices and the dates on which each section of each manual was changed." Ibid. Yet in discovery proceedings, State Farm failed to produce any claim-handling practice manuals for the years relevant to the Campbells' bad-faith case. Id., at 124a-125a.

State Farm's inability to produce the manuals, it appeared from the evidence, was not accidental. Documents retained by former State Farm employee Samantha Bird, as well as Bird's testimony, showed that while the Campbells' case was pending, Janet Cammack, "an in-house attorney sent by top State Farm management, conducted a meeting ... in Utah during which she instructed Utah claims management to search their offices and destroy a wide range of material of the sort that had proved damaging in bad-faith litigation in the past-in particular, old claim-handling manuals, memos, claim school notes, procedure guides and other similar documents." Id., at 125a. "These orders were followed even though at least one meeting participant, Paul Short, was personally aware that these kinds of materials had been requested by the Campbells in this very case." Ibid.

Consistent with Bird's testimony, State Farm admitted that it destroyed every single copy of claim-handling manuals *435 on file in its historical department as of 1988, even though these documents could have been preserved at minimal expense. Ibid. Fortuitously, the Campbells obtained a copy of the 1979 PP & R manual by subpoena from a former employee. Id., at 132a. Although that manual has been requested in other cases, State Farm has never itself produced the document. Ibid.

"As a final, related tactic," the trial court stated, the jury could reasonably find that "in recent years State Farm has gone to extraordinary lengths to stop damaging documents from being created in the first place." Id., at 126a. State Farm kept no records at all on excess verdicts in third-party cases, or on bad-faith claims or attendant verdicts. Ibid. State Farm alleged "that it has no record of its punitive damage payments, even though such payments must be reported to the [Internal Revenue Service] and in some states may not be used to justify rate increases." Ibid. Regional Vice President Buck Moskalski testified that "he would not report a punitive damage verdict in [the Campbells'] case to higher management, as such reporting was not set out as part of State Farm's management practices." Ibid.

State Farm's "wrongful profit and evasion schemes," the trial court underscored, were directly relevant to the Campbells' case, id., at 132a:

> "The record fully supports the conclusion that the bad-faith claim handling that exposed the Campbells to an excess verdict in 1983, and resulted in severe 1530 damages to them, was a product of the unlawful profit scheme that had been put in place by top management at State Farm years earlier. The Campbells presented substantial evidence showing how State Farm's improper insistence on claims-handling employees' reducing their claim payouts ... regardless of the merits of each claim, manifested itself ... in the Utah claims operations during the period when the decisions were made not to offer to settle the Campbell case for the $50,000 policy limits- *436 indeed, not to make any offer to settle at a lower amount. This evidence established that high-level manager Bill Brown was under heavy pressure from the PP & R scheme to control indemnity payouts during the time > period in question. In particular, when Brown declined to pay the excess verdict against Curtis Campbell, or even post a bond, he had a special need to keep his year-end numbers down, since the State Farm incentive scheme meant that keeping those numbers down was important to helping Brown get a much-desired transfer to Colorado.... There was ample evidence that the concepts taught in the Excess Liability Handbook, including the dishonest alteration and manipulation of claim files and the policy against posting any supersedeas bond for the full amount of an excess verdict, were dutifully carried out in this case.... There was ample basis for the jury to find that everything that had happened to the Campbells-when State Farm repeatedly refused in bad-faith to settle for the $50,000 policy limits and went to trial, and then failed to pay the 'excess' verdict, or at least post a bond, after trial-was a direct application of State Farm's overall profit scheme, operating through Brown and others." Id., at 133a-134a.

State Farm's "policies and practices," the trial evidence thus bore out, were "responsible for the injuries suffered by the Campbells," and the means used to implement those policies could be found "callous, clandestine, fraudulent, and dishonest." Id., at 136a; see id., at 113a (finding "ample evidence" that State Farm's reprehensible corporate policies were responsible for injuring "many other Utah consumers during the past two decades"). The Utah Supreme Court, relying on the trial court's record-based recitations, understandably characterized State Farm's behavior as "egregious and malicious." Id., at 18a.

The Court dismisses the evidence describing and documenting State Farm's PP & R policy and practices as essentially irrelevant, bearing "no relation to the Campbells' harm." Ante, at 1523; see ante, at 1524 ("conduct that harmed [the Campbells] is the only conduct relevant to the reprehensibility analysis"). It is hardly apparent why that should be so. What is infirm about the Campbells' theory that their experience with State Farm exemplifies and reflects an overarching underpayment scheme, one that caused "repeated misconduct of the sort that injured them," ante, at 1523? The Court's silence on that score is revealing: Once one recognizes that the Campbells did show "conduct by State Farm similar to that which harmed them," ante, at 1524, it becomes impossible to shrink the reprehensibility analysis to this sole case, or to maintain, at odds with the determination of the trial court, see App. to Pet. for Cert. 113a, that "the adverse effect on the State's general population was in fact minor," ante, at 1525.

Evidence of out-of-state conduct, the Court acknowledges, may be "probative [even if the conduct is lawful in the State where it occurred] when it demonstrates the deliberateness and culpability of the defendant's action in the State where it is tortious...." Ante, at 1522; cf. ante, at 1521 (reiterating this Court's instruction that trial courts assess whether "the harm was the result of intentional malice, trickery, 1531 or deceit, or mere accident"). "Other acts" evidence concerning practices both in and out of State was introduced in this case to show just such "deliberateness" and "culpability." The evidence was admissible, the trial court ruled: (1) to document State Farm's "reprehensible" PP & R program; and (2) to "rebut [State Farm's] assertion that [its] actions toward the Campbells were inadvertent errors or mistakes in judgment." App. 3329a (Order Denying Various Motions of State Farm to Exclude Plaintiffs' Evidence). Viewed in this light, there surely was "a nexus" between much of the "other *438 acts" evidence and "the specific harm suffered by [the Campbells]." Ante, at 1522.

III

When the Court first ventured to override state-court punitive damages awards, it did so moderately. The Court recalled that "[i]n our federal system, States necessarily have considerable flexibility in determining the level of punitive damages that they will allow in different classes of cases and in any particular case." Gore, 517 U.S., at 568, 116 S.Ct. 1589. Today's decision exhibits no such respect and restraint. No longer content to accord state-court judgments "a strong presumption of validity," TXO, 509 U.S., at 457, 113 S.Ct. 2711, the Court announces that "few awards exceeding a single-digit ratio between punitive and compensatory damages, to a significant degree, will satisfy due process." Ante, at 1524.2 Moreover, the Court adds, when compensatory damages are substantial, doubling those damages "can reach the outermost limit of the due process guarantee." Ibid.; see ante, at 1526 ("facts of this case ... likely would justify a punitive damages award at or near the amount of compensatory damages"). In a legislative scheme or a state high court's design to cap punitive damages, the handiwork in setting single-digit and 1-to-1 benchmarks could hardly be questioned; in a judicial decree imposed on the States by this Court under the banner of substantive due process, the numerical controls today's decision installs seem to me boldly out of order.

Supreme Court undisturbed.

* * *

I remain of the view that this Court has no warrant to reform state law governing awards of punitive damages. *439 Gore, 517 U.S., at 607, 116 S.Ct. 1589 (GINSBURG, J., dissenting). Even if I were prepared to accept the flexible guides prescribed in Gore, I would not join the Court's swift conversion of those guides into instructions that begin to resemble marching orders. For the reasons stated, I would leave the judgment of the Utah

No. HG11558324

ASSIGNED FOR ALL PURPOSES TO JUDGE ROBERT McGUINESS, DEPARTMENT 22

PLAINTIFF'S MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES IN OPPOSITION TO DEFENDANTS' MOTION IN LIMINE RE CLAUDIA FRANCIS

Trial Date: 5/21/2012

ARGUMENT

Claudia Francis was the wife of Roderick Francis, an Elder in the North Fremont Congregation. She met Jonathan Kendrick in 1991 through Jehovah's Witnesses, and her husband and Kendrick became good friends. Soon Kendrick began "to hang out at our house." (Depo. Ms. Francis, Ex. 1, 24:22.) Over the years she observed Kendrick engage in conduct with Candace that she thought was "weird" at the time. Kendrick rollerbladed over to the Francis house one day with Candace when she was about 9 or 10 - the period of her abuse - which caused her to "raise an eyebrow." (Francis Depo., Ex. 1, 35:36:3.) Kendrick would tell her Candace "is my number one," which Ms. Francis thought was "strange." (Francis Depo., Ex. 1, 36:4-9.) She saw "snippets" over time, but didn't get the whole picture - because she did not know Kendrick had molested Andrea. (Francis Depo., Ex. 1, 37:2-10.)

Claudia Francis also observed other conduct and heard other statements by Kendrick that she felt were not right. She knew he bought a black bra for another girl in the Congregation, Brianna, when Brianna was about 10 - which would have made Candace 9 or 10 as well. (Francis Depo., Ex. 1, 19:1-4; 33:13-34:25.) Ms. Francis thought that was "weird." Kendrick bragged obsessively about having sex with all kinds of women, including a paraplegic and a woman his mother's age. (Francis Depo., Ex. 1, 31:9-33:1.)

Claudia Francis was in a position to report Kendrick's suspicious behavior and stop his sexual predatory conduct toward Candace and other girls. However, she did not, solely because Claudia was missing the one piece of information that would have put everything together for her - that Kendrick had sexually abused Andrea already and was likely grooming and molesting other girls. (Francis Depo., Ex. 1, 37:7-10.) Although Defendants intend to introduce evidence from loyal Congregation members that the Removal of Kendrick from his post as Ministerial Servant was itself a sign that he was wicked, that was not Claudia Francis' interpretation. (Francis Depo., Ex. 1, 28:21-25.) If Defendants seek to introduce testimony from anyone that Removal indicates to Congregation members the disciplined individual is to be avoided or watched carefully, that testimony is subject to contradiction.

The Court has excluded evidence of Kendrick's conduct after 1997. However, Claudia Francis saw a photograph of Kendrick taken when he was "way younger," posing with children while all were in their underwear. (Francis Depo., Ex. 1, 41:6-42:8.) This evidence is relevant to Kendrick's common motivation of his relationships with Candace and other girls, as viewing them as objects for his sexual gratification. In a case where both Kendrick, through his pleading, and the Church Defendants, through their expert, deny that Kendrick abused Candace, this evidence is relevant and probative.

Claudia Francis was taken in by Kendrick as well, and the one brief question and answer (Francis Depo., Ex. 1, 22:8-12) about the extent of their relationship is relevant to her bias and her state of mind in not reporting Kendrick's "weird" behavior with Candace. There is no privacy interest in this admission, as Ms. Francis no longer seeks privacy and has willingly told her story. It is not time consuming or prejudicial to Defendants, as it does not involve them at all. Instead, it is relevant and probative evidence about Kendrick, and his relationship with a key witness.

Q. Yes. 10:10:44

A. ... owns a modest family-owned pest-control business that my son operates. My husband is very ill. 10:10:45 10:10:49 10:10:52

Q. Sorry to hear that. 10:10:54

Do you recall Candace Conti? 10:10:56

A. Yes. 10:10:59

Q. And did you know her as a child? 10:11:00

A. Yes. 10:11:02

Q. How old was she approximately when you first met her? 10:11:03 10:11:05

A. About 5. 10:11:06

Q. And did you then see her on a regular basis through her early teen years? 10:11:09 10:11:13

A. It was -- No. Sketchy during her teen years. I saw her now and then. 10:11:18 10:11:21

She was in the same elementary school as my younger son. And her family lived in our neighborhood. My husband and her father were friends. Her mother was, I would describe, mentally off balance. Not completely figuratively have her mental 10:11:24 10:11:26 10:11:31 10:11:39 10:11:46

cute to see him and her, his little girl, together. 10:16:57

I always felt bad because Mom wasn't in 10:17:00

the picture. So, he cared deeply for Candace. 10:17:03

So, I never suspected any... um, deficient 10:17:09 protection on his part or ability to -- any lack of 10:17:15 love or anything like that. 10:17:20

Q. Now, are you acquainted with a girl 10:17:22

Brianna Decker -- 10:17:29

A. Ah. 10:17:31

Q. -- or were you acquainted? 10:17:32

A. Brianna "Becker." Yes. 10:17:33

Q. Becker. Okay. 10:17:35

Do you remember her? 10:17:37

A. Yes, I do. 10:17:37

Q. And was she part of the Jehovah's 10:17:38

Witnesses community? 10:17:41

A. She was a -- 10:17:42

She grew up in a very dysfunctional 10:17:46 family. They were Witnesses by name only. They 10:17:49 attended meetings. 10:17:56

But he turned out to be a playboy. He 10:17:57 fractured that family nearly to -- without being able 10:18:01 to heal. And he -- 10:18:04

If there's one way to butcher your child, 10:18:08

he did it to Brianna. 10:18:10

Q. What was Brianna's age in relation to Candace; older, younger, or about the same? 10:18:12 10:18:14

A. Honestly I can't remember. I'm going to guess that she was a little bit older than Candace. 10:18:29 10:18:31

Q. Do you know where Brianna is today? 10:18:34

A. No, I don't. 10:18:38

Q. When's the last time you heard from anyone in her family or knew of them? 10:18:39 10:18:40

A. Years. Years. Last time I saw Brianna, she was.... Oh, I can tell you when. 10:18:42 10:18:46

It was at a wedding, and she was goth, something you never want to see your child. And she was very bad. You know. For a young person to be where she was at. 10:18:49 10:18:56 10:19:00 10:19:04

Q. Whose wedding? 10:19:05

A. A friend of ours. 10:19:08

Q. Do you remember the name? 10:19:10

A. Rita. Rita and Bill. I can't remember their last name. 10:19:13 10:19:16

Q. How about Toi Register, did you know a Toi Register when she was a child? 10:19:22 10:19:25

A. No. 10:19:25

Q. Did you know an Andrea Kendrick? 10:19:27

A. Yes. 10:19:30

Q. And how did you know Andrea? 10:19:31

A. That's correct. 10:21:59

Q. All right. 10:22:00

And in this letter it states that 10:22:01

"Miss Francis admitted to committing adultry with 10:22:05

Jonathan Kendrick in 1998." Is that true? 10:22:09

A. I did not have sexual intercourse with 10:22:15

Jonathan Kendrick. 10:22:17

Q. Was there some form of personal 10:22:20 relationship that had a physical, sexual component that 10:22:23

you had with Mr. Kendrick? 10:22:27

A. There was a romantic interlude that did 10:22:29 take place, and there was kissing and fondling. 10:22:31

Q. How was it that you first met 10:22:37

Mr. Kendrick? 10:22:38

A. I met him in like 1991. He was brand new 10:22:40 in the congregation. He had studied. And he got 10:22:45 baptized. And so, it was like a "new member" 10:22:49

(indicating), if you will, even though that's not an 10:22:52 appropriate term. 10:22:55

And my husband became friends with him, he 10:22:58 became very good friends with him. 10:23:00

Q. Was Mr. Kendrick married to 10:23:03

Evelyn Kendrick at the time that you and 10:23:04

Jonathan Kendrick first met? 10:23:06

A. They were newlyweds. 10:23:08

Q. And was Evelyn Kendrick active in the Jehovah's Witnesses community? 10:23:09 10:23:12

A. For about a year. 10:23:14

Q. Did you ever speak with Evelyn Kendrick during that year as to any social or personal issues at all? 10:23:18 10:23:21 10:23:25

A. Never. 10:23:26

Q. Were you friends with her? 10:23:27

A. No. She was -- I -- She -- 10:23:30

No. She was a little different. I mean: What does that mean, Claudia? It -- 10:23:35 10:23:39

She was distant. She did not want to cultivate a friendship with me. I tried on several occasions, and she was not drawn to me. She did not -- had no desire to be a friend of mine. 10:23:42 10:23:43 10:23:46 10:23:49

Q. Okay. Mr. Kendrick did, however, form a friendship with your husband initially. 10:23:52 10:23:56

A. Yes. 10:23:58

Q. And was the origin of that friendship that they met in the community of the Jehovah's Witnesses or was it from some outside relationship? 10:23:59 10:24:05 10:24:10

A. No. 10:24:12

They met at the Kingdom Hall. 10:24:12

Q. And what kinds of things would your husband and Mr. Kendrick do together? 10:24:14 10:24:17

A. They had breakfast together a lot. They talked about sports. I believe that they went in the ministry a number of times, but not regularly, together. He was -- 10:24:19 10:24:22 10:24:27 10:24:34

Jonathan's a very colorful personality; and my husband, I guess, got kind of a kick out of his personality. 10:24:36 10:24:40 10:24:43

My husband loves sports and every... he's a big sports fan. Yeah. So, he and Jon would talk about football and 49er's and the Green Bay Packers. And he's a Packer fan and, you know, the Brewers. 10:24:44 10:24:50 10:24:54 10:24:58

And they'd argue, you know, in a nice-guy type of way. It was that kind of a friendship. 10:25:01 10:25:06

Jonathan was very, very opinionated. He's an extrovert. So, he would like to -- He used to stop over at the house all the time. 10:25:08 10:25:11 10:25:16

And his marriage was beginning to deteriorate, and there was friction in the home. 10:25:17 10:25:19

And so, you know, he'd, like, hang out with Rod. And they'd meet for coffee, and they'd have breakfast together. 10:25:22 10:25:27 10:25:31

And so, he would start to hang out at our house. 10:25:33 10:25:38

Q. Did you observe whether or not Mr. Kendrick had a, what I'll call, a short temper? 10:25:40 10:25:41

a moment? 10:30:35

A. Let's continue. 10:30:36

Q. Okay. If you need a break at any time, just, we're all -- 10:30:37 10:30:39

A. Thank you. 10:30:40

Q. -- perfectly patient and understand this is some very personal and, to a certain degree, unpleasant information. 10:30:41 10:30:42 10:30:48

So, again, I apologize for going through it with you. 10:30:49 10:30:50

When Mr. Kendrick gave you this remark that you've just described and then slammed the door and left, was that the first time that you had heard from any source of a possible molestation of Andrea? 10:30:52 10:30:59 10:31:02 10:31:05

A. Yes. I had no... um-um (shakes head). 10:31:10

Q. Okay. 10:31:14

A. Things like that are handled in a congregation, in a confidential style. Very confidential. A person's dignity is kept intact. And it's not for publication. 10:31:14 10:31:16 10:31:20 10:31:25

Q. What, if anything, did you understand was the reason that Mr. Kendrick was removed as a Ministerial Servant at the time that the announcement of that removal was made? 10:31:29 10:31:32 10:31:36 10:31:39

A. I had no idea. 10:31:40

matter. 10:34:18

Prior to that, if someone had knowledge, 10:34:19

they definitely would have spoken up. Absolutely. 10:34:22

That would not have been, "Ooh, you know what I heard?" 10:34:26 and this; and then it would have kept quiet? No. 10:34:29

Q. Okay. 10:34:32

A. So... 10:34:33

Q. Thank you for the clarification. 10:34:34

Let me go back to whether or not, in 10:34:35 his... the years that you knew him, whether 10:34:39

Mr. Kendrick evidenced a interest that he expressed to 10:34:45 you in sexual matters involving women. 10:34:51

A. Yes. 10:34:54

I knew pretty early on that he had a 10:34:56

sexual past. He used to call it -- 10:35:01

Now, see, when we -- he was a Witness now. 10:35:04

He had changed his life. Okay? So, to speak. And at 10:35:09 that point he did. And he was married. 10:35:13

But he would talk about his past. And he 10:35:14 would use the terminology that he "did" women, how many 10:35:17

women he "did." 10:35:21

And he told me he thought he did, you 10:35:23 know, way -- "did" well over 150 women. 10:35:27

One time he told me he "did" a paraplegic. 10:35:30

One time he told me he "did" someone his mother's age, 10:35:35 and that is the one time that made him sick. 10:35:37

He bragged about it. And I -- 10:35:40

See, what I just said wasn't in one 10:35:50 conversation. You get bits and pieces, snippets, you 10:35:52 know, here and there over the years. 10:35:55

But that was your old life. You don't do 10:35:57

those things anymore. 10:36:00

So, when a person is changed and is 10:36:02 living, you're clean and sober, you don't, you know, 10:36:11 haul them off to jail for something that he did, you 10:36:14 know, 20 years ago if they were drunk and what have 10:36:17

you. 10:36:20

So, in that respect there was nothing to 10:36:21

go against him then. 10:36:25

But he would talk about his past. And 10:36:27 gradually then, over the years, you, a person, begins 10:36:33 to realize, the longer they're with him, you know, this 10:36:37 guy is really into sex. This is.... Yeah. 10:36:40

Q. Was there -- 10:36:46

A. Really. 10:36:47

Q. Was there a time when you felt that his 10:36:48 sexual interest as he expressed it to you was 10:36:50

obsessive? Is that a word that would fit? 10:36:52

A. With him? 10:36:54

Q. Yes. 10:36:55

A. Yes; I believe. Yes. 10:36:55

And now I believe he's a sex addict. And 10:36:58 a predator. 10:37:01

And he would complain that Evelyn -- 10:37:09
Evelyn moved out of the bedroom, so, he -- they didn't 10:37:10 sleep together for seven years. Something like that. 10:37:13

And so, it really fried him when Andrea 10:37:17 was bringing her boyfriend home, having sex with him, 10:37:20
he was in the house. 10:37:24

It's like: She's getting it and he isn't. 10:37:25
I know that would be his way of looking at it, thinking 10:37:28
it. So... 10:37:30

Q. In the information that I have received, 10:37:35 there's a reference to Jonathan Kendrick purchasing a 10:37:37 black bra for a -- for a girl. 10:37:45

A. Oh, yeah. 10:37:48

Q. And do you recall that occasion? 10:37:49

A. Yes, I do. 10:37:50

Q. What do you recall? 10:37:51

A. He lived with us for about six months, 10:37:55 when he and Evelyn broke up and they lost the home. 10:37:57
So, he stayed with us. 10:38:01

And he had gotten his tax check back. And 10:38:03 he wanted to spend some money on the kids. So, he took 10:38:08 my son and... and Brianna Becker to Sears. And he 10:38:13 bought each kid something. 10:38:23

And he brought -- bought David, I think it's, a Skil saw that makes those curvy (indicating). 10:38:25 10:38:28

Because I like home projects and working with wood ,and I'd always said "Oh, I wish I had a saw like that; I would just" to -- you know, "love to be able to make this and that." 10:38:32 10:38:35 10:38:38 10:38:40

And he bought David one. Why did he buy one of those Skil saws? What do you call those things that they make the -- the blades go around and they make curves. 10:38:42 10:38:44 10:38:46 10:38:50

Well, he must have bought that for me. Why would you buy a, you know, a 10-year-old kid a Skil saw? 10:38:50 10:38:52 10:38:55

But he brought Brianna Becker a black bra. And I thought: That is weird. 10:38:55 10:38:59

He goes "Well," every -- "every girl needs," you know, "a black bra." 10:39:02 10:39:04

But I never reported it. I never acted on it. I just thought: That's weird. 10:39:09 10:39:12

Q. How did you learn about this purchase? 10:39:15

A. He told me. 10:39:17

Q. Was there a receipt that you actually saw? 10:39:19

A. I had the receipt. I threw it out. Not after this (indicating). 10:39:21 10:39:24

But I was going through stuff and... in the closet or to find a picture or something. And I'm thinking: Claudia, why don't you -- hang it, just get rid of this. 10:39:25 10:39:29 10:39:33 10:39:36

So, unfortunately I do not have that; otherwise I would have presented it to you. 10:39:37 10:39:38

Q. Did you ever see Candace with Jonathan Kendrick? 10:39:51 10:39:52

A. Yes. 10:39:54

Q. Can you recall some of the occasions when you may have seen them together? 10:39:56 10:39:58

A. Well, when he -- I believe it was when he was living with us. 10:39:59 10:40:03

He bought her a pair of rollerblades. And so, one day he came rollerblading over to our house with her in tow. 10:40:03 10:40:07 10:40:15

And I thought: That is very strange; why are you, you know, a 42-year-old guy ,rollerblading with a 9-year-old girl or 10-year-old or whatever. 10:40:15 10:40:17 10:40:21

But, you know, they rollerbladed over to the house. And they were kind of wobbling and "Oh, look what I got Candace"; and "We're," you know, "just trying it out." 10:40:24 10:40:27 10:40:30 10:40:34

And I thought that was strange but it's not my place. 10:40:37 10:40:39

I never thought anything further other than, you know, you raise an eyebrow or you frown about that. What? 10:40:42 10:40:44 10:40:48

Q. Did you hear Jonathan Kendrick ever make comments or remarks about his feelings towards Candace? 10:40:49 10:40:55

A. He'd say "She's my absolute favorite. She's my number one." Something like that. 10:41:00 10:41:02

And I'd think: You know, that's awful strange. 10:41:06 10:41:09

But he was a flamboyant personality. He was outspoken. He was opinionated. He would make flamboyant remarks. I don't mean in a gay flamboyancy way. I mean just outrageous sometimes. 10:41:10 10:41:14 10:41:18 10:41:23

But he was an outrageous personality. And so, when "She's my number one," I mean, I could say that about someone else's 9-year-old boy, "Oh, I just love that kid, I could just eat him up." 10:41:27 10:41:31 10:41:35 10:41:39

You know what I mean? I... I.... 10:41:42

When you are an affectionate, outgoing type of personality, it can be borderline. How do you take something like that as a friend? Do you assume the worst? Or do you just take it with a grain of salt because they're an outrageous personality? 10:41:46 10:41:50 10:41:53 10:41:57 10:42:02

So, but, you have to remember, these are snippets that happened over years of progress, which 10:42:04 10:42:07

changes things a little bit. 10:42:13

If you put a little drop of blue ink in a 10:42:15 tall glass of water, it's not really blue right away. 10:42:19
If you put the whole thing in at once, you get an 10:42:22 obvious picture. 10:42:25

So, these things were gradual. 10:42:27

Q. And based on what you told me, the blue 10:42:32 ink that you're missing is, you didn't know that he had 10:42:35 molested Andrea? 10:42:37

A. No. Um-um. 10:42:39

Q. Okay. When was the last time that you had 10:42:40 any contact with Mr. Kendrick, including telephone or 10:42:45 e-mail, any kind of contact at all? 10:42:50

A. The last contact, including e-mail? 10:42:55

Q. Yes, any kind. 10:42:58

A. The last contact I had -- him -- was -- 10:43:00 with him was an e-mail. I don't remember -- 10:43:05

Well, I can't remember what year he got 10:43:11 married. But he remarried. And he had continued 10:43:15 contact with me. 10:43:19

And he would call and want to talk to me. 10:43:23
Or -- And then he called and wanted -- wanted my 10:43:26
e-mail address. I gave him my e-mail address. 10:43:29

And then he would start to write, 10:43:32 intermittently, e-mails to me. 10:43:34

And uh... yeah. 10:47:40

I can't come up with a list of specifics. 10:47:46

I'd have to think about that in order to provide you 10:47:48 with bullet points. 10:47:50

But, yes, the answer is yes. 10:47:52

Q. Let me ask you just one more question 10:47:54 about Mr. Kendrick. Did you ever see a photograph of 10:47:56 him in his underwear -- 10:47:59

A. Yes. 10:48:01

Q. -- with some children in it? 10:48:02

A. Yes. 10:48:03

Q. How did you see that photograph? 10:48:03

A. Well, this, I believe this was after he 10:48:05 told me that Evelyn -- but he said Evelyn "accused" him 10:48:09 of molesting Andrea; not that he did. He was -- 10:48:13

I was with him in a storage unit when he 10:48:16 was moving stuff out. He was moving up to Oakley. And 10:48:20

so, I was -- 10:48:26

The boys were with me. We were in a 10:48:27 storage unit. And I opened up a desk drawer. There 10:48:29 was all sorts of pictures there. 10:48:33

I kind of picked up a picture, and it was 10:48:34

Jonathan, way younger, laying on the floor, kind of 10:48:36 like this (indicating) on the floor, with his legs out 10:48:40 on the side, in his underwear. 10:48:42

And there were two young children in front of him, on the floor, in their underwear. Like 3 and 4 years old. 10:48:44 10:48:46 10:48:52

And I picked that up. I said "Jonathan, what is this?" 10:48:52 10:48:55

He goes "Oh, those are just friends of mine" (indicating). And he puts it back in the desk drawer. And that bothered me. 10:48:56 10:48:58 10:49:01

I mean, I know he lived a rough life style back then, you know. I mean, we all knew he was very, very, very, very, very, very regularly immoral. 10:49:07 10:49:10 10:49:13

So, who he hung around with and what his exploits were, I mean, I did not know. 10:49:16 10:49:19

I just know that that, "that," bothered me. Who lays down, posing on the floor, with two young children in their underwear? 10:49:22 10:49:26 10:49:30

Yeah. I thought (indicating). 10:49:33

Q. Did you learn at some point that Mr. Kendrick was sent to prison? 10:49:37 10:49:38

A. I did after the fact. 10:49:42

Q. How did you learn that? 10:49:43

A. They had friends that we knew up in Oakley. This is a bizarre story but it's the truth. We hadn't been, never were, friends with their friends. But I knew them. 10:49:49 10:49:54 10:49:58 10:50:03

PLAINTIFF'S SUPPLEMENTAL BRIEF IN PARTIAL OPPOSITION TO DEFENDANTS' MOTION IN LIMINE NO. 10 AND IN SUPPORT OF ADMISSIBILITY OF STATISTICAL EVIDENCE OF INCIDENCE OF CHILD SEX ABUSE

Trial Date: 5/21/2012

ARGUMENT

There are certain undisputed facts that will be in evidence in this case, which make statistical evidence - or the absence of any statistical evidence - of the frequency and number of reports of sexual abuse of children within Jehovah's Witnesses Congregations nationwide admissible and relevant. There is no dispute that the actual decisions made by Fremont Elders concerning Jonathan Kendrick were all based upon Watchtower New York's written policies, specifically including the Bodies Of Elders letter of instructions issued in 1989 and still in effect today.

It is admitted that the Elders were acting as Watchtower's agents in their dealings with Kendrick. On March 14, 1997, Watchtower issued a written Bodies of Elders letter instructing all Congregation Elders to supply a report concerning anyone who currently or formerly was found guilty of child abuse while serving in an appointed position, including the number of incidents known. On June 19, 1998, Watchtower wrote to the Elders in Fremont advising that a review of their files showed that the report on Jonathan Kendrick had not been submitted as instructed. On September 2, 1998, Watchtower again wrote Fremont advising that the report still was not received and to submit it immediately. The Fremont Elders did submit their written report soon thereafter. This evidence establishes that Watchtower has for many years been gathering data on the frequency of child abuse in its ranks, and has kept records of abusers including Kendrick.

Defense expert Monica Applewhite, Ph.D., testified last week in her video deposition for use at trial that, in her opinion, the Jehovah's Witnesses had an "exceptional" child sexual abuse prevention program for many years before 1993 that continues today. However, she testified she had no empirical data or statistical evidence that the program worked or had reduced or prevented child sexual abuse. In discovery by video deposition, Defendants' PMQ Mr. Shuster denied that Watchtower kept any statistics or database at all concerning sexual abusers or reports of sexual abuse within Jehovah's Witnesses. The Jehovah's Witnesses media relations department released a press release on November 21, 2007, claiming that the incidence of child sexual abuse in Jehovah's Witnesses was "rare," and it advised those who read the press release that only a minimal number of such reports had ever been received.

All of this evidence permits a number of inferences by the trier of fact. First, Dr. Applewhite's opinions as to the exceptional nature of the programs of abuse prevention by Jehovah's Witnesses are without any foundation. Second, Jehovah's Witnesses has the data it has collected, but is falsely denying the data exists - suggesting the number of abusers reported is much higher than admitted by their official website. Third, it permits a jury to conclude that the managing agents of Watchtower are consciously hiding that their 1989 written policy ordering Elders to keep secret from the Congregation and all others the existence of known child molesters, including Kendrick, from their Congregations, for reasons that include protecting themselves against lawsuits by victims - a prime and repeatedly stressed basis for the policy of secrecy set forth in the 1989 Bodies of Elders letter and continuing to the present day. This is relevant and probative information not only on negligence by Watchtower as to Kendrick, but on the issue of whether these policies are made and enforced with deliberate indifference to the safety of children exposed to these known child molesters while engaged in Jehovah's Witnesses activities.

Statistical evidence has long been recognized to be admissible to demonstrate the intent, denied by a Defendant, to disadvantage a known class of victims. (Harris v. Capital Growth Industries XIV (1991) 52 Cal.3d 1142, 1175 [statistical evidence probative of intent to discriminate]; Everett v. Superior Court (2002) 104 Cal.App.4th 388, 393 [civil rights violations]; Johnson & Johnson v. Superior Court (2011) 192 Cal.App.4th 757, 760-61 [manufacturer's knowledge of other incidents sufficient to show conscious disregard of safety in not changing product label].) In this case, the evidence that Defendants have gathered statistics about the extent and frequency of child sexual abuse within its ranks, but refuses to disclose it, permits multiple inferences including both their insistence on keeping the existing "product label" policy of secrecy in conscious disregard of the persistency of the negative effects on children in the Congregations, and the total failure of the so called "exceptional" child sex abuse prevention programs.

PLAINTIFF'S SUPPLEMENTALMEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES IN RECONSIDERATION OF THE COURT'S RULING ON DEFENDANTS' MOTION IN LIMINE NO. 2 IN RE KATHLEEN CONTI

Trial Date: 5/21/2012

The Court has ruled that Defendants' Motion in Limine Two, which sought only to exclude the religious affiliation of Kathleen Conti's childhood sexual abuser, should also include any and all references to Ms. Conti's own abuse. That ruling exceeds the scope of the Motion, which repeatedly stated "the Church Defendants do not object to Kathleen Conti testifying that she was a victim of childhood sexual abuse..." (MIL 2 MPA 2:7-9; 3:17-21; 7:7-8) Defendants' agree that the mother's history of abuse is relevant to her increased vigilance concerning her daughter (Def. MPA 3:12-16). Plaintiff submits it is also relevant as to why Plaintiff did not disclose her own abuse to her mother, a key point of attack on her credibility by Defendants' Psychologist expert Dr. Williams. Plaintiff's own therapist from 1996-8, Laura Fraser, testified, and Plaintiff will testify, that one of the reasons Candace found no safety in disclosing her own abuse was that she was afraid of her mother's response, which would be rooted in Kathleen's own abuse.

Because Defendants did not seek exclusion of this evidence, and concede its relevance both for their own case and Plaintiff's, it is requested that the Court limit its ruling to the extent of relief that was the subject of Motion in Limine 2.

PLAINTIFF JANE DOE'S LIMITED OPPOSITION TO DEFENDANTS WATCHTOWER BIBLE AND TRACT SOCIETY OF NEW YORK, INC. AND NORTH FREMONT CONGREGATION'S EX PARTE APPLICATION TO STAY ENFORCEMENT OF JUDGMENT

Date: 6/19/12
Time: 10:00 a.m.
Dept: 22
Trial Date: 5/21/2012

INTRODUCTION

The Jehovah's Witnesses defendants have applied to the Court for an Ex Parte Application for an Order Temporarily Staying Enforcement of any judgment and extinguishing any existing liens, levies, or attachments. Plaintiff has not yet filed a Judgment, and has no objection to an Order preventing the creation of any new liens, levies, or attachments, provided she is protected from a distribution of assets in avoidance of the judgment.

There are no existing liens, levies, or attachments to extinguish, as a result of which, that part of the Ex Parte request is moot. However, Plaintiff's willingness to agree to a stay of execution of the judgment to be filed shortly is conditional. To avoid a massive transfer of real estate assets worth, at present, approximately $1 Billion, from Watchtower to another corporate entity of Jehovah's

Witnesses, which would leave Plaintiff with no enforcement right for the Judgment, Plaintiff requests that any stay be subject to the condition that defendant Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc. not transfer, convey, or change title to any of its real property prior to the filing of a bond or undertaking required as a condition of appeal. (C.C.P. §917.1) That condition will maintain the status quo and protect Plaintiff from loss of her right to enforce her judgment by fraudulent transfers of assets, or other transfers without notice which would leave the defendant without resources when the appeals are completed- a fate that has befallen other judgment creditors. (Bulmash v. Davis (1979) 24 Cal.3d 691, 698-99)

The power of the Court to stay enforcement of a judgment or order until such time as a Notice of Appeal may be filed is discretionary, and not mandatory. (C.C.P. §918(a)) In the absence of some formal and enforceable protection against a wholesale transfer of title to its real properties by Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc. to other Jehovah's Witnesses entities or to other persons or entities, Plaintiff requests that the Court reject the proposed stay. Defendants can obtain relief from enforcement of any judgment by filing a timely undertaking or bond at the time of filing of their Notice of Appeal, and thus will be adequately protected during their appeal from collection efforts on the judgment.

Although Defendants' Ex Parte moving papers include a Declaration from Mr. Schnack, counsel for Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc., detailing the exchange of emails between counsel concerning this issue, the emails identified as Exhibit A were not attached. (Dec. R. Schnack, ¶4, 2:21-25.) Plaintiff attaches a courtesy copy of this email as Exhibit 1 to this Limited Opposition for the Court's convenience. The concern of fraudulent transfers of assets is highlighted in the attached copy of the email response. With the conditional protection to Plaintiff, Plaintiff has no objection to the stay requested.

Rick and Kelly:

I write as a courtesy to advise you that Defendants Watchtower and North Fremont Congregation (the "Church Defendants") will file an Ex Parte Application to Stay Enforcement of Judgment in this matter on Tuesday, June 19, 2012, after 10:00 a.m. In that application, the Church Defendants will seek a temporary stay of enforcement of the forthcoming judgment that I anticipate will be entered on the jury's special verdicts of June 13 and 14, 2012. The temporary stay is necessary during the parties' post-trial litigation, which might eliminate, reduce, or otherwise affect the forthcoming judgment. Also, the temporary stay is necessary to allow the Church Defendants to secure the requisite bond for any appeal in this matter.

As noted above, the Church Defendants intend to file their application on June 19, 2012, after 10:00 a.m. Pursuant to the rules of Department 22, applications are considered only on the moving papers and any written opposition. Department 22 rules state that Plaintiff's opposition be filed within 24 hours of the Church Defendants' filing of their application.

I expect to email you copies of the application, my supporting declaration, and proposed form of order later today, but in any event no later than 10 a.m. on Monday, June 18, 2012, as required by the Court's rules.

Finally, I ask that you please notify Mr. McCabe and me whether Plaintiff will stipulate to the requested stay of execution of the forthcoming judgment or whether, instead, Plaintiff intends to oppose the application. Thank you. – Bob Schnack

Case No.: HG11558324

DEFENDANTS WATCHTOWER AND NORTH FREMONT CONGREGATION'S EX PARTE APPLICATION TO STAY ENFORCEMENT OF JUDGMENT; MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES IN SUPPORT THEREOF

TRIAL DATE: May 21, 2012

I. APPLICATION

PLEASE TAKE NOTICE that on June 19, 2012, Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc. ("Watchtower") and North Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses, Fremont, California ("North Fremont Congregation") (collectively the "Church Defendants") will file this ex parte application for an Order: (1) temporarily staying enforcement of any judgment that may in the future be entered in this matter on the verdicts returned by the jury on June 13 and 14, 2012, until ten (10) days after the last day on which a notice of appeal may be filed, and (2) extinguishing any existing liens, levies or attachments and preventing the creation of any new liens, levies or attachments during the pendency of the temporary stay. Pursuant to Department 22 and the Honorable Robert D. McGuiness' standing order, applications are considered only on the moving papers and any written opposition and Plaintiff Jane Doe's ("Plaintiff") opposition is to be filed within 24 hours of the Church Defendants' filing this application.

As discussed in the memorandum of points and authorities below, an order temporarily staying enforcement of the judgment that will be entered in this matter is necessary because: (1) the Church Defendants intend to file post-trial motions and, therefore, the final judgment may be eliminated, reduced, modified, or otherwise affected; (2) the Church Defendants presently intend to file an appeal should their post-trial motions be denied in whole or in part and, therefore, they will need time to obtain the requisite bond; and (3) a temporary stay of enforcement of the judgment will not prejudice Plaintiff, especially where the Church Defendants will be required to post a bond should they each exercise their appellate rights. This application is made pursuant to California Code of Civil Procedure sections 128(a)(3), 697.040 and 918, and California Rules of Court, Rules 3.1200 through 3.1207.

Plaintiff is represented in this action by Richard J. Simons (SBN 72676) and Kelly Kraetsch (SBN 281688) of Furtado, Jaspovice & Simons, 22274 Main Street, Hayward, California 94541, (510) 582-1080. (Schnack Decl., ¶ 2.) The Church Defendants complied with Rules 3.1203 and 3.1204 of the California Rules of Court by giving notice of this application to Mr. Simons and Ms. Kraetsch on June 16, 2012, by e-mail communication. (Id. at ¶¶ 3-4.) Plaintiff's counsel has stated he will not oppose this application subject to certain conditions. (Id. at ¶ 4.)

This ex parte application is based on this application, the memorandum of points and authorities in support thereof, the declaration of Robert J. Schnack filed concurrently herewith, and all pleadings and papers on file in this action.

II. MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES

A. Introduction

Pursuant to Code of Civil Procedure Section 918, the Church Defendants request an Order temporarily staying enforcement of any judgment that may in the future be entered in this matter on the verdicts returned by the jury on June 13 and 14, 2012, until ten (10) days after the last day on which a notice of appeal may be filed. Further, pursuant to Code of Civil Procedure Section 697.040(b), the Church Defendants each request the Order extinguish any existing liens, levies or attachments and prevent the creation of any new liens, levies or attachments during the temporary stay.

The jury verdicts returned in this matter on June 13 and 14, 2012 awarded a total of $28,000,001 to Plaintiff. A substantial amount of the anticipated judgment ($21,000,001) will be based on the jury's special verdict on Plaintiff's punitive damages claims against Defendant Watchtower, and the judgment will also likely allocate against each of the Church Defendants a certain percentage of the $6,870,000 awarded in non-economic damages to Plaintiff. The Church Defendants will file post-trial motions to challenge the judgment that will be entered. Specifically, the Church Defendants will file motions for judgment notwithstanding the verdict ("JNOV") and for a new trial, as well as for remittitur. The Church Defendants will also file an appeal, should their post-trial motions be denied in whole or in part. If the Church Defendants proceed with an appeal, they will need reasonable time to secure a bond during pendency of the appeal. A stay of enforcement of any judgment entered on the jury verdicts in this matter facilitates such arrangements. Thus, due to the uncertainty of the judgment to be entered that will be caused by the Church Defendants' post-trial motions and the potential appeal, it is in all parties' interest that this Court grant a temporary stay of enforcement of any judgment to be entered on the referenced jury verdicts.

B. Legal Argument

Code of Civil Procedure section 918 gives this Court the power to grant a temporary stay of enforcement of the judgment:

> (a) Subject to subdivision (b), the trial court may stay the enforcement of any judgment or order.
>
> (b) If the enforcement of the judgment or order would be stayed on appeal only by the giving of an undertaking, a trial court shall not have the power, without the consent of the adverse party, to stay the enforcement thereof pursuant to this section for a period which extends for more than ten days beyond the last date on which a notice of appeal could be filed.
> (c) This section applies whether or not an appeal will be taken from the judgment or order and whether or not a notice of appeal has been filed.

The Court may stay enforcement of a judgment without a bond. Drum v. Bleau, Fox & Assoc. (2003) 107 Cal.App.4th 1009, 1014 at fn. 2. Further, the Court may order that the temporary stay will act to extinguish existing liens and prevent the creation of any new liens. Code Civ. Proc. §697.040(b). The temporary stay may remains in effect until ten (10) days after the last day on which a notice of appeal may be filed. Code Civ. Proc. §918(b).

The Church Defendants' application should be granted for each of the independent reasons set forth below.

1. This Court Should Grant A Temporary Stay Of Enforcement Of The Forthcoming Judgment Because the Church Defendants Intend To File Post-Trial Motions And, Therefore, Any Final Judgment Herein May Be Eliminated, Reduced, Modified, Or Otherwise Affected.

The Church Defendants will file a motion for JNOV, or in the alternative, a motion for new trial. (Schnack Decl., ¶ 5.) The outcome of these motions may greatly affect the final judgment, if any, in this matter. Currently, it is anticipated that judgment will be entered against the Church Defendants for a gross sum of approximately $23,800,000. (Id. at ¶ 6.) The judgment will be based on the jury's special verdicts on Plaintiff's claims against the Church Defendants for negligence and against Defendant Watchtower for an alleged act of malice. (Id.) The outcome of the JNOV or any other post-trial motions may eliminate, reduce, modify, or otherwise affect that judgment. For example, if the Church Defendants obtain JNOV on all claims, then the judgment will be eliminated completely. Or, for example, if the Church Defendants obtain only a partial JNOV, that judgment may be reduced to a sum yet to be determined. Because of this uncertainty, stay of the enforcement of any forthcoming judgment is proper.

2. This Court Should Grant A Temporary Stay Of Enforcement Of The Forthcoming Judgment Because the Church Defendants May Appeal The Judgment And Will Require Time To Obtain The Requisite Undertaking.

Depending on the outcome of the post-trial motions, the Church Defendants will appeal the judgment. (Schnack Decl., ¶ 5.) This Court's jurisdiction to rule on the post-trial motions expires 60 days after notice of entry of judgment. Code of Civ. Proc. §660. The last day to file a notice of appeal from any resulting judgment will be 30 days after the notice of entry of an order denying the post-trial motions or after the motions are denied by operation of law, whichever occurs first. Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 8.108. The Church Defendants' potential appeal, like its post-trial motions, creates uncertainty as to the amount of the judgment, if any, Plaintiff may ultimately recover. Thus, this Court should exercise its power to stay enforcement of any judgment entered in this case because of this uncertainty.

Further, should the Church Defendants appeal the judgment, they will need time to obtain the requisite undertaking (i.e., bond) necessary for appeal. Appeal bond premiums are a recoverable cost on appeal should the Church Defendants prevail. Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 8.278(d)(1)(F); Code of Civ. Proc. §995.250. Accordingly, to protect themselves against enforcement of any judgment in this matter pending appeal and to protect Plaintiff's interests pending an appeal, the Church Defendants must obtain and file an appeal bond. Leung v. Verdugo Hills Hosp. (2008) 168 Cal.App.4th 205, 211-12.

Until there is a ruling on post-trial motions, the Church Defendants cannot know what amount should be bonded pending appeal because the post-trial motions and potential appeal create uncertainty as to how much, if any, Plaintiff may ultimately recover. For this reason alone, this Court should grant a stay of enforcement of the judgment pursuant to Code of Civil Procedure section 918, which contemplates such a stay precisely to accommodate the ongoing post-trial proceedings and to give the Church Defendants a chance to evaluate the merits of an appeal, and to procure a bond if and when the decision to appeal is made.

3. A Temporary Stay Of Enforcement Of The Forthcoming Judgment Will Not Prejudice Plaintiff.

The judgment that likely will be entered in this action will require the Church Defendants to pay, collectively, approximately $23,800,000, plus the statutory rate of interest. (Schnack Decl., ¶ 6.) Therefore, Plaintiff will suffer no prejudice because, if the judgment that will be entered in this matter ultimately proves to be valid, she will "continue[] to earn [a generous rate of] interest on [a] collectible judgment." Airfloor Co. of Cal., Inc. v. Regents of the Univ. of Cal. (1979) 97 Cal.App.3d 739, 743. Further, there is no evidence that the Church Defendants are more able to satisfy the judgment today then they will be after the post-trial litigation and any appeal. In fact, it is the Church Defendants that will be prejudiced should this application be denied. (Schnack Decl., ¶ 7.) Without a temporary stay, the Church Defendants will have no protection against efforts that Plaintiff and her counsel may take to enforce any judgment entered in this matter and, therefore, the Church Defendants request the Court grant this application and provide the protection afforded by Code of Civil Procedure section 918.

4. The Temporary Stay Should Include An Order Extinguishing Any Existing Liens And Prevent The Creation Of Any New Liens.

The Court has the power to order that the temporary stay will act to extinguish existing liens and prevent the creation of any new liens. Code Civ. Proc. §697.040(b). Indeed, should the Church Defendants file an appeal and post the requisite bond, any liens existing at that time will be extinguished and no new liens may be created during the stay invoked by the appeal. Code Civ. Proc. §697.040(a). Thus, the Church Defendants request this Court act now under subsection (b) for the same result and immediately order that any existing liens, levies or attachments be extinguished and no new liens created during the temporary stay.

5. Good Cause Exists To Grant A Section 918 Temporary Stay.

For each of the foregoing reasons, good cause exists to grant a temporary stay. The Church Defendants would each be harmed and prejudiced and be in immediate danger without the protection of a temporary stay. The general practice to temporarily stay enforcement of judgment is to file an ex parte application. See California Practice Guide: Civil Appeals and Writs (Eisenberg, Horvitz and Wiener, 2010), §7:64 ("A §918 stay can be obtained . . . by written application to the court.") (Emphasis in original.) Should the Court determine additional notice is required for hearing the issues raised by this application, the Church Defendants request the Court order a briefing schedule and hearing date to so address these issues.

C. Conclusion

For each of the foregoing reasons, the Church Defendants each request this Court issue an Order: (1) temporarily staying enforcement of any judgment that may in the future be entered in this matter on the verdicts returned by the jury on June 13 and 14, 2012, until ten (10) days after the last day on which a notice of appeal may be filed; and (2) extinguishing any existing liens, levies or attachments, and preventing the creation of any new liens, levies or attachments during the pendency of the temporary stay.

Case No.: HG11558324

DECLARATION OF ROBERT J. SCHNACK IN SUPPORT OF DEFENDANTS WATCHTOWER AND NORTH FREMONT CONGREGATION'S EX PARTE APPLICATION TO STAY ENFORCEMENT OF THE JUDGMENT

TRIAL DATE: May 21, 2012

I, Robert J. Schnack, declare as follows:

1. I am an attorney licensed to practice law in the State of California and a partner with the law firm of Jackson Lewis LLP (the "Firm"), attorneys of record in the above-captioned action for Defendant Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc. I have also been authorized by James M. McCabe, attorney of record for Defendant North Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses, Fremont, California, to make this declaration on the North Congregation's behalf. I make this declaration based on my personal knowledge and, if called upon, I could and would testify competently to the matters set forth herein.

2. Jane Doe ("Plaintiff") is represented in this action by Richard J. Simons (SBN 72676) and Kelly Kraetsch (SBN 281688) of Furtado, Jaspovice & Simons, 22274 Main Street, Hayward, California 94541. Plaintiff's counsel's telephone number is (510) 582-1080. Plaintiff's counsel's e-mail addresses are rick@fjslaw.com and kellyk@fjslaw.com

3. As set forth in paragraph 4, Defendant Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc. and Defendant North Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses, Fremont, California (collectively the "Church Defendants") have complied with the ex parte application notice requirements of California Rules of Court, Rules 3.1203 and 3.1204, and with the rules of Department 22.

4. On June 16, 2012, I sent Mr. Simons and Ms. Kraetsch an e-mail notifying them that the Church Defendants would make this ex parte application to temporarily stay, during the parties' post-trial litigation, enforcement of any judgment entered in this matter and, if necessary, during the pendency of the Church Defendants posting the requisite bond for any subsequent appeal. The e-mail also notified them that (a) this ex parte application would be filed on June 19, 2012, after 10:00 a.m. PDT, (b) that pursuant to Department 22 and the Honorable Robert D. McGuiness' standing order, applications are considered only on the moving papers and any written opposition, and (c) that Plaintiff's opposition must be filed within 24 hours of the Church Defendants filing this application with the Court. The e-mail also requested that Mr. Simons and Ms. Kraetsch notify me whether Plaintiff will stipulate to the stay or if she instead intended to oppose the application. Attached hereto as Exhibit A is a true copy of the e-mail to Mr. Simons and Ms. Kraetsch. Mr. Simons responded that Plaintiff will not oppose this application subject to certain conditions.

5. With other Firm attorneys and in coordination with co-defense counsel, I am preparing the Church Defendants' motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict, an alternative motion for new trial, and a motion for remittitur, among others. I will also assist with preparation of an appeal should the Church Defendants' post-trial motions be unsuccessful in whole or in part.

6. I anticipate that the Court will enter judgment based on the jury's special verdicts entered on June 13 and 14, 2012. I anticipate that a substantial amount of that judgment ($21,000,001) will based on the jury's special verdict on Plaintiff's punitive damages claim against Defendant Watchtower, and I also anticipate that the judgment will be entered against each of the Church Defendants based on the percentages allocated to each of them with respect to the $6,870,000 awarded by the jury in gross non-economic damages to Plaintiff, all with accruing interest under state law.

7. The Church Defendants' post-trial motions and appeal may eliminate, reduce, modify, or otherwise affect the judgment in this case. Therefore, the Church Defendants will each be irreparably harmed if the anticipated judgment is executed against either of them before their post-trial motions are ruled on and/or before they have posted the requisite bond for any appeal.

8. Good cause exists to grant the Church Defendants' application and hear it ex parte for the reasons set forth above and for the reasons set forth in the application.

I declare under penalty of perjury under the laws of the State of California that the foregoing is true and correct.

Executed this 16th day of June 2012, at Sacramento, California.

SUPERIOR COURT OF THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA
COUNTY OF ALAMEDA

JANE DOE, Plaintiff, v. THE WATCHTOWER BIBLE AND TRACT SOCIETY OF NEW YORK, INC., a corporation; FREMONT CALIFORNIA CONGREGATION OF JEHOVAH'S WITNESSES, NORTH UNIT, a California corporation; JONATHAN KENDRICK, an individual; and ROES 1 to 10, Defendants.	Case No.: HG11558324 DEFENDANTS WATCHTOWER AND NORTH FREMONT CONGREGATION'S REPLY BRIEF IN SUPPORT OF EX PARTE APPLICATION TO STAY ENFORCEMENT OF JUDGMENT TRIAL DATE: May 21, 2012

Defendants Watchtower and North Fremont Congregation (the "Church Defendants") submit this reply to Plaintiff's limited opposition to their ex parte application to stay enforcement of judgment in this matter. Plaintiff's opposition states a willingness to agree to a stay of execution of the judgment on the condition that Defendant Watchtower "not transfer, convey, or change title to any of its real property prior to the filing of a bond or undertaking required as a condition of appeal." This condition puts the proverbial cart before the horse.

As explained in the ex parte application, a temporary stay of enforcement of the judgment is necessary to protect the Church Defendants because of the uncertainty of the judgment. The judgment may be eliminated, reduced, modified, or otherwise affected by the post-trial motions the Church Defendants intend to file. Also, depending on the outcome of the post-trial litigation, the Church Defendants may appeal the judgment and, at that time, will file the required bond to stay enforcement of the judgment during the appellate process.

Temporary stays like the one the Church Defendants are requesting here are routinely granted to protect the parties when a judgment is uncertain. While Defendant Watchtower has absolutely no intent to make any fraudulent transfers of real property now or in the future, to the extent any such transfers of real property should occur during the stay to prevent Plaintiff from collecting on any ultimate judgment that may survive the post-trial motions and appeals, remedies would plainly be available to Plaintiff. That said, again, Plaintiff's claimed concern is premature, plus the Church Defendants have no intention of defrauding Plaintiff out of any judgment that ultimately may be owed to her once all post-trial motions and appeals have run their course. Until that time, the protection of a routine temporary stay is needed, and the Church Defendants request that their ex parte application be granted.

Department 22 Honorable Robert McGuiness , Judge

Cause called for Motion: May 19, 2011.

No one contested the Court's tentative ruling and it is affirmed as follows:

The Demurrer of Defendants Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of Pennsylvania, Inc., Jehovah's Witnesses on Peralta Blvd., Fremont, and Kingdom Hall of Jehovah's Witnesses ("Defendants") to the Complaint is OVERRULED. Plaintiff Jane Doe ("Plaintiff") has sufficiently alleged facts to support a duty by Defendants to Plaintiff in order to support this negligence claim. (See Juarez v. Boy Scouts of America, Inc. (2000) 81 Cal.App.4th 377.)

The Court notes that in Defendants' moving papers, Defendants cite to out-of-state cases, but have not provided copies of such cases. In the future, Defendants should comply with Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 3.1113(i).

Defendants shall file and serve an answer to the Complaint within 20 days, which time shall run from service of notice of entry of this order by Plaintiff.

Department 22 Honorable Robert McGuiness , Judge

Cause called for Motion: May 03, 2012.

The motion of Jane Doe to file amended complaint adding punitive damage allegations against defendant Watchtower Bible and Tract Society ("Watchtower") under CCP 425.14 is GRANTED.

Plaintiff filed this motion on April 10, 2012, just six weeks before the trial date of May 21, 2012. Plaintiff did not delay unduly in filing this motion, and Watchtower has not identified any specific liability or fact discovery that it will need from Plaintiff as a result of the addition of the punitive damages allegations.

Under CCP 425.14, a plaintiff cannot assert a claim for punitive damages against a religious corporation until the court finds that the plaintiff has presented sufficient evidence of a prima facie showing of liability under the preponderance of evidence standard and a showing of recklessness, oppression or fraud under the clear and convincing standard. Little Co. of Mary Hosp. v. Superior Court (2008) 162 Cal.App.4th 261, 267, 271; Rowe v. Superior Court (1993) 15 Cal.App.4th 1711, 1723.

The proposed First Amended Complaint includes a third cause of action entitled "Acts of Malice." The court reads the cause action as a claim that defendant Watchtower is liable for negligence because it acted with a willful and conscious disregard of the rights or safety of others. (Civil Code 3294(c)(1).) To establish conscious disregard, plaintiff must show that the defendant was aware of the probable dangerous consequences of its conduct, and that he willfully and deliberately failed to avoid those consequences. (Hoch v. Allied Signal (1994) 24 Cal.App.4th 48, 61.)

Plaintiff has presented a prima facie showing that she could potentially prove a claim against Watchtower for negligence by a preponderance of the evidence. There is evidence that Watchtower's officers, directors, or managing agents knew or had reason to know in 1993 that Jonathan Kendrick had confessed to inappropriate touching of a child (PX 2; DX L and M), that Watchtower failed to notify the congregation or to take other measures to protect children in the church (PX 3 and 4; DX K), and that as a result plaintiff suffered injury from 1994 through 1996.

Plaintiff has presented a prima facie showing that she could potentially prove by clear and convincing evidence that Watchtower was aware of the probable dangerous consequences of its decision not to alert church members of Kendrick's dangerous tendencies, and that Watchtower willfully and deliberately failed to avoid those consequences. (PX 2, 3, 4.)

Watchtower raises the issue of the appropriate balance between the clergy-penitent privilege and appropriate disclosures to congregants that a member may be a threat to children. Watchtower also notes that most of the case law on the responsibility of entities for sexual abuse concerns abuse perpetrated by employees or agents rather than by member of the entity who were not in positions of authority at the time of the abuse. (But see Wallace v. Der-Ohanian (1962) 199 Cal.App.2d 141.) These concerns present fact specific issues that are beyond the scope of a motion where the plaintiff need only present sufficient evidence to establish a prima facie case of liability and punitive damages.

The court OVERRULES the objection to PX 27 (percipient witness), to PX 26 (percipient witness to statements by Kendrick), to PX 30 (offered as evidence that Watchtower was on notice, not for truth of matter asserted), PX 31 (admissible to extent based on personal knowledge, but court disregards testimony regarding the "true purpose" of Watchtower), and PX 32 (witness is arguably a qualified expert with pertinent information regarding the standard of care during the relevant time period).

The motion of Jane Doe for an order permitting financial discovery is DENIED. If the jury finds that Watchtower is liable for punitive damages, then the court will expect Watchtower to produce its pertinent financial information by 9:00 am the following morning and to have witnesses available to testify by the following day.

Plaintiff must file the proposed First Amended Complaint on or before May 11, 2012.

The Court further orders the parties to comply with the Pretrial Orders: File Motions in Limine and related documents by May 16, 2012 at 2:30 p.m.

Department 22 Honorable Robert McGuiness , Judge

Cause called for Motion: September 29, 2011.

No one contested the court's tentative ruling and it is affirmed as follows:

The Motion of Plaintiff Jane Doe to Compel Answers to Questions at Deposition of Gary Abrahamson and for Sanctions is GRANTED. Plaintiff has established that the information sought is not precluded from disclosure under the penitent-clergy privilege, Evidence Code §1031-1034 because the questions do not appear to call for communications that were presumed to be kept confidential with only the clergy member to whom they were communication. Instead, the questions appear to call for information and communications of a kind that would be expected to be communicated beyond that clergy member to others within the religious organization, i.e. a judicial investigating committee, for purposes of taking responding to the communication within the church. (Cf. Roman Catholic Archbishop of Los Angeles v. Superior Court (2005) 131 Cal.App.4th 417, 445-46.)

Defendant shall present Gary Abrahamson for further deposition and shall not instruct him not to answer the questions identified in the motion based upon clergy-penitent privilege.
The further deposition shall take place at a mutually-convenient time, but no later than 20 days after entry of this order.

The request for sanctions in connection with this motion is DENIED.

Cause called for Motion: August 25, 2011.

The Motion of Plaintiff Jane Doe ("Plaintiff") to Compel Production of Documents and for Sanctions from Defendants Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York and North Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses, Fremont, California (erroneously sued herein as Jehovah's Witnesses on Peralta Blvd) is CONTINUED to September 29, 2011, at 3:00 p.m. in Department 22.
In the interim, parties are to meet and confer in person in a good faith effort to resolve this discovery dispute on an item-by-item basis. Counsel for both parties are referred to the Alameda County Bar Association Statement of Professionalism and Civility. See also Townsend v. Superior Court (1998) 61 Cal.App.4th 1431, 1439; and Manzetti v. Superior Court (1993) 21 Cal.App.4th 373, 380, fn.8. The meeting is to be tape-recorded and the tape is to be made available to the Court at the hearing. At least 5 COURT days prior to the continued hearing date, the parties are to file a JOINT status report of no more than 5 pages outlining which, if any, items remain in dispute and why.

It is not enough to refer the court back to the separate statement/other papers in association with each motion. Moreover, the joint status report should proceed to list items still remaining in dispute along with the reason(s) why. Counsel should be careful to delineate the items in dispute in such a way that the Court will be fully aware as to which set of discovery the item in dispute is referring. If an item is not specifically listed and briefed in the joint status report, the Court will assume that the issue has been resolved. The parties are admonished to be reasonable in this process.

A courtesy copy of the joint status report shall be delivered directly by fax to (510) 268-4835 marked: attention Department 22 Research Attorney.

Should the parties resolve their dispute prior to the continued hearing, please contact the clerk via email at dept22@alameda.courts.ca.gov no later than 3 COURT days prior to the hearing to take the matter off-calendar. ruled on as follows:
